Convenient purchase plans available. For full information, please write Macmillan Educational Corporation, Department GSE, 866 Third Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022

Perez, Louis A., Jr. The Cuban Revolutionary War, 1953-1958: a bibliography.

Scarecrow. 1976. 225p. index. LC 76-18742. ISBN 0-8108-0954-0. $9. HIST/BIBLIOG

It would do this seminal bibliography a disservice to be too critical of its flaws and omissions, since bibliography on the Cuban Revolution has been largely ignored. Some books and dissertations are listed here, but Perez mainly indexes pro-Castro Cuban newspapers, journals, and many student and political publications. The entries, without annotations, are grouped according to broad subject areas. Anti-Castro activity receives little coverage, and few acronyms are identified. The book's usefulness would have been aided by specific location information, rather than the introductory remarks about five possible library locations. An author index concludes the compilation, but as many items are authorless, it is of questionable use. Because most of the items listed have never been indexed elsewhere, this bibliography performs a valuable service, but it could have done so much more.—Carol B. Fitzgerald, CUNY Grad. Sch. Lib.

The Planet We Live On: illustrated encyclopedia of the earth sciences.

Abrams. 1976. 527p. ed. by Cornelius S. Hurlburt Jr. illus., some color. LC 75-29977. ISBN 0-8109-0415-2. $37.50. EARTH SCI/REF

This volume provides comprehensive coverage of the geosciences. More than 1800 entries, accompanied by 600 striking illustrations (photos, line drawings, diagrams), discuss every aspect of the study of the Earth, from historical geology to lunar science. Recent developments in the fields of geology, meteorology, oceanography, and lunar science are noted. Appendixes contain a guide to entries by subject as well as many helpful lists and charts. A useful reference tool for both layman and professional.—Regina Brown, Ohio State Univ. Libs., Columbus

Wasserman, Paul & Jean Morgan, eds. Ethnic Information Sources of the United States.

Gale. 1976. 750p. index. LC 76-4642. ISBN 0-8103-0373-6. $45. SOC SCI/REF

This guide purports to contain everything a person would want to know about sources of information on 90 different ethnic groups in the U.S. Among the topics covered are organizations, media, libraries, museums, folk festivals, and book dealers. Blacks and native Americans are not included. Considering the scope of the undertaking, a truly comprehensive guide would have been at least twice the size of the present volume. However, one questions the editors' selection of certain items and the omission of others. For example, a Trotskyite Zionist group is placed under the heading of religious organizations, and the New York City and Boston Saint Patrick's Day parades are both omitted. Inaccuracies abound: a wrong address is given for a Hungarian newspaper, a German-language radio program that ceased broadcast two years ago is listed, the incorrect name for a bookstore is printed, etc. Although ethnic organizations, newspapers, etc. frequently spring up and disappear, librarians should be aware that the information in this guide is already two years out of date.—Andrea Caron Kempf, Univ. of Northern Colorado Lib., Greeley

LIPPINCOTT

"An unusually agreeable collection."*

THE AUDUBON WILDLIFE TREASURY

Edited by Les Line

In this handsome oversized anthology, the editor of Audubon presents some of the most memorable nature writing and photography that have appeared recently in his magazine. Included are 32 full-color photos and 20 essays, "all brief enough for the dilettante but with sufficient pith for cognescenti . . . A nature-shelf staple."
—*Kirkus Reviews

LC 76-10708
ISBN 0-397-01149-0 $15.95

J. B. Lippincott Company
East Washington Square
Philadelphia, Pa. 19105

Recently Revised Reference Works

The Academic Who's Who, 1975-1976: university teachers in the British Isles in the arts, education and social sciences. 2d ed.

Gale. 1976. 784p. ISBN 0-8103-2020-7. $38.50. ED/REF

This edition of a biennial work contains 2000 new entries, bringing the total to nearly 7000. For a review of the first edition see LJ 9/1/73.

Directory of European Associations. Pt. 1: National Industrial, Trade & Professional Associations. 2d ed.

Gale. 1976. 557p. ed. by I. G. Anderson. index. LC 76-11697. $65. REF

New to this edition of the directory, originally published in 1971, are about 2000 entries (total is now more than 9000), 100 new subject headings, an expanded subject index, the inclusion of telex numbers, and increased information on publications.

PLEASE NOTE: The University of Pittsburgh Press has informed us that it is the exclusive distributor of Geoffrey Keynes's A Bibliography of George Berkeley, Bishop of Cloyne (LJ 9/15/76).

The New Kobbé's Complete Opera Book.

Putnam. 1976. 1694p. ed. & rev. by the Earl of Harewood. index. LC 76-12106. ISBN 0-399-11633-8. $20. MUSIC/REF

This is the ninth edition of a work first published in 1919, and the publisher states that it contains discussions of 100 additional operas (bringing the total number covered to 308), a new index, and 95 new musical examples.

Treat, Roger. The Encyclopedia of Football. 14th rev. ed.

A. S. Barnes. Nov. 1976. 719p. revisions ed. by Pete Palmer. illus. LC 74-30970. ISBN 0-498-01906-3. $14.95. SPORTS/REF

Updated and revised to include the 1975-1976 season.

Yearbook of Special Education, 1976-77. 2d ed.

Marquis-Who's Who. 1976. 618p. index. LC 75-13803. ISBN 0-8379-3002-2. $34.50. ED/REF

The first edition offered government and private agency statistics on special-education problems. This one is intended to complement the first by providing evaluative studies related to the various handicaps, current status reports of federal and state legislation, and listings of on-going research.

—This highly selective listing was compiled by Robert R. Harris

ART

Cummings, Paul. American Drawings: the 20th century.

Studio: Viking. 1976. 207p. illus. index. LC 76-21729. ISBN 0-670-11784-6. $16.95. ART

This collection of 208 drawings by 118 artists, presented chronologically, is not intended as a comprehensive study of contemporary American drawing, but as a stepping-off place for further investigation. A brief introduction places the artists and drawings in historical and stylistic context, and short texts with each drawing elucidate further the widely varied stylistic influences evidenced simultaneously in the development of modern American art. For the drawings themselves and the insights they offer, this collection has no rival in print and will be valuable to students of this period and medium for many years. A valuable source for art historians and for libraries at all levels.—Elizabeth B. Bailey, Univ. of Alabama in Huntsville Lib.

Descargues, Pierre. Art Treasures of the Hermitage.

Abrams. 1976. 169p. illus., mainly color. LC 72-142741. ISBN 0-8109-0023-8. $35. ART

The Hermitage's stupendous holdings have not been well served by this volume, which simply presents 65 of the better-known masterpieces from the collection's vast reservoir of European paintings. Each of these works has been reproduced with a tipped-in color-plate and prefaced with a nugatory note. In addition, there is a not particularly informative introductory essay on the formation of the collection; and a random sampling of its drawings is presented without comment. Larger libraries will find little of use here and smaller ones will be better served by the more ample history of the Hermitage and the wider sampling of its paintings found in Descargues' The Hermitage Museum (LJ 12/1/61).—Robert Cahn, Dept. of Social Sciences, Fashion Inst. of Technology, New York

Jaffe, Irma B. Trumbull: the declaration of independence.

Viking. 1976. (Art in Context). 128p. photogs., some color. index. LC 75-40174. ISBN 0-670-73264-8. $10. ART

Taken almost entirely from the pages of Jaffe's excellent previous study on Trumbull (LJ 12/1/75), this slim volume adds little to Trumbull scholarship. Typical of the "Art in Context" series which concentrates on a single work by a renowned artist, the book is concise and well organized. Written in a clear style and with copious black-and-white illustrations (most familiar from the first work), it makes very pleasant art history reading; with Bicentennial interest still running high, it could attract history buffs as well. If this title had been Jaffe's first on Trumbull, I would welcome it, especially since it is the first in the series to deal with an American painter, but coming so soon after her full-length study, which is still in print, it seems almost redundant. Its manageable size and limited subject approach may appeal to a more popular audience, but most collections will prefer the earlier work.—Raissa Fomerand, Librarian, Sleepy Hollow Restorations, Tarrytown, N.Y.

Rodrigue, George. The Cajuns of George Rodrigue.

Oxmoor House. 1976. 168p. tr. by Georges Planel. color illus. LC 76-14111. ISBN 0-8487-0443-6. $24.95. ART

Rodrigue presents in almost 100 paintings his view of his Cajun heritage. The paintings, with his own introduction and commentary in English and French, are organized into sections on history, people, occupations, family, religion, recreation, and folklore. Rodrigue presents the Cajun in a 19th-Century setting since he believes that the era before World War I was the last in which the Cajun was free from outside influences. In addition, he has included in his paintings those elements which he feels were so often omitted from paintings of Louisiana by nonnative artists: witchcraft, darkness, and bayous. Rodrigue has succeeded in capturing the essence of Cajun culture. Recommended.—Mary Ann Miya, Loyola Univ. of Chicago Lib.

Schiff, Gert, ed. Picasso in Perspective.

Prentice-Hall. (Artists in Perspective). Nov. 1976. ISBN 0-13-675801-0. $8.95; pap. Spectrum. ISBN 0-13-675793-6. $2.95. ART

This assemblage presents more than 30 book excerpts and periodical articles written between 1901 and 1973. Many of the essays amount to little more than two pages and were taken primarily from little-known sources. The editor has tried to select essays which cover the principal aspects of Picasso's art and which document critical reception of his work in various ideological spheres. The result is an eclectic collection with contributors ranging from this century's most celebrated art historians to virtual unknowns on subjects spanning Picasso's interest in African art to his Marxist tendencies. Schiff even allows for a small dosage of adverse criticism. Some of the essays may present difficulties to even an advanced undergraduate, especially being presented out of their original context. However, the range of selections and a significant introductory essay on Picasso criticism make this inexpensive volume a worthwhile acquisition.—Barbara Hornick-Lockard, Univ. of Pittsburgh at Bradford Lib.

Architecture

Port, M. H. The House of Parliament.

Yale Univ. Pr. 1976. 347p. illus., some color. index. LC 76-3374. ISBN 0-300-02022-8. $35. ARCHITECTURE

When the old Houses of Parliament burned in 1834, the opportunity arose to erect a building that would reflect the proud traditions and serve the expanding functions of this most puissant of legislative bodies. With an almost overwhelming attention to detail, Hunt has re-created the buildings' artistic genesis and constructional history. Among the volume's principal achievements is

MARQUIS
Who'sWho

Now publisher of more than 45 helpful and informative reference titles in science, business, education, medicine, politics, and of course, biography!

Publisher of Who's Who in America since 1898.

Who Was Who in American History—Science and Technology. More than 10,000 Who's Who sketches of outstanding scientists, engineers, and inventors. Pub. Aug. 1976. ISBN 0-8379-6301-2; 688 pages; hardbound; $47.50

NIH Factbook (National Institutes of Health), 1st Ed
A complete guide to current programs, grants, and activities of all 12 institutes that make up NIH. Pub. Jan. 1976
ISBN 0-8379-3401-X; 597 pages; hardbound; $44.50

NSF Factbook (National Science Foundation), 2nd Ed
Detailed statistics and descriptions of NSF grants, research, legislation, special projects, and more. Pub. Jan. 1975.
ISBN 0-8379-2201-1; 561 pages; hardbound; $44.50

NASA Factbook (National Aeronautics and Space Administration), 2nd Ed. Statistics and descriptions of current programs, research, grants, and legislation. Pub. Jan. 1975.
ISBN 0-8379-1801-4; 613 pages; hardbound; $44.50

Directory of Medical Specialists, 17th Ed. 2 volumes
Official roster of 159,000 + diplomates of member boards of American Board of Medical Specialties. Pub. Dec. 1975.
ISBN 0-8379-0517-6; 3,766 pages; hardbound; $69.50

Environmental Protection Directory, 2nd Ed. Lists government and private organizations where users can seek information or assistance. Pub. Nov. 1975
ISBN 0-8379-2601-7; 526 pages; hardbound; $44.50

World Who's Who in Science, 1st Ed
32,000 Who's Who sketches of the world's most outstanding scientists from antiquity to the 20th century. Pub. 1968.
ISBN 0-8379-1001-3; 1,855 pages; hardbound; $60.00

Directory of Registered Lobbyists and Lobbyist Legislation, 2nd Ed. Lists 16,000 lobbyists plus federal and state laws regulating their activities. Pub. Nov. 1975.
ISBN 0-8379-2402-2; 645 pages; hardbound; $44.50

Consumer Protection Directory, 2nd Ed
Lists government and private organizations where users can seek information or assistance. Pub. Nov. 1975
ISBN 0-8379-2701-3; 466 pages; hardbound; $44.50

Send for new fall catalog listing all Marquis Publications

MARQUIS
Who'sWho INC.
200 East Ohio Street, Chicago, Illinois 60611 U.S.A.

AM/76-32 N6

HOW TO LOVE A MEMBER OF THE OPPOSITE SEX

A Memoir

Colette Dowling

"This is an intensely personal memoir of a woman trying to find some truths about herself and her needs in the muddle of social trappings....This is so keenly felt and clearly told, with occasional descriptive nuggets, that it's far beyond being a rehash of the troubles of modern American woman and becomes special in itself." —Library Journal. "Colette Dowling writes rings around us all and her story moved me as few books ever have. Every woman (and most men) will want to read it." —Barbara Seaman, author of Free and Female.

SBN 698-10686-5 $7.95

COWARD, McCANN & GEOGHEGAN, INC.

200 Madison Avenue, New York 10016

THE TEN

Written by PATRICIA JOBE PIERCE

Frank W. Benson
Joseph R. DeCamp
Thomas W. Dewing
Childe Hassam
Willard L. Metcalf
Robert Reid
Edward Simmons
Edmund C. Tarbell
John H. Twachtman
J. Alden Weir and William Merritt Chase
(who replaced Twachtman)

12 x 9 Inches, Indexed, Extensive Bibliography

Limited First Edition 3000

THE FIRST AND ONLY COMPREHENSIVE BOOK
On America's Top Eleven Impressionists.

A Holiday Gift

Immediate Delivery

List price $30. Libraries $25.

Make checks payable to

PIERCE GALLERIES, INC.

206 Adams St., N. Abington, Mass. 02351
Tel. 1-617-871-1828

the successful resolution of the controversy concerning the respective roles played by Barry and Pugin in the fabric's design. The elucidation of the complexities of the government's involvement, the explication of the various structural and service problems, and the detailed description of the external and internal furnishings add to the value of the work. Richly illustrated and superbly documented, the book will be of significant service to larger architectural history collections.—Robert Cahn, Dept. of Social Sciences, Fashion Inst. of Technology, New York

Saint, Andrew. Richard Norman Shaw.

pub. for the Mellon Center by Yale Univ. Pr. (Studies in British Art). 1976. 465p. illus. bibliog. index. $40. ARCHITECTURE

Shaw, the dominant figure on the English architectural scene in the last third of the 19th Century, was a master of considerable stature and broad impact. He was an extraordinarily prolific designer, and his complex historicism and his eclecticism obscure a highly original talent. Although not neglected, Shaw's ouevre has not until now received the scholarly attention it merits. Saint considers all of the major projects from a formal and a social viewpoint. With an almost daunting attention to detail, he illuminates Shaw through his relations with other artists, collaborators, clients, and even contractors. The volume is suitably illustrated and supplemented by an important catalog of Shaw's work. Although this is a requisite addition for serious architecture collections, smaller libraries will be well served by the efficient précis and evaluation of Shaw's career found in Henry Russell Hitchcock's Architecture (Penguin, 1963. 2d ed.; Pelican: Penguin, 1971. pap.).—Robert Cahn, Dept. of Social Sciences, Fashion Inst. of Technology, New York

Decorative Arts & Crafts

Impey, Oliver. Chinoiserie: the impact of Chinese styles on Western art and decoration.

Scribners. Nov. 1976. 224p. illus., some color. ISBN 0-684-14679-7. $14.95. DEC ARTS

Approximately the first third of the text is given to the history of contact made by Europe with Asia from the period of the Scythians to the opening of Japan and the later importations of novelties. The remainder of the book is divided into subject areas, many of which overlap: textiles, paintings and drawings, ceramics, furniture, landscape gardening, architecture, etc. Impey, who is assistant keeper in the department of Eastern art at the Ashmolean Museum in Oxford, England, had accumulated a vast quantity of related material. However, the history of exploration and trade consumes more space than is justified, and Impey would have been well-advised to stay within his acknowledged field, Eastern art. In the main section, the interesting facts of the adaptation of Oriental design to Western taste at the different periods is presented in a style which is pedestrian. Hugh Honour's Chinoiserie: the Vision of Cathay (LJ 2/15/62) covers much of the same material and does so in a spirited manner.—Paul von Khrum, formerly with New York Univ. Libs.

Johannah, Barbara. Quick Quilting: make a quilt this weekend.

Drake. 1976. 144p. illus. LC 75-36147. ISBN 0-8473-1181-3. pap. $6.95. CRAFTS

If there is one kind of needlework instruction book I hesitate to recommend, it is one that looks like someone's personal sketchbook at a price beyond its value. In this case, the instructions and sketches are standard quilt patterns which abound in practically every quilting how-to book. There is no need to mention titles; they are countless. And having made several quilts, I seriously doubt the title and subtitle. A beginner would become discouraged to find out that the "quick" quilt could only be made in a weekend at lightning speed using very large patched pieces, or with the assistance of 10 or 12 friends.—Lois Horowitz, Univ. of California at San Diego

Graphic Arts

The American Personality: the artist-illustrator of life in the United States, 1860-1930.

Grunwald Center for the Graphic Arts, UCLA 405 Hilgard Ave., Los Angeles 90024. 1976. 184p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-18001. pap. $7.50. HIST/GRAPHIC ARTS

American illustrators active between 1860 and 1930 are the center of attention in this handsome monograph. In addition to a catalog of the 330 items in the exhibit on which the book is based, there are ten excellent essays discussing such subjects as the dime novel, black illustrators, the city and frontier in illustrations, and battle illustrators. There are 50 black-and-white plates of works in the exhibit. The section of artists' biographies, which includes bibliographic information, is particularly useful for lesser known artists. There is a complete index of artists, authors, books, publishers, and periodicals. Recommended for all art collections.—Katharine Ratzenberger, Smithsonian Inst. Libs.

Shapiro, Cecile & Lauris Mason. Fine Prints: collecting, buying and selling.

Harper. Nov. 1976. 256p. illus. index. ISBN 0-06-013853-X. $10.95. GRAPHIC ARTS

A good book for the serious amateur considering the collecting of prints. The style is a little chatty, but the information and advice given are sound and judicious, particularly that on conservation. There are useful glossaries of terms (English, French, German) and selective, annotated lists of museums and other print collections and of dealers. All in all, a book equal to Ann Buchsbaum's Practical Guide to Print Collecting (Van Nostrand Reinhold, 1975): one or the other will suffice.—Jack Perry Brown, Yale Center for British Art

If you have academic qualifications in art or architecture and are interested in writing concise, critical reviews in these areas, please contact Anneliese Schwarzer, the Book Review.

Photography

Duncan, David Douglas. The Silent Studio.
Norton. 1976. 114p. photogs. $12.50.
ART PHOTOG

This latest contribution to the flood of sentimental memoirs on Picasso consists of a series of photographs portraying his last studio at Notre Dame de Vie, as it appeared after the master's death. Duncan, a talented photojournalist, has published three other books on Picasso's private surroundings. His stark use of black-and-white photography captures the emptiness of this forsaken environment and the loneliness of Picasso's widow, Jacqueline. There are several reproductions of privately-owned works of art, also in black and white. This book will interest Picasso admirers and cultists, but it has no lasting research value for libraries.—Christina Huemer Bostick, Oberlin Coll. Lib., Ohio

Women See Woman. ed. by Cheryl Wiesenfeld & others.
Crowell. 1976. 145p. photogs. LC 75-16410. ISBN 0-690-00965-8. $12.50. PHOTOG

An album of 125 pictures selected from the work of contemporary women photographers, limited in subject matter in order to aid woman in "breaking the grip of the male fantasy image" and "taking command of the way she is seen." One striking revelation is of the ways in which women use their bodies: doing physical labor, for example, or celebrating sheer being, as in Sardi Klein's splendid old woman dancing. The more conventional physical images—of models, entertainers, bathing beauties—are taken with wide enough frames to make clear the contrast: these are the ways women's bodies have been used. A number of the interpretations of women in traditional roles—particularly the bridal photos—would be provocative discussion-openers for women's groups. Though the profession of photography has never been wholly male-dominated, the anthology introduces the work of current practitioners less well known than Bourke-White or Lange. There is no consistent feminist statement, simply a demonstration that women see women in diverse ways, and often in ways that men do not.—Sally Mitchell, Milwaukee, Wis.

BIOGRAPHY

Chalfont, Alun. Montgomery of Alamein.
Atheneum. 1976. 365p. illus. maps. bibliog. index. LC 76-12519. ISBN 0-689-10744-7. $12.95.
BIOG

Unanimity of opinion over the character and generalship of Field Marshal Montgomery will probably never be achieved. So controversial is "Monty" that an adequate biography of him will always prove difficult; yet Lord Chalfont's study is clear, perceptive, and balanced. Neither military history nor an analysis of campaigns, the book is instead a psychological biography in which Chalfont relates how Monty's relationship with his mother, his childhood experiences, and the trauma of World War I conditioned the future field marshal and popular general. Chalfont penetrates the facade that Monty erected about himself and reveals the failures and successes of the man. The result is the best delineation of Montgomery that has yet appeared. A valuable and well-recommended work.—John Buechler, Univ. of Vermont Lib.

Denton, Jeremiah A., Jr. with Ed Brandt. When Hell Was in Session.
Reader's Digest Pr., dist. by Crowell. Nov. 1976. 256p. ISBN 0-88349-112-5. $8.95.
INT AFFAIRS/MEMOIR

This is the story of the seven and one half years that a naval aviator, Jeremiah Denton, was held prisoner in POW camps in North Vietnam. Shot down on July 18, 1965 while attacking a military complex south of Hanoi, Denton spent the rest of the war undergoing various forms of degradation for what his captors termed a "bad attitude." While the nature of the material is well calculated to hold the reader's interest, the narrative skips and jumps, in a disruptive manner. Added to this, the author at times becomes overbearingly righteous in his presentation. The overall impression is one of haste. Written for the popular market.—George F. Scheck, SUNY at Oswego Lib.

George, W. R. P. The Making of Lloyd George.
Archon: Shoe String. Nov. 1976. 178p. index. ISBN 0-208-01627-9. $12.50. BIOG

This work by Lloyd George's nephew will prove valuable mainly because it is based on a massive collection of family papers which heretofore had been available only indirectly through extracts in Herbert du Parcq's The Life of David Lloyd George. Moreover, even du Parcq's access was limited, and these circumstances mean that this work brings to light much new and significant information on Lloyd George's formative years. It supplements rather than supplants John Grigg's The Young Lloyd George (LJ 11/15/74), and there are significant interpretative problems, but the fact remains that this will be an essential acquisition for academic libraries. Moreover, it is intriguing reading, because seemingly nothing Lloyd George ever did was dull in any sense.—James A. Casada, Dept. of History, Winthrop Coll., Rock Hill, S.C.

Getty, J. Paul. As I See It: the autobiography of J. Paul Getty.
Prentice-Hall. 1976. 360p. LC 76-22639. ISBN 0-13-049593-X. $10.95. BUS/AUTOBIOG

Reading this fascinating autobiography is like listening to a favorite grandfather relate his life's story; he rambles, backtracks, remembers, and, in general, enjoys the story as much as, or more than, his listeners. Getty's style is a joy to read. In addition to personal history, he exposes us to his personal philosophy on marital harmony, women's liberation, economic theory, taxation,

Beautiful picturebooks from Harper & Row
1817

THE PEOPLE OF KAU
By Leni Riefenstahl. Hard on the heels of her spectacularly beautiful best seller The Last of the Nuba comes the world-famous photographer's amazing photographic record of an even more expressive and exuberant Sudanese tribe. 192 pages of full-color photographs. 9⅜″ x 12⅜″
LC 76-5526 ISBN 0-06-013569-7
$25.00

AMERICAN MASTER DRAWINGS AND WATERCOLORS
A History of Works on Paper from Colonial Times to the Present
By Theodore E. Stebbins, Jr.
Coinciding with a major traveling Bicentennial exhibition, this landmark volume on a long-neglected field of American art includes 360 magnificent illustrations in both color and black-and-white. 8½″ x 11″
LC 75-37156
ISBN 0-06-014068-2 $50.00

THE DRAWINGS BY SANDRO BOTTICELLI FOR DANTE'S DIVINE COMEDY
After the Originals in the Berlin Museums and the Vatican
By Kenneth Clark. A history-making volume. Ninety-two infinitely delicate drawings by the most mystical of Renaissance masters, reproduced by today's most sophisticated photographic and gravure techniques. 5 pages in full-color. 14⅛″ x 10⅝″
LC 76-5990 ISBN 0-06-010777-4
$55.00

ARMS THROUGH THE AGES
By William Reid. Weapons from the early Bronze Age to the present in fascinating text by one of the world's great experts. With 800 superb illustrations, many in color. 11″ x 12″
LC 76-10105
ISBN 0-06-013527-1
$29.95 through 12/31/76;
$35.00 thereafter

Harper & Row
1817

A must for Every Library

The story of Dr. Wernher von Braun is a mesmerizing one overwhelming and impressive, yet packed with down-to-earth medleys of human drama. Erik Bergaust's biography of him clearly points out the facts about von Braun's contributions to the new age in which we live and to von Braun's strides toward making mankind benefit from our space efforts in so many ways. This is a big story. Everyone should know it."

Hugh Downs

"I have been enthralled by the exploration of space since my childhood. I am fascinated by our space effort and the contribution that our space program has made to society and the environment — and to mankind as a whole...

"Dr. Wernher von Braun has been the leader and inspiration in this whole field and is someone I would like to live up to. From that point of view, his life is a most worthwhile study."

John Denver

Wernher von Braun
By Erik Bergaust

608 pages; 100 illustrations; bibliography; appendices; index. $13.95. Hard cover with jacket. 16 up.

LC 76-29508
ISBN 0-917680-01-4

THE NATIONAL SPACE INSTITUTE
1911 N. Ft. Myer Drive, Suite 408
Arlington, Va. 22209
or:
Place orders through
The Baker & Taylor Companies

welfare, etc. The reader may not agree with his opinions, but there is a great deal of wisdom and enthusiasm in the way they are presented. Essential reading for anyone who enjoys learning about the personalities of people in the public eye.—Susan S. DiMattia, Commack P.L., N.Y.

Guthrie, Woody. Seeds of Man: an experience lived and dreamed by.

Dutton. 1976. LC 76-6556. ISBN 0-525-19936-5. $11.95. PER NAR

Written in the late 1940's and now published for the first time, this partly fictionalized reminiscence covers a 1931 gold-prospecting trip taken by 19-year-old Woody, his father, uncle, and a friend. Setting out across Texas in a truck, they chug toward the remote Big Bend area of the Rio Grande. Along the way they encounter hazards, hardships, and a clutch of colorful characters who are masterfully recaptured in rich outpourings of dialogue and dialect. Snatches of song checker the narrative, for whenever discord looms, Woody whips out his guitar and Uncle Jeff "rakes the tail hair" of his fiddle, proving that folk music at its simplest hath charms. Full of compassion for human suffering, this is an emotional and authentic portrait of life in the Great Depression, set in a romantic landscape of primitive beauty. Highly recommended.—Paul G. Feehan, Univ. of Miami Lib., Coral Gables, Fla.

Lodge, Henry Cabot. As It Was: an inside view of politics and power in the 1950's and '60s.

Norton. Nov. 1976. 224p. index. $8.95. HIST/MEMOIR

A disappointing and innocuous book considering the author's rich and varied background. The work is essentially a pastiche of notes, correspondence, recollections of conversations, memoranda, and reminiscences chronologically arranged and covering the years 1952-1966. Among the main topics dealt with are Lodge's role in the transfer of power from the Truman to the Eisenhower Presidency, his tenure as representative to the UN, the Suez and Hungarian crises of 1956, the 1956 Presidential campaign, and his travels. Lodge skips swiftly from incident to incident so that the overall effect is a blurred montage of events, people, conversations and observations. One of the few underlying themes is praise of Eisenhower as President, statesman, and political figure, interspersed with somewhat self-serving accounts of Lodge's role as his political adviser, confidant, and friend. There is little here for the scholar, student, or interested observer of American domestic and foreign affairs of the 1950's and 1960's.—Marcel Pittet, Univ. of Maine Lib., Fort Kent

Loebl, Eugen. My Mind on Trial.

Helen & Kurt Wolff: HBJ. 1976. 235p. LC 76-14482. ISBN 0-15-163700-8. $8.95. POL SCI/PER NAR

Loebl, a Czechoslovakian Communist official in the late 1940's, was imprisoned and tried in 1952 on bogus charges of treason by the Stalinist Czech regime. In fact, his only "crimes" were his actions as a foreign trade negotiator to maintain a slight degree of Czech economic independence from the Soviet Union. His story here tells of the bewilderment of a government economist who took pride in being a Marxist, communist, and Czechoslovakian, but who became understandably disillusioned with communism after 11 years in prison. Loebl is convincing and moving in describing his heroic effort to survive the ordeal of brainwashing and physical deprivation that Czech Stalinists imposed on their victims. He is, however, less compelling when he recounts his intellectual reassessment, begun in prison, of Marxism and communism, which resulted in the theory outlined in his recent work, Humanomics (LJ 4/15/76). Recommended.—Donald J. Murphy, Dept. of History, Chabot Coll., Livermore, Calif.

Mann, Golo. Wallenstein: his life narrated.

Holt. Nov. 1976. 909p. illus. maps. bibliog. index. LC 76-4721. ISBN 0-03-091884-7. $22.50. BIOG

Mann's full and detailed account of the life and exploits of Wallenstein, easily the most substantial treatment now available in English, is a thoroughly interesting biographical study based on extensive scholarship and a careful effort to sift verifiable fact from propaganda and legend. Generally sympathetic to his protagonist, Mann is inclined to dismiss the charges that Wallenstein intended betrayal of the house of Austria and was motivated by vast and egoistic ambition. In the process he unravels many of the personal and dynastic problems behind the battles of the Bohemian and north German theaters of the Thirty Years' War, and illuminates the difficult position of Wallenstein as imperial commander in a conflict in which political, religious, and strategic considerations often could not be reconciled. In all, a sizable contribution to the history of early modern Central Europe.—John R. Broadus, Dept. of History, Univ. of Chicago

Pilpel, Robert H. Churchill in America: an affectionate portrait, 1895-1961.

HBJ. Nov. 1976. 250p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-15-117880-1. $10. HIST/BIOG

Using Churchill's numerous visits to the United States over a span of some 65 years as a focus, this well-balanced book undertakes "an affectionate portrait" of the famous British prime minister. It covers all of the major events of Churchill's life, contains the necessary historical background to understand the events described, and deals objectively with the triumphs and the defeats of Churchill's life. (Churchill's blindness regarding independence for India is discussed, for example, along with his extraordinary farsightedness in most other areas of international affairs.) While it offers little new information on Churchill (it's based predominantly on secondary sources and newspaper and periodical accounts, the work is a delight to read and can be highly recommended for general readership.—Scott Wright, Coll. of St. Thomas Lib., St. Paul, Minn.

Potter, E. B. Nimitz.

Naval Inst. Pr. 1976. 507p. maps. index. LC 76-1056. ISBN 0-87021-492-6. $16.95. HIST/BIOG

Replete with detail, and lovingly prepared, this large biography of Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz should please its readers—if they have sufficient time or dedication. The main flaw in this generally excellent book is one that Nimitz himself insured would hinder his biographers: the admiral detested controversy. He took care to limit his candid remarks, and with the help of his wife, saw to it that those items among his papers (otherwise dutifully preserved) that revealed his criticisms were destroyed. Nimitz felt that history should be merely a full chronicle in which the facts would speak for themselves. Historians disagree.—Herman Hattaway, Dept. of History, Univ. of Missouri, Kansas City

Schoenbrun, David. Triumph in Paris: the exploits of Benjamin Franklin.

Harper. 1976. 448p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-06-013854-8. $15. HIST/BIOG

Franklin was America's first great contribution to world diplomacy. Although his accomplishments have been chronicled in hundreds of books, this is, by far, one of the best. Schoenbrun focuses on Franklin's tenure as commissioner to the Court of France from 1776 to 1785—one of the most trying diplomatic periods for the United States. This period in Franklin's life was to be one of the most triumphant. He is presented here as a human being with all of his glories and foibles exposed, but perhaps that is what makes this book all the more refreshing. It has all the earmarks of a best seller. Although historically accurate and in-depth, the book is immensely readable. This period of American history has been written about countless numbers of times, but Schoenbrun adds sharp-edged humor and suspense. Helpful to the student is an especially good annotated bibliography.—Bernard F. Pasqualini, Free Lib. of Philadelphia

Segovia, Andres. Segovia: an autobiography. Vol. 1, 1893-1920.

Macmillan. Nov. 1976. 256p. tr. by W. F. Obrien. ISBN 0-02-609080-5. $10.95.

MUSIC AUTOBIOG

Segovia is almost solely responsible for the acceptance of the guitar on the concert stage; his transcriptions of classical music for the instrument, plus pieces written for him by well-known composers, have both enlarged and enriched the repertoire. This first volume of his autobiography covers the years from his birth in 1893 to 1920, when he left Spain for the first time to concertize in South America. Segovia is considerably more articulate and entertaining with a guitar than a pen; he seems to be telling us the story he thinks we expect to hear—the chronicle of a Great Man. Mostly through anecdotes reconstructed in novelistic detail, he relates his early passions for the guitar, women, and Spain. Setbacks are few and seldom daunting; success seems the inevitable consequence of possessing musical talent. Personal events have no larger context—the outside world exists only as a place to visit. Guitar and Segovia aficionados will want to read the book, but it remains for another biographer to interpret the man behind the legend.—Beth Macleod, Central Michigan Univ. Lib., Mt. Pleasant

Tu, Wei-ming. Neo-Confucian Thought in Action: Wang Yang-ming's youth (1472-1509).

Univ. of California Pr. Dec. 1976. 198p. bibliog. index. LC 74-29799. ISBN 0-520-02968-2. $10.

PHIL/BIOG

The great Chinese philosopher Wang, whose teachings were also very influential in Japan, dominates a growing literature on Ming Neo-Confucianism. Tu's intellectual biography of Wang's formative years, which culminated in the formulation of his doctrine of the unity of knowledge and action, presupposes a familiarity with Wang's life and thought. Through fascinating analyses of the philosopher's poems, essays, and other writings, Tu tries to penetrate into Wang's "inner sensibility" and to link the circumstances of his life with his philosophy. The author also examines Wang's intellectual links to

LIPPINCOTT

"A glorious galloping read for the animal lover."
—James Herriot

WHAT DO YOU DO WITH A KINKAJOU?

Alice Gilborn

"Light and anecdotal . . . suitable for public libraries as well as YA collections."—Library Journal. "Alice Gilborn [has written] an absorbing, clear-eyed portrait-saga of her animal-loving mother .... She is drawn here as a remarkable woman, as fascinating as all the creatures and people in her daughter's book."—Publishers Weekly. "A book to satisfy the fantasies of all animal lovers."—The Kirkus Reviews.

LC 75-29125
ISBN 0-397-01109-1 $8.95

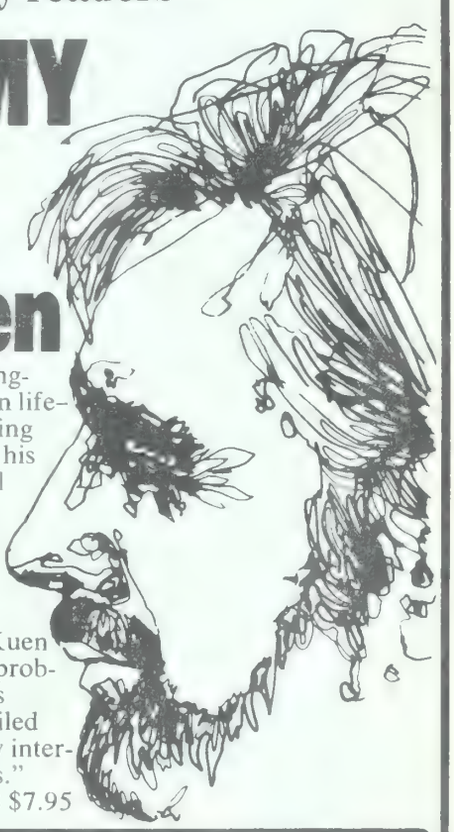
J. B. Lippincott Company
East Washington Square
Philadelphia, Pa. 19105

"Should appeal to many readers"*

FINDING MY FATHER

One Man's Search for Identity

Rod McKuen



"The popular and prolific poet and songwriter here talks about some of his own life—the unhappy childhood . . . the wandering from job to job, his love of music, and his writings—and his eventually successful search for his biological father. His extremely independent and reserved mother, who raised him, refused to tell him almost anything about the circumstances of his illegitimate conception and birth. . . . The story of McKuen desire to find his father, as well as the problems of others in similar situations, has received much publicity, and this detailed and feeling telling in prose with poetry interspersed should appeal to many readers."
—Library Journal.* SBN 698-10774-8 $7.95

COWARD, McCANN & GEOGHEGAN, INC.
200 Madison Avenue, New York 10016

Highly Recommended Columbia Titles

PUBLIC EMPLOYEE PENSION FUNDS

Robert Tilove. "A comprehensive and incisive study by a recognized authority of the major public policy issues of state and local pension funds. Tilove analyzes pension benefits, eligibility, financing, coordination with Social Security, and the experience of public employee pensions in New York, Massachusetts, and Illinois....He buttresses the analysis with extensive and valuable statistical tables. While Tilove's study deservedly should find a wide readership among specialists, it is also highly recommended for all who are interested in this important public problem."—Library Journal

LC 75-33733
ISBN 0-231-04015-6 $20.00

THE TREATMENT OF MARKET POWER

Antitrust, Regulation, and Public Enterprise

William G. Shepherd. "Shepherd...has served in the antitrust division of the Department of Justice and is well qualified to evaluate the development of public policies for the market. He argues that traditional attempts to control the market through antitrust action and public regulation are outmoded, since they actually protect firms already dominant in the market and encourage monopoly.... Appropriate for any academic or research collection interested in marketing."—Library Journal

LC 75-19459
ISBN 0-231-03773-2 $15.00

COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY PRESS

Address for orders:
136 South Broadway
Irvington, New York 10533

Taoism, Ch'an Buddhism, and his Neo-Confucian predecessors, and uses these links to help explain the development of Wang's thought. This is an important book for students of Chinese intellectual history, and it's essential for special and college collections.—Evelyn S. Rawski, Dept. of History, Univ. of Pittsburgh

Woolf, Virginia. The Letters of Virginia Woolf. Vol. 2: 1912-1922.

HBJ. Nov. 1976. 602p. ed. & intro. by Nigel Nicolson. illus. index. LC 75-25538. ISBN 0-15-150925-5. $14.95. LIT/CORRESPONDENCE

If anything, the second volume of Woolf's correspondence is even more marvelous than the first (LJ 12/15/75). The decade covered was rich and eventful. These were the years of World War I and the founding of the Hogarth Press, years that also included two bouts with insanity and an attempted suicide. Woolf published three novels, The Voyage Out, Night and Day, and Jacob's Room, the latter of which marked the real beginning of her mature fiction and her public recognition. These letters aren't characterized by "events" though, whether in Flanders or at Woolf's writing table. It's more a question of a person living quite zestfully, taking delight in the minutiae of everyday life. Even more important is the powerful sense of human relationship, vividly cultivated and deeply enjoyed. Woolf's sister Vanessa is the central figure, but the rest of Bloomsbury is on hand too, and there are interesting newcomers like T. S. Eliot as well. The teasing good humor and intellectual high spirits would be irresistible even if the letter writer weren't Woolf. The editorial job is again exemplary, and the introduction is concise and splendid. I have nothing but exclamation marks, but this book deserves them.—Keith Cushman, Dept. of English, Univ. of North Carolina, Greensboro

BUSINESS & ECONOMICS

Ahern, Dee Dee with Betsy Bliss. The Economics of Being a Woman.

Macmillan. Nov. 1976. 252p. ISBN 0-02-500610-X. $8.95. SOC SCI/ECON

Full of statistical data, case histories, questions, quotations, and forms, this is hardly the type of book for light reading. It is, however, a valuable handbook with practical advice on "how a woman can take her economic destiny into her own hands." Chapters cover the psychology of money, pension plans, insurance, divorce, and the problems of being a widow. What is missing is an index, which would help one use the information. The work is accurate, but tends to get bogged down in minutiae. It's very similar to Sylvia Auerbach's A Woman's Book of Money (LJ 8/76). If you can only purchase one, Auerbach's is much easier to read; nevertheless, Ahern's is recommended.—MaryKay W. Schnare, Dutchess Community Coll. Lib., Poughkeepsie, N.Y.

from "Letters of Virginia Woolf, Volume II: 1912–1922"

Cline, William R. International Monetary Reform and the Developing Countries.

Brookings. 1976. 160p. illus. index. LC 75-44503. ISBN 0-8157-1476-9. $9.95; pap. ISBN 0-8157-1475-0. $3.50. INT AFFAIRS/ECON

The crisis in the international monetary system that began in 1971 clearly had a profound impact on the industrialized countries; this book concentrates on the less developed countries (LDC's), which have too often been neglected in this area. The major portion deals with two main concerns the LDC's have had about the new agreements replacing the 1944 Bretton Woods conference. First, they oppose flexible exchange rates, fearing the effect on their economies; but Cline argues that while there may be some negative effects, they are more than offset by the benefits of improved world trade. The LDC's are also pressing for a link between development assistance and the creation of Special Drawing Rights. Although this has not yet been resolved, Cline argues that it is unlikely to have a significant impact on aid. Highly recommended for academic libraries.—Carol Holbrook, Univ. of Michigan Lib., Ann Arbor

Foxley, Cecelia H. Locating, Recruiting, and Employing Women: an equal opportunity approach.

Garrett. 1976. 357p. bibliog. index. LC 76-7236. ISBN 0-912048-66-2. pap. $8.50. BUS/LABOR

Too much of Foxley's book is derivative or descriptive of the female workforce and too little amounts to concrete, workable suggestions. Presumably, the employer who wants to recruit women is already familiar with Bureau of Labor Statistics figures and can find the obvious government documents, addresses, and bibliography that make up the bulk of this book. This would be a valuable tool only for an employer just beginning to think about EEO compliance or without access to standard sources like the Federal Register. Similar titles, e.g., Clement J. Berwitz's The Job Analysis Approach to Affirmative Action (Wiley, 1975) and the American Management Association's How To Eliminate Discriminatory Practice (1975), while primarily concerned with minority groups, offer more valuable information. Both these titles are based on concrete case studies and utilize the company compliance officer's approach, in contrast to Foxley's guidance counselor outlook. Although Foxley says her book is for employers, it might prove more valuable for informing individual women workers about themselves and their potential.—Janice Dunham, N.Y.P.L.

communications

Alexander, Shana. Talking Woman.

Delacorte. Nov. 1976. 352p. ISBN 0-440-08595-0. $8.95. PERSNAR COMM

A collection of pieces mostly from Life, Newsweek, and CBS, interspersed with bits of "diary" giving background on the stories dating from 1961. Alexander's very personal style of journalism shows as much about the author as it does about the topics she discusses, which vary from elephants to the CIA. There are a few in-depth interviews of personalities with Alexander apparently speaking from inside the souls of the interviewees. And there is commentary on the current scene and current news. All of this is very readable with only an occasional tinge of preciousness. The topical nature of the material, however, will give Talking Woman a relatively short shelf life.—Gloria Gehrman, Moscow-Latah County Lib., Idaho

Dygert, James H. The Investigative Journalist: folk heroes of a new era.

Prentice-Hall. Nov. 1976. 250p. LC 76-13042. ISBN 0-13-502310-6. $8.95. COMM

This timely book contains case studies of numerous investigations by reporters for both print and television. It examines the methods the journalists used to get to the bottom of well-known incidents such as My Lai and Watergate, but these descriptions are generally quite brief and leave many unanswered questions. A short chapter on methods of investigating contains little analysis or commentary. This book would have been more useful if Dygert had concentrated on fewer journalists and given more detail on how and why they operate, instead of trying to cover almost every investigative journalist in the country.—Mary Knapp, Madison P.L., Wis.

EDUCATION

Gould, Toni. Home Guide to Early Reading.

Walker. 1976. bibliog. LC 75-40825. ISBN 0-8027-0531-6. $9.95. ED

Gould recommends a carefully sequenced and structured reading program for the preschool child. Her book gives games and ideas appropriate for each of the preschool years, covering the areas of oral language, auditory perception, and teaching the sounds of letters rather than their alphabet names. Such a program is even more important for a slow-learning child, who especially needs more time to learn. Gould is coauthor, with her mother, Catherine Stern, and her sister-in-law, Margaret B. Stern, of the Structural Reading Program, published by Random House. She is presently instructor in early childhood education at the Herbert H. Lehman College, CUNY. Her book is highly recommended not only for parents and nursery school teachers, but also for early intervention work with the learning-disability child.—Marian Wozencraft, Dept. of Education, SUNY at Geneseo

Jones, Philip & Susan Jones. Parents, Unite!: the complete guide for shaking up your children's school.

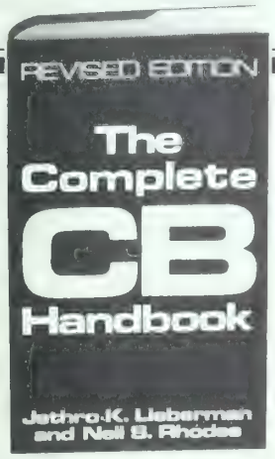
Wyden, dist. by McKay. 1976. 268p. index. ISBN 0-671-22405-0. $9.95. ED

A constructive blueprint for parents who wish to share in the shaping of their children's educational milieu. Emphasis is placed on the creation of group solidarity, the identification of specific problems, and the implementation of possible solutions. Despite their activist orientation, the authors remain refreshingly apolitical. Concerned parents can profitably use this volume to unfurl the banners for a wide variety of causes, e.g., to promote a return to the "basics," to initiate innovative curricula, to get rid of an incompetent principal, to save a controversial teacher, or

The best-seller in paper—now hardbound for libraries



To meet school and public library demand for a first-rate, solidly bound CB book, McKay's editors have chosen the best of the many paperbacks for publication in a sturdy, hardbound edition. Because it covers every CB angle, The Complete CB Handbook is the top best-seller in the field. 320 pages. Illustrated. 0-679-50690-X. $7.95.

McKAY

The men who shaped modern warfare

In this fascinating and engrossing book, a host of accomplished military historians takes the measure of 43 great warriors — among them Rommel, Montgomery, MacArthur, Patton, Yamamoto, Zhukov and Eisenhower. Each is assessed not only in terms of his character and strategies, talents and eccentricities, but also in the overall context of evolving 20th-century military theory and practice. "Stimulating portraits . . . useful and often thought-provoking." —Kirkus Reviews

THE WAR LORDS

Military Commanders of the Twentieth Century
Edited by Field Marshal Sir Michael Carver

A Main Selection of the History Book Club.
With 24 black-and-white photographs, $17.95

Little, Brown and Company
34 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass. 02106

to promote (or prevent) classes in sex education.—Mark R. Yerburgh, SUNY at Albany Lib.

Wilson, Sue. I Can Do It! I Can Do It!: arts and crafts for the mentally retarded.

Quail St. Pub. Co., dist. by Bobbs. 1976. ISBN 0-89307-002-5. $8.95. CRAFTS/ED

Wilson's book is a collage of about 50 art projects for the trainable and educable mentally retarded child, but it really doesn't offer for the retarded anything that isn't available in the usual craft activity sources. The book is designed to resemble a hand-drawn-and-lettered sketchbook. It gives detailed commentary on where to get and use such basic materials as paint, clay, papier-mâché, glue, and weaving supplies. Interlaced with this lengthy description of materials are the old, well-known projects—mobiles, finger paints, potato stamps, painted rocks, etc.—familiar to most kindergarten teachers. The projects have been coded in terms of difficulty and, for the most part, require fairly close supervision for the trainable child. They appear to be more appropriate for the educable child who is likely to find them a little messy and fun. The book is aimed at the parent or teacher with very little knowledge about arts and crafts and it contains much obvious advice, such as that glitter can be purchased in an art supply store and mixing white with paint lightens the color.—Clark Johnson, Jefferson County Public Sch. District, Lakewood, Colo.

the Humanities & YOU

A NEW KIND OF EDUCATIONAL OPPORTUNITY

- EARN AN ACCREDITED COLLEGE DEGREE AT HOME
- ENJOY WIDE FLEXIBILITY IN CHOICE OF STUDY TOPICS
- ENRICH YOUR KNOWLEDGE AND CULTURAL BACKGROUND
- BECOME A MORE COMPLETE PERSON!

California State College, Dominguez Hills, offers you the opportunity to participate in its interdisciplinary programs in the humanities: art, music, literature, philosophy, and history. Following the faculty-directed program of independent study with course guides, optional seminars, and audio cassettes, you can earn either a bachelor's or a master's degree or just enroll in courses that interest you.

For further information, complete this coupon and mail it today!

Humanities External Degree Program
Drawer L
California State College,
Dominguez Hills
Dominguez Hills, CA 90747

I'm interested in the bachelor's( ) master's( ) self-enrichment( ) program.

Name_____

Street_____

City_____

State_____ ZIP_____

HISTORY

America's Working Women: a documentary history—1600 to the present.

Random. 1976. 400p. comp. & ed. by Rosalyn Baxandall & others. index. LC 76-10574. ISBN 0-394-49150-5. $15; Vintage. pap. LC 76-10575. ISBN 0-394-72208-6. $6.95. LABOR/HIST

This anthology reflects the emergence within the women's movement of a working class perspective. An historical focus on the female labor force is welcome, not only to correct a serious imbalance, but also to direct our attention to the origins of current problems. These selections illustrate the changing definition of women's work and social conditions in relation to the evolution of capitalism. They not only reveal changing patterns of labor force participation and the sexual division of labor, but also the relation between the market and work done at home. Throughout this work, the double oppression of sex and class that working women bear is examined, with much attention given to their collective struggles around these issues—both in and out of unions. By providing a good mix of general and specific accounts and by bringing the story to the present day, the editors create not only an understanding of history, but a feeling of being part of it. In addition to its obvious scholarly value, this volume should and will have considerable popular appeal. Recommended for wide purchase.—Ken Nash, Queens Borough P.L., New York

Beckett, J. C. The Anglo-Irish Tradition.

Cornell Univ. Pr. Nov. 1976. 162p. LC 76-20093. $9.75. HIST

A respected Irish historian argues that the Anglo-Irish tradition was as authentic and important a part of Ireland's heritage as the Gaelic Catholic one that found political expression in the Irish Republic after 1921. His central thesis is that the Protestant ascendancy reached its peak in the 18th Century, and then slowly declined. At its height, the tradition produced some of Ireland's finest architecture, literature, and statesmanship. The resurgence of a majority Catholic nationalism in the 19th Century eroded and finally destroyed the political power of the Anglo-Irish after World War I. The Anglo-Irish tradition was, as Beckett claims, less sectarian and provincial in spirit than either the Catholic nationalist or Ulster Protestant dissenter traditions. His book persuasively rebuts nationalistic historiography. It is gracefully written and wise in its judgements. Finally, it contains interesting biographical vignettes of Anglo-Irishmen, renowned and obscure. Recommended.—Donald J. Murphy, Dept. of History, Chabot Coll., Livermore, Calif.

Bendiner, Elmer. The Virgin Diplomats.

Knopf. 1976. index. $10. HIST

A cursory attempt to recreate the diplomatic atmosphere of the late colonial period in America. The narrative begins with the Stamp Act in 1766 and ends arbitrarily in 1783. Each of the topics dealt with is of sufficient historic importance to warrant book-length coverage, so that each discussion is once-over-lightly at best. The same material has been handled better elsewhere both in generalities and specifics.—Bernard F. Pasqualini, Free Lib. of Philadelphia

Coppa, Frank J. & Thomas J. Curran, eds. The Immigrant Experience in America.

Twayne. (Immigrant Heritage of America Series). Dec. 1976. 232p. bibliog. LC 76-8434. ISBN 0-8057-8406-3. $9.50. SOC SCI/HIST

This collection of essays grew out of a 54-part TV series produced by St. John's University and CBS in 1973. Eight of the essays treat the history of specific immigrant groups: Hispanics, Germans, Norwegians, Irish, Italians, Jews, blacks ("immigrants against their will"), and Asians. The last essay discusses the 1952 McCarran–Walter Act and immigration policy in general. The essays, which read as though they are still TV scripts, are aimed at a general audience. And though a nonscholarly collection of essays on American immigrant groups is useful for public libraries, most of the articles assembled here are too simplistic, seemingly more appropriate for schoolchildren than adults. Still, some of the essays, such as those on the Irish and Norwegians, are moderately successful at avoiding the pitfalls of oversimplification and sweeping generalization.—Judith E. Endelman, Dept. of Sociology, Boston Coll., Chestnut Hill, Mass.

Dingman, Roger. Power in the Pacific: the origin of Naval Arms Limitation Agreement, 1914-1922.

Univ. of Chicago Pr. Dec. 1976. 336p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-36402. ISBN 0-226-15331-2. $19. HIST

For the student, scholar, and historian of the futile post-World War I naval disarmament negotiations, this useful book is well documented, meticulous in its detail, and thorough in its analysis. Dingman reviews the fairly familiar story of domestic pressures, international rivalries, and political cynicism leading to the futile quest for true disarmament. Modern political scientists might well read this study as they contemplate the problems of the Strategic Arms Limitations Talks.—R. F. Delaney, U.S. Naval War Coll., Newport, R.I.

Franklin, John Hope. Racial Equality in America.

Univ. of Chicago Pr. 1976. 113p. LC 76-26168. $7.95. SOC SCI/HIST

This is a sobering book, more descriptive than analytical, by a distinguished historian. Franklin points out the paradox of American history—that the ideal of equality for all has been based on the reality of inequality for many. He assails the Founding Fathers, particularly Jefferson, for perpetuating racial fantasies and failing to extend the Revolution to blacks. Instead, Franklin says, they bequeathed to America a legacy of prejudice and slavery. Despite vital contributions to national defense and economic development, blacks have not enjoyed prosperity and acceptance. They have been left to their own resources for survival. And so it continues. Sometimes tendentious, sometimes narrow, but always provocative, Franklin reminds us that true liberty knows no gradations; racism threatens the republic's survival. Informed students of American history and culture will profit from this book. Highly recommended.—Randall M. Miller, Dept. of History, St. Joseph's Coll., Philadelphia

Heller, Celia. On the Edge of Destruction: Jews in Poland, 1918–39.

Columbia Univ. Pr. Nov. 1976. 300p. illus. ISBN 0-231-03819-4. $12.50. HIST

In contrast to the wealth of literature on Polish Jewry during the Holocaust and, to some extent, before World War I, not much has been written about Jewish life in independent Poland during the interwar decades. Heller's book is welcome as the first study of its kind in English. The author, a sociologist, considers Polish Jewry as a "caste" in the Weberian sense, as a closed status group, characterized by foreignness and inferiority among the non-Jewish population. She substantiates her thesis in a useful introductory chapter and then goes on to consider how Poland's Jews coped with their status. Her insightful and objective description and analysis of the sociocultural setting of Jewish life is based on varied sources in Polish, Yiddish, and Hebrew. A fine, readable, well-documented study, highly recommended for East European and Judaica collections, and for large public and college libraries.—Israel Margalith, Dept. of Jewish History & Hebrew Literature, Cleveland Coll. of Jewish Studies

Johnson, Curt. Battles of the American Revolution: a concise military history of the war, reconstructing eight major encounters.

Rand McNally. 1976. 126p. illus., some color. maps. index. LC 75-18795. ISBN 0-528-81022-7. $12.95. HIST

This book does just what its subtitle says it does, but with a novel approach. Through the use of color photographs of model soldiers and diagrams of battles, Johnson attempts to show significant turning points of the war. The graphics, both pictures and diagrams, are of a uniformly high standard. Also commendable is the graphic presentation of the organization and equipment of the various armies. There are many easy-to-follow maps and tables of organization placed throughout the book. Enthusiastically recommended for medium-sized and larger public libraries.—Ronald Hubbs, Melrose P.L., Mass.

Kopperman, Paul E. Braddock at the Monongahela.

Univ. of Pittsburgh Pr. Dec. 1976. 342p. illus. maps. bibliog. index. LC 76-6662. $9.95. HIST

The British under General Edward Braddock in July 1755 launched a major but unsuccessful effort to remove the French influence from the Ohio valley by capturing Fort Duquesne. The author reexamines the events leading up to the battle, the battle itself, its aftermath, and the charges and controversy surrounding it. A few of the questions he raises are Who is to blame for the defeat, Braddock or his troops?; Were the colonial troops really the "backwoodsmen" of legend?; and What were the consequences of Braddock's defeat? The questions are thoroughly explored, but there is still room for speculation and interpretation. The author relies heavily on firsthand accounts, and his extensive research is evident in the more than 180 pages of maps, appendixes, notes, and a bibliography. This major contribution to the literature on the period is highly recommended for academic and public libraries.—Robert E. Schnare Jr., U.S. Military Academy Lib., West Point

Lawson, Steven F. Black Ballots: voting rights in the South, 1944–1969.

Columbia Univ. Pr. Nov. 1976. 432p. ISBN 0-231-03978-6. $20; pap. ISBN 0-231-08352-1. $6.95. CIVIL RIGHTS/HIST

After elaborating upon the heritage of black disenfranchisement within the Southern states, the author turns to the legal and extra-legal mechanisms used to overcome barriers to black voter participation. The perspectives of civil rights groups demonstrating a sense of urgency and a desire for social justice are contrasted with the uncertain attitudes of federal officials charged with

"Highly recommended"*
DISINHERITED:
The Lost Birthright of the American Indian by Dale Van Every
The powerful and moving story of how the Indians were dispossessed from the lands they had known for centuries. "Probably the best book on this subject to be found."
—*Library Journal
"No single book on the vast tragedy ...is quite as adequate as Dale Van Every's. ...More graphically told in brief than by any previous diarist or author." —Saturday Review
MORROW HERITAGE EDITION
0-688-03119-6 $12.50
WILLIAM MORROW & CO.
6 Henderson Drive, West Caldwell, N.J. 07006

Take the grand tour of Western architecture

Nikolaus Pevsner's knowledge and discerning eye have created the most original book on architecture to be published this decade.
746 illus. 9 x 11 ¼".
ISBN 0-691-09904-9.
$37.50
A History of Building Types is a masterful guide to the architectural inheritance of the West. The tour of inspection leads from the most ideal to the most utilitarian structures, from national monuments all the way to shops and factories. Over 700 photographs document the journey.
A HISTORY OF BUILDING TYPES
by Nikolaus Pevsner
The A.W. Mellon Lectures in the Fine Arts
Bollingen Series XXXV :19

Princeton University Press
Princeton, N.J. 08540

"A new classic."*

A SLAVER'S LOG BOOK
or 20 Years' Residence in Africa
Captain Theophilus Conneau

Recently discovered in manuscript . . . the book should be a cause for celebration among social historians and adventure buffs. . . . As detailed — and as fascinating — as anything in the literature . . . will doubtless become basic, primary source material for future scholars. . . . A new classic."
—* Publishers Weekly
(August 16, 1976)
0-13-788752-3 $12.50

PRENTICE-HALL CIP
General Book Marketing Division
Box 500, Englewood Cliffs, N.J. 07632

"An important, inspiring source..."

The testimony — much of it previously uncollected, from contemporary Senate reports, newspapers, and national, state and missionary archives — affords a new perspective on Reconstruction as southern blacks themselves experienced it. — The Kirkus Reviews

★ "An excellent addition to collections." — School Library Journal, starred review.

THE TROUBLE THEY SEEN:
Black People Tell the Story of Reconstruction Edited by DOROTHY STERLING

Ages 12 and up $6.95
(ISBN 0-385-00476-1) Library Edition available. Doubleday & Company, Inc., Garden City, New York 11530

DOUBLEDAY

enforcing newly created laws. There is no mistaking Lawson's clearly held contention that federal officials made political compromises that unnecessarily detained the beginning of electoral participation by the black population. The Truman, Eisenhower, Kennedy, and Johnson administrations are scrutinized for their rhetoric and their actual performance, with none of them, including the extraordinarily active Johnson Administration, emerging without serious flaws. Highly recommended for all students of contemporary American history and politics.—Samuel H. Shannon, Dept. of History & Geography, Tennessee State Univ., Nashville

Levering, Ralph B. American Opinion and the Russian Alliance, 1939–1945.

Univ. of North Carolina Pr. 1976. 325p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-1996. ISBN 0-8078-1260-9. $17.95. INT AFFAIRS/HIST

The coming of 20th-Century international power politics is competently presented in this case study of the impact of public opinion on U.S.-Soviet relations during World War II. It is an intriguing, well-researched analysis of the vagaries of public attitudes toward fundamental issues of war and survival. The author carefully documents his story from the Soviet-Nazi Pact of 1939, to Russia's valiant defense of the homeland, to the final shift of opinion against the Soviet Union when it rolled westward in 1944–1945. Levering does an excellent job of showing the impact of public opinion on the development of Soviet-American relations. Recommended.—R. F. Delaney, U.S. Naval War Coll., Newport, R.I.

Palmer, Colin A. Slaves of the White God: blacks in Mexico, 1570-1650.

Harvard Univ. Pr. 1976. 234p. bibliog. index. LC 75-34054. ISBN 0-674-81085-6. $13.50. HIST

Comparative studies of slavery have become increasingly important in recent years, and much information is still lacking. Palmer's study of slavery in colonial Mexico adds to the needed data. Based on excellent archival research and secondary sources, it investigates the slave trade, the treatment of slaves in various labor capacities, the church and slavery, slave customs, and the role of the freedman. It is a specialized book of primary interest to scholars and advanced students. Further studies covering other time periods and colonies will ultimately allow the production of an overall survey of more general value. Though this is a valuable work, libraries with limited budgets and without specialized collections in this area may wish to pass it by.—I. E. Cadenhead, Jr., Dept. of History, Univ. of Tulsa, Okla.

Petrovich, Michael Boro. A History of Modern Serbia 1804–1918. 2 vols.

HBJ. Nov. 1976. Vol. 1, 352p. illus. maps. index. bibliog. Vol. 2, 517p. ISBN 0-15-140950-1. slipcased. $49.50. HIST

This book is the only recent English-language history of Serbia. Fortunately, it is careful, well written, loyal to sources, and well documented; further, it is remarkably free of bias. In two volumes, the book carries the story of Serbia from its emergence in 1804 as a province of the Ottoman Empire through the years of World War I, when Serbia won infamy as the locale for Archduke Ferdinand's assassination. This is not a book for everyone, but for students of Balkan history it is a newly found near must.—R. F. Delaney, U.S. Naval War Coll., Newport, R.I.

Reckoning with Slavery: a critical study in the quantitative history of American Negro slavery by Paul A. David & others.

Oxford Univ. Pr. 1976. 398p. intro. by Kenneth M. Stampp. bibliog. index. LC 75-38098. $15. pap. $4.50. HIST

These eight essays systematically test Robert William Fogel and Stanley L. Engerman's Time on the Cross (LJ 7/74) which, using quantitative methods, presented an arresting reinterpretation of slavery. It argued that the slave economy was dynamic and efficient and provided the South with a high rate of economic growth and a high standard of living for all, including slaves, and that slaves willingly cooperated with the plantation system, played a significant managerial role, were ambitious and hard working, etc. David and his fellow critics, all quantitative historians, challenge both the methodology used and the conclusions reached in Time on the Cross. In each instance, they demonstrate that the work either misread or misused the evidence and reached unsupportable conclusions. The essays are complex, closely reasoned, and fair-minded, and are intended primarily for advanced students and scholars.—Peter J. Coleman, Dept. of History, Univ. of Illinois, Chicago Circle

Sachar, Howard M. A History of Israel: from the rise of Zionism to our time.

Knopf. 1976. 928p. maps. bibliog. index. LC 76-13710. ISBN 0-394-48564-5. $20. HIST

Israel has assumed a stature disproportionate to its size in world affairs. Sachar traces the growth of this stature from the rise of Jewish nationalism in the 18th Century, the birth of the Zionist movement, early Jewish settlement in Palestine, and the establishment of the State of Israel, to the Arab–Israeli conflicts and their aftermath. What makes Sachar's book a history rather than a mere reportage of events is his ability to analyze the circumstances and personalities that led up to and precipitated events. The author uses anecdotal material to lend nuance to events, and discretion in quoting original sources. As in his other works, maps proliferate and the bibliography is extensive. Sachar's scholarly approach coupled with his talent for writing history make this volume a requirement for college and university libraries.—Leslie Kane, Central Michigan Univ. Lib., Mt. Pleasant

The Salem, Ohio 1850 Women's Rights Convention Proceedings.

Salem Area Bicentennial Committee and Salem P.L., 821 E. State St., Salem, Ohio 44460. 1976. 72p. comp. & ed. by Robert W. Audretsch. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-19670. $11; pap. $7. HIST

This compilation of the proceedings of the Salem Women's Rights Convention brings together for the first time all the material on this important event. In the struggle for equal rights, it was the first women's rights convention held after the 1848 gathering at Seneca Falls. The Salem Convention was called as a result of a forthcoming Ohio constitutional convention and the desire for equal rights among those women who had been active in the temperance and abolitionist movements. The proceedings are a welcome addition to the literature on the early women's rights movement. Recommended for all women's studies collections.—Robert E. Schnare Jr., U.S. Military Academy, West Point Simmons, R. C. The American Colonies: from settlement to independence.

HISTORY

McKay. 1976. 448p. maps. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-679-50595-4. $12.50. HIST
This history is a straightforward narrative survey with solid scholarship (it's based entirely on secondary sources), but little interpretation. There are many and better works to choose from. Daniel Boorstin, Wesley F. Craven, Lawrence H. Gipson, and Carl W. Ubbelohde are only a few of the colonial historians who have offered solid accounts. It is hard to find anything new in Simmons that would recommend it over the others.—Bonnie Collier, Yale Univ. Lib.

Thomas, John Oram. The Giant-Killers: the story of the Danish resistance movement 1940–1945.
Taplinger. 1976. 320p. illus. index. $10.95. PER NAR/HIST
Personal narratives of the German occupation of Denmark and the Resistance have been numerous. This account is disjointed and episodic, depicting special aspects—the students, the press, individual leaders, and particular events—that have an intrinsic appeal because of sentiment, heroism, and courage. The Giant-Killers does not cover the pre-1943 Danish government, German organizations and rule, or the role of the Allied agencies. Naturally, all patriotic Danes are heroes, and Danish Nazis, Germans, and other enemies are stupid, vicious, and criminal. Still, the book offers interesting insights into such matters as the sea transport of arms, munitions, and people, of sabotage, and of individual participation. The book is well written and nicely illustrated. For special collections and large libraries.—Raymond E. Lindgren, Dept. of History, California State Univ., Long Beach

Williams, Lea E. Southeast Asia: a history.
Oxford Univ. Pr. 1976. 299p. illus. maps. index. LC 75-32358. $12.95. HIST
As the author notes a number of good histories of Southeast Asia are already available. His justification for writing this one is ". . . to take a fresh approach to the subject of paying more attention to historical themes and currents than to individuals and events. . . . to offer readers an analytical framework rather than a body of facts." The result is a general chronological survey of the political history of Southeast Asia from the prehistoric period to the present. Some key dates and names are provided as landmarks, but the reader's attention is always focused on the major threads of the narrative. Each chapter is followed by a list of suggested readings for those who wish to explore the period in more detail. For the general reader and the undergraduate approaching the subject for the first time this general survey is much less forbidding than is Daniel G. Hall's A History of South-East Asia (St. Martin's, 1968. 3d ed.), which has remained the standard treatment of the subject. Recommended for most libraries.—Charles R. Bryant, Yale Univ. Lib.

Wilson, Derek & Peter Ayerst. White Gold: the story of African ivory.
Taplinger. 1976. 184p. illus. LC 76-363. ISBN 0-8008-8251-2. $9.95. HIST
The authors briefly treat all subjects relating to the African elephant. Of greatest interest are the chapters outlining the relationship between the ivory trade and the progress of African history and discussing the connections between ivory and the slave trade. Other chapters treat habits of the elephant, hunting and poaching, and conservation. There is even a chapter devoted to tall tales about the subject. Sources of illustrative quotations are rarely identified, and this is especially annoying in the absence of a bibliography.—Richard Cima, Glenbard East H.S., Lombard, Ill.

Woods, Williams. England in the Age of Chaucer.
Stein & Day. 1976. 219p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-13461. ISBN 0-8128-2092-8. $10. HIST
This historical, cultural, and literary background written by a mature and witty scholar of Old French deserves reading by both undergraduate and graduate students of medieval English. It surveys the milieu of the late 14th Century in England from the point of view of the common people—peasants, laborers, and artisans. This refreshing vantage redresses the familiar overemphasis on the rich life of aristocrats, higher clergy, courtly poets, and the like. The book draws mainly upon classic studies by authorities such as Coulton, Owst, Pirenne, and Trevelyan; and the imaginative use of both primary and secondary materials makes it lively reading, replete with details of medieval life. Individual chapters take up the peasant's life in the country, his treatment by the courts, the effects of the Black Plague, travel, the practices of the established church versus the reformation of Wycliffe and the Lollards, the rise of mercantile London, and the development of courtly sentiment and literature; the final three chapters trace the Peasants' Revolt of 1381 and its defeat. Woods quotes from both Chaucer and Langland to illustrate the contrasts of the age; but, as he believes, Langland gives the truer picture of the life of the common people in a divisive, decaying, and yet burgeoning period. With style and vigor, this book shows

ALBION'S FATAL TREE
Crime and Society in Eighteenth-Century England by DOUGLAS HAY, PETER LINEBAUGH, JOHN G. RULE, E. P. THOMPSON, CALVIN WINSLOW
LC: 75-23256 $15
ISBN: 0-394-47120-2
Paperback Giant, $5.95
ISBN: 0-394-73085-2

WHIGS AND HUNTERS
The Origin of the Black Act
by E. P. THOMPSON
LC: 75-23168 $15
ISBN: 0-394-40011-9
Paperback Giant, $5.95
ISBN: 0-394-73086-0

"Prompted by research initiated at the Centre for the Study of Social History at the University of Warwick, both volumes slice deep beneath the veneer of pomp and circumstance traditionally associated with 18th-Century English life. Articulate and closely documented, each of these volumes is a significant contribution. Taken together, they represent much more. Rarely has 'history from beneath' bubbled up so undiluted and so fresh."—Library Journal

PANTHEON
201 E. 50 St., New York 10022

the real nature of Chaucer's England.—H. T. Keenan, Dept. of English, Georgia State Univ.

Travel, Exploration & Adventure

Fodor, Eugene & Robert C. Fisher, eds. Fodor's Old West.

McKay. 1976. 500p. intro. by Jack Schaefer. illus. maps. index. ISBN 0-679-00181-6. $12.95. pap. ISBN 0-679-00182-4. $9.95. TRAV

The "old West" is defined here as the contiguous states west of the Mississippi River, and the attempt to describe such a wide area results in a volume too heavy for a good traveling companion. Some states get more attention than others. While Louisiana is covered by seven pages, Kansas has 23, Texas 37, and California 42. For each state there is a historical sketch, information about highways, bus routes, liquor laws, tourist services, etc., plus a hotel/motel/dining-out directory. Special interest materials, a chronology of historical events, and feature articles by Western writers are included. Most travel facts are current (however, the address for the Old West Trail Foundation is a building in Lincoln, Nebraska which was demolished in 1974).—Evelyn G. Callaway, formerly with Nebraska Lib. Commission, Fairbury

Jorden, Paul J. with James R. Adair. Surgeon on Safari.

Hawthorn. 1976. 192p. photogs. LC 75-41806. ISBN 0-8015-2147-5. $6.95. PER NAR/TRAV

Dr. Jorden's primary purpose during his year at an African mission hospital in Kijabe, Kenya was to use his skills as an orthopedic surgeon, but he, his wife, and their nine children also managed to travel to such places as Mt. Kilimanjaro, the port of Mombasa, and Ngorongoro Crater. The adventures of the Jorden family, and the people they met as they traveled—missionaries and their families, native peoples, and others—are enthusiastically described here. Religion plays an integral part in Jorden's daily life; and as a result of his family's year in Africa, some of the older children are actively going into missionary work. Readers who are contemplating working abroad or just interested in people and their travels could gain from this book.—Marion Amdursky, formerly with Fairfax County Pub. Schs. Libs., Manassas, Va.

Koning, Hans. A New Yorker in Egypt.

Helen & Kurt Wolff: HBJ. Nov. 1976. 265p. ISBN 0-15-165520-0. $10.95. PER NAR/TRAV

Koning, a regular contributor to the New Yorker, writes about his 1975 visit to Sadat's Egypt. His itinerary included the major cities as well as back streets and rural villages. Koning shows unusual insight into the social and economic problems facing modern Egypt. As he notes, the Aswan High Dam has changed the rhythm of life along the Nile, but Egypt's economy still depends on the backbreaking labor of the peasants. Poverty has also affected the values of the middle class. Egyptians who favor an alliance with the U.S. are less concerned with the obvious political reasons than they are with the "things" the rich Americans have to give. Koning's account of his trip is both readable and perceptive.—Victoria K. Musmann, Glendale P.L., Calif.

Sherr, Lynn & Jurate Kazickas. The American Woman's Gazetteer.

Bantam. 1976. 282p. illus. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-553-01041-7. pap. $7.95. HIST/TRAV

A travel guide to landmarks in the U.S. that are significant in the history of American women. Major division is by state, with each site listed under the city in which it is located. The index helps provide easy access by name. When a woman is known for achievements in more than one location, the authors provide cross references to other sites. With few exceptions, the women included as subjects for this work died as of January 1975. Illustrations include black-and-white photographs and drawings, which are sometimes unlabeled, making it difficult to match text to pictures. Entries are concise and readable. Recommended.—Valencia Williams, Los Angeles County P.L. System, Lakewood Steinberg, Sheila & Cathleen McGuigan. Rhode Island: an historical guide.

Rhode Island Bicentennial Foundation, Providence, R.I. 284p. drawings by Barry Moser. bibliog. index. LC 76-8800. ISBN 0-917-01207-0. pap. $1.95. TRAV

In a guide which will provide information long after the passing of the Bicentennial year, the authors present Rhode Island's past and present in a composite, contemporary portrait. Preceding each tour is an introduction to the history of the area. Clearly drawn street maps are provided for the city tours and fine line drawings enhance the text. Emphasis is upon Rhode Island's rich architectural heritage. Sites of particular interest to children are specified. Both visitors and natives will find this guide—said to be the first comprehensive state-wide one in 40 years—to be a handy companion to their explorations into Rhode Island's historical and social past.—Betty Page, Guilford Public Schs. Libs., Conn.

Home Economics

Cookery

Gibbons, Barbara. The Slim Gourmet Cookbook.

Harper. 1976. 416p. index. ISBN 0-06-011517-3. $12.95. HEALTH/COOKERY

A well-researched and carefully organized book intended for everyone "watching" or wishing to lose weight. Habits of buying, cooking, and eating are systematically discussed and recommendations made for reducing fat, sugar, and cholesterol as foods are chosen and prepared. Useful tables compare calories found in similar foods. For example, one cup of real sour cream contains 485 calories; Mock "sour cream" (low-fat cottage cheese and buttermilk), 170 calories. All food categories are represented in the large collection of imaginative family-size

THE ITALIANS IN AMERICA BEFORE THE REVOLUTION
by
GIOVANNI SCHIAVO

THE authority, and author of 8 books since 1928, on the Italians in the U. S.

"no non-Anglo-Saxon ethnic group contributed to America's birth, exploration and growth before 1800 as much as Italians".

FULLY DOCUMENTED
192 pages — $12.95 before Jan. 1, 1977).

THE VIGO PRESS
P. O. BOX 2317
DALLAS, TEXAS 75221

HOME ECONOMICS

recipes, each indicating calories per serving. Onion cheesecake (39 calories per appetizer serving) is good hot or cold; frozen yogurt (61 calories made with sugar, 49 without), if soft, is a delicious icy dessert. Jean Nidetch's Weight Watchers Program Cookbook (LJ 4/15/74) has long been recognized as a dependable source for low-calorie recipes serving one or two dieters. Gibbon's book is much broader in scope and recommended for all dietary collections.—Eleanor H. Broadus, formerly with Northern Illinois Univ. Libs., DeKalb

Gorman, Marion & Felipe Padilla de Alba. The Tequila Cookbook.
Regnery. 1976. 192p. index. ISBN 0-8092-8175-9. pap. $3.95. BEVERAGES
This is a curiosity cookbook. The authors explore the history of tequila and the agave plant from which it is made. They mention such impressive facts as these: in 1971 tequila was the "in" drink; the U.S. is the largest importer of tequila, with four and one-half million gallons arriving in 1973. The 100 recipes for food and for drinks are interspersed with anecdotes and descriptions of the tequila region. Many of the recipes are from other books, magazines, and individuals. The food recipes use tequila as an enhancer but the flavor seems to get lost even when blended with the mild-flavored avocado. Very specialized.—Christine E. Bulson, SUNY at Oneonta Lib.

Hansen, Barbara Joan. Good Bread.
Macmillan. 1976. 225p. illus. index. LC 76-17017. ISBN 0-02-547860-5. $9.95. COOKERY
This is a good book for beginners. Hansen's explanation of yeast bread making is thorough and simple, and there are good basic recipes which produced very nice breads for me. The author has a bias toward the American West which results in more Mexican and Indian breads than you might expect in a book of this size. Unfortunately she doesn't supply a good recipe for Southern (sugarless) cornbread. Except for this and the omission of any sourdough, the chapter on American breads is fairly comprehensive. I did have some trouble following her directions for forming various rolls (perhaps there are pictures in the finished book that might help). An interesting, but not necessary, addition to large collections.—Johanna Ezell, Washington County Free Lib., Hagerstown, Md.

Reuben, David, M.D. & Barbara Reuben. The Save-Your-Life-Diet High-Fiber Cookbook.
Random. 1976. 213p. LC 76-14211. ISBN 0-394-40648-6. $7.95. NUTRITION/COOKERY
A sampling of recipes from cultures in which unrefined grains and legumes are daily fare, together with familiar recipes such as biscuits, waffles, piecrust, etc., made with whole grain products. In the latter category the whole wheat bran biscuits are quickly made and have a really great flavor. It is, however, the ethnic recipes which are of special interest, and the real substance of the book. Chapter introductions bristle with barbs (often legitimate) for the food industry or medical fellows, yet lack concrete data on fiber, vitamin, or mineral content of foods under discussion. Such information is found in Betty Wason's excellent The Soup-to-Dessert High Fiber Cookbook (LJ 10/1/76); many books devoted to cooking with natural foods (which are often high in fiber), such as Jean Hewitt's The New York Times Natural Foods Cook Book (LJ 3/15/72) and The Deaf Smith Country Cookbook (LJ 9/1/73) contain hearty recipes. Reuben's latest can be recommended for its ethnic dishes and for complete collections of Reubeniana.—Eleanor H. Broadus, formerly with Northern Illinois Univ. Libs., DeKalb

Schrecker, Ellen with John Schrecker. Mrs. Chiang's Szechwan Cookbook.
Harper. 1976. 352p. illus. index. ISBN 0-06-013803-2. $12.95. COOKERY
The Schreckers fell almost fanatically in love with Szechwan food while living in Taiwan and have, with the help of their cook, Mrs. Chiang, brought those special tastes to American kitchens. Their introduction, menu-planning ideas, ingredient list, and utensil explanations are quite clear and offer interesting personal notes. Unusual spices are kept to a tolerable, mail-orderable limit and the 93 recipes are exceptionally easy to follow. Some of the dishes are fairly common (hot and sour soup, flower buns), but others, like "Spicy Cabbage" and "Oily Scallion Cakes," were new to this reviewer—and delicious. Its single-minded devotion to Szechwan cooking makes this best for extensively used collections where there is a demand for further specialty emphasis.—Frances S. Worthington, formerly with P.L. of Nashville & Davidson County, Tenn.

LANGUAGE ARTS

Malkiel, Yakov. Etymological Dictionaries: a tentative typology.
Univ. of Chicago Pr. 1976. 144p. bibliog. index. LC 75-11866. ISBN 0-226-50292-9. $15. LINGUISTICS
Malkiel believes that the fall from high estate of etymology is to be lamented, and offers this study as a first step in the rehabilitation of the subdiscipline. His study of etymological dictionaries is no substitute for historical accounts or inventories that are the heart of etymology, but it does furnish a perspective on the subject as a whole, a critique of its methods and goals. He has selected eight characteristics of any etymological dictionary (e.g., the time period it covers, or the structuring of individual entries) and examines how each of these characteristics was handled in a large variety of works (more than 500 are cited in the bibliography) ranging widely in languages treated and in the era in which they were authored. His discussion assumes a high level of familiarity with the intricacies of etymology, though not necessarily of any particular language's history, and is clearly aimed at the specialist linguist. The

RECOMMENDED FROM
Pantheon

THE BLACK FAMILY IN SLAVERY AND FREEDOM, 1750-1925

by HERBERT G. GUTMAN. "An exciting, important, and humane book—exciting because it so skillfully applies the techniques of the new social history, important because it is the first successful attempt to depict slavery as the slave experienced it, humane because it is a tribute to the achievement of black Americans under adversity. Once again Herbert Gutman has shown that his is one of the most original and creative minds in the historical profession." —David Herbert Donald, Professor of American History & American Civilization, Harvard University

"Gutman brings an entirely new dimension to the history of slavery. No one before has shown so persuasively how slaves forged their family relationships out of their African and American experience over the course of two centuries, or shown how significant slave fathers were in the lives of their sons.

"Our knowledge of the slave family has taken a giant step forward with this exciting book." — Carl N. Degler, Professor of History, Stanford University

ISBN: 0-394-47116-4
LC: 76-7550 $15.95
768 pp./17 charts/91 tables

PANTHEON
201 E. 50 St., New York 10022

tone is dry and scholarly, perhaps a reflection of the desire to restore etymology to scholarly respectability. There is no other cross-language study of etymological dictionaries, let alone one so competent. Recommended for colleges and universities with research departments of linguistics.—Joan M. Friedman, Yale Center for British Art & British Studies

Literature

Bornstein, George. Transformations of Romanticism in Yeats, Eliot, and Stevens.

Univ. of Chicago Pr. Nov. 1976. 264p. LC 75-43241. ISBN 0-226-06643-6. $15. LIT

Bornstein traces the influence of British Romantic modes and themes on three modern poets, showing how each writer changed these conventions to suit his own needs. Yeats, primarily affected by Shelley and Blake, was the last of the Romantics, utilizing the Greater Romantic lyric form and emphasizing mental actions. Eliot, on the other hand, was a rabid anti-Romantic in his prose criticism, but even he wrote poems that partially reflected the writers he wrote against. Finally, Stevens becomes the model of the new romantic, adapting and transforming the old ways to fit his unique poetic individuality. Although this study contains some good insights and readings, Bornstein's dense, repetitive writing style and his overemphasis of certain aspects of Romanticism may cause the reader to lose interest. Worst of all, his stinging attack on Eliot is much too intemperate, showing a total lack of sympathy for his subject's life and literary output. Recommended only for comprehensive academic collections.—Morris A. Hounion, New York City Community Coll. Lib./Learning Resource Center, CUNY

Clissmann, Anne. Flann O'Brien: a critical introduction to his writings.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. 1976. 370p. bibliog. index. LC 75-26028. ISBN 0-06-491215-9. $25. LIT

There is no other study that considers O'Brien's work as a whole, and this volume is an excellent general introduction. Following a short biographical account, Clissmann devotes a separate chapter to each of the novels and other major bodies of O'Brien's writing. Through a process of summary, analysis, and explication, Clissmann reveals some of O'Brien's unique qualities as a writer and examines some of the dominant themes, attitudes, and techniques in his work. Clissmann admits to deficiencies in her study; her lack of knowledge of the Irish language, which O'Brien used with fluency in some of his writings, hinders some of her understanding. Also, because of linguistic nuances that arise from O'Brien's command of at least three languages, the author avoids any examination of the characteristics of his style. These deficiencies aside, Clissmann's study is recommended for academic and public libraries.—Anthony Kelly, Protestant Sch. Board of Greater Montreal Lib., Canada

Cooke, Michael G. The Romantic Will.

Yale Univ. Pr. Nov. 1976. bibliog. index. LC 75-43313. ISBN 0-300-01961-0. $15. LIT

Cooke characterizes the Romantic period as "a negotiation between the necessary self and an inevitable world, with the will at once underlying and burdened by every action, and the state of being both assumed and problematically pursued." Within this view his principal concern is the role of the will. Fully aware of and indebted to recent scholarship on the subject of consciousness in Romanticism, Cooke argues the incompleteness of such work because it neglects the presence and importance of will in Romantic thought and poetry. Though the study is a cogent and total argument, perhaps the best epitome of the thesis is contained in Cooke's analysis of the Romantic aesthetic, the will-to-art. This aesthetic, unlike the Paterian mode in which all art aspires to the condition of music, went "directly and materially to life, as the antonym of anesthetic"; and unlike the Renaissance and Neoclassicism, which held firmer views on self and system, this aesthetic explored the problematical relationship between the self and the world. Complex but lucid, Cooke's study makes an original contribution to Romantic scholarship.—F. P. Riga, Dept. of English, Canisius Coll., Buffalo, N.Y.

David, Alfred. The Strumpet Muse: art and morals in Chaucer's poetry.

Indiana Univ. Pr. Nov. 1976. 352p. illus. index. LC 76-11939. ISBN 0-253-35517-6. $12.50. LIT

David examines Chaucer's conflicting roles as preacher and poet, believer and skeptic, instructor and entertainer. Devoting three chapters to the early poetry and thirteen to the Canterbury Tales, he argues that as Chaucer moves from poetry based on the authority of books to that based on experience, these roles become more problematic. While the individual analyses of the Prologue and several of the tales do show that Chaucer was divided in his aims, such a broad survey is necessarily uneven. The idea of the Prioress's Tale as a fairy story is interesting. But to claim that the Franklin's Tale is filled with the true spirit of Christmas cheapens the analysis. The Protean identification of the author with most of his characters clarifies little. Nor, despite the opening lines of the Prologue, will all agree that the pilgrims are spiritually motivated. Nevertheless, this well-written attempt to bridge the urbanity of critics like Donaldson and the moral seriousness of those like Robertson deserves reading by those concerned with the changing vision of Chaucer.—H. T. Keenan, Dept. of English, Georgia State Univ.

Fielding, K. J. & Rodger L. Tarr, eds. Carlyle Past and Present: a collection of new essays.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. 1976. 279p. index. ISBN 0-06-492078-X. $16.50. LIT

These eleven new essays contribute to the now widely renewed reconsideration of Carlyle's works. Three are by the three editors of the latest, most complete collection of his letters. Together these essays treat the history of his reputation, his comments on a contemporary biography of him, his use of mathematical images and arguments, his similarities to Dickens, his affinities with Arnold on religion, his "pen portraits" of the Queen and Prince Albert, the lasting qualities of Past and Present and Frederick the Great, the "tantrum prose" of Latter-Day Pamphlets, and the biography by Froude. Several essays reveal new evidence pointing to reinterpretation. A useful collection suitable for all academic libraries.—Douglas W. Cooper, Randolph-Macon Coll. Lib., Ashland, Va.

Gass, William. On Being Blue: a philosophical inquiry.

Godine. 1976. 91p. LC 75-43013. ISBN 0-87923-183-1. $10. PHIL/LIT

This curious and intriguing little book offers a guided tour of blue-ness: the color as well as ideas and concepts and phrases associated with it. Gass rambles far and wide, from "The Man with the Blue Guitar" to Democritus' theory of color, from bluestockings to soft blue Italian plums, to the blues. He's particularly preoccupied with the blueness that's found in blue movies and obscene talk, so there's never any danger of dozing off. On Being Blue, like Gass's fiction, is about words and reality and the quaint intersections between the two even when it's not about blue-ness. The author's boundless fascination with the mystery of language is communicated on every page. On Being Blue is sometimes serious and genuinely philosophical, sometimes tongue-in-cheek, sometimes somewhere in between. Gass's anatomy of blue, designed as a divertissement, is never less than diverting, and there are occasions when it is downright delectable.—Keith Cushman, Dept. of English, Univ. of North Carolina, Greensboro

Jemie, Onwuchekwa. Langston Hughes: an introduction to the poetry.

Columbia Univ. Pr. Nov. 1976. 272p. ISBN 0-231-03780-5. $10.95. LIT

Jemie believes Hughes to be perhaps "the most grossly misjudged poet of major importance in America" because of his seeming simplicity and nontraditional approach. In reply Jemie shows Hughes's depth and the integrity with which he remained committed to social protest and to the exploration of the Afro-American oral tradition and black folk life. Jemie examines Hughes's artistic objectives, surveys the poems, and places Hughes in a historical survey of Afro-American poetry to reveal that his career has provided a rare constant in the shifting self-image of black artists. As an introduction, this book has the strengths and weaknesses of its type: a certain amount of clarity and organization combined with occasional sketchiness, repetition, and few glimpses of Hughes the man.—Elaine F. Palencia, formerly with Harvard Univ. Lib.

Johnson, Walter. August Strindberg.
Twayne. (World Authors). Nov. 1976. bibliog. index. LC 76-17910. ISBN 0-8057-6250-7. $8.50. LIT

The volumes in this series are written primarily for the generalist rather than for the specialist. The author has succeeded in fulfilling the series' aims in his biographical-critical study of Strindberg. To capsulize the life and career of the polemical Swedish novelist-poet-dramatist-polymathist, an extensive background of the individual and his total environment is required. As a professor of Scandinavian languages and literature at the University of Washington, Johnson has steeped himself in these matters. He reveals Strindberg in all his varied roles—autobiographer, appraiser, scholar, scientist, poet, storyteller, dramatist, and historian.—Louis A. Rachow, Walter Hampden-Edwin Booth Theatre Collection & Lib., New York

Jules-Verne, Jean. Jules Verne: a biography.
Taplinger. 1976. 245p. tr. & adapted by Roger Greaves. illus. bibliog. index. LC 73-16958. ISBN 0-8008-4439-4. $10.95.

Verne, Jules. Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea.
Crowell. Nov. 1976. 352p. ed. & annotated by Walter James Miller. illus. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-690-01151-2. $16.95. BIOG/LIT

These two books will be welcomed by all readers who appreciate Verne and in particular by those who are fascinated by Twenty Thousand Leagues. To have a biography written by the grandson of a famous writer is no common occurrence, but to have it written by one who is so obviously a scholar is rare indeed. The material drawn from the family archives is of special interest. The new edition of Twenty Thousand Leagues, with excellent annotations by Miller, will serve to whet readers' appetites for the same kind of treatment of other works by Verne. Sf fans may well wonder if their particular favorite Verne work has been translated faithfully in the past and also if sections have been omitted, as Miller discusses so thoroughly in regard to Twenty Thousand Leagues. All libraries with sf collections should definitely have these two works.—Charles M. Lonnberg, Indiana State Univ. Lib., Evansville

Perkins, David D. A History of Modern Poetry: from the 1890's to the high modernist mode.
Harvard Univ. Pr. Nov. 1976. 650p. index. $17.50. LIT

Perkins has written what will certainly be a definitive history of modern poetry in Britain and the U.S. He describes the Romantic legacy and Victorian traditions that formed the immediate backdrop of modern poetry, and he provides significant insights into the nature of evolving poetic audiences and markets, the attending isolation and interaction of English and American poetic figures, and the recurrent tension between the traditional and the avant-garde. He accompanies extensive analyses of the major poets with descriptions of minor poets and poetic schools. The modernist movement arrived in England first, and Perkins' book is of special interest as he describes the American traditionalism of the 1890's and the early 20th Century as it contrasted with British experimentation. Recommended for most libraries.—Bert C. Bach, Dean of Arts & Sciences, Univ. of Tennessee, Chattanooga

Shebl, James. In This Wild Water.
Ritchie. 1976. bibliog. $9.95. LIT

Direct, concise, balanced, and compelling, this admirable little study centers on the editorial brouhaha surrounding the publication by Random House of Robinson Jeffers' The Double Axe (1948). At the behest of Bennett Cerf and Saxe Cummins (Jeffers' publisher and editor), both of whom were nervous about the work's political ramifications, the poet's original preface, ten poems, and various passages from other poems were expunged from the original manuscript. Even then, the volume was issued with an unprecedented publisher's disclaimer of the political views therein. Shebl's reconstruction of these deplorable events, complete with the letters between the three principals and the texts of the offending preface and poems, builds with all the fascination of a good detective story. It also demonstrates how, ironically, this editorial interference produced a more polemical and, of course, less aesthetically unified work than the original. Shebl help-

OXFORD

Graph Theory 1736-1936
NORMAN L. BIGGS, E. KEITH LLOYD, and ROBIN J. WILSON. The central feature of this volume is a set of thirty-seven extracts taken from the original writings of mathematicians who contributed to the foundations of graph theory. A linking commentary traces the historical development of the theme; and superimposed on this structure is the framework of a conventional textbook, explaining the relevant mathematical terminology and notation.
1976 254 pp.; 2 plates; 130 figs. $21.00

The Humane Technologist
DUNCAN DAVIES, TOM BANFIELD, and RAY SHEAHAN. Because the increasing complexity of contemporary society demands that technologists consider their work in relation to present and future concerns about natural resources and energy, capital and finance, human behavior and organization, the environment, and the law, the authors urge technologists to acquire a greater understanding of the social sciences to enable them to make even more valuable contributions to society. (Science and Engineering Policy Series)
1976 192 pp., 22 figs. $10.50

Sound Recording Practice
A Handbook compiled by the Association of Professional Recording Studios
Edited by JOHN BORWICK. Designed for the user of studio and electronic equipment, this comprehensive handbook includes articles by leading experts on the studio and control room; on recording techniques for speech, drama, pop, classical, and electronic music in the studio and on location; and on special problems of broadcasting, television, disc, and tape manufacture.
1976 462 pp.; many illus. $35.25

Linacre Studies
Essays on the Life and Work of Thomas Linacre, c. 1460-1524
Edited by FRANCIS MADDISON, MARGARET PELLING, and CHARLES WEBSTER. This volume brings together twelve studies of the life and work of Thomas Linacre in the context of contemporary humanism and of the development of Renaissance medicine. The studies consider such topics and the organization of medicine, humanistic education, and the publication of Linacre's works.
1976 416 pp.; 15 photos. $27.50

Prices and publication dates are subject to change.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS
200 MADISON AVENUE
NEW YORK, N.Y. 10016

fully provides close readings of the excised poems and relates them to Jeffers' admittedly dark philosophy of inhumanism. Perhaps this small but potent volume will someday nudge some publisher to bring out an unexpurgated version of The Double Axe. For large literature collections.—Richard J. Kelly, Univ. of Minnesota Lib., Minneapolis

Steuding, Bob. Gary Snyder.
Twayne. (U.S. Authors). Nov. 1976. c. 200p. bibliog. index. LC 76-14938. ISBN 0-8057-7147-3. $7.95. LIT

This addition to the series is the first full-length study of Snyder. Chapters are well organized by the usual format: brief summary of his life, style, and shaping influences; study of central ideas and techniques; and discussion of his reputation and contribution to literature. The reader is compelled to get involved in Snyder's visionary poet-as-shaman role, and in the magical power and beauty of his language. Indeed, prophetic analogies to Whitman may prove to be valid. Influenced by Beat writers Kerouac and Ginsberg, Snyder blends Zen Buddhism and Oriental and American Indian mythology in his art. Steuding's perceptive portrait of this conscious myth maker and meticulous craftsman—transcending the image of the hip subculture's guru—is recommended.—Laura M. Zaidman, Dept. of English, South Georgia Coll., Douglas Sypher, Wylie. The Ethic of Time: structures of experience in Shakespeare.

Continuum: Seabury. Nov. 1976. 240p. bibliog. LC 76-13844. ISBN 0-8164-9299-9. $10.95. LIT

An interesting, thorough, insightful, and provocative study of the problem of time as it relates to consciousness in the works of that Renaissance writer named Shakespeare. Sypher, a distinguished American literary and art critic, illustrates Shakespeare's obsessive concern with time, a concern which supports the contemporary critical view of Shakespeare as a modern writer. Sypher is indebted to two recent studies: Frederick Turner's Shakespeare and the Nature of Time (Oxford Univ. Pr., 1971) and, particularly, Ricardo J. Quinones' The Renaissance Discovery of Time (LJ 10/1/72). Sypher uses Quinones as a point of departure, and he goes beyond the concern for the relationship between time and character in Turner. His chapter on Hamlet is particularly enlightening, for it shows that Hamlet stands between the medieval world where time was conceived as a simple, river-like flow and the modern world where time is precise, measured, and mechanical. Essential for all Shakespeare and Renaissance drama collections.—Sanford Sternlicht, Dept. of Theater, SUNY at Oswego

Trewin, F. C. The Edwardian Theatre.
Rowman & Littlefield. 1976. 193p. illus. index. LC 76-13878. ISBN 0-87471-847-3. $15. THEATER/LIT

Trewin, a London drama critic, writes informatively of Edwardian problem plays, drawing-room comedies, melodramas, "decorated" or romanticized Shakespeare, verse tragedy, costume drama, moral fantasy and symbolism; and he even covers the music hall, musical comedy, and pantomime. The so-called theater of ideas competed healthily with the drawing-room comedies, but Trewin comments perceptively on the mutual interest in the theme of mendacity. He does not ignore the contributions of individual actors, managers, and regional acting companies, and he carefully selects from the work of Shaw and the Irish national theater revival. The book lacks a bibliography, but has good notes, index, tables of performances, and 16 pages of illustrations. Recommended: an often lively treatment of an unexpectedly lively period of theater history.—Robert Terrill, Chicago

MUSIC

Castleman, Harry & Walter J. Podrazik. All Together Now: the first complete Beatles discography, 1961—1975.
Pierian Pr., 5000 Washtenaw Ave., Ann Arbor, Mich. 48104. 1976. 381p. photogs. LC 75-29523. ISBN 0-87650-075-0. $14.95. REF/MUSIC

The major section of this compilation lists chronologically every recording the Beatles were associated with, as a group or individually and as either performer, author, composer, or producer. The entries are numbered in sequence and include U.S. and British releases, all songs and personnel, credits and timings. Other sections include an alphabetical list of all albums and songs by the group or its members, a list of songs by others which the Beatles recorded, a complete accounting, with critical annotations, of bootleg recordings and "Beatles" recordings by other performers, a chronology of albums and singles issued by Apple, Dark Horse and Ring 'O Records, a list of Beatles films, a bibliography, a list of gold records plus a complete republication of Melody Maker top 30 singles and album charts. Personal and record cover photos appear copiously throughout. Despite many misprints and errors this is the definitive Beatles discography and more.—Stephen M. Fry, UCLA Music Lib.

Kupferberg, Herbert. Tanglewood.
McGraw. 1976. 276p. illus. index. LC 76-11772. ISBN 0-07-035643-2. $15. MUSIC

Interspersing his narrative historical portrait with quotes taken from interviews with numerous Tanglewood alumni, Kupferberg presents a fascinating array of people and events that contributed to the development of this musical and educational enterprise up to the present day. The lengthy section on the Koussevitsky era is particularly absorbing, especially in Leonard Bernstein's remarkable recollections concerning Tanglewood and his beloved mentor. Moreover, the generous array of rare photographs serve to greatly enrich the author's involving narrative. As one who used to live near and attend Tanglewood regularly, this reviewer can say that Kupferberg has succeeded admirably in transmitting to the reader what this unique festival means to those who have attended it, either as concertgoers or students, as well as portraying the impact it has had on American culture as a whole.—Ronald J. Kaye, Prince George's County Memorial Lib. System, Hyattsville, Md.

Mayer, Hans. Richard Wagner in Bayreuth, 1876-1976.
Rizzoli. 1976. 248p. tr. by Jack Zipes. illus. index. LC 76-11996. ISBN 0-8478-0038-5. $18.50. MUSIC

To Wagnerites, Bayreuth is the principal shrine and the fount of continual inspiration. In the present book, Mayer traces the history of Wagner's music in that city, focusing particularly on the social, political, and philosophical aspects of the performances. At the same time, he provides an excellent overview of changing styles in production of the works. It's a fascinating book to read and an enlightening book even to look at; the photographs, mostly full-page, alone tell a marvelous story. The book is flawed somewhat by occasionally clumsy and inaccurate translation, but on the whole it reads quite well. I cannot, however, understand the publisher's attraction toward italics, which serve here mostly to interrupt the flow of the text.—Allen B. Skei, Dept. of Music, California State Univ., Fresno

Montagu, Jeremy. The World of Medieval & Renaissance Musical Instruments.
Overlook, dist by Viking. 1976. 136p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-5987. ISBN 0-87951-045-5. $20; until Dec. 31, $16.95.

Munrow, David. Instruments of the Middle Ages and Renaissance.
Oxford Univ. Pr. 1976. 97p. fwd. by Andre Previn. illus. index. ISBN 0-19-321321-4. pap. $12.95. MUSIC

Early music has become quite popular, but too often players, as well as audiences, misunderstand the instruments used. Now there are two fine books where one was sorely needed, both by Englishmen active as performers as well as scholars of early musical instruments.

Montagu has 90 black-and-white illustrations and 12 color plates, largely of iconographical evidence, but including illustrations from treatises, photos of extant instruments, and a few of modern copies. Munrow's more than 200 illustrations are divided almost equally among five categories, the four above and photos of modern performers on the instruments, showing that they are not simply museum pieces. Montagu's illustrations are certainly more attractive but Munrow's variety is preferable. Montagu has no footnotes, but a bibliography of approximately 85 entries, while a large number of Munrow's 812 footnotes are bibliographical; Munrow's index has over 1000 entries compared to Montagu's approximately 600. Montagu's style is very readable; but Munrow's is lively and exciting, although all the necessary trappings of scholarship are there. An enthusiastic round of applause for Montagu—a standing ovation for Munrow!—Thomas E. Moore, Houston P.L.

Philosophy

Foley, Vernard. The Social Physics of Adam Smith.

Purdue Univ. Pr. 1976. LC 76-5710. ISBN 0-911198-43-1. $11.95. PHIL

Foley claims "important elements of Adam Smith's thought were consciously, systematically, and secretly modeled after a system of physical, biological and social evolution which he found in the writings of the ancients." For his main thesis about Greek thought Foley relies on Andrew T. Cole's Democritus and the Sources of Greek Anthropology (Western Reserve Univ. Pr., 1967) which urges that the Greek view of man has a general strong connection with the atomistic materialism of Democritus. Foley claims Smith's moral theory has parallels in Polybius. Lucretius is named but the connection with the atomists is not pressed so hard. We must grant Foley that Smith made use of the classical education he shared with most of his readers. But his two dominant ideas were that self-interest could be turned into a public good and that men are held together by vicarious experiences. The first is associated with that "invisible hand" which comes into play when we create the right social arena. Is that like any Greek notion of chance or destiny? Polybius' "onlooking neighbor" may well be a relative of Smith's "spectator" but the theory of shared experience seems a long way from Polybius' attempt to associate moral rules with the fact that men are "naturally inclined to sexual intercourse."—Leslie Armour, Dept. of Philosophy, Cleveland State Univ.

Heidegger, Martin. The Piety of Thinking.

Indiana Univ. Pr. 1976. 224p. tr., notes, & comm. by James G. Hart & John C. Maraldo. index. LC 75-3889. ISBN 0-253-34498-0. $10.95. PHIL

This volume collects six comparatively short, varied texts which span more than four decades of Heidegger's career: the foreword to the 1970 German edition of Phenomenology and Theology; a lecture on the same topic originally delivered in 1927; "The Theological Discussion of 'The Problem of a Non-Objectifying Thinking and Speaking in Today's Theology': Some Pointers to Its Major Aspects" (1964); Heidegger's 1928 review of Ernst Cassirer's Mythical Thought; a 1958 essay on "Principles of Thinking," and Hermann Noack's 1954 "Conversations with Heidegger." Translations are clear and fluid; the editors' detailed commentaries are well informed and insightful.—Frederick A. Elliston, Dept. of Philosophy, Union Coll., Schenectady, N.Y.

CORRECTION: The fourth sentence in the review of Ronald Roberts' Making a Simple Violin and Viola (LJ 9/15/76) should have read: "Full-size plans are available from the publisher." The book itself contains only reduced and simplified plans.

PHILOSOPHY

Körner, Stephan. Experience and Conduct: a philosophical enquiry into practical thinking.

Cambridge Univ. Pr. 1976. 268p. bibliog. index. LC 75-44578. ISBN 0-521-21075-5. $19.95. PHIL

Practical thinking aims at appropriate action. The second and major part of this book discusses kinds and aspects of practical thinking; the first and third parts, which are each about one third the length of the second part, present the formal structure of practical thinking and an analysis of its epistemological and metaphysical relationships, respectively. Among Körner's topics: agent and action; axiological and regulative standards of conduct; morality; justice; prudence; welfare; legality; ideals; consistency and coherence of sets of beliefs or attitudes; the relationship between cognitive and practical rationality; argument and evidence in morality; moral pluralism; etc. The book is highly abstract and technical, but it deserves and rewards close study.—Robert Hoffman, Dept. of Philosophy, York Coll., CUNY

MacCormac, Earl R. Metaphor and Myth in Science and Religion.

Duke Univ. Pr. 1976. 167p. index. LC 75-23941. ISBN 0-8223-0347-7. $7.95. PHIL

". . . If the criteria of meaning that have been used to indict religious speech as meaningless were applied . . . to scientific utterances, then scientific language would fall under the same indictment." Arguing forcefully for this important thesis, MacCormac bases his arguments on a unique construction of the tension theory of metaphor and its dual application to both scientific and religious claims. Although his line of argument is enlightening, rescuing religion from noncognitivity remains a herculean task. A significant work that may give old-school positivists pause, but will set those of other persuasions to work.—Alfred N. Garwood, Randolph Township P.L., N.J.

POETRY

Bronk, William. Finding Losses.

75p. woodcuts by Eugene G. Canade. $16; pap. $8.

Bronk, William. The Meantime.

23p. $10; pap. $5.

Bronk, William. My Father Photographed with Friends and Other Pictures.

39p. $16; pap. $8.

ea. vol: Elizabeth Pr. Nov. 1976. POETRY

Every single poem in these three volumes is sharp and clear. In The Meantime Bronk captures that internal monologue which, under self-interrogation, becomes a dialogue. Words form to make a simple statement, then the same words turn around on themselves and take on new meanings. Often an entire poem is in essence new combinations; each phrase heightens and cancels out the one before it.

Finding Losses sets about to determine the spiritual reality of God in everyday life. The form chosen (the four-line poem) forces the poet to go directly reveals a new phase of TM teaching—beyond Relaxation to Enlightenment

Maharishi Mahesh Yogi

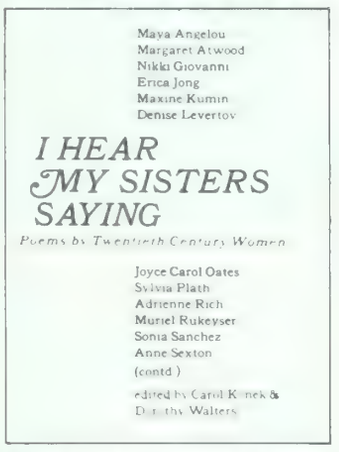
Celebrating the Dawn

By ROBERT M. OATES, JR.

"A handsome volume about the guru of TM and his 1975 world tour inaugurating what he calls the 'Dawn of the Age of Enlightenment'.... Robert Oates accompanied Maharishi and his descriptions... evoke the guru's presence intimately through interviews which explain the essence of the ancient wisdom of meditation... [and] explore the technique in detail."—Publishers Weekly. 8" x 9½". 40 photos of Maharishi, 20 in full color. SBN-399-11815-2. YA. $12.95

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

THE CROWELL CORNER



I HEAR MY SISTERS SAYING
Edited by Carol Konek and Dorothy Walters

"A welcome addition to the collections of poetry by women....The poets are well known and also unknown....The poems are chosen with a judicious care....They are throughout intense and well crafted The book as a whole documents both the shared qualities of women's experience in our culture and the special perceptions that each individual contributes."
—Library Journal

ISBN: 0-690-01107-5
LC: 76-4973

$9.95

T. Y. Crowell
666 Fifth Avenue New York N Y 10019

to the core of what he's thinking. Consider "Succoth": "East of Eden, people think to make/ a garden. Well, there are no gardens anymore./ The heavens declare the glory of God! I hear./ I hear. There are no gardens anymore." Themes occur again and again, the poems merge and separate. Bronk has found a way of making the poems rise off the page until their space is limitless.

My Father Photographed With Friends is the first edition of "the author's first book of poems, written while he was in his twenties some thirty years ago." While the lines are more formal, and the poet seems at times more hopeful, the voice is unmistakably the same. The only poems which date the book are two written about World War II. Other poems, such as "The Remains of a Farm" or "On A Course Known Backwards," predict that later pessimistic playfulness which Bronk would develop to perfection.—Rochelle Ratner, Poetry Columnist, "Soho Weekly News," New York

Creeley, Robert. Selected Poems.

Scribners. 1976. 176p. ISBN 0-684-14705-X. $7.95; pap. ISBN 0-684-14810-2. $2.95. POETRY

Creeley adds a few pages of recent poems to a generous selection of his best work from his three decades of poetry. Many of these new poems are little more than teasing, enigmatic, "cute" epigrams such as he has been drawn to in the past. A notable exception is his moving elegy "For My Mother: Genevieve Jules Creeley," in which the poet combines his characteristic lean style with an uncharacteristic use of detail and context to fashion a poem of subtle tenderness and love of the kind one finds scattered throughout his earlier volumes, where Creeley is at his best. With this collection, a library will have all of the major poems by the poet who, after Charles Olson and Denise Levertov, is the most influential and important of the American poets to come out of the Black Mountain College literary group.—James McKenzie, Dept. of English, Univ. of North Dakota, Grand Forks

McElroy, Colleen J. Music from Home: selected poems.

Southern Illinois Univ. Pr. (Sagittarius Poetry Series). Nov. 1976. 100p. index. LC 76-14852. ISBN 0-8093-0774-X. $8.95. POETRY

The first volume in a poetry series designed to spotlight "thick selections of the best poems by neglected poets." McElroy's poems give compassionate and sharp portraits of family, neighborhood, streetlife in an urban, violent society. Her eye is social rather than introspective, and her best poems have a well-honed satirical edge. As she explores her African heritage, she celebrates blackness in images drawn from a familiar storehouse: she is earthy, oceanic. More haunting is the music she imagines from her African home: "My feet remember the heat of Africa/ Last night they told me/ How to hunt the jackal." Angry, direct, hearty—there are many poems here, "fat and full/ Of unspent words. . . ."—Margaret Gibson, New London, Conn.

Mitchell, Roger. Moving.

New Rivers, dist. by Serendipity Bks. 1976. 95p. drawings by Lucas Johnson. LC 74-20134. ISBN 0-912284-79-X. pap. $2.50. POETRY

Mitchell's poems are neither intense nor memorable, but he has a very attractive voice, intelligent and graceful. Evidently part-English, he writes with some of the colloquial wittiness and flexibility good English prose (one poem is admiring about the later Auden). The manner has its pitfalls, such as too relaxed a chattiness, or whimsy, and Mitchell at times verges on these, but the general effect is engaging. A sample, from "Abroad": "Bushes bristle with horses and/ quaintness offers its low-beamed blow/ to the head. Which raises a welt/ before it raises our interest./ The beer tastes like pasteurized piss,/ which we secretly don't abhor. . . ." The book is nicely illustrated, but there are half a dozen typos and you can't always tell where poems start or finish.—Seamus Cooney, Dept. of English, Western Michigan Univ., Kalamazoo

Schulman, Grace. Burn Down the Icons.

Princeton Univ. Pr. (Series of Contemporary Poets). Dec. 1976. 65p. $7.50. POETRY

In the opening sections of this book ("Double Vision" and "Waiting for a Comet") Schulman writes at her best, surprising the reader with perfectly imaged poems that haunt the mind like a haiku. Her theme is the unity of all experience, as suggested by the replication of all created forms. If the poet picks up a starfish, her hand becomes a star. Thus one regrets the studied, bookish quality of certain poems ("The Other Side of Humankind" and "Names"), but these lapses are entirely redeemed by the uncompromisingly honest poems inspired by her job as poetry editor of the Nation. In "Poetry Editor" she becomes a comic victim pursued by poetasters who leave poems under her breakfast plate. In "Application" she is guilty "of loving within perforated lines." Her poems succeed in burning down the false icons of overwork, hate, and disbelief.—Daniel L. Guillory, Dept. of English, Millikin Univ., Decatur, Ill.

Skellings, Edmund. Heart Attacks.

Univ. Pr. of Florida. 1976. 81p. LC 76-17593. ISBN 0-8130-0557-4. $5. POETRY

What I like best about Skellings' work is its clear sense of a speaker, a breathing presence in the poems. He makes them come alive by making the language conversational, never bookish, by allowing the reader to feel he is the "you" of so many of the poems, that Skellings is there in the room, full of lively wit, talking politics and science, his favorite themes. Yeats has been a powerful influence on this poet whose dominant motif is the shell—its helix, like the "gyre," a symbol of history and growth: "Galaxies of cell/ and sun unwind their helixes/ . . . The path is clear. Grow." What I like least about this book are Skellings' need to name-drop, to hob-nob with fame (poems to Frost, Yevtushenko, Mailer, Hemingway); his tendency to be cute, to spoil a poem's tone by a silly pun ("Oval") or a flippant ending ("Extrapolation"); his inability to shut up, taking a poem one line beyond its climax ("Surface Tension") or overexplaining its mystery ("Naturalist"). Nonetheless, Heart Attacks is a respectable collection, containing two very fine poems ("An Archeological Site in France" and "The Hartford Circus Fire"), and informed by an appreciation of modern science.—Bruce Guernsey, Dept. of English, Univ. of New Hampshire, Durham

Truesdale, C. W. Doctor Vertigo.

Wyrd Pr., Warwick, N.Y. 1976. 86p. drawings by Anna Truesdale. pap. $2.50. POETRY

Evidently written after some sort of breakdown, this book offers poems of recovered energy. In the aggregate they are unrewarding to read. There's a lot of self-display and posturing; we hear of a woman "who knew I was a tiger/ & I didn't," of "this business of exuberance," of his "poor feisty little poems," of "me as feisty and exuberant." It's neither convincing nor beguiling. Particularly ill-calculated is Truesdale's quoting in full of a private letter of his own, sneering at his sister and niece who were entertaining him for Christmas. Other poems are over-personal in another way, remaining inaccessible: one is even dedicated to three friends "who are in on the secret." The reader isn't, but scarcely cares.—Seamus Cooney, Dept. of English, Western Michigan Univ., Kalamazoo

Political Science & International Affairs

Jervis, Robert. Perception and Misperception in International Politics.

Princeton Univ. Pr. Nov. 1976. 450p. bibliog. index. $22.50. PSYCH/INT AFFAIRS

The purpose of this book is to show that "perceptions of the world and of other nations diverge from reality in patterns that we can detect and for reasons that we can understand." Accordingly, the author poses questions such as "What kind of perceptual errors commonly occur in decision-making?; How are beliefs about politics and images of other actors formed and altered?; How do decision-makers draw inferences from information, especially information that could be seen as contradicting their own views?" Jervis relies on analysis of historical case studies, focusing on the sociological setting and psychological processes of the perception modes of foreign-policy makers. One shortcoming is the omission of a discussion of the significance of intercultural differences and ego psychology in the formation of operational images. But, on the whole, this work remains the best statement of the psychological position in the literature on international politics. Highly readable, informative, and thought-provoking, it is primarily intended for students and practitioners of international affairs.—Jacques Fomerand, Dept. of Political Science, Queens Coll., CUNY

Manheim, Jarol B. Deja Vu: American political problems in historical perspective.

St. Martin's. 1976. 253p. index. LC 75-29943. $12.95; pap. $4.50 HIST POL SCI

Deja Vu is an analysis of current political concerns (violence, urbanism, executive malfeasance, women's rights, consumer protection, foreign affairs) and an attempt to place them in historical context. Manheim demonstrates that each of these issues has been a continuing element in American political culture and that our tendency to regard the problems as new and unique leads to misdirection of public policy. An awareness of the continuities, he believes, "can make the past a useful guide to the present." However, the historical summaries are selective and superficial, and their implications for present-day policy are not spelled out. Though Manheim's basic contentions are unarguable, he tends to belabor the obvious and his parallels are sometimes misleading. The audience this volume seems to be aimed at is likely to remain indifferent to it; the reader who has successfully maintained an ignorance of American history isn't going to read these tedious summaries.—Nancy C. Cridland, Indiana Univ. Libs., Bloomington

Snyder, Louis L. Varieties of Nationalism: a comparative study.

Holt. 1976. 326p. bibliog. index. LC 73-2097. ISBN 0-03-018206-9. $12.95.

HIST/INT AFFAIRS

This comparative historical study defines the origins and nature of nationalism, traces its evolution and development in the last two centuries, and assesses its impact on the operation of the international political system. In so doing, it draws heavily on the pioneering works of Hans Kohn, who remains the foremost authority in the field. Accordingly, it acquires significant value only when it goes beyond the ground covered by earlier scholars. Thus, the discussion of the resurgence of European regional autonomist movements, the rise of nationalism in Japan and the Third World, and the processes of European integration should be of particular interest to the reader. Brilliantly written, informative, and well-balanced in its judgements (in spite of a clear aversion for what Snyder calls the "curse" of nationalism), Varieties of Nationalism provides a useful, updated, and concise overview of one of the most complex and explosive phenomena of our times.—Jacques Fomerand, Dept. of Political Science, Queens Coll., CUNY

Weinstein, Franklin B. Indonesian Foreign Policy and the Dilemma of Dependence: from Sukarno to Soeharto.

Cornell Univ. Pr. (Politics & Internat. Relations of Southeast Asia). 1976. 432p. index. LC 75-36998. ISBN 0-8014-0939-X. $17.50.

INT AFFAIRS

By relying extensively on information gathered in interviews with Indonesian foreign-policy makers, Weinstein analyzes recent Indonesian foreign policy, which has shifted since 1966 from a policy of confrontation with the West to one of accommodation and cooperation. According to Weinstein, the key to the change should be found not in the personal "idiosyncracies" of the top leadership, but in the impact of economic "underdevelopment" on foreign policy. He says Indonesia needs both independence and foreign aid; however, which one the emphasis will be placed on will depend not only on the elite's perception of the outside world, but also on the domestic political situation. This book, the most significant study of recent Indonesian foreign policy, sets a new standard of excellence.—Hong N. Kim, Dept. of Political Science, West Virginia Univ., Morgantown

Psychology & Psychiatry

Baer, Jean. How To Be an Assertive (Not Aggressive) Woman.

Rawson, dist. by Atheneum. 1976. 300p. LC 76-13432. ISBN 0-89256-002-9. $9.95; pap. NAL. ISBN 0-89256-002-9. $1.75. PSYCH

Starting with that important distinction upfront in the title, many valuable contributions distinguish Baer's assertion manual for women from the plethora available (it's the fifth I've read). The territory covered and techniques advanced are of course familiar but are presented with clarity, not too much jargon, and some unique insights. The author's self-disclosing anecdotes on becoming more assertive lend particular authenticity, as does the chapter on assertive blocks of other successful women, including Barbara Walters. Social, sexual, family, and job-related situations are explored. Baer is coauthor (with husband Dr. Herbert Fensterheim) of the bestselling Don't Say Yes When You Want To Say No (LJ 5/15/75). —Mary Pradt Ziegler, Brooklyn P.L.

Calabrese, Alphonse & William Proctor. Rx: the Christian love treatment.

Doubleday. 1976. LC 75-40716. ISBN 0-385-04851-3. $5.95. REL/PSYCH

A nominal Roman Catholic, converted at a Billy Graham rally after a brief period of being a "closet Christian," Calabrese decided to incorporate his newly found religious zeal into his psychoanalytic practice. Fortunately, the cloying description of the conversion ("My youngest child . . . hooked his thin little arm through mine and asked, 'Daddy, why don't we give our hearts to Jesus?' ") gives way to a more sophisticated description of ways in which Calabrese has combined professional competence and Christian conviction in his practice. There is, however, a puritanical moralism about the book which will repel some readers, though it will doubtless delight others. While this book is not entirely without merit, it will probably be of most value to those who can share the author's theological and moral persuasions.—Douglas S. Marsh, Memphis & Shelby County P.L., Tenn.

MAP
Looking for golden stairs and pearly gates? So are a lot of ministers.
TREADMILL TO HEAVEN
by William Lyon, Ph.D.
A psychological study of the clergy. Contact your local Bobbs-Merrill representative.
0-89307-001-7 $8.95 September
The Quail Street Publishing Company...Watch us fly
Treadmill To Heaven
by William Lyon, Ph.D.

Chew, Peter. The Inner World of the Middle-Aged Man.

Macmillan. Nov. 1976. 352p. index. LC 76-7455. ISBN 0-02-525000-0. $8.95.

Watters, Pat. The Angry Middle-Aged Man.

Grossman, dist. by Viking. Nov. 1976. 256p. ISBN 0-670-12684-5. $7.95. PSYCH

Middle age, that inevitable period in life when powers, faculties, and hopes and dreams begin to wane, and the realization comes to all men (and women, too) that life is finite and that we are mortal, can be approached with pathos; with humor; with philosophical, religious, inspirational homilies and perspectives, and even with medical facts and statistics. In these books by two journalists qualified to cover the topic—they are good writers who are also middle aged—there are aspects of all of these and more. The book by Chew grew out of articles for the National Observer. It is a survey of middle age using as its base research programs of the government's National Institute on Aging and National Institute of Mental Health; interviews with psychologists, psychiatrists, and other health professionals interested in this "stage" of life (cell biologists, sex behavior specialists, etc.); illustrations of various ways of coping with middle age from the lives of businessmen, astronauts, scientists, etc.; and comments from such former middle-agers as Montaigne, Shakespeare, and Freud. The interviews and examples of successful managing of this life stage make the book a sort of information source on how to make the best of, and even enjoy, middle age.

The Angry Middle-Aged Man is a look at the resentments and sense of disappointment that middle age brings, especially when career setbacks or loss of job turn disappointment into despair. It consists mostly of a series of interviews with middle-aged men who have lost their jobs or businesses and who find that no one cares or wants them (a sort of "non-Working" in the Terkelbook sense). Watters, who was editor of Southern Voices, found himself without a job, and out of his own frustration and panic he began to interview others in this predicament in the Atlanta and Americus (near Plains), Georgia area. The anger is in many cases self-directed but is basically aimed at the system that can reject a man while he still can and wants to be involved. The obvious political implications are well aired.

These books will be useful to the middle aged but will be especially valuable to those who must provide care, solace, and support to these poor benighted souls as they sink deeper into their middle years. Recommended to public libraries.—George Adelman, Neurosciences Research Program, M.I.T., Boston

DeRosis, Helen, M.D. & Victoria Y. Pellegrino. The Book of Hope: how every woman can overcome depression.

Macmillan. 1976. 324p. index. ISBN 0-02-531040-2. $9.95. PSYCH

Depression, "social disease of the seventies," is particularly rampant among women. This phenomenon is examined, with description of symptoms, causes, and antidotes, against the perspective of Karen Horney's theory that culture is an important determinant in the formation of human personality. Depressed women fit roughly into three broad categories—the uninvolved, the self-effacing or love-addicted, the domineering—although "islands of illness" may even exist in the seemingly well-balanced. Because of societal expectations (in areas of love, sex, marriage, work, motherhood), tension is created between expression of the inner self and interpretation of what is/is not "correct" behavior. Recognizing depression and learning to combat its debilitating effects can transform it into a catalyst of personal growth. The authors rely heavily on case studies of women in varying degrees of depression; an occasional analysis of fictional characters (Madame Bovary, Anna Karenina) further enriches and broadens this effective approach. Checklists on attitudes and positive suggestions on taking more control of your life round out an inclusive do-it-yourself handbook to emotional health.—Virginia W. Marr, Milton Academy Lib., Mass.

Fisher, Seymour & Rhoda L. Fisher. What We Really Know About Child-Rearing: science in support of effective parenting.

Basic Bks. 1976. 249p. index. $10.95. PSYCH

This was written by a psychologist couple in reaction to the plethora of childrearing books which are solely based on personal opinion. They bolster their text with copious references, many of which are drawn from professional psychological journals. Although their point is valid that childrearing should be based upon dependable information, their thesis that "the seal of dependability must ultimately come from scientific study" is debatable. Unfortunately, their observations are couched in the very pseudo-intellectual babble that discourages the general reader who seeks knowledge with a minimum of effort. Terms such as "oppositionally" and "nonpunitive" are interspersed with clichés (crystal clear) and "obfuscaterisms" such as "define the boundaries of their selfhood." Topics include discipline, the body and body openings(!), sex, school, becoming an adult and the child alone. Although I decry the lack of supportive research in most self-help books, to be useful such research must enhance not inhibit communication. This inhibits.—Ruth E. Almeida, North County Lib., Glen Burnie, Md.

Fox, Michael W. Between Animal and Man: the key to the kingdom.

Coward. 1976. 224p. photogs. LC 76-4952. ISBN 0-698-10710-1. $8.95. BIOLOGY/PSYCH

This is not another of Fox's pet-care books; rather, it contains discussion of both animal and human psychology, and explores the kinship between animals and man. Fox rejects the man-as-aggressor thesis espoused by Konrad Lorenz. According to Fox, if people better understand their place in the continuum of nature, then they will be concerned naturally with conservation and ecology. Photographic illustrations enhance the text, and Fox includes a few suggestions for further reading. This provocative, well-written book, is of interest on both a scholarly and a popular reading level. Most types of libraries should consider purchasing this title.—Susan Matusak, Inst. for Sex Research Lib., Indiana Univ., Bloomington

Justice, Blair & Rita Justice. The Abusing Family.

Human Sciences Pr: Behavioral Publications. 1976. 288p. bibliog. LC 76-6478. $14.95. PSYCH

A major focus of this book is a description of the techniques and results of group therapy with parents who abuse their children, based on actual experiences of the authors who have worked with abusive families since 1973. The volume also contains a well-organized and documented description of the causes of abuse, the demographic characteristics, the psychodynamics of abusing families, and additional methods of intervention. The section on primary prevention is particularly noteworthy. Especially highlighted are the effects of an unstable environment on the lives of abusing families, methods of determining the appropriate time for the child to be returned home and a systems approach to the abusive problem. The Justices have done a remarkable job of pulling data from a vast array of sources together. This compilation of information plus the addition of new material based on their own analyses and research make the work an important addition to the growing body of literature on child abuse.—Beatrice J. Kalisch, Dept. of Parent-Child Health, Univ. of Michigan, Ann Arbor

Komarovsky, Mirra. Dilemmas of Masculinity: a study of college youth.

Norton. 1976. 274p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-393-01125-9. $9.95. SOC SCI/PSYCH

This important study deals with the stress and conflict which young men face in the swirl of rapidly changing role expectations and role definitions. The problem is not that of either women's or men's liberation, but rather that both sexes are faced with a mutual readjustment of their identities and behavior. The book is based on detailed social and psychological case studies of 68 male seniors at an Ivy League college. Personal vignettes enliven the work with realistic portraits of what it means to be a young man in our culture. A clear discussion of mutual conflicts and role strains men and women face in changing times concludes this impressive and timely analysis.—E. Mansell Pattison, M.D., Dept. of Psychiatry, Univ. of California, Irvine

Kren, George M. & Leon H. Rappoport, eds. Varieties of Psychohistory.

Springer. 1976. 370p. index. LC 76-225. ISBN 0-8261-1940-9. $15.95; pap. ISBN 0-8261-1941-7. $8.50. HIST/PSYCH

The problem of lack of textual material in psychohistory has been corrected as of late by an outpouring of books compending well-known articles. This collection contains innovative articles on the nature of psychohistory, samplings of its sub-field psychobiography, and studies on the history of childhood and on the larger relationship between psychohistory and group processes. Most of the articles are key essays in this relatively young field; most have appeared elsewhere in journals. The present volume will not replace Bruce Mazlish's earlier Psychoanalysis and History (G & D Pubns., 1971) and picks up where Robert J. Lifton's & Eric Olson's Explorations in Psychohistory (LJ 4/1/75) leaves off. F. E. Manuel's article on the use and abuse of psychohistory is good, C. J. Karier's on C. G. Jung's anti-Semitism is crucial, as is L. deMause's on the history of child-rearing practices. The editors' essay is not really necessary.—Moshe H. Spero, Sch. of Applied Social Sciences, Case Western Reserve Univ., Cleveland

Krutetskii, V. A. The Psychology of Mathematical Abilities in Schoolchildren.

Univ. of Chicago Pr. 1976. ed. by Jeremy Kilpatrick & Izaak Wirszup. tr. from Russian by Joan Teller. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-226-45492-4. $22. PSYCH

This translation of a 1968 Russian monograph generalizes the author's 12-year theoretical and experimental psychological research. In Western research tradition, the sources of information about mathematical abilities are based on test scores. Krutetskii vehemently refutes that tradition, claiming that test scores do not show the student's potential of performance. His principal research interest has been the psychological process itself, the structure and formation of mathematical abilities. He focuses on materials from his experimental study of mathematically gifted children as well as on the analysis of biographies of prominent mathematicians and physicists. The book is based on solid, broadly designed research with an analysis (sometimes subjective) of a voluminous body of Soviet, European, and American literature. For Western readers Krutetskii's work is notable mainly in methodological and theoretical aspects; it may have substantial impact on the very complicated issue of the psychology of abilities.—Miluse Soudek, Northern Illinois Univ. Libs., DeKalb

Nelson, Marie Coleman, ed. The Narcissistic Condition.

Human Sciences Pr.: Behavioral Publications. Dec. 1976. index. $19.95. PSYCH

In this collection of essays narcissism is examined in youth (students), patients, intellectuals (Descartes), professionals (a mathematician), and in average people; it is approached as an internal mental phenomenon, and as a manifestation in everyday life. For the teacher, Joel Emanuel and Samuel S. Rubin focus on urban school students. For the general reader as well as the specialist, Reuben and Benjamin Fine discuss the healthy narcissism of a mathematician, and Esther Menacker clarifies the role of the ego-ideal in all of us. For the therapist, Hyman Spotnitz clarifies the importance of internalized aggression in the narcissistic patient, and Ben Bursten, in a major essay, shows the shortcomings of other theories of narcissism and clearly structures his own which focuses on the main problem of the narcissist—his need to confirm his "self."—Robert N. Mollinger, Dept. of English, Nassau Community Coll., Garden City, N.Y.

Worden, J. William & William Proctor. PDA*: personal death awareness.

Prentice-Hall. 1976. 196p. index. LC 76-16188. ISBN 0-13-657213-8. $7.95. PSYCH

Helping persons face the fact of their own mortality is the purpose of this book by the Research Director of the Omega Project's death awareness study at the Massachusetts General Hospital. Utilizing a workbook approach with questions and exercises, Worden poses a number of questions for the reader to ponder in determining his own PDA. Then he suggests a number of alternatives to consider in overcoming the fear of death and preparing for the inevitable. Religious faith, the use of pain-killing and antidepressant drugs, the gift of organs for transplant, planning one's own memorial service, and providing for survivors are all treated. The pros and cons of prolonging life, the living will, and suicide are discussed. The final chapter relates the experiences of those who have been near death or presumed dead then revived. Worden does not give answers but suggests ways by which each reader may reach his own decisions.—Shirley L. Hopkinson, California State Univ., San Jose

Parapsychology & Occultism

Meyer, Michael R. The Astrology of Relationship: a humanistic approach to the practice of synastry.

Anchor: Doubleday. 1976. 263p. illus. by the author. bibliog. LC 75-44528. ISBN 0-385-11556-3. pap. $3.95. ASTROLOGY

This important contribution to the complex art of synastry (the comparison of individual horoscopes) proposes to alter "the traditional approach to synastry, which has suggested the use of astrological techniques as a means of assisting individuals in the subtle manipulation of their partners . . . into helping a person understand and actualize the constructive, transformative potentialities of relationship." The sensitivity of this orientation is evident in Part 1, which provides an excellent introduction to H. P. Blavatsky's theosophical system and an initial look at Jung's psychological approach to the "mystery of human relatedness." While applauding the inclusion of this psychological perspective, I would seriously caution against the book's overly simplistic and reductive presentation of Jungian theory (notably Toni Wolff's structural forms). On the whole, however, this work is a must for the serious student of astrology; it includes most valuable information on the understanding of planetary aspects from the numerological as well as cyclical phase point of view. There is also a fine presentation of the important techniques of synastry, with full and precise directions for their use.—Julie Bresciani, Dept. of Psychology, Marymount Manhattan Coll., N.Y.

Osten, Gar. The Astrological Chart of the United States: 1776-2141.

Stein & Day. 1976. LC 75-37554. ISBN 0-8128-1888-1. $8.95. ASTROLOGY

The more widely published charts of the U.S. have a Gemini ascendant. This is Osten's choice as well. But, because of the uncertainty of the time of the nation's birth, an exact and detailed study of the chart of the United States is needed. This work attempts such a study. The author tries to demonstrate that historical events reflect the secondary directions of the chart of the United States (transits are only irregularly considered). His study is not conclusive however. More time is devoted to history than to astrology, and the astrological correlations are mostly too general. Despite its shortcomings, Osten's book is worth reading; but it belongs only in the larger collections.—Richard A. Lyders, Houston Academy of Medicine—Texas Medical Center Lib.

Tart, Charles T. Learning To Use Extrasensory Perception.

Univ. of Chicago Pr. 1976. index. LC 75-43233. ISBN 0-226-78991-8. $12.50. PARAPSYCH

Despite its title, this is not a psychic's manual but a sound experimental study applying learning theory to ESP research. According to Tart, one of the major problems facing parapsychology is the elusiveness of ESP. It can be observed statistically to exist, but researchers cannot pin it down enough to understand it. In addition to being erratic, ESP abilities in most subjects decline in the course of laboratory studies. Tart speculated that immediate feedback on each correct guess on a random choice trainer might teach subjects to increase and stabilize their ESP abilities. His preliminary experiments reported here were inconclusive but extremely suggestive, and his theoretical considerations offer a clear understanding of many inexplicable results in earlier research. Despite considerable technical detail, the book is extremely interesting because of Tart's ability to involve the reader in the excitement of the experiments and ideas.—Timothy O'Reilly, Watertown, Mass.

Religion

Haughton, Rosemary. Feminine Spirituality: reflections on the mysteries of the Rosary.

Paulist: Paulist/Newman. Nov. 1976. ISBN 0-8091-1983-X. pap. $1.95. REL

Haughton reflects about the role of the feminine qualities of receptivity, tenderness, nurturing, healing in religious experience. She proposes that there are feminine and masculine tendencies in both men and women, but that women have a special role in balancing our too active, too aggressive, too materialistic society. As a frame-

LIPPINCOTT

A true overview of women religious today

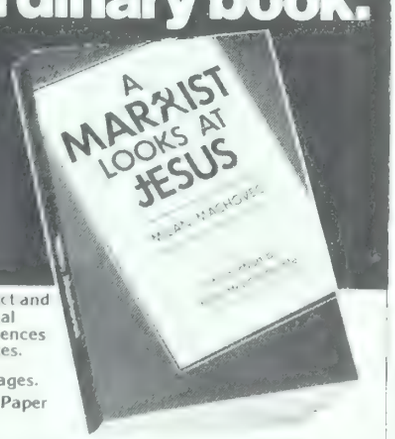
THE NUNS
Marcelle Bernstein

"Based on interviews with 500 nuns from all over the world, Bernstein's interesting account ranges from the cloistered to the most worldly and covers such topics as celibacy and male dominance within the church."—ALA Booklist. "The diversities, as well as the distinctive qualities, are recorded with fine sensitivity and, at times, lyrical empathy. The peace and the uncertainty, the stability and the change are all there...An engrossing study."—Library Journal*.

LC 76-14794
ISBN 0-397-01135-0 $9.95

J. B. Lippincott Company
East Washington Square
Philadelphia, Pa. 19105

"...an extraordinary book."



Subject and Biblical References Indexes.

231 pages.
$6.50 Paper

"It is as fine and sympathetic an overview of present-day scholarship about Jesus and the early church as any I know. It is extremely well-written and lacking in jargon or academic affectation. It is a pleasure to read. Moreover, a deeply humanistic passion—controlled but powerful—infuses the book and gives it an almost religious feeling which, coming from a Marxist, will surprise and move many readers."—VAN A. HARVEY, University of Pennsylvania A major contribution to the Marxist-Christian dialogue.

FORTRESS PRESS
2900 Queen Lane
Philadelphia, Pa. 19129

work for her meditations Haughton uses the life of Mary as expressed in the 15 mysteries of the Rosary, presenting it as a symbol and model for all Christians who would bring forth or articulate God's word to the world. Although the book is structured around the Catholic symbol of the rosary, its psychological astuteness and genuine spirituality should command a wider audience.—Genevieve Casey, Div. of Library Science, Wayne State Univ., Detroit

Kuske, Martin. The Old Testament as the Book of Christ: an appraisal of Bonhoeffer's interpretation.

Westminster. Nov. 1976. 200p. bibliog. ISBN 0-664-20772-3. $10. REL

The Old Testament is often regarded as a relic from a primeval religious age. Thus Kuske surprises us with his thesis that the Old Testament was a guiding force for Bonhoeffer, who affirmed the Old Testament as the Word of God when Nazi theologians regarded it as a Jewish heresy. Bonhoeffer links the Old and New Testaments by saying that God bears "conclusive witness to himself as the Creator" in the resurrection of Christ. Kuske also shows that such famous phrases as "world come of age" and "nonreligious interpretation" are rooted in Bonhoeffer's understanding of the Old Testament. Kuske has provided insight on a previously unexplored aspect of Bonhoeffer's thought. He has thoroughly studied Bonhoeffer sources, including sermons, letters, meditations, and books. Academic libraries should have this book: Bonhoeffer scholars will be eagerly searching for it.—David Hornbeck, Univ. of Utah Lib., Salt Lake City

Richardson, Harry V. Dark Salvation: the story of Methodism as it developed among blacks in America.

Anchor: Doubleday. (C. Eric Lincoln Series on Black Religion). 1976. ISBN 0-385-00245-9. $10. HIST/REL

This study constitutes the first comprehensive study of black Methodism. It traces the story from the intermingling of white Methodism and African survivals through the first separations over race in pre-Civil War Methodism and the rise of the black Methodist denominations in the 19th and 20th centuries to an analysis of the current situation and future prospects of black Methodism. Though not strikingly original and occasionally somewhat prosaic in style, this volume will nonetheless provide a helpful compendium of information and a useful interpretation of the subject that will be read by both the educated layperson and the specialist.—Donald W. Dayton, North Park Theological Seminary Lib., Chicago, Ill.

Russell, Letty M., ed. & intro. The Liberating Word: a guide to nonsexist interpretation of the Bible.

Westminster. 1976. 96p. illus. LC 76-18689. ISBN 0-664-24751-2. $2.95. REL

Edited by a feminist theologian from Yale under the auspices of a Task Force on Sexism in the Bible of the National Council of Churches, this study guide (with appropriate study questions and lists of related resources) is intended primarily for local church use. A series of short essays emphasize equalitarian modes of interpretation of the Scripture, call for more utilization of inclusive language and images in church life, and provide suggestions for revision of liturgy and worship. Most of the contributors have written more technically on these questions elsewhere, but this volume provides a helpful distillation of feminist concerns that will have wide distribution in all levels of mainline Protestantism.—Lucille Sider Dayton, Garrett-Evangelical Theological Seminary, Evanston, Ill.

Waddy, Charis. The Muslim Mind.

Longman. 1976. 204p. illus. index. LC 76-6522. ISBN 0-582-78061-6. $15. SOC SCI/REL

This is a collection of brief excerpts mainly from recent Muslim writings, speeches, and personal statements to the compiler. Each item has an introduction commenting on the author, his topic, and the quotation's significance. The aim is to help the non-Muslim perceive the essence of living Islam as Muslims see it. It is not a systematic exposition, but an impressionistic view of faith in action and aspiration. It represents mainly the view of the educated elite; it omits the often bitter sectarian, anti-Western, anti-Christian, anti-Jewish attitudes and doctrinal formalism which characterize much of the popular and traditionalist Arabic, Persian, Urdu, etc., literature, emphasizing instead the personal, universalistic aspects. As such it is one-sided, but it is authentic. For any library with the standard books of readings, but not a first purchase.—David W. Littlefield, Library of Congress

SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

Bowen, Leslie. The Art and Craft of Growing Orchids.

Putnam. 1976. 128p. illus., some color. bibliog. index. LC 75-39781. ISBN 0-399-11736-9. $10.95. HORT

A beginner's guide to growing orchids, written by the Secretary of the Orchid Society of Great Britain. Bowen succeeds in presenting basic information in terms easily understandable to the new grower, while avoiding the highly technical aspects of the field. He covers conditions in greenhouse and indoors, culture and propagation, and pests and diseases. A list of relatively easy-to-grow varieties, with description, growing conditions, and hints for successful culture, is followed by information on a group of more challenging orchids. This is a good basic guide, expensive, but well illustrated with 16 color plates and 100 black-and-white drawings and photographs. For larger collections.—Marilyn Chandler, Brooklyn P.L.

CORRECTION: The correct title of the book by Neil Solomon and Evalee Harrison reviewed in the September 1 issue of LJ is: Doctor Solomon's Proven Master Plan for Total Body Fitness and Maintenance.

Christian, James L., ed. Extraterrestrial Intelligence: the first encounter.

Prometheus Bks. 1976. 303p. illus. bibliog. LC 76-25328. ISBN 0-87975-063-4. $13.95. pap. $4.95. SCI

Serious speculation on a topic that appeals both to the student of philosophy and to the reader of sf. Fifteen authors, the majority professors of philosophy or astronomy, consider what intelligence developed elsewhere than on this planet might be like. Each essay looks at a different aspect of how extraterrestrial intelligence (ETI) may appear to the human intelligence, asks how the two will recognize each other, and considers what effect the knowledge ETI exists will have on human cultures, beliefs, and behaviors. Probably the first book entirely devoted to a subject that will become more important as extraterrestrial exploration continues.—Paula M. Strain, MITRE Corp., McLean, Va.

John, Laurie, ed. Cosmology Now.

Taplinger. 1976. 168p. illus. index. ISBN 0-8008-1925-X. $9.95. ASTRONOMY

This is a series of 12 lectures by ten respected British scientists, originally prepared for a BBC series and first published in England in 1973. Each essay covers a topic of current interest in cosmology (titles include "Black Holes," "Cosmological Models," "Steady State Defended," and "Questions Without Answers"). Writing style and level of presentation are remarkably uniform for a book of this type. The chapters are clearly written and are aimed for the informed layman. There are good line drawings, eight pages of photographs, and a two-page index. Recommended for larger collections.—Raymond L. Hough, Dept. of Chemistry, Univ. of Michigan, Ann Arbor

Lewis, Richard S. From Vinland to Mars: a thousand years of exploration.

Quadrangle, dist. by Harper. 1976. 425p. illus. index. LC 76-9716. ISBN 0-8129-0647-0. $15. EXPLORATION/ASTRONAUTICS

Exploration of space is part of a process of discovery that began with the Norse voyages, according to Lewis. The first third of his book is a very selective history of exploration on earth, dealing with the Vinland sagas, Columbus, Magellan, Captain Cook, Antarctic expeditions, and very little else. The last two-thirds present a detailed history of the exploration of space from early dreams of lunar flight and primitive rockets through the Goddard experiments, Mercury, Gemini, Apollo, and the moon landings, and the U.S.–U.S.S.R. link-up in space to the Viking Mars probe, giving weight to both Russian and American contributions. Lewis feels that space exploration is very important for mankind, and is resentful about the criticism and lack of funding of the space program in recent years. The book's two parts don't hang together very well, but the second part is readable and knowledgeable.—Jonathan F. Husband, Boston State Coll. Lib.

Rossmoore, Harold W. The Microbes, Our Unseen Friends.

Wayne State Univ. Pr. 1976. 272p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-17795. ISBN 0-8143-1561-5. $12.95. BIOLOGY

Using well-placed anecdotes and humor, Rossmoore delivers microbiology from the esoteric reaches of the scientific community to the public. Readers will be able to appreciate the pervasive but underpublicized roles of helpful microbes, and will gain a new respect for many things taken for granted in the human life style, such as bread, wines, and cheese. The actions of insecticides, medicines, and food substitutes are examined in terms of microbial activity. Except for excessive use of jargon, this work is commendable. Public, high school and academic librarians will want to purchase it to please educated generalists.—Caroline Heckman, Allegheny County Health Dept., Pittsburgh

Agriculture & Animal Husbandry

Mundis, Hester. No He's Not a Monkey, He's an Ape and He's My Son.

Crown. 1976. 160p. LC 76-12527. ISBN 0-517-52669-7. $6.95. PER NAR/PETS

Feeling guilty for not paying enough attention to their son Shep, the Mundises took him to an exotic pet shop one day. "Shep was not your usual animal-loving pet-hungry child," Mundis says, so one wonders why on earth she decided to buy the baby chimpanzee (Boris) they saw that day. It was illegal (paid for in cash; no checks to trace) and the

"THE SINGLE MOST DEFINITIVE WORK..."

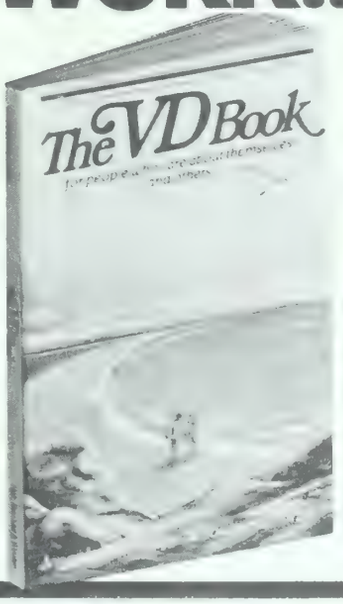
THE VD BOOK
For People who Care about Themselves and Others

By Joseph A. Chiappa and Joseph J. Forish

A totally different approach to the problem of diseases transmitted mainly by intimate bodily contact.

We do not pretend that THE VD BOOK will be all things to all people; but, as of the date of publication, we believe it will render obsolete all other books on "venereal" diseases published in English for the general information of lay audiences or for use in school classrooms.

THE VD BOOK is recognized as an official publication of the United States Alliance for the Eradication of Venereal Disease.



In commenting on the book, Steven H. Morrison, National Director, B'nai B'rith Leadership Cabinet, wrote: "THE VD BOOK certainly is. And, I purposely underscored the word 'the.' It is the single most definitive work which I have seen for those seeking answers as well as those seeking to do something meaningful to tackle this most serious problem. It is easily readable and understandable by all age groups with varying knowledge and experience levels."

ISBN 0-03-018341-8 Paper LC 76-17596
1976 145 pages $1.95

Prices are subject to change.

Order from your local jobber or write:

Library Services Department
Holt, Rinehart and Winston
CBS Educational Publishers
383 Madison Avenue
New York, New York 10017

animal was sick. They knew nothing at all about raising wild animals and only discovered the many books on chimps and other apes after they'd bought Boris. Of course they had mishap after mishap. Mundis recounts them all here, in a breezy style that wears thin by the time she gets to the part about having to ship Boris to an English zoo after two years of coping with his biting attacks on their son and his increasing rebellion against diapers and discipline. She does not recommend chimp raising to anyone and would not do it again. People who disapprove of wild animals in apartments will not like this book. Those who see nothing wrong with that may find it amusing.—Bonnie Jo Dopp, San Francisco P.L.

Swallow, Jay. Pony Care.

St. Martin's. 1976. 128p. illus. index. $8.95. SPORTS/ANIMAL HUSBANDRY

This little volume concentrates on the purchase and care of ponies, rather than on riding, breeding, or showing. Although a few of the practices it advocates are peculiarly British, and are generally not applicable here, overall it is eminently sensible and practical. Swallow first considers whether or not an individual should have a pony, from the point of view both of the parent and of the young owner, and then goes on to discuss housing and pasture, buying, handling, feeding, bedding, grooming, clipping, and shoeing, as well as tack, exercise, special care situations, and veterinary notes. Illustrations are sparse but generally helpful. Because the emphasis is on the pleasure pony, as distinct from the show pony, the information is kept at a basic, no-frills level. The chief value of the book lies in its overall common-sense approach with enough detail to be useful to the inexperienced owner.—Gaydell M. Collier, formerly with Univ. of Wyoming Lib., Laramie

Tangye, Derek. Somewhere a Cat Is Waiting.

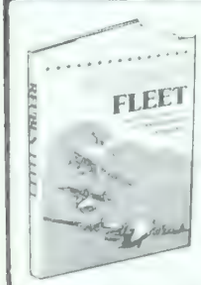
Delacorte. 1976. 356p. drawings by Jeanne Nicol Tangye. photogs. ISBN 0-440-08240-4. $8.95. PER NAR/PETS

Here are the confessions of a cat-hater, trapped into living with—and eventually loving—a succession of cats with distinctive, delightful personalities. Tangye's cat tale is interspersed with some valid if unoriginal philosophy, inspired by the family's move from frenetic city life to the seasonal bustle/peace of a flower farm in Cornwall. Tangye writes with understanding and a satisfying feel for the environment. This is a quiet story, sometimes funny, sometimes moving, rarely gripping, always pleasant—and mainly for cat-fanciers.—Gaydell M. Collier, formerly with Univ. of Wyoming Lib., Laramie

NEW from
World's Largest Publisher of AVIATION BOOKS



REUBEN FLEET and the Story of Consolidated Aircraft
by WILLIAM WAGNER
Author of "Ryan the Aviator"
336 pgs — 350 photos
$16.95
Publication Date: September 27, 1976

AERO PUBLISHERS, INC.
329 West Aviation Road, Fallbrook, CA 92028

Health & Medicine

Colen, B. D. Karen Ann Quinlan: dying in the age of eternal life.

Nash. 1976. 185p. LC 76-7144. ISBN 0-8402-1368-9. $7.95. PHIL/MED

The implications of the highly publicized drama of Karen Ann Quinlan and her questioned right to die are addressed in this hurried study of medical ethics. Basically it is a journalistic account by a Washington Post reporter of the dilemma surrounding the Quinlan case, and is long on readable factual reporting but very short on considering the overall ethical questions. Colen concludes that in saving Quinlan's life several well-meaning physicians "created a modern Frankenstein's monster." The book smacks of instant publishing and is only a slight contribution to the literature on euthanasia.—Beatrice J. Kalisch, Dept. of Parent-Child Health, Univ. of Michigan, Ann Arbor

Glabman, Sheldon, M.D. & Arthur S. Freese. Your Kidneys, Their Care and Their Cure: a modern miracle of medicine.

Sunrise: Dutton. 1976. 185p. illus. index. LC 76-869. ISBN 0-87690-221-2. $8.95. MED

An excellent book, well put together and written in a language the layman can comprehend. First the authors present a concise glimpse at the intricate workings of the urinary tract. They then consider the diseases that can affect the kidneys. In the final chapters Glabman and Freese discuss modern surgery, artificial kidneys, and kidney transplants. For most public library collections.—Charla Leibenguth, Butler Univ. Lib., Indianapolis

Haseltine, Florence, M.D. & Yvonne Yaw. Woman Doctor.

Houghton. Nov. 1976. 337p. ISBN 0-395-24776-4. $8.95. PER NAR/MED

Phyllis Donnan divorced her husband as he was finishing medical school so that she too could become a doctor. She is now an intern at a big-city hospital, and displays exceptional sensitivity to the envy and criticism she encounters daily from those around her. Donnan is on a rotating internship, which means that she works for several months in each of the basic medical specialties—pediatrics, medicine, surgery, obstetrics—and she treats patients with every type of problem from a mosquito in the ear to the delivery of twins. This semiautobiographical story is realistic and engrossing, and is distinguished from the hundreds of other "doctor books" that have recently appeared by its focus on feminism and the problems of being a woman intern.—Margery Read, formerly with Bergen Community Coll. Lib., Paramus, N.J.

Jones, Frank Pierce. Body Awareness in Action: a study of the Alexander Technique.

Schocken. Nov. 1976. 142p. pref. by J. McVicker Hunt. illus. LC 76-9132. $9.95. PSYCH/HEALTH

It is not easy to bring out the value and richness of a physical technique in words, for the simple reason that such techniques are based in experience. F. Matthias Alexander developed an extensive rhetoric and vocabulary of concepts about what he called the psychophysical self (and what we now call the body/mind), as well as an awareness technique for improving the physical self. His pioneering work was widely appreciated in the 1920's by such men as Dewey and Huxley; it survives today as the Alexander Technique. F. P. Jones was one of Alexander's students, is a teacher of the method, and has the gift of writing clear and evocative prose. Alexander was a visionary; he succeeded in describing and developing physical experience, but he tended to be verbose and highly technical in his writings; his works make difficult reading. Jones provides an overview of Alexander's life and works, interspersed with his own experiences and memories. He cannot avoid being somewhat technical, but the book makes interesting reading. It is a valuable source for anyone interested in physical techniques or awareness techniques.—Rosemary Feitis, New York

Pace, J. Blair, M.D. Pain: a personal experience.

Nelson-Hall. 1976. 156p. illus. index. ISBN 0-88229-238-2. $7.95. MED

According to Pace, a physician associated with the Problem Back and Chronic Pain Treatment Center in Downey, California, pain is a purely personal experience, one which affects individuals differently and the expression of which is conditioned by cultural and ethnic factors. As a result of research into chronic pain, a philosophy has evolved at the Center which involves a wide array of health professionals and requires a total-person-oriented approach rather than a disease-oriented one. Written for the layman, this book discusses the many facets of pain, its causes, and treatments for its relief. An important addition to the public library collection.—Phyllis S. Mirsky, UCLA Biomedical Lib.

Scavullo, Francesco. Scavullo on Beauty.

Random. 1976. 200p. LC 76-14158. $15. HEALTH

If 59 photos of somewhat famous women from the fashion and entertainment worlds plus four pages of advice from "experts" in skin care, makeup, and hair care are worth 15 dollars, buy this book. If not, read on. This is a collection of trite interviews with equally trite responses by a fashion photographer who uses this book as a vehicle for his own work. Names such as Helen Gurley Brown, Cher, and Barbara Walters respond to such zingers as: Do you clean your skin before going to bed? (Most do.) Do you have any fantasies? What do you do if you get a pimple? What do you think about gossip? Equally incredible is the beauty index which joins "vital" questions of body, face, and hair with responses in the interviews. This pseudoscientific device is hardly deceiving. When looking up "weight," the response is "I gain weight at the drop of a hat and I lose it so slowly that I'm dieting constantly." What's new? This isn't.—Ruth E. Almeida, North County Lib., Glen Burnie, Md.

Tyson, Richard, M.D. with Jay R. Walker. How To Stop Smoking Through Meditation.

Playboy, dist. by S. & S. 1976. 140p. bibliog. ISBN 0-87223-463-0. $7.95. HEALTH

A powerfully written, no-nonsense book by the authors of The Meditation Diet (LJ 4/15/76). After giving statistical evidence against smoking and its effects on the body and briefly outlining the social, personal and advertising history of tobacco use and manufacture, the authors waste no time in getting down to their message. The essence of this is that one can harness one's inborn ability for relaxation (which is governed in the brain by the anterior hypothalamus) to embark on a Meditation Plan designed to restore one's inner confidence and thus to overcome those things that caused one to smoke. This plan calls for nothing less than a revision of one's attitude toward life and its problems. A careful series of seven "Basic Steps" are explained with questions and answers. Many books scare people with statistics, and others describe smokers' personality types; this book is recommended for its highly readable, direct attack on the problem.—Ute W. Bestehorn, P.L. of Cincinnati & Hamilton County

Natural History & Zoology

Roots, Clive. Animal Invaders.

Universe Bks. 1976. 202p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-5088. ISBN 0-87663-226-6. $12.50. NAT HIST

Man in his infinite wisdom has introduced many animals into alien habitats. But whether attempted for reasons of conservation, sentiment, curiosity, or accident, nearly all such experiments have ended in economic and ecological disaster. In Animal Invaders Roots catalogues the destructive effects on foreign environments of a variety of exotic animals in a thorough if unexciting manner. His writing style does not inspire the appropriate indignation over human meddling in animal ecology. Curiously, introduced insects (among which are such pests as Japanese beetles and tent caterpillars) are never mentioned. A dull yet useful study of an interesting subject.—Malcolm K. Hill, Haverhill P.L., Mass.

Seton, Ernest Thompson. The Worlds of Ernest Thompson Seton.

Knopf. 1976. 204p. sel., intro. & comm. by John G. Samson. color illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-13711. ISBN 0-394-49547-0. $25. ART/NAT HIST

In this handsome book one of America's great naturalists, widely known in the early part of this century, lives again in a collection of sketches, excerpts from nature tales, and 57 spectacular wildlife paintings. Much of the written material comes from Seton's Life Histories of Northern Animals (1909; Arno, 1974. reprint), Lives of Game Animals (1925–1927), and Trail of an Artist–Naturalist (1940). In Samson's introductory biography, we learn that Seton kept a meticulous journal filled with copious notes and animal drawings, and that from these diaries he produced more than 40 books, illustrated with his own paintings and delightful drawings. The final section of this volume treats Seton's great interest in Indians and woodcraft.—Evelyn G. Callaway, formerly with Nebraska Lib. Commission, Fairbury

Technology

Carson, Richard Burns. The Olympian Cars.

Knopf. Nov. 1976. 288p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-13716. ISBN 0-394-45980-6. $25. HIST/TECH

The "Olympian cars" belong to another era, a time when quality was at least as important as profit and cars were created, not run off like so many photocopies. For those who can remember the glory days of the true luxury cars and for those who want a vicarious experience, Carson has put together a time machine to the past. The great names—Leland, Dietrich, Chrysler, Duesenberg, Fisher, and others—are here along with legendary marques like Stutz, Pierce-Arrow, Packard, Franklin, Cord, Marmon, and Reo. The book is more than a description of cars; it is also a social history of the years between the wars and the conditions that allowed for the growth and decline of the great luxury cars. (The book is to be heavily illustrated, but this reviewer did not see them.) Recommended for all libraries with automotive collections and adequate budgets.—Susan Ebershoff Coles, Indianapolis-Marion County P.L., Ind.

Cummins, C. Lyle, Jr. Internal Fire.

Carnot Pr./Graphic Arts Center. 1976. 351p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-40701. $18.95. HIST/TECH

A history of the internal-combustion engine from its origins through the development of the diesel engine at the beginning of the 20th Century. Brief discussions of gunpowder, steam and air engines, thermodynamics, and patent law precede the detailed discussions of internal-combustion engines (which comprise most of the book). There are hundreds of technical illustrations and many photographs. Much of the material is taken from original sources (such as patent applications), and footnotes are listed at the end of each chapter. Although no mathematics is used, the material is on a high technical level and should be of interest mainly to persons seriously interested in the history of engines, such as engineering historians, design engineers, and patent attorneys involved with engines.—Bernard L.

"A straightforward guide ... to a healthier life"*

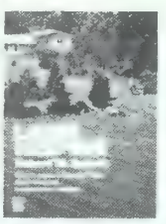
Doctor Solomon's Proven Master Plan for Total Body Fitness and Maintenance

By NEIL SOLOMON, M.D. & Evalee Harrison

15 minutes a day, 3 days a week: that's all it takes to get and stay in shape! No fads, no gimmicks—just the kind of sensible program you'd expect from the author of The Truth About Weight Control. "In addition to providing a practical exercise program, the book also explores ... coping with fatigue, family fitness, auto-relaxation techniques, nutritional awareness." —Library Journal.* Photos. SBN-399-11591-9. $7.95

G.P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

"



"

"Excellent"*

LAWN KEEPING
Robert W. Schery

"Excellent guide to the perfect lawn. ... Provides complete instructions ... and includes a fine introduction to lawn ecology. Technical terms are used ... but the terms are thoroughly defined. ... Numerous tables and lists add to the value of the book."
—Library Journal* (August, 1976)
0-13-526889-3 $12.95
Illus. Index
A Spectrum Book

PRENTICE-HALL INC
General Book Marketing Division
Box 500, Englewood Cliffs, N.J. 07632

Stern, Physics & General Science Dept., New York City Community Coll., CUNY

Social Science

Berglund, Berndt. Wilderness Living: a complete guide to pioneering in North America.

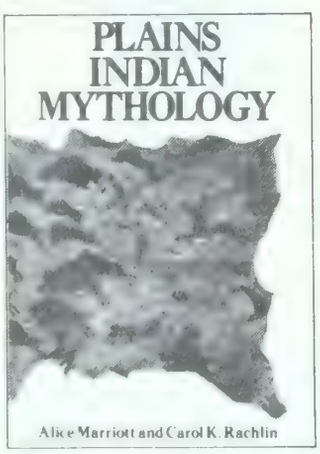
Scribners. 1976. 192p. illus. by E. B. Sanders. technical drawings by the author. index. LC 76-12888. ISBN 0-684-14747-5. $8.95. SOC SCI

Berglund's description of how he set up his Canadian homestead makes interesting reading, and imparts the "feel" of such a life. It touches many subjects lightly—beekeeping, poultry, gardening, log-cabin building, maple-sugar making—but none in enough depth to make the book a really useful manual. The title may mislead some: Berglund's "wilderness" is along a school-bus route, and the word "complete" is debatable. The chapter on tractor operation and maintenance is useful, and there are some very unique woodworking projects, as well as some unusual recipes. However, there are other books on homesteading—Patricia Crawford's Homesteading (LJ 3/15/75), John Vivian's Manual of Practical Homesteading (LJ 6/1/75), Sherry Thomas and Jeanne Tetrault's Country Women (LJ 8/76)—which are more useful simply because they include more detail.—Mary Lynn Dufur, Dolores P.L., Col.

THE CROWELL CORNER



PLAINS INDIAN MYTHOLOGY
Alice Marriott and Carol K. Rachlin

"Well-told myths and legends related by members of various tribes of Plains Indians and collected by Marriott and Rachlin. Suitable for mythology and American Indian collections."
A.L.A. Booklist

Illustrated
ISBN: 0-690-00694-2
LC: 75-26554

$7.95

T. Y. Crowell
666 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10019

from "Hannah's Daughters"

Bin Gorion, Micha Joseph, coll. Mimekor Yisrael: classical Jewish folktales. 3 vols.

Indiana Univ. Pr. 1976. 1553p. ed. by Emanuel bin Gorion. tr. by I. M. Lask. intro. by Dan Ben-Amos. bibliog. index. LC 74-15713. ISBN 0-253-15330-1. boxed $50; until Dec. 31, $42.50.
REL/FOLKLORE

Bin Gorion (1865-1921) collected Jewish folklore and rewrote (in Hebrew) the tales to make their style easier to follow and more concise. The legends have been reorganized by his son, Emanuel, and well translated by Lask. They are grouped chronologically under such categories as biblical tales, Talmudical tales, and tales from the era of the Temple. Although some of the narratives reflect the European and Oriental experience, no tales based on American life appear. Religious themes dominate the earlier selections, but a marked secularization can be seen in stories dating from the 18th Century. Mimekor Yisrael supplements Louis Ginzberg's Legends of the Jews (LJ 10/15/56). Highly recommended for the folklorist and the general reader, but the Judaica expert will be disappointed because the narratives were rewritten and the references are not thorough.—Daniel D. Stuhlman, formerly with Hebrew Union Coll. Lib., Cincinnati

Gallagher, Dorothy. Hannah's Daughters: six generations of an American Family 1876–1976.

Crowell. 1976. 343p. illus. LC 75-38557. ISBN 0-690-01103-2. $10.95. PHOTOG/SOC SCI

Fascinating in concept and superb in execution, this amazing chronicle of the life stories of six living generations of females in one family, told in their own words, deserves a prominent place in the annals of social history. Except for the notable fact of their simultaneous existence, the Lambertson women (who span nearly a century in their ages—from 3 to 99) are otherwise unremarkable citizens of Washington State, where their hard-working, modest lives have been spent. The ill winds of history have blown them no good, nor have eras of good times enhanced them, but marital problems have pursued them down the generations. Yet these women raised families, worked (often struggling) and lived uncomplainingly, despite knowing that neither wealth nor success is ever likely to be their lot. What makes these stories worth listening to is the dignity and innate strength reflected in their words. And the wisdom. In the end, these portraits move and inspire for the Lambertson women are exemplars of those who are known as "the salt of the earth." The author has sensitively refrained from intruding in these accounts, limiting herself to brief prologues before each. The book's many illustrations of actual family photographs and its design as an old-fashioned album complement the text splendidly. This is a tour de force that should have broad appeal to a wide reading public.—Mary J. Mayer, New York City Dept. for the Aging

Kipnis, David. The Powerholders.

Univ. of Chicago Pr. 1976. 227p. LC 75-43230. ISBN 0-226-43731-0. $12.50. POL SCI/SOC SCI

Issues of public policy have increasingly been perceived by scholars as reflective of, or subordinate to, problems of power. Contemporary political and sociological analysts have grappled with questions concerning what power is; how it differs from other forms of influence; how it is exercised; what are its effects; and, most significantly, whether power or consensus regulates social interaction. Kipnis' valuable contribution broadens the dimensions of this perplexing subject by introducing tentative postulates about the psychological dimensions of power. Although the ideas are provocative, their utility is limited by the author's sketchy delineation of the social context which shapes individual power drives and outlets. Perhaps simulated laboratory conditions and questionnaire techniques can only scratch the surface, but the scratch is deep. Most of the data indicate that power, though in some manifestations necessary for human survival, does indeed tend to corrupt (in several senses of that term), and in its grosser, more coercive forms, must be limited.—Isidore Silver, Dept. of History, John Jay Coll. of Criminal Justice, CUNY

Just Published

CAMPAIGN MONEY
Reform and Reality in the States
Edited by Herbert E. Alexander
Foreword by John W. Gardner • Epilogue by David S. Broder
"Fascinating and revealing... studies of the impact of election reform on campaign financing. It adds a new dimension to our knowledge of the role of money in politics."—Arthur Schlesinger, Jr.
ISBN 0-02-900410-1 $10.95

VOICES OF AMERICA
The Nation's Story in Slogans, Sayings, and Songs
Thomas A. Bailey
Two hundred years of American history — told through the words of the people who lived it. A lively chronicle of America, capturing the slogans, sayings, mottoes and lyrics that have helped to shape and define the nation's story.
ISBN 0-02-9012600-0 $12.95

DÉTENTE AND THE DEMOCRATIC MOVEMENT IN THE USSR
Frederick C. Barghoorn
"An extremely timely contribution to the dialogue over the value of détente... provides a convenient summary of the issues.... An all too rare example of moral advocacy combined with astute political analysis."—Library Journal
ISBN 0-02-901850-1 $12.95

THE POLITICS OF ADOPTION
Mary Kathleen Benet
"A cross-national study of the influence of societal attitude on the practice of adoption.... Well written, with a compassion for the individual adoptive family.... An important book."
—Library Journal
ISBN 0-02-902500-1 $8.95

THE USES OF CONTROVERSY IN SOCIOLOGY
Edited by Lewis A. Coser and Otto N. Larsen
Twenty-three renowned American sociologists debate the major controversies in their field. Contributors include David Riesman, Dennis H. Wrong, Alex Inkeles, James S. Coleman, Peter H. Rossi, Anthony Giddens, J. Milton Yinger, and Immanuel Wallerstein.
ISBN 0-02-906830-4 $14.95

UNPLANNED PARENTHOOD
The Social Consequences of Teenage Childbearing
Frank F. Furstenberg, Jr.
A unique account of the social, economic, and psychological consequences of adolescent motherhood, based on the experiences of a group of young women from pregnancy through the first five years of parenthood.
ISBN 0-02-911010-6 $13.95

HANDBOOK OF SMALL GROUP RESEARCH
Second Edition
A. Paul Hare
Summarizes all of the major trends and findings in theory and research on small groups from 1898 to 1974. The only single volume survey, with extensive appendices on the history of small groups, methodology, and sensitivity training.
ISBN 0-02-913841-8 $19.95

THE HOSPITALIZED ADOLESCENT
A Guide to Managing the Ill and Injured Youth
Adele D. Hofmann, R. D. Becker, and H. Paul Gabriel
Foreword by Anna Freud
A pioneering guide to the emotional and behavioral impact of hospitalization on the adolescent. "Marks a significant step... to the final breaking down of the barriers between body and mind... in the eyes of the medical and nursing profession."—Anna Freud
ISBN 0-02-914790-5 $14.95

SWINDLING AND SELLING
The Spanish Prisoner and Other Bargains
Arthur Allen Leff
With a wealth of fascinating detail, this book explores the similarities of classic swindles and "normal" selling techniques. Reveals how congames are imitated in both in-store salesmanship and mass marketing methods.
ISBN 0-02-918390-1 $10.95

A WORLD FEDERATION OF CULTURES
An African Perspective
Ali A. Mazrui
A provocative look at the role of culture in achieving global reform. The author analyzes the forces which are now creating a global culture, and explores their significance for a new world order.
ISBN 0-02-920430-5 $14.95

SOCIOLOGICAL AMBIVALENCE AND OTHER ESSAYS
Robert K. Merton
These essays develop the perspective of structural analysis in sociology, with which Merton — one of the towering figures of twentieth-century sociology — is intimately identified.
ISBN 0-02-921120-4 $12.95

MANAGING MADNESS
The Case Against Civil Commitment
Kent S. Miller
"Compelling and convincing... should be read and studied by legislators, judges, lawyers, social welfare professionals, and all do-gooders who believe that good intentions make for good social policy."
—David J. Rothman, author of The Discovery of the Asylum
ISBN 0-02-921280-4 $9.95

ERIK H. ERIKSON
The Power and Limits of a Vision
Paul Roazen
"Lucid and sensible.... It has authority, and the attention to and confidence about detail earned from Roazen's previous work on Freud and the psychoanalytic movement. There will be, and ought to be, wide interest in Roazen's Erikson."—Michael Paul Rogin, author of Fathers and Children
ISBN 0-02-926450-2 $8.95

THE INTENSIVE GROUP EXPERIENCE
Edited by Max Rosenbaum and Alvin Snadowsky
The most comprehensive treatment of group dynamics available, covering therapy groups, sensitivity groups, human relations training, and communes.
ISBN 0-02-926950-4 $13.95

AN OVERGOVERNED SOCIETY
W. Allen Wallis
Challenging the assumptions that have led to decades of increasing government intervention in our social and economic life, the author describes the limits, failures, and follies of this trend toward "an overgoverned society."
ISBN 0-02-933710-0 $10.00

the Free Press
A Division of MACMILLAN PUBLISHING CO., INC. 100D Brown Street, Riverside, New Jersey 08075

Knapp, Mary & Herbert Knapp. One Potato, Two Potato: the secret education of American Children.

Norton. 1976. 274p. illus. index. LC 76-16571. ISBN 0-393-08745-X. $9.95. ED/SOC SCI

The authors' stated purpose is "to show how children use their traditional lore to cope with the stresses of their lives and to learn what it means to be a member of a human society." There is an excellent balance of representative examples of childlore (some will be familiar to every reader) and functional analysis of the role that this lore plays in the lives of today's children (kindergarten through grade 6). The role has changed, particularly in the last three decades, and the Knapps suggest provocatively some reasons for these changes. Highly recommended for both public and academic libraries.—Joan Berman, Humboldt State Univ. Lib., Arcata, Calif.

Lebra, Joyce with Joy Paulson & Elizabeth Powers, eds. Women in Changing Japan.

Westview Press. 1898 Flatiron Court, Boulder, Col. 80301. (Special Studies on China & East Asia). 1976. 322p. bibliog. LC 75-33663. ISBN 0-89158-019-0. $23.75. SOC SCI

Here are 14 essays on various aspects of women's lives in contemporary Japan, prepared by 12 American women. The diverse backgrounds of the authors—among them are students as well as established scholars—make for differences in level and tone among the essays. The overall result, however, is a fresh and engaging book that is a valuable new addition to work available on Japan. The essays focus on women's activity outside the home, particularly in the workplace. Separate essays examine such topics as the lives of office workers, factory women, farm wives, and women in the professions. An excellent essay explores career patterns and lifestyles of bar hostesses in Tokyo. With its unjustified margins and high price this volume has the earmarks of a specialized study, but in fact its appeal is remarkably broad. Students, specialists, and general readers will all enjoy this book.—Susan J. Pharr, Social Science Research Council, New York

Randolph, Vance. Pissing in the Snow and Other Ozark Folktales.

Univ. of Illinois Pr. Nov. 1976. 200p. annot. by Frank A. Hoffman. intro. by Rayna Green. bibliog. ISBN 0-252-00618-6. $7.95. FOLKLORE

The bawdy portion of Anglo-American folklore has been almost systematically cleaned up, not collected, not printed, and not indexed. So it's significant that this collection, circulated since 1954 among a small yet appreciative scholarly audience, has finally found a publisher in its unbowdlerized form. An excellent introduction places the collection within the contexts both of Randolph's lifetime of collecting in the Ozarks and of the study of American traditional erotica. The 101 anecdotal tales included are sexy and scatological, sometimes clever, often just crude. The annotations remind one of the universality of these stories: variants are documented from sources ranging from the Decameron to the American urban ghetto. Randolph's faithful collecting retains the local color, language, and delivery style of his informants, many of whom, interestingly, are women. In studying this volume, one becomes convinced that no folklore collection can be balanced or realistic unless it includes a sampling of this energetic, if often unappealing, material. This book, previously available only "under the counter," would be a good selection.—Christine M. Roysdon, Lehigh Univ. Lib., Bethlehem, Pa.

Seeing with a Native Eye: essays on native American religion by Ake Hultkrantz & others.

Harper. Nov. 1976. 121p. bibliog. ISBN 0-06-061312-2. pap. $3.95. REL/SOC SCI

This collection of short essays is more concerned with attitudes than with describing or documenting particular native American religions. Most of the essays loosely equate religion with world view; they exalt native American attitudes toward time, space, nature, and social intercourse, while they denigrate Western materialism and crassness. Although this stance is a fashionable one now, it adds little to our understanding of complex cultures and ultimately degrades real people and their day-to-day lives. The introductory essay, which claims that previous work in this area is scanty and wrong-headed, evidences little familiarity with the large and interesting body of writing that does in fact exist. And of the two pieces included by native Americans, one is the fragmented transcript of a question-answer session. Both native Americans and interested readers deserve more.—Judith McPheron, Oklahoma County Libs., Edmond

Stapleton, Jean & Richard Bright. Equal Marriage.

Abingdon. 1976. ISBN 0-687-11993-6. $5.95. SOC SCI

As described by Stapleton and Bright, equal marriage is two people "having the same status in the relationship, the same responsibility for success of the relationship, and the same responsibility for the couple's survival in the world." Their book, which presents a game-plan for achieving this kind of an arrangement, takes a moderately liberal approach to marital relationships; it is quite middle-of-the-road compared to Total Woman or Open Marriage. A three-page list of suggested reading appears at the end of the text.—Susan Matusak, Inst. for Sex Research Lib., Indiana Univ., Bloomington

Environmental Studies

Bellamy, David & Michael Boorer. GreenWorlds: world of plants & forest life.

LC 75-13111. ISBN 0-385-11340-4.

Breach, Ian & Michael Crawford. Earth in Danger: pollution & conservation.

LC 75-13112. ISBN 0-385-11345-5.

Burton, John A. & John Sparks. Worlds Apart: island life & nature in the city.

LC 75-13113. ISBN 0-385-11347-1.

Cloudsley-Thompson, John & Eric Duffey. Deserts and Grasslands: desert life & grassland life.

LC 75-13120. ISBN 0-385-11342-0.

Lucas, Joseph & others. Frontiers of Life: polar life & mountain life.

LC 75-13114. ISBN 0-385-11346-3.

Oates, John & others. The Web of Life: web of life & invisible world.

LC 75-13115. ISBN 0-385-11343-9.

Ross-Macdonald, Malcolm & others. Life in the Future: prospects for man & guide; ecologists at work.

LC 75-13116. ISBN 0-385-11348-X.

Ross-Macdonald, Malcolm & Robert Allen. Man and Nature: every living thing & natural man.

LC 75-13117. ISBN 0-385-11339-0.

Sparks, John & Arthur Bourne. Planet Earth: the air around us & the Earth's crust.

LC 75-13118. ISBN 0-385-11344-7.

Standring, Gillian & Peter Credland. The Living Waters: seas and oceans & rivers and lakes.

LC 75-13119. ISBN 0-385-11341-2.

ea. vol: Doubleday. (Living Earth). 1976. 288p. fwd. by David Attenborough. illus., mainly color. index. $14.95. NAT HIST/ENVIRONMENT

The science of ecology, meaning the study of how living things interact with each other and their surroundings, has seldom been better illustrated than in these books. On almost every page there are well-chosen pictures, most in color and international in scope, which, combined with expertly written text, make the series an attractive and useful set for students, from junior high to junior college, and for adult laymen too. Each volume is actually two separate books, separately paged and indexed, combined under one cover. Unfortunately, this places the index to the first part of each volume somewhere in the middle of the book, a minor annoyance. Although the quality of the paper, printing, and layout does not equal that of the Time-Life "Science" or "Wilderness" series, the educational value is at least as good. The text for most of the books has been written by experts in their fields (e.g., the section on deserts was written by zoologist Cloudsley-Thompson, author of other books about the desert and desert insects). Others are by experienced science writers who have specialized in environmental subjects.

The Web of Life, Man and Nature, and Planet Earth provide an overview of how life began, evolved, and became organized into ecosystems dependent for survival on Earth's land forms, water, and atmosphere. Earth in Danger depressingly shows what pollution has done to earth; Life in the Future discusses possible futures (good and bad), new energy sources, and includes an analysis of The Limits of Growth and other doom prophecies. The other five books cover life at the poles, in mountains, forests, deserts, grasslands, oceans, rivers, and lakes, on islands and in the city. The authors describe the regional plants and animals and how they are adapted to their particular environment: how the camel survives in the desert, for example, or the seal in arctic waters. Diagrams and drawings illustrate food webs ("what eats what") for each habitat or ecosystem, demonstrating the interdependence existing within a pond or coniferous forest, on rocky or sandy shores.

While all volumes are of interest, I found Worlds Apart particularly fascinating. Part 1, "Island Life," tells how islands are born and become inhabited; part 2, "Nature in the City," gives an unusual view of the wildlife existing in cities and contains author Burton's observations on the plants and animals he found colonizing London's devastated areas after World War II bombings. Also noteworthy is part 2 of Man and Nature, "Natural Man," a portrait of life among the Bushmen of the Kalahari Desert, one of the last surviving natural human communities, with commentary on how modern life has "polluted" the natural communities of the Eskimo and the North American Indian. "Ecologists at Work," which is part 2 of Life in the Future, describes the methods professional ecologists use to determine the make-up of a food chain or the factors affecting a given population.

There are no bibliographies, but books on ecology and environmental pollution abound. To have much scattered information so attractively packaged in one series should be a useful bonus to school and public librarians in helping students.—Peggy Champlin, California State Univ. Lib., Los Angeles

Law & Criminology

Hoffman, Paul & Ira Pecznick. To Drop a Dime.

Putnam. 1976. 332p. ISBN 0-399-11769-5. $7.95. CRIME

Paul Hoffman, a veteran crime writer, and Ira Pecznick, a former mobster turned informant, have collaborated to produce an absorbing tract about the fall of a particularly vicious New Jersey crime family. Hoffman has skillfully shaped the narrative to trace his coauthor's criminal career and subsequent decision to turn state's evidence. The result is more than a formless jumble of names, facts, and dates (a common shortcoming of the literature), but less than a comprehensive analysis of organized crime's role in our society (or even in New Jersey). No matter, since the material speaks for itself and permits the reader to draw inferences. Despite the destruction of the Campisi gang, the system of corruption within which it functioned has barely been dented.—Isidore Silver, Dept. of History, John Jay Coll. of Criminal Justice, CUNY

Regional Studies & Anthropology

Rykwert, Joseph. The Idea of a Town: the anthropology of urban form in Rome, Italy, and the ancient world.

Princeton Univ. Pr. 1976. 231p. illus. index. LC 75-318901. ISBN 0-571-10637-4. $30. HIST/ANTHROPOLOGY

Numerous rationalistic theories—based on economic and social formulations—exist on ancient town planning, many of them sensible; but in practice towns did not develop in such a consistent way. Rykwert highlights the (mostly undervalued) influence of magic and religion, using the fully documented Roman period as evidence. The mysterious cardio-decumanus orthogonal system, often ascribed to the Etruscans (although Rykwert sees it as a late arrival in Italy), is found to be connected with the plan of most Roman towns. In the author's view, this basic and (even where superimposed) pertinacious pattern shows that conscious planning was only gradually able to express a sense of psychological space which has its roots in the biological structure of man. Thus he attempts to set his book in the controversial area of universalities already claimed for mythology by Claude Lévi-Strauss.—James S. Ruebel, Dept. of Classics, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis

Steward, Julian H. Evolution and Ecology: essays on social transformation.

Univ. of Illinois Pr. 1976. 416p. ed. by Jane C. Steward & Robert F. Murphy. bibliog. ISBN 0-252-00612-7. $10.95. ANTHROPOLOGY

Consisting of 17 essays, all but two previously published, this volume serves to review and clarify the work of Steward, a seminal figure in modern anthropology. Best known as a pioneer in cultural ecology, an opponent of historical particularism, and a defender of cultural evolution, Steward was also one of the last "complete" anthropologists and a master of synthesis, as attested to by this collection of his papers. The essays date from 1931 until the time of Steward's death (1972), and cover a wide variety of theoretical and ethnographic topics. This valuable contribution to the theoretical and historical literature of anthropology will be of interest to undergraduates as well as professionals in the discipline, and should be in most academic libraries.—David R. McDonald, Kansas State Univ. Lib., Manhattan

SPORTS & RECREATION

Bernstein, Aaron. Beating the Harness Races.

Arco. 1976. 127p. illus. LC 75-18956. ISBN 0-668-03872-1. pap. $5. SPORTS

Bernstein is an acknowledged expert in the field, and in a brief but thorough explanation he gives you the basics of harness racing. Using a simple, logical approach he explains five factors of handicapping and tells what races to eliminate, how to choose and rate contenders, and how to deal with weather elements and the unexpected. Each point is illustrated with accounts of actual situations, and five sample races are included for readers to practice handicapping principles. The final chapter summarizes the principles discussed and includes a glossary of terms. A good tip for most libraries,

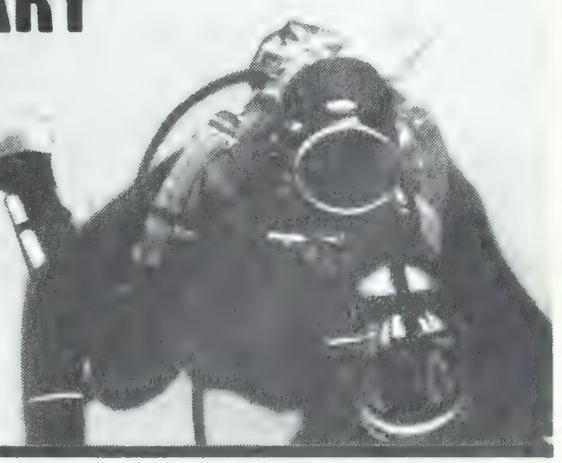
The answers to a diver's questions.

Questions about equipment. About techniques. About underwater medicine. About the most famous divers, past and present. In short, all the basic facts on underwater sports and submarine science are in this handsome and concise new book—made even more practical with extensive cross-referencing and dozens of carefully selected illustrations. Amateurs and professionals alike will consult it again and again.

SUB-AQUA ILLUSTRATED DICTIONARY

Leo Zanelli and George T. Skuse

With 72 illustrations, $7.95



OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS
200 Madison Avenue
New York, N.Y. 10016

particularly in areas where harness racing is prevalent.—Joy Hastings, Santiago Lib. System, Orange County, Calif.

Burrell, Leonard F. G. Make Your Own Sea-Angling Tackle.

Transatlantic. 1976. 108p. illus. index. ISBN 0-7207-0894-X. $10. SPORTS

The advantages of making one's own tackle are obvious, but one might think twice before paying $10 for a book of some 100 pages using British terminology and material names and aimed specifically at saltwater beach casters. Burrell covers some basic do-it-yourself techniques for making items such as floats, rod rests, tackle box/seats, and fibreglass rods; the diagrams are quite clear. Most of the materials would be applicable to fresh-water use also, though the author does not stress this. However, if the angler is already involved in home tackle making, he will probably know many of these techniques; and if he isn't, this book won't interest him enough to get him started. The beginning angler needs a book of broader coverage; the veteran needs one of greater depth. Neither will find this a first choice.—Roland Person, Southern Illinois Univ. Lib., Carbondale

Chase, Edward T. Covering the Court.

Doubleday. 1976. illus. ISBN 0-385-05502-1. pap. $3.95. SPORTS

Another in a U.S. Tennis Association series on specific phases of the game. Chase's lesson is simple. Tennis is a running game. Unless a player is there to greet the ball upon its arrival, all those strokes he or she has patiently been perfecting will have gone for naught. Therefore, court coverage becomes "the most basic condition for winning" and that means a lot of tactical digging and scrambling to keep the ball in play. An informative, functional approach, but the restricted subject matter may limit the book's appeal.—William H. Hoffman, Wichita P.L., Kan.

Drummond, Maldwin (text). Tall Ships: the world of sail training.

Putnam. 1976. 157p. illus., some color by Mike Willoughby. fwd. by H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh. bibliog. index. LC 76-394. ISBN 0-399-11751-2. $20.

McCutchan, Philip. The Tall Ships: the golden age of sail.

Crown. 1976. 153p. illus., some color. bibliog. index. LC 76-7076. ISBN 0-517-52595-X. $12.95. HIST/SPORTS

The value of Drummond's book, other than Willoughby's sensitive and superb drawings (21 in color), is its technical discussion and brief history of each of the 39 ships covered. The writing is pedestrian, but the book is moderately informative on the subject of international sail-training programs. Operation Sail witnesses will enjoy it. (Warning: libraries will have to guard against theft or removal of the drawings.)

McCutchan's book, despite its coverage of familiar topics (China tea and Australian wool and gold routes, Baltimore clippers), deftly covers the history of man and boat in the 19th Century. Neither book is definitive; but depending on reader tastes, each does a satisfactory job—Drummond for general data on specific ships and McCutchan for a generalized treatment of tall ships and the spirited men who sailed them.—James Tazelaar, U.S. Army Engineer Topographic Labs, Fort Belvoir, Va.

Finnerty, Edward W. Trappers, Traps, and Trapping.

A. S. Barnes. 1976. 158p. illus. index. LC 75-20591. ISBN 0-498-01766-4. $9.95.

Gilsvik, Bob. The Complete Book of Trapping.

Chilton. 1976. 168p. illus. index. $10.95. SPORTS

Some overlap is obvious, but these books are truly complementary and both recommended. Finnerty has written more for the experienced trapper and for those who might attempt to make a living at it. Using logic open to debate, he launches with a succinct rationale for trapping, then goes into minute detail on available equipment and its proper emplacement for success. Well-written and hintfull chapters on techniques of building and stocking winter-over shelters and a remarkable piece on wilderness-cabin cooking are bonuses. Both books present well their similar chapters on baits and lures and the handling of furs, but both are overly detailed for the uninitiated in their descriptions of trap types and sizes (this is especially true in Finnerty where this portion is next to unreadable). Gilsvik departs from the fur scene to give methods of pest trapping and live trapping. The best sections, and surely the most useful to any trapper, are those on the setting of traps; these are lucidly detailed by both authors.—Joseph Drazan, Whitman Coll. Lib., Walla Walla, Wash.

Graham, Virginia L. & C. Ionescu Tulcea. A Book on Casino Gambling.

Van Nostrand Reinhold. 1976. 122p. LC 76-6151. ISBN 0-442-23632-8. pap. $4.95. GAMES

A mathematician and a computer expert combine their special talents to describe and discuss casino craps, roulette, blackjack, baccarat, slot machines, and keno. Written simply and occasionally with humor, the book duplicates much of the information presented in many of the titles written by experts over the past 30 years. Blackjack is well presented with photographic layouts, and an appendix includes a computation of odds. For the price, this title should sell; but I recommend for those who can afford them John Scarne's New Complete Guide to Gambling (LJ 7/74) and Edwin Silberstang's Playboy's Book of Games (LJ 12/1/72).—Jack I. Gardner, Clark County Lib. District, Las Vegas

Hall, Donald with Dock Ellis. Dock Ellis in the Country of Baseball.

Coward. 1976. 254p. photogs. LC 74-30602. ISBN 0-698-10658-X. $8.95. BIOG/SPORTS

Like most biographies of professional athletes this work relates its subject's progress from boyhood onward. Ellis' childhood and adolescence were filled with escapades involving a junior high school "insurance" racket and a stolen vehicle among other things. This serie of misadventures was supplemente with a keen interest (coupled with ex ceptional skill) in baseball that finall led him to the major leagues. The boo provides interesting insights into hi controversial career. A reader won' learn much about the finesse and ski that it takes to play baseball, but he wi pick up a good deal about the life style setbacks, and successes of one who ha played the game so well.—David B Walch, SUNY at Buffalo

Henkin, Harmon. Fly Tackle: a guide t the tools of the trade.

Lippincott. 1976. 240p. illus. by Jeff Johnson. in dex. LC 75-18644. ISBN 0-397-01072-9. $9.95. SPORT

Most angling books have a chapter o two on fly-fishing tackle, but it has bee some time since there has been a Nortl American monograph devoted entirel to the subject. All conceivable aspect of fly tackle are treated by Henkin. H is particularly strong on rod selection This is most useful since the recent in troduction of graphite rods has prove confusing for many anglers, especiall novices. Henkin provides a moder outlook to tackle selection and relate his suggestions to practical use rathe than nostalgia. His book will be usefu to all but the fanatical purist and shoul be acquired as a basic title for sport collections.—John A. Moldenhauer Univ. of Guelph Lib., Ontario, Canada

Iacone, S. J. The Pleasures of Book Col lecting.

Harper. 1976. 256p. illus. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-06-012141-6. $10. HOBBIE

Recently works on book collectin have been appearing as frequently as they did earlier in the century. But in stead of general essays on the satisfac tions of collecting, today's works are practical guides. Iacone's book is such a manual, arranged in three parts: the nature of collecting with history and definitions; the mechanics or means of collecting; and reprints of passages from the writings of earlier enthusiastic collectors. Iacone's own enthusiastic approach is appropriate in a work fo the novice; but seasoned collectors will be disappointed in some lapses, such as the confusion between "issue" and "state" and the nearly exclusive concentration on English and American literature. Yet the inclusion of dealers' names and specialties, ways to evaluate and purchase books, and lists of outstanding books and their points makes Pleasures a sensible introduction to book collecting.—Paul S. Koda, Univ. of North Carolina Lib., Chapel Hill

Johnson, Virginia Weisel & Thula John son. Distance Riding: from start to finish.

Houghton. 1976. 168p. intro. by Dr. Richard Barsaleau. illus. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-395 24773-X. $8.95. SPORTS

Distance riding (also called endurance riding) is a steadily growing but little-known sport. This book should serve to introduce the sport and define its attraction for an increasing number of riders. After explaining what distance riding involves, the authors discuss choosing a horse, proper feeding and shoeing for distance riding, and the importance of gradually building up the stamina of both horse and rider. Impressions of two actual rides are included, with information on what judges look for at the veterinary checks along the rides. No distance rider, whether novice or expert, will want to be without this book; public libraries in areas where the sport is popular will find it useful.—Suzan H. Stephenson, Prince George's County Memorial Lib., Md.

Leonard, J. Edson. The Essential Fly Tier.

Prentice-Hall. 1976. 224p. illus. $12.95. SPORTS

It is good to see another book from Leonard whose Flies (A. S. Barnes, 1950) has been a recognized standard for some time. This book deals with basic fly-tying procedures, and this makes it a bit unusual as most similar books of the last few years have been very specialized indeed. The text is good at outlining basic techniques and linking the resulting flies to pattern selection. Most of the now-standard patterns are discussed, as well as a range of new ones. This should prove to be a popular basic title, especially if the illustrations (not seen by this reviewer) are as good as the text. It's a useful general book that will complement nicely some of the more specialized books published recently such as Ernest Schwiebert's Nymphs (LJ 6/15/73).—John A. Moldenhauer, Univ. of Guelph, Ontario, Canada

Lidman, David. Treasury of Stamps.

Abrams. 1976. 303p. color illus. LC 74-32120. ISBN 0-8109-0469-1. $37.50. HOBBIES

A highly artistic portrayal of the world of stamps (including both the beauty of modern stamps and the attractiveness of the great rarities) that will appeal to every collector. The book is ideal for the expert and the novice as it is comprehensive in its approach. In addition to offering a basic introduction to the field of philately, it superbly covers 36 topical areas. The color illustrations are magnificent. The Treasury of Stamps is indeed a treasure.—Henry T. Hettger, Federal Aviation Admin., Washington, D.C.

McCallum, John D. Big Ten Football Since 1895.

Chilton. 1976. 320p. photogs. index. $18.95. SPORTS

Veteran sportswriter McCallum provides an extensive history of Big Ten football, describing the players, coaches, and the exciting games of this famous conference. He provides interesting illustrations and anecdotes, and concludes with an extensive section of records. An enjoyable and worthwhile addition to most sports collections, and especially to those in the Midwest.—Jack M. Berk, Bethlehem P.L., Pa.

New Games Foundation. The New Games Book.

Dolphin: Doubleday. 1976. 193p. ed. by Andrew Fluegelman. photogs. index. LC 76-022654. ISBN 0-385-12516-X. pap. $4.95. GAMES

The New Games Foundation in San Francisco, a child of the counterculture, is dedicated to the proposition that the time has come to play new games. These new games are the very antitheses of the traditional, highly competitive ones we now play; they center on the joy of creative playing, cooperation, and trust, rather than on winning at any price. It's not surprising that Stewart Brand, developer of the Whole Earth Catalog, is one of the creators of this new game form he calls "softwar." This lively book describes 60 new games that from two to 200 can play. It also has chapters on how to organize tournaments and on "equipment you really don't need." Creatively illustrated, it's certain to add sparkle to any library's recreation shelf.—Marshall E. Nunn, Glendale Coll. Lib., Calif.

Ullyot, Joan, M.D. Women's Running.

World. 1976. 153p. LC 75-20962. ISBN 0-89037-100-8. $5.95; pap. ISBN 0-89037-073-7. $3.95. RECREATION

This is an entertaining and informative book written in a conversational style. Although the running principles discussed apply to males as well as females, the book is keyed to the woman runner and it is particularly valuable for that reason. Dr. Ullyot dispenses practical suggestions for the beginner, the intermediate, and the world-class woman runner. She is able to do this effectively since she speaks, not only as an M.D., but also as a person who started running after reaching the age of 30 and now competes in international marathon competitions. Chapters covering topics such as shoes, diet, physiology, and injuries all add value to the book. A major emphasis is marathon running, but there are few women who run this extensively. However, Ullyot is able to explain the various training plans in a way that provides pertinent information for all runners. The book will be most valuable for the serious woman runner.—Kenneth Tillman, Dept. of Health & Physical Education, Trenton State Coll., N.J.

Weber, Sepp. Wild Rivers of Alaska.

Alaska Northwest. 1976. 170p. illus., some color. maps. index. LC 76-15272. ISBN 0-88240-071-1. pap. $8.95. TRAV/RECREATION

A highly recommended way to see Alaska is to canoe or kayak its rivers. This mode of travel is not for the beginner; a boatman should be experienced and in top physical condition in order to assure a safe and sensible voyage. Weber, a veteran wilderness traveler, first recounts his own experiences on five typical rivers. Most involve rough water, rain, snow, bears, and other assorted perils. He then describes 53 river trips and includes ratings, information on access and distances, and charts outlining the rivers' difficulties. The rivers discussed are representative of many, many more waiting to be explored. This guide should be a great help to prospective paddlers in search of navigable Alaskan water.—Helen J. Stiles, NOAA-ERL Lib., Dept. of Commerce, Boulder, Colo.

THEATER

Elsom, John. Post-War British Theatre.

Routledge & Kegan Paul. 1976. 228p. illus. index. ISBN 0-7100-8350-5. $9.25. LIT/THEATER

Elsom, who is theater critic of the Listener, has taken upon himself the awesome task of surveying the British theater scene for the three decades following World War II. He succeeds quite admirably in describing this period which has seen a transition from the rather complacent, proscenium-bound productions of the late 1930's and early 1940's to the more free-form theater "events" associated with the various theater clubs and fringe theaters. Elsom covers a wide range, and his description of the Arts Council and the National Theatre are of particular interest since we have nothing comparable in this country. No attempt is made to touch all bases since that would require a work of greater magnitude, but what is covered is done thoroughly and with obvious scholarship. Recommended for all theater collections.—Alan C. Hochberg, SUNY at Farmingdale Lib.

Handke, Peter. "The Ride Across Lake Constance" and Other Plays.

Farrar. Nov. 1976. 190p. tr. by Michael Roloff in collab. with Karl Weber. $15; pap. $5.95. THEATER

Handke has never been a particularly accessible dramatist—his early plays stripped away character, plot, action, conflict, and illusion to concentrate on

HANDBOOK OF KNOTS AND SPLICES
By Charles E. Gibson

"Simple, easy-to-follow directions for selecting and tying the kind of rope and the kind of knot needed for the job to be done. Also covers splicing rope and the use of rope to make slings, straps, and hoists and to lash spars together. Sections on braiding and other fancy uses of rope and on the making and splicing of steel wire complete the book which is amply illustrated by line drawings. Specification tables for rope and steel wire."—American Library Association Booklist.

"Highly recommended."—Library Journal.

An incredible amount of extremely useful information."—Yachting

ISBN 87523-146-2 122 line drawings $6.95

BRAIN PUZZLER'S DELIGHT
By E. R. EMMET

A treasury of unique mind-stretching puzzles that can be solved by straight, logical thinking and reasoning. No specialized math. Offers the pleasures of discovering solutions through use of ingenuity, imagination, insight, and logic. Stimulates and refreshes the mind. Fascinating, entertaining puzzles, arranged in order of difficulty, with (some amazing!) solutions and full explanations at end of book.

"Puzzles of varying types and degrees of difficulty, all original, none of which requires any specialized knowledge."—Book Buyer's Guide

ISBN 87523-166-7 Illustrated $6.95

EMERSON BOOKS, INC.
Buchanan, New York 10511

language, its uses and abuses—but like Becket, his brand of minimal drama was rich in intelligence, wit, and a pared-down but vivid theatricalism. He has always been something of a miniaturist—the area of theater he chose to explore was small, his themes were limited in scope—and now he seems momentarily to have exhausted himself. In these new plays, he is inching towards a more conventional form of playwriting, but as yet he hasn't mastered it. He's pouring old wine into old bottles. Tedious and overly arch, these plays are strickly for those interested in following Handke's development.—Gary Carey, Dept. of Film & Theatre History, Sch. of Visual Arts, New York

Kroetz, Franz Xaver. "Farmyard" and Four Other Plays.

Urizen Bks., dist. by Dutton. 1976. 150p. English versions by Jack Gelber & others. intro. by Richard Gilman. ISBN 0-916354-12-1. $12.95; pap. ISBN 0-916354-13-X. $4.95. THEATER

These selected plays, difficult to stage (one is without dialogue; one is to be read but not performed), are examples of a new avant-garde headed by Kroetz an emerging (and controversial) West German dramatist. This is the theater of the inarticulate, a new realism which opposes garrulity and thus introduces inarticulate characters (or at least persons with damaged speech). There are also scenes of rape, suicide, and abortion; and horrific nightmares, violence, and scatology mark Kroetz's work. Since these plays reflect a new force in German theater and recall the works of non-German playwrights such as Pinter and Beckett, they at least should be noted and read.—Patricia M. Hogan, North Suburban Lib. System, Wheeling, Ill.

Rhymer, Paul. Vic and Sade: the best radio plays of Paul Rhymer.

Continuum: Seabury. 1976. 256p. ed. by Mary Frances Rhymer. fwd. by Jean Shepherd. LC 75-44426. ISBN 0-8164-9284-0. $12.95. COMM/THEATER

The publication of radio plays is important and useful as virtually the only way to preserve and make accessible this form of entertainment. This is a valiant attempt to document the heydays of radio, but these plays simply do not make enjoyable reading. Either they have not withstood the transition from the spoken to the written form, or they are just too dated to be as effective today as they presumably were 30 years ago. However, the volume is useful for research and should be considered for arts collections.—Deborah Elliott, "Thousand Eyes" Magazine, New York

Cinema

Denton, Clive & others. King Vidor by Clive Denton; John Cromwell by Kingsley Canham; Mervyn LeRoy by Kingsley Canham.

A. S. Barnes. (Hollywood Professionals, Vol. 5). 1976. 192p. illus. index. LC 72-1786. ISBN 0-498-01689-7. pap. $3.50. CINEMA

Another offering in a series spotlighting directors at work during "Hollywood's heyday," this volume contains essays and detailed filmographies dealing with three directors who made "scores of familiar movies with a competence and a gloss now rarely seen in the cinema." Denton characterizes Vidor as a Texas poet "given to . . . abstract expressions of man's role in nature and society," but the author's superficial analyses and annoyingly flip writing style do little to communicate a real sense of Vidor's essence as a director. Canham's essay on Cromwell is the longest and most successful of the three, focusing on the director's "elegant, stylish love stories" and his ability to imbue his films with a touch of "anti-romantic reality." Canham devotes most of his study of LeRoy to a discussion of Warner Brothers and the Hollywood studio system of the 1930's, intimating that LeRoy's only real contribution lay in "spotting and making stars." It is difficult to recommend a book so lacking in substance, yet undoubtedly some libraries will want it since there is little other monographic material available on these directors.—Beverly Feldman, Pennsylvania State Univ. Libs., Abington

McConathy, Dale with Diana Vreeland. Hollywood Costume: Glamour! Glitter! Romance!

Abrams. 1976. 317p. costume photogs. by Keith Trumbo. index. LC 76-12128. ISBN 0-8109-1050-0. $35. COSTUME/CINEMA

Dazzling extravaganza. Large color plates covering 60 years of Hollywood costume with black-and-white stills from films and thumbnail sketches of 23 leading designers. A permanent record of the recent Museum of Modern Art exhibit in New York. Photos of mannequins focus attention on the costumes themselves. There are few men's costumes, but fans won't care while viewing Scarlett's gown of velvet curtains, Delilah's peacock train, and Eliza Doolittle's Ascot getup. Noticeably missing are the costumes cited in the first chapter title: the ruby slippers and the lion's suit. Two shapeless Munchkin costumes (sans Munchkins) and a poster cutout with Carol Burnett's head in place of the scarecrow's represent The Wizard of Oz. Finally, the pastiche of Burnett film satires is anticlimactic, but may be proof that the goddesses have fled. Nonetheless, this glittering coffeetable book is worth its price. Wrapped in gold-embroidered satin, it is guaranteed to draw a loyal following.—Helen Gregory, Albion P.L., Mich.

Marx, Groucho. Groucho Marx.

Bobbs. Nov. 1976. 400p. photogs. LC 76-11630. ISBN 0-672-52239-X. $20; until Dec. 31 $17.50. AUTOBIOG/CINEMA

In an autobiographical scrapbook of 1000 photographs, Groucho shows and tells his life in show business. The dialogue is as witty as one might expect, with Groucho often fracturing a sentence into sense. Though the book lacks the depth of a true autobiography, readers who enjoy the film antics of the Marx brothers will also enjoy this opportunity to reminisce with Groucho about his long career.—Marshall Deutelbaum, Film Dept., George Eastman House, Rochester, N.Y.

fiction

Beattie, Ann. Chilly Scenes of Winter.

Doubleday. 1976. 280p. LC 75-44519. ISBN 0-385-11658-6. $7.95.

Beattie, Ann. Distortions.

Doubleday. 1976. 283p. LC 75-46443. ISBN 0-385-11659-4. $7.95.

Charles is 27 years old, but seems older. His best years were the 1960's when he was politically aware, intellectually alive, had lots of girls. But it's the 1970's now and he's got a dull office job, a mentally disturbed mother, and a lonely stepfather he doesn't like. Worst of all he has lost Laura whom he loved desperately and goes to foolish ends to get back. Narration slows to a standstill and character and wit take the place of plot. The book, a first novel, is funny and sad because Charles is funny and sad. Beattie seems to have an aversion to complex sentences. Simple declarative sentences march one after the other creating a sense of numbness that mirrors the protagonist's mind. Humor saves the style and slow narration from dullness and the book finally ends, not quite where it began, not quite resolved.

Distortions is a collection of short stories, many of which previously appeared in print, mostly in the New Yorker. Characters, scenes will return to haunt the reader, but he will not remember the whole story, will doubt, perhaps, there ever was a whole story. A skillful and inventive writer, Beattie settles for evocation of human complexities and simple style. Her characters are a motley lot: a lifeguard who wants to "introspect," a dog and hash-ish lover who doesn't want anything, a relentlessly suburban couple who encounter spacemen. But on the inside all characters are just this side of numbness, capable only of sudden bursts of manic wit, but no real satisfaction.—Larry Gray, Dept. of English, Southeastern Louisiana Univ., Hammond

Böll, Heinrich. The Bread of Those Early Years.

McGraw. Nov. 1976. trans. by Leila Vennewitz. LC 76-17547. ISBN 0-07-006427-X. $7.95.

This intense, closely drawn love story set in post-World War II Germany introduces one of Böll's early novels to American readers. The hero, Walter Fenrich, is a successful young washing machine repairman whose work brings him little satisfaction beyond the assurance that he will always eat—an assurance he did not have as a child during the war. When he falls in love with Hedwig, a childhood acquaintance, her links to his past stun him out of an automated and unfeeling existence into a penetrating examination of his past, present, and future. The themes of this novella will be familiar to Böll's readers: the political, social, and economic effects of the Nazi era on modern German society, the related changes in the role of the Catholic church, and the future of the family. The emphasis is on human understanding as the saving grace in an otherwise cruel and unfeel-ng world.—Olga Wise, National Clearinghouse for Criminal Justice Planning & Architecture, Champaign, Ill.

FICTION
FICTION

Dobler, Bruce. The Last Rush North.
Little. 1976. 350p. LC 76-13625. ISBN 0-316-18916-2. $8.95. F
Dobler conveys well the cost in human terms of building the Alaska pipeline—broken marriages, loneliness, greed, violence—but it is hard to sympathize with any of the characters because they are only stereotypes in stereotyped situations. Regrettably, too, the only Eskimo is a drunkard. However, the descriptions of activities involved in building the pipeline, in spite of the lapses into cliché, sentimentality, and self-conscious crudeness, are the best parts of this novel and help compensate for the rest. Still, I wish Dobler had decided on nonfiction. For large fiction collections and libraries whose patrons are interested in Alaska and the pipeline.—Judy Mimken, Geophysical Inst. Lib., Univ. of Alaska, Fairbanks

Fontane, Theodor. Jenny Treibel.
Ungar. (Literature in Translation). Dec. 1976. 224p. tr. & intro. by Ulf Zimmermann. LC 76-15648. ISBN 0-8044-2209-5. $8.50; pap. ISBN 0-8044-6154-6. $3.25. F
A Man of Honor (LJ 2/15/75) introduced the American reader to Fontane's mid-19th Century Berlin, and Jenny Treibel continues the portrait of a city so deftly begun in the earlier work. Fontane does not use the ponderous and weighty style so often associated with German literature of the 19th Century; rather, he employs wit, irony, and a sharp ear for dialogue, which results in a superb delineation of character and a vivid portrayal of the social, political, and emotional lives of middle and upper-middle class Berliners. The plot revolves around the conflict caused by a proposed marriage between Leopold, son of the Treibels (nouveau riche, with pretensions toward "aristocracy") and Corinna Schmidt (from an established professorial "nonmaterialistic" family). Ulf Zimmermann provides an accurate translation, excellent introduction, and valuable notes.—Olga B. Wise, National Clearinghouse for Criminal Justice Planning & Architecture, Champaign, Ill.

Goldemberg, Isaac. The Fragmented Life of Don Jacobo Lerner.
Persea Bks. 1976. tr. from Spanish by Robert S. Picciotto. LC 76-15056. ISBN 0-89255-002-3. $8.95. F
The first novel by the Latin American critic and novelist to be translated into English, this powerful portrayal of Jews living in Peru during the Thirties focuses on the life of a Jewish immigrant from Russia named Jacobo Lerner and his family, friends, and enemies. Goldemberg presents a complex but fascinating mosaic of newspaper accounts, magazine articles, and characters' thoughts and actions. These combine to offer a portrayal of Jewish frustration as the immigrants attempt to reconstruct their traditions and life style in a land of suspicious and often prejudiced gentiles. Frightening dream sequences, a stunning use of the stream of consciousness technique, some bizarre humor, and a complex oscillation between the past and present intermingle for a vivid and terrifying view of a people suffering in a foreign land. Well translated, and recommended for fiction collections.—James J. Troiano, Dept. of Foreign Languages & Classics, Univ. of Maine, Orono

Hall, Douglas Kent. The Master of Oakwindsor.
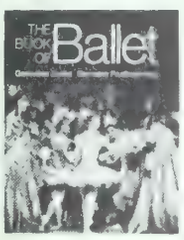
Crowell. Nov. 1976. 400p. LC 76-5831. ISBN 0-690-01171-7. $8.95. F
Dorset in 1908 provides the background for this uninspired saga à la Delderfield and Galsworthy. David Harris, aspiring young painter in search of his father meets strong-willed young country girl Kathy Dixon. They eventually marry and start off on the rocky road to happily-ever-after. The greatest interest in this novel arises from Hall's descriptions of events and attitudes on the changing edge of the 20th Century: early automobiles, bloomers, primitive birth control devices. The story is disjointed and overlong. The best characters, like David's independent, self-reliant mother, remain unexploited. Da-

"Recommended"*



THE BOOK OF BALLET
Geneviève Guillot and Germaine Prudhommeau
"The most exhaustive encyclopedia of classical ballet technique available.... Of great value for its clear descriptive text, illustrative drawings, and photographs. ... Provides choreographic sources for much of the described movement, many of these source works by European choreographers not known in this country."
—* Choice (July/August, 1976)
Illustrated
0-13-079905-X $15.95
C.I.P.
A Spectrum Book

PRENTICE-HALL CIP
General Book Marketing Division
Box 500, Englewood Cliffs, N.J. 07632

Swashbuckling adventure on the high seas.

"Captain Percival Merewether of the British East India Company's Bombay Marine is, by this third 18th-century adventure, bowsprit-to-prow with Horatio Hornblower in plot-rigging and speed.... The Gulf of Aden, Bay of Bengal and South China Sea all thunder with volleys and echo with plots and counterplots."
—Kirkus Reviews

"A rousing sea adventure."
—Publishers Weekly

$7.95
Little, Brown

FOR KING AND COMPANY
A novel by
Ellis K. Meacham

vid never finds his father. He does find his muse, but this ending is of no particular interest to anyone except the characters involved.—Virginia L. Fetscher, Katonah Village Lib., N.Y.

Harris, Leonard. The Masada Plan.
Crown. 1976. 314p. LC 76-22557. ISBN 0-517-52799-5. $8.95. F
Three years from now, in 1979, Israel, isolated and friendless, is invaded by a united Arab force, and this time total defeat is certain. Even the petro-conscious Americans refuse to intervene. Thus the Masada Plan, Israel's doomsday gamble to pressure the great powers into saving the Jewish state from annihilation. The Israelis have secreted nuclear bombs in New York, Moscow, and other major world cities, and in just 36 hours the holocaust will begin—unless Kate Colby, Barbara Walters-type media hotshot, can worm the details of the Plan out of her lover, the Israeli Ambassador; unless Pete Maloney, the U.S. Secretary of State, can convince the Russians, Arabs, and his own recalcitrant President to yield to the threat. The clock ticks while the words fly by, and though this might strain your credulity, it's guaranteed to raise your blood pressure.—Kenneth F. Kister, West Palm Beach P.L., Fla.

Hill, Pati. Impossible Dreams.
Alice James Bks. 1976. 125p. illus. LC 76-4419. ISBN 0-914086-13-8. pap. $4.50. F
Here is a book to "flick" through in either direction; also to stare at and read. There are 125 textual entries, 48 photographs, and generous whitespace adding up to clever and pleasant collaboration of visual impressionism and compressed fiction. There is a heroine who marries well, suffers from ennui, and has some torturous and some humorous relationships. Her life is as fleeting as a film, and the book makes it "look" just that way. "Tomorrow I'll likely sleep in Marseille," she says. "Or maybe I'll stay where I am. Who knows, anything can happen." But then: "Does anything really change anything?" She doesn't know. We freeze on "Anything!" The pictures are by various photographers: all excellent, muted prints, but sometimes the juxtaposition with text is too literal.—Robert Bonazzi, Austin, Tex.

Konecky, Edith. Allegra.
Harper. 1976. 160p. ISBN 0-06-012452-0. $7.95. I
Enter Allegra Maud Goldman, a jaded superchild who figured out by the age of five the little relative worth of a girl. Allegra comes complete with a typically crass, materialistic father, a typically pitiable, unfulfilled mother, and a shy, artistic older brother who is receiving psychiatric help to cope with the demands of the cold cruel world. Allegra, being a girl, requires no such help—she will marry and have children and everything will be fine. In the face of these disadvantages, and despite the fact that the only intellectual career-oriented women Allegra meets in her whole young life (two camp counselors) are intimated to be lesbians, our heroine manages to reach adolescence and the end of the novel secure in the knowledge of her own worth and prospects. On the whole, Allegra is a serviceable and quickly read novel whose only flaw is this: the reader cannot escape the feeling that she has already read it several times.—Marcia R. Hoffman, Woodbridge P.L., Iselin, N.J.

Leonard, Lee. I Miss You When You're Here.
Stein & Day. 1976. LC 75-35958. ISBN 0-8128-1905-5. $8.95. F
Despite a rather humdrum plot which traces the professional and romantic adventures of Maxwell Irwin Lefkowitz, a talented and ambitious Top 40's disc jockey turned radio talk show host turned television emcee par excellence, this flippantly written first novel succeeds in fine fashion. Leonard is a skilled craftsman of the reductio ad absurdum style of humor, and his outrageously funny digressions on subjects ranging from earthquakes to feminine hygiene more than make up for any lack in plot complication. Not for everyone, but certain to be enjoyed by devotees of Donald Westlake or Woody Allen.—Philip M. Fragasso, Woburn P.L., Mass.

Macdonald, Malcolm. The Rich Are With You Always.
Knopf. 1976. 481p. $10. F
In this sequel to The World from Rough Stones (LJ 5/1/75), John and Nora Stevenson continue their ruthless pursuit of wealth on the heels of the Industrial Revolution in Britain. Success brings about a change in Nora; her ambition turns to greed as she continues her quest for money almost to the point of sacrificing her marriage. There are times when the author appears to be more interested in his research and in weaving historical characters among his fictional ones than in further developing the Stevensons who were so vividly portrayed in the previous volume. But as a relief from financial ruses, business crises, and bankruptcies the reader is treated to a generous serving of lusty Walter Thornton, friend and business associate, driven hard by his "Irish toothache." The conquests of Walter are an earthy delight; the description is graphic, humorous at times, and some of the best writing in the book. For large public libraries.—David A. Dillon, Univ. of New Orleans Lib.

Nye, Robert. Falstaff.
Little. 1976. 452p. ISBN 0-316-61738-5. $8.95. I
Using Shakespeare's Falstaff as a central character, Nye has written a brilliant and bawdy historical novel which is both an effective re-creation of tavern life in medieval England and a witty celebration of the sexuality which charges much of Shakespeare's work. Nye's Falstaff is every bit the gregarious lecher one would expect. He tells his story through several scribes, the last of which is his dour "son," Stephen Scrope, whose ill humor serves as a foil for Falstaff's broad humanity. Rich in playfulness, the novel abounds in puns, literary jokes and allusions, even typographic gags. A rare feat.—F. Whitney Jones, Dept. of English, St. Andrews Coll., Laurinburg, N.C.

Read, Piers Paul. Polonaise.
Lippincott. 1976. 337p. LC 76-15306. ISBN 0-397-01150-4. $10. I
After writing a best seller like Alive, what does an author do for an encore? Read answers that question by changing genres and heading off in a totally different direction. Polonaise is a family novel set in the Europe of 1930-1960. A Polish nobleman gambles away the family estates in the 1920's, a blow which renders his teenage son and daughter easy prey to the Communist line. But personal survival ultimately wins over party claims. By the end of World War II, daughter Krystyna has scrabbled her way from store clerk to well-off emigré in Paris. Son Stefan is a far more complex and interesting person. Cynical and ignoble, he contributes an ironic ending to the novel with a ruthless act committed for the noblest motives. The novel is well named after the spirited dance: Read's characters whirl through sexual escapades, the Spanish Civil War, flight from the Russians, and a jewel theft, and the reader has little inclination to put down the book.—Jeanne M. Butcher, Emporia P.L., Kansas

Robinson, Leonard Wallace. The Man Who Loved Beauty.
Harper. 1976. 256p. ISBN 0-06-013584-0. $8.95. I
Jonathan Avery is a professor of medieval philosophy, and a poet. He is also an incurable idealist. At the beginning of this novel he wins, marries, and promptly loses a woman he calls Beauty. The rest of the novel shows him scheming to get her back. The man who takes Beauty away from Jonathan is a scientist named Thurman Cantwell (the Beast), who has discovered a drug which he hopes will cure alcoholism. In order to win back Beauty, Jonathan determines to slay the Beast. The pursuit of Beauty, however, is not only the plot of the novel; it is the theme as well. Cantwell comes to stand for the corruption of pure science, and since Beauty has been seduced by his humanistic facade, Jonathan must win her back by tearing off that mask and revealing the meretricious truth of applied science. Surprisingly, the novel works on both levels. The plot is well crafted, and the ideas which inform it are neatly woven in. Author Leonard Robinson is hardly subtle in his presentation of the conflicting issues, but he's a good enough novelist to keep them in control. This is an intelligently written novel, not earth-shaking in its philosophical underpinnings, but original and quite readable.—Bruce M. Firestone, Dept. of English, Clemson Univ., S.C.

Segal, Lore. Lucinella.
Farrar. 1976. 177p. LC 76-21877. $8.95. F
Lucinella tells of the poet, Lucinella, "good in a minor way"; of her adventures in literary worlds (the New York

FICTION

Scene, the Yaddo Scene, the College Circuit Scene) among literary people: poets like William, whose poem on Margery Kempe has a weakness in the second stanza; critics like the English authority, Betterwheatling; editors like Maurie, of "The Magazine," who recognizes the excellence that everybody else has missed. Through the scenes flit Young Lucinella, the aspiring poet with rounded back and belly, and Old Lucinella, with frizzy hair, who "hasn't written much in these last years." The wit is deft and accurate; the style mingles comic fantasy with social commentary, as not only literary people but literary attitudes about art and reality are mocked. But the jokes are so frequent, at times more for their own sake than for provoking some serious insight, that the novel's potential as a genuinely profound statement is ultimately side-stepped; missed.—Suzanne Juhasz, Dept. of English, Univ. of Colorado, Boulder

Shepard, Martin. A Question of Values.
Dutton. 1976. 220p. LC 76-1385. ISBN 0-8415-0449-0. $7.95. F

Psychiatrist Shepard's literary credits include nine books, all dealing with psychotherapy and/or sex. So it's no surprise that his first work of fiction follows a like scenario. Attractive (but repressed) Arlene Lewis requests sex therapy from analyst Jonas Lippman; offers her bed and consolation when Jonas' 20-year marriage to Phoebe founders; attempts suicide when Jonas ends even their doctor–patient relationship; then, at the advice of a smitten lawyer friend, sues Jonas for malpractice. The values—career and status quo versus honesty and integrity—are probed only moderately, to about the same depth that the characters are developed. But the legal machinations and philosophy of trial lawyer Norman Rosenkrantz (who counsels Jonas "deny, deny, deny") are deftly handled. Contemporary and credible, though dispensable.—Michele M. Leber, Virginia Beach P.L.

Sumner, Richard. Mistress of the Boards.
Random. Nov. 1976. $8.95. F

This pleasant, if unmemorable, historical novel based on actress Nell Gwynne's liaison with King Charles II raises suspicions that the characters are creatures of a romantic imagination with little resemblance to the historical figures whose names they bear. Occasionally, the attempt at "authentic" atmosphere also falls victim to mystification through use of archaic 17th-Century vocabulary. Nevertheless, the portrayal of Restoration London and the Great Fire has considerable interest and the leading personalities are agreeable. Undemanding but entertaining.—Karen Horny, Northwestern Univ. Lib., Evanston, Ill.

Wagner, Sharon. Bride of the Dullahan.
Doubleday. 1976. LC 76-3008. ISBN 0-385-11633-0. $5.95. F

It's one thing for Gothic heroines to be falsely accused of being witches, but Sheila really is a sort of witch, with a protective Gaelic spirit (a Dullahan) who defends her against all attacks. Sheila's guardian dies mysteriously and his nephew brings a handsome friend to woo the heiress. The suitor dies violently and Sheila is sent to Old Bailey after a witch trial. On a ship to Australia, where she is being transported with false papers, she meets Paddy. Many fires and strange happenings later, she returns to Ireland, where a sort of exorcism transfers her Dullahan to another and she is free to marry. You are free to exorcise this tripe from your budget.—Phyllis Gallo, Way P.L., Perrysburg, Ohio

Wood, Nancy. The Man Who Gave Thunder to the Earth.
Doubleday. 1976. LC 75-30462. ISBN 0-385-09682-8. $6.95. F

Any book which begins with a lengthy quote from D. H. Lawrence has a lot to live up to, but the promise of the author's past work is indeed fulfilled here. Subtitled "A Taos Way of Seeing and Understanding," this is not another rehashed legend or romanticized chronicle. The most accurate literary label is allegory, but even that is not sufficient. Interwoven with the hero's classical quest are historical, ecological, and mythological elements which, in their lyrical subtlety, capture the intellect as well as imagination. A curious kind of neoclassical pantheism blends with primitive sensual force to produce a creation sequence, which is suddenly shattered by a pollution report. Who—or what—is the Moon-faced Dog? How can a man live in an ear of corn? This is "The Faerie Queene" coauthored by F. Scott Fitzgerald and Ray Bradbury, not just a story, but a mind-stretching experience.—Carol M. Klein, Russell Lib., Middletown, Conn.

Yglesias, Rafael. The Work Is Innocent.
Doubleday. 1976. ISBN 0-385-00965-8. $6.95. F

A well-written ascent-into-manhood novel, shorn of any romanticism. Young Richard Goodman is stuck in his "Dark Years," working on a novel, working on his parents to let him quit school, working on goading his elder sister and brother, working desperately and awkwardly toward his initiation into the fearful mysteries of sex. A prefatory note hints that the story is the author's own. He skillfully etches an environment that seems destined to blow Richard into a million frustrated pieces. The restless yearnings, the familial stress, the unprovoked rebelliousness combine into an acute and roiling portrait of severe adolescence. But to some readers the highly emotional, intellectual and political atmosphere the family creates may seem foreign, and Richard himself, despite his prerequisite trials, a frequently less than sympathetic character.—Thomas D. Bedell, Asst. Editor, "Valley Stream MAILeader," N.Y.

"Entertaining... fun"
—Library Journal

The Nonsuch Lure

Mary Luke

A haunting novel of a love that continues through three incarnations, by the author of A Crown for Elizabeth. "Drawing on her very considerable knowledge of the Tudor period, Mary Luke has built around the real life figures of the family whose lands were confiscated by Henry VIII to build his sumptuous Palace of Nonsuch, a luminous love story...enter into Ms. Luke's imaginative and poetic recreation of England at the time of the dissolution of the monasteries, and enjoy every bit of the eerie suspense she unfolds."
—Publishers Weekly.
SBN 698-10750-0 $9.95

COWARD, McCANN & GEOGHEGAN, INC.
200 Madison Avenue, New York 10016

★"The best of a bumper crop of suspense fiction"
—The Booklist
(Starred Review)

The Tetramachus Collection

By PHILIPPE VAN RJNDT

An explosive thriller triggered by the most daring robbery in history: the theft from the Secret Vatican Archives of a document so sensational the very foundations of the Church will crumble if its contents are revealed to the world! "This humdinger of a tale...is utterly fascinating. Most refreshing, it does not depend on sex or violence for its effects."—Publishers Weekly.
SBN-399-11781-4. $8.95

G.P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

mystery ... detective ...suspense...

Final Score (Holt. 1976. LC 76-3979. $8.95) by Emmett GROGAN is a first novel and an absolutely splendid one, informative, gripping, and full of disreputable people of varying degrees of criminality. There are two stories, both taking place in the very center of Brooklyn. One involves a clumsy religious freak who shoots those whom he considers to be unhappy, or who just look unhappy, and anoints them with holy oil to ensure a rapid passage to a better world. The other involves a complicated caper which I didn't understand too well but which gradually gets clearer, burglary by burglary. Those responsible are an aging ex-con, recently released and hard at work at his last, his very last trick, and his girl, a hustler and perhaps ex-addict. In with them are Day Dream, a gorgeous but slightly zonked out wheel person, an expert driver for illicit enterprises, and her friend, a young and successful thief. The two stories intertwine, almost tripping each other up, moving in and out of a seedy bar with a clientele of pimps, drunkards, and drug peddlers, as well as the unnoticed poor. The police are represented by two cops, Mutt and Jeff, notorious thief catchers. The book is full of telling and often grotesque detail.

I very much enjoyed Felicia (Putnam. 1976. ISBN 0-399-11792-X. $7.95) by G. A. EFFINGER, a disaster story with a lacing of crime that takes place in the remote coastal Cajun country of Louisiana. Among the clannish locals are the attractive and sensible sheriff and his foolish, adulterous wife, besotted with a local television personality. A hurricane is on the way, and the preparations for a probable disaster include a plot by a gang of truckers to rob the town during the evacuation. The crime is nonsensical, the risk would not be worth the reward, but the unfriendly, mistrustful atmosphere is effectively evoked and built up during the suspense of the hurricane watch. And it is a joy to find an author with enough wit to be as wryly funny as Effinger.

Rogue Eagle (Harper. 1976. ISBN 0-06-012949-2. $8.95) is not a continuation of James McCLURE's series of South African police procedurals, although it has the same convincing tone. It is the story of white supremacists still living in the past in the back country of southern Africa and their hideous acts of terrorism. A group of aging fascists, Nazi supporters during World War II, plots a blatant terrorist act to keep the blacks in subjection. However, from a Sin City in Lesotho the pursuit goes into high gear by an English secret agent masquerading as a journalist and by a CIA agent in the form of a glamorous airport receptionist. There is a great deal of action: a plane is sabotaged, a village hospital is raided, and the two spies carry out an eminently satisfactory, if gruesome, revenge.

Gerald SEYMOUR's The Glory Boys (Random. 1976. ISBN 0-394-40773-3. $7.95) is every bit as good as his first thriller. In this one an idealistic, inexperienced kamikaze killer, a Palestinian and the sole survivor of a gang of three, goes to England to make contact with an intelligent, hard Provo IRA murderer. Their aim is to kill an aging Israeli nuclear physicist on his way to England to deliver an important speech to a learned society. A British secret agency and its Israeli counterpart team up as the patient, meticulous trackers of the two terrorists. Fully realized characters in no way impede the deliberate but inexorable momentum of the suspenseful plot, rich with incident and excitement.

Joan FLEMING's To Make an Underworld (Putnam. 1976. ISBN 0-399-11809-8. $6.95) is English, of course, and she is as always a treat to read. A retired tycoon, antisocial and a little stodgy, takes up residence in a cottage in the remotest Cornwall. When he arrives he finds a dim young woman locked up in his lavatory. She turns out to be the village idiot, and she also turns out to have been raped (perhaps but not certainly since she is not only retarded but also randy) which causes angry muttering against the new settler. An Irish doctor takes an interest, which is more than can be said for the local parson, a dolt with a blind eye for village scandal. The young woman takes a serious fancy to the stranger, causing a terrible nuisance, and ends up strangled. The atmosphere is highly menacing and the people are absolutely lifelike and sadly unattractive. Unfortunately the plot gets a little out of control and the ending is improbably tidy.

The Doll Who Ate His Mother (Bobbs. 1976. LC 76-2363. ISBN 0-672-52236-5. $8.95) by Ramsey CAMPBELL has a wonderfully grabbing title, and the story is just as fascinating. A young Liverpool man is killed in a motor accident and his severed arm is stolen by a chance jaywalker. A search is instituted by a writer and the victim's sister to find the bloodthirsty, sadistic monster who, as it turns out, has been responsible for killing and eating a number of Liverpool locals. A street actor's cat has been devoured, a movie house operator's mother has been killed. The survivors discover a nest of black magic and demonology, fed by religious bigotry, having its origins in a British witch doctor's dreadful power over gullible and stupid women.

Margaret MILLAR's Ask for Me Tomorrow (Random. 1976. $6.95) is full of lively, graphic writing, sometimes rather too vivid. Her story is about a rich household headed by a paralyzed old man and his strong, devious middle-aged wife. She employs a young Mexican-American lawyer to look for her first husband who had fled to the Bay of Whales in Baja California with a chambermaid and had there fathered an idiot child. The trail is cold, but as the clues surface they point to swindles in the poorest parts of Mexico, to sordid crimes and corruption, and to death. The plot is strong and the point of view pessimistic, probably correctly so. Th few slight twitches of sentiment are re deemed by bright flashes of wit. The In dian cook-general, a recent and enthus astic convert to religion, is a marvel.

The Chicago Girl (Putnam. 197 ISBN 0-399-11810-1. $7.95) by Ton KENRICK is described as comical b the publisher, which I find odd, unles one thinks that torturing a whore t death is a hoot. What the book actuall is, is sinister, enthralling, with an occa sional touch of the blackest humor. Th woman is killed at the beginning of th story because she is trying to con fence out of a valuable emerald neck lace. This clearly doesn't work, and reporter with a defective moral sens tries a similar con himself. He tries t train an Eighth Avenue hooker to ac like a lady and fails miserably. He the turns to Vassar where he gets a recen graduate to act like a whore, an appar ently less difficult task. The three o them pit forces against the fence an his bodyguard, and the ending is a pecu liar and satisfactory twist. I found par ticular interest in the peripheral action in instructions on how to hustle and, i the seamy life of New York prostitu tion.

The Orion Line (Harcourt. Jan. 197 LC 76-12456. ISBN 0-15-170158-X $8.95) by Nicholas LUARD is yet an other of the middle-aged spy thrille harking back to World War II, and w have all read a number of them, but t my surprise this one is a good cu above most. An experienced pair o British secret agents are sent out agai after years to retrace an Allied escap route through German occupied Eu rope to discover old betrayals. Th route starts out with an ancient Belgia aristocrat whose daughter was mar tyred by the Germans and whose grand daughter is now the haughty and rich owner of a French château. A mur dered civil servant in the south o France turns up a helpful newspaper man and another dead civil servan brings the help of a senior policeman The search (and suspenseful it is, too leads from Paris to Nevers where an at tack is foiled by the rich chatelaine, an goes to the Spanish border, where th corrupt are out-witted by the pure Very orderly and what emotion ther is, is of the stiff-upper-lip sort.

The Nights of the Long Knives (Co ward. 1976. tr. by J. Maxwell Brown john. $8.95) by Hans Helmut KIRST i another echo of the past, and it is a rea winner, not too speedy but detailed an thorough. In Lugano, in Italian Switzer land, a German is found shot with a unusual weapon. His memoirs, hidde in a bank, reveal him to have been a unreconstructed Nazi, a dedicate charter member of the SS in a grou specially trained for murder, and un questioning obedience to higher author ity, in this case, a supremely siniste aristocrat, and ultimately to Hitler him self. The group is meticulously schooled in things such as pistol shoot ing, gymnastics, destroying evidence and advanced anti-Semitism. The atmos phere is redolent of the nauseatin smell of the period and the details are immaculate. The murder itself and its solution are little more than a peg to hang an expert re-creation of a fortunately dead period.

Our Man in Camelot (Doubleday. 1976. ISBN 0-385-12059-1. $5.95) by Anthony PRICE is a curious and rather fun mélange of modern spying and early British Arthurian legend. A couple employed by the CIA skillfully pick up an Englishman, a top man in British Intelligence with an interest in King Arthur, the bait being the secret of the location of Badon Hill, the site of the final battle between the Britons and the Anglo-Saxons. This involves a peculiar collection of spurious artifacts, of dubious documents, and of endless archaeological speculation, not to mention a bizarre shoot-out in a village graveyard. The reason for all this activity at last becomes clear and has little to do with King Arthur, but rather the more mundane motive of international politics. Perhaps a touch adolescent but none the worse for it.

Prison of Ice (Lippincott. 1976. $7.95) by David AXTON is hectic adventure in the frozen North. In order to alleviate a world-wide drought a group of scientists plan to blow up a huge chunk of Greenland and float it south. The technical problems are considerable: earthquake, tsunami, horrid weather, and a beautiful woman to stir things up. Disaster strikes, as was to be expected, and further excitement ensues when the group is marooned on an iceberg due to be blown up by a bomb. It would be useless to list all the hairbreadth escapes before the scientists are at long last rescued. If you like cataclysm adventure stories, this will do nicely, but I don't expect it to make too many converts.

Buyer Beware (Putnam. 1976. $6.95) by John LUTZ is not much fun. A man with a way with children and an ex-clown of television is now a private eye specializing in kidnapping children for quarreling parents. A man hires him to grab a child from its mother in Florida, but not only has the wife vanished, hidden by her powerful family, but her boyfriend turns up dead. The story becomes even more improbable when the trail goes from Chicago to Los Angeles and uncovers a rash of possible suicides tied with a highly artistic extortion scheme. The pace is plodding, the style fake fancy, and the plot unlikely.

The Bric-a-brac Man (Random. Nov. 1976. $7.95) by Russell H. GREENAN is so off-beat as to be shapeless. A feckless young man, a dishonest and unlucky smalltime Boston dealer in rubbishy antiques, finds himself entangled in a complicated bind. To extricate himself he takes to a series of unsuccessful cons and to rather better burglaries, culminating in a super-heist, a great break-in to a treasure of a private home. Along the way, the hero sells his soul to the devil, who collects rare printed tea towels; he may be a rich lunatic, who knows. Then things get out of control when one of the owners of the house is murdered and the solution, though inventive enough, is involved and unlikely. Ramshackle and packed with junk.

Peter LAKE, M.D. is a newcomer, and his novel, Leffert's Disease (Bobbs. Nov. 1976. ISBN 0-672-52265-9. $8.95), while not a success, is full of fascinating medical detail. A Park Avenue physician, venial, lazy, and incompetent, makes most of his living by murdering to order. His early training as an abortionist and his need for money make him a natural for a career of killing Arabs in a number of artistic, improbable but effective ways, imitating heart attacks, strokes, and the like. The autopsies are riveting, but the detection, by a rival quack assassin in the pay of the CIA, I think, is a good deal less effective, and the quality of the non-medical writing is not sterling. I am, however, quite prepared to believe in the two doctors, no doubt modeled from life.

Noel B. GERSON writes a lot, but ploddingly, as if he didn't like to. Special Agent (Dutton. 1976. LC 76-14776. ISBN 0-8415-0451-2. $7.95) is a lifeless, mechanical, and ineffective recruiting tract for the FBI. This one takes place in Connecticut in an FBI field office, apparently staffed by a bunch of bureaucratic megalomaniacs. They track down a stolen car ring to its source, a Latin connection, tediously and endlessly. The FBI, for all its faults, deserves a good deal better than this junk.

The Tripoli Documents (S & S. 1976. ISBN 0-671-22334-8. $7.95) is another

BARBARA MICHAELS
"has never been in better form"*

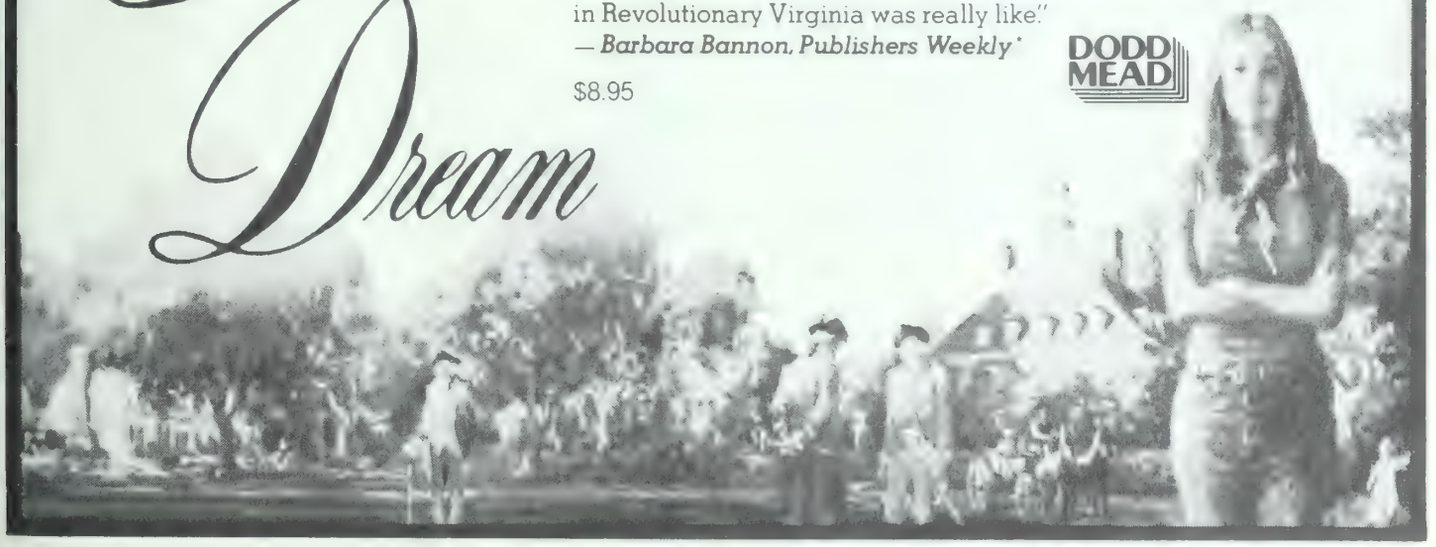
Patriot's Dream

Set both in today's Colonial Williamsburg and in the charming 18th-century village as it was during the Revolution, PATRIOT'S DREAM tells of a supernatural love between a modern young woman and a man who lived 200 years ago. This thrilling novel of suspense —and a love that reaches across time—is by the author of The Sea King's Daughter and House of Many Shadows.

"A very different and distinctly moving view of what life in Revolutionary Virginia was really like."
— Barbara Bannon, Publishers Weekly

$8.95

DODD MEAD



of Henry KANE's authentically vulgar and poorly written thrillers. In one corner is a Syrian–American bon vivant, an Arab agent and a paleontologist at Columbia as well as a professional murderer, especially of Jews, and his doxie, a Chinese-American lady-prostitute. In the other corner is an enormously rich Israeli American, enlisted by Israeli Intelligence to kill the opposition and his doxie, a beautiful and inventive sabra. The plot is to blackmail a rich and attractive drunkard, inadvertently married to his sister, and to blow up his boss, the Jewish Secretary of State. The story moves along at a gallop, as indeed it has to, to avoid some of the weirdest scenes I have ever read involving an unusual kink, much relished by its few practitioners, but laughable to most others.

Scandinavia is unusually well represented this month. The Terrorists (Random. Nov. 1976. tr. from the Swedish by Joan Tate. LC 76-9987. ISBN 0-394-48532-7. $7.95) is the last of the series of ten Swedish police procedurals by Maj SJÖWALL and Per WAHLÖO and, sadly, the last joint work because of the death of Wahlöo. As might be expected, it is perhaps their best. Martin Beck, the compassionate, intelligent head of the National Homicide Squad, is put in charge of security on the occasion of the visit of a distinguished American Senator considered in Sweden a reactionary toad. The main suspects are a group of mercenary terrorists of uncertain political orientation whose method of murder is an explosion of extraordinary severity. At the same time there are contrapuntal plots involving a gaumless but sweet young woman and bank robbery, as well as the murder in a Stockholm suburb of a director of porno movies. As before this is substantial fare, brilliantly twisty, as well as being a bilious but true view of inefficient, mendacious, and sometimes brutal authoritarianism in today's Sweden.

Nothing But the Truth (Pantheon. 1976. tr. from Danish by Kenneth Barclay. LC 76-9604. ISBN 0-394-49779-1. $7.95) by Poul ØRUM takes place in a Danish market town in the remote and suffocating provinces. A drunken stringer for a Copenhagen paper is murdered, and his body is found by the unstable and childlike wife of a jealous scion of an important local family gon into a decline. The investigation is b two Copenhagen policemen. The ac tion is sturdy and exceedingly slow, a though the plot is not without interes There are certain curious aspects to th story, especially puzzling insistence o class structure and class differences i Denmark, which seems to be more im portant than the solution of the murde To most foreigners these shades are to subtle and inappropriate to the occa sion.

An Unsuccessful Man (Harper. 197 ISBN 0-06-013211-9. $6.95) is anothe Scandinavian thriller, the first by To ben NIELSEN to appear in the Unite States, and I regret to say that it is not great addition to the genre. A youn man is found hanged in his bedroom dead without any warning, and th question is whether it is murder or su cide. Shortly afterwards a young girl, possible witness, is found murdere The investigation by the Danish polic is meticulous indeed, and becomes do ged in the parallel investigation of child molester. A carefully done polic procedural without much spark.– Henri C. Veit, Brooklyn P.L.

INDEX:

Academic who's who, 1975–1976, 2268
Ahern, D. D., 2274
Alexander, S., 2275
American Library Association, 2237
American personality, 2270
America's working women, 2276
Anderman, N., 2264
Arlen, M. J., 2263
Axton, D., 2305

Baer, J., 2287
Baron, H., 2264
Barron, N., 2264
Beattie, A., 2300
Beckett, J. C., 2276
Beetz, K. H., 2264
Bellamy, D., 2296
Bendiner, E., 2276
Berglund, B., 2294
Bernstein, A., 2297
Bin Gorion, M. J., 2294
Black, D. V., 2238
Böll, H., 2300
Bornstein, G., 2282
Bowen, L., 2290
Breach, I., 2296
Broderick, R. C., 2264
Bronk, W., 2285
Brown, C. S., 2264
Burrell, L. F., 2298
Burton, R., 2266
Business people in the news, 2266

Calabrese, A., 2287
Campbell, R., 2304
Capps, D., 2266
Carson, R. B., 2293
Castleman, H., 2284
Chalfont, A., 2271
Chase, E. T., 2298
Chew, P., 2288
Christian, J. I., 2291
Cline, W. R., 2274
Clissmann, A., 2282
Cloudsley Thompson, J., 2296
Cole, J., 2263
Colen, B. D., 2292
Cooke, M. G., 2282
Coppa, F. J., 2276
Creeley, R., 2286
Cummings, P., 2268
Cummins, C. L., 2293

David, A., 2282
Denton, C., 2300
Denton, J. A., 2271
DeRosis, H., 2288
Descargues, P., 2268
Dingman, R., 2276
Directory of European associations, Pt. 1, 2268
Directory of newspaper libraries in the U.S. and Canada, 2238
Dobler, B., 2301
Drummond, M., 2298
Duncan, D. D., 2271
Dygert, J. H., 2275

Edwards, R. M., 2237
Effinger, G. A., 2304
Elliott, L., 2266
Elsom, J., 2299

Felton, B., 2266
Fielding, K. J., 2282
Film literature index, 2266
Finnerty, E. W., 2298
Fisher, S., 2288
Fleming, J., 2304
Fodor, E., 2280
Foley, V., 2285
Fontane, T., 2301
Fox, M. W., 2288
Foxley, C. H., 2274
Franklin, J. H., 2276

Gallagher, D., 2294
Gass, W., 2282
George, W. R. P., 2271
Gerson, N. B., 2305
Getty, J. P., 2271
Gibbons, B., 2280
Gilsvik, B., 2298
Glabman, S., 2292
Goldenberg, I., 2301
Gorman, M., 2281
Gould, T., 2275
Graham, V. L., 2298
Greenan, R. H., 2305
Grogan, E., 2304
Guthrie, W., 2272

Hall, D., 2298
Hall, D. K., 2301
Handke, P., 2299
Hansen, B. J., 2281
Harris, L., 2302
Haseltine, F., 2292
Haughton, R., 2289
Heidegger, M., 2285
Heller, C., 2277
Henkin, H., 2298
Hill, P., 2302
Hoffman, P., 2297
Human (and anti-human) values in children's books, 2267

Iacone, S. J., 2298
Impey, O., 2270

Jaffe, I. B., 2269
Jemie, O., 2282
Jervis, R., 2286
Johannah, B., 2270
John, L., 2291
Johnson, C., 2277
Johnson, V. W., 2298
Johnson, W., 2283
Jones, F. P., 2292
Jones, P., 2275
Jorden, P. J., 2280
Jules-Verne, J., 2283
Justice, B., 2288

Kane, H., 2305
Katz, B., 2237
Kenrick, T., 2304
King, C. L., 2267
Kipnis, D., 2294
Kirst, H. H., 2304
Knapp, M., 2296
Komarovsky, M., 2288
Konecky, E., 2302
Koning, H., 2280
Kopperman, P. E., 2277
Körner, S., 2285
Kren, G. M., 2288
Kroetz, F. X., 2300
Krutetskii, V. A., 2289
Kucharsky, D., 2263
Kupferberg, H., 2284
Kuske, M., 2290

Lake, P., 2305
Lane, G., 2267
Lawson, S. F., 2277
Lebra, J., 2296
Leonard, J. E., 2299
Leonard, L., 2302
Levering, R. B., 2278
Lewis, R. S., 2291
Lidman, D., 2299
Lodge, H. C., 2272
Loebl, E., 2272
Luard, N., 2304
Lucas, J., 2296
Lutz, J., 2305

McCallum, J. D., 2299
McClure, J., 2304
McConathy, D., 2300
MacCormac, E. R., 2285
McCutchan, P., 2298
Macdonald, M., 2302
McElroy, C. J., 2286
Malkiel, Y., 2281
Manheim, J. B., 2287
Mann, G., 2272
Marx, G., 2300
Mayer, H., 2284
Mencken, H. L., 2263
Meyer, M. R., 2289
Millar, M., 2304
Mitchell, R., 2286
Montagu, J., 2284
Mount, E., 2238
Mundis, H., 2291
Munrow, D., 2284

Nelson, M. C., 2289
New Games Foundation, 2299
New Kobbe's complete opera book, 2268
Ney, R., 2302
Nielsen, T., 2306

Oates, J., 2296
Ørum, P., 2306
Osten, G., 2289

Pace, J. B., 2292
Palmer, C. A., 2278
Perez, L. A., 2268
Perkins, D. D., 2283
Petrovich, M. B., 2278
Pilpel, R. H., 2272
Planet we live on, 2268
Port, M. H., 2269
Posner, R. A., 2263
Potter, E. B., 2273
Price, A., 2305

Quarles, J. R., 2263

Randolph, V., 2296
Read, P. P., 2302
Reckoning with slavery, 2278
Reuben, D., 2281
Rhymer, P., 2300
Richardson, H. V., 2290
Robinson, L. W., 2302
Rodrigue, G., 2269
Roots, C., 2293
Ross-Macdonald, M., 2296
Rossmoore, H. W., 2291
Russell, L. M., 2290
Rykwert, J., 2297

Sachar, H. M., 2278
Salem, Ohio 1850 Women's Rights Convention proceedings, 2278
Scavullo, F., 2292
Schiff, G., 2269
Schoenbrun, D., 2273
Schrecker, E., 2281
Schulman, G., 2286
Seeing with a native eye, 2296
Segal, L., 2302
Segovia, A., 2273
Seton, E. T., 2293
Seymour, G., 2304
Shapiro, C., 2270
Shebl, J., 2283
Shepard, M., 2303
Sherr, L., 2280
Simmons, R. C., 2279
Sjöwall, M., 2306
Skellings, E., 2286
Snyder, L. L., 2287
Sparks, J., 2296
Standring, G., 2296
Stapleton, J., 2296
Steinberg, S., 2280
Steuding, B., 2284
Steward, J. T., 2297
Sumner, R., 2303
Swallow, J., 2292
Sypher, W., 2284

Tangye, D., 2292
Tart, C. T., 2289
Thomas, J. O., 2279
Treat, R., 2268
Trewin, F. C., 2284
Truesdale, C. W., 2286
Tu, W., 2273
Tyson, R., 2293

Ullyot, J., 2299

Verne, J., 2283

Waddy, C., 2290
Wagner, S., 2303
Wasserman, P., 2268
Watters, P., 2288
Weber, S., 2299
Weinstein, F. B., 2287
Williams, L. E., 2279
Wilson, D., 2279
Wilson, S., 2276
Women see woman, 22
Wood, N., 2303
Woods, W., 2279
Woolf, V., 2274
Worden, J. W., 2289

Yearbook of special education, 1976–77, 2268
Yglesias, R., 2303

Coin of the Realm.

Bowker publishes good money books.
They tell students, scholars, teachers what to look for and where to look.

They cover what has to be covered in a comprehensive, accessible fashion.

They help librarians, officials and executives answer business questions.

COMMODITY FUTURES TRADING
A Bibliographic Guide
By James B. Woy

Defines Action and Reaction Theory, Elliott Wave Principle, Hog-Corn Ratio, Oscillator Method, Soybean Meal Spread and more than a hundred other mechanisms, methods and procedures. After each term the most important textbooks, books and magazine articles which discuss the subject are excerpted and/or annotated. Includes a comprehensive bibliography of all books mentioned...a list of the important government reports and periodicals...author and subject indexes.
ISBN 0-8352-0899-0. CIP. September, 1976. c. 210 pages. $15.75.

FINANCIAL MARKET PLACE
Compiled and edited by Dr. Steven Goodman in association with the Reference Development Corporation.

Lists and provides basic data on thousands of firms and individuals operating in 55 distinct areas of the financial world. Includes coverage of banks, brokers, insurance companies, venture capital firms, commodity dealers, financial publications, university programs in finance and business, financial writers, and much more. "The coverage is wider and more up-to-date than any other single publication." –Choice.
ISBN 0-8352-0545-2. LC 72-1736. CIP. 1972. 363 pages. $19.95.

INVESTMENT METHODS
A Bibliographic Guide
By James B. Woy

Investment Methods defines 150 investment strategies and techniques. Following these definitions lists of relevant publications have been included. The book includes a periodicals section utilizing the same subject arrangement and author, title and subject indexes. "Excellent." –Wilson Library Bulletin.
ISBN 0-8352-0631-9. LC 73-9607. CIP. 1973. 220 pages. $12.50.

THE ECONOMIC REGULATION OF BUSINESS AND INDUSTRY
A Legislative History of U.S. Regulatory Agencies
Edited by Professor Bernard Schwartz
Published in association with Chelsea House Publishers.

An unprecedented documentary history of the nine most powerful regulatory agencies, including the SEC, NLRB, ICC, FTC, CAB. Twenty-six expert commentaries by the editor preface key documents. Includes a 157-page fact-and-concept index. "Impressive...well-edited...ready-access." –Reference Services Review.
ISBN 0-8352-0694-7. LC 73-14862. CIP. 1973. 3,772 pages. $165.00 the 5-vol. set.

BOWKER
NEW YORK & LONDON

(Order from:) R.R. BOWKER ORDER DEPT., P.O. Box 1807, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48106.
Outside Western Hemisphere: Bowker, Erasmus House, Epping, Essex, England.
All orders plus shipping and handling. Sales tax added where applicable.
Prices subject to change and slightly higher outside the U.S. and its possessions.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

All advertisements for the Positions Open and the Positions Wanted classifications will be edited to exclude direct or indirect references to race, creed, color, age, and sex as conditions of employment. Positions open and positions wanted, $1.70 per line, minimum charge, $5.10, all other types of ads, $2.60 per line, minimum charge $7.80. If vouches forms are required for billing, please send them at the time advertisements are submitted for insertion. Copy for ads and requests for cancellations must be received at the LJ office 45 days preceding date of issue. Write: Classified Advertising Department, Library Journal, 1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York, New York 10036.

OUT-OF-PRINT

EXCLUSIVE WANT LISTS get prompt attention, wide search, reasonable prices, from International Bookfinders, Inc., Box 1-LJ, Pacific Palisades, Calif. 90272.

COLONIAL "out-of-print" Book Service, Inc. Want Lists invited, 23 E. 4th St., New York City 10003.

EXCLUSIVE WANT LISTS advertised & searched plus 150,000 vol. indexed stock. PAB 2917 Atlantic, Atlantic City, NJ 08401.

BUILDING SPECIAL COLLECTIONS is one of our specialties. Foreign books and periodicals, current and out-of-print. Albert J. Phiebig Inc., Box 352, White Plains, N.Y. 10602.

WE FIND BOOKS. Free International Search. Exclusive want lists invited. Realistic prices. Eva Davis Books. 108 Prince Charles, Williamsburg, VA 23185.

OUT OF PRINT books located. Send in title, author to: Free Search Service, Dept. LJ, 41 Union Square West, New York, NY 10003.

OP BOOKS in literature; social sciences, humanities. EGLI; Lamont; BCL, etc. Book Lande, 8926 National Blvd., Los Angeles, CA 90034.

MAGAZINES—BACK NUMBER

INTERNATIONAL UNIVERSITY Booksellers, Inc., 101 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10003. We buy: Would like to hear of periodical backfiles of scholarly significance, individual titles or entire collections, surplus to your present needs. We sell: We carry one of the most comprehensive inventories of periodicals in all fields and langauges and are a major supplier to academic libraries in all parts of the world. Call or write Mr. Becker.

BACK ISSUE MAGAZINES, general, scholarly, technical. Designed to serve high school and jr. college libraries. Please send want lists to Back Issues West; P.O. Box 6688, Tucson, Arizona 85716.

BUY, TRADE, SELL National Geographic Magzines & related material. Box 30045, Denver, CO 80230.

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC Magazine: (1888-1976) Any issue from 1910. (Fine cond.) Reasonable. Price list furn. Don Smith, 3830 Rankin St., Louisville, KY 40214.

LACKING ISSUES. Subscribers to journals listed in Science Citation Index have a good chance of immediately locating lacking issues for years 1970-1975 with the Replacement Serials Section of M.S.I., the worldwide back-issue house. Please address your queries to Maxwell Scientific International (now a Pergamon Press, Inc. division), Fairview Park, Elmsford, New York 10523.

OVER 2,000,000 backdate magazines. Send want lists. Magazine Center, Room 406, 145 West 29th, New York, NY 10001.

MICROFORMS

MICROFORMS. Good second-hand microfilm of periodicals of established micropublishers bought and sold. Write or call Microforms International Marketing Company, Fairview Park, Elmsford, New York 10523. (914) 592-9141.

SERVICES—PERSONNEL

THERESA M. BURKE Employment Agency, 8 West 40th St., N.Y., N.Y. 10018. Specializing in the recruitment of library and information personnel for special, academic, and public libraries.

FOR SALE

CHEMICAL ABSTRACTS: v. 1-84 (1907-February 9, 1976). First four decennial indexes. Volumes bound through 1971. Condition excellent. All offers considered. Deadline December 31, 1976. Write: Serials Department, North Dakota State University Library, Fargo, North Dakota 58102.

N.Y. TIMES BOOK REVIEW, 1896-195(Arno Press. 97 vols. plus 5 vol. index. Exce lent condit. Submit reasonable offer. Han von Brockdorff; Librarian, Fernald Library Colby-Sawyer College, New London, NI 03257.

1970 BOOKMOBILE, 32' x 95⅞' x 11'2 Body by Gerstenslager, chassis by Chevr(let. Excellent condition at 40,000 miles. N(gotiable. Write: Donald F. Fought, Id Rupp Public Library, Port Clinton, O 43452. Phone (419) 732-3212.

WANTED TO BUY

WANTED: Ayer's Directory of U.S. publ cations, magazine reference books. Giv price. Genschow, Suite 1101, 175 Fift Ave., New York, N.Y. 10010.

WANTED: Used, reasonably priced, 1 drawer oak card catalog, with base, t match existing unit 33" by 17" by 18" high Base 26" high. Write: Librarian, Worceste Historical Society, 39 Salisbury St., Worce ter, MA 01608.

SPECIAL NOTICES

UNIVERSITY of Texas at Austin Human ties Research Center publications are n longer being distributed by the University o Texas Press and should be ordered directl from the Humanities Research Center, Uni versity of Texas at Austin, Austin, Texa 78712.

POSITIONS WANTED

RECENT M.S.L.S. graduate from Ship pensburg State College, B.S. in Bus. Ad. seeking beginning-level position in any typ of library. Will relocate. S. G. Uldin, 16 Colgate Ave., Johnstown, PA 15905.

CATALOGER: B.A., M.A., M.S.L.S (Long Island Univ.) can work and relocat immediately. Chinese native language. Seek ing entry level work. Résumé from: Mr. C K. Cheng, 29 Moore St., Apt. 16P, Brook lyn, NY 11206.

FRENCH LIBRARIANS seek temporar positions in an American library. For de tails, write to: Mr. and Mrs. Finelli, 26 Ru Norvins, 75018 Paris, France.

POSITIONS OPEN—NORTHEAST

SSISTANT PROFESSORS (2). Two fac-ty positions at the assistant professor vel to begin in September 1977. Applica-ons are sought from candidates with M.L.S. id earned Doctorate as well as successful aching experience and interest in research. eaching competency is sought in the areas bibliography, reference service, collection velopment, technical services, library ad-inistration, systems analysis, and research ethods. Minimum salary approximately 4,500. For academic year appointment. quire with résumé and list of references : Dean Thomas H. Mott, Jr., Graduate hool of Library Service, Rutgers The State niversity of New Jersey, New Brunswick, J. 08903. An equal opportunity/affirmative tion employer.

IRECTOR of Library User Services, Ver-ont Department of Libraries. Responsible r direction of one of three major divisions the department. Division has a staff of 20 id includes these units: reference services, w and documents, technical processing, id audio-visual services. Also coordinates e statewide interlibrary loan and reference twork involving all types of libraries. Re-uires an M.L.S. degree from an accredited brary school and four years of appropriate brary experience, including at least one ar of administrative experience. Salary nge $13,078-$19,058. For applications rite to: Department of Personnel, 110 State reet, Montpelier, Vermont 05602. Closing te for applications November 15, 1976.

EAD OF TECHNICAL SERVICES. anages technical services department with staff of 20 including acquisitions, catalog-g, periodicals, and government documents 260,000 volume library. Develops proce-res for monitoring $240,000 acquisitions dget. Student body of 5,900. New library 1977. Campus adjacent to Adirondacks on ake Champlain, one hour south of Montre-. M.L.S. and 3 years' minimum experience management of technical services in an ac-demic library required. Advanced study id OCLC familiarity desirable. Twelve onth salary negotiable, $16,000 and up. IAA/CREF, 21 working days vacation, edical and dental plans, and faculty status. osition open January 1, 1977. Send ré-mé, credentials, and three references by ovember 15, 1976 to: Mr. Robert Burton, irector, Feinberg Library, Box 2300, State niversity of New York, Plattsburgh, NY 2901. An equal opportunity/affirmative ac-on employer.

PEN JAN. 1, 1977—Director for small li-ary in a new building (population under 0,000). Must have NJ State Librarian's Cer-ficate and at least two years' experience in dministration. Beginning salary $9,000. end résumé to: Director, Public Library, 08 Station Ave., Haddon Heights NJ 8035.

IEAD LIBRARIAN, City of Chicopee, ust be a college graduate with a degree and 1.L.S. degree from an ALA accredited col-ge; qualify for a certificate of professional brarianship issued by the Massachusetts oard of Library Commissioners; have 3 to years' professional experience including ome supervision in a public library system f between 40,000 to 60,000 population. Sal-ry is negotiable. Send applications and full ésumé to: Mrs. Frank Lengieza, Chairman, oard of Library Trustees, 91 Haven Ave-ue, Chicopee, MA 01013.

POSITION OPEN: January 1, 1977. Library Director; over-all responsibility for a village public library serving 10,300; duties include supervision and scheduling of supportive staff; offering direct public service as needed; budget preparation and administration; community public relations work; coordination of a new building project; collection building and maintenance. M.L.S. degree required. Send résumé to Darwin R. Barker Library, 20 East Main Street, Fredonia, New York 14063.

ASSOCIATE DIRECTOR: Acceptable experience and training: A Master's in library science from ALA accredited school. Ten years of diversified experience with a minimum of five years as a top level administrator; preference for demonstrated ability and experience in personnel and finance work. Salary: $19,883-$21,617. The Cambridge Public Library is an affirmative action, equal opportunity employer. Send résumé together with three current references to: Mr. Joseph G. Sakey, Director, Cambridge Public Library, 449 Broadway, Camridge, MA 02138.

DIRECTOR of Abington Public Libraries, Abington, MA Requires: M.L.S. degree (ALA) and 3 years public library administrative experience with strengths in re-cataloging, re-organization and collection development. Salary: $10,000-$11,500 with usual fringe benefits. Growing town of 13,000 with 2 public libraries located 20 miles southwest of Boston. Send letter of application, résumé, and statement of library philosophy by Oct. 29, 1976 to: Burton L. Wales, Chairperson, Abington Public Libraries, 33 Randolph St., Abington, MA 02351.

LIBRARY EDUCATORS: The School of Library Service, Columbia University has three faculty openings for the 1977-78 academic year. Requirements: M.L.S. plus doctorate; library and teaching experience. Specialties needed: library automation and information science, technical services, general reference and science bibliography. Teaching load: three courses per semester. Rank: assistant professor. Salary: minimum $14,000; additonal compensation for summer session. TIAA-CREF and Blue Cross-Blue Shield fully paid by university; major medical. Send vita to: Richard L. Darling, Dean, School of Library Service, Columbia University, New York, N.Y. 10027. Columbia University is a non-discriminatory, affirmative action employer.

POSITIONS OPEN—MIDWEST

NORTHWESTERN UNIVERSITY Library. Assistant Science Librarian (Reannouncement). Will acquire knowledge of automated technical services of the main university library as they relate to the science libraries (astronomy, biology, geology, mathematics) and will train and supervise support staff in these functions; will also have a reference assignment. This position will become one of the merged staff of the biology, astronomy, and technolocial institute libraries with the opening of a new science/engineering library building in the summer of 1977. Master's degree from accredited library school required and academic background in the sciences preferred. Some working experience in technical services desirable. Hiring range: $10,200-$10,700. Applications extended through December 3, 1976. Apply: Robert L. Ireland, Personnel Officer, Northwestern University Library, Evanston, Illinois 60201. An equal opportunity employer.

TWO MANAGEMENT LIBRARIAN Positions, Milwaukee Public Library. (1) Coordinator, General Materials and Service. Outstanding opportunity for an experienced professional librarian. Duties will involve selection, development, maintenance, and organization of all non-book materials in original and micro form such as serials, government documents, clippings, maps, encyclopedias etc. Will also operate catalog information, periodical, readers assistance and ready reference areas and supervise a staff of ten. Prepare and present studies to administrative staff and meet with various interested cultural, professional, and community groups. Position requires Master's degree in library science, at least seven years' librarian experience, (some non-book), three of which shall have been in a public library system. Good supervisory, administrative and management skills are necessary. Starting salary is $18,500. (2) Business Information Services. Opportunity for experienced librarian to coordinate and direct library programs and services being utilized by the community's business, industry, agencies and organizations. Responsibilities include development of programs corresponding to the needs of the business community, coordinating staff activities and preparation and presentation of related studies and reports. Position requires a Master's degree in library science, plus five years of librarian experience (3 of which shall have been in a public or special library in the field of business). Good management, organizational and administrative skills are required plus an understanding of how a library can effectively serve the needs of the business community. Starting salary range is $16,000-$17,000. For an application for either of these positions, please contact: Personnel Department, Room 706, City Hall, 200 E. Wells Street, Milwaukee, WI 53202 no later than November 22, or call (414) 278-3371. An equal opportunity employer.

NORTHWESTERN UNIVERSITY Library: Assistant undergraduate services librarian: Participates in collection development, supervisory, and outreach activities of the undergraduate services department, which consists of the core collection, reserve room and poetry/listening facility. Staff includes 2.5 FTE librarians and 6.5 clerical employees. Requirements: M.L.S. from accredited library school; academic background in social sciences or humanities preferred: some professional experience, including supervisory background, required; public services experience highly desirable. Salary: $10,200-$11,200 (depending on qualifications). Send résumé by Nov. 15 to: Robert Ireland, Northwestern University Library, Evanston, IL 60201. An equal opportunity employer.

LIBRARY SCIENCE-Professor: Senior level position beginning Aug. 1977 for book selection, bibl. of the humanities, and one of the following: research methods, tech. proc., cataloging. Qualifications: M.L.S. from ALA accredited school, doctorate in Librarianship preferred; Ph.D. in humanities will be considered; tchg. experience at ALA accredited school; pub. lib. experience in selection and reference preferred; college, univ. or spec. humanities lib. experience acceptable; appropriate publication record. Salary dependent upon qualifications. Affirmative action, equal opportunity employer. Closing date for applications, Feb. 15, 1977. Send letter of application and résumé to: Lewis F. Stieg, Chairperson, Dept. of Lib. Sci., Northern Ill. Univ., DeKalb, IL 60115.

POSITIONS OPEN—MIDWEST

CENTRAL MICHIGAN University is seeking a librarian to serve graduate and undergraduate students in external degree, nontraditional programs in Ohio from their Dayton facility. Requires an M.L.S. from an ALA accredited library school, a willingness to work a flexible schedule, and enthusiasm for non-traditional approaches to education. Position entails starting and maintaining a small business library. Public service experience in an academic library and administrative capabilities desirable. Salary for 12 month appointment is $10,600 or more depending on qualifications; 1 month vacation, TIAA-CREF. Apply by November 30 to: Leslie Kane, Park Library, Central Michigan University, Mt. Pleasant, MI 48859. Central Michigan University is an equal opportunity affirmative action employer.

ASSISTANT DIRECTOR of university libraries for information services to develop and manage service programs in the following units: circulation, curriculum resources center, documents, interlibrary loan and duplications, periodical and reserve, and reference/bibliography. Staff of 11 professionals and 28 supportive staff. May be responsible for development of media services in the new main library (to be completed fall 1977). Qualifications: graduate degree from a library school, minimum of 5-8 years' public service experience in an academic library, with at least 2 years in an administrative position. Ability to relate well with a highly diversified staff and university community. Salary commensurate with qualifications, minimum $18,000. Available: January 1, 1977. Application deadline: November 15, 1976. Apply to: Ms. Elaine Bitting, Chairperson, Assistant Director Search Committee, Main Library-Room 510, University of Cincinnati, Cincinnati, OH 45221.

ASSOCIATE DIRECTOR for Public Services: Responsible for organizing, planning, directing and coordinating the policies and procedures governing the public services consisting of 14 main library subject departments, loan bureau, 26 branches, 3 bookmobiles, a vigorous service to retirees and shutins (includes institutions) and an aggressive information referral service. Participates in the overall program and budget planning for the library. Together with the associate directors for personnel and support services helps plan for development and utilization of staff; acquisition and organization of materials; recommendations of equipment, building changes and the overall maintenance of high standards of service. Requirements: Master's degree in library science, extensive and appropriate library experience at the supervisory level, thorough knowledge of overall administrative procedure, experience in public service and demonstrated ability to develop programs and community contacts. Salary: $26,700-$27,800. Contact: Clara S. Jones, Director, Detroit Public Library, 5201 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Michigan 48202. Application deadline is December 1, 1976.

ADULT SERVICES Librarian: Position open December 1, 1976. Accredited M.L.S. required; experience in collection-building, reference and program coordination preferred. Group insurance paid, 4 weeks vacation, PERF, other usual benefits. Salary open: $10,000 minimum-$14,000 maximum. Contact: Mr. Joel Robinson, Director Westchester Public Library, P.O. Box 909, Chesterton, IN 46304. (219) 926-7696.

LIBRARY MEDIA Specialist: To supervise all services in conjunction with inventory, distribution and maintenance of campus audio-visual equipment within the administrative framework of the library program. Plan and coordinate production of graphic, video and photographic learning resources. Requires an M.A. degree and experience in an appropriate field. This is an academic staff appointment at about $9,600 for an academic year. Send application, personal résumé and letters of reference to: Chairman, Appointments Committee, University of Wisconsin Center, 1500 University Drive, Waukesha, Wisconsin 53186. The UW Center System is an equal opportunity employer and actively seeks applications from all qualified persons, regardless of sex, race, color, creed, age or national origin.

REFERENCE LIBRARIAN: Will serve as social science librarian with specialization in sociology, psychology, or ethnic studies. Responsibilities include subject area liaison with these departments as well as general reference assistance. Should have knowledge on use of machine readable data bases or willingness to learn same. Will be expected to teach one section of library instruction course. Requirements: M.L.S. from ALA accredited school; Master's degree in sociology, psychology or ethnic studies. At least two years of reference experience desirable. Benefits: Salary of $10,500-$11,500; state retirement participation; insurance coverage; and other fringes. Applications should be received by November 20, 1976. An equal opportunity employer. Send résumé and references to: Melville Spence, Director of Libraries, Bowling Green State University Libraries, Bowling Green, Ohio 43403.

LIBRARY SCIENCE Faculty. Library Science Department is seeking applicants for faculty vacancy effective March 7, 1977. Must have specialty in special librarianship such as health science, medical, etc., with competency for teaching basic courses in library science. Master in library science and doctorate in library science or subject field is required. Must have experience in a special library and teaching experience at college or university level with ability to do research. Send résumé to: Dr. Marina E. Axeen, Chairperson, Department of Library Science, Ball State University, Muncie, IN 47306. Applications requested by January 3, 1977. Ball State University practices equal opportunity in education and employment.

REFERENCE LIBRARIAN: Provides reference services; acts as liaison with English and related depts. ALA accredited M.L.S. and one year professional experience required. Second Master's in appropriate subject area and college or university library experience preferred. Salary $11,000 plus. Faculty rank. Apply by Nov. 30, 1976 to: Chairperson, Advisory Reference Search Committee, Room 126, Wright State University Library, Dayton, OH 45431. Affirmative action/equal opportunity employer.

CHILDREN'S CONSULTANT for the Mideastern Ohio Library Organization. Responsible for planning, recommending and implementing a program for the development of children's services in the area including staff development and field work with MOLO member libraries. Applicants must have M.L.S. from ALA accredited library school plus experience in children's services. Salary: $10,000. Position available: January 1, 1977. Apply to: Susan K. Schmidt, Director, Mideastern Ohio Library Organization, 205 East Main Street, Louisville, Ohio 44641. Deadline: November 19, 1976.

ENTHUSIASTIC, flexible person able t create, organize, and direct varied service in 5 county multitype library cooperative i beautiful east central Indiana. M.L.S. 6 yr administrative experience. Salary $12,50 $14,500 and mileage. Apply by Nov. 15 t Walter Gronning, Pres., Whitewater Valle Area Library Services Authority, 151 Grand Ave., Connersville, IN 47331.

POSITIONS OPEN—SOUTHEAST

LIBRARIAN. New Leitchfield, Kentuck Library beginning the process of selecting head librarian for immediate employmen We offer secure position; salary com mensurate with qualifications. Ideal can didate needs minimum of B.S. degree in l brary science; experience; self-motivate youthful personality with desire and abilit to help create successful new facility. Fo immediate consideration, send résumé an requirements to Mr. Victor Young, Chai person Board of Trustees, P.O. Box 31 Leitchfield, Kentucky 42754.

NORTH CAROLINA: The University North Carolina at Greensboro is seekin candidates for the position of assistant refe ence librarian: M.L.S. from ALA accredite program and at least two years' academic l brary experience required. Candidates mu have a broad educational background and b able to participate not only in reference ser ice but also collection development and l brary instruction. Knowledge of foreign lan guages desirable. Salary $11,000 and up de pending on experience. Faculty statu Twelve month appointment. Liberal retir ment, insurance, and vacation benefit Send résumé to: James Thompson, Librar Director, University of North Carolina Greensboro, Greensboro, NC 27412. Deac line for applications: November 22, 197 An affirmative action equal opportunity em ployer.

CHILDREN'S LIBRARIAN. ALA accre ited M.L.S. Desired: Two years professio al library experience; supervisory abilit Available January, 1977; deadline for r sumés and references November 20, 197 $9,744-$10,680. Write: Sue E. Darden, D rector, Stanly County Public Library, 133 E Main Street, Albemarle, NC 28001.

GEORGIA. Assistant Head, Catalog De partment. Responsibility for cataloging serials (including periodicals) and volume being added to the collection; supervision the serials unit in the department, involvin preparation and upkeep of serial unit man uals, planning of new procedures and formu lation of standards of cataloging quantit and quality as well as revision, training an supervision of professionals and pre-profes sionals. Serves as chief administrative office in the absence of the department head Graduate degree from ALA-accredite school; ability to catalog in both romanc and Germanic languages; three years' cata loging experience with at least one year i cataloging serials; familiarity with OCLC de sirable. 40 hour work week, one month va cation, two weeks' sick leave, state teacher retirement, social security, group life an health insurance, optional disability insu ance, faculty rank (12-month appointment Salary $13,000-$14,000 depending on exper ence and qualifications. Apply to: Caroly Robison, Associate University Librarian William Russell Pullen Library, 104 Decatu Street, S.E., Atlanta, GA 30303. An equa opportunity, affirmative action employer.

BRARY DIRECTOR: City of Suffolk, rginia. M.S. in library science from ALA credited school required. Experience in y or county library preferred. Salary com- nsurate with experience. Present salary ge $13,128-$17,150. Send résumé to: bert E. Taylor, Department of Personnel l Budget, P.O. Box 1858, Suffolk, VA 434.

POSITIONS OPEN—WEST

EAD CATALOGER: Responsible for the ministration of the section, and the super- ion of eleven professional and clerical em- oyees who annually process over 20,000 lumes using LC classification and subject adings. Requires ALA accredited gradu- degree, a second Master's in a subject a or equivalent academic or professional hievement, at least six years of profession- library experience including three years in ademic cataloging and three years of ad- nistrative experience, and a working owledge of two foreign languages. An un- rstanding of library data processing is de- ed. Position open January 1, 1977. Salary: 7,304-$20,856. Affirmative action, equal portunity, Title IX employer. All quali- d persons are encouraged to apply with ré- mé. Contact: Norman D. Alexander, Di- tor, University Library, California Poly- hnic State University, San Luis Obispo, A 93407. Applications accepted through cember 1, 1976.

WO POSITIONS. (1) Cataloger: Catalog onographs relating to Africa and Western rope. Academic background in modern ropean history and political science. Ex- rience in original cataloging with LC assification in academic or research library this field. Reading competence in German d French required, other modern Euro- an languages desirable. (2) Reference li- arian: Reference service to research schol- s, university students and faculty. Aca- mic background in modern history and olitical science. Professional reference ex- rience in academic or research library. Ex- rience in other readers' services also ught. Reading competence in German and ench required, other modern European nguages desirable. Both positions require LA accredited M.L.S. Salary depends on alifications. Send résumé to: Mrs. Arline aul, Assistant Director for Western Lan- age Library Operations, Hoover Institu- n, Stanford, CA 94305.

EFERENCE LIBRARIAN. The Universi- of Northern Colorado Libraries are seek- g candidates for the position of business d economics reference librarian. Require- ents: M.L.S. from an ALA accredited li- ary school; graduate degree in business or conomics; 2 or more years professional ex- rience. Faculty rank and status; salary 11,250 minimum; twelve month contract; 0 days vacation, and usual fringe benefits. osition will be vacant December 15, 1976. o applications will be accepted after De- mber 1, 1976. UNC is an equal opportu- ty affirmative action employer. Apply to: r. Oren W. Sprague, Research and Devel- pment Officer, The James A. Michener Li- rary, University of Northern Colorado, reeley, CO 80639.

PRINCIPAL LIBRARIAN, $1,384-$1,682. Riverside City & County Public Library has an opening for head of technical services. Requires M.L.S. and 5 years recent increasingly responsible supervisory & administrative experience in a public library, including experience in technical services and some knowledge of current technical advances in library services. Oral exams will be held Nov. 29. Apply by Nov. 15, 1976. Apply to: City of Riverside Personnel Dept., 3900 Main Street. Riverside, CA 92501. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer m/f.

HEAD OF REFERENCE Services: Overall administration of reference services in a large academic system. Besides general administration of the reference department, duties include coordination of reference services and book selection, and development of programs of instruction in use of library resources. Applicants must have a Master's degree from an ALA accredited library school, and should have strong subject background, with a subject Master's or Doctorate highly desirable. At least five years of reference experience in a large academic library are required, including at least two years as a successful administrator/supervisor. Minimum salary: $16,000, but commensurate with qualifications and experience. Ability to work with others is vital. Submit résumé and letter of application briefly stating your philosophy of academic reference service by January 15, 1977 to: Renee Evans, University of Southern California Library, Librarian's Office, University Park, Los Angeles, CA 90007.

HEAD OF COLLEGE Library: Overall administration of the college library in a large academic library system. Besides general administration of the college library, duties include undergraduate orientation and instruction in library use, and development/maintenance of active collections of reserve materials, exams, college and university catalogs, spoken word records and tapes, and women's information center. Applicants must have a Master's Degree from an ALA accredited library school, and at least three years of relevant experience. Must relate well to undergraduate students. Experience in instruction in library use is desirable. Minimum Salary: $12,000, but commensurate with qualifications and experience. Submit résumé and letter of application briefly stating your philosophy of library service to undergraduates by January 15, 1977 to: Renee Evans, University of Southern California Library, Librarian's Office, University Park, Los Angeles, CA 90007.

CATALOGER. Original cataloging of monographs and serials, print and non-print materials, in a department of four (4) professionals and twelve (12) support staff processing 22,000 volumes per year. Requires graduate degree, plus a subject master's or a commitment to obtain one. Prefer at least 3 years' successful cataloging, including serials and LC classification. Experience with automation, working knowledge of foreign language highly desirable. Appointment as senior assistant librarian ($1,120-$1,511), or as assistant librarian ($963-$1,327), depending on qualifications and experience; 12-month or 10-month appointment optional; 21 working days of vacation; 12 days of sick leave. Interviews on campus required of finalists at their expense. Deadline for application is November 15, 1976. Apply with résumé to: Harold F. Wells. Director of the University Library, California State Polytechnic University, Pomona, CA 91768. An equal opportunity, affirmative action employer.

HEAD LIBRARIAN: Graduate Theological Union, Berkeley, Calif. Responsibilities for staffing, policy formulation, relations with member schools of the union and with the Library of the University of California at Berkeley. Familiarity with theological and philosophical literature essential. Theological background and graduate degree in library science normally expected. Applicant should be committed to cooperate with other libraries and be interested in new technology. Send application and résumé before December 1, 1976 to: Librarian Search Committee: Graduate Theological Union, 2465 Le Conte Ave., Berkeley, CA 94709. Appointment to be announced July 1977. Equal opportunity and affirmative action employer.

POSITIONS OPEN—NORTHWEST

CATALOGING LIBRARIAN. Responsible for cataloging new books, microforms, audio-visual materials. We offer: assistant professor rank, $13,200 for 12 months; excellent fringe benefits. New, modern library building now under construction. Requirements: 5th year ALA-accredited library science degree and three years of recent academic cataloging experience with LC classification. Send vita, transcripts, and at least three references (instructors and at least one supervisor) to: Eli M. Oboler, University Librarian, Idaho State University Library, Pocatello, ID 83209, to reach him by December 1, 1976. Position now open. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

AUDIO-VISUAL LIBRARIAN. Media-oriented librarian wanted for administration of A-V department of medium-sized university library. We offer $14,000-$15,000 for 12-month (24 days vacation), assistant professor rank, exceptionally good fringe benefits. Moving from 4,000 to 14,000 square feet in new library building in the fall of 1977. Requirements: 5th year, ALA-accredited degree plus media-training emphasis plus three or more years of relevant supervisory experience in multi-media situations. Applications accepted until December 1st. Send vita, transcripts, and reference letters to: Eli M. Oboler, University Librarian, Idaho State University, Pocatello, ID 83209. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

CATALOG LIBRARIAN. Eastern Washington State College seeks a librarian who is prepared to do original cataloging. Includes support of clerk typist. Candidate must possess: M.L.S. degree from an accredited library school; a reading knowledge of at least one of the following: French, German, Russian or Spanish; and successful completion of at least one course in LC classification. Faculty status and benefits, minimum salary $11,280 per year. Affirmative action/equal opportunity employer. Send résumé to: College Librarian, Eastern Washington State College, Cheney, WA 99004.

POSITIONS OPEN—SOUTHWEST

TULSA CITY-COUNTY LIBRARY System. Assistant director. Primary responsibility for public services. Twenty branches, two bookmobiles. Good administrator, willing to try new ideas and to work with participative management approach. Requires M.L.S. and responsible experience at a public library. Salary range $17,500-$22,000. Send résumé to: Jan Keene, 400 Civic Center, Tulsa, OK 74103.

POSITIONS OPEN—SOUTHWEST

PHYSICAL SCIENCES Reference Librarian. Provide reference service, assist in book selection, supervise circulation services, serve on Library committees. Successful candidate is offered opportunity to work toward advanced degrees. Required: Master's degree from ALA accredited library school. Second Master's in sciences desirable. Aptitude for supervision and administration. Health and accident insurance; free life insurance. TIAA and state retirement plan. Faculty rank, 40 hour week, one month vacation. Salary: $9,600 minimum. Send résumé and three references to: Norris K. Maxwell, Assistant Librarian, Oklahoma State University, Stillwater, OK 74074. An affirmative action/equal opportunity employer.

CIRCULATION LIBRARIAN (Librarian II or III). Position to be filled as soon as possible. As a department head this person will be responsible to the university librarian for all operations and staff in circulation department. ALA accredited M.L.S. degree, minimum 3 years' professional experience, experience in automated circulation work desirable. Liberal benefits. 40 hour work week. Salary open, commensurate with experience and qualifications. Contact: Joe L. Cook, Search Committee Chairperson, TCU Library, Texas Christian University, Fort Worth, TX 76129. Equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

HEAD LIBRARIAN: University of Houston—Downtown college. Doctorate in Library Science. A minimum of five years' experience in library administration, preferably in a total learning resources center situation. Knowledge of and experience with all phases of library operation including automation applications and in collection development necessary. Must possess ability to organize, direct, and coordinate work of professional staff. Expertise in a general academic field required, as assignment also includes teaching responsibilities. Salary is $20,000-$22,000 for 12 months. Send vitas to: University of Houston—Downtown College, One Main Plaza—Room 328, Houston, Texas 77002. Position available on or about January 1, 1977. The University of Houston—Downtown College is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

LIBRARY DIRECTOR. Scott-Sebastian Regional Library, P.O. Box 400, North Adair at Atlanta, Greenwood AR 72936. Librarian for this two county public library serving a population of 27,000, annual budget of $46,000, one branch and several small rural deposits. Library has a staff of five, 54,000 volumes and an annual circulation of 93,000. Responsible for all library functions and carrying out the policies of the library board. M.L.S. from an ALA accredited library school is desirable; school library certification with two years administrative experience may be acceptable; public library experience preferred. Salary $9,600 per year with Social Security, state retirement and major medical Blue Cross/Blue Shield. Starting date: FEB. 1, 1977. Submit résumé by December 10, 1976 to: Means Wilkinson, Chairperson, Board of Trustees, in care of the library, address above.

INDEX TO ADVERTISERS

Academic Press 2245
Acropolis Books 2256
Aero Publishers 2292
Aviation Book Co. 2221

BIOSIS 2248
R. R. Bowker Co. 2215, 2218, 2220, 2236, 2307
Boyd Co. 2261
Robert J. Brady Co. 2261
George W. Bricker 2260
Brodart 2210, 2211

California State College 2276
Cambridge University Press 2252
Checkpoint Systems 2216, 2217
Columbia University Press 2274
Congressional Information Service 2206
Congressional Quarterly 2266
Coward, McCann & Geoghegan 2270
2273, 2303
Thomas Y. Crowell Co. 2285, 2294

Davey Co. 2219
Marcel Dekker 2208
Dodd, Mead & Co. 2305
Doubleday & Co. 2278
Dow Jones-Irwin 2260

Elsevier North-Holland 2246, 2247
Emerson Books 2299

Fortress Press 2290

Gale Research Co. 2262
Gaylord Bros. 2201
Gestetner Corp. 2213
Gordon & Breach Science Publishers 2261

G. K. Hall & Co. 2224
Harper & Row, Publishers 2271
Highsmith Co. 2219
Holt, Rinehart & Winston 2291
Horticultural Books 2261

Information Bank 4th Cover
Institute for Social Research 2249

Johns Hopkins University Press 2252
Josten's Library Services Division 2221

Kraus-Thompson Organization 2256

J. B. Lippincott Co. 2268, 2273, 22
Little, Brown & Co. 2275, 23

McGraw-Hill Book Co. 2242, 22
David McKay Co. 22
Macmillan Co. 2267, 22
Marquis Who's Who 22
Merck & Co. 22
Miller Freeman Publications 22
M.I.T. Press 22
William Morrow & Co. 22

National Space Institute 22
NewsBank 22

Oxford University Press 2283, 22

Pantheon Books 2279, 22
Pentalic Corp. 22
Pergamon Press 22
Petrocelli/Charter 22
Pick Publishing Corp. 22
Pierce Galleries 22
Prentice-Hall 2278, 2293, 23
Princeton University Press 22
G. P. Putnam's Sons 2285, 2293, 23

Quail Street Publishing Co. 22

Rand McNally & Co. 22
Random House 22
D. Reidel Publishing Co. 22

St. Martin's Press 22
San Francisco Book Co. 22
Charles Scribner's Sons 3rd Cov
C. K. Smoley & Sons 22
Springer-Verlag 22

TAB Books 22
Transatlantic Arts 22

United Nations 22
University of Toronto Press 22

Vigo Press 22

West Publishing Co. 22
John Wiley & Sons 22

NOVEMBER 15, 1976/ISSN 0000-0027

LIBRARY JOURNAL

LJ Mini-Symposium on the Preservation of Library Materials: A Local Preservation Program; Cooperative Conservation; and the Library of Congress's Proposed National Program

In the News: More federal aid okayed; new copyright law signed; reduced work week tried by SFPL; Iowa co-op director fired

BOOKS IN PERIL

How four major academ up to 88% with the "Tattl

Book Losses: The perennial drain on budgets.

A few generations ago, few patrons would dream of stealing a book from a library. A book was a sacred thing, and the library represented the means by which people could find precious knowledge and make their way up in the world.

Today, we're living in a different world. Patrons know how easy it is to steal books, and they know the odds of getting caught are miniscule. And a strange new "morality" in many peer groups deems book thefts acceptable.

You can wish for the old days, but they're not coming back.

So unless you want your good patrons to suffer because of your bad patrons, the only alternative is to stop book thefts. And it can be done. The following case studies show how four large universities did just that.

Case One: A large Midwestern university

During the period from Winter Quarter 1970 to Winter Quarter 1974, this university conducted sixteen separate inventories of their Core Collection (36,000 volumes) to determine the severity of their book loss problem.

During the Fall Quarter of 1972, the library installed a "Tattle Tape" Book Detection System to protect this Collection.

What effect did it have on losses? This is a quotation from the official report:

"As shown on the summary below, 44 books were lost during this sixth quarter with the electronic security system. When compared to Winter Quarter 1971, this figure represents an 89 percent reduction in the number of books lost. When compared to Winter Quarter 1972, this is an 88 percent reduction in losses."

Case Two: A Canadian university library

This university library conducted sample stock-takings in 1970 and 1971 that indicated an average annual loss rate of approximately 2.5 percent, which would have a monetary replacement value of approximately $125,000 per annum.

After installation of a "Tattle-Tape" system, a complete inventory was conducted in 1972 and again in 1973, using specially designed print-outs from the library's automated catalogue records to ensure accuracy. In comparing the 1973 holdings with those in 1972, the new loss rate was established at .5 percent, a decrease of 80 percent from the previous years.

Case Three: A Western university

The first complete inventory in eight years was made at this library during the installation of a "Tattle-Tape" system. Comparison of the actual number of volumes missing with the shelf list information showed an annual loss rate of 1.5 percent. Not included in this figure, however, were the number of items withdrawn over the period because they had been declared lost. "Including braries cut book losses pe®"Book Detection System.

these, the loss rate would have been closer to 2 percent annually."

During the first year of operation, a sample inventory of 27,278 volumes was taken at the end of the first semester and again at the end of the second semester. This inventory indicated "...a missing rate of 0.74 percent for the year or a reduction of the missing rate by more than 50% from the previous 1.5 to 2.0 percent."

Case Four: A large Eastern university

Anticipating the installation of a book detection system, slips representing 4,491 monographs (added January-June 1969) were collected. An inventory of these was taken early in 1970 and 10.2 percent were reported missing. A parallel study was made involving 5,832 volumes (added September 1970-April 1971) after the installation of a "Tattle-Tape" system. The results from this study showed only 1.8 percent were reported missing.

In addition, it was found that open shelf losses in two specific libraries dropped from slightly more than 8 percent to less than 1 percent.

In the official report, library officials noted that "...a most surprising thing is that students who are caught show no apparent sense of guilt when they are called back to the desk."

Better service for patrons.

Important as the fact is that the "Tattle-Tape" system really works...is what it means to you. And that, simply, is that it lets you give better service to your patrons.

Books no longer "disappear." They can be kept on the shelves, available for patron use.

And your funds can be used to buy more new books for your patrons rather than to replace those lost.

3M's interest in libraries.

The "Tattle-Tape" Book Detection System is just a part of our growing commitment to the library field. We are also servicing libraries in areas such as microfilm equipment and cataloging information services. And we recently introduced our 3M Brand Inventory Control System, a completely new, state-of-the-art, automated system that we are confident will become the standard of the industry.

It is our intention here at 3M to put together a whole division whose mission is to work with libraries and assist them in improving their services and capabilities. We know your job is to spread knowledge to Americans everywhere... and that's a goal we'd like to help you reach.

To learn more about our products, write to 3M Company, Library Systems, Bldg. 220-9E, 3M Center, St. Paul, Minnesota 55101. Detailed reports on the university case studies above are also available upon request.

Tattle-Tape®
So you can run a lending library. Instead of a stealing library.

Library Systems 3M COMPANY
MICROFILM PRODUCTS DIVISION
3M CENTER · SAINT PAUL MINNESOTA 55101

"What this country needs is a good five-cent nickel."

—Ed (Edwin Leopold) Wynn

And what your readers need are books that give them a better understanding of money and its management. Wiley gives them three new ones.

FINANCIAL ANALYSIS AND BUSINESS DECISIONS ON THE POCKET CALCULATOR

Jon M. Smith

1976 317 pp. $12.95

This book provides the means for using inexpensive, portable calculators to solve simple and complex business problems. It explores the handling of business earnings and personal finance, and attempts to make readers better managers. Smith also covers merchandising, product development, real estate and capital investment decisions, forecasting, and many other types of financial analysis for improving decisions and business yields. A volume in the Wiley Series on Systems and Controls for Financial Management.

ISBN 0 471 80184-4 LC 76-5516 CIP

INFLATION MANAGEMENT
100 Practical Techniques for Business and Industry

Howe C. Stidger & Ruth W. Stidger

1976 434 pp. $15.95

Here's a guide to increase profitability by reducing the impact of inflation. Stidger and Stidger give readers 100 techniques for adjusting to inflation and learning to live with it while maintaining profitability. The techniques are listed alphabetically with a brief description of each method under its heading.

ISBN 0 471 82485-2 LC 76-8927 CIP

THE ARENA OF INTERNATIONAL FINANCE

Charles A. Coombs

1976 243 pp. $12.95

Interesting and exciting reading for those who want to have an "insider's" view of international finance. After twenty-five years with the Federal Reserve System, the author reveals the dramatic events that led to the agreements at Bretton Woods, the collapse of the dollar, and the financial crises affecting many countries today. Readers will enjoy the highly critical look at international finance and the currency fluctuations since 1961.

ISBN 0 471 01513-X LC 76-19093 CIP

The Wiley Report for Public Libraries—a special selection of the latest Wiley titles that enhance your collections and your patrons' lives—is yours free upon request. This reference tool helps your patrons get the most for their money, expand their careers, improve communities and personal lives, and continue their educations.

For your copy or for further information contact Library Services-LJ.

Serving your information needs.

JOHN WILEY & SONS, Inc.
605 Third Avenue
New York, N.Y. 10016
In Canada: 22 Worcester Road, Rexdale, Ontario
Prices subject to change without notice. A 5497-LS

LIBRARY JOURNAL

EDITOR-IN-CHIEF: John N. Berry III
SENIOR EDITORS: Shirley Havens
Karl Nyren
EDITOR, BOOK REVIEW: Janet Fletcher
ASSOCIATE EDITORS:
Book Review: Robert R. Harris
Bibliographic: Bette-Lee Fox
News: Noël Savage
PRODUCTION EDITOR: Ellen Mangin
ART EDITOR: Carlos Delgado
REVIEW EDITORS: Marlene Charnizon
Ellen Kozlowski
Philip Mattera
Anneliese Schwarzer
ASSISTANT EDITORS: Maureen Crowley
Ann Sankar
PRODUCTION ASSISTANTS: Nancy Brown
Ann Yazejian
EDITORIAL ASSISTANT: Anne Richter
ADV. SALES MANAGER: Richard H. Brown
ADV. PRODUCTION: Maureen J. Rose
PUBLISHER: Paul J. Carnese

LIBRARY JOURNAL is published by R. R. Bowker Co., a Xerox company. Robert F. Asleson, President.

Direct editorial and advertising correspondence to 1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York 10036. Telephone: (212) 764-5100. Subscription inquiries and changes of address should be directed to R. R. Bowker Company, Subscription Dept., P.O. Box 67, Whitinsville, Mass. 01588. Publications Offices at 117 Church Street, Whitinsville, Mass. 01488. Issued twice a month, September through June, monthly in July and August. Second class postage paid at Whitinsville, Mass. and additional mailing offices. Copyright © 1976 Xerox Corporation.

LIBRARY JOURNAL is indexed in Library Literature, Library & Information Science Abstracts, and Reader's Guide to Periodical Literature. SUBSCRIPTIONS: USA: 1 year $19.00; 2 years $36.00; 3 years $51.00. Canada and Postal Union of the Americas and Spain, add $2 per year; elsewhere, add $3 per year. Single copy $1.35. Spring, fall, and winter announcement numbers, $3.25 each. POSTMASTER: Please send Form 3579 to R. R. Bowker Company, P.O. Box 67, Whitinsville, Mass. 01588.

LIBRARY JOURNAL reserves the right to make its own independent judgment as to the acceptability of advertising copy and illustrations in advertisements. Advertiser and advertisng agency assume liability for all content (including text, representation and illustrations) of advertisements printed, and also assume responsibility for any claims arising therefrom against the publisher. Offers to sell products, which appear in LIBRARY JOURNAL, are subject to all laws and regulations and are void where so prohibited.

Letters 2317

Calendar 2318

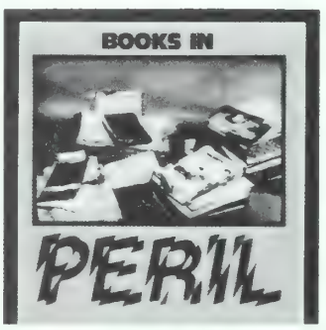
Editorial 2321

News:

Sunday service & outreach are cutback priorities in Baltimore . . . Federal library aid bills become law despite Ford . . . copyright law slated to take effect in 1978 . . . state aid boosts okayed in Ill. & N.Y. . . . Denver to cut staff & services . . . job sharing experiments in Mass. reported . . . reduced work week tried by SFPL . . . breakaway county system proposed by N.Y. library . . . Northwest Iowa co-op fires its director . . . resource sharing in academic libraries—a conference report 2323

People 2339

FEATURES



Books in Peril: a Mini-Symposium on the Preservation of Library Materials 2341

Call To Action
BY PAMELA W. DARLING 2342

A Local Preservation Program
BY PAMELA W. DARLING 2343

Cooperative Approaches to Conservation
BY PAUL W. BANKS 2348

The Proposed National Preservation Program of the Library of Congress
BY FRAZER G. POOLE 2351

Professional Reading 2352

Checklist 2354

Magazines 2355

THE BOOK REVIEW

Book Reviews 2357

Index to Reviews and Professional Reading 2396

Classified 2397

Index to Advertisers 2400

Jacob and Wilhelm Grimm

DEUTSCHES WÖRTERBUCH

Edited by the GDR Academy of Sciences

18.7 x 27 cm, 33 volumes in half-leather binding, 4.620 Marks
(Vols. 1-32 vocabulary, Vol. 33 bibliography)

The Deutsches Wörterbuch was completed in 1960, after more than 100 years of work in which many noted scholars took part. At an early stage it grew beyond the scope intended by the brothers Grimm to assimilate linguistic findings and become a monumental project embracing the entire German vocabulary as it has been used in literature, the sciences and colloquially from about the time of Martin Luther onwards.

The philologist can expect to find a short but comprehensive etymology for every word; legal experts, philosophers and writers may consult the dictionary when it comes to the meaning and use of a term; and historians will be able to follow developments in the history of civilization reflecting identical processes in the history of thought and economic history. The Wörterbuch is also a general source of information on the development of the German language as a means of social communication.

Order from your International Book Store, or from Adler's Foreign Books, Inc., 162 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y., or from the publisher—

S. Hirzel Verlag Leipzig
DDR- 701 Leipzig, Postfach 506

LETTERS

A cheer for old IU (not UI)

Barbara B. Fischler
President, Indiana University Graduate Library School Alumni Association, Indianapolis:

I am pleased that you were able to attend the "Friday Afternoon Seminar on Library Education . . ." held at my alma mater . . . (LJ, Sept. 1, p. 1679). I do regret that during your stay in Bloomington you were never made aware of the fact that the host school was Indiana University (IU) not the University of Indiana (UI).

Did you make any attempt to learn when those Ph.D.s of ours who "felt a strong need for some kind of internship or practicum . . ." had been graduated? The opportunity for practice work has been available in the IU Graduate Library School curriculum for years. Also that "library school faculty should be forced to do a regular stint working in a library!" is distressing and indicates a lack of knowledge on the part of those students concerning the credentials of the faculty. One of the aspects of the IU Graduate Library School which impressed me when I was a student (it was a department then) and subsequently, is that most of the professors had been practicing librarians and possessed both the practical and theoretical knowledge which is so vital to the development of a librarian and teacher.

Whatever some may consider the shortcomings of the IU Graduate Library School faculty and curriculum, I cannot accept these two criticisms as valid. This School has provided me with an excellent education which has enabled me not only to become a successful librarian and a supervisor of their practice students, but also a member of their faculty.

Censorship equivocation

Alfred N. Garwood
Library Director, Randolph Township Public Library, New Jersey:

There are some serious logical errors in Williams & Pearce, "Censorship Redefined," (LJ, July, p. 1494-96). Their first syllogism might be used as a textbook example of the Fallacy of Equivocation (centering on the word "action") and their second argument suffers from inadequate (false) premises, hasty generalization, and a number of better disguised errors of reasoning. But to avoid a lesson in logic, let us move quickly to their new "improved" definition of censorship. "Censorship is any constraint which interferes with and corrupts communication processes and defeats institutional objectives." If that is what censorship is, many of us might very well be for it. I am sure that there are many institutions out there (the BIA, FBI, or CIA for example) whose objectives more than just a few people would like to have corrupted.

The authors make their main error in avoiding the central concern of human rights as it applies to censorship. By falling into the equivocation of action at the outset, they manage to ignore that basically censorship denies an individual his right of free access to information. The authors concentrate on premises about what a society is, the importance of communication, and how institutions are regulated and managed, which misses the central aspect of the discussion. When a patron comes into a library and requests a copy of Das Capital, he doesn't want to know whether or not such a book is disruptive to the individual objectives of an organization, he wants to exercise his right of access to information. If that information (or the ideas contained therein) are damaging to a social institution, that's the institution's problem, not his. It seems that censorship has more to do with questions concerning individual rights, than the interplay of social institutions.

Although more work needs to be done to clarify the question of censorship (and separating the connotation from the denotation of the word would be a good start), loose logic and sociological jargon will not help.

Gordon McShean
c/o Multinational Media (Publishers), Scotts Valley, California:

. . . Williams and Pearce . . . are to be congratulated for coming up with a revised definition which allows them to take a stand against censorship . . . but their new simplification is of no more assistance to those facing a real censorship situation than was their earlier definition. It leads them to declare that "censorship controversies rarely consist of more than accusations and denials . . . . we want [librarians] to stop arguing and fighting foolishly." They apparently despise the real world of censorship with its personalities and emotions and its obvious distance from the nice, simple definitions which resound from university podia. They feel that if we simply separate "communication controls" restraints (such as judgments of "scope, redundancy, balance and quality") from other repressions of expression and inquiry we will happily be left with pure censorship which we can all confront. Their naivete—considering the number of years they have spent studying the subject—is horrifying. . . .

Has anyone ever seen Playboy attacked by censors without scope, balance and quality being used against it (even when it has been challenged on neighborhood newsstands)? Surely the public reading of poetry in library facilities can be challenged on some of these grounds? And surely a librarian's actions in personal political and religious matters could be related to concerns in some of these categories? Yet who can deny that the motives for such challenges would be—nay, have been—pure censorship?

I cannot think of any censorship controversy which allowed the accused librarian or bookseller the satisfaction of facing opponents who admitted to a clear motivation of censorship. I find it horrifying that these "colleagues" of ours can presume that those of us who have been challenged have had no concern for the scope of our collections, redundancy, balance, or quality. It is obvious that the scope of their inquiries has been sadly limited, that their publications on censorship verge on redundancy and that balance and quality in their arguments leaves much to be desired. But I'd be the last to say that their writings should not be represented in the professional publications—it is valuable to let us know what we are up against.

Let us all admit that censorship controversies often include foolish arguments and fights. As long as censors use the subterfuges suggested by Williams and Pearce (and numerous other subterfuges) to gain their ends it cannot be otherwise. There is no dishonor in confronting the censors on their own foolish grounds—and there is undoubtedly a certain satisfaction in bringing the argument to a level of reason which could be understood by university theoreticians (we should offer prizes for those who can keep it on such a level). These theoreticians must understand that the librarian and bookseller deal with real people and their emotions. To be fair, however, it should be admitted that the theoreticians have had lots of company in the past—our intellectual freedom "authorities" have frequently abhorred the untidiness of actual censorship cases and have taken refuge in similar fancy theories when they have refused to consider situations involving what they called "foolishness. . . ."

Good news from England

K. C. Harrison

City Librarian, Westminster City Libraries, London, England:

LJ is as bad as the general media when it comes to highlighting bad news and playing down the good. I refer to your July issue (p. 1474) where, after mentioning the cuts in Buckinghamshire and Surrey, you grudgingly admit that there are a few communities which have kept up library support.

At the recent IFLA meetings in Lausanne I corrected the impressions of quite a few American librarians who seemed to have the idea that British libraries were on their last legs. In the current financial year at least 80 percent of British public library authorities are operating on record budgets, and it is still only the minority which have had to resort to reducing opening hours. Very few branch libraries have had to close, and extremely few staff have been laid off.

I do not want to paint too rosy a picture, but currently libraries in Britain have suffered more in having their capital development programs frozen, while current revenue budgets are still reasonable. Furthermore, we have little or no unemployment of newly qualified librarians, though it is true to say that these are finding it increasingly more difficult to find positions when and where they want them.

The next financial year, beginning April 1, 1977, may well be more difficult, but for the current year let us put the record straight!

On the death of Librarian Mao

William S. Wong

Associate Professor and Head of the East Asian Library, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis:

With Chairman Mao Tse-tung's passing from the scene, a librarian might raise several questions which would exemplify his professional curiosities and concerns. First, will the Chinese rare books which have been displayed on the bookshelves of Mao's private library (where he used to receive foreign visitors, including Richard Nixon) be inherited by his widow Chiang Ch'ing and/or daughters Li Na and Li Min, son Mao An-ch'ing, or nephews Mao Yuan-hsien or Mao Chih-yuan? If by none of these, then who will receive the books? And if those books actually belong to a public library, e.g. the National Library of Peking, and Mao was not the owner but a borrower, then can they now be "recalled" or "renewed"? It is also possible that those books have been well marked with comments, with the potential of becoming precious "critical" or "censorial" editions. Secondly, who will be the beneficiary of the "copyright" of the nonfiction "bestseller" Quotations from Chairman Mao Tse-tung or "The Little Red Book"? More important, who will be the inheritor-designate to be the interpreter of the contents of that book? Thirdly, in his June 24, 1964 conversation with his niece, Wang Hai-jung (currently a vice-minister of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs), which was printed in the Mao Tse-tung ssu hsiang wan sui (Long Live Mao Tse-tung's Thought, August 1969, p. 530-31), Mao urged his niece, at that time a student at the Foreign Languages Institute in Peking, to compile a good Chinese-English dictionary. We in American libraries have received the magnificent A New English-Chinese Dictionary (Hong Kong: Hong Kong Branch of the Joint Publishing Co., 1975, 1688 p.). But is there any new Chinese-English dictionary (an extremely important and critically needed reference book) being published in China now, more than ten years after Mao's request? Finally, Mao worked as an assistant librarian at Peking University Library from the fall of 1918 to the spring of 1919. It was during that period that Mao first left his hometown and met with leading Chinese intellectuals and scholars and, more importantly, first found access to Marxist literature. Mao's life and activities during that period should be studied. During the Great Proletarian Cultural Revolution, Mao's full title was "Great Teacher, Great Leader, Great Supreme Commander, and Great Helmsman, Chairman Mao Tse-tung." He himself once indicated that he would most like to be remembered simply as a "Teacher." We feel he might be called a "Librarian" as well.

CALENDAR

NOV. 18-20—VIRGINIA LA, Roanoke, Hotel.

NOV. 19-20—INSTITUTE ON QUANTITATIVE MEASUREMENT and Dynamic Library Service, Unit I, Statistical Applications and System Approaches. School of Lib. Science, Simmons College, Boston. Contact: Coord. of Continuing Ed., School of Library Science, Simmons College, 300 The Fenway, Boston, Mass. 02115. (617) 738-2222. (See also MAR. 27-28, 1977, below.)

NOV. 22-27—INTERNATIONAL SYMPOSIUM ON GENERAL CLASSIFICATION SYSTEMS IN A CHANGING WORLD, Brussels, Belgium. Contact: Mr. G. Lorphevre, FID/CCC Chairman, Editiones Mundaneum, 696 chausee de Louvain, 1030 Brussels, Belgium.

DEC. 2-6—CALIFORNIA LA, Los Angeles Marriott and Sheraton Hotels, Los Angeles International Airport. Contact: California Library Assn., 717 K St., Suite 300, Sacramento, Calif. 95814. (916) 447-8541.

1977

JAN. 28-30—ASSN. OF AMERICAN LIB. SCHOOLS, Washington, D.C. Theme: "The New Information Professional." Keynote: Ronald G. Havelock, Center for Research in the Utilization of Knowledge, Inst. for Social Research, U. of Mich. Contact: Janet Phillips; (813) 238-0254.

JAN. 28-FEB. 2—ART LIBS. SOC. OF NORTH AMERICA. Fifth Annual Conference, Statler Hilton Hotel, Los Angeles. Contact: Judith A. Hoffberg, P.O. Box 3692, Glendale, Calif. 91201.

JAN. 30-FEB. 5—AMERICAN LA, Midwinter Meeting, Washington, D.C.

MAR. 24-26—ILLINOIS ASSN. OF SCHOOL LIBRARIANS, Pick-Congress Hotel, Chicago. Theme: "Carnival of Knowledge." Contact: Ms. Jane Block, Belvidere Community Unit, District #100, Belvidere, Ill. 61008.

MAR. 27-28—INSTITUTE ON QUANTITATIVE MEASUREMENT and Dynamic Library Service, Unit II, Critical Evaluation of Quantitative Methods for Library Management. School of Lib. Science, Simmons College, Boston. Contact: Coord. of Continuing Ed., School of Library Science, Simmons College, 300 The Fenway, Boston, Mass. 02115. (617) 739-2222. (See also Nov. 19-20, 1976 above.)

APR. 6-8—ALABAMA LA, Montgomery, Governor's House Motel. Contact: Patricia Moore, Exhibits Chairperson, Alabama LA, P.O. Box 9266, Mountain Brook, Ala. 35213.

APR. 12-16—TEXAS LA/NEW MEXICO LA, Joint Conference, El Paso Civic Center. Theme: "In Search of Learning." Contact: Jerre Hetherington, Texas LA, P.O. Box 505, Houston, Tex. 77001.

APR. 17-23—NATIONAL LIBRARY WEEK.

APR. 18-21—INFO. INDUSTRY ASSN., Information Industry Conference & Exposition, Washington, D.C., Shoreham Americana Hotel. Theme: "The Information Manager . . ." Contact: Paul G. Zurkowski, IIA/Washington, 4720 Montgomery Lane, Bethesda, Md. 20014; (301) 654-4150.

APR. 20-23—NEW JERSEY LA, Atlantic City, Howard Johnson's Regency Motor Hotel. Contact: Anne King, Exhibits Chairperson, 3-25 Dorothy St., Fair Lawn, N.J. 07410.

Baker & Taylor. First in our field and for good reasons.

Cataloging and Book Processing. Baker & Taylor offers the widest variety of cataloging options for Dewey/Sears; Dewey/LC; LC/LC as well as Cataloging in Publication data. Your books are available fully processed, with processing kits or card sets only. B&T can also supply and install any of several theft detection devices.

Regular Order Service. Baker & Taylor's inventory of 10,000,000 volumes is located in five regional distribution centers for prompt and economical service to your library. Inventory in each of these distribution centers includes new and retrospective titles, as well as juveniles and mass market and trade paperbacks.

Continuation Service. To help you keep up with the world of serials, Baker & Taylor will make sure your standing orders are filled fast—with accurate invoicing and competitive discounts

Directions and Forecast. Baker & Taylor's staff of librarians and book buyers monitor the titles of over 4,000 publishers and non-print suppliers. In addition to ensuring the maintenance of a comprehensive inventory, these buyers quickly relay this information to you through B&T acquisition guides: Directions, a monthly update on recently published scholarly books for academic libraries and Forecast, noting forthcoming books and non-print materials for public libraries.

Approval Program. We search and review forthcoming and new books. If a title matches your collection profile, it's sent to you. You decide with book in hand. An alternative plan, Current Awareness Service, provides Notification Slips to alert you to books of interest in specific subject areas.

BATAB (Baker & Taylor's Automated Buying Program). If your manual acquisition system is strained to the breaking point, you need Baker & Taylor's automated book ordering system—BATAB. It gives you instant control of selection, lists, purchase orders, order status, fund status, special statistical reports, and much more.

Sales representatives. Baker & Taylor's specially trained sales personnel are available to answer your questions and to help you set up the program that best suits your library. Please call your nearest B&T distribution center and a representative will be pleased to assist you.

The Baker & Taylor Companies

50 Kirby Ave., Somerville, NJ 08876 (201) 722-8000 • Commerce, GA 30529 (404) 335-5000 • Gladiola Ave., Momence, IL 60954 (815) 472-2444 • Industrial Park, Clarksville, TX 75426 (214) 427-3811 • 380 Edison Way, Reno, NV 89502 (702) 786-6700

Responding to an ever more important reference need. . .

Contemporary Metropolitan America

John S. Adams
University of Minnesota, Editor

Available in early December ISBN 0-88410-425-7
Until December 19, 1976—$60.00 the set, $70 thereafter

Association of American Geographers,
Comparative Metropolitan Analysis Project

The color, the history, the problems and promises of America's great cities—vividly and incisively portrayed through specially-commissioned essays.

Encompassing the physical, the human and the economic dimensions of urban America, CONTEMPORARY METROPOLITAN AMERICA is grounded in years of painstaking research. Local specialists in each of America's twenty largest metropolitan areas have used the most sophisticated tools of spatial analysis in blending a deep first-hand knowledge of their cities with the massive body of hard data compiled during AAG's four-year Comparative Metropolitan Analysis Project.

Work of the Comparative Metropolitan Analysis Project has been overseen by a Steering Committee of eminent scholars in the fields of geography and urban development: Brian J.L. Berry, Harvard University, Chairman; John R. Borchert, University of Minnesota; Frank E. Horton, University of Iowa; James E. Vance, Jr., University of California at Berkeley; David Ward, University of Wisconsin—Madison; and J. Warren Nystrom, Executive Director, Association of American Geographers (ex officio).

Nearly 275 photographs. More than 400 maps & charts. About 60 tables. And a wealth of bibliographic materials.

A Comparative Atlas of America's Great Cities

TWENTY METROPOLITAN REGIONS

A wealth of detailed information about the nation's twenty most populous metropolitan regions—projected in more than a thousand maps and explained, interpreted, and discussed in accompanying text. Maps are projected on uniform scales to ensure precisely accurate comparison of data among the regions.

528 Pages 11 × 13 $95.00

Published by the UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA PRESS
2037 University Avenue Southeast
Minneapolis, Minnesota 55455

Urban Policymaking and Metropolitan Dynamics

A COMPARATIVE GEOGRAPHICAL ANALYSIS

JOHN S. ADAMS, EDITOR

This book analyzes progress made in urban policy during the Sixties and throughout the country's major metropolitan areas. Each chapter concentrates on a critical public policy issue and provides a comparative analysis of from three to twenty metropolitan areas, examining similarities and differences in problems, as well as the appropriateness of national law in local settings. 576 Pages $25.00

Ballinger
PUBLISHING COMPANY
17 Dunster Street, Harvard Square, Cambridge, MA 02138

EDITORIAL

Double Taxation

Hardly a day goes by during which we don't get a report from some library relating its success in raising money for library support by charging fees for library services. We are now told about a number of California city managers who are eyeing the "sale" of library registration cards as a potential source of revenue. At the recent meetings of the Kansas Library Association's College and University Libraries Section in Emporia, there was great excitement over the growing use of online search services, and an entire session was devoted to their demonstration, but few seemed to be alarmed that these services are all fee-based. Later in the meeting, some of the representatives from private colleges did express reservations over this question.

Back in May, Peter G. Niemi, director of the Champaign Public Library, in Illinois, wrote to LJ's Karl Nyren regarding the tremendous support ($15,000 per annum) Champaign was receiving by renting its audiovisual materials (records: $.10 per disc per week; projectors: $3 per 24 hours; films: $.25 per 15 minutes of running time; art prints: two for $1 per month). Niemi points out that use of the materials has increased 60 percent over the previous year, and "hundreds of people who did not use the library now use it for items like current rock and jazz recordings and for AV equipment. Before rentals . . . we could not provide the quality or quantity people wanted. . ." Niemi goes on to tell us of Champaign's plans for future rental services: " . . . we hope to buy and rent 16mm films. Also under consideration is providing unlimited copies of every book on the New York Times Best Seller list at $.50 per week. Bookstores here are now renting best sellers to people who might have used the public library if enough copies could be purchased. In Champaign also, private groups are starting library reference services on a fee basis."

Niemi cites an $18 registration fee imposed by the public schools in addition to their tax support, fees charged by the Park Department for services, Mass Transit District fares, and parking meters, as precedents for charging for traditionally tax-supported services.

"Perhaps it is time for some re-thinking and re-education regarding the principle of 'free public libraries.' They were never free in the economical sense, and quality and quantity of library services has to a large extent always been dependent on money available. Property taxes never did the job adequately," Niemi continues. "Too often successful library programs of service means tighter budgeting as income usually does not increase proportionately to increased use of the product as is the case in the greater 'market place'. . .

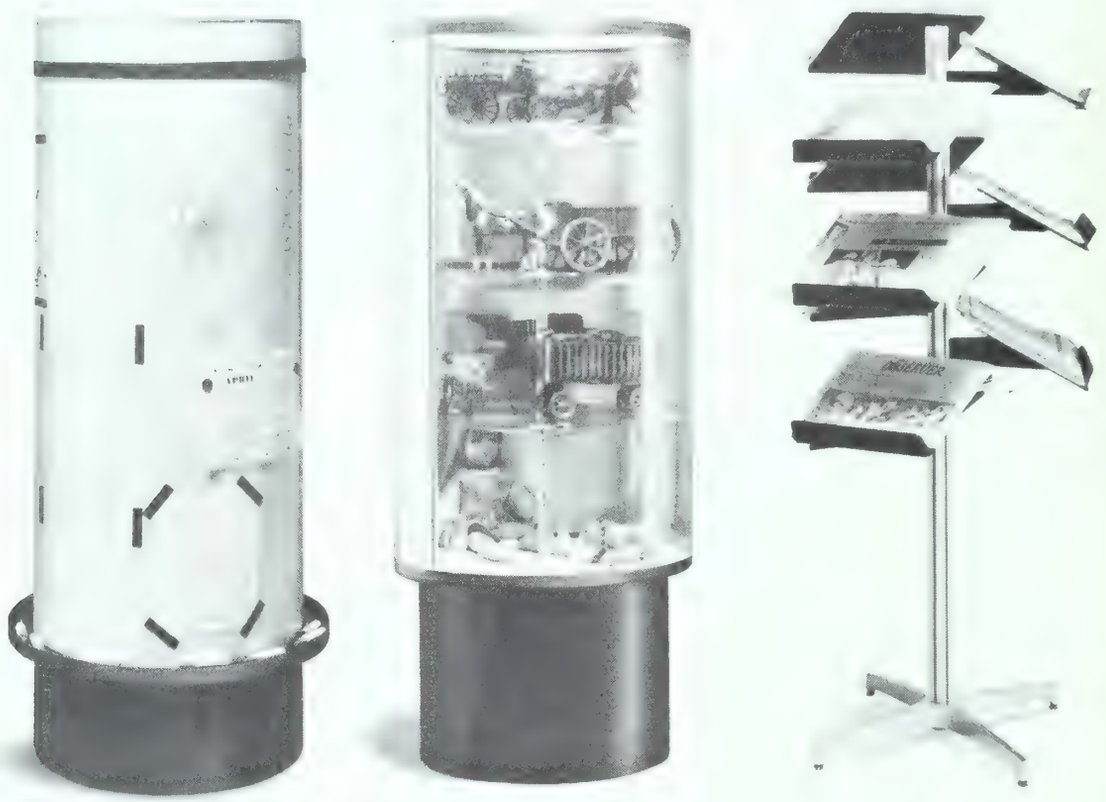
"Until a better source of continuing funding is available to supplement local property taxes, local libraries have few options to help them compete and keep pace in the market place. It may be that it is a question of rental fees and special charges vs. a loss of patronage to commercial groups who can deliver the services."

From our point of view there are several flaws in the "market place" argument for library fees. First among them is the tendency, mentioned above, for governing bodies to latch on to fees as a way out of providing tax-supported services. We can envisage the day when not only bestsellers, but story hours, programs, even simple loans, will carry a price. Somehow this flies in the face of our two-century tradition of free public education, and of the notion that libraries exist to help provide that education.

Equally important, fees for library service immediately place new restrictions on access to it. If we believe every citizen has a right to information, and to libraries, we can't limit that access according to the citizens' ability to pay. Public taxation is supposed to distribute the burden for services needed by all of society to all of its members. Library service is one of those social needs.

Finally, we are in great danger of accepting the notion inherent in this debate that libraries are somehow "in competition" with private sector information services. That we must charge for our services "to prove their worth," and "to cover costs." What we are really doing, of course, is charging the public twice—once in the tax bill and once at the door. In the process we are also suggesting that ability to pay is the measure of need—a concept we abandoned back when Horace Mann first proposed free public education. To abandon that tradition now, and turn our public institutions into the kind of informational and recreational supermarkets suggested by the fee enthusiasts is to junk a fundamental right to education and information and to abandon the information needs of that part of the society that can least afford the price. John Berry

Display pieces that are displays in themselves.



Presenting a trio of display pieces so attractive, they're known to draw attention on their own.

Meet Mar-Line's™ Magnetic Bulletin Board, Full Circle Exhibit Case and Newspaper Displayer: designed to solve today's display needs beautifully.

The first member of the threesome is completely child-safe. No more dangerous tacks. No messy tape. Magnets are all it takes to post notices and pictures. Children can also write or draw on this bulletin board with special dry markers. Then, to wipe it clean, just take an ordinary felt eraser or cloth.

The next striking showpiece, the Full Circle Exhibit Case, gives you 14 square feet of display area in only four square feet. And, as your needs change, you can easily move the case around.

Finally, the simple but sleek alternative to traditional newspaper displayers . . . displaying the front page of ten or more full-size or tabloid newspapers in just over four square feet of floor space.

For information on any or all three of these display pieces that are displays in themselves, write to Gaylord.

GAYLORD...ask any librarian.

GAYLORD BROS., INC., LIBRARY SYSTEMS, SUPPLIES, EQUIPMENT & PUBLICATIONS

Syracuse, NY 13201 TWX 710 545-0232
Furniture Manufacturing Division
Distributed in Canada Exclusively by Lowe-Martin Ltd.

Stockton, CA 95208
Sanford, NC 27330
Ottawa, K1G 3M4

NEWS

Baltimore Co. surveys peg cutback priorities

Of possible interest to budget-strapped libraries faced with the hard decisions of picking what services to cut back are the results of three opinion surveys conducted recently by Maryland's Baltimore County Public Library. Combining the results of its surveys of staff, 600 selected households, and patrons polled in the library, BCPL reports the top five suggestions for service reductions: eliminating Sunday service, reducing magazine subscriptions, discontinuing AV buying, ending special programs for adults, and taking its bookmobiles off the road. Children's collection building and provision of reference and referral service were areas least often picked as candidates for the axe. Interestingly, staff respondents suggested the proportionately highest number of service reductions, while in-library respondents named the lowest.

BCPL polled a sample group of its professional, clerical, and maintenance staff to get data useful in "defining BCPL's role in the community, evaluating present services, and setting goals and objectives." What follows are the highspots of BCPL's staff survey.

•Staff name vital services: Most staffers (both pro and nonpro) saw as top priorities the necessity for multimedia collections and effective information and referral service. A slightly lower percentage agreed that "broad current demand" should determine what services and materials are provided, and that expenditures for children's services should not exceed those for adult services. Sixty percent of staff respondents favored provision of separate young adult services. The strongest impetus for change, notes BCPL, was in the area of YA services; it was singled out as a major weakness. Other weaknesses cited included building maintenance and public relations. As for library strengths, professional staff was counted as a top strength (by both pros and nonpros), followed by system responsiveness to user demand, and clerical staff.

•Thumbs down on outreach: More than 75 percent of staffers polled felt that public libraries should not assume a greater educational role in the community. There was also little support for broadening the collection to meet the specific needs of students and scholars. And almost half of those surveyed said that the library should concentrate on in-library services rather than on outreach. But pros and nonpros alike disagreed with the statement that libraries shouldn't waste time and money on nonusers.

•Problems to be faced: Personnel problems (including staff shortages and morale) were picked as the most important problem facing BCPL today, with money problems second, and meeting increasing user needs third.

Federal library aid bills become law despite Ford

Both the House and the Senate have overwhelmingly voted to override President Ford's veto and have voted into law 1977 legislation substantially increasing—for the first time since 1974—federal aid to libraries under the Labor-HEW (Health, Education, and Welfare Department) bill. Other appropriations bills that made it included: the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA), which has helped offset personnel shortages caused by the budget crunch, and the new Public Works Act (Public Law 94-369), which could provide construction grants to libraries ready to go ahead with a building in areas of high unemployment.

The Higher Education Act was authorized and must now have an appropriation approved by both Congress and the White House. As for the proposal to give direct aid to urban libraries by amending the Library Services and Construction Act, Congress will not act on the proposed Title V of LSCA until next year, when it must vote to extend LSCA.

With the passage of the Labor-HEW bill, the 1977 appropriation under LSCA, Title I (library resources) is $56,900,000—an increase of $7,745,000 over last year's total; LSCA, Title III (interlibrary cooperation) is $3,337,000—up $743,000; and the budget for the National Commission on Libraries and Information Science (NCLIS) is $492,575—a funding boost of $24,575. Forward funding under Title IV-B of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act is $154,330,000 for 1978—up some $7 million to cover rising book costs.

The appropriation for the new Public Works Act came to $2 billion, said Sarah Case of ALA's Washington Office. Case had earlier urged libraries in areas of high unemployment to establish contact with regional offices of the Department of Commerce's Economic Development Administration to better their chances in the expected hot competition for public works construction grants (LJ, July, p. 1471). The EDA is administering the program.

New copyright law to take effect in 1978

President Ford has signed into law a revision of the outdated Copyright Act, which had been drafted long before the photocopying boom got started. The new law, which is slated to take effect by January 1978, permits interlibrary loans that do not pose a threat to publishers; a library's volume of photocopying, says the law, cannot "substitute for a subscription to or a purchase of such work." The law prohibits the "systematic reproduction or distribution of single or multiple copies" of a work by both schools and libraries.

Sarah Case of ALA's Washington Office told LJ that the new copyright law is a compromise piece of legislation retaining much of the language of the bill proposed by the House. She remarked that the legislation could be confusing because it includes photocopying guidelines drafted by CONTU (the Committee on New Technological Uses) plus separate rules applying to classroom photocopying.

The CONTU guidelines, incidentally, had drawn criticism from lawyers for the Association of American Publishers (LJ, September 15, p. 1816). AAP lawyers said they agreed with CONTU's basic proposal that a library can request copies of five articles a year, but object to the CONTU recommendation that this rule apply only to periodicals printed within five years of the request date. AAP also objected to the CONTU recommendation that libraries be allowed to do unlimited copying of journals or books in their own collection, and the publishers' group suggested some kind of licensing arrangement for those libraries (such as the National Library of Medicine) whose function is to supply photocopies to other libraries.

ALA Lawyer William North took an entirely different stance on who benefited most from the legislation when he reviewed the pending copyright bill at ALA-Midwinter (LJ, June 15, p. 1356). Said North, "It's still a publishers' and producers' bill . . . the language is so fuzzy that the issue of fair use has become completely clouded. . . . they're limiting your rights." He contended that libraries have lost considerable ground in their battle for photocopying privileges and are much more vulnerable to lawsuits—especially from small publishers—than many members of the library community would concede.

$$ crisis in Buffalo, N.Y.: citizens fight back

As county legislators ponder how far they will go in slashing aid to New York's Buffalo and Erie County Library System, alarmed residents are flocking to town meeting halls to protest cutbacks that could, said one report, "force the closing of 45 of the 52 county libraries." One such meeting, held at Erie County's Daeman College, drew over 1000 protestors. A newly formed Committee to Save the Libraries is working out strategies for fighting the cutbacks. But those efforts don't seem to be working: one recent report says that the county, which faces default, still wants to eliminate almost all aid to libraries.

Meanwhile the Buffalo and Erie County Library has been laying off staff and eliminating services; the closing of the young adult section at Central was one of the latest reported. The layoffs, reports Gerald Shields, prompted the library school of the State University of New York at Buffalo to send a team to the library system to offer job counseling to laid off librarians. Besides providing practical information on the preparation of résumés, said Shields, the SUNY team brought along photocopies of job placement notices sent to the library school.

USIA films made available to U.S. libraries

Thanks to the passage of special Bicentennial legislation, seven recent U.S. Information Agency films have been exempted from a 1972 Congressional ban on their showing within the boundaries of the U.S. They include: Echoes, on the democratic heritage of past heroes and leaders (28 minutes, $175/rental $22); Santa Fe, on the impact of succeeding cultures in that area (16 minutes, $97/rental $17); and The Numbers Start with the River, on life in a small Midwestern town as described by two lifelong residents (15 minutes, $97/rental $17).

Also: The Copland Portrait, a biography of American composer Aaron Copland (22 minutes, $175/ rental $22); 200, an animation film on 200 years of growth in America (three minutes, $28/ $10 rental); Century III—the Gift of Life, an overview of modern medical advances (28 minutes, $175/rental $22); and Rendezvous, a re-enactment of the frontier life of fur trappers in Wyoming in the early 1800s (ten minutes, $75/ rental $10).

Preview materials, stills, and more information on these new releases are available from Lynn McCloud, National Audiovisual Center, General Services Administration, Washington, D.C. 20409. The number to call is (301) 763-1850.

PR day at ALA-Detroit: library PR materials asked

The Public Relations Section of ALA's Library Administration Division reports that it's on the lookout for noteworthy printed and audiovisual PR materials for eventual distribution to PR-minded souls at the PR Day slated for June 18 at ALA-Detroit. LAD/PRS intends to repeat the successful Swap'n'Shop Workshop during the ALA annual meet in 1976.

The Swap'n'Shop Committee wants to look over PR materials: libraries are asked to send a dozen of each item for review only if they can provide another 200-300 copies of materials for distribution at ALA. Materials should be sent by January 15 to Geoffrey Fielding, Special Projects Officer, Baltimore County Public Library, 320 York Rd., Towson, Md. 21204.

New videotapes on OCLC offered by Kent State

Kent State has prepared a new set of instructional videotapes on the OCLC (Ohio College Library Center) system, reports Assistant Professor Anne Marie Allison. She notes that the new color videotapes do not have the local orientation of the original tapes and are consequently more pertinent to OCLC users outside Ohio.

Among the videotapes available are two 12-minute Public Service Programs (intended primarily for library users): Parts I and II of Finding Information in the OCLC Data Base. Of particular interest to librarians and library school students is Kent State's Technical Services series, which includes: The OCLC System, On-Line Cataloging, The Local Data Record (slated for late fall release) and Automated Check In (also in preparation).

The tapes are available in cassette either singly or in sequence, on either ¾ or ½ inch tape. For information on prices and ordering, contact Jack W. Scott, Assistant Director, University Libraries, Kent State University, Kent, Ohio 44242.

DIALOG adds data bases: environment, history, art

Lockheed's DIALOG reports the addition of new databases in the fields of the environment, American history, and modern art.

- Environment: With the addition of the Enviroline data base, produced by Environment Information Center, Inc., DIALOG users "have instant access to more than 12 million references and abstracts in the field of science, technology/engineering, social sciences, and business/economics," says DIALOG. Enviroline information, it adds, "is not meant to replace highly specialized files such as Chemical Abstracts, but to serve as a first file to try for answers to environmental questions."
- History & art: The American Bibliographical Center/Clio Press has agreed to input into the DIALOG data base by late fall abstracts and citations from its back volumes of America: History and Life, Historical Abstracts and Artbibliographies Modern. The addition of the ABC-Clio data bases, says DIALOG, "will provide one of the first online coverage of history and modern art."

WHEN YOU NEED TO FIND FACTS
THE FIRST PLACE TO LOOK IS IN AMERICAN STATISTICS INDEX

—YOUR MOST COMPLETE, CURRENT, AND PRECISE GUIDE TO STATISTICS

An award-winning reference tool . . .

In recognition of its "usefulness, innovation, and responsiveness to the information needs of a changing society," the Information Industry Association named American Statistics Index the winner of its major award—1976 INFORMATION PRODUCT OF THE YEAR.

. . . that's useful . . .

ASI is the only reference service that provides complete and continuous coverage of the more than 800,000 pages published annually by over 400 Federal sources. Practically everything of importance in the United States, and in the world, that has been counted . . . measured . . . quantified . . . or compared has been referenced fully in ASI —in depth and detail—to provide researchers with the most accurate and current information about all types of statistical data published by the Government.

. . . that's innovative . . .

Four easy-to-use major search guides—Subject/Name . . . Category . . . Title . . . Report Number—and extensive cross references provide quick and comprehensive access to the total body of information available about specific subjects.

Fully descriptive and unusually complete publication abstracts include all bibliographic data necessary to enable researchers to retrieve easily copies of relevant documents—either hardcopy or microfiche.

. . . that's responsive . . .

ASI is a major component of a total information retrieval system designed to meet the statistical reference needs of all libraries, regardless of size or budget. Other parts are the ASI Microfiche Library, a full text collection of all source documents on archival quality microfiche; a "Documents on Demand" service which allows researchers to order copies of individual documents for quick delivery; and an on-line system which makes the total ASI data base available for searching through the computer facilities of System Development Corporation.

An annual subscription . . .

. . . to American Statistics Index includes a hardbound set of indexes and abstracts for the previous year plus monthly updates covering current statistical publications. Subscription prices are based on your library's book and periodical budget and range from $310 to $790 per year.

For more information about ASI —the award-winning master guide to statistical information— please return the coupon.

CIS

Congressional Information Service, Inc.
Washington, D.C.

Congressional Information Service, Inc. AL116-2
7101 Wisconsin Ave., Washington, D.C. 20014

☐ Please send me complete information about the American Statistics Index and its total reference system.

Our annual book and periodical budget is $ _____

name _____

title _____

library/organization _____

address _____

city _____ state _____ zip _____

Duplicate their efforts.

NEW Article Reprint Service.

University Microfilms International, in cooperation with publishers of journals, now offers a highly convenient Article Reprint Service. Now you can offer your patrons still another way of obtaining current information as well as provide your existing collections with valuable supplemental information. From a single article to a complete issue, you can receive reprints soon after placing your order. And, at reasonable prices, too.

YES! I would like to know more about the Article Reprint Service. Please send me full details on how I can order.

☐ Please include catalogue of available titles.

Name _____

Title _____

Name _____

City _____ State _____ Zip _____

Mail to:
University Microfilms International
Article Reprint Service, Dept. L.J.-11
300 North Zeeb Road
Ann Arbor, Michigan 48106

Consider these outstanding features:

- All available information is readily access
- Retrieval of information simplified.
- Articles are duplicated to original size, up to x 11 inches.
- Titles are available from over 5,000 journals (1 through current issues).
- Complete issues furnished with soft cover bin at no extra cost.
- Your order is acted upon immediately.

..and reduce yours.

NEW Serials Subscription Service.

Now you can take away the time-consuming duty of acquiring current periodicals for your collection. University Microfilms International has devised an all new Serials Subscription Service on Microform, that gives you the periodicals you want—in your choice of microfilm (16 or 35mm.) or microfiche.

st look at these advantages:

rovides automatic delivery of the periodical's st publication year in Microform.

torage requirements are reduced by more than per cent.

aves money ordinarily spent on binding copies.

ngle annual invoice provided with guaranteed ual prices.

rovides quarterly status reports.

asier control of fiscal year expenditures via re- val notices.

lutilation is reduced and access made easier.

ver 7,000 titles available for selection.

YES! I would like to learn more about UMI's all new Serials Subscription Service. Please send me full details on how I can subscribe to this service.

☐ Please include catalogue of available titles.

Name _____

Title_ _____

Address _____

City _____ State_ _____ Zip_ _____

Mail to:
University Microfilms International
Serials Subscription Service, Dept. L.J.-11
300 North Zeeb Road
Ann Arbor, Michigan 48106

MARCFICHE . . . $295

MARCFICHE is cataloging and indexes on standard microfiche. It is the least expensive and most up-to-date source for cataloging data.

MARCFICHE contains ten years of English-language books, "popular" titles since 1900, recent films, maps, serials, and European-language publications. The eight hundred thousand items now on MARCFICHE grows by thousands of new titles each week.

MARCFICHE makes cataloging data easy to find. Even last week's LC cataloging may be approached from five directions: Card Number, ISBN, Main Entry and Title, and Call Number.

MARCFICHE is updated and cumulated weekly. The entire index of over three million entries is re-indexed quarterly. All MARC is included.

MARCFICHE is offered for free trial use. The complete set will be sent to your library without cost or obligation. To receive MARCFICHE, only a few samples, or additional information, phone (301) 840-1480 or write:

MARC APPLIED RESEARCH COMPANY
Post Office Box 40035, Washington, D.C. 20016
A Division of The Library Corporation

THE LIBRARY DOLLAR

N.Y. & Illinois libraries win boosts in state aid

Budget-pinched libraries in New York and Illinois report that the passage of new state legislation will provide them with substantial increases in state aid. Illinois legislators okayed two bills upping aid to both public libraries and library systems. And the Brooklyn Public Library is one New York library that will be able to rehire some of the staffers it lost when the city slashed its budget thanks to newly enacted state legislation. State library associations in both states had campaigned aggressively for the passage of this crucial legislation.

• Illinois state aid up: The Illinois State Library reports that the Illinois System Act has been amended to authorize a boost in the system funding formula: up from 70¢ to $1 per capita and from $25 to $35 per square mile. Also: the passage of House Bill 3612 will increase equalization aid grants to public libraries; it will provide extra money to libraries which receive less than $4.25 per capita in local tax revenue and provide grants of $1 per capita to public libraries that have applied for Revenue Sharing, belong to a library system, and are trying to upgrade service. Also reported: the State Library Act was amended to provide for the establishment and operation of a Government Research Division. ISL notes, however, that a bill, which would have authorized $1 million in grants for the development of library media programs, didn't make it.

• State funds aid Brooklyn: With the signing of the Amended Public Library Aid bill, New York's Brooklyn Public Library expects to get $448,000 in state aid. BPL, says Director Kenneth Duchac, has started recalling some 30 employees who had been laid off in June, and it has restored Saturday hours at 15 branch libraries and Sunday hours at Central. But Duchac notes that Brooklyn faces the loss in December of some 47 positions funded under Title X of the Public Works and Economic Development Act. Sizing up BPL's losses, he notes that BPL has 277 less employees than it did last year despite the recall; hours of service are down from 2,651 per week in June of 1975 to 1,525½ hours under the new fall schedule; and library-sponsored programs have dropped from almost 400 in 1974 to a scant 114 events.

nicem

"1/2 Million Ways To Creative Teaching"

Total Information Subscription Service on Non-Print Media for 1976-1978. Provides access to over one-half million non-print media titles including 16mm films, 35mm filmstrips, 8mm motion cartridges, videotapes, slides, records, audio tapes and others.

nicem
National Information Center for Educational Media
Department LJ
University of Southern California
University Park
Los Angeles, CA 90007
Phone (213) 746-6681 or 746-5408

N.C., New Mexico, & Minn. report successful referenda

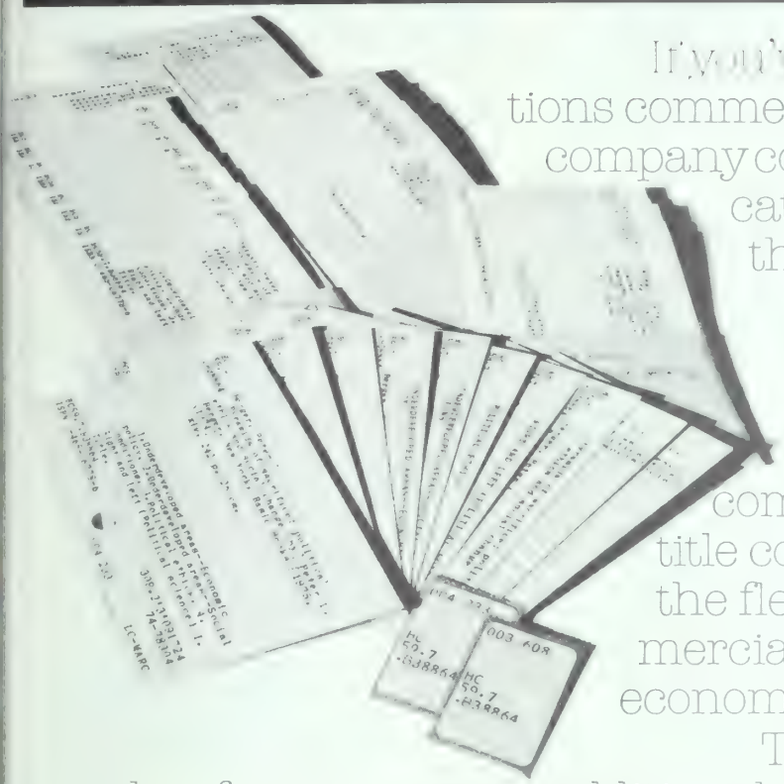
Despite the slumping economy, voters in some areas are flocking to the polls to vote for library referenda. Residents of Durham County, North Carolina and Roswell, New Mexico voted overwhelmingly in favor of referenda to pay for the construction of new library buildings. And Faribault County, Minnesota voters okayed the funding needed to create a countywide library system.

• Victory in North Carolina: Durham, North Carolina residents overwhelmingly voted in favor of a $3 million bond to build a new 65,000-square-foot downtown library facility, replacing the old main library that was built in 1921; the voting margin was four to one. Kenneth D. Shearer, Jr. of North Carolina Central University reports that credit for the victory should go to a coalition of 25 community groups that worked with both the black and white communities, a large group of volunteers—both librarians and ordinary citizens—a group of educators at all levels, students, public officials, and private groups. The Durham County Library Association, he reports, "provided an organization and a communications network that helped significantly;" besides conducting a telephone campaign aimed at the school community, it held an all-day "library happening" in an area shopping center to show residents what services a larger library could provide. The coalition of community agencies phoned residents and urged them to vote; the local media (newspapers, radio and TV stations) helped publicize the election. One radio station (WTVD), incidentally, donated 4.3 acres of land purchased from the city to the county as a site for the new library.

• N.M. voters okay building referendum: After having turned down a proposal for a new library building in both 1968 and 1970, Roswell, New Mexico voters finally approved a $1.25 million library bond issue. Library Director Tyron Emerick reports that the new building will have 22,000 square feet (four times the space in the present building), seat 164, and house 100,000 volumes. The facility is slated to be ready by Christmas of 1977.

• Advertising a referendum: The Traverse Des Sioux Library System, which has been providing library service to residents in Faribault County, Minnesota, reports that youngsters par-

WE WILL DO IT FOR YOU THE WAY YOU DO IT YOURSELF.



If you've never had your book acquisitions commercially processed because no company could meet your library's individual cataloging requirements, now there's a company that can.

Brodart offers an advanced new technical support service called TECH-SERV. It's a complete MARC-based service that combines speed, comprehensive title coverage, cataloging accuracy and the flexibility required to make commercial processing practical and economical for the academic library.

TECH-SERV lets you specify call number format, request additional main entry cards, and choose from several processing options, including books delivered completely cataloged and processed, or with complete processing kits matched to each book.

Let Brodart save you time, effort and money by supplying all your books with TECH-SERV support. We think you'll be pleased to discover that we can do it for you the way you do it yourself.

We salute the AMERICAN LIBRARY ASSOCIATION 1876–1976 ALA 100

PLEASE SEND THIS COUPON, OR WRITE TO:

Mr. Lawrence Berry, Director, Product Marketing
BRODART, INC., Dept. B 116
1609 Memorial Avenue
Williamsport, PA 17701

Please send complete information on TECH-SERV including a specification form ☐. Please send me information about all Brodart book services for academic libraries ☐.

Name_____

Title_____

Library/Organization_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____ Zip_____

BRODART

THE LIBRARY COMPANY

1609 MEMORIAL AVE., WILLIAMSPORT, PA 17701 1236 SO. HATCHER ST., CITY OF INDUSTRY, CA 91749 6 EDMONDSON ST., BRANTFORD, ONTARIO N3T 5N5

Attention Budget-Conscious Libraries:

OUR PRICE ON STEREO LP's—50¢ and up

We sell Cut-Outs (discontinued records) on all major labels—ABC, RCA, Columbia, etc. All records are guaranteed factory fresh. Typical artists include Elton John, Beatles, Ray Charles, Billie Holiday and numerous soundtracks.

Write today for free catalog

HIT RECORDS, INC.

675 US Highway 22
Hillside, N.J. 07205

LIBRARIAN'S SPECIALTIES

Preservatives, book & document stands, page weights, slip cases, boxes, restoratives, bookplate remover, etc.

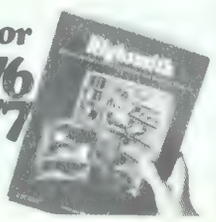
Send for illustrated brochure listing items for book and document care and preservation.

THE CURRENT COMPANY
P.O. Box 46 / Bristol, R.I. 02809

Booksellers/Publishers
specializing in
CALLIGRAPHY & PALEOGRAPHY
PENTALIC CORPORATION
132 West 22nd Street · New York, N.Y. 10011
catalog on request

New, for '76 77

Write for free copy
Almost 13,000 items:
library/AV equip./office



The Highsmith Co., Inc.
P.O. 25-0800
Fort Atkinson, WI 53538

ticipating in a T-shirt contest helped win over residents who voted for a referendum authorizing funding for a new countywide library system. Faribault youngsters were asked to decorate their T-shirts with displays and words pointing up the need for a new countywide tax for funding. The referendum passed by a wide margin.

Sunshine in California: Contra Costa budget upped

County Librarian Clarence R. Walters reports that despite countywide budget cuts California's Contra Costa County Library got $4,612,785 from the county for 1976-77—a boost of 11.4 percent. More than half of the budget increase (58 percent) will go for salaries "to maintain the existing library staff level." As for acquisitions, a budget of $548,000 was approved for books and periodicals—an increase of 10.6 percent; and the AV materials budget went up 6.7 percent to $30,000, a figure judged as "less than the recognized need . . . [but enough] to sustain the current level of purchases."

County Librarian Walters notes that some county departments were asked to reduce their budgets by as much as five percent, but the library had to cut its budget by only one percent ($44,000). The library decided to cut back spending for furniture and equipment, travel, temporary and student help, and "other administrative areas" instead of making cuts in staff and services—areas where cuts are often made. Commenting on the budget situation, Walters notes that county reserves (which cover such things as new services, major equipment breakdowns, and the county self-insurance program) are "proportionately the lowest budgeted in a number of years."

Budget crisis forces Denver to cut staff & services

The Denver Public Library's newsletter (The Inkling) reports that it looks as if DPL will get a budget of $5,420,300—an amount 13 percent less than the library's 1977 "status quo budget request." Faced with loss in funding of almost $700,000, the Denver Public Library Commission has proposed the following cost-saving measures: slashing the materials budget by $271,465; reducing County Jail Library staff to save $11,020; putting one bookmobile in cold storage to save $38,025; eliminating several positions on the administrative public service positions at main and the branches ($92,477).

These cutbacks, says City Librarian Henry Shearouse, could mean the loss of some 40 staff positions, but he added that "not nearly that number will be laid off because of transfer and attrition between now and January 1, 1977." Shearouse noted that 1976 budget cutbacks forced the elimination of another 40 positions but that, thanks to vacancies and staff transfers, only six employees had to be laid off, and two of them are now back on staff.

Interestingly, Denver is making an attempt to help the staff cope with present and long-range budget problems via Budget Concerns Forums sponsored by the staff association. Among the topics addressed at one recent forum: "rumor control, keeping patrons and staff accurately informed about the budget situation, political advocacy, and gathering case studies for present and future use by the library."

Burlington, Vt. library publicizes its $$ plight

The Fletcher Free Library of Burlington, Vermont has come up with an interesting tactic aimed at alerting the community about the impact of budget cuts ordered by the mayor: a punchy leaflet which details the effect of the latest budget reductions. Among them: the allocation for salaries was slashed by 26.5 percent, and five staffers—including two professional librarians—had to be laid off; hours of service were cut from 66 to 42; telephone reference was discontinued; in-house reference was curtailed (the loss of the reference librarian, said Fletcher, means patrons must conduct their own information searches); and outreach (including shut-inservice, school visits, and work with community groups) was discontinued. The library notes that with its ten remaining full-time staffers, manpower falls about 50 percent below the national standard for a population base of 38,000.

Noting that in 1974-75, $107,632 of the library's budget went for salaries, while only $8000 went for books and periodicals, LJ asked Librarian Kathleen Geary why so little money went for acquisitions. Geary said that the mayor alone determines spending in any given category, and wages are paid according to a union scale. The mayor, she reported, refused to okay a needed boost in library tax support and ordered a 1976-77 budget cut of $35,000; the library's budget is down from last year's total of $152,000 to $117,000. Geary noted that about 21 percent of new books acquired by the library are gifts; its acquisitions last year (including gifts and children's paperbacks paid for by a state grant) totaled 4,744.

Utah libraries report tax boosts

Three library systems in Utah report boosts in the mill levy for libraries: the Salt Lake City Public Library gained $304,557 in tax revenue; Brigham City's tax levy went up from .75 to 2 mills; and Emery County's levy inched up.

Grant for Ohio medical library

The Beaumont Foundation has awarded a $100,000 grant to the new Northeastern Ohio Universities College of Medicine to help furnish the school's medical library.

Correction

In the LJ Buyer's Guide (September 1), CLSI, also producing acquisitions systems, was omitted from the listing for Computer Based Circulation Control Systems.

The following supplier was omitted from the directory:

JOHNSON ASSOCIATES, INC.
321 Greenwich Ave., P.O. Box 1017, Greenwich, Conn. 06830. (203) 661-7602; scholarly periodicals & research collections in microfiche

In the same issue, EBSCO Subscription Services was omitted from Magazine Dealers—Foreign Subscriptions.

PERSONNEL

Job sharing in libraries: report from Mass.

Among the conclusions to be gleaned from a roundup on job sharing that appeared in the News Bulletin of the Boston Chapter of the Special Libraries Association: library administrators are slowly growing more receptive to job sharing; the few shared job experiments tried by libraries have proven successful; and people who share jobs can expect better salaries and job status than has been the case in the past.

In her report, "Job Sharing—the Idea and the Practice," Stephanie Downs Hughes of Arthur D. Little, Inc., notes that shared jobs have gained more status thanks to the pioneering work during the early '70's of feminist organizations, special interest groups, and libraries. In recent years, she observes, job sharing "has come to mean voluntarily sought, organizationally salient, personally negotiated, self-fulfilling, fairly-paid, career oriented employment." Job sharing, she admitted, still "has a long way to go before it is considered common practice." But, she notes, both the public and legislators are beginning to recognize "the employment needs of various sectors of the population . . . not only white males and heads of households, but also homemakers and mothers, students and young people, the sick and handicapped, and senior citizens not ready to retire." Among the significant pieces of legislation proposed this year: one bill (H.R. 3925) calling for the creation of federal permanent part-time jobs and another (H.R. 1877) asking that tax credit be given to employers who give jobs to part-time workers.

Jane Howell, librarian, Stone & Webster Engineering Corporation, Denver, recounted the findings of her 1974 survey of 55 administrators from the larger libraries in the Denver-Boulder area. She unearthed only a few instances of job-sharing; however, all but one of them were considered very successful. Most administrators interviewed said that the idea of job-sharing was new to them, but almost half of the respondents said that they would be willing to try it. Administrators were

ISBS

International Scholarly Book Services, Inc.

We are pleased to announce that we are now exclusive agents in North and South America for Basil Blackwell & Mott, Ltd.
Matrix Publishers, Inc.

ISBS continues to be one of your best sources for important new titles in an unusually wide range of subjects: computer science, meteorology, linguistics, medicine, economics, engineering, forestry and many more.

Please be sure to direct your inquiries and orders to our new address:

International Scholarly Book Services
Post Office Box 555
Forest Grove, Oregon 97116
(503) 357-7192 Telex 360-458

ISBS is the distributor for the following publishers:

Abacus Press
Arab Inst. for Res. & Pub.
Aris & Phillips
Basil Blackwell & Mott
Capitol Services
Corpus Canadian Almanac
Dekker & van de Vegt
Frank Cass
Glenn Simmons
Gray-Mills Publishing
Inst. of Civil Engineers
Inst. of Marine Engineers
J. Cramer
Laval University Press
Lloyd's of London Press
Matrix Publishers
Melbourne Univ. Press
Peter Peregrinus
PUDOC
R.E. Burdick
Research Studies Press
Shakespeare Head Press
Simul Press
Small Woodlands Pub.
Sydney Univ. Press
Timber Press
Univ. of Tokyo Press
Univ. of W. Australia Press
Vallentine Mitchell
Van Gorcum
VDI-Verlag
Voltaire Foundation
Woburn Press

against advertising vacant positions as suitable for sharing, but said they might go for a sharing arrangement if an applicant, or preferably two potential jobsharers, suggested it. Howell suggested that the best way to nail down a shared job would be to go out on interviews in pairs.

Academic and public library people, she reported, saw less of a problem in dealing with salaries and benefits for employees who shared jobs than did special library administrators, who noted that the policies of industry personnel departments are often "much less flexible than those in universities, for example." Howell reported that over 50 percent of administrators interviewed were for pro-rated pay and benefits. Pegged as the most suitable jobs for sharing arrangements were reference and public service, cataloging, and circulation; jobs judged least suitable were administrative or supervisory positions.

Howell's survey also pinned down perceived advantages and disadvantages in shared job arrangements. The advantages most frequently mentioned included: greater productivity, less absenteeism, better attitudes towards work, and the alleviation of underutilization of professionally trained librarians. Disadvantages included: "increased time and costs" for training new staff members and duplication of their benefits; and possible "lack of coordination and continuity" on the job, communication problems, and personality conflicts.

Ann Anderson, assistant director, Winchester Public Library, reported the success of shared job arrangements involving both professional and support staff. Winchester, she noted, formerly filled vacancies with part-time people who got paid at an hourly rate; the shared jobs have worked out, the positions were reclassified to full-time positions. Four full positions ranging from library aide to professional library assistant are shared, and this arrangement had led to better service.

Reporting on a five-month experiment in job sharing at Wellesley's Science Library, Librarians Diane Rouse and Irene Laursen note that the two people sharing the assistant to the science librarian position "prefer to keep many of their duties separate . . . which allows each person . . . to see a given project through to its completion." Communication between the pair is important, and is achieved by means of "a minimum of two hours overlap per week in scheduling for verbal communications" and a notebook detailing work performed. The additional training given two job sharers, note Rouse and Laursen, "may be a one-time investment," since it's unlikely that both will leave at the same time.

Librarians that are interested in reading the complete texts of these job sharing papers can get a copy of the SLA's News Bulletin by sending a $2 check to the Chapter Publications Office, Boston Chapter, Special Libraries Association, Boston Athenaeum, 10½ Beacon St., Boston, Mass. 02108.

LJ LIBRARY JOURNAL

More Information for Librarians Than You'll Find in All Other Library Magazines Combined

Use coupon below to order your subscription today.

LIBRARY JOURNAL
1180 AVENUE OF THE AMERICAS
NEW YORK, N.Y. 10036

YES, please enter a one year subscription to LIBRARY JOURNAL at $19.00 as indicated:

(LJ is issued twice a month, September through June, monthly in July and August. For subscriptions in Canada, Pan American Postal Union, and Spain, add $2.00 postage. Elsewhere, add $3.00.)

☐ Payment enclosed ☐ Bill me
☐ Bill school, library, or org.

Name_____
Address_____
City_____
State_____ Zip_____
Title or position_____
Kind of library (public, college, special, etc.)_____

Published by R. R. BOWKER COMPANY
A Xerox Education Company
XEROX® is a trademark of XEROX CORPORATION 11/15/76

Reduced work week tried by SFPL

Faced with a five percent reduction in its salaries budget, the San Francisco Public Library has agreed to try a "voluntary" reduced work week, with payroll savings counting as credit towards a $200,901 cut in its personnel budget. Under the Mandatory Savings Program proposed by the city, both unfilled vacancies and savings from reduced work week arrangements are counted as reductions in spending.

The new program, notes SFPL, ends a rigid hiring freeze which had been in effect for two and a half years—creating service problems when key positions could not be filled; the library now has the option of deciding which positions should be filled as they become vacant. Interestingly, the library had earlier rejected a reduced work week proposal suggested by the Librarians' Guild (the union representing San Francisco librarians); SFPL had claimed that the salary ordinance and administrative code would have to be amended before such a scheme could be implemented.

How the shorter work week will work: individual staffers must win the approval of the SFPL administration for a shorter working schedule and then sign a waiver commiting themselves to such a schedule for the fiscal year. Staffers who work reduced work weeks get proportionate salary and fringe benefits, but a year worked on a reduced schedule counts as a full year towards retirement and does not adversely affect promotion chances.

LAPL scraps Sunday pilot because of staff protests

The Los Angeles Board of Library Commissioners has abandoned a plan to close some community libraries one day a week in order to open LAPL's seven regional libraries on Sundays, reports Jane Ellison, president of the Librarians' Guild (a union local representing over 400 Los Angeles librarians). The union had opposed the proposal on the grounds that library staff would have to work Sundays "on arbitrary assignments with no additional compensation for Sunday work"; it organized a staff protest in efforts to get the library commission to agree to give staffers working the Sunday hour shift time and a half pay (LJ, September 15, p. 1816).

The union, says Ellison, eventually won over top city officials, and the mayor told the library commission that it could not go ahead with the Sunday hour schedule unless it could budget for time and a half pay rates for staffers who worked on Sundays.

3M grants for ALA-Detroit

The 3M Company announces its sponsorship for a third year of a professional development grant program aimed at enabling members of ALA's Junior Members Round Table to attend ALA's annual meet. The grants will pay for transportation to ALA's 1977 Conference in Detroit, lodging, food, and other conference expenses. Grant applicants must be members of both ALA and JMRT. Winners will be selected "on the basis of educational background, work experience, honors, library association activities, and financial need." To get an application, contact Patricia Landers, Coordinator, 3M-JMRT Professional Development Grant Committee, 2300 West Shady Grove Rd., Irving, Tex. 75060.

LIBRARY COOPERATION

Breakaway county system proposed in N.Y.

New York's Utica Public Library, which last January withdrew from the Mid-York Library System because of growing dissatisfaction with system policies—particularly its lack of representation on Mid-York's board, has proposed the establishment of an independent library system, serving all of neighboring Oneida County. Another reason for the pullout: Utica lost its status and compensation for serving as a co-central library within Mid-York when declining city revenue forced a reduction in service hours.

The Utica Public Library is trying to win approval of a plan which would align it with other libraries of Oneida County in a one-county system, which could then try for the portion of state aid funds now going to Mid-York as the share allocated for service to Oneida County. Utica's proposal also calls for a restructuring of the Mid-York system. Utica gets $275,000 from the city and hopes to win a boost in county funding—up from the present $60,716 to $137,000. Utica has proposed several alternate interim budgets which require shared financing. But it may have trouble getting funding; the town of New Hartford—one of the communities the new system would serve—has refused to put up any funding.

Utica's board of trustees says the new system would have as advantages: an equitable tax base for all libraries, a service area "small enough for frequent exchange of ideas and material, but large enough to have a certain sophistication in operation," and a defined unit of service, which the public can readily recognize and to which they can clearly relate. The Utica proposal has the endorsement of County Executive William Bryant and the support of an ad hoc citizens' committee.

Meanwhile the Mid-York System has been urged to do something about Utica lest it lose state aid. Said a budget document signed by Commissioner of Education Ewald Nyquist, " . . . approval, on even an interim basis, of the system's receiving state aid for all of Oneida County, despite the withdrawal of Utica Public Library, places heavy burdens of proof upon Mid-York and of monitoring its future management and development upon State staff."

Northwest Iowa co-op fires its director

With the recent firing of its latest administrator, the neophyte Northwest Iowa Regional Library System (headquartered in Sioux City) has lost two administrators and two acting administrators in a three-year period, and the NIRLS board is now under fire for its handling of the dismissal. What seems to be at issue: whether the elected board or the administrator whom it hires is actually in charge of the 108-member system, which serves 19 northwest Iowa counties.

According to reports in The Sioux City Journal, Director Jean Aichele was asked to submit her resignation shortly before her first, probationary year had run its course; she refused and was fired at a board meeting closed to the public. Headquarters staff and the NIRLS Advisory Council (made up of area librarians) passed a resolution urging the board to reconsider and rehire Aichele, but after reviewing the case the board refused to reinstate her. It then tried to get Media Consultant Ellen Claggett to take the acting administrator position, but she refused and then resigned, claiming in a letter to LJ that her grounds were mismanagement by the board. Said Claggett, the dismissal ". . . was unjustified and has caused much unrest and damage throughout the 108 libraries which comprise the Northwest Region . . . [with my resignation, there will be] one full-time and one part-time employee and no professional staff." Claggett, speaking as a member of a committee of the Iowa Library Association, said she was "investigating the actual proper procedures for a warning to be given to all applicants."

The board of trustees has claimed that "communications," disagreement over the extent of supervision to be provided by the board, and "personality conflict" prompted the dismissal. In an interview with The Sioux City Journal, Aichele agreed that communications was a problem. The board, she charged, not only didn't listen to her suggestions and recommendations, but ignored input from member libraries and from the Advisory Council. Aichele said she was asked to report to board Chairman Kay Dull once a week—something which she declared is "just not done in any library system." The board had also criticized her "for talking with librarians in the regional system about their problems." But Aichle said that she had assumed that her responsibilities included keep-

ECONO-CLAD BOOKS

THE ECONOMICAL ALTERNATIVE TO PUBLISHER'S HARDBACKS

(paperbacks in permanent covers)

* Over 2,500 titles in stock
* For grades K-14
* Outlast paperbacks 6 to 1
* 1/2 - 1/3 the cost of publisher's tradebound editions
* Guaranteed satisfaction

FOR FREE CATALOG, WRITE:

AMERICAN ECONO-CLAD SERVICES

Dept. LJ 11
507 Jackson Street
Topeka, Kansas 66603

DIVISION OF

THE AMERICAN COMPANIES, INC.

JOSTEN'S 1977-78 LIBRARY SUPPLIES

SEND FOR THIS NEW USEFUL CATALOG TODAY

★ Our biggest catalog ever
★ 100's of "How To" hints and useful new items

BOOK PROCESSING SUPPLIES/ AUDIO-VISUAL EQUIPMENT/COMPUTERIZED CATALOGING MATERIALS/BOOKS FOR LIBRARIES/BOOK REPAIR & MAINTENANCE AIDS/LIBRARY FURNITURE/LIBRARY DISPLAY MATERIALS

Josten's

Library Supplies Div. 1301 Cliff Rd. Burnsville, MN 55337

YES! Please send me your new catalog right away!

NAME _____

LIBRARY _____

ADDRESS _____

CITY/STATE/ZIP _____

ing in contact with the librarians in the region.

The board, charged Aichele, usurped many of her responsibilities as administrator and gave them to its own standing committees. She noted that the board's personnel committee was in charge of preparing job descriptions, recruiting and selecting personnel, and supervising probationary periods, while its finance committee prepared the budget. The administrator, she stressed, should "at least have a hand in most of these areas."

Aichele also questioned the timing of the firing. She said that she had thought that her probationary period had ended six months, in which time she got an "extremely good" evaluation and a $1000 raise. The only criticisms made at that time were that she wore tennis shoes and that she didn't report to Dull often enough. The board contends that her probationary period was a full year, with two reviews, and that Aichele knew how long her probation would last when she was hired.

Aichele asserted that the board "has a statewide reputation as a bad board" and will have a hard time filling the now vacant administrator's post. When she applied for the job last year, she noted, there were only 20 other applicants, when there are normally around 300 applications for such a post.

Board chairman Kay Dull told LJ that the system has less of a turnover problem than reports on the Aichele case would indicate: the system's first director (Mary Harvey) died, and the succeeding acting director left to get her M.L.S. Dull claimed that Media Consultant Ellen Claggett had turned down the position because she felt it would be too demanding since she wanted to continue working towards her M.L.S. at the University of South Dakota. Dull stressed that the decision to fire Aichele was unanimous and that there were "many additional reasons" for her firing besides those mentioned by the press, although she would not specify them. Dull agreed that there were only 23 applicants for the vacant NIRLS job last year, but she labeled Aichele's contention that this post would attract hundreds of applicants as "absurd," and she claimed that Aichele distorted the facts in other instances.

RAL now online

The Library of Congress reports that its Register of Additional Locations, a supplement to the National Union Catalog containing additional locations for titles with imprints of 1956 to the present, can now be retrieved from the MARC online files. The machine-readable file, which is updated biweekly, contains over 1.75 million titles with an average of 12.4 locations per title.

Statewide periodical service run by Missouri College

Reporting on the nearly three-year-old periodical service offered by Park College (Missouri), Librarian Harold F. Smith notes that school, college, and public libraries in Missouri can get inexpensive (five cents per page) photocopies of wanted periodical articles by phoning in or mailing requests to the Mid American Inter Library Services (MAILS) at Park.

Members pay a fee to belong and also pay for first class mail delivery of requested items, which usually are delivered within one day. At last count, says Smith, MAILS members included 61 school libraries, 16 colleges and universities, 14 junior colleges, and eight public libraries across the state.

Park, reports Smith, also provides Missouri libraries with catalog cards: "sets cost less than Library of Congress cards and delivery is generally made within a week." Park utilizes MARC tapes, the National Union Catalog, or the library's own typed masters to prepare catalog cards.

Computerized circulation eyed

One example of growing interest in new technology is the California State Library's third annual Automation Update meeting, which this year will zero in on the use of minicomputer-based circulation systems. Libraries attending meetings slated for October 29 (Edgewater Hyatt, Oakland Airport) and November 1 (Hyatt House, Los Angeles International Airport) will hear about packaged, online circulation systems from representatives of such major vendors as CLSI, Gaylord, Plessey, Systems Control Inc., and 3M. "Hands-on" demonstrations of equipment and systems are also slated.

Cooperation briefs

• Nonbook bibliographic network: The New Mexico State Library reports that library bond issue money will pay for a bibliographic network designed to provide ten two-year institutions in the state with information on nonbook materials. The New Mexico Junior College will be the headquarters for the project; video and audio duplicating centers are to be set up by participating colleges.

• Ohio "in-house reports": Division VII of the Ohio Library Association is surveying Ohio libraries with the aim of putting out a list of "in-house reports" and studies which libraries are willing to share with colleagues. Hal Schell of the University of Cincinnati is in charge of this promising project, which could provide the model for regional or national listing of these documents.

OCLC terminal at Simmons

Simmons College (Boston) got a Kellogg Foundation grant to buy and install an OCLC (Ohio College Library Center) terminal, which will be used both for instructional purposes and online access to OCLC's data base by Simmon's School of Library Science and the College Library.

Business collection development

A consultant firm, Management Design Associates, has been retained to counsel libraries in the Central Colorado Library System on collection development and cooperation in business and finance. MDA plans to survey the needs and resources of libraries in the system, and it will then make recommendations for each library's collection development in the next five years. The consultants involved in the project are both former librarians: Barbara Krichbaum and William Meredith.

Rapid communication in Utah

Utah's Salt Lake County Library System reports that it's improving communications via a newly designed telephone communication console developed by Mountain Bell. The console unit has more than 30 buttons, each of which can be programmed so that connections can be made by simply pushing a single button. Salt Lake says that besides tightening communications between libraries, the console can include direct lines to such places as schools, community agencies, and special libraries.

Free DIALOG access in Md.

The Montgomery County Public Library (Maryland) claims to be the first East Coast public library system to offer free access to the Lockheed DIALOG database. One important lesson learned, says MCP, is the increased importance of the reference interview, which assures that the patron will be referred to the system library specializing in the subject area he is interested in.

Houston's Metro Research Center

The Houston Public Library has taken over from Rice University the Houston Metropolitan Research Center and appointed Donald Carleton, a University of Houston doctoral candidate specializing in U.S. history, as Archivist. Carleton "will work closely with local universities to preserve and make available all discoverable oral and documentary source materials on the history in this area." One recent acquisition was a 136-year-old copy of the National Intelligencer, a Houston newspaper published when Houston was the capitol of the Republic of Texas. Alice Oliphant donated the paper.

BOWKER
NEW YORK & LONDON

Archives and Libraries... a time for dialogue

ARCHIVE-LIBRARY RELATIONS

Edited by Robert L. Clark, Jr.

To the general public the distinctions between libraries and archives are blurred, but in reality they perform different functions even when both are located in the same institution. Each deals mainly with different formats of information, controls its information separately, and has a heterogeneous clientele.

Historically libraries and archives have tended to develop apart to the detriment of both. Formal relationships are of relatively recent origin; but as this volume makes clear, there is much that librarians and archivists can learn from each other and, in so doing, benefit their professions and their clientele.

0-8352-0770-6, September 1976, 218 pp., $15.95

Outline of Contents

1. The Setting by Robert L. Clark, Jr. The Archival Setting. The Library Setting. The Archivist and the Librarian. 2. Similarities and Differences by Frank G. Burke. Materials and Methodology. Education. 3. Common Issues by Miriam I. Crawford. Legislation. Copyright and Literary Property Rights. Access and Confidentiality. Social Responsibility. 4. Shared Concerns by Frank G. Burke, Robert L. Clark, Jr., and Frazer G. Poole. Public Relations and Fund Raising by Frank G. Burke. Collection Building and Acquisition Policies by Frank G. Burke. Standardization and Technology by Robert L. Clark, Jr. Preservation by Frazer G. Poole. Library Management of Archives by Robert L. Clark, Jr. 5. Professional Communication by Robert L. Brubaker. The Need for Communication. Historians and the Information Professions. The Society of American Archivists and the American Library Association. Regional and State Associations. Annotated Bibliography by Marietta Malzer. Writings on Archive-Library Related Topics. Bibliography. Index.

R. R. Bowker Order Dept.
P.O. Box 1807
Ann Arbor, Michigan 48106

Outside Western Hemisphere: Bowker, Erasmus House, Epping, Essex, England. Prices are subject to change and slightly higher outside the U.S. and its possessions.

Resource Sharing in Libraries

About 350 librarians, students, information specialists, and related people jammed the meeting rooms at the William Penn Hotel in Pittsburgh for the 1976 Pittsburgh Conference on Resource Sharing in Libraries—a good 100 more than had been expected for the September 29-October 1 event. They came from all over the states, including Hawaii; as well as Canada, England, and Switzerland, and represented almost every type of library and library related organization. The word had clearly gotten out that this was one of the meetings not to miss, and no one was disappointed.

The basic papers, by Pitt Faculty Tom Galvin, Allen Kent, Marcy Murphy, K. Leon Montgomery, Jacob Cohen, and James G. Williams—an interdisciplinary team bringing to the effort resources in economics, engineering, and statistics as well as library and information science—would make a credible basic text for a course in networking. These papers were provided in advance to the conference registrants and consequently both panelists and audience came primed for an intense and exhausting exchange of ideas. The panel response papers went far beyond the ordinary in developing a secondary level of discourse, each tending to bring a magnified focus to one or more specifics in the matrix laid down by the basic papers.

And the comment from the floor, usually reflecting highly specific experience, was all too limited by time; it will be well worth catching in the transcribed proceedings. What follows here is an attempt at a preliminary account of an important step in the decision making process which is now shaping the evolution of library networks based on the sharing of resources. It will not attempt to communicate the rich content of all the formal papers, but will focus on the issues which emerged from the experience.

"Inevitability"

Almost everyone seemed to agree that the time has come for what Allen Veaner termed the "distributed library," a term that recalls Fred Kilgour's tenet that "the national library is the nation's libraries" (he wasn't at Pitt; the quote comes from a speech at ALA last summer). There was much (but not complete) agreement that librarians are moving from a "materials orientation" to a "client orientation"; that the criterion of ownership is yielding to one of access, and that, as LC's William Welch said, the great independent research library is "a castle in sand."

Veaner was only one of several who see the present fiscal straits as furthering the inevitability of resources sharing; he also went Welsh one better and speculated that the huge library organization might never have been a sound concept. There were some calls for research, but a lot more feeling for rolling up sleeves and getting to work: "People are ready for full cooperation," argued Hank Shearouse (Denver Public); "It's up to us to get on with it; all of us know how to do a lot better than we do." And everyone there was conscious of the powerful vectors like OCLC (The Ohio College Library Center); the many MARC-based Library of Congress activities, the CONSER project, the 350-odd consortia now in existence, the regional service centers like SOLINET, AMIGOS, NELINET, and BCR (Bibliographic Center for Research), and the host of still unrecorded arrangements around the nation whereby libraries are sharing resources—materials, people, equipment, and know-how. There is a powerful tide running in the direction of resource sharing and despite the many obstacles that can be identified, it looks as though a preponderance of the North American library community has decided to take the plunge.

Organization & governance

There is still a lot of uncertainty as to who is going to run the resource sharing network(s) and what kind of an organization is needed. One specific question: should it be organized in hierarchical form or not? There is entangled in this the question of the viability of present networks arranged along hierarchical lines (where demand is referred up the line from low level facilities through a spectrum of more highly specialized resource centers), plus the broader question of just how much centralization of authority is appropriate and workable for North Americans. And muddying the water is the savage, if sub rosa conflict going on between those who swear by OCLC and those who swear at it. At the Pitt meeting there was a lot said on and around the topic of hierarchy. LC's Bill Welch referred to the idea of a hierarchy based on a library of last resort as "fallacious."

He also put on record LC's relatively new commitment to the principle that bibliographic virtue does not reside solely within the halls of the Library of Congress, citing LC's acceptance of unedited catalog copy from the National Library of Canada, as well as LC's current experiment in serving as a switching center for information resources in other libraries. You call LC (if you're a participant in this) for information and can be referred to any one of a number of other libraries which may have the specialized information you are seeking. One bone seems to be sticking in the throats of a lot of people who might otherwise opt for a centralized authority: the fear that OCLC will wind up in the kingpin role.

OCLC

At meetings such as the one held at Pitt, it is usual to find a mix of attitudes toward OCLC ranging from grudging admiration to adulation—opposed by attitudes ranging from skepticism to hostility. In this respect, OCLC has replaced the Library of Congress as the target of complaints that "it's the only game in town" and we all have to put up with it although it does a lousy job of serving us. Frequently, of course, the harshest OCLC criticism comes from people who are closely associated with potential rivals, or come from the regional service centers that broker OCLC, but are unsatisfied with their share of the decision-making.

Complaints against OCLC are often (though not always) hidden under code words, since some of the most severe critics of OCLC and its architect Fred Kilgour are not ready to come out of the closet. Some of the inveighing against a centralized network authority can be read in these terms: Allen Veaner's warning at Pitt on the dangers of bigness, the fragility of huge systems, and the danger to its members of catastrophe. Veaner, of course, is associated with the BALLOTS project, which hopes to supersede OCLC on the basis of its claimed technological superiority.

As one consequence of all this, there seems to be much more acceptance of the idea of the Library of Congress masterminding the future network than before OCLC became so powerful. But beyond the territorial squabble, there is still a serious philosophical issue and much disquiet over the authority relations implied in a national network of resource sharing. Added to the accumulations of authority at the individual library level, there are many new power centers in regional networks, and there is a state-by-state contest in which state library agencies are gaining or losing power. In his paper at Pitt, Veaner specifically questioned the proliferation of duplicate bibliographical record stores at the regional level, seeing in it a counterpart of the proliferation of union catalogs.

Yet, speaking against centralization, Veaner noted that it is "abhorrent to many," and raises fears of a concentration of power such as has been seen in computer centers in universities. This concern was further reflected in remarks by one participant, who called for participation in network planning by established library agencies. He noted the sense of inevitability felt about the resource sharing trend and objected that this shouldn't be a case of our "going over Niagara Falls in a barrel," but should be under the direction of those currently in charge if a potential "monopoly situation" is to result in really better service to the user.

Governance & participation

Washington State Librarian Rod Swartz urged attention to "safeguards for the individual library," to assure participation in network governance and to provide compensation for major input to network services. . . . Bill Welsh (Library of Congress) underlined LC's commitment to sharing responsibility with the assertion that "LC can't do it all; it must share, make its total resources available to all." Resource sharing, he suggested, "must evolve," unlike the pattern found in Germany or Finland, LC's role must be one of "providing standardization of bibliographic data as the first requirement." Welsh rather surprisingly said he hoped the recession will continue, pointing to what he called the "dreadful effect of large amounts of federal funds" which spawned such flubs as approval plan buying.

The place of the medical libraries in a national network was raised in a couple of different contexts. In one, Jacqueline Picciano of the library of the American Journal of Nursing expressed doubt that the talk of all types of libraries participating would hold true for the meds, and asked what kind of interface was possible. Dean Galvin opened up an interesting new range of possibilities with his suggestion that there is indeed a need for specialized networks and that they need not be out of place in a resource sharing national network.

The strongest attack on OCLC and its basic approach of providing service on the terms of individual members, rather than exacting adherence to bibliographic standards, authority files, etc., was made by Bill Axford (University of Oregon). Axford, though allowing OCLC to be the "outstanding library advance of the century," castigated it under the rubrics of "chronic overlayism" and "pernicious OCLC-itis."

OCLC, said Axford, is the classic example of overlaying new technology on old . . . the attachment to the belief that each library is unique meant that no authority system was built in. He compared the result to the permitting of both ALA rules and AACR (Anglo American Cataloging Rules) in the CONSER database, which, he charged, will make CONSER a lot less effective than if it hewed to AACR. Local autonomy, he went on, must be abandoned. Then he moved into an attack on the many libraries which, he said, the Barbara Markuson study shows did no cost studies before embarking on OCLC; that those that did, he said, won't make their results public. No clear cost benefit advantages, charged Axford, are being realized through OCLC by most libraries in the system. Axford suggested further that there would be "negative results in trying to provide too many services on any one data source" and that long range telecommunication costs were "prohibitive" when minicomputers are available.

There is still a lot of uncertainty as to who is going to run the resource sharing networks and what kind of organization is needed

Recovery of capital

In fact, Axford questioned the dollar sense today of an online system. Axford also made the strongest case at Pitt for the contention that resource sharing will have to be financed by the "recovery of capital" from present budgets—dropping expenditures for less valuable resources and/or programs and re-investing the money in providing access to the networks. John McDonald (University of Connecticut) disagreed with this pitch, as put forth both by Axford and Veaner, and stood up for the more traditional view of funding and cooperation. "It is in the nature of libraries to grow," he held; "Resource sharing is not a solution to the problems of library growth or economics, but a means of improving service to library users." There is, he said, no substitute for strong local resources, citing Mel Voigt's contention in a recent LJ "Skirmish Line" on the very small percent of library transactions which are accounted for by interlibrary loans. The Research Libraries Group (NYPL, Harvard, Yale, Columbia) said McDonald, is a means to better service, not lower costs. In this, McDonald, was in sharp disagreement with several who felt that today the only justification for cooperation is in terms of cost/benefit.

A national serials system

Interestingly, McDonald linked a certain skepticism for the present vision of networks with support for the projected National Serials Lending Library, a project which is being seen as modeled on the British Lending Library; it would form one component of a three-level National Serials System. Development of the NSLL, suggested McDonald, would take a heavy load off libraries and might be seen as an alternative to the resource sharing network as it is now conceptualized.

He noted LC's interest in being the locus of such a service and the support of the National Commission on Libraries and Information Science. (Al Trezza of NCLIS, whose paper on Wednesday reportedly gave strong backing to the hierarchical model for resource sharing, assured the conference that an early start would be made on the National Serials System.) McDonald took issue with a good deal of the thinking expressed at Pitt when he claimed that the NSLL could enable the big libraries to go on with their customary collection development.

Human factors

"Behavioral change" was a term much used at the Pittsburgh conference; everyone seemed to agree that a key obstacle to success would be the difficulty of educating both librarians and users to a new mode of operation. Some of this would involve quite basic change, such as getting both to forget "ownership" of books and think "access" to books. Librarians would have to transfer their client target from a local to a national constituency. Washington State Librarian Rod Swartz emphasized the need for "a subtle change in our thinking" which must come before and be a cause of institutional change, and called for continuing education to change attitudes, as well as increased interaction between the practitioner and the educator in library science. Swartz also sounded a warning against using resource sharing to perpetuate patterns which should be outgrown. Accessibility, he urged, should not be a substitute for good librarianship at home. He compared the planning that needs to be done to the planning that should go into a new building—which starts with an examination of programs.

The human factor was touched on somewhat differently by Bill Axford, who pointed out that concensus won't work in planning a budgetary overhaul that would end certain traditional functions; he didn't take it any farther, but that little opened up a whole field of speculation on the authority relationships which would develop within a national system of resource sharing. In his castigation of OCLC referred to earlier, Axford made much of the nonrational basis on which a great many librarians chose to go into OCLC, perhaps unwittingly spotlighting a human trait—faith—that might turn out to be as necessary to resource sharing as technological know-how. Indeed, Case Western's Esther Greenberg called Axford to account, saying "In 1968 there were a lot of us who felt it was time to start . . . we had terrible problems in getting (OCLC) going, learning how to use terminals, with no one to call on for advice—as others have been able to call on us. It's not fair to those of us who went through this experience to make us look foolish by saying that we didn't have cost figures before we went into it. We consider it, in retrospect, a privilege to have been a part of the effort."

Delivery systems

With the breakdown of quality mail service, there has been increasing concern among librarians for the future of the delivery systems on which large scale cooperation must rely, if libraries are indeed going to be able to get to the consumer the vast riches which can easily be identified by today's advanced bibliographical information systems. Delivery was mentioned frequently at Pitt. As Allen Veaner put it, "the state of the art of delivery is still primitive." But, he suggested, "changes in the generation of information itself may provide the answer with electronic delivery by the end of the century." Marcy Murphy (University of Pittsburgh) pointed out that delivery could and often should mean the delivery of data or information rather than materials; and Hank Shearouse opened up vistas with his following observation that, with the computer providing so much information, there will be a need for the librarian to prune the computer product to make it useful to the client.

Both Rod Swartz and Jane Rollins (N.Y. State Library) sounded the theme that frustration over delivery could be one immediate result of the increased access to bibliographic data. Rollins, speaking for New York's statewide interloan agency (NYSILL) noted that the system has been experiencing heavy and continuously growing demands, which would eventually degrade its ability to deliver service at a high level. Delivery systems, it was suggested, could have a role in network development: stimulating ancillary programs such as coordinated acquisitions.

. . . perhaps unwittingly spotlighting a human trait —faith— that might turn out to be as necessary to resource sharing as technological know-how

David Weill of NELB (the New England Library Board) found himself "underwhelmed by your comment" on courier service leading to coordinated acquisitions . . . "they have not resulted in resource sharing (in my experience) without the added impetus of federal funding." But Marcy Murphy contended that delivery systems have greatly increased service to users, with a 48 hour turnaround demonstrated by some operations. And she cited the example of agencies with courier service "at least informing each other of their acquisitions." Hank Shearouse said that experience in Colorado bore out the evidence that delivery services could help resource sharing to develop, that they "encourage libraries to look more closely at their present collections and acquisitions . . . we are moving toward cooperative acquisitions and collecting responsibilities." An unidentified participant sounded another major theme that ran unobtrusively through the conference when he suggested that "if a great deal more is going to be made available, the patron should expect to wait a while . . . there is no absolute necessity, he said, to call for high speed delivery." This approach, of a new willingness to accept limits on what can or should be done, appeared in many contexts.

New limits

John MacDonald disagreed with calls for libraries to find ways to serve the nonuser, arguing that it was a big enough job serving "real needs." Peter Fenton (Boston State College) said that maybe it would be better to educate the user to our own delivery limitations rather than holding out promises we can't keep. The mention of fees for service seemed to indicate a fairly general acceptance of their necessity as some part of the financing of library service; only Peter Oliver of the Harvard Divinity School sounded an objection and urged that something be done about this "bar" to resource sharing.

As mentioned earlier, there was frequently expressed at Pittsburgh a growing belief in limiting the size of institutions, not just OCLC, but libraries themselves, with former Princeton Librarian Bill Dix being quoted as theorizing that when a library gets in the range between one and two million volumes, a whole new set of laws may begin to apply to it. And Allen Veaner warned that the larger a system becomes the more fragile it becomes and the more people who are endangered by its crashing.

James Rush, OCLC director of development, evidently abandoned his prepared remarks after Axford's highly critical talk and delivered an extempore attack on a good many library practices. Among his suggestions was the advice that libraries limit their purchasing to materials they know are going to be used—as compared to the "esoterica" which Rush sees filling libraries under present collection policies. He urged that librarians give up the "delusion" that they should offer free service and find some way to make people pay, and also get a lot more people to use them—or be replaced. "Most stuff published today," he said, "is pure crap. The rantings of a demented population of would be authors. The publishers will grind it out as long as libraries will buy it. If libraries didn't support publishers, not 40 percent of the periodicals or monographs would be published. . . . Instead of the National Serials Lending Library," he urged "just don't buy junk."

Only one person at the Conference raised the question of what could be done to counter the discrimination that threatens to be getting built into resource sharing: "information for doctors more important than information for patients or senior citizens; information for grad students more important than for undergrads; and information for those who can pay more important than for those that can't." The question was asked from the floor by an unidentified woman; no one cared to pick up that particular hot potato and that was the last heard of it—a pretty clear indication when 350 librarians much concerned with the future of their calling find they have nothing to say on a patent denial of a principle that has been held to be among the self evident truths.

Allen Veaner had something to say about limits too: "We still come back to finite resources," he said, commenting on John McDonald's remarks on funding and growth. "Cash is still the limitation on how we can use a resource. Our photocopy budget is now 100 times what it was when the more expensive photostat was the only means of making a copy. If we had free phone service, the phone system would collapse. My worry about the National Serials Lending Library is fear of its success."

Impact on publishing

There was recognition of the likelihood that if resource sharing cuts the sale of a book down from the 850 average run today of a scientific book to 150, that the price would have to go up if the publisher is still to pay for the writing, editing, typesetting, and printing that have to happen before a copy is sold. There was no suggestion put forward, despite the fact that such a price increase would wipe out a good deal of the point of cooperative acquisitions, of how to deal with this prospect. But figures were quoted that purport to show that it is wildly expensive to acquire a new book (up to $160 per volume according to figures cited by Economist Jacob Cohen), and this could make sharing attractive even if prices go through the roof. There was a suggestion that publishers get into the lending as well as the selling business. And as cited earlier, James Rush suggested that if libraries practiced intelligent book selection a lot of their problems would go away by themselves, a suggestion that was made also by Peter Fenton (Boston State College) who urged that "librarians should maybe take responsibility for stanching the flow of unnecessary literature." There was one other reference to the future publisher/library interface under resource sharing: Denver Public's Hank Shearouse suggested that "demand printing" become a major component in resource sharing. Karl Nyren

PEOPLE

J. FRANTZ

C. JOHNS

D. MCKAY

JOHN AKONFUL has been appointed Acquisitions Collection Development Librarian at Kentucky State University, Frankfort.

HUGH ATKINSON, formerly Director of the Ohio State University Libraries, Columbus, is now University Librarian, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign.

EARL BEAN, formerly a librarian at Western Kentucky University, Bowling Green, is now Head of Public Services and Assistant to the Director, Blazer Library, Kentucky State University, Frankfort.

RICHARD BRADBERRY, formerly Humanities Librarian, Auburn University Libraries, Alabama, is now Director of the Library, Langston University, Langston, Okla.

REV. JOSEPH P. BROWNE, C.S.C., formerly Technical Services Librarian is now Acting Director, Clark Library, University of Portland, Ore.

LAURETTA G. BUCK, formerly Cataloger, North Carolina State University, Raleigh, is now Serials Cataloger, Auburn University, Ala.

EDWIN CASTAGNA, retired Director of the Enoch Pratt Free Library, Baltimore, who has been serving as Interim City Librarian, San Francisco Public Library since August, will finish that assignment at the end of January 1977.

EMMA R. CHRISTINE, formerly of the Department of Librarianship, Jose State University, California, is now Senior Lecturer, School Librarianship, Townsville College of Advanced Education, Queensland, Australia.

DORIS W. COX, formerly Professor and Chairman, Department of Library Science, Appalachian State University, Boone, North Carolina has joined the faculty of the Department of Library Science, Ball State University, Muncie, Ind.

GARY N. DENUE, formerly Assistant Director of Libraries, University of North Dakota, Grand Forks, is now Director of Libraries, University of Detroit, Mich.

GUY R. DIBENEDETTO, formerly Reference Librarian, Arkansas State University, is now Special Collections Librarian, Auburn University, Ala.

JOHN C. FRANTZ, formerly Director of the Brooklyn Public Library and currently a consultant to the Pahlavi National Library, Iran, has been appointed City Librarian, at the San Francisco Public Library.

CLAUDE J. JOHNS, JR., formerly Director, U.S. Air Force Academy Libraries, Colorado, is now Director of Libraries, University of Northern Colorado, Greeley.

RUTH KELLOGG, Director of the Elkhart Public Library, Indiana, since 1950, has retired.

DAWN KISLEY, formerly Associate Director, Chippiwa Library League, Mount Pleasant, Michigan, is now County Librarian, Shiawassee County Library, Corunna, Mich.

DAVID NEIL MCKAY, has been appointed State Librarian of North Carolina.

PAUL M. MALECKI, Director of the Corning Public Library, New York, has been appointed joint Director of the Southern Tier Library System, Corning, and the Corning Public Library.

RICHARD W. MEYER, formerly Assistant Director for Technical Services, University of Texas at Dallas, has been appointed Director of Library Technical Services, Cunningham Memorial Library, Indiana State University, Terre Haute.

ROBERT K. O'NEILL, a recent graduate of the University of Chicago Library School, has been appointed Head of the Department of Rare Books and Special Collections, Cunningham Memorial Library, Indiana State University, Terre Haute.

RICHARD D. RIDGE, formerly Assistant Personnel Manager for Pullman-Standard Corporation, is now Personnel Coordinator at the Lake County Public Library, Merrillville, Ind.

JAMES R. STOLTZ, formerly Head Librarian, Crosby Library, Gonzaga University, Spokane, Washington, has been appointed Director of Library Services, Clatsop Community College, Astoria, Ore.

Can you afford a cavalier stance toward paperbacks?

In good times or bad times—the paperback explosion continues. They're being published in greater and greater numbers. New formats are being introduced. New pricing and discount schedules are being established. New specialty publishers are emerging.

PAPERBOUND BOOKS IN PRINT is the only current, comprehensive, authoritative and continuous guide to this increasingly important segment of the book world. Use it...

- to have a complete picture of what's available
- to compare prices of all editions
- to order at the correct price from the correct source
- to build subject collections and fill customers' special needs
- to locate titles when you know only the author and vice versa
- to choose texts, compile reading lists, build curricula

Just look what you get for a one-year subscription...

- A Base Volume in December. It lists virtually every paperback in print—c. 140,000—by author, by title, and by some 450 subject headings. Each entry provides author, title, series, illustrator, ISBN, publisher, price, whether an original or reissue.
- A Supplement in May. It lists approx. 35,500 new titles, new editions, o.p.'s, price and other changes. Same author/title/subject arrangement. Same full finding, ordering, and bibliographic data.
- A Supplement in September. It replaces the May Supplement and cumulates all changes occurring since the base volume was published. More than 60,000 entries.

All this for just $54.50 a year. Subscribe now. Start your subscription with the brand-new Base Volume 1977, coming in December, 1976. ISBN 0-8352-0934-2.

Important note! The brand-new PAPERBOUND BOOKS IN PRINT Base Volume 1977 can be purchased separately. Just $35.00 for this 3,200-page, 140,000-entry, author/title/subject source. ISBN 0-8352-0851-6. December, 1976. 8½" x 11". (Plus shipping and handling charges and sales tax where applicable.)

Send all subscriptions and orders to:
R. R. BOWKER
SUBSCRIPTION SERVICE DEPT.
P.O. Box 67
Whitinsville, Mass. 01588.

BOWKER
NEW YORK & LONDON

BOOKS IN PERIL

A MINI-SYMPOSIUM ON THE PRESERVATION OF LIBRARY MATERIALS

Call To Action

Determined efforts may yet restore desirable levels of funding for services in the nation's libraries; but the physical deterioration of library materials themselves threatens to leave us with spacious, well-staffed trash bins . . .

LIBRARIANS have a well-earned reputation for acquisitiveness and something approaching a mania for control. We are fiendishly clever about acquiring materials, even when we seem to have no book budgets at all, and we are justly proud of the manner in which we have provided bibliographic control and access to those materials. The purpose of these activities is clear: we are in business to provide information in all its forms, manifestations, and media to our several publics. The art and science of acquisitions, cataloging, reference work, and reader service are well-developed—continually growing and adapting to changing needs, to be sure, but possessed of a basic core of principle and practice which serves to standardize modern librarianship to an ever greater extent.

The area of preservation, on the other hand, is a wild frontier: the remains of pages we dust out of book drops and off stack floors, the crumbling ruins in basements and rare book rooms, the paper that literally disintegrates at a touch—these represent an immediate and monumental challenge. It is no longer enough (if it ever was) to acquire and catalog and get the right book into the reader's hands at the right moment. Between the assembling of information and the delivery there is the virtually ignored but utterly essential phase of storage, maintenance, custodianship, care.

We have tended in the past to think of this responsibility as belonging to the pages who shelve in our stacks, to the menders in their paste-pot-and-scissors corner, or to the remote curators of rare books. But now, with the life-expectancy of modern book papers declining as inexorably as prices rise, with the deteriorating effects of environmental pollution, with the cumulative wear and tear of normal use and abuse, we are recognizing that the responsibility for preservation must be shouldered by all: every staff member and user who has physical contact with library materials, every administrator and board member who makes decisions about buildings and furniture and allocation of time and money, every publisher and media creator, every photocopy machine operator and interlibrary loan clerk and selection officer and bindery preparation assistant and media equipment manufacturer and supplier of glue and boards and book cloth.

The causes for the alarming increase in the deterioration of library materials are multitudinous and complex, but one thing is simple and obvious: if we are going to save most of what we now have, we've got to get moving fast. We know we have a problem, but what do we do about it? In which direction do we move? How can we move fast when we don't yet know where to go? These are fair questions, and discouraging ones, because the technical knowledge and procedural know-how in this field are yet in a state of near-infancy. We know more than we did 20 years ago; but we have yet to identify all the questions, let alone find all the answers.

In the midst of this uncertainty, with conflicting claims from this technician and that supplier about the miracle effects of one treatment and the promise of mass preservation through another, many feel paralyzed to act at all, fearful that their efforts may turn out to make worse the already dreadful problem of deteriorating materials. But we cannot afford to do nothing until that glorious day when we know how to do everything perfectly. And there are in fact three levels of activity in which we can involve ourselves now: first, local programs which can be undertaken safely in the absence of a professional conservator; second, cooperative programs through which scarce expertise can be shared and unnecessary duplication avoided; third, the development of a national program to support and coordinate local and regional preservation activities.

Preservation is a field badly in need of more experts, as anyone knows who has tried to hire a "preservation officer" or put together a local preservation workshop. But it is not a field that we can leave to the experts, if we are to rescue the millions of books and other library materials quietly rotting on our shelves. So, read on . . .

Pamela W. Darling

A Local Preservation Program: Where To Start

PAMELA W. DARLING

YOUR LIBRARY has determined that an organized attack on its preservation problem is in order and you are put in charge. Where do you begin? The first part of this article describes a number of building blocks which, in judicious combination, can be used to create a broad preservation program for a library or archive collection. The second section outlines a strategy for evaluating your own library's preservation needs and devising a program suited to them. Keep in mind that there is—there can be—no single model or package appropriate for every situation. There are only some principles, some guidelines, and some hard facts that can be weighed, analyzed, and applied in a particular institutional context.

Building Blocks

I. Maintenance. A good maintenance program cannot undo damage which has already been done, but it can reduce the likelihood of further damage to existing materials, and markedly increase the life-expectancy of new materials. "Maintenance" might also be called "handling" (to distinguish it from unstopping the plumbing and changing light bulbs), and includes:

1. ENVIRONMENTAL CONTROL. Virtually all library materials are made of organic materials of one sort or another, and are thus subject to a variety of chemical reactions with water, dirt, and airborne pollutants. In addition, the physical and chemical stability within the materials themselves can be destroyed by such outside forces as heat, light, and fluctuations in relative humidity. Comprehensive control of the physical environment is therefore of highest importance for the storage of materials intended for more than temporary retention: constant temperatures between 68° and 74° F, relative humidity between 45 and 55 percent, air filtered to remove dirt and gaseous pollutants (especially sulfur compounds which speed the formation of acids that embrittle paper), ultra-violet filters on windows and light fixtures. This crucial area is unfortunately one of the most expensive, but we ignore it at our peril.[1]

2. SHELVING AND TRANSPORTING. How many books on your shelves lean at cockeyed angles so that gravity literally tears them apart? How many times have you pulled a book from a shelf by its head piece instead of pushing its neighbors back enough to get hold of the middle? How many users and stack assistants have you seen carrying a jumble of books in their arms, spines twisting, one cover smashing into the pages of another, the whole load threatening to crash to the floor? For how many hours do volumes sit on sorting tables and trucks with their spines up, foredges down, the pages unsupported and pulling mercilessly against the binding which was not built to support them that way?

3. COPYING. How many books have you seen with cracked spines, wrinkled or broken out pages caused by pressing the spine down firmly to get a photocopy of pages with narrow inner margins?

4. IDENTIFICATION OF DAMAGED OR DETERIORATING MATERIALS needing some sort of remedial treatment is another aspect of maintenance that really leads beyond it. This should accompany all other processing activities—circulation, shelving, shelf-reading, bindery preparation, etc.

In this area of maintenance, more than any other, we have a rather unsophisticated but enormous education job to do, for all the skill of the finest restorer can be wasted if the next person to handle the book yanks it across the table by one cover, holds it open with a brick while reading, smashes it down on a copy machine, and brings it back to the library in a string bag along with the groceries. And it's not just the poor benighted users who do this to our materials; our own staff can be even worse, because they have so many opportunities to do things wrong and because the old saying holds true: familiarity breeds contempt, and if you handle hundreds of books every day it is easy to forget that each one must be treated with care if it is to survive.

II. Physical Treatment. The second major program area involves five sub-programs:

1. SHELF-PROCESSING—the things done to ready materials for use, to identify them for proper shelving and retrieval, and to facilitate circulation. Do

Pamela W. Darling is Head of the Preservation Department, Columbia University Libraries.

This article is based on a paper presented at the "Books in Peril" conference jointly sponsored by the library schools of Columbia University and Rutgers University, April 1976 you write the accession number or other local information in books with ball point ink that can creep and run and stain? Do you color code volumes with masking or plastic tapes which slip with handling, leaving traces of adhesive to catch dirt and muck up neighboring volumes? Do you use acidic adhesives to fasten those otherwise wonderful protective book jackets? Do you use paper clips, which tear and rust, to attach charge cards to circulating books? Do you open uncut pages with a finger instead of a sharp knife or bone folder? Do you put prints and photographs in acidic paper folders which will eat up their contents as the folders self-destruct? A little care in examining what is now done to process materials may turn up better ways of treating them without costing much.

2. BINDING—a must for all serials and paperbacks which are meant to be kept for more than a couple of years. This is currently a very difficult area: gone are the good old days of certainty, when there was an accepted standard for "library binding" which we believed to be best for all books and which was more or less economical. Instead we are confronted with a welter of types and styles: "Class A," Standard, Economy, Budget, Perfect; cleat-sewing, over-sewing, side-sewing, adhesives; quick-binds, spiral-binds, post-binds. And it's all expensive.

The state of the technology today is chaotic, because new methods and materials have not yet been adequately tested, because we continue to discover unfortunate results from the "tried and true" methods and materials, and because inflation has forced libraries and binders alike into compromises that leave us all a little nervous. At present there does not seem to be one kind of binding that is best, or even good, for all kinds of material. Instead, we must learn to match the virtues and drawbacks of various binding styles to the nature and probable uses of our materials, considering such factors as width of margins, type of paper, frequency and type of anticipated use, and selecting binding styles whose characteristics most nearly accommodate different materials.

3. REPAIRS—first-aid treatment for damaged materials that are not suitable for commercial rebinding and don't warrant the professional attention of the conservator. The proper scope of in-house repair operations will depend very much on the nature of your collection and the skills of your staff. Perversely, because the skills needed for archival quality repair work are so rare, it is easier to develop a good program for quick repairs to extend by a few circulations the life of popular, easily replaceable items, than it is to provide proper treatment for items of permanent value which are difficult or impossible to replace. Several library suppliers offer supplies and little illustrated manuals for such quick repairs; these may be used safely only for items which need not remain forever in your collection. For materials of permanent value, if you have the staff to master the skills, use Carolyn Horton's Cleaning and Preserving Bindings and Related Materials (American Library Association, 2d ed. rev., 1969) as guide and manual, and plan the program carefully before rushing in. You'll need well-ventilated space with shelves and plenty of work surfaces and plumbing, intelligent and dextrous staff, and money for quality supplies and tools. Keep in mind, however, that tampering with books in your permanent collections, especially with rare books, is no job for an amateur, however sincere. Much of the professional conservator's work consists of undoing the work of well-meaning do-it-yourselfers; if you haven't the resources to do it right, don't do it!

4. PROTECTIVE COVERINGS—a holding action. What should you do with things which are too fragile to stay on the shelves as they are, can't be rebound, for which replacements are not now available, and for which you can't afford professional restoration? Protect them, using one or more of a variety of containers, boxes, prefabricated or custom-made portfolios and envelopes and folders, mylar sandwiches for single sheets, keeping in mind one cardinal rule: all the ingredients in your protective coverings should be acid-free and chemically inert, so they will not hasten the process of deterioration in the items they are supposed to protect. These devices cannot reverse the damage, but they will buy time, by adding physical support to fragile materials and shielding them from damaging environmental agents.

5. RESTORATION—the final resort for items of great and enduring value. This may include deacidification and strengthening of brittle paper, rebuilding of leather and other cover materials, removing stains, filling holes—a whole range of painstaking techniques which should be attempted only by a well-trained professional conservator. A few very large or specialized libraries can afford to have such a person on the staff; the rest of us must go outside for such work, when the importance of the materials justifies the expense.

III. Replacement. This third major program area is not relevant if the item in question is an autographed copy of Ulysses or a set of manuscripts, but very relevant for almost all "popular" literature and a good deal of research material as well. If only a few pages are involved, you may make or acquire photocopies to bind into a volume. But most replacements will come through trade channels, in hard copy or microform. Thorough searching routines should be established for locating replacements in the out-of-print, reprint, and micropublishing marketplaces. In some library situations, it will even be appropriate to set up a preservation microfilming program to create replacements for originals too far gone to save any other way.[2]

When considering replacement, keep in mind the fact that for some types of materials an exact replacement may be unnecessary: a later edition, or another work on the same topic may serve the information needs of your users just as well, or even better, than the deteriorated original. And, perhaps even more important, keep re-examining your librarian's hording instinct: do you need that information any more at

"If we don't begin learning to throw some things away, in order to concentrate on saving
what is really needed, the central stacks of all major libraries will soon be condemned as unsanitary landfill—the world's intellectual garbage dumps"

all? In this area, our economic hard-times may be a small blessing in disguise, since all of these mechanisms for keeping deteriorating materials available in some form cost money.

Use this test: "It will cost me X dollars to (bind, repair, restore, or replace) this item. If we didn't already have it, would we spend that much today to acquire it?" If not, because your clientele has no further use for it (maybe never had any use for it), get rid of it! Give it to another library if it needs it and can care for it; sell it to a collector or dealer if there are enough pieces left to sell; or—horror of horrors—put it in the trash can. If we don't begin learning to throw some things away, in order to concentrate on saving what is really needed, the central stacks of all major libraries will soon be condemned as unsanitary landfill—the world's intellectual garbage dumps.

IV. Defensive Preservation. The fourth major program area concerns some precautions which should minimize future problems for materials just coming into the collection.

1. ACQUISITIONS. The first rule is don't get it if you don't need it—an easy rule to follow if the getting involves paying real money. But it should be adhered to just as rigorously if the stuff is "free," because the library must pay in space and maintenance every year of its life. The second acquisitions rule is, get what is needed in a usable format; this may mean, buy the cheapest paperback if you intend to replace it when next year's edition comes out, but buy the sturdy hardcover if it is to be kept permanently. It may also mean, place a double subscription, for hard copy current issues and microform backfiles, so there is no need to claim missing issues, and collate, and bind, and provide no service to users for months while something is "At Bindery." In most cases, microform backfiles are cheaper than binding, and they tend to last much longer.

2. SCREEN NEW ARRIVALS. Catch and correct existing or imminent preservation problems before new materials join the wounded legions already on the shelves. Some examples will illustrate the range of such possibilities:

A shipment of books arrives from the tropics with a suspicious musty smell. The entire contents should be fumigated before being processed, to kill off mold, fungus and bugs.

A geology text comes in with a loose map stuck in the back; a pocket should be made at once to keep it in place.

> ". . . tampering with books in your permanent collections . . . is no job for an amateur, however sincere. Much of the professional conservator's work consists of undoing the work of well-meaning do-it-yourselfers; if you haven't the resources to do it right, don't do it!"

A major portion of current collecting consists of small pamphlet material, much of which is printed on poor quality, high-acid paper; consider converting this to microfiche before cataloging.

Sample testing indicates that film in a large microform set was improperly processed, the sodium thiosulfate (residue from the fixing solution) at a level sure to cause future degradation of the image. It should be returned to the publisher with the request that he provide film which meets the established national standards for archival quality film.

Write frequent complaining letters to publishers who sell you material on poor quality paper, reminding them that permanent/durable paper does exist, and send copies to the Bookdealer/Library Relations Committee and the Preservation Committee of the American Library Association and to the Association of American Publishers. (If remaining fragments of a page, with the publisher's imprint visible on one piece, are included with the letter, the effect may be dramatic.)

These then are the major program areas: maintenance and physical treatment, including environmental control, shelf-processing, binding, repair, protective covering and restoration; replacement, or preserving information instead of the material itself; and "defensive preservation." We turn now to a way of arriving at a combination of these activities best suited to the individual library.

Putting the Right Blocks Together

I. Assign Responsibility

The first thing to be done is to assign responsibility for preservation to someone. The size and organization of the institution will necessarily affect who and how this is done, whether the responsibility is full or part-time, with or without additional staff. All planning should be coordinated through, if not done by, one person, who should have the authority to implement those plans; otherwise, you may end up with six conflicting programs, or none at all. Depending upon the knowledge and experience of the person assigned to this work, it may be desirable to bring in outside experts for help in evaluating needs and possibilities, but do not expect a consultant to do the whole job. It's like automation: the best systems design usually comes from someone already well-grounded in local library operations, so that the technology is

Sample Work Sheet For Planning a Comprehensive Preservation Program

Type of Material Approx. Quantity, & Type of Use	Preservation Goal(s) for This Category	Present Condition	Program(s) Needed to Approach Goal	Resources Now Available to Support Program	Additional Resources Needed	Priority	Proposed Action & Target Date shaped to serve the library, not vice versa.[3]

BOOKS IN PERIL

II. Develop a Plan

With responsibility assigned, a plan must be developed, and the planning process involves four major steps:

1. ESTABLISH A PRESERVATION GOAL within the framework of your institution's particular service objectives: what things should be saved, how, to meet the needs of those the library serves? To answer that question, consider the following factors:

What types of materials are included in the collections? Current data or retrospective files? One-of-a-kind manuscripts or mass-distribution publications? Monographs, serials, newspapers, documents, photographs, tapes, globes?

What kind of use is made of the materials? Quick reference or in-depth research? To support instruction? To meet recreational needs? To satisfy consumer interests? Are stacks open or closed? Do materials circulate or remain under supervision at all times?

Most collections contain a variety of materials used in many different ways. Begin to distinguish among them in planning so you don't end up trying to provide the same treatment to a first edition of T. S. Eliot and the local phone book. Use the first column of the sample work sheet (see page 2345) to begin breaking down the collection into manageable units.

Once the nature and purpose of the various parts of a collection are clearly defined, it should be fairly easy to establish a "preservation goal" or goals for each part. For example, the goal for a collection consisting chiefly of popular fiction or college reserve reading might be something like "To keep materials in readily usable condition for two years or 25 circulations." The goal for a manuscript collection, on the other hand, might be "To protect and preserve in original form forever."

It is vital that the staff members responsible for day-to-day service for each category or collection of material be involved in setting these goals; often they will be the only ones really capable of analyzing the needs and judging acceptable alternatives. The "preservation officer" can advise on possible alternatives, and arrange for delivery of repair and other services; but those responsible for collection development and reader service can best decide which alternative is best for what. In a small library, the person may be the same; but it would be foolhardy to entrust all decision-making in a large collection to a single person, no matter how "expert."

2. ASSESS THE PRESENT STATE OF THE COLLECTION, measured against the goals. This assessment should cover physical environment, existing programs and procedures for processing, binding, repairs, etc., and the present condition of the materials themselves. The assessment should be based on a broad overview and sampling, not on a detailed comprehensive survey. Resist all temptations or suggestions to examine everything from A to Z to determine exactly how many volumes need to be bound or repaired or replaced or microfilmed. Though it is quite true that, with such precise information, it would be much easier to get funds and to set up programs to do the job, the fact is that (unless the collection is tiny or hundreds of staff are available to conduct the survey) the A's are likely to have crumbled to dust by the time our grandchildren get to the Z's.

Summarize in the third column of the work sheet how well or poorly the present conditions, based on this general assessment, seem to approximate the goals.

3. IDENTIFY THE PROGRAM ELEMENT or combination which will be appropriate to close the gap between present condition and goal for each category of material. In a rare book collection, for example, the needed program elements might be "Restore as funds permit; protective coverings for all fragile items in the meantime." In a newspaper collection, the program might be "Replace all with microform; encapsulate for display certain front pages like 'Dewey beats Truman' and 'Nixon Resigns'." Next to each program element, indicate what (if any) resources are presently available to support such work; and, in the next column, what additional resources would be needed. (There's nothing magic about the work sheet; it simply suggests a way of relating a jumble of facts into a cohesive picture.)

4. ESTABLISHING PRIORITIES is the next, and perhaps most painful, step. It is well to involve a broad range of staff and users as well as appropriate authorities at this stage, both to educate them about needs and possibilities and to generate support for the actual programs which result from the planning and decision-making process. In setting priorities, regardless of who or how many are involved, it is essential to balance the major goals of the institution against the small but often noisy claims of a few special materials or users. You will not have a fraction of the resources needed to take care of everything right away; so use what is available wisely, to do the most good as defined by overall institutional goals. A historical research collection with the world's only copy of some crucial document should give top priority to its restoration. But a junior college library that happens to have a few old manuscripts should pop them into mylar envelopes (or give them away), and concentrate its resources on keeping the instructional collection in sturdy shape. These are hard decisions; but if we fail to make them everything will go to pieces. And if they proceed from careful analysis and respond to established service goals, they can be justified to all but the most stubborn critics.

"if you handle hundreds of books every day, it's easy to forget that each one must be treated with care if it is to survive"

5. THE CONCRETE STEPS TO BE TAKEN to turn priorities from paper plans into concrete programs should be set forth in specific terms, with realistic target dates. This may involve further analysis of existing resources (staff, space, equipment, and money), and should lead directly into the organizational modifications that will, usually, be the first step of plan implementation.

III. Implementation

Once the direction and scope of the program have been established through the planning process, it will usually be necessary to reallocate staff resources, to modify some procedures and set up new ones. The nature of such changes will necessarily depend on the size and nature of the institution and on the combination of programs to be pursued. But, as with the planning, so with the implementation, it is generally most efficient to coordinate all programs through a single person, who should usually have direct supervisory responsibility for them. Since all libraries will already have had established operations or units engaged in some of the activities that now become part of the total preservation program, a reorganization may be in order. While there is no "best" way to handle this, it is useful to think of preservation as a new branch of the technical services, especially since its activities will frequently affect both acquisitions and bibliographic control functions.

With the priority programs spelled out, and an organization suitable for performing these functions set up and staffed, the work can begin. And here we get into an array of nitty-gritty details and procedures and local adaptations that cannot possibly be described here. But two guidelines may be helpful:

Keep goals and priorities clearly in mind, and don't be afraid to alter them if changing service needs, or new treatment possibilities, or drastic shifts in available resources alter the original basis for program decisions. Work, first and foremost, to meet the needs of your own user group. Be responsive to changes in those needs, but don't jump on every new technological bandwagon that comes along (and there will be many) unless it is clearly going in your direction.

Remember that plans were made for categories of materials, but programs must accommodate individual items. Every book is different, both physically and in its contents. There must be a regular routine for identifying materials which need preservation attention, determining which alternative is best for each, and feeding them into the system in accordance with established priorities. This screening may be rather horrifying to contemplate in a large collection. But if categories and priorities have been clearly defined, the criteria for deciding what to do to what will follow naturally. Again, collection development and reader service staff should be involved in these decisions. The degree of and mechanisms for such involvement must be tailored to the situation, but if this protection is not built in, some worthless things may be given fancy treatment while a priceless rarity gets chopped up, microfilmed, and thrown away. You can't tell a book by its cover, and you can't expect preservation "experts" to know all about every subject in the collection.

Finally, in implementing the program, don't forget the column, "Additional Resources Needed." Even while pressing forward with the programs that can be supported now, seek support for the others. Detailed plans, cost figures and statistics from operating programs have a powerful effect in moving money from the philanthropic have's to the have-not's. Foundations have proved increasingly responsive to preservation proposals, and private donors may be just as pleased to help save what you've got as to help you get more.

Conclusion

Here, then, is a place to start: a group of major program possibilities, and a strategy for adapting them to the needs of particular institutions. What I hope has become clear, among many things, is the exciting newness of this sub-field of librarianship. There is, to be sure, a steadily growing body of knowledge about the technical side of preservation. But when it comes to applying that knowledge to a working library situation, in some remotely affordable way, we are all novices. It is a tremendous professional challenge. We have got to invent the preservation counterparts to the elaborate systems for acquisitions and bibliographic control that have been painstakingly developed in this century since Melvil Dewey. The paper and microform standards, repair and binding techniques, environmental control mechanisms, replacement procedures, shelving practices—these are our tools. Now we must learn how to use those tools, in real library situations, so that the useful materials acquired and cataloged by our grandparents, our parents, and ourselves can be used by our children and theirs.

"... plans are made for categories of materials, but programs must accommodate individual items. Every book is different, physically and in its content"

REFERENCES

1. For greater detail, see Banks, Paul N. "Environmental Standards for Storage of Books and Manuscripts," Library Journal, February 1, 1974, p. 339-41; and "Environmental Protection of Books and Related Materials," Preservation Leaflet 2, Library of Congress, 1975.
2. See the author's "Developing a Preservation Microfilming Program," Library Journal, November 1, 1974, p. 2803-09, which discusses both administrative and procedural aspects; and "Microforms in Libraries: Preservation and Storage" Microform Review, April 1976, p. 93-100. which sets forth criteria for determining when microform is a suitable medium for preserving information previously recorded on paper, and also provides guidance on preserving microforms themselves.
3. Newcomers to the field will find very useful the annotated bibliography, "Selected References in the Literature of Conservation," Preservation Leaflet 1, Library of Congress, 1975.

BOOKS IN PERIL

Cooperative Approaches To Conservation

PAUL N. BANKS

WHILE it has been stated and restated that library conservation problems are massive, it might be worthwhile once again to look at the dimensions of the problems in order to establish a context for discussing cooperative approaches to conservation. In quantitative terms, the 111 libraries which are members of the Association of Research Libraries and of the Independent Research Libraries Association hold something over 220,000,000 volumes. If this figure were not awesome enough, we might see what it does not include. It doesn't include the maps, manuscripts, photographs, and other nonbook materials of the member libraries. While it does appear to include most of the major research collections, there are over 24,000 libraries listed in the American Library Directory, many more than 111 of which clearly have materials which would be defined as research collections. And it does not include archive repositories or (with a couple of exceptions) historical societies, whose collections certainly include materials of permanent research value.

Qualitative as well as quantitative aspects of the conservation of library materials must be considered also. Indeed, one of the extraordinary difficulties in this field is that we must deal with a complex spectrum of materials, a spectrum which includes complete ranges of both intellectual and artifactual values. Approaches to the preservation of materials at the two ends of the spectrum are beginning to emerge, but there is as yet no philosophical basis nor are there satisfactory preservation methods for the vast range of materials in the middle of the continuum.

A third aspect of library conservation is temporal. The laboratory work of Barrow, Smith and others, along with purely empirical observation of the condition of books in older and more heavily-used research libraries, suggests that time is running out for a significant portion of these collections. Although the decline in the lasting qualities of paper has been remarkably linear since the 15th Century, the worst of the bad-paper period started in the 1870's and the rate at which books are actually becoming unusable appears to be accelerating. Nor should this be surprising when one considers not only the inherent instability of the paper, but poor environmental conditions, heavy use, weak original bindings, and destructive rebinding and restoration practices, and so on.

A fourth problem in library conservation is that it is expensive. Even microfilming, correctly thought of as the cheapest method presently available for preserving the intellectual content of brittle books, is hardly inexpensive when we are talking about millions if not billions of pages which need to be filmed. (The qualifier "presently available" should be noted here, since there is some hope that mass preservation methods—including optimum storage conditions—may become available to slow down significantly the rapid deterioration of materials.)

Less discussed in the literature of preservation, but equally daunting, is the cost of treating distinctive materials—those items which, because of technical or artifactual characteristics, must be physically preserved rather than being preserved through reproduction. Distinctive materials require careful individual decision-making and often many hours of scarce and expensive skills to restore. Moreover, it is questionable whether major cost savings through improved technology will be possible in this area; for example, it seems unlikely that early books will ever be able to be satisfactorily rebound by machine.

Finally, library conservation is, in that wonderful euphemism, a developing field. While interest in the field has grown dramatically in the past few years, it was only five years ago that the first conservation course was taught in a library school; the Library of Congress's broad conservation program is of approximately similar age; there are as yet no formal training programs for library conservators or conservation administrators; the National Commission on Libraries and Information Science has given the merest nod toward the problems of preservation, and so on.

We have seen, then, several major problems of library conservation: the amount of materials needing preservation is massive; the character of the materials, and, consequently, of appropriate preservation methods, is highly diverse; the need for conservation measures is urgent; conservation in any form is expensive; and the whole field of library conservation is underdeveloped. How then can we begin to tackle preservation of this vital segment of our cultural heritage in a useful way in an era of expanding needs and shrinking resources?

One way, clearly, is through cooperative efforts. Through permitting maximum utilization of the limited knowledge and skills available, through economies of scale where such are possible, and through the reduction in du-

Paul N. Banks is Conservator of the Newberry Library. This article is based on an address presented at the American Library Association Conference, July 1976, at a program sponsored by the Resources and Technical Services Division Committee on the Preservation of Library Materials plication of effort, cooperative action can help to gain maximum benefit from the limited resources that we have to preserve our nation's collective memory. Indeed, the problems of preservation are so complex and massive that it may only be through cooperation that we can hope to tackle them on a scale adequate to reverse the rapid deterioration of our collections. Three areas in which cooperative effort may be productive are in acquisition, retention and preservation responsibility; reproduction; and physical treatment.

Acquisition, retention, preservation

One of the apparently inevitable facts of library conservation, one which is beginning to be discussed despite its equally inevitable unpopularity, is the division of collecting, retention, and preservation responsibilities. While one does not hear as much about the information explosion as one did a few years ago, and while some types of information are beginning to be disseminated in new, nonbook formats, there is no doubt that the rate of growth of information has slowed little if at all. At the same time, as Richard De Gennaro has opined, libraries are unlikely again to have the money for collections development that was characteristic of the booming sixties, at least for the foreseeable future. It would seem, then, that the only alternative to a broad decline in the quality of our library resources is for acquisition and retention policies to be coordinated among institutions, primarily in a defined geographical area, in order to make the size of collections which need to be preserved more manageable, and to free funds for the preservation of older materials already in the collections. Similarly, expensive preservation efforts should be allocated among cooperating institutions in the same way.

Some of these questions were addressed, in the framework of a proposed national program, by Gordon Williams in his 1965 report for the Association of Research Libraries. The lack of comment or action on that report, despite its distinguished authorship and auspices, may be a measure of the unpopularity of what libraries perhaps perceive as loss of individual sovereignty as well as of the overwhelming dimensions of the problem. ARL again tackled the question of preservation in its 1972 report by Warren J. Haas. Haas's proposals, although less threatening-sounding than Williams', have again elicited no broad call to action.

However, on the regional level, the groundwork for such a scheme is being laid by the Research Libraries Group, the consortium consisting of Harvard, Yale, Columbia and the Research Divisions of the New York Public Library. RLG's Serials Task Force is in the process of developing mechanisms for reviewing serials subscriptions and cancellations for titles which do not have to be in each of the four libraries, but for which one library's copy can be shared by all. In addition to saving money in subscription costs, such a program also of course has the potential for saving costly storage space as well. Similarly, the RLG Preservation Committee is attempting to add to these mechanisms for decision-making on serials criteria for preservation microfilming of backfiles of important serial titles. The amount of effort and good will required to establish and operate such practical cooperative action is considerable; indeed, it may not prove to be worthwhile for monographic materials. But the whole research library community can be grateful that the RLG Preservation Committee is making these pioneering experiments.

The Center for Research Libraries in Chicago is performing for its member libraries functions which are directly or indirectly in the interest of preservation. In addition to storing and providing access to lesser-used materials for its member libraries, CRL is in many cases making microfilm masters of the materials deposited there as well.

Reproduction

A second sector in which cooperative efforts can be of enormous benefit in the preservation of library collections is through reproduction of brittle materials and of materials for which wear and tear can be reduced by providing reproductions to users rather than originals. There is already a great deal of activity which, while not perhaps always thought of under the rubric of cooperative conservation, certainly aids that purpose. For example, commercial reprinting, whether in the form of individual hard-cover reprints or large microform libraries, has the effect of cooperative preservation in several respects. Preservation of the intellectual content is assured through dissemination of copies; the one-time costs involved are distributed over many user copies, and most libraries now either charge a reproduction fee, which may be used for further preservation work, or arrange for a copy of the reprint to replace the library's deteriorating original, or both.

Similarly, the National Register of Microform Masters (NRMM) and Newspapers in Microform, both published by the Library of Congress, are cooperative in that they rely on libraries to report items which have been filmed, and they can be used as mechanisms for distributing the cost of preservation filming by indicating where masters are available, thus eliminating the need for further original filming, which is more expensive than making copies from existing masters.

Reproduction is an area in which further cooperative effort would appear to have great and immediate potential for furthering the preservation of materials. The technology of reproduction is considerably better developed than that of physical preservation, and, as already cited, a number of mechanisms already exist.

The activities of the Research Libraries Group in this area may be indicative of some types of cooperative activity which could be useful on a regional scale. The RLG Preservation Committee has proposed a union list of microform masters held by the members, and a work-in-progress register to help avoid duplication at least among member libraries. Further, RLG is examining the possibility of joint storage of master microforms, an expensive operation which requires careful technical control of storage and handling conditions, and which seems to be difficult for individual libraries to achieve satisfactorily. Similarly, the possibility of a joint filming laboratory is being considered, another operation which is difficult for individual libraries to perform satisfactorily, for the same reasons.

While much of the initiative in the bibliographical control aspects of preservation filming would seem to be appropriate to the national level—for instance, mechanization of the NRMM—the areas of production and storage of microform masters to the best conservation standards would appear to be a particularly fruitful pursuit for regional consortia.

Physical preservation

If the division of resources is faced with the difficulty of real local needs and perceived threats to individual sovereignty, the physical preservation of library materials faces enormous problems of underdevelopment and of cost. It is perhaps just for these reasons that the idea of cooperative or regional conservation facilities is being discussed with increasing frequency.

Lest it seem that some of my statements imply that I am not in favor of regional or cooperative conservation centers, I want to emphasize that I think that such centers are a vital approach to the delivery of conservation services to libraries, archives, and historical societies. Indeed, it is my hunch that they will in time be one of the most important mechanisms for providing actual conservation services.

First, what is a regional conservation center? It could be any of a number of things. There seem to be three categories of service which a regional center could provide: consultation and advisory services, treatment of materials, and education and training. It could have one of several types of sponsorship. It could be a closed cooperative facility, established specifically to serve the needs of its sponsors, or it could be a membership organization in which new members were accepted, and in which the members would make some contribution to overhead or specific programs. An example of the latter type of organization is the fledgling Ohio Conservation Consortium, sponsored by the Ohio Historical Society, which provides services for the consortium members. For an annual membership fee, members obtain various consultations and advisory services, while actual treatment of materials is charged for on a cost-plus basis. Or it could be a fully regional center in that it served, as the New England Document Conservation Center does, any not-for-profit cultural institution in the defined geographical region. In this case, the center might be similar to a business except in that it was not operated for profit, and that it served only not-for-profit institutions.

BOOKS IN PERIL

Unfortunately, the current enthusiasm for regional conservation centers appears to be based in part on some misconceptions. I would like to discuss two of those. The ethical questions involved in the treatment of cultural property in general and books and manuscripts in particular—questions such as when and how much a book should be altered in the interest of preservation—have hardly begun even being asked. Parenthetically, I suspect that conservators and historians of the book think of the phrase "benign neglect," despite its original invidious connotations, when they are fortunate enough to come upon books and manuscripts which are in unaltered, even if deteriorated, condition. Ill-chosen, inept, or inadequate treatment almost invariably causes far more problems than it solves in the long run. What I am trying to suggest is that assuming everything possible is done to provide good environmental and storage conditions for books and manuscripts of artifact value, just any kind of restoration treatment is not necessarily better than no treatment at all. This may have a bearing on the advisability of establishing cooperative or regional treatment centers at present, particularly in light of the limited knowledge, skills and ethical frameworks thus far available.

The second cautionary point about regional conservation treatment centers concerns cost. The absence of profit from the work performed is an obvious advantage for the not-for-profit—and chronically underfunded—educational and cultural institutions for whose services regional centers would be established. But it is important to remember that conservation treatment, particularly for individual items, is inherently expensive, and there is little likelihood that it will become less so. It takes just so many hours to rebind an early book suitably, whether the binding is done in a profit-making or a not-for-profit organization. Thus while it is true that cooperative conservation treatment may save some money over the cost of work of comparable caliber done commercially, libraries are not likely finally to save large amounts on quality work. There is, however, some possibility of cost saving through offering certain types of simple but conservationally sound treatments which are not available commercially. I fear that in some cases librarians' enthusiasm about the idea of regional centers may be based on the false notion that they will be able to obtain treatment at substantially less cost than is presently possible. I have in fact seen one proposal for a center which claimed that it could save up to 75 percent over work done commercially. If that notion were true, and if my arithmetic is correct, it would mean that commercial conservation operations are making 300 percent profit on their work. If that were true, I suspect that there would be more people in the restoration business than there are at present.

The production and storage of microform masters—a "fruitful pursuit for regional consortia"

The National Conservation Advisory Council is discussing the implications of regional or cooperative centers as an efficient means of providing conservation services which meet a high standard at as reasonable cost as possible for all types of cultural property—museum objects as well as library and archival materials. The Council has issued a report on regional centers, and while it is specifically designated as being applicable to centers for treating museum collections, some of its discussion is certainly applicable to centers for libraries as well. The Council's general report, entitled The Conservation of Cultural Property in the United States, sounds a cautious note about attempting to establish treatment facilities before there are enough properly-qualified people available to direct and staff them. Similarly, the American Institute for Conservation of Historic and Artistic Works, in a statement on national needs in conservation affirmed by that organization in 1975, recommends a "considered sequence of priorities," with training of conservation personnel being the first priority, without which others cannot proceed effectively. Furthermore, NCAC is studying the advisability of establishing a national conservation institute. One of the possible functions of such an institute might be to provide various kinds of back-up services for regional centers, and at the same time, to help to maintain standards of quality.

Considering particularly the lack of adequately-trained personnel available, I am not at all certain that it is possible at the present time to establish additional regional treatment centers which are capable of maintaining adequate standards of quality. I am fairly certain, however, that such centers will be a major means of providing conservation services in the future.

Delicate balancing act

Many of the approaches to preservation discussed here could be done on a national scale, perhaps accruing even greater benefits than would be the case with regional cooperative effort. However, there are some limitations to national programs, most notably where physical access is required, as in the case of preservation depositories or physical treatment facilities. There seems to be little question, however, that nationwide planning and coordination will be required to tackle problems of this scale effectively and to reduce duplication of effort. Nevertheless, it also seems apparent that cooperative action on a somewhat smaller scale—regional or intratype—is a logical and probably necessary prior step. In addition to being of a more manageable scale, such a scaling-up step will help, as Warren J. Haas has pointed out in his Association of Research Libraries preservation report, to sort out the more useful and productive programs.

The National Commission on Libraries and Information Science seems to support various types of cooperative information access activities on state or regional bases, but points out the serious potential for incompatible systems, for which federal standards are required, and the problem of duplication of effort, for which a federally supervised interconnecting network may be the answer. Similarly, the National Conservation Advisory Council has suggested, without spelling out details, that one of the functions of a national conservation institute might be to help maintain standards in regional treatment centers.

A rather delicate kind of balancing act may be required to encourage local and regional initiative in cooperation, without unduly compromising the possibilities of a national program. While there are inevitably drawbacks and limitations to imposing general standards over a broad field, there are benefits which can probably be gained in no other way.

Summary

The massive problems of library conservation—problems of scale, of cost, of underdevelopment—can only be approached effectively, it seems clear, through cooperative effort. There are beginning to be bases for cooperative effort established, some of which are designed specifically for conservation activities, some of which have conservation as one of several aims, and some of which may more-or-less incidentally provide useful elements in the total conservation picture.

It seems to me that, aside from the ever-present problem of money, there are at present three major inhibitions to realizing the full potential for effective cooperative conservation programs. The first, and perhaps most difficult, is the problem of allocation of responsibilities for preserving individual items or well-defined categories of items among different institutions. While it is pretty well realized now that no one institution can preserve its own entire collections single-handedly, each institution is, understandably enough, reluctant to commit itself to a program which will mean that the other guy's copy of X will be carefully preserved, while their own will have to be allowed to continue to deteriorate. We can hope that improved preservation technology will help in the future to avoid some of these kinds of painful decisions, but it may be dangerous to place too much faith in the wonders of technology.

The second major problem that we face, is the terrible lack of people adequately trained in physical preservation, and the lack of training programs to begin to fill that need. And by physical preservation, I mean not only people qualified to restore rare books, but particularly people who are knowledgeable about mass preservation methods, about proper storage and environmental conditions, and about the preservation of nonbook materials such as photographs.

The third major area of need that I see is national initiative in preservation. There is much to be done on a national scale, particularly in the area of bibliographical control of preservation—devising mechanisms to attempt to insure that whole chunks of mankind's record will not just disappear.

The Proposed National Preservation Program of the Library of Congress

AS ANNOUNCED at the Chicago Conference of the American Library Association last July, the Library of Congress is currently developing plans for a national preservation program to assist in the conservation of deteriorating materials in the nation's libraries. The program now envisaged will address itself to three major problems:

I. Preservation of the intellectual contents of materials so embrittled that they cannot be used without damage, but not of sufficient intrinsic value to justify preservation in the original format. Pending the development of new and improved technology a nationwide microfilming program is recommended as the most appropriate and economically feasible method of preserving most such materials. LC will propose the development of a national preservation microfilming project with master negatives stored under ideal environmental conditions. Selections of materials to be microfilmed and preserved will require a priority assessment program to identify items for microfilming and to establish priorities. In addition, a comprehensive and effective bibliographic control system and widespread dissemination of the bibliographic record are essential elements of the proposed program.

II. Preservation of rare and intrinsically valuable materials in the nation's libraries which require the attention of expert paper conservators. Because of the dearth of trained paper conservators in the United States and the lack of training facilities for both paper conservators and rare book conservators, the Library of Congress proposes the establishment of a comprehensive training program in cooperation with local academic institutions. At a later date, as qualified conservators become available, the establishment of regional conservation centers in appropriately located libraries is recommended.

III. Preservation of present and future publications which are being printed on paper with a life-expectancy of 50 years or less. In this instance, preservation might take the form of obtaining one copy of all U.S. publications for storage under ideal environmental conditions. A second alternative currently being explored by LC is the possibility of obtaining microfilm copies of all materials in advance of publication.

LC's proposed national preservation program will be the subject of a two-day invitational conference held at the Library of Congress in December 1976. It is expected that a report of this conference will be published shortly thereafter.—Frazer G. Poole, Assistant Director for Preservation, Library of Congress

PROFESSIONAL READING

Literary pantheon

ELLSWORTH, Dianne J. & Norman D. Stevens. Landmarks of Library Literature, 1876-1976.

Scarecrow. 1976. 520p. index. ISBN 0-8108-0899-4. LC 75-45139. $17.50

How does one review a book that purports in some 500 pages to include the "landmarks of library literature, 1876-1976"? One reaction is to reject the idea as presumptuous, or if you share the prevalent cynicism about our literature, to dismiss the whole process as a useless exercise. The former reaction is certainly valid, but to accept the latter is to unfairly class all library literature as useless and mind-numbing—descriptors applicable to a great deal, but certainly not all, of the literature of our field. The compilers readily acknowledge the difficulties of their task: "to identify and present those contributions that represent true landmarks for our profession," but argue persuasively for the importance of their project, and present a sensible list of criteria for inclusion of items. Given their basic criteria—controversy, influence, representativeness, or literary excellence—the compilers have selected 41 items (mostly short articles) which they feel deserve inclusion. And while each of us would surely come up with a different list of candidates for our literary pantheon, this reviewer thinks Ellsworth and Stevens must receive high marks indeed for their intelligent selection and the clear and concise introductory remarks on the significance of their choices.

The truth is that anyone who will give a careful reading to this collection will surely come away impressed by the imagination, toughminded criticism, focus, and literary excellence which permeates the whole work. Surely the debate about our "literary landmarks" will continue, but no contemporary librarian could fail to be provoked and inspired by the contents of Landmarks. If you have a day or two to devote to professional reading in this ALA Centennial Year, I recommend that you invest that time in this book.—MICHAEL H. HARRIS, COLLEGE OF LIBRARY SCIENCE, UNIVERSITY OF KENTUCKY, LEXINGTON

Copyright in review

NASRI, William Z. Crisis in Copyright.

Dekker. (Books in Library and Information Science Series, Vol. 18.) 1976. 174p. index. bibliog. ISBN 0-8247-6401-3. LC 75-43046. $16.50.

This is the latest and best review of the copyright situation as it concerns book and periodical publishers, libraries and library users, and the welfare of the general public. It begins in the Middle Ages with reference to St. Benedict's Rule on copying, and the opposition to Gutenberg's new invention (taking work away from the scribes) and ends with a factual analysis of the impact of photocopying on journal subscriptions, and some suggestions on future legislation.

The author's contribution is most timely and significant in the area of journal photocopying and the Williams & Wilkins case. He presents a mathematical analysis of the economics of journal publishing, and a statistical study of the impact of photocopying on subscription lists. Increasing specialization (what Curtis Benjamin of McGraw-Hill called the "twigging effect" a score of years ago) has resulted in more journals with smaller subscription lists. (Proliferation is the problem.) From an analysis of responses to a questionnaire, the author concludes "that reprography has no significant effect . . . and is not the main reason for loss of subscriptions." Users of photocopies have seldom been subscribers and would not subscribe (although occasionally a photocopy has brought a new subscription).

The author's final words are particularly thought-provoking: "We need to establish a new basis for copyright that takes greater account of the public's right to know and the author's desire that his work be disseminated. So far, copyright law has favored the commercial publisher and his need for profit to the point of forgetting that the publisher is the servant of the authors and their public, deserving a reward for his efforts but not to be made the master of the process by which knowledge is produced and utilized."—CHARLES F. GOSNELL, NEW YORK UNIVERSITY LIBRARIES

Library insights

WILLIAMSON, William L., ed. A Search for New Insights in Librarianship: a Day of Comparative Studies. Proceedings . . .

Library School, Univ. of Wisconsin. 1976. 106p. notes. figs. pap. $4.

This valuable work deserves the permanence of binding and printing that lesser works enjoy. In mimeograph and paper covers, the results of a conference held at the University of Wisconsin in April 1975 are made available to the wide audience they should reach. Two professors contribute essays that summarize the field to date. Altbach offers insight into the relationship between publishing and social development. In the fourth essay, Williamson stirs the muddy waters of method in comparative and international librarianship. Just what he intends is best demonstrated by the other essays. They are characterized by strong devotion to objectivity, a scientific synonym for plain honesty, and considerable understated significance. To the confusion of doom-sayers, they are excellently, even elegantly, written.

Johnson compares Ceylon and Pakistan and finds that a common colonial ancestry does not account for the differences in library development. Neenan points out the importance of political and social factors in German library education by comparing the two Germanies since 1945. Gertzog, the best writer among the contributors, "gets far enough to fail" in trying to account for Vernon county's reluctance to join in the regional systems that grew up on all sides. Williams explores the possibilities of computerizing data to find correlations that yield a bonanza of unreliability except to suggest a distinct relationship between publishing and librarianship. Duran compares Puerto Rico with Jamaica and finds leadership the key in library development.

This important contribution to comparative and international studies is essential for all who are interested or engaged in research in the foundations of librarianship.—JAY E. DAILY, GRADUATE SCHOOL OF LIBRARY AND INFORMATION SCIENCES, UNIVERSITY OF PITTSBURGH

AV bibliographic tool

CROGHAN, Antony. A Bibliographic System for Non-Book Media: a Description and List of Works.

Coburn Publications, 91 Cranwich Rd., London N16 5JA, England. 1976. 150p. index. bibliog. pap. $10.

This British paperback covers a description of a bibliographic system for nonbook media in great detail and uses a wide-ranging bibliography of works to illustrate it. The body of the text is a combination of practice and philosophy and, although British in origin, can also be applied to most systems in the English-speaking world. It is the bibliography, however, which has some value for those in the audiovisual field. It covers a lot of American publications (but strangely enough very little material from Canada) and probably offers the most complete listing of British audiovisual publications currently available. The book is handy, not essential, for American audiovisual librarians.—JAMES L. LIMBACHER, DEARBORN DEPARTMENT OF LIBRARIES, MICH.

Encyclopedia comparisons

KISTER, Kenneth F., ed. Encyclopedia Buying Guide, 1975-1976: a Consumer Guide to General Encyclopedias in Print.

Bowker. 1976. 282p. index. appendixes. ISBN 0-8352-0842-7. ISSN 0361-1094. $15.50.

This comparative evaluation of encyclopedias apt to be considered for home purchase continues General Encyclopedias in Print, last published in 1973. The structure and approach of the earlier work are carried over into the current version, with some improvements. Like its predecessor, the Buying Guide consists of three parts: a general discussion of encyclopedias and what they can do; a comparative statistical tabulation showing size, price, reading level, and similar attributes; and critical descriptions of about three dozen titles, with references to reviews.

The largest, and best, part of the Guide is the last. The descriptions are somewhat fuller than previously, and offer forthright consideration, in nontechnical language and well supported by examples, of each work's significant assets and shortcomings. Each encyclopedia is compared directly with its principal competitors, and this new feature may be the most useful of all to prospective home purchasers. The statistical tabulation has been trimmed down by elimination of some facts of minor interest which will not be missed.

The introductory section offers the greatest scope for future improvement. Nearly half its space is devoted to an account of shady sales practices and the remedies available to bilked customers, which seems disproportionate, and this material precedes consideration of whether to buy an encyclopedia at all, which seems odd.

Tucked away in an appended bibliography is a statement that librarians will not normally advise on purchases. It is disappointing to see this bit of professional irresponsibility endorsed, even by implication, by a writer whose judgment is admirable otherwise.—THELMA FREIDES, SWARTHMORE COLLEGE LIBRARY, PA.

Harvard history

BENTINCK-SMITH, William. Building a Great Library: the Coolidge Years at Harvard.

Harvard Univ. Library. 1976. 218p. illus. index. ISBN 0-674-08578-7. LC 75-27901. $17.50.

This physically handsome book, revised from articles in the Harvard Library Bulletin, is a biography of Archibald Cary Coolidge (1866-1928), and the story of Harvard University Library in the period of its most rapid growth. It is a volume that should adorn the shelves behind every college and research librarian's desk; and it ought also be read to adorn and enlighten the minds of everyone in these libraries—large or small—who is in any way concerned with collection development and the diplomacy of institutional administration, or who delights in stories of the adventurous minds of the great scholar-librarians of the past.

Coolidge was chairman of the Harvard Library Council from 1910, and director from shortly thereafter until his death. Financially independent, and long the most hearty faculty supporter and donor to the University's library, his enthusiasm gave his entire staff momentum and purpose over many years and in the face of very diverse problems. His major accomplishments were in the building and planning of the Widener Library (a fortunate chance operation) and the acquisition of vast and important collections of books and documents, herein described, that put Harvard in the forefront of research libraries. In spite of not being a professional librarian, Coolidge added stature to academic librarianship in the first quarter of the century.

Coolidge's relations with his staff, his dynamic persistence in pursuing his goals, his sensible and practical solutions to administrative or technical problems, his important contributions as a teacher, historian, expert in foreign affairs, and—especially—his diplomacy with regard to donors, the University administration, and faculty, and even his family, all make this detailed and well-written story one of the most interesting biographies of modern librarianship. The researches of Bentinck-Smith (who has been deeply involved with the University's administration for many years) make this book a fine candidate for professional recognition and any relevant prize for which it may be eligible, including some in the typographic arts. An enjoyable and important story that does honor to the traditions of the intellectual aspects of librarianship.—LEE ASH, LIBRARY CONSULTANT, BETHANY, CONN.

Computer clinic

LANCASTER, F. Wilfrid, ed. Proceedings of the 1975 Clinic on Library Applications of Data Processing: the Use of Computers in Literature Searching and Related Reference Activities in Libraries.

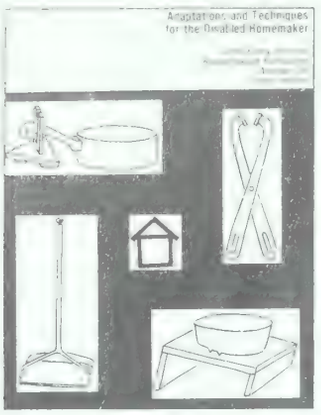
Univ. of Illinois Graduate School of Library Science. 1976. 159p. index. ISBN 0-87845-043-2. LC 76-1790. $8.

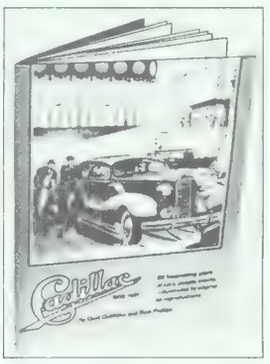
Among the best conferences on libraries and data processing have been the ones sponsored by the Graduate School of Library Science at the University of Illinois, and the 1975 Clinic was no exception. The papers, in contrast to those from many of the repetitive, kindergarten level sessions sponsored by library associations, can be recommended for reading by librarians from all types of libraries. The papers provide an excellent survey of computerized literature search services as they exist today in university, public, and industrial libraries, and then go on to related services, e.g., computer assisted instruction and question-answering systems. A strong case is made for the library as the appropriate agency for managing all aspects of information provision, regardless of source.

The introductory chapter on criteria for selection and use of machine-readable data, by Martha E. Williams, is a clear and concise presentation, providing the essential information and relating it to management questions the librarian must answer in establishing and operating computerized search services. What at first would appear to be an unnecessary diversion, a paper on national information planning in Australia, becomes relevant in terms of national planning—or lack of it—in this and other countries and the effects on provision of information services.

The concluding critique by Lancaster raises a series of questions on such topics as direct use of systems by users, the importance of natural language, document delivery, coordination of all types and sources of information, and education of users—questions which are receiving some attention today, but which, in most cases, should be the subject of much more extensive research, planning, and experimentation.—MELVIN J. VOIGT, UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, SAN DIEGO LIBRARY

CHECKLIST





Aid to handicapped

The new fourth edition of Adaptations and Techniques for the Disabled Homemaker presents ideas and information about practical, inexpensive devices helpful to the disabled in completing household tasks. It includes suggestions for the perceptually and visually handicapped person and for the arthritic. The 30-pager costs $2.95 in the United States and $3.10 elsewhere. The booklet—and information about other educational publications and audiovisual materials on physical rehabilitation—are available from Publications-A/V Dept. #242, Sister Kenny Institute, Chicago Ave. at 27th St., Minneapolis, Minn. 55407.

Automobile history

Cadillac 1902-1961 relies heavily on the reproduction of Cadillac advertisements representing every year covered. Prepared by Gwil Griffiths and Rich Phillips, the book records Cadillac "firsts," such as the replacement of the crank with the electric starter, and documents the contribution of the company to the war effort in three wars. The 78-page book has a full-color cover and sepia interior for an antique effect. It retails for $3.95 but is offered to libraries at a special price of $2.40 plus 50¢ for postage and handling. Send a check to P/G Publications, P.O. Box 28, Timonium, Md. 21093.

Unesco catalogs

An 80-page catalog, The Unesco Press 1976 Publications List, lists all United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization books, periodicals, and audiovisuals in print and arranges the titles by subject and by series in an extensive index. Scientific Maps and Atlases Catalog 1976 should be of value to environmental science collections. The illustrated booklet describes published and projected geological, tectonic, metamorphic, mineral, climatic, oceanographic, and soil maps. Both catalogs are free from Unipub, Box 433, Murray Hill Sta., New York, N.Y. 10016.

New York lore

A Guide to Local Historical Material in the Libraries of South Central New York State lists atlases, gazetteers, biographies, church and school histories, cookbooks, diaries, directories, folklore, genealogies, guide books, highway reports, materials about Indians, military histories, and school district reports, as well as a subject index. All items are located in the 122 public libraries in the counties of Allegheny, Broome, Cayuga, Chemung, Chenango, Cortland, Delaware, Otsego, Schuyler, Seneca, Steuben, Tioga, Tompkins, and Yates. Included also are the holdings of the largest academic library in the area, the Cornell University Libraries. The information was compiled by a committee of librarians working through the South Central Research Library Council, a consortium of public and private libraries. Copies of the 188-page guide cost $3 each from the Council, Sheldon Court-College Ave., Ithaca, N.Y. 14850, Attn: Order Dept. Make checks payable to South Central Research Library Council.

Medical references

The trend toward greater participation of the patient in medical decisions is reflected in an annotated bibliography, Medical Books for the Layperson, compiled by Marilyn McLean Philbrook. The 300 titles listed were published between 1969 and mid-1975 and were selected from the collection of the Boston Public Library. Entries are listed alphabetically by author under subject headings, which include particular illnesses, chemical substances, and general information on health care. On subjects which can be considered from both a medical and sociological viewpoint, such as mental retardation, alcoholism, and birth control, only those books with a medical emphasis are included. The 113-page booklet costs $2 plus 50¢ for postage and handling from the Sales Office, Boston Public Library, P.O. Box 286, Boston, Mass. 02117. Checks, which should be made payable to the Trustees of the Public Library of the City of Boston, must accompany order.

Sexist sports

Florida Technological University Libraries are making available a bibliography, Sex Discrimination in Athletics, which lists almost 80 references arranged alphabetically by author. Write for a free copy to L. W. Walker, Director of Libraries at the University, Box 25000, Orlando, Fla. 32816.

Women's history source

The Gerritsen Collection of Women's History is a checklist of titles available on microfiche. The list includes titles of nearly 4000 books, pamphlets, and serials housed in the original copies at the Kenneth Spencer Research Library of the University of Kansas. The list, which is free, and the microfiche editions, which are for sale, are available from Microfilming Corporation of America, 21 Harristown Rd., Glen Rock, N.J. 07452.

MIDLNET proceedings

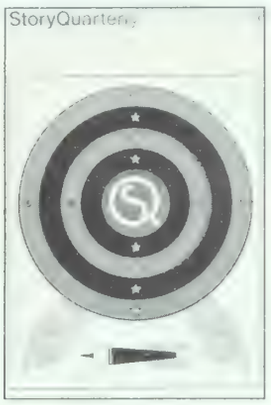
The Midwest Region Library Network called a number of prominent librarians to a symposium in January to consider current thinking on the differing roles of library networks at the national, regional, state, and local levels and their relationships to state agencies and research libraries. The report of this symposium is now available from MIDLNET, c/o University of Wisconsin-Green Bay, Green Bay, Wis. 54302, for a handling fee of $1. Prepayment is requested.

Farming information

Farm Books is a listing of books, magazines, government publications, indexes and other agricultural information sources selected by a committee of over 50 Minnesota farmers, county extension agents, agricultural vocational teachers, rural development consultants, co-op representatives, and librarians. The Southcentral Minnesota Interlibrary Exchange is making the list available at cost. Send 50¢ to SMILE, c/o Mary Birmingham, Bethany Lutheran College, 734 Marsh St., Mankato, Minn. 56001.

MAGAZINES

Bill Katz, PROFESSOR, SCHOOL OF LIBRARY SCIENCE, STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK, ALBANY



The Liberty Cap

1974. Bimonthly. $8. Ed: Enid Davis. 1050 Newell Rd., Palo Alto, Calif. 94303. Aud: Ga, Sa. (Subject: Books and Book Reviewing. Children)

Entirely written and produced by its children's librarian editor, The Liberty Cap is an offset 16-page newsletter which reviews approximately 60 titles an issue. Books are chosen which present nonstereotyped visions of the world to young readers, i.e. pre-school through junior high. (A shorter section lists "adult titles for young adult consideration.") About half of each issue is devoted to a theme or subject with a listing of both new and older titles, normally with short notes. The other half is devoted to the 100- to 200-word reviews of new books. Also includes films, records, and other media from time to time. Reviews are often cited from other sources. The librarian seeking advice on works which "portray females and males of all races as individual human beings" will find this valuable, not to mention refreshing. The editor points out precisely what is right and what is wrong about a particular title. Highly recommended.—BK

Young Athlete

1975. Bimonthly. $6. Ed: Dan Zadra. Subs to: P.O. Box 246, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Illus. adv. Aud: Ejh, Hs. (Subject: Sports. Issue examined: Vol. 1, No. 1, September 1975)

Directed to 14- to 18-year-old amateur athletes in every field from track and baseball to backpacking and tennis, this is a gallant effort to break through the commercial exploitation of sports. The approximately eight articles, usually accompanied by photographs in color, are written for the target audience in a lively and authoritative fashion. Some writers may suffer a bit from over-enthusiasm, but at least they all have a sincere, honest style. In addition to the interviews and articles, there are regular features throughout each 60-page issue, including tips from coaches on various sports. Advertising is minimal. Some effort is made to include women in the illustrations, although not always in the articles. All in all, a nice balance for the standards such as Sports Illustrated and Women Sports. Recommended.—BK

Story Quarterly

1975. Quarterly. $5. Story Quarterly, 3307 W. Bryn Mawr, Chicago, Ill. 60625. Aud: Ac, Ga. (Subject: Fiction. Issue examined: Vol. 1, No. 1, 1975)

The short story market began to disappear with the abandonment of the form by commercial magazines. Three years ago a break came when Fiction magazine was founded. This has developed from a tabloid into a quite impressive 94-page periodical of not only fiction but criticism, poetry, and interviews. There are now almost a half dozen sources, of varying importance, where the writer and the reader of fiction and short stories may meet. (Dutifully annotated in Magazines for Libraries, 2d ed., and the supplement.)

Now comes a quarterly which challenges at least one or two of the competitors on the grounds that they are a "triumph of hucksterism on one hand and a new intensification of hot house obfuscation on the other." Reason enough, one supposes, to open a new source for short stories. Regardless of the reason, Story Quarterly is a substantial 100-page magazine with 11 stories, a couple of columns, and an interview. The writers are professionals, and the majority have published in the usual quarterlies and little magazines as well as in Atlantic Monthly, Antioch Review, Esquire, and The New Yorker. It all adds up to an exceptionally high degree of excellence. So how are the stories? At least eight of the 11 seemed quite up to the best to be found in any of the aforementioned magazines, and two were exceptionally involving. If the editors maintain this high standard, and there is every reason to suppose they will, the magazine is useful for a library collection where today's fiction is popular.—BK

Vegetarian Voice

1974. Bimonthly. Free to libraries; membership, $6. North American Vegetarian Society, 501 Old Harding Highway, Malaga, N.J. 08328. Illus. adv. Aud: Ga. (Subject: Food and Nutrition. Issues examined: Various, 1975)

This is an eight- to 20-page half-size tabloid newspaper which primarily reports on the activities of its sponsoring group, but includes articles on the vegetarian way of life. Often featured are personalities, recipes, notes on the nutritional value of certain foods, etc. It contains a minimum of advertising and in this respect differs from Vegetarian World. There's considerably less editorial material than in the commercial venture, although this varies as there are frequent special issues which run to over 30 pages and are filled with news, e.g. the Fall 1975 number devoted to the 23rd World Vegetarian Congress.—BK

Z

1974. Semiannual $5. Ed: Kenward Elmslie. Z Press, Inc., Calais, Vt. 05648. Illus. Aud: Ac. (Subject: Little Magazines. Issue examined: Fall 1975)

A substantial little magazine of 140 pages of fiction and poetry, this offers such contributors as James Schuyler, Allan Kornblum, Kathleen Fraser, Ian Hamilton Finlay, Harry Mathews, and several editors and "stars" of the small press circuit. Given a slate made up almost entirely of experienced writers, Z is hardly your everyday little, and in many ways it is closer to a literary review than a standard small press item. Still, it adds up to praise no matter how it is defined, and Z is recommended for all major literature collections and for readers who simply enjoy good fiction and poetry.—BK

BOOK REVIEW

The Contemporary Scene

Bellow, Saul. To Jerusalem and Back: a personal account.

Viking. 1976. 192p. ISBN 0-670-71729-0. $8.95. TRAV/PER NAR

Using an extended visit to Israel as his framework, Bellow addresses the question of what it means to be Jewish in the 20th Century, and in particular, what it means to be an Israeli Jew living on the brink of extinction. He grapples with the problem of the Palestinian Arabs. He attempts to define on historical and philosophical grounds Israel's right to existence. On a deeper level, he considers the relationship between the artist and the politician, and compares his perceptions of events to those of Henry Kissinger and Yitzhak Rabin. Bellow tries to make sense of his conversations with Israeli scholars and politicians, kibbutzniks and barbers. There are no easy answers to the questions Bellow asks, and he does not trivialize his subject. Many of these reflections formerly appeared in the New Yorker; collected in book form, they take the form of an important document, transcending parochial concerns. A major work, for most libraries.—Andrea Caron Kempf, Univ. of Northern Colorado Lib., Greeley

Berger, John J. Nuclear Power: the unviable option; a critical look at our energy alternatives.

Ramparts, dist. by Monthly Review. 1976. 384p. intro. by Linus Pauling. fwd. by Sen. Mike Gravel. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-2181. ISBN 0-87867-062-9. $14; pap. ISBN 0-87867-063-7. $4.50.

Novick, Sheldon. The Electric War: the fight over nuclear power.

Sierra Club, dist. by Scribners. 1976. 376p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-13440. ISBN 0-87156-148-4. $12.50.

Olson, McKinley C. Unacceptable Risk: the nuclear power controversy.

Bantam. 1976. 309p. index. ISBN 0-553-10185-4. pap. $2.25. ENVIRONMENT

These three very readable books are concerned with the hazards of nuclear-power generation. Unacceptable Risk and Nuclear Power are similar in content, tone, and perspective. Both are briskly written, cover much the same ground, and make basically the same points: that our increasing dependence on nuclear power is threatening us with a high potential for accidents, waste-disposal problems, and possibilities of theft of nuclear fuel by terrorist groups. They offer convincing evidence to show that we must proceed with nuclear development with caution and only when our knowledge of the technology is equal to its hazards. As a nuclear critic is quoted in Unacceptable Risk: "Let's put it this way: if we're wrong, we can do something else. If they're wrong, we're dead."

The Electric War is a different kind of book and easily complements either of the other two. Its imaginative format offers insights into many facets of the nuclear controversy. It provides fascinating historical background interspersed with interviews with a variety of people, such as consumer advocates Ralph Nader and Barry Commoner, oil executives, and government regulators. It includes revealing excerpts of hearings and gives engrossing essays on companies, alternative energy sources, and hazards. This is an exceptionally interesting and informative book. Recommendation for most public libraries: acquisition of The Electric War coupled with one of the others.—Daniel La Rossa, Systems Management Engineering, South Huntington, N.Y.

Denes, Magda. In Necessity and Sorrow: life and death in an abortion hospital.

Basic Bks. 1976. 231p. LC 76-22188. ISBN 0-465-03216-8. $10.95. MED/SOC SCI

Psychologist Denes, "a proabortionist with a bad secular conscience," has written an extraordinary and very important book. She explores the paradoxical nature of abortion ("toward the terror of living and toward the horror of death"), and in the process, opens herself to us. Her vulnerability personalizes all that she describes—the varieties of self-justification that hide the pain of patient and practitioner alike, the "conveyor belt" approach which diminishes the individual, the doctors who hate women, the excruciating details of an actual abortion. Each example reiterates her theme: "what is done must be done, and yet what is done surely injures a higher order." Denes' sensitivity and honesty are coupled with an intelligent, agile, and affective style. Her revelations, starkly exposing the limiting unreality of dogmatic positions, transcend any political, religious, or social stance. Essential for anyone who confronts, by choice or by necessity, the problem of abortion.—Virginia W. Marr, Milton Academy Lib., Mass.

Freivalds, John. Grain Trade: the key to world power and human survival.

Stein & Day. 1976. 260p. bibliog. index LC 76-10134. ISBN 0-8128-2075-1. $8.95. AGRICULTURE/ECON

In spite of his book's title, Freivalds does not advocate the use of food supply control as a diplomatic weapon in a hungry world. Instead, he provides the layman with a well-written, balanced description of the grain trade and its milieu in the 1970's. He examines the many controversies revolving around the food processing and marketing sector, export policies, and the attempts to use food as a means of diplomatic leverage; and he explains and illustrates the workings of the commodity markets, the international movement of grain, and the problems of the transfer of American agricultural technology to

CONTENTS

The Contemporary Scene	2356
Letters	2357
Reference	2357
Art	2360
Biography	2363
Business & Economics	2365
Communications	2367
Education	2368
History	2368
Home Economics	2372
Humor	2373
Language Arts	2373
Literature	2374
Music	2376
Philosophy	2376
Poetry	2377
Political Science & International Affairs	2378
Psychology & Psychiatry	2379
Religion	2381
Science & Technology	2383
Social Science	2386
Sports & Recreation	2389
Theater	2392
Fiction	2393
Book Review & Professional Reading Author Index	2397

Library Journal reviews are indexed in Book Review Index and Book Review Digest.

peasant societies. The author—a former Peace corpsman in rural development, an agricultural consultant, and an international commodity trader—is uniquely qualified to treat this complex subject. Highly recommended for public libraries and undergraduate collections.—Philip Brown, South Dakota State Univ. Lib., Brookings

Sheehan, Edward R. F. The Arabs, Israelis, and Kissinger: a secret history of American diplomacy in the Middle East.

Reader's Digest Pr., dist. by Crowell. 1976. 288p. index. ISBN 0-88349-100-1. $8.95.

INT AFFAIRS

This volume, an outgrowth of an article that appeared in Foreign Policy magazine in February 1976, is based upon Sheehan's research as an acknowledged expert on the Middle East, on observations he made as a professional journalist who covered many of Kissinger's diplomatic meetings, and on his interviews with government officials both in the Middle East and in the U.S. Sheehan views the October 1973 Arab–Israeli war as "one of the major events of Arab history" and ranks Kissinger's diplomatic efforts to resolve the conflict as among the "extraordinary diplomatic sagas of modern times." Among his key arguments is that Kissinger's Arab policy was anchored on Sadat and that its main thrust was to promote American technology while containing the war. Acknowledging Kissinger's negotiating skills, his abilities as a day-to-day manager, and his brilliance as a conceptualist able to define his goals and their attendant obstacles, Sheehan argues that these attributes led to tactical successes but ultimately resulted in strategic failure. Kissinger's methods, Sheehan feels, were far too slow and may have reduced the chances for peace in the future. In addition, Kissinger has failed to come to grips with such fundamental problems as the Palestinian question and the final determination of territorial disputes. An appendix of key documents is included. A stimulating and provocative work.—Marcel Pittet, Univ. of Maine at Fort Kent Lib.

Veatch, Robert M. Death, Dying, and the Biological Revolution: our last quest for responsibility.

Yale Univ. Pr. Nov. 1976. 320p. bibliog. index. LC 75-43337. ISBN 0-300-01949-1. $12.95.

PHIL MED

Most readers will be well aware of the major issues considered in this book: the definition of death; the prolongation of life versus euthanasia; the patient's right to obtain information on his condition and to refuse treatment; and the transplantation of organs from the newly dead. The quality of understanding brought to these already familiar issues by Veatch (who is Director of the Institute of Society, Ethics, and the Life Sciences) is sufficient to justify their reiteration, for the author approaches his subject with depth and from a variety of points of view—philosophical, theological, legal, and medical. He attempts throughout to evaluate the alternatives according to the probability of their producing optimum consequences. The Karen Quinlan case seems to be the raison d'être for the work and runs like a leitmotif behind the numerous incidents discussed by Veatch to illustrate the issues involved. The book is well researched and documented and admirably reflects the author's expertise.—Frances Groen, McGill Univ. Lib., Montreal, Canada

LETTERS

The feminist perspective

With most other authors, I try to clench my teeth and maintain silence in the face of a negative review. Like most other authors, however, I abandon principle when I receive a review which seems completely uninformed and injudicious.

I refer to Gilbert Cross's review of Charlotte Bronte: the Self Conceived (LJ 9/1/76). Mr. Cross . . . seems to be generally hostile to psychological criticism. By taking a couple of carefully presented hypotheses out of context . . . he makes them appear totally extreme and ridiculous assertions. Perhaps more to the point, he seems totally unaware of the central subject and method of my book (he might find informative the July review in Publisher's Weekly).

Nowhere does Mr. Cross mention the feminist perspective of my argument—surely of central importance and interest—nor does he ever cite my attempt to explain, through a joint analysis of the life and work, the sources and development of Bronte's creativity. This attempt largely determines the form and substance of the study. He chooses instead to indicate that I "place heavy emphasis on the alleged underlying sexuality of the novels." In fact, this is a theme of only one chapter dealing with one novel: Jane Eyre. Finally, one would never know from reading this review that I have written a critical biography and not simply a work of literary criticism.—Helen Moglen

Not a guest of the government

The churlish tone of the review of [my] Cuba Today which appeared in your issue of May 15th, is in direct contrast to the favourable reception of the British edition in the English press when it appeared in November 1975. Whatever the present climate of American opinion vis à vis Cuba, one expected that your reviewer, however prejudiced, would at least get his facts right. The author was not "a guest of the government." While the Cuban Women's Federation and the Book Institute acted as hosts and provided facilities for study, in particular of Cuban educational developments, personal expenses of travel, etc. were the author's responsibility. Four months of study were spread over two visits in 1971 and 1975, either exploring Cuba alone, or with my hosts, or with friends living and working in Cuba.—Lee Chadwick

REFERENCE

Atlas of Early American History: the Revolutionary era, 1760-1790.

pub. for Newberry Lib. & Inst. of Early American History & Culture by Princeton Univ. Pr. 1976. 157p. ed. by Lester J. Cappon & others. color maps. index. LC 75-2982. ISBN 0-691-04634-4. $125; until Dec. 31, $100. HIST/REF

The publication of American historical atlases has far from matched the proliferation of other reference materials in the field, so there are only a few standards. Charles Paullin's Atlas of the Historical Geography of the United States (1932; Greenwood, 1975. reprint) and James T. Adams' Atlas of American History (Scribners, 1943) are two, but most are dated, and most treat the sweep of the American past rather than a specific historical period. Though the Atlas of the American Revolution (LJ 11/15/74) is an exception, its heavy emphasis on military history is limiting. The Atlas of Early American History can thus be considered a pathbreaking publication. It demonstrates that virtually all areas of the past—political, religious, and cultural, as well as economic, demographic, and military—can be shown visually with depth, sophistication, and beauty. The 286 maps, many in color, are explained in the text of more than 50 full pages. The index, which is superb, refers to both maps and text. Reference librarians will rejoice in "...the standard work"

LC: 76-15881
ISBN 0-8006-0485-7
587 pages.
Illustrated.
$19.95

"A vivid and marvelously detailed account of Barth's career, his boisterous personality, his many friendly and hostile relations to his contemporaries, and a fresh description of the dramatic development of his theological thought."—WILHELM PAUCK

"In this volume Eberhard Busch has been able 'to put it all together,' and there is no doubt in my mind that this will remain the standard work on Barth's life and thought."—JOHN D. GODSEY, Wesley Theological Seminary

FORTRESS PRESS
2900 Queen Lane
Philadelphia 19129

the easy access to information, and scholars will find a wealth of material laid out magnificently well for analysis. This atlas should be high priority for most libraries.—Bonnie Collier, Yale Univ. Lib.

Chadwick, Bill. Illustrated Ice Hockey Rules.

ISBN 0-385-11408-7.

Steitz, Edward S. Illustrated Basketball Rules.

ISBN 0-385-11407-9.

ea. vol: Doubleday. Nov. 1976. illus. pap. $2.50. SPORTS/REF

These two books provide an interesting approach to the interpretation of sports rules. The format of both is the same: more than 100 problems are presented, along with solutions based on the specific rule in question, followed by commentary by the author. Rules for every aspect of play are covered, and each volume also includes helpful appendixes. Chadwick rounds off his book with the complete NHL rule book, plus the officials' hand signals; Steitz adds charts of the differences between NBA and NCAA rules and between NCAA and high school rules. Also listed are Olympic and international rules.

The major difference between the two books is the styles of the authors, both of whom are authorities. Chadwick's style is chatty: he uses names of NHL players and teams in setting up his problems and offers his own opinions on the effectiveness of rules, officiating, etc. Steitz, on the other hand, attempts to cover every rule change since Naismith's originals of 1893. His book would have been more readable, and useful, had he skipped most of the history and concentrated on the rules in effect today. Still, both books should be welcomed in libraries at all levels.—Josephine A. DeLapo, Queens Borough P.L., New York

Comfort, Alex. A Good Age.

Crown. Nov. 1976. 224p. illus. by Michael Leonard. bibliog. index. LC 76-21850. ISBN 0-517-52625-5. $10. SOC SCI/REF

On the surface this appears to be a rather lightweight book from the pen of a heavyweight authority. Writing in a delightfully breezy, no-nonsense style and employing an encyclopedia format, the author manages to accomplish two goals very successfully. He presents a solid compendium of useful information in the 78-essay definitions of terms relating to aging, ranging from "Ageism" to "Youth" with such items as "Bloody-mindedness," "Food," and "Quackery" included in between. In addition, the author wages a fierce campaign to convince readers that aging need not—should not—be dreaded nor shunned. He is a persuasive advocate. Enhancing almost every other page of text are charming portraits of well-known men and women who achieved success in their later years. A Good Age is a book that should bolster the morale of those now old and inform and reassure those who will one day assume that status. And that's most of us.—Mary J. Mayer, New York City Dept. for the Aging

Know & claim your AFRICAN NAME
OVER 1400 AFRICAN NAMES
Their Meaning and Pronunciation.

$3.50
RUCKER PRESS, INC.
118 So. Broadway St., Sta. B
P.O. Box 7025, Dayton, Ohio 45407

Comprehensive Index to English-Language Little Magazines, 1890-1970, Series One. 8 vols.

Kraus. 1976. 5059p. ed. by Marion Sader. LC 74-11742. ISBN 0-527-00370-0. $590. REF

The history of the indexing of American little magazines starts in 1948 with the appearance of the first volume of the Index to Little Magazines. It has slowly extended its coverage through 1966-1967 and this December is scheduled to issue the volume for 1968-1969. In 1965 Stephen Goode took it upon himself to work backwards by doing in succession 1943-1947, 1940-1942, 1920-1939, completing 1900-1919 in 1974. Therefore there does exist, after a fashion, indexing for little magazines, 1900-1969. These indexes avoided any title already listed in the Reader's Guide or Social Sciences and Humanities Index.

The compilers of this newest index felt no such restraint in the selection of titles. Their criteria was to select 100 magazines that had "that undefinable quality known as the 'little-magazine spirit.' " The result is a good representation of this century's experimental literature. The most notable exclusion is the Dial, perhaps because indexes for it have been published separately. Also they tend to exclude those journals that were more political than literary in tone. The arrangement is basically by author—"works by" followed by "works about." Each entry is identified as to type of work. The only subject approach is if the subject is a person, which means there are entries under Paul Gauguin and William Blake. But Christopher Fry's remarks on comedy in Drama Review are only accessible through the author. Book reviews are indexed under both the book's author and the reviewer. The list of magazines indexed gives a bibliographic history for each title. Although the title page indicates that this is "series one," there is no mention of what will comprise "series two." The binding is sturdy, and the volumes open flat. No doubt most of the magazines indexed in this set are indexed somewhere else; however this should not detract from the convenience of having this cumulation available. Because of the lack of full subject indexing, this set falls short of its goal of "complete bibliographic control" to the contents of 100 little magazines. Nevertheless, it is a monumental compilation done with loving care, and it deserves the consideration of every sizable library.—Richard Heinzkill, Univ. of Oregon Lib., Eugene Flaste, Richard with the assist. of Ellen Rodman and Dale Napolin Flaste. The New York Times Guide to Children's Entertainment in New York, New Jersey, and Connecticut.

Quadrangle, dist. by Harper. 1976. 234p. LC 76-9709. ISBN 0-8129-0654-3. pap. $6.95. REF

Is the high spot of your kids' weekend a visit to the Tastee Freeze? Do their papers on "How I Spent my Summer Vacation" get returned with "incomplete" stamped on them? With some time, money, and this handy guide, you can spark up your children's lives and, very possibly, have a good time in the bargain, too. There's something for everyone here—from the smallest toddler to the most jaded parent. Puppet shows, factories, museums famous and obscure, restaurants, zoos—you name it, they list it, together with travel information, charges, hours, the cons as well as the pros of hundreds of attractions.—Carol K. Carey, formerly with Dept. of Film, Museum of Modern Art, New York

Good Housekeeping Dictionary of Symptoms.

Good Housekeeping Bks., 250 West 55th St., New York City 10019. 1976. 253p. text by A. Ward Gardner, M.D. intro. by Winfred Van Atta. illus. LC 76-7261. ISBN 0-87851-018-4. $9.95.

Miller, Sigmund Stephen, ed. Symptoms: the complete home medical encyclopedia.

Crowell. Dec. 1976. 680p. illus. LC 76-15989. ISBN 0-690-01125-3. $17.95. HEALTH/REF

With the current emphasis on consumer health education and on increased patient involvement in health care, these two books should find ready audiences. The Miller publication undertakes the massive task of combining a book of symptoms with a medical encyclopedia—hence its massive size. Its organization allows the reader to use his symptoms as an index to the diseases which might be causing them. The section on "Tables, Tests and Guides" and the "Glossary of Medical Terms" are particularly useful.

The Good Housekeeping publication, on the other hand, is intended to prepare the layman to become an informed and responsible patient. The book contains information about the common and serious human diseases along with the physical signs and symptoms that signal their presence. It does not purport to be of the Family Medical Advisor genre—in fact, it specifically disclaims this approach at self-diagnosis and treatment as a dangerous practice. An extensive chapter on first aid and a special section on nursing the sick at home are important features. Both books are recommended for public library collections, but if only one can be purchased, the Good Housekeeping book would be my selection.—Phyllis S. Mirsky, UCLA Biomedical Lib.

REFERENCE

Information for Everyday Survival: what you need and where to get it.

American Library Assn. 1976. 403p. comp. by Priscilla Gotsick & others. index. LC 76-13554. ISBN 0-8389-0211-1. pap. $10. REF

This volume is an index to free or inexpensive pamphlets, books, films, and filmstrips dealing with people-related matters. It is divided into major sections: aging, children, community, education, free time, health, home, jobs, law and government, money management, self and others, and transportation. Each section has further subject subdivisions, and there is an excellent index to the entire book. Each entry includes author, title, date; a brief annotation including format (pamphlet, book, film, etc.); an indication of reading level; and source, with complete address and price. For example, under the subject of bicycles there are three pamphlets, three films, and one poster transparency listed. Looks good—recommended for libraries with frequent people contact or large pamphlet collections.—John D. Campbell, Occidental Coll. Lib., Los Angeles

Killick, Tony. The Economies of East Africa.

G. K. Hall. (Bibliographies & Guides in African Studies). 1976. 150p. index. LC 76-4933. ISBN 0-8161-7916-6. $12.50. ECON/BIBLIOG

This research bibliography succeeds admirably in covering the recent English-language literature on the economies of East Africa—Kenya, Tanzania, and Uganda. Approximately 1000 entries, most of which are briefly but quite helpfully annotated, are classified under eight major headings (economic development, finance, international trade, agriculture, industry, population, social economics, and statistics), while a subject index provides a second topical approach. The compiler then attempts to analyze the body of research in this field since 1963 as reflected in his bibliography. In an introductory essay and a statistical summary of results tabulated by topic and by country, Killick highlights neglected areas of research and notes imbalances in the treatment of the three countries. Although its scope is relatively narrow, the thoroughness and careful arrangement of this work warrant its inclusion in collections focusing on developing economies in general and on Africana in particular.—Janet Stanley, Inst. for Scientific Information, Philadelphia

Mason, Anita (text) & Eric Storey (photogs.). The World of Rocks and Minerals.

Larousse. 1976. 108p. color photogs. LC 75-10935. ISBN 0-88332-031-2. $8.95; pap. ISBN 0-88332-032-0. $4.95.

O'Donoghue, Michael, ed. The Encyclopedia of Minerals and Gemstones.

Putnam. 1976 304p. illus., mainly color. bibliog. index. LC 76-1419. ISBN 0-399-11753-9. $22.50. EARTH SCI/REF

The beauty of naturally occurring minerals and their derived gems invites their presentation in full color, and such is the premise of both of these titles. The text of The World of Rocks and Minerals is brief to the point of being unclear. The bulk of the book is given to color pictures of 108 minerals, in some cases very poorly rendered. Each illustration is subtended by a too-short commentary. The content of the book would make it appropriate for secondary school libraries, but the lack of clarity and the absence of a glossary are major faults.

The Encyclopedia of Minerals and Gemstones presents a welcome contrast. The numerous and superb color illustrations are complemented by a comprehensive and literate text which is broken into chapters on crystal chemistry and morphology, basic and economic geology, mineral identification, gem-cutting, and mineral display. All these sections contain clear discussions of the technical aspects of minerals, and the one on gem-making has practical information, including the construction of homemade tools. Roughly half the book is given to systematic descriptions of more than 1000 minerals. Although specialists may wish more advanced works (many of which are cited in the bibliography), the general public and many professionals will welcome this technically precise and aesthetically pleasing introduction to the world of minerals.—Bruce H. Tiffney, Paleobotanical Labs., Dept. of Biology, Harvard Univ.

Patten, Marguerite. Books for Cooks: a bibliography of cookery.

Bowker. 1976. 526p. index. LC 75-7799. ISBN 0-85935-005-3. $19.50. COOKERY/BIBLIOG

An alphabetical listing, international in scope and British in terminology, noting the availability of books on all aspects of "cookery" and some books dealing with nutrition, special diets, and the history of foods. Data on more than 1700 titles provides imprint, cost, and paging for all known editions (hard and paper cover, British, U.S., etc.), including Braille. Annotations are quite brief, some expanding narrowly on the title, others slightly more detailed, with occasional comment on the reputation or experience of the author, or suggestions for use (such as textbook for students or teachers). The excellent subject index makes generous use of "see" and "see also" references (American terms refer to their British counterparts) and indicates the language in which a non-English book is written. Books for Cooks should prove useful as a finding tool.—Eleanor H. Broadus, formerly with Northern Illinois Univ. Libs., DeKalb

The Picture Reference File. Vol. 1: A Compendium.

Hart. 1976. 396p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-31405. ISBN 0-8055-1160-1. $25.

GRAPHIC ARTS/REF

Designed for those involved with the graphic arts, this first of a projected 25 volumes of pictures in the public domain contains a generous sampling of the areas—such as art and sculpture, vehicles, history, vegetation, theater, and celebrated men and women—which will be represented in depth in the remaining volumes. Here there are more than 2200 pictures, with all but 31 suitable for reproduction directly in line; the 31 halftones are indicated and can be rescreened or converted to line. Abbreviated captions appear beneath

Who are the real black leaders? What are black Americans doing in the arts? Where are blacks making the most progress? When did the big changes happen? How are black Americans doing financially?

NEW • ENLARGED • UP-TO-DATE

THE BLACK AMERICAN REFERENCE BOOK

answers these and hundreds of other questions

Edited by Mabel M. Smythe

"The most comprehensive history and overview of black American achievement so far published. It combines history with encyclopedic data and critical judgments in the arts. The scope is wide, from a study of the black personality in American society to black accomplishment.... Should become the standard work in its field." —John Barkham Reviews

"For 'getting it all together' under one cover the editor and Phelps-Stokes Fund which sponsored the project are to be thanked. It should serve well." —World Review

$29.95

PRENTICE-HALL
ENGLEWOOD CLIFFS, N.J. 07632

REFERENCE

REFERENCE

each picture, with more complete bibliographic data listed in a sources section. The bibliographic entries do not, however, give the page number of the source. There is a very adequate index which, in many cases, places a picture under various headings. Not only can this volume, and presumably its companions, be profitably used by art schools, advertising agencies, and printers, but it is a fascinating book for the general reader to leaf through.—Colin McLeod, Dept. of English, Virginia Polytechnic Inst. & State Univ., Blacksburg

Samuels, Peggy & Harold Samuels. The Illustrated Biographical Encyclopedia of Artists of the American West.

Doubleday. Nov. 1976. 496p. illus. bibliog. ISBN 0-385-01730-8. $25. ART/REF

An important addition to the literature on the art world. International in scope, it contains over 1700 concise biographies of artists of the American West. Emphasis is on practicality: when and where an artist lived, specialties, auction prices, collections containing an artist's work, signatures, personal comments on individuals, etc. Rich in history, the biographies provide essential data and are readable. Recommended.—Dortha H. Skelton, Coll. of William & Mary Lib., Williamsburg, Va.

Smith, Myron J., Jr. World War II at Sea: a bibliography of sources in English. Vol. 1: The European Theater. 337p. Vol. 2: The Pacific Theater. 427p. Vol. 3, Pt. 1: General Works, Naval Hardware and the All Hands Chronology (1941-1945). Pt. 2: Home Fronts and Special Studies. 586p.

Scarecrow. 1976. ea. vol: index. LC 75-34098. Vol. 1, ISBN 0-8108-0884-6. $12.50; Vol. 2, ISBN 0-8108-0969-9. $15; Vol. 3, ISBN 0-8108-0970-2. $20; set $35. HIST/BIBLIOG

Smith's previous five-volume work, "American Naval Bibliography" series (LJ 9/1/73) traced source material on the American navy from 1770 to 1941. This new work provides a more comprehensive bibliography, covering the entire international range of naval operations during the war. As with the previous series, Smith includes books, monographs, periodical and journal articles, government documents, and dissertations, with a cutoff date of December 1973. Many of the citations are concisely annotated, and each volume contains an author and name index, with the last volume having comprehensive indexes to the entire set. Smith's solid bibliographic endeavors have filled a genuine need and should be consulted widely in the future.—Michel Ridgeway, U.S. Military Academy Lib., West Point

Tarbert, Gary C., ed. Children's Book Review Index. Vol. 1: 1975 Cumulation.

Gale. 1976. 254p. LC 75-27408. ISBN 0-8103-0626-3. $18. REF

Gale has already begun publishing reviews of children's books in its Children's Literature Review; now this publisher begins another series with Children's Book Review Index, which cumulates into one alphabet all three 1975 issues of Children's Book Review Index. The same format is followed. This is a handy work, but with library budgets as they are, subscribers to CBRI may not be able to justify the additional expense.—Gilbert B. Cross, Dept. of English, Eastern Michigan Univ., Ypsilanti

Tudor, Dean & Andrew D. Armitage, comp. Popular Music Periodicals Index, 1975.

Scarecrow. 1976. 376p. bibliog. index. LC 74-11578. ISBN 0-8108-0927-3. $15. MUSIC/REF

These two highly qualified music bibliographers have produced the first extensive index to popular music magazines. There are 55 periodicals that are fully indexed and an additional dozen that were selectively indexed, with the styles ranging from the scholarly Ethnomusicology to the more popular Creem and the Rolling Stone. Though some of these journals are indexed elsewhere, they clearly fall within the scope of the index and could not be ignored. One notable omission is the N.A.J.E. Educator, the journal of the National Association of Jazz Educators, and in addition, selective indexing of the Village Voice and the S.F. Bay Guardian would have been helpful. The introduction and explanatory notes are concisely written and demonstrate the fortuitous planning that must ensue prior to undertaking such an immense task. There is a substantial bibliography of recent, well-received monographs dealing with popular music. This is followed by separate subject and author indexes. The author index is of dubious value, and the collation for each entry sadly neglects to distinguish illustrative material (other than music). Keep in mind that only the year 1975 is indexed and that after you have a citation in hand, it may require an extensive union list to find that article. Highly recommended.—Fraiser McConnell, California Coll. of Arts & Crafts Lib., Oakland

Recently Revised Reference Works

Kyed, James M. & James M. Matarazzo. Scientific, Engineering, and Medical Societies Publications in Print, 1976-1977.

Bowker. 509p. index. LC 76-26086. ISBN 0-8352-0898-2. $19.95. SCI/REF

When this work was first published in 1974 as Scientific, Technical, and Engineering Societies Publications in Print, 1974-1975 it covered 151 national scientific and engineering societies. This new edition covers 369 societies (108 of these appeared in the first edition and more than 60 newly formed societies have been added).

Large Type Books in Print, 1976: subject index, title index, author index.

Bowker. 1976. 455p. LC 74-102773. ISBN 0-8352-0909-1. $14.95. REF

The first edition (1970) contained 1200 titles by 30 publishers; this 2d edition offers 2552 titles by 44 publishers. (The book is printed in 18 pt. type.)

Lovejoy, Clarence E. Lovejoy's College Guide. 13th ed.

S. & S. (Lovejoy's Educational Guides). 423p. index. ISBN 0-671-22221-X. $10.95; pap. ISBN 0-671-22222-8. $5.95. ED/REF

Revised and expanded to cover about 3600 American colleges and universities.

Pears Cyclopedia, 1976-77: a book of background information and reference for everyday use. 85th ed.

Transatlantic. 1976. sectional pagination. ed. by L. Mary Barker & Christopher Cook. maps. index. $10. REF

In addition to being revised and updated, this edition contains two new sections, "Collecting Antiques" and "Pets and Ponies."

World Guide to Universities. 2d ed. Pt. 1. 2 vols. Europe 1 and Europe 2.

dist. by Bowker. 1976. 1252p. index. ISBN 3-7940-1130-9. $86. ED/REF

Lists and describes 638 accredited universities (up from 413 in the first edition) and some 5000 of their colleges and institutes.

—This highly selective listing was compiled by Robert R. Harris

ART

Lee, Lawrence & others. Stained Glass.

Crown. 1976. 207p. photogs., mainly color by Sonia Halliday & Laura Lushington. bibliog. index. LC 76-18928. ISBN 0-517-52728-6. $39.95; until Dec. 31, $35. ART

The authors' comprehensive pictorial selections bring together under one cover examples of a thousand years of stained glass, many never seen before in published form by this reviewer. Unfortunately, even though this publication was obviously compiled with fervor and great dedication, the sizable text is simplistic, even at times factually dubious. There are also some errors in the positioning of the captions to the illustrations. The authors, all creators of stained glass and not art historians, chose to divide the text into three sections: the first dealing with stained glass as a visual document of civilization, the second with its historic development, and finally an excellent description of the techniques of making and restoring stained glass. The authors are to be commended for their inclusion of flat layouts of the positioning of the windows in the cathedrals of Chartres, York, Toledo, and Florence. All of the plates, including those on the Pre-Raphaelite, Art Nouveau and contemporary periods are a feast for the eyes and alone are well worth the modest price.—Jacqueline D. Sisson, Ohio State Univ. Fine Arts Lib., Columbus

Leeman, Fred. Hidden Images: games of perception, anamorphic art, illusion; from the Renaissance to the present.

Abrams. 1976. 167p. photogs. by Joost Elffers & Mike Schuyt. tr. by Ellyn Childs Allison & Margaret L. Kaplan. illus., some color. LC 76-3736. ISBN 0-8109-9019-9. pap. $9.85. ART

Based on material originally organized for an exhibition at the Rijksmuseum, Amsterdam, this engaging and informative work focuses essentially on one of the less consequential but more amusing bypaths of the history of perspective. In anamorphoses an unrecognizable surface is made legible by locating the correct point of view, or with the assistance of a reflecting cylinder or pyramid. In a brief scholarly text, the author relates the history and processes of perspective and its various related manifestations. The principal pleasure of this opus, however, is the many reproductions of the now rare anamorphic works. Provided with the volume is a flexible refector with which it becomes possible to perceive the images. Although the mirrored surface is unattached and the book poorly bound, art libraries will find this a very worthwhile acquisition.—Robert Cahn, Dept. of Social Sciences, Fashion Inst. of Technology, New York

ART

Meiss, Millard. The Painter's Choice: problems in the interpretation of Renaissance art.

Harper. Nov. 1976. 320p. illus. index. $15; pap. $7.95. ART

These well-selected articles (all published previously) are primarily concerned with the author's interpretations of themes or subjects employed by Van Eyck, Piero della Francesca, Mantegna, and others, rather than with analyses of individual works of art. Most medium-sized art libraries will own all or nearly all of the original sources from which the articles were culled. However, students will benefit from the collection's convenience and continuity, which assists in acquiring a better understanding of Meiss's iconographic methodology; his delightful and informative postscripts which are updates of his and other scholars' more recent interpretations; and, unlike the texts of the author's important but ponderous monographs on French illumination, the clarity of his presentations. Additions to the text are indicated by brackets or asterisks. This posthumous publication, totally gathered and edited by Meiss, is a fitting evocation of his scholarship.—Jacqueline Sisson, Ohio State Univ. Fine Arts Lib., Columbus

Walker, John. National Gallery of Art, Washington.

Abrams. 1976. 696p. fwd. by J. Carter Brown. illus., mainly color. index. LC 74-10716. ISBN 0-8109-0336-9. $45. ART

This book is simply an extremely handsome picture book (with more than 1000 color plates) which also includes a candid, lively, and quite informative 59-page text on the development of the collection and its benefactors. Portions of the text are reprinted from articles published in various periodicals and earlier museum catalogs. The work is not a scholarly, annotated collection catalogue. Except for about one out of every eight, the entries for each work do not include the provenance of the work of art. Literature pertaining to the work in question is never included. Arranged chronologically and then by country, about every third page of reproductions is full sized with a facing page of text. The other pages contain seven to eight reproductions, an extremely brief history, and entries including artist, title, date, material, size, and the name of the donor. This publication's greatest asset is in the quality and quantity of the plates.—Jacqueline D. Sisson, Ohio State Univ. Fine Arts Lib., Columbus

Architecture

Hersey, G. L. Pythagorean Palaces: magic and architecture in the Italian Renaissance.

Cornell Univ. Pr. Nov. 1976. 216p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-13661. ISBN 0-8014-0998-5. $22.50. ARCHITECTURE

The author maintains that in order to truly appreciate the full value of the proportional elements in Renaissance architecture one needs to restudy the original mathematical context within which the buildings were designed, i.e., Pythagorean geometry and numbers symbolism. Using this premise, Hersey examines the four major principles of Renaissance architectural theory (point, line, plane, solid) and then proceeds in the final chapter to exemplify each of these ideas as they were applied in several actual buildings. To accompany the extremely intelligible text, the author provides a superb number of illustrations to clarify his various statements. Discussing not only general principles but also the specific ideas of Alberti, Leonardo, Michelozzo, Palladio, and others, Hersey creates a very vivid and knowledgeable portrayal of the Renaissance architectural theorist at work.—Paul Grootkerk, Dept. of Fine Arts, Univ. of New Orleans

Decorative Arts & Crafts

Everlasting Flowers.

Macmillan. 1976. 72p. illus., mainly color. LC 76-3361. ISBN 0-02-578300-9. $5.95.

Westland, Pamela. Decorating with Wild Flowers.

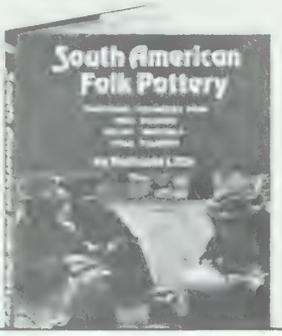
Rodale Pr. 1976. 128p. illus. mainly color. index. LC 75-45881. ISBN 0-87857-126-4. $12.95. DEC ARTS

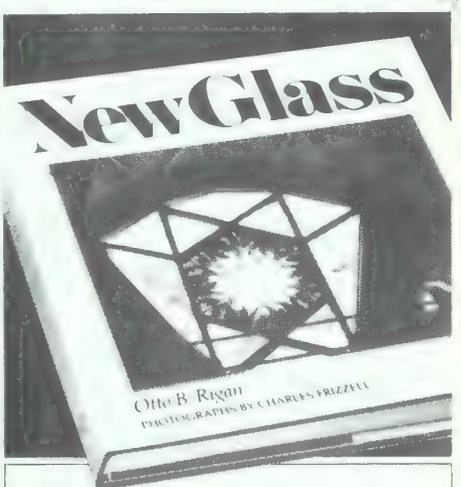
Westland's book has some of the most beautiful photographs of dried flower arrangements I have seen, yet the text provides little that is especially unique other than a chapter on flowers in the kitchen. In collecting flowers, grasses, or leaves for drying it is most useful to have an alphabetical list describing the best drying methods for each; here such information is spread throughout the text, making it difficult to find. A search for drying methods for pearly everlasting (Anaphalis), for example, was unsuccessful. In spite of this drawback, Westland deserves special recognition for her section on flowers in the kitchen: it is a rare book that includes recipes for fruit cheese, butters and curds, or for blackberry chutney, spiced barberry jelly, or cranberry carmels in addition to the usual methods for drying and arranging flowers, grasses, leaves, etc. Nevertheless, the price puts Decorating with Wild Flowers beyond the reach of most library budgets.

A remarkable photographic record of age-old pottery techniques never before seen by the outside world...



In the countryside of Peru, Chile, Ecuador, Colombia and Venezuela, there are still artisans who make pottery using the same techniques as their ancestors. Here, for the first time, Gertrude Litto gives an eyewitness report of these craftsmen and their age-old techniques. "While much has been written on pre-Columbian wares, living craftsmen have been given short shrift. With her fine work, Litto is helping shift the balance." —Library Journal 224 pages. 8¼ x 11. Over 30 full-color plates. 276 B&W illus. Maps. Biblio. Glossary. Index. ISBN 0-8230-4873-X. $24.95.

Watson-Guptill Publications
2160 Patterson Street
Cincinnati, Ohio 45214



Exploring the world of innovative stained glass art, this lavish, oversize volume uses superb photographs and provocative interviews with 24 pioneering artists to show how they have brought a new dimension to the ages-old beauty of stained glass

With over 200 photographs -- including 64 pages in full color -- this eye-filling survey will prove a distinctive and popular addition to any fine arts or crafts collection. ISBN: 0-913374-52-0. $14.95.

San Francisco Book Company
2311 Fillmore Street, San Francisco 94115

Macmillan's Everlasting Flowers is similar in its coverage of dried-flower art with the exception of the recipes. The collector will be pleased to find a chart describing drying methods for various plant materials but will be disturbed by the lack of an index. Even though there are unique aspects to the Macmillan book such as sections on decoupage with flowers and making flower paperweights, there is nothing here that has not been described at least equally as well elsewhere (for example, Betsey Creekmore's Making Gifts from Oddments and Outdoor Materials, LJ 10/15/70). While the photographs cannot compare with those in Westland's work, they are certainly attractive, informative, and well placed. Everlasting Flowers, at the price, is an adequate if not outstanding selection.—Arolana Meissner, Alfred Univ. Lib., N.Y.

Fanning, Robbie. Decorative Machine Stitchery: design, techniques and projects for every sewing machine.

Butterick Co. 1976. 191p. illus. & photogs. by Tony & Robbie Fanning. index. LC 76-4396. ISBN 0-88421-050-2. $9.95.

Foss, Mildred B. Creative Embroidery with Your Sewing Machine.

Prentice-Hall. 1976. 200p. illus. index. ISBN 0-13-189365-3. $10.95; pap. ISBN 0-13-189357-2. $3.95. CRAFTS

Foss's book is directed more to the amateur sewer while Fanning's book will appeal to the beginning craftsman who enjoys experimentation. Fanning's explanation of how a sewing machine works is more detailed and more useful to those who wish to try to go beyond either book. The authors both cover zigzag stitches, transparent material stitching, free embroidery, automatic stitches, and patch making. Foss explains various edging techniques; Fanning goes into more detail about effects made by using heavy threads and unusual fabrics. Her book contains a bibliography, a list of material sources, and an excellent summary chart. Although a broken sewing machine thwarted my attempts to test both books, I found Foss's directions easier to follow but Fanning's ideas more exciting. I can recommend both books.—Dorothy E. Wynne, SUNY at Buffalo

Lane, Maggie. Rugs and Wall Hangings.

Scribners. Nov. 1976. 160p. illus. bibliog. ISBN 0-684-14670-3. $14.95. CRAFTS

Lane's fourth in her series of needlepoint books based on Chinese motifs. One need not have a weakness for Chinese design to appreciate the quality and depth of Lane's work, consistent throughout all her books. Her sense of color and design combined with her choice of stitches results in some stunning panels. The color plates show all this to its best advantage. In addition to giving instructions for each project, Lane comments on the symbolism of the designs and includes anecdotes on their source. The intermediate and advanced needlepointer will welcome her book.—Lois Horowitz, Univ. of California at San Diego Lib.

Rhodes, Daniel. Pottery Form.

Chilton. Nov. 1976. 244p. photogs. by Thomas Liden. illus. index. LC 76-301. ISBN 0-8019-5935-7. $12.50. CRAFTS

Written for the advanced studio potter, this book is intended to be used with two of the author's previous works, Clay and Glazes for the Potter (LJ 1/1/58) and Kilns (LJ 4/1/69). The present work deals exclusively with forming and decorating pots, with an emphasis on functional form and aesthetic principles. The author's aesthetic philosophy is the strongest aspect of this book, and it is very clearly expressed throughout. Other books dealing with pottery form seem somewhat pedestrian when compared with Rhodes's flowing style and multitude of references to historic and ethnic examples. He has illustrated the text with examples of his own work, using traditional and contemporary styles. The majority of the examples are wheel-thrown, although there are some hand-built. Recommended.—Constance Ashmore Fairchild, Univ. of Illinois Lib., Urbana

Graphic Arts

Eichenberg, Fritz. The Art of the Print: masterpieces, history, techniques.

Abrams. 1976. 611p. illus., some color. bibliog. index. LC 74-18024. ISBN 0-8109-0103-X. $35. GRAPHIC ARTS

Despite claims to the contrary, this large and handsome volume would seem best suited to the needs of the aspiring graphic artist. Shaped around the principal printmaking techniques, the individual chapters are in turn generally divided into a historical survey of the particular medium, a "how to" section, and a collection of statements on personal working methods by a variety of contemporary artists. The historical essays are superficial and are marred by too frequent errors of fact. Student printmakers, on the other hand, will find the large corpus of reproductions, the careful descriptions of all the important graphic processes, and the practical comments of the individual artists of real value. The consideration of various active workshops and the glossary of print terminology should also be of service to the novice.—Robert Cahn, Dept. of Social Sciences, Fashion Inst. of Technology, N.Y.

Ray, Gordon N. The Illustrator and the Book in England from 1790 to 1914.

Pierpont Morgan Library & Oxford Univ. Pr. 1976. 336p. illus., some color. bibliog. index. LC 76-10042. ISBN 0-19-519883-2. $59.95; pap. Morgan Lib. $22.95. GRAPHIC ARTS

The excellently produced catalog of the 1976 Morgan Library exhibition of Ray's comprehensive collection of illustrated books from the great period of British illustration. Ray's concern in collecting was the primacy of the image; both reproductions of paintings and pure illustrations are included. The generally chronological layout runs from Blake and Flaxman to Rackham and Dulac. The plates and illustrations are excellent, as are the catalog entries. This book, more than the catalog of a particular collection, makes solid contributions to our knowledge of a period now being appreciated afresh. Highly recommended for collections with any interest in book collecting and book illustration.—Jack Perry Brown, Yale Univ. Center for British Art & British Studies

Photography

Gerster, Georg. Grand Design: the earth from above.

Paddington Pr: Two Continents. 1976. 312p. photogs., mainly color. LC 76-3809. ISBN 0-8467-0140-5. $50. PHOTOG

Aerial photography is a field dominated by its practical applications: military, cartographic, and agricultural. Gerster, however, has an artist's approach, and his low-altitude photographs successfully reveal unseen beauties of the earth. The pictures are arranged into photo-essays covering such diverse topics as Nebraska farmlands, saltworks, Biblical sites, the round town, the natural earth, industrial construction, and Nazca Indian ground-pictures. There are startling pictures of man-made oases on the fringe of the Sahara and intriguing views of Bronze Age entrenchments. New perspective is given to the stark beauty of Bryce Canyon, Utah and Ayers Rock, Australia. The chaos of Nagasaki and the monotony of a California suburb are both fascinating and disturbing. Captions for the photographs are commendably factual and concise. High quality paper has been

BUYING YOUR HOUSE
A Complete Guide to Inspection and Evaluation
by Joseph C. Davis & Claxton Walker

"Practical experience and professional expertise in the building industry are combined in this comprehensive guide to home buying. The primary focus is on the physical inspection and evaluation of the house. . . . Line drawings of architectural styles and diagrams of major equipment (furnaces, air conditioners), gutter systems, and locks enhance the text. Especially useful are the discussions on the pros and cons of various heating systems, electronic air filters, solar energy, etc. Includes additional reading, extensive glossary, and index. Recommended."—Library Journal

SBN 87523-184-5 Illustrated $8.95

DESIGNING PICTURES WITH STRING
by ROBERT SHARPTON

"Sharpton is a mathematician as well as an artist. Writing for beginners, he discusses materials, design, color and basic threading patterns (five) for creating a variety of geometric pictures out of nails and thread. There are step-by-step instructions for projects using free-form, abstract, and realistic designs. The black-and-white photographs and drawings that accompany each project are excellent. Useful for both the general craftsperson and the mathematics teacher."—Library Journal.

SBN 87523-183-7
17 photographs, 62 line drawings $6.95

EMERSON BOOKS, INC.
Buchanan, New York 10511

used and the reproductions are excellent. A superb volume that is well worth its price.—Walter P. Coombs, Jr., Pratt Museum, Amherst Coll., Amherst, Mass.

BIOGRAPHY

Anderson, Chester G., ed. & intro. Growing Up in Minnesota: ten writers remember their childhoods.

Univ. of Minnesota Pr. Nov. 1976. c.264p. LC 75-40546. ISBN 0-8166-0765-6. $7.95. LIT PER NAR

A smorgasbord of childhood reminiscences by American Indian, black, and Caucasian writers and educators, including Gerald Vizenor, Robert Bly, and Harrison Salisbury. There is much variety in the accounts of social, economic, political, and familial life and of urban and rural locales; but there is solidarity (as Anderson aptly illustrates) in the effectual recognition of the disparity between the reality of Minnesotan life and the image of the state as a northern Utopia. The generally superior quality of the writing (particularly that of Meridel Le Sueur) and the reasonable price of the book ensure its suitability for many libraries, not simply those with regional collections.—James A. Gollata, Mount Senario Coll. Lib., Ladysmith, Wis.

Canzoneri, Robert. A Highly Ramified Tree.

Viking. Nov. 1976. 224p. ISBN 0-670-37205-6. $8.95. TRAV/PER NAR

When his aged father decides on a sentimental journey back to the Sicily he left as a boy, the author accompanies him and discovers his own roots—a discovery which sparks a firing of recollections, observations, and wonderings about how he came to be where he is and who he is. This autobiographical journey is not so much a geographic mapping as it is a lyrical musing of one man's view of the scheme of things and his place in it. Canzoneri's evocations of his never-met Sicilian relatives and his boyhood in Southern small towns as the son of an immigrant Southern Baptist preacher are warm and engaging. The author's jumps in time, place, and point of view are going to make this difficult reading for some, but it will be rewarding and absorbing for many adult readers.—Jerry Maioli, Walla Walla County Rural Lib. District, Wash.

Carter, Forrest. The Education of Little Tree.

Delacorte. 1976. 200p. LC 76-14782. ISBN 0-440-02317-X. $7.95. AUTOBIOG

In this episodic narrative, a five-year-old boy whose parents are dead goes to live with his Cherokee grandparents in the mountains of Tennessee. From them he learns the ways and wisdom of mountain men and "the Indian." Unfortunately, the down-home manner of narration is so heavy-handed, so larded with sentimentality, pseudo-naïveté, and cracker-barrel philosophy, that all serious intentions are rendered bathetic. The contrast between the fatuous whites and freedom-loving Indians is sometimes amusing, but more often stereotypic and wooden. The autobiography's saving grace is its detailed descriptions of natural phenomena in the mountains. With these we have a sense of felt experience that is missing from the rest of the text, and is sorely needed.—Judith McPheron, Oklahoma County Libs., Edmond

Christopher, Milbourne. Houdini: a pictorial life.

Crowell. Nov. 1976. 224p. illus., some color. ISBN 0-690-01152-0. $14.95. BIOG

This very interesting book is far better than Walter B. Gibson's Original Houdini Scrapbook (LJ 8/76). It includes some excellent photographs in addition to scrapbook material, posters, and cartoons. Christopher delves into many aspects of Houdini's career: the magic performances, the movie making, and his association with Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in searching for honest and true spiritualists. Highly recommended.—Ann Zaeske, Anheuser-Busch Lib., St. Louis

Dayan, Moshe. Moshe Dayan: story of my life, an autobiography.

Morrow. 1976. 640p. photogs. maps. index. LC 76-18144. ISBN 0-688-03076-9. $15. AUTOBIOG

The man who played such a vital role in the founding and preservation of the State of Israel at last tells his own story. With an extraordinary amount of detail, Dayan traces his education and his political and military careers from his childhood on a northern kibbutz through Israel's many wars and uneasy peaces to his present retirement from public life. He is forthright in his evaluations of others in public life, and his accounts of military strategy sessions and negotiations reveal a man who dealt even with Israel's fiercest enemies with an open mind and without prejudice. Unfortunately, Dayan holds himself aloof from his readers—even as we learn what he did and why, we do not know what he thought or how he felt. Students of Israeli history will welcome Dayan's autobiography, but the average reader might have appreciated a little more warmth.—Marcia R. Hoffman, Woodbridge P.L., Colonia, N.J.

Forest, Eva. From a Spanish Prison.

Random. 1976. 191p. tr. by Rosemary Sheed. LC 76-13230. ISBN 0-394-40769-5. $6.95. PER NAR

From a Spanish Prison consists of the diary and letters written by Forest to her children while she was being held without trial for her alleged involvement in the murder of Prime Minister Carrero Blanco and the bombing of a Madrid café in 1973. The prologue states that this book is written to draw attention to some collective problems—imprisonment without due process and political imprisonment. Yet, Forest's letters, sent through a prison censor, do not focus on the internal political struggles of Spain and do not stress the author's ideology. Rather, they reflect the loving concerns of a mother as she attempts to continue to influence and guide her three teenage children while being forcibly isolated

"Recommended"*

THE BUILD-IT-YOURSELF FURNITURE CATALOG

Franklynn Peterson

"An excellent introduction to building tables, desks, shelves, headboards, and chairs from basic materials... Instructions for the three dozen projects, which are rated as to skill and time required, are simple and illustrated with adequate line drawings."
—* Library Journal
(September 15, 1976)
0-13-085910-9 $9.95

PRENTICE-HALL
General Book Marketing Division
Box 500, Englewood Cliffs,
New Jersey 07632

"A fascinating full-scale study of Jung's creative life and striving toward psychological wholeness"
—Publishers Weekly

JUNG
His Life and Work

By BARBARA HANNAH. "A longtime colleague and friend records her memories, impressions, and other valuable information about Jung's life and career...providing hitherto unpublished information of note...for future biographers. ...An honest, warm, and human book, highly enriching and stimulating."—Library Journal. "Full of the kind of detail important in understanding so individual a figure."—Kirkus Reviews (Special Mention). 447 pp. Index, bibliog., notes. SBN-399-11441-6. $12.95

G.P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

from them. The letters thus illustrate the universal experience of the pain inherent in separation from one's children.—Beth Watson, Los Angeles County P.L. System, Lakewood Gambino, Thomas. Nyet: an American rock musician encounters the Soviet Union.

Prentice-Hall. 1976. 183p. LC 76-20453. ISBN 0-13-1627794-2. $6.95. PER NAR

Gambino was saxophonist for a jazz/rock ensemble which accompanied the Joffrey Ballet on a detente-inspired month's tour of the U.S.S.R. in late 1974. His jivey reminiscence points out that contemporary American music and dance seem to be in short supply in Russia, and audiences there are understandably appreciative for what little they get. However, the author was turned off by almost every other aspect of his brief visit: the drafty Intourist accommodations, repetitious food, the lack of consumer goods (imagine—no American cigarettes in Lithuania!), and the constant police surveillance. As a result, his shallow impressions are colored by a decidedly peevish and chauvinistic tone. Libraries can do without this title, especially in view of the several more objective books on Russia currently in print.—Paul G. Feehan, Univ. of Miami Lib., Coral Gables, Fla.

Gillespie, Janet. With a Merry Heart.

Harper. 1976. 224p. ISBN 0-06-011537-8. $8.95. MEMOIR

This charming and witty memoir of an exceptionally sun-filled and joyous childhood is a paean to the "good old days." Looking back at a girlhood singularly free from distress or unhappiness, the author paints an enchanting family portrait in which she was the eldest child. The family was well-to-do; Pop was a far from stuffy minister; and Mum possessed the merry heart of the title. The years were marked by the advent of new babies, seasonal festivities, school, growing up and, above all, the golden summers spent at "The Point." Not the stuff of high drama but the author's great skill in evoking the sounds, smells, and textures of bygone days, especially the summer days which are the focal point of her reminiscences, as well as her ability to convey the warmth, affection, and security in which this close and loving family wrapped its members, elevates this book from mere nostalgia to a special niche of autobiography.—Mary J. Mayer, New York City Dept. for the Aging

Gopal, Sarvepalli. Jawaharlal Nehru: a biography. Vol. 1: 1889–1947.

Harvard Univ. Pr. 1976. 398p. photogs. bibliog. index. LC 75-33411. ISBN 0-674-47310-8. $17.50.

Pandey, B. N. Nehru.

Stein & Day. 1976. 470p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-37858. ISBN 0-8128-1931-4. $12.50. BIOG

Gopal's book, the first of a projected three-volume work, covers the now all-too-familiar ground of Nehru's childhood, early political career, and successful leadership of the Indian Independence Movement. It does, however, have a distinct advantage over the existing literature in that it uses the personal papers of the Nehrus and other (nonsocialist) Indian leaders as well as the archives of the Indian National Congress. Gopal offers many perceptive observations and adds a number of new points about Nehru the man. His will undoubtedly become a standard work on Nehru, although a more exhaustive bibliography would have added to its worth.

In many respects, Pandey's book runs parallel to Gopal's biography, even in the sources consulted. But Pandey writes in a much more interesting style and makes use of oral historical sources. Like Gopal, unfortunately, Pandey overlooks sources of information from socialist or Hindu groups. His book contains many of the usual clichés, and these lend it the color of a panegyric. Still, it provides a wealth of information in a readable and concise manner.

The task of looking at Nehru in historical perspective has just begun, but perhaps Indian scholars are too close to the Nehru era to succeed at producing a truly objective study of the man. Until this occurs, both the Gopal and Pandey works will be useful for laymen as well as specialists, and should be acquired by libraries with substantial India collections.—B. G. Gokhale, Asian Studies Program, Wake Forest Univ., Winston-Salem, N.C.

Hemingway, Mary Welsh. How It Was.

Knopf. 1976. 537p. index. LC 76-13672. ISBN 0-394-40109-3. $12.50. LIT/AUTOBIOG

In this autobiography, Mary Welsh Hemingway describes her childhood and youth (very briefly), her involvement in World War II, and her meeting of and her subsequent life with Hemingway; at the end, she devotes four short chapters to her life after his suicide. The book is factual (she makes use of her diaries, Hemingway's letters, and her own correspondence) and simply written and contains a wealth of information about the last 17 years of Hemingway's life. After Carlos Baker's excellent biography, this book does not bring anything dramatically new to our understanding of Hemingway's life and work, but it shows us Hemingway in a more benevolent light. Although she does not minimize his tantrums, his often childish behavior, and his psychological problems, she describes him as a warm, generous, and loving man. A useful and interesting book to any one fascinated by Hemingway's complex personality.—Jacqueline M. Courbin, Dept. of English, Ottawa Univ., Canada

Hulse, Jerry. Jody.

McGraw. 1976. 145p. LC 76-16826. ISBN 0-07-031147-1. $6.95. PER NAR

Here is a real-life detective story. Jody, adopted at birth, must, due to a medical emergency, find her real parents. She has exactly eight days in which to do this. In a frantic effort to save her life, her newspaperman husband sets out to accomplish the impossible. How he does this—despite repeated setbacks, dead ends, destroyed records, illegible papers, and a myriad other problems—makes for edge-of-the-chair reading. A riveting, heart-warming account, written in a lively, very readable style. The book should be of special interest to adoptees and adoptive parents.—Lola Dudley, Mamaroneck Free Lib., N.Y.

Landvater, Dorothy. David: a mother's story of her son's recovery from a coma and brain damage.

Prentice-Hall. 1976. 157p. LC 76-10139. ISBN 0-13-196956-0. $6.95. PER NAR

Landvater's book vividly captures the fright and awe experienced by a parent confronted with the news that her son, victim of an automobile accident, has a brain stem concussion with internal bleeding. It follows David through the triumphs and agonies of a long course

Dispassionate, provocative, poignantly ironic

Mehta, Ved. Mahatma Gandhi and His Apostles.

Viking. Jan. 1977. 300p. index. ISBN 0-670-45087-1. $10. BIOG

The author, an Indian-born staff writer for the New Yorker, is 42, too young to have known his subject who died in 1947. Mehta interviewed those who knew Gandhi, and the curators of his legacy. Well-known facts are woven together artfully with new material in a taut, spare, fascinating narrative. Gandhi, sometimes potent, sometimes pathetic, emerges vividly as guru, campaigner, nurse, dietician, sanitarian, farmer, husband, writer, lawyer, sexual obsessive, hypertensive, and martyr. He was not a good father to his three sons, and his preoccupation with diet, elimination, skin care, and sex comes through in a way that will intrigue the objective reader while putting off the Gandhi-worshipper. Although Gandhi's ideas are summarized he is not quoted extensively, so one misses the flavor and power of his prose. The book does not explain Gandhi's power as a leader, or his impact as a person: the apostles interviewed are faded or trite now, and one must read what they said and wrote when Gandhi was at his peak to balance this dispassionate, provocative, poignantly ironic biography. Mehta is perhaps too pessimistic about Gandhi's lasting impact, especially outside India: the impact of nonviolent strategy and philosophy in the U.S. civil rights and peace movements gets short shrift. Overall the book is rich: ashram routine, Indian politics, geography, religion, history, economics and personalities are all compressed vividly. Only descriptions of faces, rooms, and dress sometimes are hackneyed. The book is a model of energetic research. Its nonmoralistic pointedness will require the reader to evaluate Gandhi as godhead, failure, or both.—E. James Lieberman, M.D., American Public Health Assn., Washington, D.C.

BIOGRAPHY
BIOGRAPHY

of special treatment in rehabilitative institutions and at home, pointing up the difficulties of being faced with an unknown prognosis and the joys of improvement over a course of three years of therapy. In the end, David returns to his own high school and regains his academic abilities. As inspirational narrative, David is a cogent example of the benefits of approaching positively the adversities of an adolescent's serious and long-lasting illness.—Beatrice J. Kalisch, Dept. of Parent-Child Health, Univ. of Michigan, Ann Arbor

Mencken, H. L. The New Mencken Letters.

Dial. 1976. 700p. ed. by Carl Bode. index. ISBN 0-8037-1379-7. $19.95. LIT/CORRESPONDENCE

The present edition of Mencken's letters was much needed, for in the previous edition (LJ 9/1/61) the letters were drastically edited to exclude the more unseemly and virulent aspects of Mencken's outpourings. So, in effect, we now have Mencken whole, or at least as much of him as he was disposed to reveal in this form. That is plenty, for Mencken was not only a witty and visceral writer, knowledgeable in many subjects, but also a brave stylist who seldom falls short of true distinction. Mencken was probably the last of America's cultured satirists, an anti-intellectual in the Mark Twain tradition. It is appropriate that his letters should be reissued in this Bicentennial year, for he has much to offer to our own times, chiefly his common sense and his aversion to hypocrisy and cant. Here is literary and cultural history in one of its most palatable forms, since his correspondents include such diverse artists as Ezra Pound, William Carlos Williams, and Lillian Gish. Taste and enjoy.—John R. Marvin, Dept. of English, Univ. of Massachusetts, Boston

Merrill, Robert with Robert Saffron. Between Acts: an irreverent look at opera and other madness.

McGraw. Nov. 1976. 240p. illus. LC 76-20467. ISBN 0-07-041501-3. $9.95. MUSIC/MEMOIR

Merrill relates a long, boring series of anecdotes accumulated during his lengthy career as a Metropolitan Opera star baritone, ornamented throughout with a "show-biz" tone that rarely achieves the wit he so obviously relishes and frequently lapses into less than questionable taste and unnecessary vulgarity. There is absolutely no information of any importance to anyone seriously interested in singing as a career, in music as an interest, or in opera as an art. Harmless junk it is, though, and I begrudgingly suggest it for public libraries with reader demand for such misguided megalomania.—Donald McCormick, N.Y.P.L.

Mitchell, Margaret. Margaret Mitchell's "Gone with the Wind" Letters, 1936-1949.

Macmillan. 1976. 480p. ed. by Richard Harwell. illus. index. ISBN 0-02-548650-0. $12.95. LIT/CORRESPONDENCE

More than 300 letters discussing the writing of the novel, ill health, copyright problems with foreign publishers, photo credit: Baker Archives

from "Remembering Josephine Baker" by Stephen Papich

and hundreds of other matters that occupied Mitchell after publication of her book. This well-edited collection includes letters to reviewers, publishers, fellow novelists (e.g., Ellen Glasgow, Erskine Caldwell); to Hollywood connections such as David O. Selznick, Louella Parsons, and Vivien Leigh; and to the "common readers" as well. Mitchell seems to have enjoyed writing letters, and her pleasant, often witty style evidently made her popular with her correspondents. She also comes through as a bulwark of common sense amid the fuss and publicity that made GWTW such an event. Since the event is a continuing one (both a follow-up novel and a film sequel are in the works) most libraries should buy this book in the interest of popular culture.—Sammy Staggs, Columbia Univ. Libs.

Papich, Stephen. Remembering Josephine Baker.

Bobbs. Dec. 1976. 193p. index. LC 76-11628. ISBN 0-672-52257-8. $15. MEMOIR

Josephine Baker was born around 1900, the daughter of a St. Louis washerwoman. She started in show biz as Bessie Smith's maid, but by the 1920's and 1930's she was the biggest dancing and singing sensation in Europe, the more exotic and admired because she was black. During World War II she allied herself with the French underground and survived a poisoning attempt by the Nazis. She was never really well known in the U.S. until just before she died, in 1975. This life story is the stuff of which movies are made, and makes engrossing reading. Papich was a longtime friend of Baker, and narrates her life story well. His book is a well-deserved tribute to a most extraordinary person.—Martha Cornog, Auerbach Professional Information Center, Philadelphia

Roberts, Evelyn. His Darling Wife, Evelyn: the autobiography of Mrs. Oral Roberts.

Dial. 1976. 273p. illus. LC 76-23429. ISBN 0-8037-3601-0. $7.95. REL/AUTOBIOG

Devotees of the Roberts family may now learn that all prayers are answered if one is sincere enough and what it's like to juggle four children and Oral Roberts' supper simultaneously. It's a pleasant enough story quite nicely buffed and, like Roberts' programs, glossy. But it seems barely to skim the surface and doesn't reveal the revivals' special appeal to millions. There is a sneaky suspicion, however, that Roberts may not be the world's easiest husband to fix supper for.—Judith R. Forester, Lansing P.L., Mich.

Stacey, Edward George. Lifelines: the Stacey letters, 1836-1858.

Taplinger. 1976. 180p. ed. by Jane Vansittart. illus. LC 76-362. ISBN 0-8008-4841-1. $8.95. HIST/CORRESPONDENCE

This correspondence between Stacey, ordnance clerk in the Tower of London, and his son, daughter-in-law, and granddaughter in Quebec makes compelling reading on homesteading in Canada. It is a story of unremitting toil and incredible hardship for the entire Stacey family, which had left England under a cloud of debt. The connecting narrative, which is succinct and helpful in tracing the background, dramatically contrasts the period before and after the building of the railroad. Before the railroad, life in upper Canada was one long series of reverses; after, the Staceys were able not only to survive but prosper. This is a valuable source of social history, suitable for both school and public library use. It clearly shows pioneer living conditions, and is limited only by the paucity of its illustrations and maps.—Harvey Dust, Thamesford Public Sch. Lib., Ontario, Canada

BUSINESS & ECONOMICS

Caves, Richard E. & Masu Uekusa. Industrial Organization in Japan.

Brookings. 1976. 169p. illus. index. LC 75-44509. ISBN 0-8157-1324-X. $9.95; pap. ISBN 0-8157-1323-1. $3.50. ECON

A succinct and careful analysis of how Japanese patterns of industrial organization affect that nation's economy. Using advanced econometric tools, the authors tackle the question of whether (as is often claimed) Japan's economic development is based on distinctive organizational structures derived from cultural traditions. Through a comparative

THE MODERN ACCOUNTANT'S HANDBOOK
Ed. James Don Edwards and Homer A. Black
65 Contributing Accounting Experts
•
47 In-Depth Chapters
•
1231 Pages
$30.00
An accurate, up-to-date reference thoroughly covering current accounting practices—written by professionals for professionals. Belongs in the business reference section of every public library—in special libraries catering to all levels of business management—in the library of every school of business.
Dow Jones-Irwin
1818 Ridge Road, Homewood, Ill. 60430

THE CROWELL CORNER

THE DECLINE OF CAPITAL
Arthur Jones
Foreword by Paul Erdman

"Business and economics libraries will want to acquire it."
—Library Journal

ISBN: 0-690-01045-1
LC: 75-35953
$7.95

T. Y. Crowell
666 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10019

THE ENERGY CRISIS

"...a useful and well put together work..."—The American Reference Book Annual.

Energy Crisis 1969-73
(Volume 1)
A complete and detailed survey tracing the development of the energy crisis. Volume 1 covers the discovery and exploitation of new petroleum fields, the price structure of energy resources, attempts to conserve dwindling reserves, experimental programs to develop new sources of energy, the Arab oil embargo, gasoline shortages and many other issues and developments. Indexed. ISBN 0-87196-278-0/263 pages/$10.95.

Energy Crisis 1974-75
(Volume 2)
The second volume studies the period following the Arab oil embargo of 1973. It discusses the negotiations between oil users and producers, conservation efforts on the part of oil users and the search for new petroleum and gas supplies. It also covers developments related to other energy sources such as coal, the atom, water power and solar energy. Indexed. ISBN 0-87196-279-9/213 pages/$9.95.

Set price for both books $18.95.

FACTS ON FILE
119 West 57th Street
New York, N.Y. 10019

examination, they end up minimizing the extent of Japanese distinctiveness. Their sophisticated discussion of technical and allocative efficiency, large and small industry, public policy, etc. will be invaluable to students of Japanese and comparative economics, but it must be noted that this is a technical book, written in the abstruse language of the expert.—Steven I. Levine, East Asian Inst., Columbia Univ.

Haq, Mahbub ul. The Poverty Curtain: choices for the Third World.
Columbia Univ. Pr. 1976. 256p. LC 76-7470. ISBN 0-231-04062-8. $12.50; pap. ISBN 0-231-04063-6. $5.95. INT AFFAIRS/ECON
This disturbing and thought-provoking book is bound to shake up any feeling of complacency toward the relationship between the Western and Third worlds. The author points out that the achievement of a "new international economic order" requires a redistribution between rich and poor countries and also between the poor and privileged segments of the Third World countries themselves. He admonishes the less developed countries for trying to assume the living standards of the industrial nations, and instead urges them to direct their energy toward attacking poverty and unemployment. Putting his emphasis on the response of the developed countries to international economic inequality, Haq says that marginal changes are not enough—a complete restructuring of institutions is necessary. His warning is clear: either there is a voluntary decision to share resources more equitably, or the countries of the Third World, with their huge populations and supplies of raw materials, will join together to demand it. Recommended for academic and larger public libraries.—Carol Holbrook, Univ. of Michigan Lib., Ann Arbor

Janeway, Eliot. Musings on Money: how to make dollars out of sense.
McKay. 1976. 128p. LC 76-27667. ISBN 0-679-50641-1. $6.95. BUS
Here are a few observations on personal finance from the perennial pessimist of American economists. They are intended to be applicable to almost any existing life style and to illustrate how "your feelings about money reflect your feelings about yourself." In the author's case that means an investment strategy that never strays far away from the insured savings account. In general, the work is somewhat disjointed and short on substance, but the Janeway name makes it a necessary purchase nonetheless.—William H. Hoffman, Wichita P.L., Kan.

Maccoby, Michael. The Gamesman: the new corporate leader.
S. & S. Jan. 1977. 193p. ISBN 0-671-22353-4. $7.95. BUS
Maccoby's thesis is that managers who have insinuated their way to the top by using their "heads" have neglected to develop their "hearts" along the way. He interviewed 250 executives to see what makes them tick, concluding that there are four distinct types of manager—the craftsman, the jungle fighter, the company man, and the gamesman. His explanation as to why the various types neglect to develop their "hearts" is edifying, but it is difficult to understand why he lavishes so much attention on this aspect of his study and so little on the positive measures managers could take to overcome the tendency. Too many questions are left unanswered for the presentation to be truly effective.—A. J. Anderson, Sch. of Library Science, Simmons Coll., Boston

Montias, J. M. The Structure of Economic Systems.
Yale Univ. Pr. 1976. ISBN 0-300-01833-9. $20. ECON
This is a book solely for the academic economist; indeed, it is doubtful whether anyone without a graduate degree in the field could even read it. Yet the title is justifiably broad since the work describes fundamental dimensions by which all economic systems can be compared. Ranging far beyond the usual dichotomies such as "Capitalist-Socialist" or "Centrally Directed-Free Market", the book extends from intrafirm relationships between supervisors and recalcitrant employees to international economic goals. Montias is creative in collecting and organizing elements of a general theory of economic structure, drawing heavily on organization theory and orthodox economics. Had he avoided some quite unnecessary lapses into formal mathematics, his work would have had more impact. As it is, the book is quite good, but has a very limited audience.—Robert J. Caswell, Dept. of Economics, Ohio State Univ., Columbus

Woodward, Herbert N. Capitalism Can Survive in a No-Growth Economy.
Brookdale Pr. in assoc. with Walker. 1976. 216p. bibliog. index. LC 76-12887. ISBN 0-8027-0554-5. $7.95. ECON
Another in the recent spate of books attempting to assess the future of our economic system in face of the threats of increasing population, dwindling energy resources, and a deteriorating environment. Woodward's optimistic prescriptions for the preservation of capitalism will come as a surprise to no one: smallness of scale and a simplification of our overly complex society. What is lacking, unfortunately, is a mature understanding of the essential position that limitless expansion occupies in the continued functioning of capitalism. The possibilities that Woodward proposes are not realizable in any economy that may be termed capitalistic. A more reasoned analysis of where we may be heading is to be found in Robert Heilbroner's Business Civilization In Decline (LJ 4/1/76).—Steven Wecker, Lehman Coll. Lib., CUNY

Zallen, Harold & Eugenia M. Zallen. Ideas Plus Dollars: research methodology and funding.
Academic. 1976. 387p. LC 75-46502. ISBN 0-915582-00-7. $15.75. BUS
The authors' objective has been to produce the definitive work on research funding. Without doubt, this work is comprehensive and includes valuable examples of a variety of forms, letters, proposals, evaluations, types of awards, checklists, etc. The authors note that the book is "intended to meld the ideas of the researcher and administrator," and that it can be used as both text and reference. Yet, this attempt to be all things to everyone is what gives the book its weakness. Too much time is given, for example, to different ways of producing ideas, defining them, etc.—which may be highly stimulating to someone who has never had an idea before, but some will find it simplistic. Those libraries that collect materials on grant acquisition will find much here that is useful, but it hardly rates as a first purchase.—Carolyn Simon, Austin P.L., Tex.

Labor

Donaho, Melvin W. & John L. Meyer. How To Get the Job You Want: a guide to résumés, interviews, and job-hunting strategy.

Prentice-Hall. 1976. 181p. bibliog. index. LC 76-19005. ISBN 0-13-407254-5. $8.95; pap. Spectrum. ISBN 0-13-407247-2. $3.45.

Roesch, Roberta. There's Always a Right Job for Every Woman.

Berkley Windhover: Berkley. 1976. 274p. ISBN 0-425-03193-4. pap. $2.95.

Winter, Dorothy. Help Yourself to a Job: a guide for retirees.

Beacon, dist. by Harper, Nov. 1976. 160p. index. LC 76-7749. ISBN 0-8070-2754-5. $9.95; pap. ISBN 0-8070-2755-3. $3.95. BUS/LABOR

Each of these titles is concerned with a problem faced by many Americans—finding suitable employment and realizing career goals. In a society based on individualism, this becomes the individual's problem. But with the millions of unemployed, underemployed, and unemployables creating the grave crisis facing our national leadership today, these volumes take on an added dimension. Donaho and Meyer provide a good broad-brush treatment of the overall problems facing the job hunter, such as writing a letter of application and preparing a résumé to best present career goals, job experience, and educational background. They are at their best in their discussion of the all-important interview, giving hints on "taking stock" of oneself, preparing to sell one's services, and making an investigation of the company where one is seeking employment. Roesch concentrates on providing advice in nine career areas, including business and the professions. Her 100 interesting memos are logical, valuable, and correct. Winter provides sound advice for the retiree on how to avoid age discrimination, with emphasis on what types of employers hire the elderly. Although each volume relates to the general problem of how to find employment, each has its own specific attributes and is valuable in its own particular way.—Henry T. Hettger, Federal Aviation Admin., Washington, D.C.

CORRECTION: An eight-page index will be included in Dee Dee Ahern and Betsy Bliss's The Economics of Being a Woman (LJ 11/1/76).

communications

Lippmann, Walter. Public Persons.

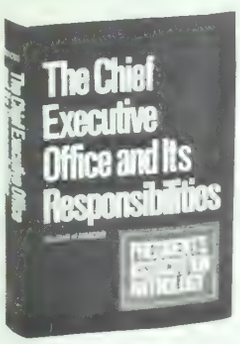
Liveright: Norton. 1976. 189p. ed. by Gilbert A. Harrison. LC 76-23103. ISBN 0-87140-620-9. $7.95. BIOG/COMM

These short but intellectually conducive profiles of famous people serve to underscore the late Lippmann's standing as an extraordinary political and social analyst. Arranged chronologically and spanning the years 1910-1967, the 48 pieces cover the premier thinkers and personalities of Lippmann's day, including William James, Lincoln Steffens, Freud, H. G. Wells, Mencken, both Roosevelts, Edison, Henry Wallace, Al Smith, de Gaulle, Gandhi, Pope John XXIII, Herbert Hoover, and John F. Kennedy. Although the essential elements of Lippmann's public philosophy are apparent in the collection, the book itself is not a major work, nor is it a necessary acquisition for most libraries.—Kenneth F. Kister, Tampa, Fla.

The Book Review is seeking qualified reviewers in the following areas: Economic Development, International Economics and Business, American and European Economic History, and the Political Economy of the U.S. Please contact Philip Mattera, the Book Review.

"...An extremely valuable sourcebook."*



"...The studies reflect general principles that all managerial levels should consider... Those who aspire to the chief executive position, as well as those who have already achieved that goal, will find the collection useful." *(Library Journal)

The Chief Executive Office and Its Responsibilities: Presidents Association Anthology
by the Staff of AMACOM
LC 75-14115 ISBN: 0-8144-5395-3
$14.95 320 pp.

amacom
A Division of American Management Associations
135 West 50 Street
New York, N. Y. 10020

"...an interesting and lucid guide on a rare tour behind the scenes of international finance."
— The Wall Street Journal

THE ARENA OF INTERNATIONAL FINANCE

Charles A. Coombs

The former Senior Vice-President of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York reveals 15 years of spectacular events behind the upheavals in international monetary affairs, including the dollar's collapse under Nixon's benign neglect policy administered by John Connally, Secretary of the Treasury.

1976
$12.95

"...an important new book....More than dust-dry economic history, [it] has its heroes and its villains, victories and defeats....lifts the veil behind which central bankers customarily operate and provides some lively glimpses of the financiers in their shirtsleeves."
— The Wall Street Journal

Serving your information needs

Wiley-Interscience
a division of
John Wiley & Sons, Inc.
605 Third Avenue
New York, N.Y. 10016

A 2187 54

EDUCATION

Bell, Dr. Terrel H. Active Parent Concern: a new home guide to help your child do better in school.

Prentice-Hall. 1976. 300p. LC 76-26646. ISBN 0-13-003863-6. $8.95. ED

Bell, former United States Commissioner of Education, resigned from that post in April, 1976 to accept a position as Utah's Higher Education Commissioner and Chief Executive of its Regents Board, giving as his reason his need to earn more money to put his children through college. His book on helping children in school is full of excellent suggestions for parent–school involvement, together with a "home curriculum" in which parents, through incidental conversation, can aid their children in the basic school areas of language and mathematics. The book emphasizes the upper elementary and high school years, a period when many parents tend to bow out of their educational guidance role. He believes the selection of an appropriate life career must not be delayed or left to chance, and recommends that in addition to studying their child's abilities and the school's offerings, parents deliberately foster contacts with successful adults in a variety of work roles who can explain job needs and requirements to the child. The two appendixes give information on the school system bureaucracy and on the Parent Teacher Association, which has often overlooked possibilities for influencing school affairs. Bell is writing about academic matters in which he has unusual expertise. His book should prove invaluable to conscientious parents.—Marian Wozencraft, Dept. of Education, SUNY at Geneseo Bledstein, Burton J. The Culture of Professionalism: the middle class and the development of higher education in America.

Norton. Nov. 1976. 224p. index. ISBN 0-393-05574-4. $12.95. ED

Bledstein bases his facile historical account of the development of higher education on the thesis that American society of the 19th and 20th centuries has been infused with a "culture of Professionalism," his term to describe middle-class beliefs in moderation, upward mobility, education, science, and the rugged individual. Unfortunately, his view of the "culture of professionalism" tends toward the negative, and the role of education and, consequently, its development in a democratic republic is downplayed. For example, he sees the growth of curricula in home economics as a professionalization of homemaking, rather than an educational breakthrough for women, opening the door to other disciplines and coeducation. As does Ivan Illich, he suggests that, as a result of this "culture," Americans place too much faith in professionals, and therefore are frequently duped by immoderate men. This part of his critique has merit, especially if it heralds a return to individual self-confidence, responsibility, and decision making. He leaves many questions unanswered, and the blame he lays to vertical vision and competition is rather extreme. Well documented, thought-provoking, and recommended for general and specialized collections in history and education.—Susan M. Allen, Associate Editor, "College Student Personnel Abstracts," Claremont, Calif.

Moore, Charles Guy. The Career Game.

National Institute of Career Planning. 1976. 267p. LC 75-27335. $10. BUS/ED

This volume is a do-it-yourself career-decision-making kit for those who are either in college or plan to enter shortly. Moore encourages his audience to establish a three-step career-growth plan: identify your priorities, learn to analyze your opportunities, and discover how to generate your sources of information. Much nuts-and-bolts advice is included as well: how to interview, prepare a résumé, decide salary questions. The book's style is anecdotal and breezy—presumably because the author thinks that's how adolescents talk—and illustrated throughout with "cutesy" cartoons. Libraries intending to supplement their collection with a general "career advice" book directed toward adult and mid-career types would do better with Richard Nelson Bolles's What Color is Your Parachute? (LJ 6/1/73). For subject collections.—Michael Fenenbock, Washington, D.C.

Sanders, James W. The Education of an Urban Minority.

Oxford Univ. Pr. Jan. 1977. 288p. illus. maps. index. $13.50. REL/ED

This is an account of the origins, growth, and recent decline of the Catholic school system of the Archdiocese of Chicago, the largest in the United States. Beginning with the difficulties and hostility which the early Catholic immigrants faced, it goes on to describe the arrival of numerous ethnic groups (most of which began their own schools) and shows how they reacted to their new environment, the many problems they overcame, and their growth in power as they moved up the social and economic ladder. Sanders argues that while public schools sought to Anglo-Saxonize the immigrants and "teach them their place," the Catholic schools were surprisingly tolerant—in a society that condemned them as intolerant—and allowed ethnic minorities to flourish within their own traditions. Well documented, replete with interesting details and social comment, and clearly organized, this study of a remarkably complex church enterprise will interest educators, historians, and students of urban affairs.—W. Charles Heiser, S.J., St. Louis Univ. Lib.

Sedlacek, William E. & Glenwood C. Brooks Jr. Racism in American Education: a model for change.

Nelson-Hall. 1976. $12.50. SOC SCI/ED

The authors stress the various levels of self-awareness that individuals and institutions must attain prior to final disposition of their racist perceptions. Frankly, it's difficult to appreciate the volume's raison d'être. Sedlacek and Brooks are sailors on the seas of the obvious; their catalog of abuses in the educational sector is already common knowledge. Teachers and administrators searching for a legitimate training device would find Frank Riessman's The Inner-City Child (LJ 6/15/76) infinitely more helpful. Racism in American education is still pervasive; a role for this volume in its ultimate extinction is categorically impossible.—Mark R. Yerburgh, SUNY at Albany Lib.

HISTORY

Bavousett, Glenn B. World War II Aircraft in Combat.

Arco. 1976. 144p. ed. by Stanley M. Ulanoff. color illus. index. LC 75-7167. ISBN 0-668-03823-3. $10.95. AERONAUTICS/HIST

The set of 36 full-color paintings by Tony Weddel on which this slim oversized volume is based have been individually available to the aeronautically inclined public for a few years; this incarnation saves the print buyer several dollars and adds some average historical narrative. The paintings vary from a couple that are grossly flawed to several startlingly lifelike renderings; and nearly all are heavily dramatic. Aircraft markings and colors are depicted accurately in the main, but the page or so of history and information accompanying each reproduction is merely introductory, too little about too much. For collections that stress the visual in aviation history.—Mel D. Lane, Sacramento, Calif.

Dabney, Virginius. Richmond: the story of a city.

Doubleday. 1976. 412p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 73-9150. ISBN 0-385-02046-5. $12.95. URBAN STUDIES HIST

This is a popularized synthesis that draws upon numerous scholarly predecessors, including some unpublished material. Because of the emphasis on a great range of individuals of purely local interest, the book will appeal primarily to Richmonders—though there is sufficient information concerning the city's insititutions and their development to make it worthwhile for those with a wider interest in urban studies. In addition, the work devotes considerable attention to blacks and women, both of whose roles have generally been overlooked in earlier urban histories. The major fault of the work lies in its lack of organization. It is neither strictly topical nor chronological, and facts, anecdotes, names, dates, movements, and trends are arranged in such a way as to interrupt the narrative and leave the reader wanting more information.—Samuel Allen Streit, C.C.N.Y. Lib.

Detwiler, Donald S. Germany: a short history.

Southern Illinois Univ. Pr. 1976. 273p. maps. bibliog. index. LC 76-4563. ISBN 0-8093-0491-0. $10; pap. ISBN 0-8093-0768-5. $4.95. HIST

This little book has the modest but impossible aim of surveying German political history from Roman times to the present. On the whole it succeeds remarkably well, both because the text is clear and well organized and because it is admirably supported with 12 pages of excellent maps, a chronology that is a summary rather than a mere list of dates, and a lengthy and up-to-date bibliographical essay. The book can thus serve a number of purposes, from providing the layman with a general introduction to German history to furnishing someone whose interests lie, say, in music or literature with the essential political background. The strength of Detwiler's accomplishment lies in his ability to explain concisely what was at the root of complex matters such as the lay investiture controversy—and to choose the right things to explain. He is also very good at showing why the accomplishments of such diverse worthies as Frederick Barbarossa, Bismarck, Stresemann, and Adenauer have earned them their places in German history. In short, an unpretentious but very useful book, which most libraries should have.—John G. Williamson, Yale Univ. Lib.

Dunlop, John B. The New Russian Revolutionaries.

Nordland. 1976. 344p. index. LC 74-22865. ISBN 0-913124-09-5. $18.50 POL SCI HIST

Dunlop has written a provocative study of the largest post-Stalin underground revolutionary organization in the Soviet Union—the All-Russian Social Christian Union for the Liberation of the People (VSKhSON). Dunlop explains that VSKhSON, in existence from 1964 to 1967, was far more significant than other contemporary Soviet dissident movements, since its ideology of neo-Slavophilism and revolution was a major ideological challenge to the continued hegemony of Marxism-Leninism. The author explores VSKhSON's philosophy, its membership, its three years of activity, its demise, and its influence on Soviet society. Among the many recent texts about Soviet dissident activities, Dunlop's book stands out as one of the most interesting, thoroughly researched, and clearly written works. Highly recommended for research and large public libraries.—Pamela Joan Hersh, Librarian, New Jersey State Dept. of Education

Frantz, Joe B. Texas: a Bicentennial history.

Norton. (States & the Nation). Nov. 1976. 240p. photogs. maps. bibliog. $8.95 HIST

Frantz was the obvious choice to write a book whose purpose is to define what is most significant historically, socially, and philosophically about Texas. Frantz, a distinguished regional historian, admits that this volume is "more long on interpretation than loaded with fact," but it stands on the accumulated facts of a lifetime. He also notes that he has "suffered with the state most of my life, and have lived away . . . just enough to see it through outsiders' eyes." This is a good, short, readable introductory history of the second largest state and a worthwhile addition to the regional history collections of most libraries.—Carolyn Simon, Austin P.L., Tex.

Frederick, Peter J. Knights of the Golden Rule: the intellectual as Christian social reformer in the 1890's.

Univ. Pr. of Kentucky. 1976. 339p. illus. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-8131-1345-8. $18.75. HIST

The last decade of the 19th Century was a time of great social upheaval, as well as a time when American intellectuals increasingly scrutinized the social and economic assumptions upon which the society was based. One of the most significant currents in the reform thought of the day was found among those individuals the author dubs the "knights of the golden rule." Coming from similar backgrounds, these persons had a common Christian commitment to social reform, expressed in the idealistic solutions they proposed for the social ills of the day. The figures examined are familiar to students of this period: Walter Rauschenbusch, George Herron, William Dean Howells, Henry Demarest Lloyd, W. D. P. Bliss, Samuel "Golden Rule" Jones, et al. This superb study includes extensive notes and bibliographies, and taken as a whole, it is a highly enjoyable, well-thought-out piece of intellectual history. Recommended.—Ronald J. Kaye, Prince George's County Memorial Lib. System, Hyattsville, Md.

Memo To: ALL SECONDARY SCHOOL TEACHERS AND LIBRARIANS

Re: DEAR FACULTY: A DISCOVERY METHOD GUIDEBOOK TO THE HIGH SCHOOL LIBRARY
by Jo Anne Nordling

DEAR FACULTY will involve students and teachers in the use of library resources as an integral part of the classroom teaching/learning process. The classroom-tested model lesson plans, the core of the book, are designed to be adapted to fit the needs of individual students or classes. The lesson plans will encourage outside reading and spark research projects in such diverse subject areas as English, history, industrial arts, ethnic studies, and foreign languages, among others

If you want to help your students expand their awareness of their world—past, present, and future; if you want to teach them to use the learning tools available in their own school, this is the book for you!

ISBN 0-87305-114-9 Illus
Paper Approx. $10.00

From: F.W. FAXON COMPANY, INC.
Publishing Division
15 Southwest Park, Westwood, MA 02090

"A scathing indictment of the public school system... The strength of the book lies in its calling attention to the seriousness of the situation in the first place."—Library Journal

"The book's case histories force a look at the human element involved in the rules and regulations of school administration."—The Booklist

BARRED FROM SCHOOL:
TWO MILLION CHILDREN!
by Thomas J. Cottle

$7.95 at bookstores or direct from
NEW REPUBLIC BOOKS
1220 19th St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036
Distributed by E. P. Dutton

Griffith, Samuel B., II. In Defense of the Public Liberty: Britain, America, and the struggle for independence—from 1760 to the surrender at Yorktown in 1781.

Doubleday. Nov. 1976. illus. maps. bibliog. index. LC 73-9159. ISBN 0-385-02541-6. $14.95. HIST

This is essentially a military history of the War for Independence, and an outstandingly good one at that. Although no single volume could be adequate to tell the full tale, this one comes closer to it than most. Well-written, interesting, balanced in judgment, and historically sound, this volume will be a welcome addition to most libraries. With his exemplary command of primary sources, Griffith provides skillful and accurately drawn portraits of the principal military and political leaders on both sides. Equally praiseworthy is the author's insistence upon a global perspective for the conflict. His close analysis of developments in Europe, the campaigns in the West Indies, etc. are extremely valuable for understanding British strategy, or lack of it, in North America.—Robert L. Burr, Coll. of William & Mary Lib., Williamsburg, Va.

Guinther, John. Moralists and Managers: public interest movement in America.

Anchor: Doubleday. Nov. 1976. 280p. ISBN 0-385-11532-6. pap. $2.95. POL SCI/HIST

This thematic social history traces the evolution of America's assumptions about public interest to discover how large segments of society have come to see various policies and actions as moral or immoral, right or wrong. Guinther categorizes the evolving "social conscience" against a background dialectic he sees at work throughout American history. The tension is between the "moralists"—those who hold that government has a moral obligation to protect its citizens from unfair practices—and "the managers"—those who hold that government's only purpose is to produce an "orderly and secure society." The debate over the public interest is played out against this backdrop, with Guinther providing a fresh interpretation of the labor movement, feminism, civil rights, and urban populism. Like any thematic attempt at historical analysis, Guinther's work leaves a number of obvious contradictions unaccounted for. Nevertheless, it is an interesting, topical, and readable volume that is well worth inclusion in most subject collections.—Michael Fenenbock, Washington, D.C.

May, Henry F. The Enlightenment in America.

Oxford Univ. Pr. 1976. 448p. ISBN 0-19-502018-9. $15. HIST

May has made the first serious and large-scale attempt to define the American Enlightenment, the studies of Daniel Boorstin and Donald Meyer notwithstanding. In order to encompass the sweep and complexities of this period, he has boldly divided the Enlightenment into four phases: the moderate or rational phase, (initiated by Locke and Newton), which preached balance, order, and religious compromise; the skeptical phase, which partly shifted the center to Paris and to Voltaire; the revolutionary phase, (begun with Rousseau and culminating with Paine and Godwin), which had considerable impact upon America; and the didactic phase (centering chiefly in Edinburgh), which contributed to the Unitarian belief in progress, natural religion, and a beneficent God. One may quarrel with May's emphasis upon the connection between the revolutionary Enlightenment and Protestant revivalism with his stress upon religious awakening, and with his relative neglect of the French philosophes, but the subtlety and range of this book—and a major work it is—put all students of the Enlightenment in his debt.—Milton Cantor, Dept. of History, Univ. of Massachusetts, Amherst

Merrill, Boynton, Jr. Jefferson's Nephews: a frontier tragedy.

Princeton Univ. Pr. Nov. 1976. 440p. maps. bibliog. index. LC 76-3267. ISBN 0-691-04640-9. $16.50. CRIME/HIST

In 1811, Thomas Jefferson's nephew, Lilburne Lewis of Kentucky, in an apparent fit of pique, tied his slave George to the kitchen floor, decapitated him with an ax, forced another slave to dismember the corpse, burned the remains, and mortared them among the chimney stones. This grisly event (the occasion for the book) appears on pages 257-258, and anyone interested in blood and gore will find the final chapters on the murder and its aftermath quite compelling. But Merrill's unconvincing explanation of the crime, preceded by 24 chapters on 200 years of largely irrelevant family and social history, ruins the effect. It is to be hoped that this will be the last book by a major publisher to spell the word Negro with a lower-case n, the last to state that slaves "were orderly, if not contented," and the last to call any group "the lowest class of social scum." Merrill is not a historian; and Jefferson's Nephews, which is not good history, should have been a 100-page "fact-is-stranger-than-fiction" thriller.—Robert C. Twombly, Dept. of History, C.C.N.Y.

Pescatello, Ann M. Power and the Pawn: the female in Iberian families, societies, and cultures.

Greenwood. (Contribs. in Intercultural & Comparative Studies, No. 1). 1976. 281p. bibliog. index. LC 75-35352. ISBN 0-8371-8583-1. $15.95. SOC SCI/HIST

Beginning with medieval Spain and Portugal and ending with contemporary Africa, Latin America, and Asia, Pescatello carefully describes the evolution of women's status in Iberian cultures. She draws on social science theory and historical evidence to revise some orthodox assumptions. For example, she challenges the primacy of Moorish influence in creating the contradictory Iberian custom of revering and secluding women, and argues instead for a panoply of social, religious, and economic factors, particularly the demographic. Pescatello's well-written account is documented with many secondary sources and some primary materials. Pertinent statistics are incorporated into the narrative, and a useful bibliography rounds out the work. A valuable contribution to women's history and Iberian studies.—R. S. Pickett, Syracuse Univ., N.Y.

Reisler, Mark. By the Sweat of Their Brow: Mexican immigrant labor in the United States, 1900-1940.

Greenwood. 1976. 300p. bibliog. index. LC 76-5329. ISBN 0-8371-8894-6. $14.50. LABOR/HIST

This volume will be both interesting and instructive for students of immigration, labor, and Mexican-American history. With its vast array of primary and secondary sources, the book is uniformly well written; particularly noteworthy are the chapters which discuss the debate between nativists and certain economic interests concerning the restriction of Mexican immigration. Also included are chapters on the condition of the immigrants in the cities and during the Depression. The work's limitation lies in the fact that it offers little information concerning the everyday life of the immigrants. It also fails to make comparative use of recent studies of European immigrant experiences in the U.S. This is a competent piece of scholarship, however, that fills a definite void. Most college and large public libraries should include it in their collections.—Kevin M. Rosswurm, Akron P.L., Ohio

Rhodes, Anthony. Propaganda: the art of persuasion, World War II.

Chelsea House, dist. by Whirlwind Bk. Co., 80 Fifth Ave., New York 10011. 1976. 319p. ed. by Victor Margolin. illus., some color. bibliog. index. LC 75-17545. ISBN 0-87754-029-2. $30. HIST

This is an unusually fascinating and beautifully produced volume about a very complex topic. Rhodes, a widely traveled British scholar and writer, ably supported by the Chicago educator and author Margolin, presents a remarkably comprehensive analysis of how all of the major powers in World War II used "propaganda" for psychological warfare. The most complete attention is given to Goebbels and his clever manipulation of the German people, but Mussolini also is dealt with thoroughly. An afterword by Daniel Lerner about the psychological warfare campaign against Germany from D-Day to V-E Day enriches the volume. The abundant illustrative material, gathered from archives of many nations, has been carefully chosen and superbly reproduced: postage stamps, leaflets, pamphlets, newspaper stories, film stills, etc. In spite of its high price, the book is warmly recommended for public and academic libraries except the smallest.—Felix E. Hirsch, Professor Emeritus, Trenton State Coll., N.J.

Ruby, Robert H. & John A. Brown. The Chinook Indians: traders of the lower Columbia River.

Univ. of Oklahoma Pr. (Civilization of the American Indian). Nov. 1976. 380p. fwd. by Erna Gunther. illus. maps. index. LC 75-40148. ISBN 0-8061-1325-1. $14.95. HIST

Ruby and Brown recount the history of the interaction between whites and the Lower-Chinookan–speaking groups—

Chinooks, Clatsops, Wahkiakums, and Kathlamets—of the lower Columbia River valley. The authors consider the Indians' role as traders, first in furs and then in salmon and oysters, and the dynamics of this trade for both whites and Indians. They also examine the early rivalry among the British, Americans, and Russians for control of this trade. The disastrous cultural consequences of this trade for the Indians—alcoholism, disease, and intertribal and interracial conflict—frequently dominate the text. The study concludes with a history of the federal government's Indian policies as they relate to the Lower Chinook. Based upon extensive research in primary and secondary sources, this work is recommended for libraries with substantial collections in Northwest or Indian history.—Charles A. D'Aniello, Richmond P.L., Va.

Sherer, Robert G. Subordination or Liberation? the development and conflicting theories of black education in nineteenth century Alabama.

Univ. of Alabama Pr. 1976. 224p. bibliog. index. LC 75-44050. ISBN 0-8173-9111-8. $8.75.
ED HIST

This monograph explores the experience of black private and public education in Alabama from the period of emancipation through 1901. Sherer's intent is to supplement emerging black studies programs as well as the historical record; thus, his book focuses squarely on the black experience, with only a minimum rehash of white segregationist efforts. Sherer provides a full examination of the philanthropic organizations, leaders, institutions, and debates which gave early voice to black education. He sets forth an interesting interpretation of Booker T. Washington that attempts to clarify his role and influence. Indeed, the debate within the black educational community over the efficacy of "industrial" versus "liberal" education has a very modern ring. An informative addition to research and subject collections.—Michael Fenenbock, Washington, D.C.

Shover, John L. First Majority, Last Minority: the transforming of rural life in America.

Northern Illinois Univ. Pr. 1976. 348p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-26473. $12.50; pap. $5.
AGRICULTURE/HIST

Shover, an experienced historian of agriculture and 20th-Century America, deals here with the agricultural sector in the U.S. over the last 150 years in a series of case studies. He proceeds from a detailed and somewhat nostalgic description of rural life in several Middle Western locales prior to World War II to the revolutionary changes of the mid-20th-Century—massive urban migration and rapid advances in farm technology. What rural life is like after this "great disjuncture" is largely neglected by Shover in order to focus on the public policy questions of the 1970's concerning agriculture and food. He emphasizes the liberal criticisms of the practices of the large corporations engaged in the processing and distribution of food, portraying the Agriculture Department as working closely with agribusiness, often at the expense of producer and consumer alike. While scholarly, the book may be useful in public libraries.—Philip Brown, South Dakota State Univ. Lib., Brookings

Stephenson, Jill. Women in Nazi Society.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. 1976. 223p. bibliog. index. LC 75-25208. ISBN 0-06-496528-7. $17.50.
SOC SCI HIST

This very academic and thoroughly researched book squeezes a great deal of information into its ten short chapters. Stephenson examines the position of German women in marriage and family life, in outside employment, in higher education, and in the professions from the closing years of the Weimar Republic to the first years of World War II. She dispenses with the popular anecdotal style of Hitlerian biographies in preference for scholarship—almost all of her listed sources are primary, from the period. Stephenson concludes that the woman's position in employment and status as Hausfrau and mother improved during the 1930's in Germany, although for reasons beneficial to the Reich, not the individual. For serious students of the Nazi period, the book is an informative, although dry, look at laws and reforms concerning women.—Craig H. Little, Orleans, Mass.

Summers, Anthony & Tom Mangold. The File on the Tsar.

Harper. 1976. 448p. illus. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-06-012807-0. $12.50.
HIST

The murder of the Romanovs in July 1918 was, say the authors, a fabrication designed to embarass the Bolsheviks. Only the tsar was executed at Ekaterinburg; the rest of the family was taken to Perm to be used as bargaining counters with the Germans for the release of prominent Bolsheviks. With the easing of the German threat, the hostages ceased to have utility and almost no trace of them was found after Perm. The authors say that it is likely that Anastasia did escape and arrive in the West as Anna Anderson. The evidence presented in this book, as well as its usefulness, is questionable. The reader will remain puzzled about why the White Russians felt the need to concoct a phony atrocity story when the Reds were quite willing then and later to acknowledge their responsibility for the deed.—Fred E. Friedel, Dept. of History, Bellevue Community Coll., Wash.

Sweets, John F. Resistance in France, 1940–1944: a history of the Mouvements Unis De La Résistance.

Northern Illinois Univ. Pr. 1976. 252p. bibliog. index. LC 75-15014. ISBN 0-87580-061-0. $12.50.
HIST

A political history of the Resistance in southern France and its relations with de Gaulle's Free French, the Communist party, and the prewar political groups, Sweets' solid monograph offers the only thorough and objective English-language study on the inner politics of the Resistance. Rather than duplicating them, it complements Robert Paxton's works and Peter Novick's The Resistance Versus Vichy (LJ 1/15/69), which focuses on the liberation. Writing for a scholarly audience, Sweets substitutes overlong but useful footnotes for the colorful anecdotes usual in romanticized studies of the Resistance. The notes are a mine of information but become annoying. Recommended for academic libraries.—David E. Sumler, Chestertown, Md.

Tanner, Robert G. Stonewall in the Valley.

Doubleday. Nov. 1976. 456p. illus. maps. index. LC 76-3002. ISBN 0-385-12148-2. $10.
HIST

Tanner offers an extraordinarily well-written account of Jackson's Civil War exploits in the "lower" Virginia valley in 1862. He adroitly leads the reader through the campaign's intricacies by paying careful attention to geographical details and by providing perceptive sketches of the major participants. He attacks some long-held interpretations of the campaign, but concludes that Jackson skillfully bought time for the Confederacy by allowing the South to mass "its strength for a deadly counter-attack on the Peninsula." Here is military history at its best. Recommended for specialist and layman alike.—Paul D. Casdorph, Dept. of History, West Virginia State Coll., Institute

Historians and subject specialists with expertise in East European area studies and history (all periods) are needed to write concise, evaluative reviews of new books. Please write to Ellen Kozlowski, the Book Review.

"Graphically re-creates all the horror and heroism that began on April 19, 1943"
—Publishers Weekly

The Bravest Battle
THE TWENTY-EIGHT DAYS OF THE WARSAW GHETTO UPRISING

By DAN KURZMAN
Author of Genesis 1948 and The Race for Rome

"This amazing story of savagery and heroism...was pieced together from numerous documents and interviews with more than 500 individuals....A well-researched, detailed recreation....May have special appeal for those who have read Uris' Mila 18 and Hersey's The Wall."—The Booklist. Illus., bibliog., notes.
SBN-399-11692-3. YA. $10.00

G.P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

Taylor, Joe Gray. Louisiana: a Bicentennial history.

Norton. (States & the Nation). Nov. 1976. 224p. photogs. maps. bibliog. $8.95. HIST

This excellent work is a lucid, well-written, personal view of the history of Louisiana. Taylor, a well-known specialist in the field, draws upon past and current research and presents a work that serves both as an introduction to the subject and also as excellent background for further investigation. He covers all important areas of concern, giving economic and social factors equal weight with political ones. In addition, Taylor's analysis of the many colorful, but often opposing forces at work in Louisiana is excellent. He discusses Cajuns, yeoman farmers, planters, sharecroppers, Creoles, Protestants, Blacks, Catholics, and populists, and does not hesitate to discuss controversial events or be critical where it is appropriate. Although Taylor examines events and movements common to many Americans, he thoughtfully and sensitively presents the uniqueness of Louisiana. Highly recommended.—Mary Ann Miva, Loyola Univ. of Chicago Lib.

Travel, Exploration & Adventure

Brucker, Roger W. & Richard A. Watson. The Longest Cave.

Knopf. 1976. 315p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-36797. ISBN 0-394-48793-1. $15.

EARTH SCI/EXPLORATION

This extremely well-written and totally absorbing book is enough to make any caver start preparing for the next trip. Brucker and Watson give a first-hand account of the self-imposed torture, repeated failures, and exciting discoveries that paved the way to the final linking of the Flint Ridge and Mammoth cave systems in 1972. This feat linked the two Kentucky systems together, for a total of 144.4 miles of surveyed passage—the longest known cave system in the world. The authors also include historical accounts of early explorations of Mammoth Cave. Highly recommended for YA and general collections.—Lloyd E. Logan, Texas Tech Univ. Museum, Lubbock

Harrison, George H. Roger Tory Peterson's Dozen Birding Hot Spots.

S. & S. Nov. 1976. 175p. intro. by Roger Tory Peterson. photogs. index. ISBN 0-671-22329-1. $9.95. NAT HIST/TRAV

Peterson, author of the standard field guides to U.S. birds, picked what he considered to be the 12 best birding spots in North America, and the Harrisons birded at all of these places in the course of one year, at the times when they would be at their avifaunal peak. George Harrison, former editor of National Wildlife magazine, wrote of the experiences and took the photographs (not seen by reviewer). His wife Kit compiled the "Visitor Tips" (about campgrounds, rest rooms, what to wear, etc.) and supplied the maps (also not seen by reviewer). Because of the limited number of places covered, the reference use of this book is slight, but birders will enjoy reading Harrison's descriptions and comparing them with those found in Olin Pettingill's more inclusive The Bird Watcher's America (LJ 5/1/65). For public library circulating collections.—Jonathan F. Husband, Boston State Coll. Lib.

Home Economics

Cookery

Aulicino, Armand. The New French Cooking.

Grosset. 1976. 293p. illus. index. LC 76-1447. ISBN 0-448-12478-5. $14.95.

Johnston, Mireille. The Cuisine of the Sun: classic recipes from Nice and the South of France.

Random. Nov. 1976. 320p. index. LC 76-14156. ISBN 0-394-49438-5. $12.95.

Kamman, Madeline M. When French Women Cook: a gastronomic memoir.

Atheneum. 1976. 385p. LC 76-11582. $12.95. COOKERY

Minceur cuisine, or "slimming" cooking, has been developed by some of the great chefs of France and has been written about by Roy Andries de Groot in his Revolutionizing French Cooking (LJ 10/1/76). Aulicino continues beyond de Groot by almost eliminating the use of high calorie and fat ingredients. In The New French Cooking the majority of the recipes are for main dishes. Chinese, Italian, and other international recipes are included as well as those from France. Dishes that freeze well are noted, as are those that may be made in crock pots or microwave ovens. One chapter is devoted to how to convert traditional recipes to minceur cuisine. The appendix includes sources for unusual items, equivalents of measurements, and a glossary.

Johnston, who wrote the text for Central Park Country (LJ 3/1/69), switches to her native France and the distinctive cooking of Nice in which oil, garlic, and herbs enhance but don't overwhelm the food they accompany. Most of the recipes serve six. They begin with soups and are followed by salads, fish, meats, etc. Some of the fish recipes use what might be called unusual ingredients—squid and octopus. Menus are suggested for lunches, dinners, and buffets.

When French Women Cook is a delightful, sensitive, and well-written book that is as enjoyable for the text as it is for the recipes. In it Kamman describes eight women who have affected her life. Each woman represents a specific area of France and the cooking of that region. The recipes, many of which have been written down for the first time, give concise directions including cost, execution, preparation time, best season, and suggested wine. Most of the recipes are suited for entertaining and utilize typical European ingredients such as veal, a variety of mushrooms, and fresh fruits. A pear and fresh cheese dessert was especially tasty and different. These three books reflect the great variety of French cuisine and are welcome additions to any cookery library.—Christine Bulson, SUNY at Oneonta Lib.

Better Homes & Gardens Eds. Better Homes and Gardens Crepes Cook Book.

Better Homes & Gardens: Meredith. 1976. 96p. color photogs. index. ISBN 0-696-00075-X. $2.49. COOKERY

This book is full of bad advice. For starters, cooks are told that they need not bother to cook both sides of a crepe, as if the purpose of cooking the second side were only cosmetic. In fact, failure to do it will never produce anything but a soggy crepe. But what else can you expect from authors who recommend putting the filling for blintzes on the unbrowned side, when the whole point is to have the unbrowned side on the outside so it can be browned and crisped in a frying pan. Or who ask crepes to stand in for strudel dough, pizza dough, pasta, puff paste, pie crust, bread, tortillas, even hot dog rolls. Stop torturing them, Better Homes & Gardens, and let them go back to what they are really good at—simple light lunch and supper dishes, superb desserts, disguisers par excellence of leftovers.—Ruth Diebold, Finkelstein Memorial Lib., Spring Valley, N.Y.

Bracken, Peg. The I Hate To Cook Almanack: a Book of Days.

HBJ. 1976. 283p. LC 76-20512. ISBN 0-15-144050-6. $8.95. COOKERY

A day-by-day compendium of hilarious homilies, silly quips, fanciful facts, and handy household hints. The mixture is liberally sprinkled with recipes (180 of them with their own table of contents for easy access), and these range from delicious to not-worth-the-bother. This will be as popular with Bracken fans as her other books have been, so stock your shelves.—Eleanore Singer, formerly with Univ. of Western Ontario Libs., London, Canada

Hemingway, Mary Moon & Suzanne de Lima. Food Processor Magic: 622 recipes, basic techniques, twists and turns.

Hastings. Nov. 1976. index. LC 76-25182. ISBN 0-8038-2321-5. $12.95.

Tarr, Yvonne Young. The Great Food Processor Cookbook.

Random. Nov. 1976. 320p. illus. index. LC 76-14159. ISBN 0-394-40523-4. $12.95; pap. ISBN 0-394-73284-7. $6.95. COOKERY

Recommended by many well-known culinary personalities, the Cuisinart food processor is a popular item in many kitchens, and these books capitalize on that popularity. Hemingway and de Lima describe the processor's features, operating procedures, and capabilities. The recipes are divided into the typical categories—sauces, soups, salads, etc. Many of the basic recipes are followed by innumerable variations. The directions for some of the recipes are vague—a Swedish almond pie was deliciously different, but the pie tin size was not included. The limitations of the Cuisinart are not enumerated in Food Processor Magic.

However, in Tarr's more comprehensive book the appearance, quality of construction, convenience, advantages and disadvantages of not only the Cuisinart but also the Kitchen Aid K5A mixer and the Starmix MX4 are described. There is also a greater variety of recipes including some for health foods, drinks, and baby foods. The recipes give step-by-step directions with alternate procedures for each machine. An appendix lists a variety of food with the chopping, grating, and slicing capability of the three appliances. The recipes in these books make it tempting to purchase both the Cuisinart and the Kitchen Aid. However, all the recipes I tried were successfully prepared in a Kitchen Aid and/or a blender. If it is an either or choice for purchase, choose Tarr's book.—Christine Bulson, SUNY at Oneonta Lib.

Hettich, Arthur. The Best of the Best: recipes from America's top restaurants, famous chefs, and good cooks I've known.

Quadrangle, dist. by Harper. 1976. 192p. illus. index. LC 76-9715. ISBN 0-8129-0644-6. $8.95.
COOKERY

Hettich has collected recipes from cooks and restaurants whose names are practically household words, like James Beard and Craig Claiborne, Trader Vic's and Maxwell's Plum, and from cooks and restaurants whose fame is strictly local. What they have in common is that all of them care about preparing good food well. The book includes a chapter for each course—appetizers, soups, salads, main dishes, vegetables, side dishes, and desserts. There are Mexican, Italian, French, and Chinese specialties, as well as good plain American food. The recipes are usually interesting, often unusual. Most are not difficult to prepare, yet they seldom depend on shortcuts or convenience foods. This is a good book and an honest one.—Ruth Diebold, Finkelstein Memorial Lib., Spring Valley, N.Y.

Lorwin, Madge. Dining with William Shakespeare.

Atheneum. 448p. 1976. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-11856. ISBN 0-689-10731-5. $14.95.
COOKERY

Essentially a menu cookbook offering Elizabethan recipes accompanied by modernized versions for the American kitchen, Lorwin's book also yields a delightful potpourri of kitchen lore and social commentary. The recipes range from the ordinary to the exotic, and they are grouped within a series of twelve feast menus and one austere menu for a fast day. The "Feast for Beatrice and Benedick" offers such enticing items as "Robert May's Marinated Salmon," apples stewed with ambergris, and poached pigeons with gooseberries. The recipes are clear and quite workable, and they are supplemented with helpful shopping hints for some of the rarer ingredients. Each menu is followed by a discussion of some aspect of Elizabethan life at the table; and the whole book effectively conveys an accurate sense of the gastronomic conventions of the day. Written with great grace and charm, it should appeal to anyone interested in the history of English cookery, or in Shakespeare.—F. Whitney Jones, Dept. of English, St. Andrews Coll., Laurinburg, N.C.

HUMOR

Bombeck, Erma. The Grass Is Always Greener Over the Septic Tank.

McGraw. 1976. illus. 175p. LC 76-20645. ISBN 0-07-006450-4. $6.95.
HUMOR

Bombeck's humor is aimed at pointing up the absurdities of the suburban American, middle-class lifestyle, with its trivia, its real or imagined "necessities." Sometimes this book is funny, but unfortunately, Bombeck has become the victim of overexposure through newspaper syndication and TV. However, there is a ready audience for her work. (Some of the material here appeared elsewhere, in different form.)—Judith W. Powell, Waterville H.S., Me.

Stillman, Deanne & Anne Beatts, eds. Titters: the first collection of humor by women.

Macmillan. 1976. 192p. illus. LC 76-8015. $12.95; Collier pap. $7.95.
HUMOR

Accept that reactions to humor are intrinsically subjective. Add the factor that anything dealing with women these days—from abortion to X and Y chromosome counts—is potentially touchy. You name it, and if it's in the feminine gender it's fertile ground for fun and outrage. Thus, my review must be personal, conveying my perspective and biases. My first thought on receiving this first anthology of humor by women was that it might be a natural to send my mother in Wisconsin for her turn in the study club. I figured she could skip across the generation and liberation gap and past the double entendre in the title. This impression faded in my first browse, somewhere between "My Bad Karma 'by' Rose Kennedy" and the "Sylvia Plath Cookbook." "The Myth of the Male Orgasm" clinched it. I can forward only the galley proofs of the Erma Bombeck and Peg Bracken contributions. I can't find the euphemisms to describe much of the content, but it's parodies, satire, comics, and assorted sendups—and all about women. Titters will offend and/or amuse feminists as well as Total and Fascinating women. Also females of all ages, races, religions, ethnicities, and sexual preferences. Male reaction? Maybe terminal perplexity. You must see the book to evaluate it—or believe it. I wouldn't kid you (but these authors surely would).—Mary Pradt Ziegler, Brooklyn P.L.

Wodehouse, P. G. The Uncollected Wodehouse.

Continuum: Seabury. Nov. 1976. 276p. ed. & intro. by David A. Jasen. fwd. by Malcolm Muggeridge. LC 76-14823. ISBN 0-8164-9286-7. $8.95.
HUMOR

This is a substantial cache of uncollected Wodehouse—juvenilia, early contributions to Punch, school stories, a detective story, and even a poem. But it's all of a piece of what we have always expected from the Master, and comes as a consolation to those of us who were stricken by his death in 1975. His special world, that best of all possible worlds, where "all's well that ends well," exists again for those who are seeking a sanctuary from the rather unappealing 20th Century. These works span the period 1900–1915, and include the first article for which he was ever paid, published in February 1900. A joy indeed to read, and sure to be treasured by the confirmed Wodehousian as well as by those just becoming acquainted with him.—Jane Belon Shaw, Lisle P.L., Ill.

LANGUAGE ARTS

Assessing Linguistic Arguments.

Halsted: Wiley. 1976. 280p. ed. by Jessica R. Wirth. bibliog. index. LC 76-25529. ISBN 0-470-98916-5. $14.95.
LINGUISTICS

Mostly by analyzing previously published arguments, and often by displaying their shortcomings, the authors of these papers from the 4th Annual Linguistic Foundations Symposium discuss deep structure abstractness, abstractions versus fictions, generalization, independent motivation, comparison of hypotheses, and extralinguistic data. The interpretive versus generative controversy is the principal battleground; the interpretivists outweigh the generativists in both quantity and quality this time round. The articles are remarkably well written and clear, except for Rudolf P. Botha's vapid introductory chapter, Myrna Gopnick's (neither was read at the conference), and an irrelevant and jargon-

TRADITIONAL FRENCH COOKING
by Jennie Reekie

"Unlike so many French cookbooks, this one thoughtfully deemphasizes lobster, oysters, truffles, and other forbiddingly expensive ingredients. There's a terrific group of mostly meatless soups—chestnut, pumpkin, garlic, cauliflower, etc. and the seafood includes affordable cod, mussel and sardine dishes!"—Kirkus Reviews (3/1/76) 256 pp. LC 75-40804 $10.00

St. Martin's Press
175 Fifth Avenue
New York 10010

filled analysis of black English auxiliaries by Marvin D. Loflin. Since only a year and a half has elapsed between presentation and publication, the papers are still timely and are likely to stimulate new discussions of what it means to describe language.—Peter T. Daniels, Dept. of Linguistics, Univ. of Chicago

Newman, Edwin. A Civil Tongue.

Bobbs. Nov. 1976. 224p. index. LC 76-11607. ISBN 0-672-52267-5. $8.95. LANG

This sequel to Strictly Speaking (LJ 10/1/74) is most entertaining—time and time again I found myself laughing out loud as I read it. It is an analysis of various types of flaws in contemporary English, illustrated by copious examples. The sources are many: signs in shop windows, things said by radio announcers, newspaper stories, memoranda written by educators and government officials, etc. The types of mistakes include the invention of new words, innovations in parts of speech, redundancy, stuffiness, and muddy thinking. The book is wittily written and the examples are both numerous and hilarious. For entertainment value and for an informal, painless course in how to write concise, clear, straightforward English, it is recommended. Public libraries should certainly buy it, and teachers of journalism and freshman composition might want to recommend it to their students.—Catherine V. von Schon, SUNY at Stony Brook Lib.

Literature

Benstock, Bernard. Paycocks and Others: Sean O'Casey's world.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. 1976. 318p. bibliog. index. LC 75-36767. ISBN 0-06-490363-X. $25. LIT

Benstock follows his earlier introduction, Sean O'Casey (LJ 9/1/71), with a sound and readable analysis of O'Casey's character prototypes in drama and fictionalized autobiography. Emphasizing that O'Casey, unlike Joyce, kept pace with recent Irish history despite self-exile, Benstock demonstrates the permutations of basic Irish types through changing times. Benstock's common-sense approach and conversational style, which scrupulously eschew critical jargon, are highly appropriate for O'Casey, who wanted his characters to be both credible and exemplary. This study is thus accessible to general readers and valuable to specialists.—Marilyn Gaddis Rose, Dept. of Comparative Literature, SUNY at Binghamton

Camus, Albert. Youthful Writings, with an introductory essay, "The First Camus," by Paul Vialaneix.

Knopf. Nov. 1976. 320p. tr. from French by Ellen Conroy Kennedy. LC 76-13714. ISBN 0-394-49535-7. $8.95. LIT

This collection of articles, essays, short prose works, poetry, and notes on his readings reflect Camus's preoccupations and interests from 1932 to 1934. Although many of these writings, particularly his observations on other writers and his essay on music, are of limited interest, the English-speaking reader is fortunate to have for the first time in translation several of Camus's powerfully lyrical prose pieces; these are clearly complementary to his later writings. Vialaneix's long introductory essay offers little new or striking to readers in search of insights on Camus at age 20.—Anthony S. Caprio, Dept. of Foreign Languages & Literatures, Cedar Crest Coll., Allentown, Pa.

Carroll, William. The Great Feast of Language in Love's Labour's Lost.

Princeton Univ. Pr. Nov. 1976. 272p. index. LC 76-3249. ISBN 0-691-06309-5. $15. LIT

Devoted to the language, style, and theatricality of Love's Labour's Lost, Carroll's work is the most definitive and most important study to date of this early comedy of Shakespeare's. Love's Labour's Lost has been seen by most critics as an apprentice piece prophesying the great comedies to come. The author's thesis, that the play is truly a mature work of genius and not merely a prelude to better efforts, is masterfully sustained. He indicates the full spectrum of Shakespeare's wit, the theatrical originality, and the extremely subtle psychology behind the play. Highly recommended for all Shakespeare collections.—Sanford Sternlicht, Dept. of Theater, SUNY at Oswego

Casey, Timothy J. Rainer Maria Rilke: a centenary essay.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. 1976. 118p. index. LC 75-39125. ISBN 0-06-491009-1. $22.50. LIT

This detailed assessment of Rilke's writing concludes that an understanding of his poetry is not possible without an awareness of his life style and, in particular, his experience of the poetic activity. The analyses of the Duino Elegies and other works require that readers be familiar with these poems and understand the German and French quotes that are used liberally. Thus, this compact, interesting, and well-written criticism, which gives an overview of the poet's work, may be accessible and used by only a small audience. It would be a positive addition to an academic library and most likely used in an advanced German literature course.—Patricia M. Hogan, North Suburban Lib. System, Wheeling, Ill.

Cormier, Ramona & Janis L. Pallister. Waiting For Death: the philosophical significance of Beckett's "En Attendant Godot."

Univ. of Alabama Pr. Dec. 1976. (Studies in the Humanities, No. 19). bibliog. index. LC 76-10218. ISBN 0-8173-7605-4. $6.95. LIT

This investigation of Beckett's view of the world in Waiting for Godot concentrates in detail on his somnambulistic characters and their foibles. By unraveling the intricacies of each one's relationship with his world, with his companions, and with himself, the book reveals the complexity of Beckett's creative genius. The work's hypotheses are perfectly balanced with previous critics' views, and both are finely clarified so that any newcomer to Beckett's vaguely brutal world will have few difficulties.—Jim Elledge, Mundelein Coll. Lib., Chicago

Faulkner, Peter. Humanism in the English Novel.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. 1976. 196p. bibliog. ISBN 0-06-492070-4. $20. LIT

This sensible book reroutes the course of the English novel along a line of concern with the human tradition. It is thus a fresh history, if not an original criticism of the genre. Avoiding the literary, religious, and economic origins that other historians avow, it finds the novel's beginning in the secular, humanistic period of the later 18th Century. From the humanist but Christian novelists of the early 1700's it traces the tradition through the more secular Victorian novelists down to the present. At times summary in treatment and sketchy in cultural background, this book still deserves space on literature shelves as a work that analyzes what most believe to be true about the English novel: that it concerns itself first and last with the human quest for happiness.—H. G. Hahn, Dept. of English, Towson State Univ., Baltimore

Haight, Amanda. Anna Akhmatova: a poetic pilgrimage.

Oxford Univ. Pr. 1976. 213p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-22841. ISBN 0-19-211731-9. $10. LIT

Interweaving biography and poetry, Haight has drawn on extensive memoirs and critical material in Russian, in addition to her own personal acquaintance with Akhmatova, to produce this most perceptive appraisal of one of modern Russia's greatest poets. The volume is arranged in five chapters of chronological sequence, each of which boasts numerous translations of Akhmatova's poetry, done with care and accuracy by Haight. At the basis of the critic's approach are the dilemmas faced by Akhmatova herself: the poet as woman, woman as poet, and lastly, the poet as patriot in a country where patriotism from such a poet was, at best, suspect, and, at worst, a signal (as in 1946) for literary attack. Aside from a short monograph (1972) by Sam N. Driver in the Twayne "World Authors" series, this book represents the first in-depth analysis of Akhmatova's life and works to appear in English. It is a worthy companion and guide to the several volumes of her poetry which have been published recently in English translation.—Linda Hart Scatton, Dept. of Language, Literature, & Communications, Rensselaer Polytechnic Inst., Troy, N.Y.

Kuna, Franz, ed. On Kafka: semi-centenary perspectives.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. 1976. 195p. ISBN 0-06-494000-4. $20. LIT

Of these nine papers from a symposium held at the University of East Anglia in 1974, some seem to compound Kafka's ambiguities by their own; others, in the latest mode and fashion, abandon Dostoevsky and Kierkegaard for Einstein and Wittgenstein and find Kafka to be not simply the voice of existential anxiety, but the fabulist of the diffidences of modern linguistics, logic, and physics. After these critical improvisations and fantasias there is plain creature comfort in coming upon the concluding essay, Ronald Gray's level-headed appraisal of Kafka among his peers.—G. A. Masterton, Wayne State Univ. Libs., Detroit

Lago, Mary M. Rabindranath Tagore.
Twayne. (World Authors). Dec. 1976. bibliog. index. LC 76-9776. ISBN 0-8057-6242-6. $7.95. LIT

This work details Tagore's poems, stories, novels, and plays; sketches the Indian background along with literary influences; provides a thumbnail biography; catalogs his thematic concerns; and comments on his awesome influence, revolutionary yet inhibiting, on Bengali letters. The one thing it does not do is analyze anything with any depth. The author is probably best at describing the misconceptions with which Tagore was first received in the West. Unfortunately, she treats the stories more via plot summaries and thematic bunching than in terms of any real analysis, and the judgements that do exist are frequently naïve. The poetry fares better. A clear and inclusive, if superficial, introduction to Tagore's work.—Shernaz Mehta Mollinger, New Sch. for Social Research, New York

Leavis, F. R. Thought, Words and Creativity: art and thought in Lawrence.
Oxford Univ. Pr. 1976. 155p. LC 76-16694. $10. LIT

A new book by Leavis on Lawrence is something like an additional tablet coming down from Sinai. There's no new revelation here though: we've heard it all before, and we've witnessed all the shadowboxing with real and imagined adversaries. This book's exposition of Lawrence is a further illustration of the familiar Leavisite arguments developed in The Living Principle (LJ 11/15/75). Three of the four works discussed at length—The Rainbow, Women in Love, The Captain's Doll—already received full-scale treatment 20 years ago in D. H. Lawrence: Novelist. The "thought" insisted on with strenuous redundancy is the thought of "art-speech," which would of course lead us all out of the wilderness if we'd only let it. Mind you, I'm a great admirer of D. H. Lawrence, but Lawrence himself would be embarrassed to discover that the "Laurentian genius . . . is so important to our civilization, so necessary for the correcting of its fatal incapacity, that everyone who really cares sees that a duly articulate appreciation is necessary." Lawrence is a much more interesting writer than the unambiguous savior Leavis makes of him. When all is said and done the main experience of this book is one of déjà vu.—Keith Cushman, Dept. of English, Univ. of North Carolina, Greensboro

Mihajlov, Mihajlo. Underground Notes.
Sheed. 1976. 204p. tr. by Maria Mihajlov Ivusic & Christopher W. Ivusic. bibliog. ISBN 0-8362-0652-5. $10. POL SCI/LIT

Mihajlov, a Yugoslav literary scholar, is not allowed to publish in Yugoslavia because of his sharp criticism of the Soviet Union and his public rejection of totalitarian forms of Marxism in general. This collection of 18 articles written between 1970 and 1974 for foreign and underground journals covers a wide range of interests, from literature to political philosophy and theology. The pieces contain reflections on Dostoyevsky, Tolstoy, and Solzhenitsyn and discussions of Marxism-Leninism, the theory of alienation, nationalism versus internationalism, and the future of Christianity. Their unifying theme is the new religious consciousness which was born, as Mihajlov believes, through suffering in the totalitarian system. Mihajlov speaks about spiritual revolution, religious renaissance, and "planetarization of mankind." It seems that the author makes too many overstatements and generalizations to prove his point in this polemic. However, his work is valuable for its deep and consistent analysis of totalitarianism. Recommended for university libraries.—Jitka Hurych, Northern Illinois Univ. Libs., DeKalb

Mitchell, Breon. James Joyce and the German Novel, 1922-1933.
Ohio Univ. Pr. 1976. 194p. bibliog. index. LC 75-36980. ISBN 0-8214-0192-0. $12.

Staley, Thomas F. & Bernard Benstock, eds. Approaches to Joyce's "Portrait": ten essays.
Univ. of Pittsburgh Pr. Dec. 1976. LC 76-6670. ISBN 0-8229-3331-4. $11.95. LIT

Ulysses, the capstone of the English tradition in fiction, has also always been an international phenomenon, as Mitchell demonstrates in his exploration of the impact of Ulysses on the German novel. He begins with the history of the translation of Ulysses and then presents an incisive account of the novel's critical reception in Germany. Mitchell is at his best when he illustrates the complex and immediate impact Ulysses exerted on three German novelists of the period: Jahnn, Döblin, and Broch. The evidence brought to bear from manuscript and typescript is utterly persuasive. At the same time the treatment of the large question of literary influence is compelling in its own right. Mitchell handles his fascinating subject with grace, clarity, and considerable sophistication. His book, a model of scholarly research in comparative literature, is a fine contribution to Joyce studies.

Approaches to Joyce's "Portrait" offers ten new perspectives on the novel by assorted Joyceans, among them Hugh Kenner, Chester G. Anderson, and Darcy O'Brien. Inevitably some of the sand has been sifted before, but Staley and Benstock have done a good job of assigning relatively new topics. Examples: a detailed account of the textual problems, a consideration of contemporary Irish novelists influenced by Joyce, a survey of critical responses to the novel. Vico, Freud, Dublin, and symbolic structure put in prominent appearances. The ubiquitous (and obviously up-and-coming) Breon Mitchell is represented by a thoughtful essay on Portrait as Bildungsroman. I thank you, Staley and Benstock, and so will other students of Joyce.—Keith Cushman, Dept. of English, Univ. of North Carolina, Greensboro

Pinchin, Jane Lagoudis. Alexandria Still: Forster, Durrell, and Cavafy.
Princeton Univ. Pr. Dec. 1976. 250p. bibliog. index. $12.50. LIT

This study of the influence of Alexandria on the works of C. P. Cavafy, E. M. Forster, and Lawrence Durrell begins with what seems like a too narrow focus. Fortunately, Pinchin does not let her Alexandrian thesis become confining, but rather uses it as a means of approaching the much-approached works of Forster and Durrell from a new angle. The time Forster spent in Alexandria, together with the friendship he developed there with Cavafy, Pinchin argues, made it possible for him to accept the inevitability of loss, and in so doing to write A Passage to India. Similarly, the epic vision Durrell achieves in his Quartet is grounded in the humanity and ironic tenderness of this both Cavafian and Alexandrian sense of loss. Not the dry study of influences it appears to be, Pinchin's book will be of interest to all academic and research libraries.—William A. Ott, Timberland Regional Lib., Lacey, Wash.

Vogel, Jane. Allegory in David Copperfield.
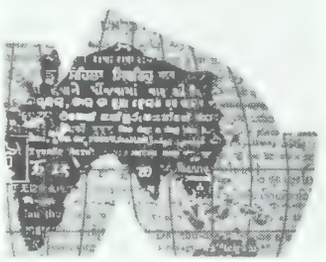
Univ. of Alabama Pr. Nov. 1976. 368p. LC 75-34485. ISBN 0-8173-7325-X. $10. LIT

Few would deny that Dickens was a deeply Christian writer or that his novels are laced with biblical allusions. There is even some plausibility in Vogel's thesis that several of Dickens'

THE CROWELL CORNER FUNK & WAGNALLS

The LANGUAGES of the WORLD

Foreword by Charles Berlitz



THE LANGUAGES OF THE WORLD
By Kenneth Katzner
Outstanding Reference Book of 1975
Library Journal

"Covering some 500 languages spoken today, this work brings together in one volume specific information about the languages... the relationships of the languages and... descriptions of the major and minor language families, subgroups and branches."
—Library Journal

ISBN: 0-308-10120-0
LC: 74-13158

$11.95

Funk & Wagnalls
666 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10019

novels attack stern Old Testament morality and glorify the gentler and more compassionate message of Christ. One must balk, however, at the sort of criticism that sees a "towering rage" as "possibly a Babel image," that sees David Copperfield's triple-decker novel as a reference to the Holy Trinity, that sees Eatanswill as "(S)eatan's Will: Satan's Will," that sees Martha Endell as "the END of EL, the Hebrew God." In Vogel's deft hands "Peggotty" contains not only a reference to the Old Testament ("the 'ot' dead center") but "the potential of 'peg,' hook or nail, the weapon of the enemies of Christ." "Once the pattern is glimpsed," Vogel tells us, "as if all texts had been dipped in a magic solution suddenly the hidden tracery of allegory appears everywhere at once." This magic solution is not recommended.—Charles Bishop, Dept. of English, Univ. of New Orleans

MUSIC

Debussy, Claude. Debussy on Music.

Knopf. Jan. 1977. tr. by Richard Langham Smith. bibliog. index. $12.50. MUSIC

This book is a translation, with a few changes and additions, of Debussy's Monsieur Croche et autres écrits (Gallimard, 1971). It is the first complete, chronological English version of all of Debussy's writings on music. Thus, music libraries which own the original Monsieur Croche (English translation by B. N. Langdon Davies reprinted in Three Classics in the Aesthetic of Music, Dover, 1962) will certainly want this more comprehensive volume also. A number of important interviews with Debussy are included; three of these are not in the original French edition. Annotations are plentiful and helpful; special care is taken to identify musicians and literary figures who might be unfamiliar to the reader (and even some familiar ones like Franck and Meyerbeer). Essential for all music libraries and recommended for large general libraries.—Dika Newlin, Board of Governors, American Composers Alliance, New York

Dent, Edward J. The Rise of Romantic Opera.

Cambridge Univ. Pr. 1976. 200p. index. ISBN 0-521-21337-1. $11.50. MUSIC

Originally a series of lectures, the 12 essays presented here are intended, in the author's words, simply "to stimulate interest in a subject." Through their sympathetic and knowledgeable approach they well fulfill Dent's purpose. Dating from 1937 to 1938, these essays reflect little, however, of recent scholarship and, I suspect, little of the author's most mature thoughts, which were at the time of his death (1957) to take the form of a book on the subject. The publication of these lectures represents, therefore, something of a belated memorial to a distinguished musicologist. In and of themselves, the lectures offer only an introduction to the subject.—Allen B. Skei, Dept. of Music, California State Univ., Fresno

Jefferson, Alan. The Glory of Opera.

Putnam. 1976. 192p. photogs., some color. index. LC 76-5917. ISBN 0-399-11771-7. $20. MUSIC

This is a lavish volume, handsomely designed with beautifully reproduced color photographs. Unfortunately, the text reads like a script for TV lectures with asides and anecdotes, each chapter having a unity of its own, but without the unifying conception of a book. Moreover, the illustrations, handsome as they are, seem more to be what was available to the author, rather than being the means to illuminate the text. The text itself is oversimplified and elementary. The chapters on "The Great Operas" and "Great Singers of the Twentieth Century" might better have been preceded by the words "Some of. . . ." But a handful of operas are considered and the singers list lacks such entries as Farrar, Schumann-Heink, Sembrich, and countless others that should have been included. Lastly, one wonders who was responsible for the caption "Kirsten Flagstad as Tristan" and why no one caught it. The reader would be better advised to spend his money for any standard opera guide and a year's subscription to Opera News.—William Shank, CUNY Graduate Sch. Lib.

Peyser, Joan. Boulez.

Macmillan. Nov. 1976. 288p. illus. index. ISBN 0-02-871700-4. $12.95. BIOG/MUSIC

Composer-conductor Pierre Boulez, one of the most powerful leaders of the postwar musical avant-garde, is here made the subject of a vivid, unsparing biography. Only slightly concerned with the analysis of Boulez's individual compositions, Peyser is more interested in tracing the development of Boulez's musical thinking and, especially, the waxing and waning of his influence on modern music. Peyser populates her book with the famous names of recent music, and dissects their clashing of wills and urge for primacy. Books on living composers—except for elder statesmen—are rare, and this bold, doubtless controversial treatment of an extremely significant figure is most welcome.—John Conyers, Jackson State Community Coll. Lib., Tenn.

Waldo, Terry. This Is Ragtime.

Hawthorn. 1976. 256p. fwd. by Eubie Blake. illus. bibliog. LC 75-41790. ISBN 0-8015-7618-0. $10.95. MUSIC

As is often the case in books on jazz and related subjects, This is Ragtime has been written, not by a writer, but by an overly enthusiastic researcher. Waldo's initial problem lies in his choice of audience: he addresses his reader in turn as a total novice, a serious student, and a ragtime aficionado. This problem is then compounded by the fact that some terms are overdefined while others are never clarified; some points are stretched out for paragraphs while others are never fully explained or justified. There is a wealth of information here, and the subject is very thoroughly researched, but lack of judicious editing makes the text somewhat less than palatable to the general public. Recommended for academic libraries (for whom the extensive bibliography and discography might be useful).—Diane Haas, Howe Lib., Hanover, N.H.

Philosophy

Flew, Antony. The Presumption of Atheism and Other Philosophical Essays on God, Freedom and Immortality.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. 1976. 183p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-06-492119-0. LC 76-43411. $20. PHIL

This collection of essays consists of two wholly new papers together with carefully revised previously published material on such subjects as the existence of God, free will, immortality, personal identity, and the meaning of life. Flew's atheist is someone who simply is not a theist, and the atheist's presumption is that the onus of proof must lie upon the theist: he must introduce and defend his concept of God and then provide sufficient reason to believe that something exemplifies the concept. Flew's method is to begin on familiar ground, to clarify what is being affirmed, and then to proportion belief to whatever evidence can be adduced. His judicious use of concrete example and counterexample enables him to present the issues in a nontechnical style that is intelligible to both philosophers and laymen.—Robert Hoffman, Dept. of Philosophy, York Coll., CUNY

Frankena, William K. Perspectives on Morality: essays of William K. Frankena.

Univ. of Notre Dame Pr. 1976. 250p. ed. & intro. by Kenneth E. Goodpaster. bibliog. index. $14.95. PHIL

This valuable collection of previously published essays by an eminent moral philosopher is introduced by the editor's brief but helpful analysis and is followed by the author's historical sketch of the development of his ideas, including material not included in this book. The selection is representative and is well balanced in showing how Frankena's philosophy evolved from a kind of straightforward naturalistic cognitivism to its present post-emotivist noncognitivism, connected to a concept of a moral point of view. For those not already familiar with Frankena's work, I add that his writing is lucid and vigorous, and that he so controls his argument as always to recapitulate at the right places, making the book suitable for laymen as well as professionals.—Robert Hoffman, Dept. of Philosophy, York Coll., CUNY

Gandhi, Ramchandra. The Availability of Religious Ideas.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. (Lib. of Philosophy & Religion). 1976. 111p. index. LC 75-46318. ISBN 0-06-492324-X. $22.50. REL/PHIL

Ghandi tries to demonstrate the unintelligibility of "the immanentist view of the world and human life." He argues that rooted in human consciousness is a social dimension, the necessity of regarding one another as at least minimally valuable, from which he concludes that the essentials of theistic religion and morality are inherent in the human condition. Arguments are abstract, because they deal with psychological concepts difficult to manage, such as consciousness and self. But, since the book is written clearly and the vocabulary is not technical, it should be accessible to the patient layman. The book is valuable for its insight, not argument or analysis, for it is too ambitious a project for its short length.—Donald L. Smith, Dept. of Philosophy, Lakeland Community Coll., Mentor, Ohio

Hick, John. Death and Eternal Life.
Harper. Jan. 1977. 504p. ISBN 0-06-063901-6. $15. REL PHIL
Hick argues that scientific findings do not rule out the possibility of various, realistically conceivable forms of human post-mortem existence. And he defends a specific theory of afterlife that he takes to be conceptually sound. This theory holds that human beings gradually transcend egohood over many existences, until, reaching perfection, they attain a unitive state without losing all personal identity. Hick collects abundant scientific, historical, and philosophical data, which he organizes and presents in a thought-provoking manner. Drawing on both Eastern and Western religious traditions, he explicates theories of resurrection, reincarnation, and disembodied consciousness as well as possible final human destinies. Like his other works, this book is a model of clarity. I recommend it for those whose interest in eschatology has not diminished their regard for tempered, well-reasoned judgment.—Donald L. Smith, Dept. of Philosophy, Lakeland Community Coll., Mentor, Ohio

Kingsland, Kevin & Venika Kingsland. Complete Hatha Yoga.
Arco. 1976. 191p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-974. ISBN 0-668-03958-2. $9.95. HEALTH/PHIL
This is not meant to be an exhaustive, last-word study of Yoga; the authors intend their title as an admonition or challenge urging their reader to deeper involvement in Yogic practice. Their book covers most of the usual aspects of this type of study—history, preparation for practice, definition of terms, proper breathing, meditation, food, and asanas. The work is somewhat disappointing in this latter area; B. K. Iyengar's Light on Yoga (Schocken, 1972) is unsurpassed for asanas and pranayama explanation. The authors emphasize human anatomy, the chakra and nadis system, and explore recent (Western) experimental research. This is a book for the serious practitioner and should not be confused with the ten-minute-a-day-and-feel-great approach to Yoga. Sight of the underlying principle of Yoga—the understanding of ourselves and our universe in a basic harmony—is at the root of all the Kingslands write. Here they offer a knowledgeable introduction and a thorough stand-by text for students and teachers—Ruth S. Haas, formerly with Harvard Coll. Lib.

Young, Arthur M. The Geometry of Meaning.
168p. LC 76-918. ISBN 0-440-04991-1. $10.95; pap. ISBN 0-440-04987-3. $4.95.
Young, Arthur M. The Reflexive Universe.
292p. LC 76-2675. ISBN 0-440-05925-9. $15; pap. ISBN 0-440-05924-0. $6.95.
ea. vol: Seymour Lawrence: Delacorte. 1976. index. SCI/PHIL
The paramount problem today is the fragmentation of knowledge. It is everybody's burden; because of it, everything seems ambiguous to us, paradoxical, even meaningless. Expecting an attempt at integration, I met Young's two books with a feeling of intense excitement. (His Foundation for the Study of Consciousness has researched the interconnections between different fields of knowledge, especially those between science and parapsychology, for more than 20 years.) But my mood of anticipation soon shifted to one of grievous disappointment. Young indulges in endless rationalization of paradoxes and in fantastic, pompous doctrinairism. He identifies the number seven as the key to process (a metaphysical all-encompassing idea, according to him); and he finds the key to meaning in the saying "all meaning is an angle" (which he takes literally). The two books can be seen as massive amplifications of these two ideas, and for this they would have been of some value if the author had been able to think philosophically. But he needs to read more philosophy, especially Kant, before he indulges in any more metaphysics.—Edward Russell, New York

POETRY

Antin, David. Talking at the Boundaries.
New Directions, dist. by Lippincott. 1976. 288p. LC 76-15374. ISBN 0-8112-0559-2. $11.95; pap. ISBN 0-8112-0560-6. $3.95. POETRY
This is a collection of "talks" on paper that were probably more effective when they were originally given. One is a poem-talk improvised at the S.F. Poetry Center, April 1973, on the occasion of a joint reading with Jerome Rothenberg. Other talks originated at such places as the Acquavella Gallery, Notre Dame, the University of California; and they are variously concerned with concrete poetry and art, that is, painting. The tone reminds one of Gertrude Stein in a playful mood. Antin asks, "is this the right place?" One of his other chapter headings answers the question: yes, this is "a private occasion in a public place." It is a good book by one of our better writers who is taking chances with new things.—Clarence Major, Dept. of English, Univ. of Washington, Seattle

Enzensberger, Hans Magnus. Mausoleum: thirty-seven ballads from the history of progress.
Urizen Bks., dist. by Dutton. 1976. 144p. tr. from German by Joachim Neugroschel. ISBN 0-916354-04-0. $10; pap. ISBN 0-916354-05-9. $4.95. POETRY
Enzensberger's 37 innovators are drawn as men possessed not by a god but by "a process/ that crushes the crusher, slowly,/ gradually, and relentlessly." Technology casts a harsh glaring light that illumines a reality so grotesque it destroys those to whom it is revealed, and the pursuit of knowledge becomes an end in itself: the scientist, like a patient undergoing shock therapy, becomes the tool of science. Enzensberger uses language as precise as that of a scientific tract and as full of information. He heaps up lists of technical words, processes, and facts with the relish of a Spallanzani conducting his experiments. Mausoleum is not a collection that lends itself to sampling; it demands concentration and thorough reading, but it is well worth the effort.—Kathleen Purnell, Indiana Univ. Lib., Bloomington Hamburger, Michael, ed. & tr. German Poetry 1910-1975.

Urizen Bks., dist. by Dutton. 1976. 576p. $17.50; pap. $6.95. POETRY
This collection replaces the earlier Modern German Poetry 1910-1960 edited by Michael Hamburger and Christopher Middleton, (Grove Pr., 1962). In this new compilation, selected and translated solely by Hamburger, he has omitted a number of poems included in the earlier anthology, added many new names, tried to cover most of the major movements and trends of the last 65 years. His careful introduction gives an

NEW & ENLARGED EDITION of "the opera lovers bible"

The New Kobbé's Complete Opera Book

Edited & Revised by THE EARL OF HAREWOOD. A completely revised, vastly expanded edition of the standard opera guide. Arranged by centuries and subdivided by countries, it includes the stories of 309 operas (91 more than the previous edition), nearly 100 new musical examples...much more. "For lovers of music, a valuable reference; for libraries, an indispensable tool."—Library Journal. 1,670 pages, plus index.
SBN-399-11633-8. $20.00

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

awareness of the historical and literary complexities that determined his choices. A short biographical note on each poet helps to connect political events and individual creativity. East German poetry appears with very few names due to Hamburger's bilingual publication East German Poetry (Dutton, 1973), the contents of which are supplemented here. Hamburger is an experienced and reliable translator. This bilingual presentation offers remarkable poems in a great variety of form and mood.—Inge Judd, Queens Borough P.L., New York

Momaday, N. Scott. The Gourd Dancer.

Harper. 1976. 64p. drawings by the author. LC 75-30338. ISBN 0-06-012982-4. $6.95. POETRY

Momaday won the Pulitzer Prize for Fiction in 1970, but his poetry has never had the widespread audience that his novels did. The reason, as demonstrated in this latest collection, is obvious: he tries too hard and too much. Strongly rooted to his Indian background, Momaday can produce beautiful images that float from eye to ear, as in "New World": "At dusk/ the gray/ foxes/ stiffen/ in cold;/ blackbirds/ are fixed/ in the branches." But for the most part, he grabs at new and old devices in various attempts to build a forthright poem. In "The Burning," alliteration reigns: "In the numb, numberless days/ There were disasters in the distance." Other poems, such as "The Gift," are simply too pointed to be taken seriously: "Older, more generous,/ We give each other hope./ The gift is ominous:/ Enough praise, enough rope." The volume reprints a large number of poems from Momaday's first collection, Angle of Geese.—Timothy Daum, Ohio Univ. Lib., Athens

Neruda, Pablo. Song of Protest: poems.

Morrow. 1976. 118p. tr. and intro. by Miguel Algarín. LC 75-45216. ISBN 0-688-03043-2. $5.95. POETRY

Although most of Neruda's lyric poetry is available in English, his abrasive political verse has remained largely untranslated. In this collection of 42 meditations on the course of revolution in the Caribbean, the 1971 Nobel Prize laureate delivers a harsh indictment of U.S. imperialism and Latin American dictatorial rule. His targets include Governor Muñoz Marín of Puerto Rico, Dominican despot Trujillo, Cuban dictator Batista, Guatemalan strong-man Ubico, Nicaraguan President Somoza, and Venezuelan leaders Vicente Gómez and Pérez Jiménez. His heroes: Fidel Castro, José Martí, General Augusto Snadino, and Jacopo Arbenz Guzmán. The translation of the title ("Canción de gesta" is literally "song of heroic deeds") overlooks an implied irony, since the machinations of the dictators are markedly antiheroic. Even at its most polemical, Neruda's poetry is supple and sensitive, as startling in its imagery as in his subjective lyrics, and Algarín's translations are translucently faithful. Unfortunately, the Spanish text is not included here.—Rosemary Neiswender, UCLA Lib.

Newlin, Margaret. The Snow Falls Upward: collected poems.

Ardis. 1976. 176p. $8.95; pap. $2.95. POETRY

"Stop fretting for a radiance out of time," Margaret Newlin tells herself in a poem called "Wishing For Vermeer, Bruegel," and indeed there is something almost old-fashioned in the sane domesticity of many of these poems. This is a nice book, an accessible book. It is spare and careful in its use of language, quiet in its metrics, sensitive in its awareness of family and death. Perhaps it is carping to wish for something more: some peculiarity of vision, some intensity of image, or maybe simply a change from the quiet tone of voice. Perhaps all I'm asking is for more snow that falls upward.—Linda Pastan, Potomac, Md.

Redgrove, Peter. Sons of My Skin: Redgrove's selected poems 1954-1974.

Routledge & Kegan Paul. 1976. 200p. chosen & intro. by Marie Peel. index. ISBN 0-7100-8073-5. $12.25. POETRY

American readers may encounter difficulty with Redgrove's slow pace and relentless precision: he writes a dense line, not often lyrical (though there are echoes of Hopkins and Thomas). But this book should be in all serious modern poetry collections. These poems dig the miraculous, sometimes stubbornly and sometimes enigmatically, out of the most ordinary experiences and perceptions; yet, unlike so much American poetry, they don't rely on the evocative image but on what Wordsworth once referred to as "reason in her most exalted mood." Nor are they meditative in any ordinary way: Redgrove mines scientific language and unabashedly animizes nature to track feelings in exacting, though leaping, ways: the result is sometimes a sacrifice of immediacy for the privacy of one poet's vision. —Merrill Leffler, Dept. of English, U.S. Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md.

Viorst, Judith. How Did I Get To Be 40 and Other Atrocities.

S. & S. 1976. 30p. illus. by John Alcorn. ISBN 0-671-11266-6. $4.95. POETRY

Is there a reader (dare I say "lady" reader?) out there so self-assured, so together that she can't identify with Viorst's heroine? I doubt it. You don't have to be 40-ish, married, and/or overweight to appreciate the warmth and wit that go into this collection of 24 brief poems (some of which appeared earlier in Redbook). No one does it quite like Viorst; no one better expresses our daily discontents and unfulfilled fantasies.—Carol K. Carey, formerly with Dept. of Film, Museum of Modern Art, New York

Walker, David. Moving Out.

Univ. Pr. of Virginia. (Series for Contemporary Poetry). 1976. 70p. LC 75-31971. ISBN 0-8139-0657-1. $6.95. POETRY

This collection, selected from more than a thousand entries solicited nationally, is a first book of a poet who speaks of the deep ritual of coming, going, and returning to the land, which for Walker happens to be Maine, where "The shining trees are teethed with bark . . ." and "The sun leaks into the grass." All his poems are well made and handled with a strong idiom, either through the poet's own voice or other personae. There are attitudes and ghosts of ancestors to be contended with: "All History stalled down some abandoned road,/ And Art a spinster sighting along her thread/ Till gossip knots half-truth by which it lives." There are also poems of Bavaria, Scotland; to Keats, to Shelley ("the boy-god Icarus/ . . . his stare rapt with the need to fall") to Berlioz, Mandelstam; and to wife and daughter. A number of poems speak to the poet's deep connection with fathering; "teach me to hold/ you for a while, and then/ to let go."—Rosaly DeMaios Roffman, Dept. of English, Indiana Univ. of Pennsylvania

Political Science & International Affairs

Alexander, Herbert E., ed. Campaign Money: reform and reality in the states.

Free Pr. 1976. 352p. LC 76-21180. $10.95; pap. $2.95. POL SCI

The essays in this volume affirm the positive value of newly passed campaign disclosure laws. Campaign financing of dubious character, as well as subsequent reforms, are discussed relating to Maryland, Florida, Texas, California, Massachusetts, Kansas, Georgia, Pennsylvania, Ohio, and New York. While the spillover effect of the Watergate era is most apparent in the essays, it is equally clear that the new financing laws represent no more than rather modest first steps toward meaningful campaign reform. Yet, it may be stretching credulity for the public to expect state legislators quickly to police themselves. Recommended for political scientists and general readers.—Samuel H. Shannon, Dept. of History & Geography, Tennessee State Univ., Nashville

Berns, Walter. The First Amendment and the Future of American Democracy.

Basic Bks. Nov. 1976. 288p. index. ISBN 0-465-02410-6. $12.50. LAW/POL SCI

Berns has taken a stab at reformulating a perennially fascinating question, namely, the founders' intent in the First Amendment. The result is a book that includes a shrewd appraisal of Locke's theory of natural rights, the common law of seditious libel, and the great Congressional debates on freedom of speech and of the press, triggered by the 1798 Alien and Sedition Acts. The gravamen of Berns's charge is that the modern Court has played false to the plain intent of the founders. The Warren Court judges elevated ethical belief (in U.S. vs. Seeger, etc.) into a draft exemption standard, upholding defendants who refuse to serve in the armed forces, salute the flag, or attend secular public schools. The Court, he fears, will eventually exempt from valid law anyone who regards a statute as repugnant or immoral, and has already improperly removed the stigma of illegality from obscenity. Berns's appraisal is actually a cleverly tendentious litany—at times accurate, but often misleading—of the heresies of Holmes, Black, Douglas, et al. The lint of conservatism clearly clings to these pages.—Milton Cantor, Dept. of History, Univ. of Massachusetts, Amherst

POLITICAL SCIENCE

POLITICAL SCIENCE

Dash, Samuel. Chief Counsel: inside the Ervin Committee—the untold story of Watergate.

Random. Nov. 1976. index. LC 76-14171. ISBN 0-394-40853-5. $10. POL SCI

During 1974, the Watergate Special Prosecutor's Office and the House Committee on the Judiciary became the center of public attention, while the Senate Select Committee of Sam Ervin seemed to recede in importance. Dash, the Senate Committee's chief counsel, reminds us that the panel's hearings played a major role in educating the public about Watergate and related conspiracies. Its work was also the means by which the existence of the White House tapes was disclosed. The author has produced a quite readable story of the committee's work that is very frank in reporting the internal battles that periodically raged within the panel and its investigative staff. Dash obviously feels that Senator Howard Baker was overpraised at the time of the hearings; Baker apparently acted as a White House agent on several occasions. A useful addition to the still-growing Watergate literature.—Jack W. Weigel, Univ. of Michigan Lib., Ann Arbor

Jaworski, Leon. The Right and the Power: the prosecution of Watergate.

Reader's Digest Pr., dist. by Crowell. 1976. 305p. index. LC 76-22594. ISBN 0-88349-102-8. $9.95. LAW/POL SCI

Jaworski recounts his difficulties and successes as the Watergate special prosecutor. He gives an essential perspective and a broader understanding of questions surrounding the affair and reveals some of his legal strategies and problems in prosecuting the Watergate coconspirators. He quotes previously unpublished material, such as internal office memoranda, focusing on his negotiations and conflicts with White House members, especially James St. Clair and Alexander Haig, over the Presidential tapes. Jaworski also examines the actions of his office in the prosecution of illegal corporate campaign contributions. His most difficult decision was whether to indict Nixon; he presents both sides of this issue and concludes that the former President would not have received a prompt, fair trial as guaranteed by the Constitution.—Steven Puro, Dept. of Political Science, St. Louis Univ.

Korb, Lawrence J. The Joint Chiefs of Staff: the first twenty-five years.

Indiana Univ. Pr. 1976. 224p. index. LC 75-16839. ISBN 0-253-33169-2. $10.95. POL SCI

The Joint Chiefs are the major military advisors to the President, the National Security Council, the Secretary of Defense, and Congress. The evolution of the organization since its creation in 1947 by the Truman Administration has not been without controversy. The degree of authority and responsibility associated with the body has fluctuated from one administration to the next, and Korb's study reveals that no single pattern for choosing representatives has yet been established. But two facts seem to have emerged: the body has little impact upon the size of the defense budget and the success of its decision making during military involvement is questionable. Finding little strength in the Joint Chiefs, Korb also cites two major weaknesses: the members are intimidated by political leaders and they are without innovation in policy process, even in military affairs. Korb views the future of the Joint Chiefs with little optimism. For university libraries.—Roger L. Brooks, President, Howard Payne Univ., Brownwood, Tex.

Matsunaga, Spark & Ping Chen. Rulemakers of the House.

Univ. of Illinois Pr. 1976. 208p. LC 76-18985. ISBN 0-252-00626-7. $7.95. HIST/GOVT

Using minutes and reports of roll call votes of the rules committee's executive sessions, supplemented by interviews with 59 members of the House of Representatives, Matsunaga and Chen examine the role of the committee during the 20-year period from 1957 to 1976. They argue that the committee's influence is determined by the changing "balance between its own goals and those of the House leadership." Accordingly, the authors examine the institutional aspects of this relationship (the political resources available to the committee and the sanctions the House may impose), the committee's individual members (their goals and record of success), its chairmen, and its voting behavior and decisions. Their well-researched and clearly written work updates and expands upon earlier studies of Congressional committees. Highly recommended for academic libraries.—Carol S. Greenwald, Dept. of Political Science, Brooklyn Coll., CUNY

Oglesby, Carl. The Yankee and Cowboy War: conspiracies from Dallas to Watergate.

Sheed. 1976. 360p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-23321. ISBN 0-8362-0680-0. $12; pap. $4.95. POL SCI

Ten years ago, a book of this nature would never have been published. It is a measure of the change in the public's view of itself and its government that the success of this sort of piece is now possible. Oglesby proposes the existence of a tripartite power division, composed of "cowboys" (conservative Western business magnates concerned with control of the Orient), "yankees" (Eastern liberal-intellectual, Atlantic-oriented bankers and educators), and the syndicate (which protected U.S. shipping from sabotage during World War II, while receiving a free hand in its illegal business interests). This cabal was formed to carry out the aims of the U.S. government in World War II. More recently these factions have come to blows over U.S. policy in Cuba and Southeast Asia, with Oglesby claiming that this infighting has resulted in the assassination of one President (John Kennedy) and one Presidential candidate (Robert Kennedy) and the forced abdication of two Presidents (Johnson and Nixon). While the book's content is fascinating, the style is rough, unpolished, and reminiscent of headline-grabbing, tabloid journalism. Slipshod.—Robin J. Masters, Placentia Lib. District, Calif.

We seek qualified reviewers to assess scholarly titles on Near Eastern and South Asian history and political affairs. Please write to Ellen Kozlowski, the Book Review.

Psychology & Psychiatry

Piaget, Jean. The Grasp of Consciousness: action and concept in the young child.

Harvard Univ. Pr. 1976. 360p. tr. by Susan Wedgwood. bibliog. index. LC 75-43687. ISBN 0-674-36033-8. $15. PSYCH

Piaget gives a useful working definition of consciousness and reviews, in some detail, the evidence he and his coworkers have gathered describing the developmental sequence of its acquisition. Consciousness is reflected, for Piaget, in the accuracy with which a subject can describe the relationship between his acts and his goals. The evidence gathered persuasively supports Pia-

Briones, a...community near San Francisco, found itself victim of a giant oil spill and a state-imposed sewage system Refusing to sit back...the residents...organized themselves to fight back

"Schell, one of Briones elected officials, has written an intensely personal and moving account...His book serves as an inspiration to those who are interested in preserving the land for the future."

—Library Journal

60 Illustrations LC 75-38122
Cloth $15 ISBN: 0-394-48498-3
Paper $6.95 ISBN 0-394-73169-7

THE TOWN THAT FOUGHT TO SAVE ITSELF
by Orville Schell

Recommended Reading

201 E. 50th St.
New York 10022

NEW REPUBLIC BOOKS suggests

"An intelligent popular introduction to the range of new thinking on human behavior.... In Scarf's lucid, lively portrayal, this rapidly evolving science becomes a parade of intriguing unanswered questions."
—Kirkus Reviews

"Scarf clearly explains what are often complex concepts."
—Library Journal

BODY, MIND, BEHAVIOR
by Maggie Scarf

ISBN 0-915220-14-8 $9.95
Distributed by E. P. Dutton & Co.

LIBRARY JOURNAL recommends...

NONE DARE CALL IT WITCHCRAFT

GARY NORTH

LC 76-12109 ISBN 0-87000-301-1
$8.95

"North writes well and with some humor, which tempers his abhorrence of everything in any way related to the occult (including psychic research), but his message will be clear to both his fellow fundamentalists and to his critics. For libraries that wish to provide a strongly voiced counterbalance to the many uncritical popular books on the subject." —Library Journal

ARLINGTON HOUSE PUBLISHERS
165 HUGUENOT ST. • NEW ROCHELLE N.Y. 10801

get's notion that the ability to make this description develops slowly over the first 12 years of life. The studies reported are naturalistic and descriptive, but consistently and carefully executed and described. The concentration is on behavior and the developmental sequence it takes, as is most of Piaget's work.—Dennis Cogan, Dept. of Psychology & Statistics, Texas Tech Univ., Lubbock

Raley, Patricia E. Making Love: how to be your own sex therapist.

Dial. 1976. 273p. fwd. by David E. Scharff, M.D. photogs. by Alan Winston. index. LC 76-22765. ISBN 0-8037-5242-3. $14.95. PSYCH

In the wake of Alex Comfort's best-selling books, The Joy of Sex and More Joy, and following the success of books written to women—the Boston Women's Health Collective, Our Bodies, Our Selves and Lonnie Barbach's For Yourself (LJ 3/1/75)—this book adds to a growing literature for laypeople on sex. Making Love complements but does not replace the above books. Its major contribution is its more than 200 creative and often highly erotic, highly explicit photographs. The simply written text deals with heterosexual and homosexual behavior, oral sex, masturbation, impotency, power plays, and so on. Comfort's books are more entertaining and more controversial in terms of his personal stands on life styles. At times condescending to the reader (the book will appeal to the naïve), Raley is herself naïve sometimes, particularly in her treatment of alternative sexual life styles. Some statements are open to question; for example, "Men don't have a multi-orgasmic capacity." Authorities cited are Masters and Johnson, but sources are not provided, and the book lacks both a bibliography and references for further reading. There are the familiar case histories, as well as space provided for the reader's written responses to a variety of questions. Overall, this is a book libraries should buy, but it will need to be limited to "reserve only" use, or it will quickly disappear.—Roger W. Libby, Inst. for Family Research, Syracuse Univ., N.Y.

Reynolds, David K. & Norman L. Farberow. Suicide Inside and Out.

Univ. of California Pr. 1976. 232p. bibliog. index. LC 75-22661. ISBN 0-520-03103-2. $10.95. PSYCH

A carefully structured experiential study of the suicidal person and his interaction with the psychiatric community. Reynolds, an anthropologist, assumed the role of a suicidally depressed man, was admitted to a Veterans Hospital, and recorded in diary form his reactions to and observations of the psychiatric ward's staff, patients, and procedures. His report vividly conveys an experience of hospitalization and "suicidal status" with particular focus on the way role (of doctor, nurse, aide, or fellow patient) affects interactions with the suicidal individual. Reynolds' report that his pseudo-depression became on occasion incapacitatingly real raises some important questions: besides issues of the effects of behavior on mood and self-image, one wonders what the tenuousness of the researcher's role as actor says about his observation skills during the experience; and if this artificially created experience can reasonably be generalized as valid for a population to which the study's subject does not even belong? The authors are well aware of the potential drawbacks of such subjective research and provide an excellent critical review of the surprisingly little previous work done in this area. As a training technique such direct exposure to the patient's world would seem invaluable, and I would think anyone dealing with suicidal people could benefit from a comparison of his own experiences with those described in this book.—James Charney, M.D., Dept. of Psychiatry, Yale Medical Sch.

Robert, Marthe. From Oedipus to Moses.

Anchor: Doubleday. Nov. 1976. ISBN 0-385-00064-2. pap. $2.95. PSYCH

Though studies on Freud's Jewishness abound—see especially J. M. Cuddihy's Ordeal of Civility (LJ 6/1/75) which Robert seems unaware of yet which anticipated some of her hypotheses—the author has a contribution to the field in the theory that Freud's life comes full circle as exemplified by two vital works: The Interpretation of Dreams and Moses and Monotheism; both, in Robert's interpretation, largely autobiographical. She proposes that Freud's advancement of the theory of sexuality was based largely on frustrated ambitious needs to achieve recognition in a Gentile society. Robert makes the case for this assertion clearly in her analysis of Freud's dreams, letters, and scientific career; she shows that Freud finally clarified his analytic theory of neurosis after analyzing his personal rivalry with his father. To the end, Freud suffered a unique guilt over having surpassed his father's societal status and—faced prior to his death with his striking resemblance to his father—Freud, through Moses, renounced his Jewishness in order to relieve his guilt. Robert's intimate knowledge of numerous particulars of Freud's personal and professional development will make her book compelling reading for readers with considerable background in psychoanalytic writings.—Moshe H. Spero, Sch. of Applied Social Sciences, Case Western Reserve Univ., Cleveland

Rosnow, Ralph & Gary Alan Fine. Rumor and Gossip.

Elsevier. 1976. 156p. $10. SOC SCI/PSYCH

This is a thorough and systematic summary of English-language research completed since Gordon Allport's and Leo Postman's 1947 Psychology of Rumor. No new theoretical models are offered although some clarifying metaphors are used to serve as conceptual guides to the social psychology of rumor and gossip, both of which are revealed to be functional for the relater. Rumor, always unsubstantiated, serves the need for anxiety reduction or cognitive clarity; while gossip, with or without known basis of fact, serves the need for status or esteem. What recommends this work to a wider circle than that of academics is its value for those concerned with communication in organizations; it will help them to become aware of the social circumstances favoring a low critical set, and the social exchange mechanism that aids in the disseminating of unauthenticated information. The data and case examples are intriguing, journalistic implications are mentioned, extensive bibliographic references are included, and a useful appendix presents an abridged version of the previously unpublished "Standards and Guidelines for Rumor Control Centers," by the Community Relations Service of the Department of Justice.—William Abrams, Portland State Univ. Lib., Ore.

Sutherland, Stuart. Breakdown.

Stein & Day. Nov. 1976. 278p. index. LC 75-37980. ISBN 0-8128-1941-1. $10.

PER NAR/PSYCH

This is a candid and compelling account of a severe mental breakdown and of the pitfalls of the variously inefficacious methods of treatment experienced by an English academic research psychologist. It has the impact of a lesson drawn from firsthand experience, but it differs from other post-therapeutic confessionals in the added perspective provided by the author's qualifications, his skill in conveying the pathos and comedy of his condition, and his carefully researched and documented conclusions. The last half of the book is given over to an indictment of the practice of psychotherapy and of the profession of psychiatry. It differs from the antipsychiatry of Thomas Szasz or R. D. Laing in that Sutherland values behavior therapy and some other forms of clinically validated support and believes that mental illness is an unedifying and unenviable experience. The author recommends a greater role for clinical psychologists in the treatment of the mentally unwell and pleads for more research and education in diagnostic nomenclature. Data and current practices are not limited to the British mental health scene. One of the better examples of personal narratives in the field, with important implications for psychiatry in particular.—William Abrams, Portland State Univ. Lib., Ore.

Parapsychology & Occultism

Holzer, Hans. The Clairvoyant.

Mason/Charter. 1976. 166p. LC 76-15164. ISBN 0-88405-370-9. $8.95. PARAPSYCH

Although the facts in this book are told just as the author was given them by the subject, Holzer has used a continuous narrative and has changed the names of some of the people involved in Uschi Troll's life. Born in Vienna in the 1950's, Uschi very early demonstrated psychic ability. When she was a teenage student at a Catholic boarding school, one of the young priests teaching there became her first lover. Remorse drove him to Africa on a dangerous assignment, and he died there soon after—to come back in spirit to become Uschi's spirit guide. Some people might question his competency in this role. Uschi, still a young girl, commercialized her clairvoyance by becoming a California medium, and even used her precognition to advance the career of a Southern senator. However, her life and various love affairs became increasingly unsatisfactory to her, so eventually she retired to a secluded cottage in the Austrian mountains, where people with problems continued to seek her out. Recently she has disappeared mysteriously. If Holzer hears from her, I am sure he will let us know in a sequel.—Eleanor Touhey Smith, New York

Religion

Albanese, Catherine L. Sons of the Fathers: the civil religion of the American Revolution.

Temple Univ. Pr. Dec. 1976. fwd. by Martin E. Marty. index. LC 76-17712. ISBN 0-87722-073-5. $12.50. HIST/REL

In the late 18th Century the founding fathers of the American republic were searching for a "cement for social bonding" that would mold the thirteen colonies together. From their long and often heated debate over what was needed there gradually emerged a civil or common religion intended to bind together people of widely differing beliefs and backgrounds. Suggesting that the American Revolution "was in itself a religious experience," Albanese examines the revolutionary origins of our national faith and discusses the character of its hidden assumptions. With authority and lucidity the author analyses such central ideological concepts as pietism, rationalism, and the religious roots of nationalism. Her book is objectively written and well documented; it is directed primarily to scholars.—Jack A. Clarke, Univ. of Wisconsin Lib. Sch., Madison

Bialer, Yehuda L. Jewish Life in Art and Tradition.

Putnam. 1976. 190p. illus. photogs., some color. by David Harris. LC 75-33424. ISBN 0-399-11695-8. $16.95. DEC ARTS/REL

This album of Jewish ceremonial art is based on the collection at the Sir Isaac and Lady Edith Wolfson Museum in Jerusalem. The photography is splendid, the accompanying explanations direct and informative. Bialer, one of the world's leading authorities on the subject, traces Jewish ceremonial art back to the interpretation of the verse, "He is my God and I will glorify Him" (Exodus 15:2). Whatever objects are needed to perform God's commandments are therefore made of precious materials with ornate designs: for the synagogue these range from the Aron Kodesh which houses the Torah to the silver Yad which is used to keep the reader's place as he chants Torah passages during the service; for the home they extend from the mezuzah on the door to the candelabra and wine goblet at the Sabbath table. The collection includes items from just about every the first authoritative, journalistic book on the hottest area of parapsychology today — PsychoKinetic phenomena ("PK" powers)...

STEINERBOOKS ANNOUNCES

PK

a Report on the Power of Psycho-Kinesis, Mental Energy that Moves Matter

by Michael H. Brown, Journalist

Parapsychology is in. Witness the sales and appeal of books on ESP, PSI, psychic healing and books by and about such people as Uri Geller and Edgar Cayce

Now, the first authoritative, journalistic report of scientifically proved "PK" power and parapsychology all around the world has been published And STEINERBOOKS has it! "PK" power, which includes such phenomena as levitation, metal bending, teleportation and psychic healing is at the very crest of parapsychological interest by laymen and scientists alike

This book presents for the very first time —

- Documentation that everyone can develop PK" powers!
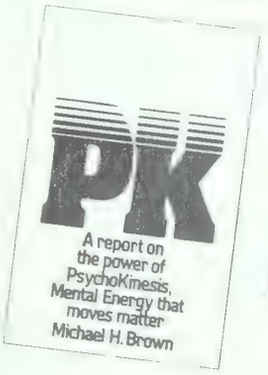
- A report of scientifically controlled experiments and how "PK" may be the key to understanding the very fabric of time!
- Never before published accounts and photos of levitation!
- The startling connection between "PK," ESP, time warps (the Bermuda Triangle), psychic healing and other parapsychological phenomena!
- Scientific evidence that the mind can control human biological systems!

Yes, today science knows "PK" power is no fantasy Such distinguished scientists as Justa Smith, former research director of Human Dimensions Institute, Wilbur Franklin, physicist at Kent State University; and A.G.R Owen, Toronto mathematician and biologist, agree that "PK" is no hoax

All the facts are in this brand new book —



5¼ × 8¼, heavily illustrated, 320 pages
Paper $5.95
Cloth $9.95

ORDER FROM STEINERBOOKS, DEPT. LJ1
100 South Western Highway, Blauvelt, N.Y. 10913 country, mostly dating from the 18th and 19th centuries. A short glossary concludes this impressive book.—Gerda Haas, Bates Coll. Lib., Lewiston, Me.

Evans, Robert A. & Thomas D. Parker, eds. Christian Theology: a case method approach.

Harper. Nov. 1976. 352p. bibliog. ISBN 0-06-062251-2. $10; pap. ISBN 0-06-062252-0. $4.95. REL

Based on a study undertaken by the Case Study Institute directed by Keith R. Birdston, this work presents nine actual cases, each followed by theological "briefs" (or commentaries) by distinguished theologians, including Jacques Ellul, Schubert M. Ogden, Thomas J. J. Altizer, and others. A discussion of the Apostles Creed by Thomas D. Parker runs through the book as a kind of theological framework. Samples of the timely and interesting cases: that of a woman who wonders whether she should seek ordination in the denomination she left to become a Unitarian. There is also the Karen Quinlan-like case of a wife who is faced with the question of whether to keep her husband alive by extraordinary means when there is no hope for his recovery. A selected bibliography follows each brief. Theology is here removed from the ivory tower of philosophical speculation and related to the ways in which human beings actually live and hurt.—Douglas S. Marsh, Memphis Shelby County P.L., Tenn.

LIPPINCOTT

"Unique and compelling."*

A CORONARY EVENT

Michael Halberstam, M.D., and Stephan Lesher

"From the experience of Newsweek reporter Lesher's heart attack, he and his doctor, Halberstam, have fashioned an engrossing, even suspenseful book that illuminates both the conflicts of modern medicine and the stresses that develop between the two high-powered, driven men."—Washington Post. "An exasperating confrontation between two intelligent and strong-willed individuals, their doctor-patient relationship is opened to view articulately and honestly, making this an enlightening documentary."

LC 76-914 —ALA Booklist.*
ISBN 0-397-01119-9 $8.95

J. B. Lippincott Company
East Washington Square
Philadelphia, Pa. 19105

Glyn, Caroline. In Him Was Life.

Westminster. Feb. 1977. 256p. illus. ISBN 0-664-24118-2. pap. $5.95. F/REL

This book offers no new theology; it presents biblical stories as they take on life in the author's imagination. Glyn has written the last four of her eight books as a religious in a closed contemplative order. From such sustained meditation we gain here some remarkable characterizations: Matthias of Qumran, Rabbi Simon of Nazareth, the leper, Joanna the prophetess, the Greek friend of Xanthippus. And we observe, for instance, Judas Iscariot unable to eat when the 5000 are being fed. In Him Was Life is a skillful fusion of drama and doctrine profoundly felt and expressed with intensity and eloquence.—Jack Tootell, Grass Valley, Calif.

Helmreich, William B. Wake Up, Wake Up, To Do the Work of the Creator.

Harper. 1976. 224p. ISBN 0-06-011823-7. $8.95. PER NAR/REL

Among themselves, Jews divide and subdivide according to the degree to which they observe the ancient laws of the Torah and the Talmud. This book deals with Orthodox Judaism, and with its most observant American camp. Helmreich, born in 1945, writes of the first 15 years of his life, spent until his Bar Mitzvah in New York City's West Side, and then at a yeshiva 200 miles from home. Chiefly, this is a journal of the daily life of an Orthodox Jewish boy, describing each ritual, recording and interpreting each prayer, giving the reader a glimpse at a life style seldom exposed to "outsiders." There is a wealth of information here; for the curious and perplexed, this is a veritable source book, and is written in a clear, simple manner. In spite of his sheltered upbringing, the boy feels compelled to question the way age-old traditions are kept alive in a vacuum; he even dares to harbor secret misgivings, in light of his grandparents' deaths in the Holocaust, as to the benevolence of G–d (whose name is never spelled out, in accordance with the most religious practice). In the end, young William makes a difficult decision: he decides to leave the ultra-orthodox camp in order to be able to reconcile tradition with secularism, and moves into another subdivision of Orthodox Judaism.—Gerda Haas, Bates Coll. Lib., Lewiston, Me.

Herberg, Will. Faith Enacted as History: essays in biblical theology.

Westminster. Nov. 1976. 281p. ed. & intro. by Bernhard W. Anderson. ISBN 0-664-21335-9. $10.95. PHIL/REL

In this thought-provoking collection of articles, speeches, and lectures, Herberg, American theologian and author of Protestant, Catholic, Jew (LJ 9/1/55), examines the historicity of biblical faith. His "existential understanding of man as a historical being who is called to take part in God's story" underlies his essays, which range from a comparative look at Christianity and Judaism to an examination of the relationship between faith and political philosophy. He is careful in defining his terms, e.g., "historical" and "myth," and in getting to the essence of theological doctrines. Of particular interest is an essay in which Herberg examines the influence of Hegel on such theologians as Paul Tillich, Julius Wellhausen, and the Jewish philosopher Nachman Krochmal. Recommended for most libraries with religion collections.—Maurice Tuchman, Hebrew Coll. Lib., Brookline, Mass.

Holl, Adolf. Death and the Devil.

Crossroad: Seabury. 1976. 240p. tr. by Mathew J. O'Connell. ISBN 0-8164-0313-9. $9.95. REL

Holl reflects on the changing human stance toward death and life's vicissitudes: preliterate societies have no concept of hell; in high cultures an afterlife compensates for injustice in this life; and in industrial society people enter cathedrals to snap photos carrying a guidebook, not a prayerbook. Delightfully disrespectful of pronouncements and pomposity, theological or scientific, Holl juxtaposes with striking effect vignettes from Freud, Pascal, Max Weber, the Club of Rome, the Bible, opinion polls, and from his experiences as a priest. Finally, he offers himself as Mass priest for the General Public Celebration of Mourning for Sick Industrial Society. The symbol: light came to an illiterate peasant, Joan of Arc, not to the arrogant authorities of the day. Like Godspell, this deserves a wide audience.—Thomas C. Hunt, formerly with Center for Integrated Studies, Guatemala, C.A.

Layman, Emma McCloy. Buddhism in America.

Nelson-Hall. 1976. 342p. bibliog. index. LC 76-4566. ISBN 0-88229-166-1. $17.50; pap. $6.95. SOC SCI/REL

This scholarly monograph by a psychology professor not only provides a well-researched account of Buddhism in America, but also gives excellent explanations of the thought of the Buddhist sects discussed (Amida's Pure Land, Zen, Tibetan Buddhism, Nichiren, Chinese Buddhism, and Sattipatthana). Although the author's professed emphasis is on the social/psychological aspects involved in the acceptance of Buddhism, her summaries are valuable since, except for Zen, there are few readable accounts available. Also valuable are her appraisals of Buddhism in terms of present problems (ecology, race, drugs, etc.) and in terms of psychology (she sees certain influences at work, e.g., a renewed interest in the psychology of consciousness). Descriptions of Buddhist churches and services, etc. are given in painstaking detail. Layman concludes—and most experts would probably concur—that the influence of Buddhism on American society will be greater than its number of adherents.—Gordon W. Manning, Oregon Historical Soc. Lib., Portland

Ornstein, Robert E. The Mind Field.

Grossman, dist. by Viking. 1976. 128p. illus. $7.95. PSYCH/REL

Americans are "spiritual illiterates" who assume the trappings of Eastern mysticism while ignorant of its substance, claims Ornstein. He illustrates this point in a broad survey of some of the spiritual and psychological movements popular in this country. He contrasts these with Sufism, a spiritual tradition which distinguishes "the container and the content" and consequently does not smother its teachings under outmoded and irrelevant cultural baggage. Ornstein unfortunately diminishes the impact of his valuable insights by the superficiality of most of his discussion. He criticizes more by innuendo than by substantial analysis, in an unpleasant, condescending tone. The long final chapter on Sufism makes the same points as the rest of the book, but in a much more positive fashion.—Timothy O'Reilly, Watertown, Mass.

RELIGION

Plekker, Robert J. Redeemed? Say So!
Harper. Jan. 1977. 184p. ISBN 0-06-066652-8. pap. $3.95. RFI
Very much in tune with the "born again" movement, this chatty, exuberant guide to active, evangelical, contemporary Christian witnessing emphasizes that to be a productive witness for Jesus it's not enough to put a bumper sticker on one's car or lead a good life; the Christian must actively introduce Jesus to others as the solution to their problems. The importance of Bible study is underlined and the right approach described in detail. There is an introduction by Pat Boone, who is a friend of the author's. For church and public libraries where there is an interest in fundamental, charismatic Christianity.—Joan S. Martinez, Angelo M. Iacoboni Lib., Los Angeles County P.L. System

Raming, Ida. The Exclusion of Women from the Priesthood: divine law or sex discrimination?
Scarecrow. 1976. 280p. tr. by Norman R. Adams. pref. by Arlene & Leonard Swidler. bibliog. index. LC 76-23322. ISBN 0-8108-0957-5. $11. REL
This is a scholarly study of the sources in medieval canon law related to the present Roman Catholic law which restricts ordination to the priesthood to baptized males. Raming proves in great detail that the law is based on forgeries, mistaken identities, and suppressions, and that the medieval canonists were convinced that God made women inferior and subject to men. She also makes long excursions into the biblical and theological background of the canonists' opinions, but here she is not as completely thorough and convincing. She writes in the style of a militant feminist and the mixture of vast scholarship and barely suppressed rage makes a fine combination. This is an important contribution to the literature of a hotly discussed issue which will be essential for all larger collections.—W. Charles Heiser, S.J., St. Louis Univ. Lib.

Van Buren, Paul M. The Burden of Freedom: Americans and the God of Israel.
Crossroad/Seabury. Nov. 1976. 128p. ISBN 0-8164-0318-X. $6.95. REL
In a penetrating analysis of the theological meaning of freedom, Van Buren argues for a concrete theology based on historical, political, and economic facts. He contends that Jesus' resurrection was only a "partial" victory, a hint from God of a new age to come. When the new age did not materialize, the early Christians engaged in a cover-up: Jesus' resurrection became an "absolute" victory, the concept of a new age was transmitted to a remote heaven after death, and decreasing importance was given to earthly events. Imbued with the "mysticism and dualism of pagan spirituality," Christianity grew increasingly apart from Judaism's basic tenet that Israel, God's people, has a definite role to play in God's plans. Van Buren points out that American ideology has developed similarly, allying itself with institutional Christianity to cover up the "reality of concrete history." Both are plagued by pagan abstractions that have little to do with "the corporate and systemic" problems of the earth's oppressed. Van Buren's provocative thesis sheds new light on how Christianity and Judaism are related and interdependent. His book will interest both the theologian and the informed layperson.—Virginia Davis, Univ. of Houston Law Lib.

Young, Norman. Creator, Creation and Faith.
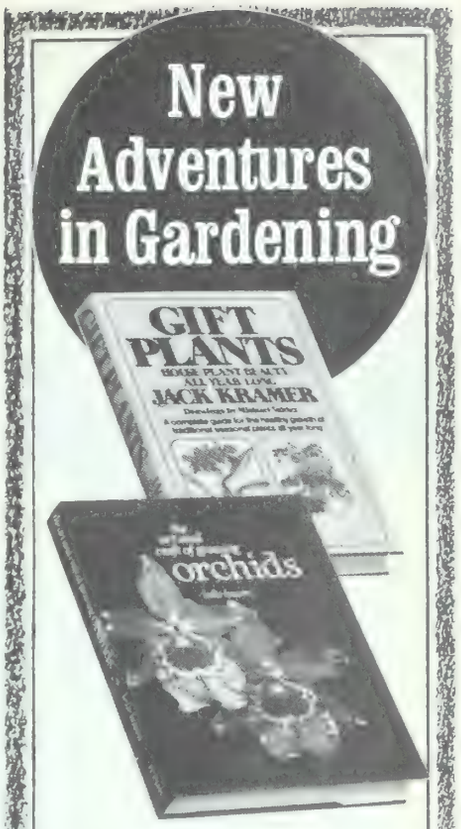
Westminster. 1976. ISBN 0-664-21334-0. $8.50. REL
Australian theologian Norman Young has produced a study of the Christian doctrine of creation that is in many ways a model of what a technical theological monograph ought to be. After defending the importance of his theme, Young critically surveys the relevant biblical materials before analyzing four diverse theological interpretations (Karl Barth, Paul Tillich, Rudolf Bultmann, Jürgen Moltmann) and then offering his own perspective on "living in the created world" as "aliens," in "coalition," as "innovators," and as "revolutionaries." The technical character of the book will limit its readership largely to professionals.—Donald W. Dayton, North Park Theological Seminary Lib., Chicago

SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

Biology and the Future of Man: proceedings of the International conference.
Internat. Scholarly Bk. Servs. 1976. 610p. index. bilingual ed. pap. $27.50.
SOC SCI/BIOLOGY
This important interdisciplinary work presents the proceedings of a conference held at the Sorbonne. Presentations were organized around various themes: organ transplantation, human experimentation, biochemical control of behavior, environmental protection and ecology, and genetic control. The text mixes French and English in equal amounts, and provides summaries to each section in both languages. Among the internationally known scientists whose addresses and discussions are included here (in slightly edited form) are François Jacob, Elizabeth Kubler-Ross, and Gunther



Gift Plants

HOUSE PLANT BEAUTY ALL YEAR LONG

By JACK KRAMER. Enjoy Christmas poinsettias on the 4th of July and Easter primroses at Thanksgiving! "Kramer explains how to carry them over...discusses disease prevention, plant watering, and feeding. His plant listings and a chart indicating desirable light, temperature, and water conditions will be helpful to all but the most experienced indoor gardener."—Publishers Weekly. 6" x 9." More than 50 photos & 11 full-page drawings. SBN-399-11715-6. $8.95

The Art and Craft of Growing Orchids

By LESLIE BOWEN. An international authority's step-by-step guide to growing exquisite orchids at home! "In this handsome book...readers will be well informed about the history, sources, and cultivation of these exotic plants....Bowen delves into the intricacies of cultivation, describes species and hybrids....His book will probably recruit new growers."—Publishers Weekly. 7¼" x 10." 16 full-color plates; 100 black-and-white photos & drawings. SBN-399-11736-9. $10.95

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

SCIENCE

"Solid biochemical information of interest —and reassurance—to both men and women"
—Kirkus Reviews
(Special Mention)

The Virility Factor

By ROBERT BAHR

"Bahr's informed and lucid book is a boon to the man who is troubled by the most common of 'masculine' problems.... A well-organized discussion of what testosterone is, how its normal supply activates a man's sexual activity, and how a man's sexual drive, general health, appearance, and psychology suffer when testosterone levels for whatever reason (stress is one) fall." —Publishers Weekly. Index, bibliog., glossary.
SBN-399-11808-X. $8.95

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

A HAWTHORN BOOK
Recommended for Libraries

WILDFLOWER PERENNIALS FOR YOUR GARDEN
by Bebe Miles

Garden and wildflower authority Miles discusses her subject with a contagious enthusiasm. Her general tips about propagation through division, layering, stem cutting and other methods, assume a garden plan—most important, she says, where space is limited. . . . The author is generous with her descriptions of 100 species to tempt the amateur or experienced gardener. Beautifully illustrated by H. Peter Loewer, this volume is a gardener's treasure."—Publishers Weekly. Drawings, garden plans. Bibliography, index, supply list. ISBN 0-8015-2914-X. $10.95.

HAWTHORN BOOKS
New York, N.Y. 10018

Stent. Awareness of the social and ethical responsibilities of biomedical scientists permeates this lengthy volume; thus it comes as no surprise to find at the end resolutions on "the creation of the universal movement for scientific responsibility" and articles on the foundation of this movement. All biological research libraries should consider this work for purchase.—Frances Groen, McGill Univ. Lib., Montreal, Canada

Rittmann, A. & L. Rittmann. Volcanoes.

Putnam. 1976. 128p. color photogs. bibliog. index. LC 76-6035. ISBN 0-399-11725-3. $12.95.
EARTH SCI

Two well-known volcanologists, father and daughter, present a beautifully illustrated résumé of our knowledge of volcanic phenomena. Topics they discuss include the origin of the requisite heat, the building of volcanic forms, the rocks and minerals associated with volcanoes, similar structures on other planets, and the effects of volcanic activity on man. A list of "Volcanoes of the World" gives elevations, eruption history, and type. The illustrations are nicely reproduced in a work which combines scientific accuracy with a popular style. Highly recommended for most libraries.—R. G. Schipf, Univ. of Montana Lib., Missoula

Botany & Horticulture

Kramer, Jack. A Seasonal Guide to Indoor Gardening.

Houghton. 1976. drawings by Robert Johnson. index. ISBN 0-395-24777-2. $12.95; pap. $5.95.
HORT

The arrangement of Kramer's book will surely help many indoor gardeners, especially novices. Taking one season at a time, the author outlines the basic care of plant families, treats special activities and problems, and offers a long list (with illustrative drawings and light and watering instructions) of plants which seem to do best for the particular season. Information is for the most part elementary, but there are a few seldom-seen hints, such as using an oscillating fan to promote air circulation in the winter and being cautious of supermarket bulbs (the kind sold in cartons). Because of its seasonal approach, a good supplement for indoor-gardening collections.—Callie B. McGinnis, Columbus Coll. Lib., Ga.

Riker, Tom, ed. Sex in the Garden.

Morrow. (Gardener's Catalogue). 1976. 192p. illus. LC 76-4135. ISBN 0-688-03063-7. $9.95.
HORT

The stated purpose of this book is to provide a layman's overview of ecological interrelationships in the garden. However, the editors never determined their audience; and as a result, Sex in the Garden contains a mix of oversimplified gardening advice and excessively detailed botanical terminology. The text wanders from gardens to garden ornamentation to nature in general, distinguishing poorly between newly written information and material reprinted from old gardening books. Numerous attractive illustrations and a large section on plant symbolism make for interesting browsing, but lack of organization and no index make systematic use of the book nearly impossible. In short, many of the same pleasures—and pitfalls—of the original Gardener's Catalogue (LJ 3/1/75) by Riker and Harvey Rottenberg.—Malcolm K. Hill, Haverhill P.L., Mass.

Wilson, Helen Van Pelt. Successful Gardening with Perennials.

Doubleday. 1976. 289p. illus. index. LC 76-2831. ISBN 0-385-06358-X. $9.95.
HORT

"Gardens are not meant to be an endurance test but a joy." With this theme, Wilson writes in easy personal style about growing perennials successfully and without much paid "digging help" in all seasons and climates. A less ambitious view has reduced the 8-foot borders Wilson advocated in her New Perennials Preferred (Morrow, 1961). She now suggests narrow borders, tuck-in plants, island beds, and small, new versions of old perennial flowers. Iris, peonies, day lilies, and chrysanthemums—"the big four"—receive special attention. Valuable charts give quick reference to insect and disease problems; where to buy natural controls; plants for special purposes. There is a calendar of garden chores and a list of sources for the plants, seeds, bulbs, and supplies. Photographs and drawings abound. A good all-around book for today's gardener—novice or expert.—Louise B. Hodges, Amherst County P.L., Va.

Health & Medicine

Cant, Gilbert. Male Trouble: a new focus on the prostate.

Praeger. Nov. 1976. 192p. index. LC 75-14646. ISBN 0-275-56370-7. $6.95.
MED

The American male has a particular need to learn of the functions and malfunctions of the prostate gland as he is quite likely to incur some problem with it during his lifetime. The ability of prostate disorders to remain hidden for months or years, and the tendency of many men to avoid seeking relief from symptoms, presents problems which medicine alone cannot conquer. This book does a commendable job of exposing the prostate to 20th-Century knowledge while dispelling the 19th-Century myths surrounding its functions. The information is delivered in a psychologically reassuring manner without camouflaging the problems an abnormal prostate can cause. Disorders ranging from infections to cancer are discussed in an easy-to-read manner, as are their current treatments. Recommended for public and patient libraries.—David Hulkonen, Veterans' Administration Center Lib., Fargo, N.D.

Fredman, Steven, M.D. & Robert E. Burger. Forbidden Cures.

Stein & Day. Nov. 1976. 245p. bibliog. index. LC 76-22527. ISBN 0-8128-2074-3. $8.95.
POL SCI MED

Unlike most current works on the subject, this is against drug regulation, with some qualifications. The theme is "that we have reacted so badly to the dangers of prescriptions that we, as a nation, have talked ourselves out of the benefits of progressive medicine." Citing research from medical journals and successful tests abroad, Fredman and Burger advocate the view that the decision to use certain restricted drugs should rest with the physician and the patient, not with Congress or regulatory agencies. They feel that the latter are too inflexible, too indecisive, too often swayed by monetary rather than public interests, and often too late. The authors tread lightly in their discussions of such controversial items as the use of laetrile and marijuana in the treatment of cancer; nevertheless, they feel that certain extreme cases may warrant extreme treatment. They include information on loopholes for circumventing the system, plus advice on pressuring Congress to be more responsive to the need for deregulation of certain drugs. It's a powerful and controversial argument.—Ruth E. Almeida, North County Lib., Glen Burnie, Md.

Imperato, Pascal James, M.D. What To Do About the Flu.
Dutton. 1976. 124p. LC 76-24919. ISBN 0-525-23263-X. $7.95; pap. Pocket Bks: S. & S., dist. by Pocket Bks.-Ace. ISBN 0-671-80754-4. $1.50. HEALTH

I hope the office oracles who freely hand out misinformation and bad advice about the flu to their suffering fellow-workers read this book and profit from it. Dr. Imperato, who heads the New York City Swine Influenza Immunization Task Force, is a public-health authority whose advice on how to avoid the flu and how to treat it is not to be taken lightly. He uses a question-and-answer format for the basic chapters on avoidance and treatment of flu, but also provides four case histories, ranging from mild to fatal, to illustrate the enormous variation in individual response to the disease. He provides a brief history of the flu and concludes with a chapter on swine flu plus appendixes on a sensible anti-flu diet, anti-flu tips, and survival tips for flu sufferers. Highly recommended for public and school libraries.—Eleanor Maass, Swarthmore Coll. Lib., Pa.

Leboyer, Frederick. Loving Hands.
Knopf. 1976. 139p. photogs. LC 75-36820. ISBN 0-394-40469-6. $7.95. PHOTOG/HEALTH

Leboyer's Birth Without Violence (LJ 5/1/75) stressed the importance of gentle handling of the newborn. Loving Hands focuses on building mother–baby communication through the child's most highly developed sense, the sense of touch. In India Leboyer encountered the ancient art of infant massage, which he explicitly describes and beautifully illustrates with his own photographs. He contrasts the constant cradling, massaging action of the uterus upon the unborn baby with the dry, hard, still world of the crib. The baby needs comfort from the mother—skin-to-skin contact that communicates caring to the baby and deep satisfaction to the mother. Current research validates the importance of physical contact in the bonding process between mother and newborn. The Indian technique may or may not be the perfect method. The freedom to hold, touch, cuddle, and stroke one's baby—indeed, the necessity to do so—is the critical message of Loving Hands.—Elizabeth M. Johnson, R.N., Lamaze Childbirth Assn., Columbus, Ohio

Natural History & Zoology

Campbell, Andrew S. The Coral Seas.
Putnam. 1976. 128p. illus., mainly color. bibliog. index. LC 76-6036. ISBN 0-399-11778-4. $12.95. NAT HIST

There have been several well-done books on this subject. This one is unusual in that its longest chapter (by anthropologist C. R. Hallpike) is devoted to the human inhabitants of the coral islands. Campbell, a zoologist who has studied the crown-of-thorns starfish, devotes most of another chapter to that echinoderm. He also describes one of his dives, during which he encountered many of the underwater inhabitants of a coral reef. Campbell discusses the deleterious effects of tourism in the coral islands, and in the final chapter he addresses the need to preserve this environment. There are already too many large-format, heavily illustrated books about marine life; still, this one contains some striking photos and useful information. Recommended.—John S. Robotham, N.Y.P.L.

Here's the one new reference book on earth sciences that makes all others suddenly obsolete!

544 pages
8½" x 11"
600 illustrations
LC 75-29977
ISBN 0-8109-0415-2
$37.50. CIP.

Brimming with entries that record, for the first time, revolutionary new breakthroughs in such exciting areas as plate tectonics, sea-floor spreading, earthquake prediction, the geology of Mars, THE PLANET WE LIVE ON: An Illustrated Encyclopedia of the Earth Sciences is an unparalleled exploration that authoritatively replaces all other encyclopedias of its kind.

A keystone reference book that brings the earth sciences right up to today. No library collection . . . no school or personal bookshelf is completely current without it!

- Expertly prepared by 11 distinguished American scientists and written in clear, comprehensible language.
- Thorough coverage of 21 branches of earth science . . . hundreds of brand-new topics from the forefront of research.
- 1,800 updated, information-packed articles, alphabetically arranged and extensively cross-referenced. 600 photos and diagrams, many in full color.

LJ says, "Useful reference tool for both layman and professional."
(Read entire review in Nov. 1, 1976 issue.)

Order today on 14-day approval!

HARRY N. ABRAMS, INC.
TIMES MIRROR
110 East 59 St., New York, N.Y. 10022

Goodall, Daphne Machin. Horses and Their World.

Mason/Charter. Dec. 1976. 170p. illus., some color. LC 76-14442. ISBN 0-88405-374-1. $10. PHOTOG/NAT HIST

A photographic record of horses' lives, from birth through their working lives to retirement and death, with a minimum of text holding it all together. It's a very personal book, using a number of Goodall's own horses as models. The photos are largely clear and well chosen, the captions appropriate. There could, perhaps, have been more color photographs (only 8 pages are in color). For horse lovers and public libraries.—Suzan H. Stephenson, Prince George's County Memorial Lib., Md.

Technology

Gies, Joseph & Frances Gies. The Ingenious Yankees.

Crowell. Dec. 1976. 352p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-10239. ISBN 0-690-01150-4. $12.95. HIST/TECH

America's early political, cultural, and military heroes are well examined in the historical and biographical literature; yet our pioneering technologists have been largely, and undeservedly, ignored. Indeed, the nation's transformation came about largely through the development of industrial technology. Primarily through biographical sketches, the authors trace the country's progress from a technological importer in 1776 to an importer–exporter by 1876. They tell the familiar story of Eli Whitney and the cotton gin as well as the not-so-familiar account of Christopher Sholes and the typewriter. An engaging and well-documented book, recommended for general readers.—Mark Leggett, Knoxville-Knox County P.L., Tenn.

Langworth, Richard M. Chrysler and Imperial: the postwar years.

Motorbks. Internat. 1976. 216p. illus. index. LC 76-19089. $15.95. TECH

The engineering ups and downs of Chrysler and Imperial are examined in this probing study. It is a detailed history, not of the corporation, but of the two cars that made the Chrysler name synonymous with engineering mastery. The author, a Chrysler aficionado, has talked at great length with those responsible for the cars, and with an open mind has written a book depicting the elements of engineering and design during the years of progress and success (1946-1948, 1955-1957), the years of decline and lackluster products (1949-1954, 1958-1959), and finally the years (1960-1964) when Chrysler began to show signs of improvement and former greatness. Production figures, prices, and specifications for each model are included. Strictly for car buffs and essential for auto collections.—Joy Hastings, Santiago Lib. System, Orange County, Calif.

REPRINT TITLES

Graupe: Identification of Systems	287 pp.	15.50
Levens: Graphical Methods in Research	217 pp.	11.50
Nahi: Estimation Theory and Applications	280 pp.	17.75
Wasow: Asymptotic Expansions	362 pp.	20.00
Weinberg: Network Analysis and Synthesis	708 pp.	24.50

KRIEGER PUBLISHING CO., INC.

P.O. Box 542
Huntington, N.Y. 11743

Social Science

Bane, Mary Jo. Here To Stay: American families in the twentieth century.

Basic Bks. Nov. 1976. 224p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-465-02927-2. $10.95. SOC SCI

Most sociologists believe that the American nuclear family is on the way out. Relying heavily upon demographic data, Bane proposes the opposite—that nuclear families with strong parental–child bonds are "here to stay." She litters a pedestrian Part 1 with statistics purporting to prove that concepts of the extended family of the past and the increased transiency and vulnerability of the contemporary family are myths. In Part 2, "Commitments in Conflict," Bane stresses family privacy versus government programs (including proposed "lifetime" social insurance to cover childhood costs), and here she relies less on numbers and is more provocative. Her book is not nearly as comprehensive as the standard text, Ruth Cavan's The American Family (Crowell, 1969. 4th. ed.), and it lacks the world-wide perspective of Edward Shorter's The Making of the Modern Family (LJ 2/1/76). In a limited way Here To Stay offers the undergraduate a supplementary source and an alternative to the currently held view of the American family.—Phyllis R. Poses, Queens Borough P.L., New York

Caudill, Harry M. The Watches of the Night.

Atlantic: Little. 1976. 275p. LC 76-15579. ISBN 0-316-13218-7. $8.95. SOC SCI

Caudill's Night Comes to the Cumberlands (LJ 7/63) focused the nation's attention on the plight of eastern Kentucky, plundered by coal-mining interests while its people were tragically left apart from national prosperity. The first and best section of his new book is an account of the results of that attention. There was an avalanche of private charity and saturation media coverage. Innovative social programs of the Kennedy–Johnson years lasted until their destruction by local and national political powers when they threatened to succeed too well. Idealistic students drawn from many parts of the country developed local history and culture. Later chapters of the book focus on particular aspects of the area's recent history, with some pre-1962 background and broader social commentary included. Here Caudill describes the vicissitudes of the coal industry, further development of the welfare system, and changes in education programs. He is at his best as a chronicler of the people and land he knows and loves so well. Less convincing are passages in which he depicts eastern Kentucky as a microcosm demonstrating the decline of American society as a whole.—Anne Richter, "Library Journal"

Condon, Kaye. The Complete Guide to Mobile Homes.

Dolphin: Doubleday. 1976. 136p. illus. by Lowren West. index. LC 75-30459. ISBN 0-385-03807-0. pap. $4.95. TECH/SOC SCI

The construction of mobile homes is discussed, and tips on how to find a well-built home are offered along with typical floor plans. Advice is given on financing and consumer protection. The Guide also offers information on how to move the home and select a location for temporary or permanent residence. Even landscaping and interior decoration are covered. For a person considering buying a mobile home, this comprehensive and heavily illustrated book will provide fast and informative reading.—Gerard Cullen, Datapoint Business Computers, San Antonio, Tex.

Form, William H. Blue-Collar Stratification: autoworkers in four countries.

Princeton Univ. Pr. 1976. 335p. bibliog. index. LC 75-17425. ISBN 0-691-09366-0. $17.50. LABOR/SOC SCI

How do the technology of society and the factory influence workers' involvements in social systems, both inside and outside the factory, which tie into working-class social movements? To answer this complex question Form conducted a comparative study of skilled, semiskilled, and unskilled workers in automobile plants in the U.S., Italy, Argentina, and India. He provides data on such phenomena as variations in the social strata from which workers are recruited at different stages of industrialization, differences in career and generational mobility, rural–urban background differences in occupational adaptation and social-system involvement, the social effects of technology, class solidarity, and the internal stratification of the working class. Numerous hypotheses are developed, tested, and interpreted in terms of various different approaches to understanding industrialization. The results are often surprising, and call into question many of the theories of previous scholars, including Marx. This careful, cautiously interpreted study is highly recommended for appropriate professional libraries and large collections.—Morris A. Forslund, Dept. of Sociology, Univ. of Wyoming, Laramie

Grinspoon, Lester & James B. Bakalar. Cocaine: a drug and its social evolution.

Basic Bks. Nov. 1976. 416p. bibliog. index. $15. MED/SOC SCI

Grinspoon is author of The Speed Culture (LJ 7/75) and coauthor of Marihuana Reconsidered (LJ 7/71). In this new work on cocaine, he and Bakalar address the nonspecialist, and manage to maintain a high level of sophistication. They cover the historical, sociological, pharmacological, physiological, psychological, and legal aspects of the use of cocaine. Although less polemical than Thomas Szasz in his Ceremonial Chemistry (LJ 12/15/74), Grinspoon and Bakalar adopt a similar position regarding the need to deemphasize the problem of illicit drug use and to focus on the social problems creating the phenomenon. The main evidence they cite for this view is the irrational basis on which drugs are determined to be "problem drugs." The authors' attempt at objectivity does not cause them to minimize cocaine's "potential toxic physical effects and disruptive effect on behavior." The information this book conveys is not new; still, it is exceptionally well documented—sources as diverse as creative fiction, professional literature, and personal interviews are included—and there is an excellent bibliography as well as notes. It compares favorably to an earlier work on the same subject, Richard Ashley's Cocaine (LJ 2/1/75). General academic libraries as well as more specialized research collections should consider this work for purchase.—Frances Groen, McGill Univ. Lib., Montreal, Canada

SOCIAL SCIENCE

Morris, Monica B. An Excursion into Creative Sociology.

Columbia Univ. Pr. Nov. 1976. 192p. bibliog. ISBN 0-231-03987-5. $10. SOC SCI

This timely and readable book has a laudable purpose: to move the so-called "humanistic" school of sociological theory to the center stage of the discipline. Included are edifying discussions of phenomenology, ethnomethodology, various schools of existential sociology, and the works of such scholars as Alfred Schutz, Peter Berger, and Erving Goffman. This book will be a welcome addition to the libraries of professional sociologists as well as advanced students in the field; however, some may be frustrated by its haphazard organization.—Egon Mayer, Dept. of Sociology, Brooklyn Coll.

Otten, Jane & Florence D. Shelley. When Your Parents Grow Old.

F. & W., dist. by Crowell. 1976. 224p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-308-10256-8. $8.95. SOC SCI

It is impossible not to compare this book with Barbara Silverstone and Helen Hyman's You and Your Aging Parent (LJ 10/15/76). Both books are directed to the same subject and cover much the same ground. There the similarity ends. Although Otten and Shelley have touched all the important bases, their presentation of material tends to be simplistic and often superficial. The book lacks the depth and expertise that distinguishes You and Your Aging Parent. In addition to this major weakness (which can be seen in the handling of chapters on parent/adult child relationships), the book's organization promotes repetitiveness, the authors' style is pedestrian, and occasionally infelicitous, and there are errors in citation. All in all, the work does not achieve the status of the standard reference guide that it was intended to be. Fortunately, others are available.—Mary J. Mayer, New York City Dept. for the Aging

Stephens, Joyce. Loners, Losers, and Lovers: elderly tenants in a slum hotel.

Univ. of Washington Pr. 1976. 118p. bibliog. LC 75-40874. ISBN 0-295-95494-9. $8.95. SOC SCI

Sociologist Stephens was a participant–observer of the 118 elderly residents of an urban slum hotel in a midwestern city—97 men, 11 women, average age 67, oldest 91. These men and women have developed a life style based on independence, privacy, and freedom. It is a bleak life, hard, lonely, dangerous, in which personal intimacies or commitments are suspiciously shunned. The one thing these permanent tenants do share is hostility to outsiders, especially to social workers. Nursing homes, which they term "play pens," are the final humiliation. Stephens was able to overcome their suspicion and gain acceptance as a person who was there to write a book, to fulfill requirements for her Ph.D. degree. The experience became an intellectual and emotional adventure and shattered the stereotype of the old as helpless and dependent. Stephens writes with empathy and admiration for these old people who have adapted to a life which, however difficult, permits them to remain free. Recommended for sociologists and for general readers.—Marian Petrow, formerly with Queens Borough P.L., New York

Wagenvoord, James. City Lives.

Holt. 1976. 244p. photogs. by the author. LC 75-21492. ISBN 0-03-015131-7. $12.95; pap. ISBN 0-03-015126-0. $7.95. PHOTOG/SOC SCI

What is it like actually to live in a city? Millions of Americans already know (and would probably recognize themselves in this book at some point), while millions of others have probably made a distorted guess. Through extended narratives by numerous New York City residents, along with many photographs, Wagenvoord attempts to define the kinds and qualities of life in a city's myriad neighborhoods. The seemingly arbitrary selection of interviewees may make the work questionable from a sociological point of view, but it allows a flavor of city lives to come across vividly. Economics, politics, crime, are vague and oppressive backdrops against which we see these city dwellers searching, and frequently finding, a sense of community, a sense of home. The photographs mix with and illustrate the text quite well. A natural for any city library, though its appeal should be much broader.—Thomas D. Bedell, Editor, "Valley Stream MAILeader," N.Y.

Wepman, Dennis & others. The Life: the lore and folk poetry of the black hustler.

Univ. of Pennsylvania Pr. 1976. (Folklore & Folklife Series). 216p. bibliog. index. LC 76-12047. ISBN 0-8122-7710-4. $15; pap. ISBN 0-8122-1089-1. $5.95.

FOLKLORE/CULTURAL STUDY

"The Life" refers to the unique style of the black subculture involved in inner-

Continuum Books

Gentle Asylum
Life At a Mental Hospital
by Isabelle Andersen
An extraordinary work of documentary fiction, by a psychiatric social worker, provides an inside look at the people who populate the wards and administrative offices of our mental hospitals.
November • 0-8164-9292-1 • $8.95 • LC 76-23426

Living In a Nursing Home
A Guide for Residents, Their Families, and Friends
by Sarah Green Burger and Martha D'Erasmo
Two registered nurses give clear and practical advice on how to cope with the human, medical, legal, and financial problems involved in nursing home placement or living. ". . . I heartily recommend this book."—Senator Walter F. Mondale, member of Senate Committee on Aging and Subcommittee on Long-Term Care
November • 0-8164-9294-8 • $8.95 • LC 76-17890

To Your Health
The Pleasures, Problems and Politics of Alcohol by Richard S. Shore, M.D. and John M. Luce, M.D.
A controversial and provocative study of alcoholism and its effects that disputes the popular concept of alcoholism as a physical and psychological disease.
November • 0-8164-9298-0 • $11.95 • LC 76-16050

THE SEABURY PRESS
25 years
of publishing service
815 Second Avenue
New York, N.Y. 10017

city drug pushing, prostitution, and confidence games. This volume examines The Life through its "literature" of toasts—an oral tradition of vernacular poetry, a true folk literature. Included here are toasts taken down in shorthand by one of the editors while serving time in New York prisons during the 1950's and 1960's. Analytical introductory material examines the toasts from sociological and linguistic viewpoints. The toasts themselves are fascinating, and serve to flesh out academic portraits of this urban subculture. Recommended for public and secondary school libraries, as well as for university collections in the behavioral sciences and American literature.—Susan Phillis Kucsma, formerly with Metropolitan Applied Research Center, New York

Wigginton, Eliot, ed. & intro. I Wish I Could Give My Son a Wild Raccoon.

Anchor: Doubleday. Nov. 1976. 368p. illus. ISBN 0-385-12287-X. $10; pap. ISBN 0-385-11391-9. $4.95. SOC SCI

Though conceived and edited by the teacher of Foxfire fame, this is not another collection of Appalachian folk crafts and anecdotes. Rather, Wigginton views these interviews of elderly people conducted principally by young students as "an opportunity for our grandparents to speak their piece from their own perspective." An impressive range of cultures, careers, and philosophies are represented in the 40-odd two-to-five page interviews selected. Those surveyed include an Eskimo woman, a slave's daughter, a few cowboys, and a Creole swamp man and former alligator hunter. These are "little people"—not rich, educated, powerful, or unusually fortunate. In expressing their experience, they're animated, frequently enlightening; in diagnosing today's ills, remarkably of one mind, though sometimes cranky and tedious. Disconcerting is Wigginton's failure to describe criteria he used in selecting and editing "the best" interviews for publication: for example, one can't help wondering why talk of race and ethnicity appears only in the societal critiques of minority-group members and immigrants. Recommended for school and public libraries.—Christine M. Roysdon, Lehigh Univ. Lib., Bethlehem, Pa.

"A devastating portrait of a welfare client... The book should lift poverty out of the limbo of statistics by involving readers with real human beings."

—Publishers Weekly

"Very well written, this book will be useful for social scientists and can be recommended for most libraries." —Library Journal

$6.95 ISBN 0-395-24505-2

A Welfare Mother

by SUSAN SHEEHAN

Introduction by Michael Harrington

Houghton Mifflin Company

2 Park St., Boston, Mass. 02107

Law & Criminology

Deming, Richard. Women: the new criminals.

Thomas Nelson. 1976. 160p. index. ISBN 0-8407-6513-4. $6.95. CRIME

The subject of this book is the increasing number of violent crimes committed by women. The author explains the rise by saying, reasonably, that the breakdown of sex-role stereotypes has also extended to the criminal world. However, the work is an obvious attempt to exploit the interest in women's studies. It is trivial, full of misinformation, unsubstantiated assertions, and irrelevant material. It is also poorly written. While there is usable information in this small book, it is surrounded by so much filler that it is not a worthwhile purchase.—Cynthia Harrison, formerly with Brooklyn P.L.

Harris, Richard. Freedom Spent.

Little. 1976. 391p. ISBN 0-316-34824-4. $12.95. LAW

The author is unquestionably the finest journalistic interpreter of American legal and constitutional politics, as was evidenced by two previous estimable works, Justice (LJ 4/15/70) and Decision (LJ 4/15/71). Here the power of those masterful efforts is somewhat diluted because the targets of his (well-taken) indignation are more diffuse. Stories of grand jury, Senate investigative, and local school board abuses of power are compellingly told from the victims' perspectives. Although marred by some platitudinizing, the tales exemplify the distance between national ideals and realities. Perhaps official stupidity and a general social disregard for civil liberties are more important in this context than governmental venality, contrary to Harris' thesis. Yet, the result, though less than completely satisfying, is a well-written, highly recommended, passionate defense of freedom by an eminent author who has become sensitized to its fragility not only in contemporary affairs but throughout history.—Isidore Silver, Dept. of History, John Jay Coll. of Criminal Justice, CUNY

Kessler, Gail. Judgment: a case of medical malpractice.

Mason/Charter. Nov. 1976. 164p. ISBN 0-88405-371-7. $7.95. MED/LAW

This is the history, presented through interviews, hospital records, letters, and trial transcripts, of the successful suing of Dr. C. C. McReynolds, an orthopedic surgeon, by Betty Burke, who had endured two operations for a slipped disk, but had become a paraplegic. Although Kessler claims impartiality, she clearly sides with Burke; and since the case was not clear-cut, this prejudice flaws an otherwise interesting work. At its best, Judgment shows how difficult the question of malpractice is, how tedious case preparations and trials can be, and how such factors as sympathy and well-spoken witnesses can outshine actual facts. The danger is that many people may be encouraged by this case to sue, even with somewhat flimsy evidence, and to expect a large settlement. Still, Judgment makes the complex issues of medical malpractice accessible to general readers.—Frances S. Worthington, formerly with P.L. of Nashville & Davidson County, Tenn.

Scaduto, Anthony. Scapegoat: the lonesome death of Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

Putnam. Nov. 1976. 592p. ISBN 0-399-11660-5. $12.50. CRIME

Scaduto presents the Lindbergh kidnapping case in a new light and maintains that Hauptmann was convicted on the basis of insufficient and manufactured evidence. He suggests several other people as the possible kidnappers, basing his arguments on information from an underworld figure, Hauptmann's wife, material from police and prosecution files, and other sources. If the author had provided illustrations and a better-organized presentation, he would have made a stronger case. Because of the continuing interest in the subject, this will be popular with readers of true crime, but George Waller's Kidnap (LJ 9/15/61) remains the best book on the subject.—Sandra K. Smith, Serra Cooperative Lib. System, San Diego P.L.

Stanley, David T. Prisoners Among Us: the problem of parole.

Brookings. 1976. 205p. bibliog. index. LC 75-44506. ISBN 0-8157-8106-7. $9.95; pap. ISBN 0-8157-8105-9. $3.95. CORRECTIONS

Stanley's critical study evaluates the decisions and methods of parole and the means by which 60,000 convicts each year are released and supervised. He finds that parole boards are uncertain of standards for release, hasty in making decisions, and neglectful of the rights of prisoners. Once released, the parolee comes under the scrutiny of the parole officer, who must tread the fine line between policing the parolee and helping him rejoin society. Concurring with the findings of Andrew Von Hirsch's Doing Justice (LJ 2/15/76), Stanley suggests determinate prison sentences and an end to the idiosyncrasies of parole—but only if more rational and humane sentences are established.

This review of parole comes at a time when the entire criminal justice system is being reevaluated; the findings here could be useful in establishing remedies.—Vincent P. Schmidt, Cumberland Trail Lib. System, Flora, Ill.

Waller, Leslie. Hide in Plain Sight.
Delacorte. 1976. 275p. LC 76-10287. ISBN 0-440-03666-6. $8.95. LAW ENFORCEMENT
This is an absorbing story of a near-fatal casualty in the government's "war" against organized crime. In order to safeguard the "new" identity of an informant in a crucial prosecution, the Justice Department refused to permit a father access to his children. While this callous disregard of the moral (if not the legal) rights of the sympathetically portrayed victim is shocking, the answers to the numerous problems posed by this peculiar case are not simplistic. The book works best as a primer on how law enforcers "make" Mafia cases, a depressing confirmation of the FBI's failures, a conjectural essay on why John Mitchell "blew" 600 prosecutions (the former Attorney General disobeyed the requirements of a wiretap statute), and a gripping human-interest story. However, the views of honest and thoughtful cops and U.S. attorneys grappling with some of the dilemmas inherent in organized crime cases, rather than the author's concluding fulminations, would have been helpful.—Isidore Silver, Dept. of History, John Jay Coll. of Criminal Justice, CUNY

SPORTS & RECREATION

Bear, Reudi. Pianta Su: ski like the best.
Sports Illustrated: Little. Nov. 1976. 159p. illus. bibliog. ISBN 0-316-08550-2. $9.95. SPORTS
This book is devoted to the technique of ski racing. It is addressed to skiers from the advanced intermediate level up through the international competition level, and it contains excellent sections on mental and physical preparation for races. Many photographs illustrate the text. Recommended for libraries serving a sizable number of proficient skiers, otherwise the money would be better spent for a more general book on the subject.—Janice Marie Zinkl, Downers Grove P.L., Ill.

Bengtsson, Hans & George Atkinson. Orienteering for Sport and Pleasure.
Stephen Greene. 1976. 192p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-41872. ISBN 0-8289-0271-2. $9.95; pap. ISBN 0-8289-0270-4. $5.95. SPORTS
The authors define orienteering as "the art of navigating through an unknown area using a map and compass as guide." This sport can be applied to other sports such as backpacking, hiking, skiing, canoeing, or bicycling; and it can be enjoyed by everyone who is interested in outdoor sports. This comprehensive book can answer all the questions you have about orienteering. It includes a history of the sport; information on basic skills, techniques, training, clothing, and equipment; a list with Lippincott's outstanding how-to books for every sports collection.

LIPPINCOTT

GO FISHING

Just published

FLY TACKLE
A Guide to the Tools of the Trade
Harmon Henkin
"Probably the most exhaustive examination of fly fishing tackle that I have ever come across." —Roderick Haig-Brown.
"A one-of-a-kind and long over due book. Henkin names brand names and rates products without the usual false diplomacy.... He really tells all." —Leonard Wright. With 100 drawings, $9.95 LC 75-18644 ISBN 01072-9

FLY-RODDING FOR BASS
A.D. Livingston
"All you need to know about tackle, lures, habits and habitat.... Recommended for libraries, especially those serving unfortunate anglers who aren't near a trout stream."
—Library Journal. With 75 illustrations, $8.95
LC 75-38710 ISBN 01112

Also available

ADVANCED BASS TACKLE AND BOATS
A.D. Livingston
Illustrated, $9.95
LC 75-15557 ISBN 01100-8

FISHING FOR BASS
Modern Tactics and Tackle
A.D. Livingston
Illustrated, $8.95
LC 74-8026 ISBN 01017-6

FLY CASTING WITH LEFTY KREH
Lefty Kreh
Planned by Hermann Kessler; Sequence photographs by Irv Swope. Illustrated, $8.95
LC 73-16374 ISBN 00999-2

SALT WATER FLIES
Kenneth Bay
Sequence photos by Hermann Kessler. Illustrated, $8.95
LC 72-6109 ISBN 00939-9

SPORTS ILLUSTRATED FLY FISHING
Vernon S. Hildy and the Editors of Sports Illustrated
Illustrated, $4.95 hardcover
LC 74-38908 ISBN 00859-7
$1.95 paperback ISBN 00858-9

THE WAY OF A TROUT
R.P. van Gytenbeek
Illustrated, $8.95
LC 72-6146 ISBN 00872-4

WILD RIVER
Text and color photographs by Lawrence Pringle $15.00
LC 78-39756 ISBN 00811-2

Lippincott's ISBN prefix is 0-397.

J. B. Lippincott Company
East Washington Square
Philadelphia, Pa. 19105

of orienteering organizations; and a glossary. A good complement to any backpacking or camping collection.—Carl Cox, Indian Valley Coll. Lib., Novato, Calif.

Berloquin, Pierre. 100 Numerical Games.

152p. drawings by Denis Dugas. LC 76-21996. ISBN 0-684-14668-1. $7.95.

Jargocki, Christopher P. Science Brain-Twisters, Paradoxes, and Fallacies.

183p. illus. by Richard Liu. index. LC 75-31596. ISBN 0-684-14532-4. $9.95.

ea. vol: Scribners. 1976. SCI/GAMES

100 Numerical Games is a collection of mathematical recreations with good formulations of problems on rate and motion, mixture, weighing, etc. The best problems are the author's original compositions in alphanumerics and those on "How many ways can you read . . .?" Solutions show how to arrive at all answers, except, regrettably, for magic squares. No index, no table of contents, and no titles or name tags for the games are serious omissions. However, the book's contents are good, and there is a wealth of delightful illustrations.

Science Brain-Twisters is an assortment of 169 hypothetical and practical questions with solutions. Questions include "Why are golf balls dimpled?" and "Why is it that when you look at a neon sign red letters seem closer than blue or green ones?" Some of the questions have been asked before, but many new ones make this collection valuable. Puzzles range in difficulty, but none are beyond the general reader. Questions are arranged by topic (liquids and gases, spaceship Earth, armchair athletics, etc.), and an excellent index is provided.—Robert H. True, Columbia Univ. Libs.

Blackstone, Harry, Jr. There's One Born Every Minute.

Tarcher, dist. by Hawthorn. 1976. 149p. ed. by Leo Behnke. illus. LC 76-10508. ISBN 0-87477-056-4. $5.95. RECREATION

The punster in many of us will enjoy this magician's collection of parlor tricks, with which we can offend our friends' pride and pocketbooks. Although the tricks vary substantially in complexity they have in common a wager that you, as "teacher," can perform some highly unlikely feat. The feats range from pushing a quarter through a dime-sized hole in a piece of paper to some feats requiring the use of advanced math concepts. In each case the description of the deception clearly illustrates how to carry it off. Written with a deft, economical touch, the book will be a source of pleasure for amateur entertainers of all ages.—Milton E. Mitchell, Oshkosh P.L., Wis.

Brondfield, Jerry. Rockne: the coach, the man, the legend.

Random. Nov. 1976. 258p. ISBN 0-394-40145-X. $8.95. BIOG/SPORTS

Although the recent image of Knute Rockne is that of the Pat O'Brien movie role, he was actually a genius of many parts who was cut down in his prime. Brondfield, author of Woody Hayes and the 100-Yard War (LJ 10/15/74), presents a warmly admiring view of a titan whose winning record was perhaps the greatest of any college football coach. Enjoyable reading for YA and adult football fans Rockne is enthusiastically recommended.—Morey Berger, Monmouth County Lib., Freehold, N.J.

Churchill, Peter. The Sporting Horse.

Arco. 1976. 121p. illus., some color. index. LC 75-29901. ISBN 0-668-03925-6. $9.95. SPORTS

This book covers hunting, steeplechasing, endurance events, dressage, flat racing, show jumping, polo, trotting and pacing, and rodeo. It deals primarily with British events with the exception of the brief chapter on rodeo. The coverage is superficial and a few errors appear—the U.S. thoroughbred Riva Ridge appears in text and index as "Riva Bridge," many U.S. champion horses are not mentioned, and even Secretariat gets only one line and a small picture. The photographs are excellent and are the book's strongest point; but with its sketchy treatment and heavy British emphasis, it will not be a necessary purchase for most libraries. For comprehensive collections only.—Susan Ebershoff-Coles, Indianapolis-Marion Co. P.L., Ind.

The Diagram Group. Enjoying Gymnastics.

Paddington Pr.: Two Continents. 1976. 159p. illus. index. LC 76-3810. ISBN 0-8467-0141-3. pap. $3.95. SPORTS

It is difficult to determine the purpose of this book. It is not a good instructional book as it lacks continuity and includes many irrelevant items. There aren't sufficient skill analyses or technique hints to significantly assist the teacher or gymnast. Topics such as gymnastic history, kinesiological principles, sports and pastimes using gymnastic skills, simple activities, basic equipment, judging, the 1976 Olympic compulsory exercises, and home exercises are all dutifully included. Several people were involved in producing this book, and trying to determine their rationale for the manner of presentation or the relationship among the various sections will tax the skill of every reader.—Kenneth Tillman, Dept. of Health & Physical Education, Trenton State Coll., N.J.

Greenfield, Jeff. The World's Greatest Team: a portrait of the Boston Celtics, 1957-69.

Sport Magazine Bk: Random. 202p. Nov. 1976. $7.95. SPORTS

Greenfield makes his claim for the Celtics as "the greatest team in the history of American professional spectator sports": neither an original observation nor a particularly startling pronunciation in view of overwhelming statistical evidence. Some interesting human interest material and insider "gossip" concerns Red Auerbach and the various personalities he molded into the Boston "team" tradition that endures despite the predominant NBA "superstar" image. Pedantic prose weakens Greenfield's storytelling ability. The book's last section, "Aftermath," does trace the players' current activities with poignant touches. Recommended for basketball fanatics and libraries that have space and funds for "another Celtics book" on the shelf next to Joe Fitzgerald's That Championship Feeling (LJ 10/1/75) and Tommy Heinsohn's own Heinsohn, Don't You Ever Smile? (LJ 5/15/76).—Gregory S. Sojka, Dept. of English, Bowling Green State Univ.

Iseman, Jay. Play Paddle: an introduction to platform tennis.

Dutton. 1976. 144p. illus. index. LC 76-7078. ISBN 0-87690-217-4. pap. $5.95. SPORTS

This book provides complete coverage of another of America's fast-growing sports. Included are instructions on how to play; information on techniques, strategy, and etiquette; a history of paddle tennis, official rules, a glossary, and dozens of good photos. Recommended for all sports collections.—Howard R. Downey, Bellingham P.L., Wash.

The Jumbo Book of Magic.

Drake. 1976. 320p. ed. by Magic Magazine Editorial Board. illus. LC 76-21174. ISBN 0-8473-1194-5. pap. $4.95. RECREATION

This is an outdated book, with one "trick" using the "fact" that all $1 bills in circulation are dated 1935 and another entitled "Making a Nazi Cross." In addition, it doesn't give complete instructions for performing a number of the tricks, and therefore the reader must refer to other sources. David H. Charney's Magic (LJ 8/75), Frank Garcia and George Schindler's Magic with Cards (LJ 5/1/75), and Schindler's Magic with Everyday Objects (LJ 5/15/76) are all preferable. Not recommended.—Ann Zaeske, Anheuser-Busch Lib., St. Louis

Keane, Martin J. Classic Rods and Rodmakers.

Winchester, dist. by Scribners. 1976. 240p. color illus. index. LC 76-23293. ISBN 0-87691-178-5. $15. SPORTS

The design, construction, and evolution of the hand-built fly rod in North America has been a neglected, if not ignored, area of study. It is fitting that an excellent book such as this should be published at a time when cane rods are making a well-deserved comeback among discriminating anglers. Keane has been admirably thorough, dealing with the major American rod makers of the 19th and 20th centuries. His historical research is impressive and will help collectors and others with manufacturing data, dates, locations, and names. The identification of early rods should now become a less impossible chore. There is no other title with which Keane's book may be compared; this is the first trade book dedicated entirely to the subject of master rod craftsmen on this continent. As such, it is an important reference work for most libraries and is recommended for all general collections. (Photos not seen by reviewer.)—John A. Moldenhauer, Univ. of Guelph Lib., Ontario, Canada

Klobuchar, Jim & Fran Tarkenton. Tarkenton.

Harper. 1976. 224p. illus. ISBN 0-06-012412-1. $9.95. SPORTS

A well-written, revealing, honest, and intelligent sports book. Klobuchar tells about Tarkenton's football career with the Minnesota Vikings and the New York Giants. Tarkenton supplies many anecdotes about some great figures in sports, including Joe Namath and Howard Cosell, and reveals many humorous stories of incidents involving his fellow players. There are some good character sketches of coaches Norm Van Brocklin, Alex Webster, and Bud Grant, and Tarkenton's behind-the-scenes descriptions of football strategy during the Super Bowl are excellent. His philosophy of preparing for the future by looking beyond football and achieving security for his family is inspiring and instructional. Highly recommended.—Ronald F. Ritter, Davidson County P.L., Lexington, N.C.

Linehan, Don. Soft Touch.

Acropolis. 1976. 100p. illus. by David Brandon. $12.50; pap. $5.95. SPORTS

This work is a unique effort to impress everyone, from the fledgling basketball player to the 80-year-old fan, with the inspiration of the game of basketball. There is little narrative. This is a book of fascinating illustrations accompanied by pertinent as well as poignant statements. It touches on several aspects of the game, from a typical youngster's first effort on a basketball court to the inner thoughts of a professional player. This work should not be considered an in-depth how-to book. It is really just a brief "scenic tour" of one of the nation's largest spectator sports.—David B. Walch, SUNY at Buffalo

Miller, Johnny with Dale Shankland. Pure Golf.

Doubleday. Nov. 1976. illus., some color. ISBN 0-385-11143-6. $12.50. SPORTS

Miller's instructional book has been much discussed and anticipated in the golfing press, and has turned out to be well worth the wait. Covering all phases of the game—from club selection and swing development through planning one's shots, putting, and coping with traps—the book is notable for its clarity and thoroughness. Miller has aimed his book at golfers at all levels of development, and all will find something here of value. I didn't see the illustrations; but if they are up to the level of the text, the book must be wholeheartedly recommended for all sports collections.—Don Marion, Univ. of Minnesota Libs., Minneapolis

Newell, Pete & Dan Berger. Basketball: the sports playbook.

Doubleday. 1976. 114p. illus. by Tony Pannoni. photogs. LC 75-40737. ISBN 0-385-06044-0. pap. $2.95. SPORTS

Newell, who has enjoyed a long career of coaching and is now general manager of the Los Angeles Lakers, has written a book (with the aid of Berger) on the fundamental strategies of coaching and playing basketball. The approach and style will aid coaches at all levels and will provide beginning players with a better understanding of the game. As one might expect, the book includes a discussion of the basic offensive and defensive tactics and fundamentals. Brief but interesting chapters on the press, jump balls, and intentional fouling are also included. This work compares favorably with the number of books that have been published on coaching techniques. It may lack the personal appeal of John Wooden's Practical Modern Basketball (Ronald, 1966) and the comprehensive nature of the dated "Bee-Norton Basketball" series, but it does provide a sound fundamental approach to coaching and playing techniques. And the price is right.—David B. Walch, SUNY at Buffalo

Nideffer, Robert M. The Inner Athlete: mind plus muscle for winning.

Crowell. 1976. 256p. LC 76-8894. ISBN 0-690-00961-5. $8.95. SPORTS

Nideffer, a clinical psychologist as well as a former NCAA champion athlete, has had considerable experience in counseling athletes on improved performance through mental preparation. In this work, he first demonstrates how the mind is closely allied with the body in athletic performance. Then he explains the factors of stress, anxiety, and level of arousal and discusses their varying influence on particular sports. A brief version of Nideffer's test to predict mental performance in athletic competition is given so that the reader may assess his/her own abilities. Almost one half of the book is devoted to the explanation of methods (such as hypnosis, self-induced relaxation, transcendental meditation, mental rehearsal, and biofeedback) for increasing mental performance. A definite asset to physical education or sports collections.—Kenneth Tracy, Oklahoma State Univ. Lib., Stillwater

Pachman, Ludek. Complete Chess Strategy 2: principles of pawn-play and the center.

Doubleday. 1976. 183p. tr. by John Littlewood. illus. index. LC 76-354. ISBN 0-385-12195-4. $9.95. GAMES

Like Pachman's Complete Chess Strategy 1 (LJ 2/15/76), this volume does not present a new approach, but rather it is a sound exposition of existing play. The technique of instruction is also quite normal, that is, a brief explanation of the principles and problems involved followed by annotated examples of those principles as found in the games of grandmasters (mostly European). Although these games and their explanations cover every aspect of pawn play, this volume is neither a manual of openings, nor an explanation of opening theory. The guiding principles for pawn moves from the middle game onward are Pachman's main concern. The final third of the book is devoted to the various theories concerning the control of the center board. For those who wish to have a well-rounded chess library this volume is an excellent addition.—Harold L. Bogart, Lake Havasu City Lib. Ariz.

Roberts, Michael. Fans! how we go crazy over sports.

New Republic, dist. by Dutton. Nov. 1976. c. 200p. index. ISBN 0-915220-20-2. $8.95. SPORTS

At last a sports book different from most others. Not so much a book about sports per se, it deals with the weird and wacky ways in which athletes and

RECOMMENDED

"[The] football greats who played in that momentous 1958 NFL Championship Game between the Giants and the Colts . . . look back on the fearsome action and flow of the contest that propelled pro football into national prominence. Klein's portraits of these men are clear, honest, and completely unmuddled by hero worship and sentimentality. An exceptionally well-done sports book."
—Library Journal

ISBN: 0-394-40923-X
LC: 76-14177 $7.95

THE GAME OF THEIR LIVES
by DAVE KLEIN

RANDOM HOUSE
201 E 50th St New York 10022

RECOMMENDED

NEW REPUBLIC BOOKS suggests

"An iconoclastic and sometimes hilarious sports book with a difference. Sports writer Roberts sees that sports can be the stimulus of a type of mass aberration, and that is his theme.... Refreshing, eye-opening and entertaining."
—Publishers Weekly

FANS!
How We Go Crazy Over Sports
by Michael Roberts
ISBN 0-915220-20-2 $8.95
Distributed by E. P. Dutton & Co

fans sometimes act and/or react. Roberts looks at product endorsements, the commercialization and worship of sports heroes, and the manner in which sports fans have made "superhumans out of superjocks." The book is refreshing, revealing, and humorous. Highly recommended.—Howard R. Downey, Bellingham P.L., Wash.

Sumner, Robert. Make Your Own Camping Equipment.

Drake. 1976. 168p. illus. LC 76-1205. ISBN 0-8473-1152-X. pap. $6.95. CRAFTS/RECREATION

A good how-to guide to making lightweight camping equipment. Information on how to evaluate the materials needed to make elemental equipment and on where to purchase such materials adds to the book's value. The pattern and assembly instructions are thorough, although the beginning sewer might need to practice before starting an actual item. General sewing techniques, such as types of zipper installation, are given in a basic chapter and not repeated for each pattern. Information given in the pattern section includes list of materials needed, cutting layout, piece dimensions, and general assembly techniques. A reasonable guide for anyone with an interest in making good, basic equipment.—Barbara Schultz, formerly with VA Hospital Lib., Sepulveda, Calif.

Tang, Peter P. The New Manual of Kung Fu.

Arco. Nov. 1976. 109p. illus. LC 75-13890. ISBN 0-668-03851-9. $7.95. SPORTS

Who is Tang and what qualifications does he have to write this manual for the "teach-yourself" student? No one will ever learn by reading this book. Neither will a student learn much from the move "sequences" of photographs that constitute the bulk of this volume. No explanation is given of how, where, or why these sequences fit into the totality of a martial art. Despite its numerous styles, karate is fairly defined and systematic, but Tang's Kung Fu remains nebulous. Those who need a good Kung Fu book will need to look elsewhere.—Harold L. Bogart, Lake Havasu City Lib., Ariz.

Telander, Rick. Joe Namath and the Other Guys.

Holt. Nov. 1976. 247p. illus. $7.95. SPORTS

Telander, a writer for Sports Illustrated and a former Kansas City Chief, spent the 1975 season as an unofficial member of the New York Jets, practicing with the team as a wide receiver. He was in a unique position to observe the players, and the result is a broad look at how they reacted to the team's worst season. The title provides an accurate indication of the book's emphasis and focus. It is no surprise that Namath is the pivot on which Telander's narrative turns. Unlike other books on the Jets, however, this is the first to explore other players' feelings toward Namath—the ambivalence of the younger players, the affection of the older ones (especially the veterans of the Super Bowl team).—Josephine A. DeLapo, Queens Borough P.L., New York

THEATER

Brown, Raymond Lamont. Phantoms of the Theatre.

Thomas Nelson. Nov. 1976. 160p. bibliog. ISBN 0-8407-6502-9. $6.95. PARAPSYCH/THEATER

If there are those who do not believe in "haunts," Brown's book will convince them of their power. He tells of haunted theaters (such as Ford's in Washington where Lincoln was assassinated), of the ghostly appearances of Harry Houdini, and of the return after death of Lilian Baylis (of the Old Vic, London). The author also relates incidents revolving around stage ghosts (e.g., those who appear on the stage as dramatis personae). The book is well written and will fascinate lovers of the supernatural. Brown's earlier works have been in the area of witchcraft and superstition, but his theater research is sound and he has dug out many fascinating tales.—Paul Myers, N.Y.P.L.

Luce, William, as produced on the stage by Mike Merrick & Don Gregory. The Belle of Amherst: a play based on the life of Emily Dickinson.

Houghton. Nov. 1976. 78p. LC 73-145912. ISBN 0-395-24980-5. $6.95. THEATER

In spite of the fact that its preface indicates a love of the subject and a sincerity of purpose on the author's part, this slight two-act play provides neither a real understanding of Dickinson and her genius nor an accurate representation of her. Moreover, Luce, who "gratefully acknowledges the inspiration gained from [Richard Sewall's] The Life of Emily Dickinson," does not seem to have benefitted significantly from that rich biography. Interspersed among the lines of the play are some of Dickinson's poems, although, with few exceptions, not her greatest ones. One point that is made rather poignantly is the disappointment she suffered at not having her poetry more widely accepted during her lifetime. But what emerges more strongly in this one-character play is a superficial, stereotyped portrait of a somewhat quaint New England spinster, an eager provider of recipes, who teases the townspeople by wearing white and by engaging in other eccentric habits. This may have been one small aspect of Dickinson, but it is, alas, not the one that makes her immortal.—Larry Earl Bone, Southwestern at Memphis Lib., Tenn.

Matthew, Brian. Stage Right: how to run an amateur group.

Transatlantic. Nov. 1976. 127p. illus. $9.95. THEATER

Practical tips for amateur theatrical producers on organization, stage management, acting voice and movement, scenery, lights, sound, make-up, and house management. Occasional information on supplies is not as useful in the U.S. as it is in Great Britain, where different manufacturers supply needed materials. Although this import offers a useful overview, a bibliography would have helped since anyone wishing to produce a play will need more information on each topic, e.g., for stagecraft—W. Oren Parker and Harvey K. Smith's Scene Design and Stage Lighting (Holt, 1974. 3d ed.); for acting—Charles J. McGaw's Acting Is Believing (Holt, 1975. 3d ed.); and for make-up—Richard Corson's Stage Makeup (Prentice-Hall, 1974. 5th ed.), to name a few in-depth studies. Nonetheless, Stage Right is a handy guide for beginners.—Helen Gregory, Albion P.L., Mich.

Cinema

Freedland, Michael. Fred Astaire.

Transatlantic. Nov. 1976. 277p. photogs. index. $8.50. BIOG/CINEMA

Freedland covers Astaire's entire career in minute detail. He tells more than some readers would really like to know, but devoted fans may relish the tales of a dedication to perfection that made Astaire a star early and still keeps him in demand today. This unauthorized book is written in a style similar to that of the movie magazines of 25 years ago before they became a census of stars' peccadilloes. It's quite trivial, but like so many of Astaire's films, it's entertaining.—Peg Holland Jesby, Haverhill P.L., Mass.

Sagan, Françoise (text) & Chislain Dussart (photogs.). Brigitte Bardot: woman from 30 to 40.

Delacorte. 1976. unpaged. tr. from French by Judith Sachs. color photogs. ISBN 0-440-00578-7. $12.95. PHOTOG/CINEMA

This collection of glossy pictures revealing Bardot's many moods attests to the glory of her beauty but fails to capture the essence of her mercurial personality despite Sagan's coyly questioning captions for the photos. All is not lost, however, since the task was accomplished long ago by Simone de Beauvoir in "Brigitte Bardot and the Lolita Syndrome," published in Esquire in 1959. This essay, along with stills, appeared as a paperback the following year in England. I mention de Beauvoir's work since the new one seems somewhat indebted to it for inspiration. And even though the older work lacks slick color stills, it is available in a reprint edition from Arno Press. For those interested in adding a work on the attractions of Bardot's eroticism to their collection I heartily recommend de Beauvoir's analysis.—Marshall Deutelbaum, Film Dept., George Eastman House, Rochester, N.Y.

Slide, Anthony. The Idols of Silence.

A. S. Barnes. 1976. 208p. illus. LC 73-125. ISBN 0-498-01611-0. $15. REF/CINEMA

At first glance The Idols of Silence looks like another in the publisher's "Films of . . ." series, both in format and in size. However, upon closer inspection, this is quite an unusual book. Slide has divided it into four sections—the first three contain biographies of 13 silent film stars and two fan magazine writers and the fourth section (and almost half the book) offers checklists for more than 100 silent film stars. The biographies are plain, brief, and to the point, not idolatrous or sensational. Slide has chosen as his subjects stars about whom not much is written. The checklists are arranged alphabetically by actor and while not definitive, would certainly be useful to any silent film scholar or buff. Most magazine listings date from early in this century and would only be available in research film collections. In addition to the reference value of this book, it is lavishly illustrated, thus making it a great browsing item. Recommended for any library with a large film reference collection or a large film-loving clientele.—Ann Cook, Prince George's County Memorial Lib. System, Greenbelt, Md.

Spiegel, Alan. Fiction and the Camera Eye: visual consciousness in film and the modern novel.

Univ. Pr. of Virginia. 1976. 203p. index. LC 75-22353. ISBN 0-8139-0598-2. $11.50.
LIT/CINEMA

Since relatively little is available on the parallelism between film and the novel, a new volume on the subject should be appreciated by libraries building a collection on film. This book does provide an intelligent examination of what the author terms the "cinematographic fiction" of Joyce, Faulkner, and others, but unfortunately discusses film itself only incidentally, and when it does, fails to support some arguable statements—e.g., that the 1967 film Ulysses is "uncinematic" (whatever that means), or that Hollywood films contain montage (juxtaposition of images) "without conflict." The epilogue is discursive, speculating on the future of the novel.—W. H. Lyles, formerly with Dept. of English, Univ. of Maryland, College Park

fiction

Bickham, Jack M. Twister.

Doubleday. Nov. 1976. ISBN 0-385-11499-0. $8.95. F

Twister examines the lives of several people during a 24-hour period when the Midwest is buffeted by more than 150 tornadoes. The characters are all familiar stereotypes—a politician who is attractive, aspiring, and adulterous; a housewife discontent and returning to college; a kid with long hair who bucks authority. And in many instances, meteorological details drag the story down. Only the tornadoes appear to have been developed with any real inspiration. Just another "man vs. nature" tale for the adult fiction shelf, if there's room.—Christine Bagley, Syracuse, N.Y.

Chase, Ilka. Dear Intruder.

Doubleday. Nov. 1976. LC 76-3925. ISBN 0-385-11195-9. $7.95. F

In this deftly written, sprightly novel, set in New York in 1969, glamorous grandmother Lettice, at 60 plus, resumes an old romance with Sir Jock, British architect in New York on business. Result, a ménage à trois, entered into with the tacit consent of Lettice's husband, whose days (or nights) of amour have passed. Equally glamorous granddaughter Tawny, Radcliffe prelaw, dallies with and eventually marries Daragh, a young Irish set designer well on his way to success in the theater. This is a delightful book, fun to read; it moves at a brisk pace to its "happily ever after" conclusion. Recommended for light fiction collections.—Agnes C. Ringer, formerly with Free Lib. of Philadelphia

Coffman, Virginia. Marsanne.

Arbor House, dist. by Dutton. 1976. 233p. LC 76-8640. ISBN 0-87795-138-1. $8.95. F

This novel, set in the time of Napoleon's exile on Elba, concerns the heroine's escapes from those who would murder her for her inheritance and her love for a mysterious Bonapartist activist. There's not enough romance to make a good love story or enough action to make a good adventure; we are left with a mediocre hybrid and a confused plot.—Melanie Axel-Lute, Montclair P.L., N.J.

Forsyth, Frederick. The Shepherd.

Viking. 1976. 128p. illus. ISBN 0-670-63969-9. $4.95. F

Forsyth has fashioned a rather charming story that takes place Christmas Eve, 1957, in the night sky over Britain, and finds a young RAF pilot mysteriously saved when it seems that his plane is going to crash. This is a short story (45 pages), expanded by capable and "moody" drawings (83 pages).—Mel D. Lane, Sacramento, Calif.

Ehrenburg, Ilya. The Life of the Automobile.

Urizen, dist. by Dutton. 1976. tr. from Russian by Joachim Neugroschel. ISBN 0-916354-06-7. $8.95; pap. ISBN 0-916354-07-5. $4.95. F

This is the first English translation of Ehrenburg's 10 HP, published in 1929 in Russian and German. It is a fictionalized reportage on the European automobile industry, Citroen factories in particular. The work has been almost forgotten, the author himself mentions it only once in his memoirs. Ehrenburg is a born journalist. His reportages are brisk, witty, and cleverly written; the intelligent and lively translation preserves these qualities. Rapid changes of scene, simultaneous development of different plots and mini-plots and close-ups of characters give the reader the sensation of watching a fascinating film. Ehrenburg's criticism of capitalism is at times clearly one-sided. However, his exposé of a civilization based on money, success, and egotism is always impressive. Surprisingly, this work has not been used in the Soviet Union as anticapitalist propaganda, perhaps because the author's satire does not spare even the New Soviet Man.—Jitka Hurych, Northern Illinois Univ. Lib., DeKalb, Ill.

Erdman, Paul E. The Crash of '79.

S. & S. 1976. ISBN 0-671-22365-8. $8.95. F

Bill Hitchcock, a retired banker, is employed by the Saudi Arabians as a financial advisor. The Saudis have been concerned that they have not been treated correctly by world bankers and Hitchcock has been hired to do something about it. In the process, he observes

UNDER GEMINI

by Rosamunde Pilcher author of Day of the Storm and Snow in April

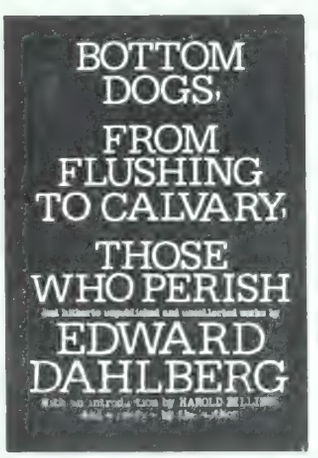
"Pilcher's latest novel is delightful escapism, sure to appeal to female romanticists"—Publishers Weekly (10/4/76) "Her most and best yet —Rosamunde Pilcher is a younger practitioner of that older form the romance....Utterly agreeable...." —Kirkus Reviews (9/15/76) 228 pp. LC 75-26192 $8.95

St. Martin's Press
175 Fifth Avenue
New York 10010

THE CROWELL CORNER



THE NOVELS OF EDWARD DAHLBERG:
Fiction of the Thirties:
BOTTOM DOGS,
FROM FLUSHING TO CALVARY,
THOSE WHO PERISH
and hitherto unpublished and uncollected works
Edward Dahlberg

"It is always vital and erudite, a rare combination, and it is work every serious student of American literature should read." – Library Journal

ISBN 0-690-01034-6
LC: 75-25715
$12.95

T. Y. Crowell
666 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10019

first hand the events of 1979 that lead to a war in the Middle East and the crash of Western economies. The book is written in the first person by Hitchcock and, as a result, is not as exciting as were Erdman's earlier books. But, specifically as a result of this device, Erdman is able to make a number of trenchant observations about world banking and the sad shape it is in. Thus, underlying all of the excitement and those byzantine complications he uses so well, Erdman has written a deadly serious book and his best.—Robert Molyneux, Virginia Polytechnic Inst. & State Univ. Lib., Blacksburg

Ertz, Susan. The Philosopher's Daughter.

Harper. Nov. 1976. 224p. ISBN 0-06-011253-0. $8.95. F

Ertz's latest romance features unsympathetic characters and an incredible, melodramatic plot. It's the story of Sybil Matherson who travels to Paris to meet her older half brother, an artist sharing a studio with his mistress and her slow-witted daughter. Despite their presumed blood relationship, Sibyl and Felix quickly fall in love. The author resolves their moral dilemma with unbelievable dispatch: Felix's true paternity is discovered and his loyal mistress shuttled off to a convenient admirer, leaving our two lovers free to wed. They deserve each other. Despite the tidy ending, this unpleasant romance remains a can of worms best left unopened.—Carol K. Carey, formerly with Dept. of Film, Museum of Modern Art, New York

García Márquez, Gabriel. The Autumn of the Patriarch.

Harper. Nov. 1976. 288p. tr. from Spanish by Gregory Rabassa. LC 75-30349. ISBN 0-06-011419-3. $10. F

The Colombian novelist's prolific imagination is very evident in this excellent translation of El otoño del patriarca (1975). The novel depicts the barbarism and squalor which surrounds the rule of a Latin American dictator. García Márquez' splendid use of hyperbole and his tongue-in-cheek portrayal of bizarre characters add subtle humor to almost every scene. This allows the reader to maintain a certain aesthetic distance from the filth and corruption of the mythical reign of terror envisioned in the novel. Interminable paragraphs, and incredibly long sentences (the entire last chapter is one sentence), make the novel difficult to follow at times. Nevertheless, the author's narrative genius makes the extra effort required worthwhile.—James J. Troiano, Dept. of Foreign Languages & Classics, Univ. of Maine at Orono

Holland, Isabelle. Grenelle.

Rawson Assocs., dist. by Atheneum. 1976. 261p. LC 76-15069. ISBN 0-89256-006-1. $8.95. F

After the slow-moving, puzzling first chapter, which defies any reader to classify the book as ordinary romantic suspense, the plot of Grenelle gains momentum, and moves to a satisfying (if predictable) conclusion. The heroine, secretary at a Virginia theological seminary founded by one of her forbears, is obsessed with the legend of her beautiful twin sister, now dead, and in love with the man her sister jilted. He happens to be the town chief of police, and is onto the schemes of a coterie of vicious drug-crazed hippies who are slaughtering small furry animals and kidnapping children. The novel betrays the author's ignorance of the youth drug culture of the late 1960's and uses the word "square" a lot. But her dialogue is intelligent and witty and the plot she weaves, delightfully melodramatic. A Gothic for all those people who try to tell you Gothics are all alike.—Joyce W. Smothers, Monmouth County Lib., Freehold, N.J.

Howatch, Joseph. Antonio, Antonia.

Houghton. 1976. 207p. LC 76-25010. ISBN 0-395-24769-1. $8.95. F

As this novel opens, Antonio and Harry are living in a coal town in Middle America and are determined to get out and make it big. Both do, and soon Antonio is a successful international entrepreneur living on a tiny and beautiful island off Italy's toe with his wife and son. Antonio is surrounded by loyal friends and family, yet a streak of jealousy causes him to blindly and bitterly turn on them; at this point the novel takes on the air of a Greek tragedy. The story spans a generation and is told by five different narrators, who each play an important role in Antonio's life. These five perspectives give the novel the depth it needs to be a convincing tragedy. The style is tight and the characters are highly individualized in this engrossing first novel.—Karen Bosch, Fresno County Free Lib., Calif.

Kircher, Susanne. A Roman Scandal: the story of Beatrice Cenci.

Mason/Charter. 1976. ISBN 0-88405-362-8. $8.95. F

Rome in the late 16th Century provides the setting for this historically based account of a decaying noble family's tragedy. Despite a sympathetic narrator and pitiable heroine, this is simply not an appealing story. Beatrice Cenci's father, a thoroughly repulsive and unscrupulous character who warps and destroys the lives of all around him dominates the tale both during his unsavory life and after his murder. The title scandal is this parricide and the subsequent trial culminating in the grisly execution of three of the four Cenci siblings. Too bleak for the historical novel aficionado, and not of sufficient literary quality to interest the serious fiction readers.—Karen Horny, Northwestern Univ. Lib., Evanston, Ill.

Moore, Barbara. The Fever Called Living.

Doubleday. Oct. 1976. ISBN 0-385-12081-8. $8.95. F

In selecting Edgar Allan Poe as the subject for a biographical novel, Moore has assured herself of a ready-made audience. She has limited her novel to the final five years of Poe's life, the New York years. Beginning with the writing of his obituary, she flashes back to events leading to his death. She does an excellent job of depicting daily life in the 1840's when the city was the tip of the island and Poe's Fordham cottage miles out in the country. The plot is built around Poe's struggles to earn enough money to buy laudanum for his child-wife who is dying of consumption and to find a backer for his proposed literary magazine. Moore does give due attention to the problems created by Poe's attractiveness for women, and by his drinking sprees. In the matter of drugs and Poe's erratic behavior, she follows A. H. Quinn, whose definitive biography attributes Poe's unsavory reputation largely to the slanders of Dr. Rufus Griswold (a would-be writer turned anthologist) and of the women Poe spurned. His book should appeal to those public library patrons who like Irving Stone or David Weiss.—Jeanne M. Butcher, Emporia P.L., Kansas

Moore, Brian. The Doctor's Wife.

Farrar. 1976. 286p. LC 76-21294. $8.95. F

In this leisurely paced narrative, Moore writes with insight of one woman's revitalization. Sheila Redden's marriage is mediocre, her husband the doctor is uncommunicative and domineering. Alone on vacation, she surprises herself by engaging in a passionate, joyful affair, scenes of which are described in graphic detail. As this relationship progresses, Sheila discovers a new, positive self-image and a feeling of rightness in pleasing herself. Sheila's affair acts as the agent of change, releasing her to face the lonely risks of her innately restless nature. A fine addition to the current field of novels that deals with women in mid-life crises.— Norma Allenbach, Buffalo & Erie County P.L., N.Y.

Murdoch, Iris. Henry and Cato.

Viking. Jan. 1977. 340p. $10. F

Again, Murdoch explores the facets of the emotion we call love, how it is bound inextricably with how we perceive our personal freedom, and its effects for good or ill. After spending nine years in America, Henry Marshalson decides to go home to England when he learns of his brother Sandy's death. He becomes reacquainted with childhood friends: Cato Forbes (a priest now), Cato's sister Colette, and a woman he mistakenly believes was Sandy's mistress. Henry feels that in order to be free and happy he must rid himself of the family estate and money, no matter how others may be hurt by this action. Murdoch's elaborately plotted novels defy summation, but be assured that in the best 19th-Century novelistic fashion she makes everything come right in the end. Along the way she has a few perceptive, funny things to say about America. About love and good and evil she is more serious, but her writing is enlivened with humor and compassion. An engrossing, satisfying novel.—Dennis Pendleton, Roanoke P.L., Va.

Oates, Joyce Carol. Childwold.

Vanguard. 1976. 320p. LC 75-18424. ISBN 0-8149-0767-9. $8.95. F

Oates' most recent novel about American innocence chronicles the moment in the lives of individuals when repressed violence erupts and the soul dies. Fitz John Kasche ("cash, cache, catch, clash, crash. Story of a life."), intellectual son of a family of entrepreneurs, falls in love with nymphet Laney Hurley, daughter of a poor farming family from Childwold. In his attempt to be one with nature (he likens himself to Thoreau and Whitman) and to redeem himself by loving the victims of his capitalist ancestors he falls victim to the repressed lusty, violent natural man within. Killing Earl, his double, he becomes only a walking shell. Childwold, although an interesting technical experiment in the use of multiple interior monologues, lacks the compelling narrative quality of much of Oates' fiction. The violence does not interfere with the novel's lyric tone, nor does it shock—or move—the reader.—Carol Pearson, Women's Studies Program, Univ. of Maryland, College Park

Ottum, Bob. The Tuesday Blade.
S. & S. Jan. 1977. ISBN 0-671-22400-X. $7.95. F
Jack the Ripper killed prostitutes in 19th-Century London. A female vigilante kills pimps in contemporary New York, slitting their throats and castrating and disembowling them. Twenty-year-old Gloria-Ann Cooper, new to the city from Greer County, Oklahoma, is stacked, stunning, and strong. Victim of a crude gang rape when she was ten—and of a more subtle, drug-induced one when she arrives in New York—"Glory" early learned to "get things done" herself, outside the bounds of law and justice. Motivated by one part feminism (NOW is too slow to suit her) and two parts vengeance, she takes on the uncaring city and the people she thinks hurt women most. But Detective Sergeant Tony DeMario goes outside the law himself (burglarizing, purse-snatching) in his quest for the killer, as he pursues Glory in the line of duty and beyond. This is graphically violent past the bounds of good taste; still, it's slick and gripping, and once past the slashing in the opening pages, hard to put down.—Michele M. Leber, Virginia Beach P.L.

Rhys, Jean. Sleep It Off, Lady.
Harper. Nov. 1976. 192p. ISBN 0-06-013527-7. $7.95. F
Sixteen stories, most with an English turn-of-the-Century flavor. In a tropical British colony, an English settler goes native and dies. At an English boarding school, a lonely young girl decides to become an actress. The Chevalier de la Place Blanche, over-the-hill gigolo, receives his comeuppance from an adventurous tourist. Miss Verney, frightened, 70, alcoholic, is scorned by her neighbors and dies of shock and neglect. Some of the stories seem unfinished and actually like plotless vignettes, but most have the usual Jean Rhys charm and strength as they capture that moment in which a life changes unalterably and irrevocably.—Hara L. Seltzer, New York

Stewart, J. I. M. A Memorial Service.
Norton. 1976. 288p. LC 76-14966. ISBN 0-393-08751-4. $7.95. F
This is the third volume in a projected quintet under the collective title of "A Staircase in Surrey"—the quadrangle of Surrey College, Oxford, in which reside the main characters in the series. As in the earlier volumes, The Gaudy and Young Pattullo, the action is very much concerned with the inner administrative workings of the college revolving around Duncan Pattullo, who has returned there as a fellow. At times in this volume the writing becomes arch; those who have not read the earlier volumes may find the array of characters who reappear here a little confusing.—Norman Horrocks, Sch. of Library Service, Dalhousie Univ., Halifax, Nova Scotia, Canada

Taylor, Elizabeth. Blaming.
Viking. Nov. 1976. 192p. $7.95. F
Amy Henderson is a middle-aged, well-to-do Englishwoman whose husband dies in Istanbul during their vacation cruise. Martha Larkin, an eccentric American writer who has just met the couple, assists Amy in returning to London and thereafter plays a significant part in her life. It gradually dawns upon the reader that Amy, consummate practitioner of civilized behavior, is a thoroughly selfish and largely self-deceived woman. Her lack of generosity has tragic consequences for unhappy Martha. The understated tone of Blaming is enlivened by the comic portraits of Ernie Pounce, Amy's hypochondriacal servant, and by Isobel, the spoiled granddaughter who hasn't yet learned to temper the egotism she's inherited from Amy. Taylor holds Amy's character against the light of a highly developed moral sense and finds her wanting, but her scrutiny is compassionate and ironic rather than condemnatory. Blaming is an exquisitely written, wise and funny novel.—Frances Esmonde de Usabel, State Reference & Loan Lib., Madison, Wis.

Townley, Rod. Minor Gods.
St. Martin's. Nov. 1976. LC 76-13044. $8.95. F
Townley's novel is a jumble. Superficially a drama about reporter Jamie Lauren's investigation of cancer deaths caused by his brother Claude's giant Philadelphia chemical company, in fact it is a study of the brothers' strange childhood. Jamie, passive, voyeuristic; Claude, violent, agressive; and Neil, artistic, disturbed, a suicide at 18, were shaped by their mother's bizarre Theosophical "religion." That we are told about but never experience the forces that affected the boys is a major failure. Dull and dispiriting not because the characters are "minor" but because they're inconsequential.—Thomas N. Jewell, Waltham P.L., Mass.

Science Fiction

Disch, Thomas M. & Charles Naylor, eds. New Constellations: an anthology of tomorrow's mythologies.
Harper. Nov. 1976. 224p. $8.95. F
The best part of this 17-story anthology of tomorrow's mythologies is the introduction by Thomas Disch which states that: "Myths are everywhere in literature, but especially in science fiction" and that the "task of sf writers as mythmakers is simply the custodial work of keeping the inherited body of myths alive." The "twice-told tales" included in this collection, however, are either so simplistic they are skeletons of richer literary archetypes (i.e., Diefendor's "Fables" and Imbert's "Legends From The Cheshire Cat"), or are so intellectually and semantically complex they resist identification and translation. For example, it is impossible to read Bishop's "In Chinistrex Fortronza the People Are Machines" without an unabridged dictionary. The few works that cater both to the pleasure principle and the prestated ideological theme (such as Sheckley's "In a Land of Clear Colors," and Disch and Sladek's "Mystery Diet of the Gods: A Revelation") do not justify the purchase of this volume for library collections.—Dorothy Sternlicht, SUNY at Oswego Lib.

Ley, Sandra, ed. Beyond Time.
Pocket Bks.: S. & S., dist. by Pocket Bks.-Ace. 1976. intro. by Frederick Pohl. pap. $1.50. F
This is a nice collection of short stories on the theme of alternate worlds or parallel time tracks. "Worlds Enough" by Don Thompson is a gripping story of an illegal time jumper who thinks he has returned to his own time; the subtle difference is impossible to detect and he

My Friends George and Tom
by Jane Duncan
"Touching and literate are the words which spring to mind in reading this Scottish author's new entry in her 'Friends' series ....With all its tenderness, the story is never soppy, and it offers a happy surprise at the end!" —Publishers Weekly (9/6/76)
222 pp. LC 76-5371 $7.95
St. Martin's Press
175 Fifth Avenue
New York 10010

will die for his mistake. Avram Davidson writes a well-plotted story about a British revolt against the American taxation on tea and Thomas Jefferson leading the signing of the Declaration of Independence from America; Lucy Cores provides some really alternate history (a Kennedy-Nader confrontation over the gas-powered engine, but not what you expect); Gordon Eklund remains totally incomprehensible to me, but he has his fans. This is a fine choice at a bargain price for even the smallest library.—Barbara J. Smith, Contra Costa County Lib., Pleasant Hill, Calif.

Meredith, Richard. No Brother, No Friend.

Doubleday. Nov. 1976. ISBN 0-385-11109-6. $6.95. F

Remember Gulliver Foyle, the feisty protagonist of Alfred Bester's The Stars My Destination? Well, Meredith obviously does, for his central character, Eric Mathers, is Foyle's alter ego right down to his "augmentation"—his ability to greatly accelerate his movements in relation to the rest of the world. And, like Bester, Meredith uses sf in its least sophisticated mode, as the vehicle for a good, swashbuckling adventure tale. No Brother, No Friend works with the premise that countless other "Timelines" parallel our own, and that each one represents the product of slightly divergent probability sets. At each extreme of the Timeline continuum are the "Homelines" of beings, not quite human, who are engaged in a war that stretches across all the Lines. And in the middle is Mathers, who seeks to discover the origins of these warriors, their plans for the human race, and the secret of a future world that may or may not spell doom for all the Timelines of mankind. Though not as good as Bester's work (very little sf is), there's a lot of action-packed reading here. But be forewarned: This is apparently the first installment; and I, for one, eagerly await its sequel.—Carey A. Horwitz, formerly with "Library Journal"

Tubb, E. C. Spectrum of a Forgotten Sun.

DAW, dist. by NAL. Nov. 1976. 160p. pap. $1.25. F

This tale of derring-do takes a middle-aged reader back to his prepubescent years of reading pulp sf. Militaristic action in a far future time and place have mercenary Dumarest committing crimes for a grand lady who is really a violent dame. Good editing makes the pages fly, but there is mostly just blood and guts here, even with a reflective passage or two. Libraries should consider adult popular tastes for this book and its genre.—Henry M. Kapenstein, Free Lib. of Philadelphia

INDEX:

Albanese, C. L., 2381
Alexander, H. E., 2378
Anderson, C. G., 2363
Antin, D., 2377
Assessing linguistic arguments, 2373
Atlas of early American history, 2357
Aulicino, A., 2372

Bane, M. J., 2386
Bavousett, G. H., 2368
Bear, R., 2389
Bell, T. H., 2368
Bellow, S., 2356
Bengtsson, H., 2389
Benstock, B., 2374
Bentinck-Smith, W., 2353
Berger, J. J., 2356
Berloquin, P., 2390
Berns, W., 2378
Better Homes & Gardens Eds., 2372
Bialer, Y. L., 2381
Bickham, J. M., 2393
Biology and the future of man, 2383
Blackstone, H., 2390
Bledstein, B. J., 2368
Bombeck, E., 2373
Bracken, P., 2372
Brondfield, J., 2390
Brown, R. L., 2392
Brucker, R. W., 2372

Campbell, A. S., 2385
Camus, A., 2374
Cant, G., 2384
Canzoneri, R., 2363
Carroll, W., 2374
Carter, F., 2363
Casey, T. J., 2374
Caudill, H. M., 2386
Caves, R. E., 2365
Chadwick, B., 2358
Chase, I., 2393
Christopher, M., 2363
Churchill, P., 2390
Coffman, V., 2393
Comfort, A., 2358
Comprehensive index to English-language little magazines, 2358
Condon, K., 2386
Cormier, R., 2374
Croghan, A., 2353

Dabney, V., 2368
Dash, S., 2379
Dayan, M., 2363
Debussy, C., 2376
Deming, R., 2388
Denes, M., 2356
Dent, E. J., 2376
Detwiler, D. S., 2368
Diagram Group, 2390
Disch, T. M., 2395
Donaho, M. W., 2367
Dunlop, J. B., 2369

Ehrenburg, I., 2393
Eichenberg, F., 2362
Ellsworth, D. J., 2352
Enzensberger, H. M., 2377
Erdman, P., 2393
Ertz, S., 2394
Evans, R. A., 2382
Everlasting flowers, 2361

Fanning, R., 2362
Faulkner, P., 2374
Flaste, R., 2358
Flew, A., 2376
Forest, E., 2363
Form, W. H., 2386
Forsyth, F., 2393
Foss, M. B., 2362
Frankena, W. K., 2376
Frantz, J. B., 2369
Frederick, P. J., 2369
Fredman, S., 2384
Freedland, M., 2392
Freivalds, J., 2356

Gambino, T., 2364
Gandhi, R., 2376
García Márquez, G., 2394
Gerster, G., 2362
Gies, J., 2386
Gillespie, J., 2364
Glyn, C., 2382
Good Housekeeping dictionary of symptoms, 2358
Goodall, D. M., 2386
Gopal, S., 2364
Greenfield, J., 2390
Griffith, S. B., 2370
Grinspoon, L., 2386
Guinther, J., 2370

Haight, A., 2374
Hamburger, M., 2377
Haq, M., 2366
Harris, R., 2388
Harrison, G. H., 2372
Helmreich, W. B., 2382
Hemingway, M. M., 2372
Hemingway, M. W., 2364
Herberg, W., 2382
Hersey, G. L., 2361
Hettich, A., 2373
Hick, J., 2377
Holl, A., 2382
Holland, I., 2394
Holzer, H., 2381
Howatch, J., 2394
Hulse, J., 2364

Imperato, P. J., 2385
Information for everyday survival, 2359
Iseman, J., 2390

Janeway, E., 2366
Jargocki, C. P., 2390
Jaworski, L., 2379
Jefferson, A., 2376
Johnston, M., 2372
Jumbo book of magic, 2390

Kamman, M. M., 2372
Keane, M. J., 2390
Kessler, G., 2388
Kilick, T., 2359
Kingsland, K., 2377
Kircher, S., 2394
Kister, K. F., 2353
Klobuchar, J., 2390
Korb, L. J., 2379
Kramer, J., 2384
Kuna, F., 2374
Kyed, J. M., 2360

Lago, M. M., 2375
Lancaster, F., 2353
Landvater, D., 2364
Lane, M., 2362
Langworth, R. M., 2386
Large type books in print, 1976, 2360
Layman, E. M., 2382
Leavis, F. R., 2375
Leboyer, F., 2385
Lee, L., 2360
Leeman, F., 2360
Ley, S., 2395
Linehan, D., 2391
Lippmann, W., 2367
Lorwin, M., 2373
Lovejoy, C. E., 2360
Luce, W., 2392

Maccoby, M., 2366
Mason, A., 2359
Matsunaga, S., 2379
Matthew, B., 2392
May, H. F., 2370
Mehta, V., 2364
Meiss, M., 2361
Mencken, H. L., 2365
Meredith, R., 2396
Merrill, B., 2370
Merrill, R., 2365
Mihajlov, M., 2375
Miller, J., 2391
Miller, S. S., 2358
Mitchell, B., 2375
Mitchell, M., 2365
Momaday, N. S., 2378
Montias, J. M., 2366
Moore, B., 2394
Moore, C. G., 2368
Morris, M. B., 2387
Murdoch, I., 2394

Nasri, W. Z., 2352
Neruda, P., 2378
Newell, P., 2391
Newlin, M., 2378
Newman, E., 2374
Nideffer, R. M., 2391
Novick, S., 2356

Oates, J. C., 2394
O'Donoghue, M., 2359
Oglesby, C., 2379
Olson, M. C., 2356
Ornstein, R. E., 2382
Otten, J., 2387
Ottum, B., 2395

Pachman, L., 2391
Pandey, B. N., 2364
Papich, S., 2365
Patten, M., 2359
Pears cyclopedia, 1976-77, 2360
Pescatello, A. M., 2370
Peyser, J., 2376
Piaget, J., 2379
Picture reference file, 2359
Pinchin, J. L., 2375
Plekker, R. J., 2383

Raley, P. E., 2380
Raming, I., 2383
Ray, G. N., 2362
Redgrove, P., 2378
Reisler, M., 2370
Reynolds, D. K., 2380
Rhodes, A., 2370
Rhodes, D., 2362
Rhys, J., 2395
Riker, T., 2384
Rittmann, A., 2384
Robert, M., 2380
Roberts, E., 2365
Roberts, M., 2391
Roesch, R., 2367
Rosnow, R., 2380
Ruby, R. H., 2370

Sagan, F., 2392
Samuels, P., 2360
Sanders, J. W., 2368
Scaduto, A., 2388
Sedlacek, W. E., 2368
Sheehan, E. R., 2357
Sherer, R. G., 2371
Shover, J. L., 2371
Slide, A., 2392
Smith, M. J., 2360
Spiegel, A., 2393
Stacey, E. G., 2365
Staley, T. F., 2375
Stanley, D. T., 2388
Stephens, J., 2387
Stephenson, J., 2371
Stewart, J. I., 2395
Stillman, D., 2373
Summers, A., 2371
Sumner, R., 2392
Sutherland, S., 2381
Sweets, J. F., 2371

Tang, P. P., 2392
Tanner, R. G., 2371
Tarbert, G. C., 2360
Tarr, Y. Y., 2372
Taylor, E., 2395
Taylor, J. G., 2372
Telander, R., 2392
Townley, R., 2395
Tubb, E. C., 2396
Tudor, D., 2360

Van Buren, P. M., 2383
Veatch, R. M., 2357
Viorst, J., 2378
Vogel, J., 2375

Wagenvoord, J., 2387
Waldo, T., 2376
Walker, D., 2378
Walker, J., 2361
Waller, L., 2389
Wepman, D., 2387
Westland, P., 2361
Wigginton, E., 2388
Williamson, W. L., 2352
Wilson, H. V., 2384
Winter, D., 2367
Wodehouse, P. G., 2373
Woodward, H. N., 2366
World guide to universities, 2360

Young, A. M., 2377
Young, N., 2383

Zallen, H., 2366

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

All advertisements for the Positions Open and the Positions Wanted classifications will be edited to exclude direct or indirect references to race, creed, color, age, and sex as conditions of employment. Positions open and positions wanted, $1.70 per line, minimum charge, $5.10, all other types of ads, $2.60 per line, minimum charge $7.80. If vouches forms are required for billing, please send them at the time advertisements are submitted for insertion. Copy for ads and requests for cancellations must be received at the LJ office 45 days preceding date of issue. Write: Classified Advertising Department, Library Journal, 1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York, New York 10036.

OUT-OF-PRINT

EXCLUSIVE WANT LISTS get prompt attention, wide search, reasonable prices, from International Bookfinders, Inc., Box 1-LJ, Pacific Palisades, Calif. 90272.

COLONIAL "out-of-print" Book Service, Inc. Want Lists invited, 23 E. 4th St., New York City 10003.

EXCLUSIVE WANT LISTS advertised & searched plus 150,000 vol. indexed stock. PAB 2917 Atlantic, Atlantic City, NJ 08401.

WE FIND BOOKS. Free International Search. Exclusive want lists invited. Realistic prices. Eva Davis Books. 108 Prince Charles, Williamsburg, VA 23185.

OUT OF PRINT books located. Send in title, author to: Free Search Service, Dept. LJ, 41 Union Square West, New York, NY 10003.

OP BOOKS in literature; social sciences, humanities. EGLI; Lamont; BCL, etc. Book Lande, 8926 National Blvd., Los Angeles, CA 90034.

SEARCH SERVICES are one of our specialties. Foreign books and periodicals, current and out-of-print. Albert J. Phiebig Inc., Box 352, White Plains, N.Y. 10602.

MAGAZINES—BACK NUMBER

INTERNATIONAL UNIVERSITY Booksellers, Inc., 101 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10003. We buy: Would like to hear of periodical backfiles of scholarly significance, individual titles or entire collections, surplus to your present needs. We sell: We carry one of the most comprehensive inventories of periodicals in all fields and langauges and are a major supplier to academic libraries in all parts of the world. Call or write Mr. Becker.

BACK ISSUE MAGAZINES, general, scholarly, technical. Designed to serve high school and jr. college libraries. Please send want lists to Back Issues West: P.O. Box 6688, Tucson, Arizona 85716.

BUY, TRADE, SELL National Geographic Magzines & related material. Box 30045, Denver, CO 80230.

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC Magazine: (1888-1976) Any issue from 1910. (Fine cond.) Reasonable. Price list furn. Don Smith, 3830 Rankin St., Louisville, KY 40214.

LACKING ISSUES. Subscribers to journals listed in Science Citation Index have a good chance of immediately locating lacking issues for years 1970-1975 with the Replacement Serials Section of M.S.I., the worldwide back-issue house. Please address your queries to Maxwell Scientific International (now a Pergamon Press, Inc. division), Fairview Park, Elmsford, New York 10523.

OVER 2,000,000 backdate magazines. Send want lists. Magazine Center, Room 406, 145 West 29th, New York, NY 10001.

MICROFORMS

MICROFORMS. Good second-hand microfilm of periodicals of established micropublishers bought and sold. Write or call Microforms International Marketing Company, Fairview Park, Elmsford, New York 10523. (914) 592-9141.

SERVICES—PERSONNEL

THERESA M. BURKE Employment Agency, 8 West 40th St., N.Y., N.Y. 10018. Specializing in the recruitment of library and information personnel for special, academic, and public libraries.

FOR SALE

1970 BOOKMOBILE, 32' x 95⅞' x 11'2". Body by Gerstenslager, chassis by Chevrolet. Excellent condition at 40,000 miles. Negotiable. Write: Donald F. Fought, Ida Rupp Public Library, Port Clinton, OH 43452. Phone (419) 732-3212.

CATALOG AUTHORITY FILE. Approx. 75,000 master catalog cards with Sears subject headings & abridged Dewey classification. Heavy on elem-hi titles published after 1970. Ideal for central processing. Cards will copy for reproduction on Xerox Copier. Make offer. G 90.

CHEMICAL ABSTRACTS: v. 1-84 (1907-February 9, 1976). First four decennial indexes. Volumes bound through 1971. Condition excellent. All offers considered. Deadline December 31, 1976. Write: Serials Department, North Dakota State University Library, Fargo, North Dakota 58102.

1963 BOOKMOBILE. International chassis, 8' wide, 30' long and 11'5" high. $2,000. Please write: Vince Manzo, 1249 Washington Blvd., Detroit, MI 48226.

TOSHIBA COLOR TV Camera Special. Now you can have beautiful, quality, studio or portable color at B&W prices. Like-new demonstrator color camera kit comes complete with one-gun color camera head, 1½" detachable electronic side-mounted viewfinder, handgrip, 20-80mm f/2.5 zoom lens, AC power supply, instruction manual, one year guarantee. Only $2,200, postpaid. Cashiers check or money order to: Moore Video, P.O. Box 5703, Richmond, VA 23220, or call collect (804) 353-7400.

WANTED TO BUY

WANTED: Seven 60-tray wooden card catalog cabinets. Must be in good condition. Gaylord, 900 Maple or equivalent. Call (202) 635-5055 collect on price and details.

POSITIONS WANTED

AUGUST 1975 M.L.S. graduate seeks volunteer opportunity to establish small rural library in third world country, preferably English speaking. Experienced, can work in team or individual situation, on nonpaid basis. Desires indigenous contact person and/or information. S. H. Davis, 5204 Suitland Rd., Suitland, MD 20023.

POSITIONS OPEN—NORTHEAST

HEAD LIBRARIAN. City of Chicopee, must be a college graduate with a degree and M.L.S. degree from an ALA accredited college; qualify for a certificate of professional librarianship issued by the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners; have 3 to 5 years' professional experience including some supervision in a public library system of between 40,000 to 60,000 population. Salary is negotiable. Send applications and full résumé to: Mrs. Frank Lengieza, Chairman, Board of Library Trustees, 91 Haven Avenue, Chicopee, MA 01013.

ACADEMIC LIBRARY Sales Representative. The Baker & Taylor Company, oldest and largest book wholesaler in the nation, eastern region, seeking academic library sales representative. Territory—Maine to Virginia. Knowledge of academic library market essential—acquisitions experience preferred. Excellent fringe benefits, including company car. Salary open. An equal opportunity employer. Send résumé to the attention of: T. D. McNamara, 50 Kirby Ave., Somerville, N.J. 08876.

RARE BOOK LIBRARIAN: For the Chapin Library, an outstanding library of rare books, graphic arts and special collections. Minimum qualifications: five years' experience in field, appropriate education, working knowledge of classical and European languages. We seek a talent for enlisting interest of undergraduates. Salary dependent on qualifications. Available June 1, 1977. Apply to: L. E. Wikander, Sec'y, Search Comm., Williams College Library, Williamstown, MA 01267. An affirmative action/equal opportunity employer.

★

TECHNICAL LIBRARIAN

★

We are a medium-sized international oil company seeking a librarian to organize and maintain a technical data system consisting of files, maps, and books for the exploration and production department. A library science degree is desirable but not essential. A minimum of three years' experience as a librarian is required, preferably with petroleum-related data but experience in other scientific fields is acceptable.

Generous benefit package
New York City location

Please send résumé and salary history in confidence to:

Box G 89

An Equal Opportunity Employer M/F

POSITION OPEN: January 1, 1977. Library Director; over-all responsibility for a village public library serving 10,300; duties include supervision and scheduling of supportive staff; offering direct public service as needed; budget preparation and administration; community public relations work; coordination of a new building project; collection building and maintenance. M.L.S. degree required. Send résumé to Darwin R. Barker Library, 20 East Main Street, Fredonia, New York 14063.

POSITIONS OPEN—SOUTHEAST

HUMANITIES REFERENCE Librarian: Auburn University Libraries. M.L.S., strong background in the humanities, and facility in at least one modern foreign language. Strong service orientation. Application folders must be completed by December 15, 1976. Salary: $10,500-$12,960, 12 months. Faculty status (but not professorial title), eligible to be considered for tenure. State retirement plan is mandatory; TIAA, optional. Twenty working days annual vacation, sick leave benefits. To assume duties January 1, 1977. Apply to: Dr. Ruth G. Fourier, Chairperson, Humanities Reference Librarian Search Committee, Ralph Brown Draughon Library, Auburn University, Auburn, Alabama 36830. Auburn University is an equal opportunity employer.

UNIVERSITY LIBRARIAN. Tulane is seeking to fill the position of university librarian. The university librarian is director of the Howard-Tilton Library and the satellite libraries of architecture, engineering and music. The university librarian also acts as the coordinating officer of the other university libraries: namely the graduate school of business administration, law and medicine. Applications and nominations should be sent as soon as possible to: the Provost, Tulane University, New Orleans, LA 70118. An affirmative action/equal opportunity employer.

MUSIC LIBRARIAN to have complete charge of the music library which consists of recordings, scores, and basic reference materials. Staff includes one full-time staff person plus student assistants. Librarian responsible for selecting, processing, and cataloging new materials. Must have a Master's degree in library science and a degree in music. An additional Master's degree is preferable. Salary $10,000-$12,000 for the academic year depending upon training and experience. Additional compensation for summer work. University located in northwestern corner of state and is surrounded by the Blue Ridge Mountains. Send résumé to: Richard T. Barker, University Librarian, Appalachian State University, Boone, North Carolina 28608. An equal opportunity employer.

SALES REPRESENTATIVES. Charles Scribner's Sons Music Division has several outstanding sales opportunities available through the southeast. Our representatives call on piano students and their families and sell a full line of student aids and recreational materials. Highly professional work, music background not necessary. Work from leads and earn high commissions. Some evening and weekend work. Résumé to: Director, Music Division, Charles Scribner's Sons, 597 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10017.

CATALOG LIBRARIAN: Original cataloging of Latin American materials, rare books in other areas. Requirements: Accredited M.L.S.; minimum of two years cataloging experience; LC classification and OCLC experience desirable. Spanish and/or Portuguese essential, other languages desirable, especially Latin and Greek. SOLINET/OCLC member. Librarian II rank, academic status, 22 days vacation, Salary range $10,000-11,999. Send résumé to: Jane Stevens, Head, Catalog Department. Tulane University Library, New Orleans, LA 70118.

TWO POSITIONS: (1) Children's Coordinator; responsible for maintaining and building collections, programs, and publicity for main library, 3 branches and bookmobile. Salary $10,000. M.L.S. from accredited library school and preferably some experience. (2) Extension librarian; to coordinate and expand services to three counties through branch, bookmobile and other outlets; salary $10,000 M.L.S. from accredited library school and preferably some experience. Library located 20 miles north of Richmond, Virginia in semi-rural area. Apply to: Director, Pamunkey Regional Library, P.O. Box 116, Hanover, VA 23069.

NORTH CAROLINA: The University of North Carolina at Greensboro is seeking candidates for two positions. Assistant catalog librarian: requirements include M.L.S. from ALA accredited program and experience as a serials cataloger. Open July 1, 1977. Salary $13,000. Assistant catalog librarian: requirements include M.L.S. from ALA accredited program, good knowledge of foreign languages for general cataloging. Experience desirable but not mandatory. Open January 1, 1977. Salary $10,700. Both positions carry faculty status, twelve month appointment, liberal retirement, insurance, and vacation benefits. Both positions entail OCLC cataloging. Send résumé to: James H. Thompson, Library Director, University of North Carolina at Greensboro, Greensboro, NC 27412. An affirmative action/equal opportunity employer.

LIBRARY DIRECTOR, immediate opening. Florida Atlantic University, an upper division and graduate state institution; current enrollment over 6,000. Directs staff of 15 professionals and 35 FTE support staff; operating budget $1,000,000; collection 300,000 volumes. Position requires M.L.S. from ALA accredited library school; 8 years professional experience including 5 years increasingly responsible administrative experience; knowledge of current trends in academic libraries, budgeting, operations management; library services to faculty, staff, students and community is essential. Second subject Masters or Doctorate desirable. Salary range $18,304-$28,304; 12-month contract; one month vacation, other fringe benefits. Send application with résumé by Dec. 10 to: Ms. Zita M. Cael, Chairperson, Search Committee, Library, Florida Atlantic University, Boca Raton, FL 33431. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

LIBRARY DIRECTOR: Directs and supervises a public library system. Comprehensive knowledge of library science and administration. Graduation from college of recognized standing with major in library science or related field. Salary negotiable. Population 14,550. Send résumé to: Thomas P. Hughes, City Manager, P. O. Box 38, Roanoke Rapids, NC 27870.

HEAD, MONOGRAPHIC Cataloging: To supervise five professionals plus staff in cataloging of monographs in LC system. Establish policies, procedures, and standards with original cataloging entered into OCLC data base. Acts as head of cataloging in his absence. M.L.S., experience with LC system, and modern European languages required. Prefer at least 5 years experience plus a year with OCLC cataloging and 3+ years as supervisor. Salary $13,000 or more depending upon qualifications. Send résumé by January 3, 1977 to: Joseph Jerz, Assistant University Librarian, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, NC 27514. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

TENNESSEE: Head of Catalog Branch of Technical Services, has responsibility for supervising cataloging and classification of all materials (including non-book) for central library and 19 branches. Requirements: ALA accredited fifth year degree and at least six years' experience, including three years' administering or supervising the cataloging operation of a large library or system. Must be familiar with LC Subject Headings and Dewey Classifications, and must be interested in conversion to on-line cataloging procedures and other cooperative cataloging projects. Salary range $12,012-$16,104 with liberal fringe benefits. Apply by November 30, 1976 to: Mildred S. O'Connor, Personnel Officer, Memphis and Shelby County Public Library and Information Center, 1850 Peabody, Memphis, Tennessee 38104. An equal opportunity employer.

EXTENSION LIBRARIAN: The York County Library is seeking to fill a position for extension librarian. The extension department includes three branch libraries in communities ranging from 5,000 to 12,000 population. In addition there is one bookmobile. The library seeks to employ the creative and administrative abilities of someone who can plan and execute library development programs to the disadvantaged, the incarcerated, aged, and civic organizations and groups in the rural and outlying sections of York County. York County has a population of approximately 100,000 persons. Requirements for this position are as follows: good health, willingness to work, and a pleasant personality. In addition, an M.L.S. degree from an accredited ALA graduate library school and two years formal public library experience in extension service are required. This job is funded under a LSCA grant for Library Development. The guaranteed period of time which this grant provides to a prospective employee is twelve months plus an additional three months for the transitional quarter. Maximum salary $12,575 and fringe benefits. Closing date for receipt of applications is Dec. 1, 1976. Please send résumé to my attention: Joseph E. Garcia, Director, York County Library, 325 S. Oakland Avenue, Rock Hill, SC 29730.

POSITIONS OPEN—MIDWEST

HEAD OF TECHNICAL Services. ALA accredited M.L.S. plus a minimum of 2 years professional experience required. Salary $861 per month through Dec. 31, 1976, increasing to $926 per month in 1977. Apply by Dec. 1, 1976 to: Lake Agassiz Regional Library, P.O. Box 699, Morehead, MN 56560.

AREA LIBRARY Coordinator: Northern Indiana library authority seeking administrator to coordinate cooperative programs of the 25 member libraries. Position requires accredited M.L.S. and 6 years experience, 3 in administration. Salary $15,000; position available January 1. Send letter and résumé by December 1 to Dennis Lawson, Librarian, Plymouth Public Library, Plymouth, IN 46563.

HEAD, ACQUISITIONS Department. Responsible for serial and monograph acquisition activities for main library and nine college and departmental libraries. Budget of $600,000. Collection size 1,000,000 volumes. Staff of 15 FTE plus student assistants. New Main library under construction, to open 1/1/78. Qualifications: M.L.S., minimum of five years experience including supervisory experience. Experience in serial or monograph acquisition required. Familiarity with data processing and operations research techniques preferred. Salary commensurate with qualifications, minimum $15,000. Send résumé to: Mrs. Carol I. Reed, University of Cincinnati, Main Library—Room 616, Cincinnati, Ohio 45221.

CHILDREN'S SERVICES/school services liaison consultant for the suburban library system. Asst school and public librarians and support staff working with user and non-user pre-school, K-12 grade individuals. Offer expertise to librarians in developing, planning and implementing localized cooperation projects/services between local public and school libraries. Work with librarians, support staff, school administration, governance boards and general public. Serve as catalytic agent, help librarians create meaningful change through cooperation. Requirements: M.L.S.—ALA accredited graduate degree plus a valid teaching certificate. Minimum 4 years satisfactory pertinent library experience providing services in public and school libraries essential. Minimum salary $13,240. Position available immediately. Send comprehensive résumé, names and addresses of three professional references to Robert A. Drescher, Network Development Consultant, Suburban Library System, 125 Tower Drive, Burr Ridge, IL 60521. An equal opportunity employer.

REFERENCE LIBRARIAN for public library with minimum of two years reference experience and M.L.S. from ALA accredited school. Salary: $10,300. Send applications by December 15, 1976 to: Everett Sanders, Director, Springfield-Greene County Library, MPO Box 737, Springfield, MO 65802. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

READERS' SERVICES Librarian. Administrative and educational responsibilities. M.L.S. and graduate degree in subject field required. Salary range: $10,000-$11,500. Position open January 1, 1977. Contact: Douglas L. Wilson, Knox College Library, Box 500X, Galesburg, IL 61401. Knox College is an affirmative action/equal opportunity employer.

DIRECTOR for a northern Wisconsin public library, which is the resource center for the Northwest Wisconsin Library System. Requirements: M.L.S. from ALA accredited university; 5 years' experience with 3 in administrative position. Starting salary: $14,000. Fringe benefits. Send résumé and names of 3 references by January 1, 1977 to: Mrs. June West, 1122 N. 21st St., Superior, WI 54880. An equal opportunity employer.

LIBRARIAN for county library in West Michigan. M.A. in library science and administrative experience desired. Pension, insurance and other benefits. Send résumé with salary requirements to: Charles Eberbach, Chairperson, Mason County Library, Scottville, MI 49454.

POSITIONS OPEN—WEST

CATALOGER. Original cataloging of monographs and serials, print and non-print materials, in a department of four (4) professionals and twelve (12) support staff processing 22,000 volumes per year. Requires graduate degree, plus a subject master's or a commitment to obtain one. Prefer at least 3 years' successful cataloging, including serials and LC classification. Experience with automation, working knowledge of foreign language highly desirable. Appointment as senior assistant librarian ($1,120-$1,511), or as assistant librarian ($963-$1,327), depending on qualifications and experience; 12-month or 10-month appointment optional; 21 working days of vacation; 12 days of sick leave. Interviews on campus required of finalists at their expense. Deadline for application is November 15, 1976. Apply with résumé to: Harold F. Wells, Director of the University Library, California State Polytechnic University, Pomona, CA 91768. An equal opportunity, affirmative action employer.

HEAD LIBRARIAN: Graduate Theological Union, Berkeley, Calif. Responsibilities for staffing, policy formulation, relations with member schools of the union and with the Library of the University of California at Berkeley. Familiarity with theological and philosophical literature essential. Theological background and graduate degree in library science normally expected. Applicant should be committed to cooperate with other libraries and be interested in new technology. Send application and résumé before December 1, 1976 to: Librarian Search Committee: Graduate Theological Union, 2465 Le Conte Ave., Berkeley, CA 94709. Appointment to be announced July 1977. Equal opportunity and affirmative action employer.

FINE ARTS LIBRARIAN. Professional librarian position, emphasizing reference and collections development activities for materials serving students and faculty in architecture, art, dance, music and theatre. Applicant must have knowledge and library background in one or more of the above areas. Works in coordinated reference services department with collections designed to serve these disciplines. M.L.S. required from accredited library school. Faculty status and many other professional and recreational benefits. Beginning salary $9,500. Application deadline December 1, 1976. Send résumé naming three references and a cover letter describing qualities you have that you think would fit you for the job to: Mrs. Winnifred Margetts, Personnel Office, University of Utah Libraries, Salt Lake City, UT 84112. University of Utah is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

CHAIR, DEPT. of Processing Services. Admin., catalog, dept. of 7 libns., 15 support staff. Req: ALA-accred. M.L.S., add'l. Master's and 6 yrs. prof. exper. Level: Assoc. Libn. or Libn., dep. on quals. Salary ranges: $17,304-$22,908. Apply: Gladys Rohde, Assoc. Dir. of Lib., Calif. State U., Fullerton, Library, Box 4150, Fullerton, CA 92634. Deadline 31 December 1976. CSUF is an affirmative action, equal opportunity, Title IX employer.

POSITIONS OPEN—SOUTHWEST

ASSISTANT LIBRARIAN for six-county public library system in primarily rural area. Require M.L.S. from accredited library school, some supervisory experience, keen interest in public service and children's work. Salary range $10,000-$14,000. Apply, including résumé and three references to: Chickasaw Library System, 22 Broadlawn Village, Ardmore, OK 73401.

PHYSICAL SCIENCES Reference Librarian. Provide reference service, assist in book selection, supervise circulation services, serve on Library committees. Successful candidate is offered opportunity to work toward advanced degrees. Required: Master's degree from ALA accredited library school. Second Master's in sciences desirable. Aptitude for supervision and administration. Health and accident insurance; free life insurance. TIAA and state retirement plan. Faculty rank, 40 hour week, one month vacation. Salary: $9,600 minimum. Send résumé and three references to: Norris K. Maxwell, Assistant Librarian, Oklahoma State University, Stillwater, OK 74704. An affirmative action/equal opportunity employer.

THREE NEW POSITIONS approved for the School of Library Science at the University of Oklahoma: Information sciences, media services, public libraries. Applications are invited from persons possessing a Ph.D. and experience. Candidates must demonstrate teaching experience; professional proficiency, and have a record of research and publication. Minimum appointment at rank of assistant professor, with a salary of $15,500. Both rank and salary are negotiable. Positions available August, 1977. Send application and credentials by Dec. 15, 1976 to: Search Committee c/o Dr. James S. Healey, Director, School of Library Science, Univ. of Oklahoma, Norman, OK 73019. An equal opportunity/affirmative-action employer.

LIBRARIAN to head the Fayetteville Public Library, a branch of the Ozarks Regional System. A Bachelor's degree with library science and proven ability in public library service are required. An accredited M.L.S. degree is desirable. The book stock in Fayetteville is 63,000, staff 12, circulation 250,000. The minimum starting salary is $9,500. Send résumé to: Search Committee, Ozarks Regional Library, 217 East Dickson Street, Fayetteville, AR 72701.

POSITIONS OPEN—CANADA

EASTERN ONTARIO Regional Library System. Applications are invited for the position of director. Applicants must have a degree in library science with a minimum of five years administrative experience in regional or public library systems. A requirement for this position is the ability to function effectively in both the English and French languages. Salary commensurate with experience and proven ability. Applications must be received by Dec. 31, 1976. Reply to: Mrs. Elaine Isabelle, Chairperson, Eastern Ontario Regional Library System, 200 Cooper Street, Suite 6, Ottawa, Ontario K2P 0G1, Canada.

INDEX TO ADVERTISERS

Harry N. Abrams	2385
American Companies	2333
American Management Associations	2367
Arlington House Publishers	2380
Baker & Taylor Co.	2319
Ballinger Publishing Co.	2320
R. R. Bowker Co.	2332, 2335, 2340
Brodart	2329
Congressional Information Service	2325
Thomas Y. Crowell Co.	2366, 2375, 2393
Current Co.	2330
Dow Jones-Irwin	2365
Emerson Books	2362
Facts on File	2366
F. W. Faxon Co.	2369
Fortress Press	2357
Gaylord Bros	2322
Harcourt Brace Jovanovich	4th Cover
Hawthorn Books	2384
Highsmith Co	2330
S. Hirzel Verlag	2316
Hit Records	2328
Houghton Mifflin Co.	2388
International Scholarly Book Service	2331
Josten's Library Services Division	2333
Krieger Publishing Co.	2386
J. B. Lippincott Co	2382, 2389
3M Co.	2nd Cover, 2313
Marc Applied Research	2328
NICEM	2328
New Republic Books	2369, 2380, 2391
Pantheon Books	2379
Pentalic	2330
Prentice-Hall	2359, 2363
G. P. Putnam's Sons	2363, 2371, 2377, 2383, 2384
Random House	2391
Research Publications	3rd Cover
Rucker Press	2358
St. Martin's Press	2373, 2393, 2395
San Francisco Book Co.	2361
Seabury Press	2387
Steinerbooks	2381
Watson-Guptill Publications	2361
John Wiley & Sons	2314, 2367
Xerox BiblioGraphics	2326, 2327

Sales-Business Offices

NEW YORK:
R.R. Bowker Company
1180 Avenue of the Americas
New York, New York 10036
Dominick Ciarletti 764-5246
Carlton H. Thiele 764-5135
Advertising Traffic Manager,
Maureen J. Rose 764-3363
Classified Advertising Manager,
Frieda Johnson 764-3362

MIDWEST:
James K. Levitt and Associates, Inc.
1720 Algonquin Road
Mount Prospect, Illinois 60056
Walter Freed 312 593-5255

WEST:
James K. Levitt and Associates, Inc.
13208 Saticoy Street
North Hollywood, California 91605
Bette Cochran 213 875-1517

SOUTH:
Metropolitan Publishers
Representatives, Inc.
2045 Peachtree Road, N.E.
Atlanta, Georgia 30309
Marvin Arnsdorff 404 352-2173

PREVIEWS
Non-print software and hardware news and reviews—for librarians, teachers, media specialists

USE
ORDER FORM TO SUBSCRIBE

PREVIEWS
1180 Avenue of the Americas • N.Y., N.Y. 10036

Yes, please enter my subscription to PREVIEWS for one year at only $7.50.

(PREVIEWS is published monthly, September through May. For subscriptions in Canada and Pan American Postal Union, add $2.00. Elsewhere, add $3.00)

☐ Payment enclosed ☐ Bill me
☐ Bill school or org.

Name_____
Address_____
City_____
State_____ Zip_____
Occupation (H.S. librarian, elementary school teacher, etc.)
_____
Title or position_____

Published by R. R. BOWKER COMPANY Nov

DECEMBER 1, 1976/ISSN 0000-0027

LIBRARY JOURNAL

LJ Academic and Public Library Buildings in 1976
Two-Year College Learning Resources Center Buildings
Two Ways of Planning: Chula Vista and Penrose Libraries
In the News: Book selection guidelines for N.Y.; a processing service out; special reports on resource sharing & volunteers

94010bur1224026 211J406309
Burlingame Pub Lib
480 Primrose Rd.
Burlingame, CA 94010

ARCHITECTURAL ISSUE

DECEMBER 1, 1976 / VOL. 101 NO. 21

LIBRARY JOURNAL

John N. Berry III
Shirley Havens
Karl Nyren
Janet Fletcher

Book Review: Robert R. Harris
Bibliographic: Bette-Lee Fox
News: Noël Savage
EDITION EDITOR: Ellen Mangin
ART EDITOR: Carlos Delgado
REVIEW EDITORS: Marlene Charnizon
Ellen Kozlowski
Philip Mattera
Anneliese Schwarzer
ASSISTANT EDITORS: Maureen Crowley
Ann Sankar
PRODUCTION ASSISTANTS: Nancy Brown
Ann Yazejian
EDITORIAL ASSISTANT: Anne Richter

ADV. SALES MANAGER: Richard H. Brown
BUSINESS & PRODUCTION MANAGER: Maureen J. Rose
PUBLISHER: Paul J. Carnese

LIBRARY JOURNAL is published by R. R. Bowker Co., a Xerox company. Robert F. Asleson, President.

Direct editorial and advertising correspondence to 1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York 10036. Telephone: (212) 764-5100. Subscription inquiries and changes of address should be directed to R. R. Bowker Company, Subscription Dept., P.O. Box 67, Whitinsville, Mass. 01588. Publications Offices at 117 Church Street, Whitinsville, Mass. 01488. Issued twice a month, September through June, monthly in July and August. Second class postage paid at Whitinsville, Mass. and additional mailing offices. Copyright © 1976 Xerox Corporation.

LIBRARY JOURNAL is indexed in Library Literature, Library & Information Science Abstracts, and Reader's Guide to Periodical Literature. SUBSCRIPTIONS: USA: 1 year $19.00; 2 years $36.00; 3 years $51.00. Canada and Postal Union of the Americas and Spain, add $2 per year; elsewhere, add $3 per year. Single copy $1.35. Spring, fall, and winter announcement numbers, $3.25 each. POSTMASTER: Please send Form 3579 to R. R. Bowker Company, P.O. Box 67, Whitinsville, Mass. 01588.

LIBRARY JOURNAL reserves the right to make its own independent judgment as to the acceptability of advertising copy and illustrations in advertisements. Advertiser and advertisng agency assume liability for all content (including text, representation and illustrations) of advertisements printed, and also assume responsibility for any claims arising therefrom against the publisher. Offers to sell products, which appear in LIBRARY JOURNAL, are subject to all laws and regulations and are void where so prohibited.

Letters 2403

Calendar 2404

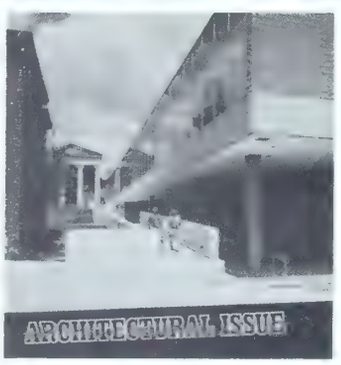
Editorial 2407

News:

Book selection guidelines for schools okayed in N.Y. . . . NEH legislation could provide $$ to needy libraries . . . Florida State Library to scrap processing service . . . budget crunch prompts new priority setting . . . pros & cons of resource sharing debated at UC-San Diego . . . Canadian censors go after kids & diet buffs . . . N.J.'s anti-car book ban rescinded . . . MACOS assailed anew . . . Colorado State Library joins WILCO . . . special report on volunteers 2417

People 2433

FEATURES



Newburgh Free Library, N.Y.

Academic Library Building in 1976
BY JERROLD ORNE & JEAN O. GOSLING 2435

Public Library Buildings in 1976
BY HOYT R. GALVIN & BARBARA N. ASBURY 2440

Two-Year College Learning Resourses Center Buildings
BY JOLEEN BOCK 2452

Two Ways of Planning: Penrose & Chula Vista Libraries
BY MORRIS SCHERTZ & RAYMOND HOLT 2456

Professional Reading 2461

Checklist 2462

Magazines 2463

Buyers' Guide 2465

THE BOOK REVIEW

Book Reviews 2467

Index to Reviews and Professional Reading 2516

Classified 2517

Index to Advertisers 2520

The States and the Nation

Alabama Virginia Van der Veer Hamilton
*__Alaska__ William R. Hunt
*__Arizona__ Lawrence Clark Powell
Arkansas Harry S. Ashmore
*__California__ David S. Lavender
*__Colorado__ Marshall Sprague
Connecticut David M. Roth
Delaware Carol E. Hoffecker
*__District of Columbia__ David L. Lewis
*__Florida__ Gloria Jahoda
Georgia Harold H. Martin
Hawaii Ruth M. Tabrah
*__Idaho__ F. Ross Peterson
Illinois Richard J. Jensen
Indiana Howard H. Peckham
Iowa Joseph Frazier Wall
*__Kansas__ Kenneth S. Davis
Kentucky Steven A. Channing
*__Louisiana__ Joe Gray Taylor
Maine Charles E. Clark
Maryland Carl Bode
Massachusetts Richard D. Brown
*__Michigan__ Bruce Catton
Minnesota William E. Lass
Mississippi John Ray Skates
Missouri Paul C. Nagel
Montana Clark C. Spence
Nebraska Dorothy Weyer Creigh
Nevada Robert Laxalt
*__New Hampshire__ Elizabeth Forbes Morison and Elting E. Morison
New Jersey Thomas Fleming
New Mexico Marc Simmons
New York Bernard Weisberger
North Carolina William S. Powell
North Dakota Robert P. Wilkins and Wynona H. Wilkins
*__Ohio__ Walter Havighurst
Oklahoma H. Wayne Morgan and Anne Hodges Morgan
Oregon Gordon B. Dodds
Pennsylvania Thomas C. Cochran
Rhode Island William G. McLoughlin
*__South Carolina__ Louis B. Wright
South Dakota John R. Milton
*__Tennessee__ Wilma Dykeman
*__Texas__ Joe B. Frantz
Utah Charles S. Peterson
Vermont Charles T. Morrissey
Virginia Louis D. Rubin, Jr.
*__Washington__ Norman H. Clark
*__West Virginia__ John Alexander Williams
Wisconsin Richard Nelson Current
Wyoming T.A. Larson

*Available

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION FOR STATE AND LOCAL HISTORY and W.W. NORTON & COMPANY, INC., publishers NATIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR THE HUMANITIES, sponsor

A unique 51-volume series on the history of each state plus the District of Columbia, from territorial times to the present, by distinguished historians and authors. An outstanding Bicentennial event, publication will continue into 1977.

Each volume contains a 16-page picture essay; 192-240 pages; maps, bibliography, index. Handsomely and sturdily bound, smyth sewn. Each volume, $8.95. C.I.P.

"The California volume of this series more than lives up to the criteria that each author provide an 'interpretive, sensitive, thoughtful, individual, even personal' view of what is significant about his or her own state . . . A warm, human overview of the social, political, and physical components which have combined with individual personalities to make California [a] unique entity." . . . "Catton's [Michigan] sets a high standard for the volumes to follow. Written with warmth and humanity, grace and insight."—Library Journal

"An excellent volume [Tennessee] that is always informative, often moving, never boring . . . If other volumes in this series are done half as well, Norton will have added a rare element of good taste to a generally banal Bicentennial. Strongly recommended for general readers." . . . "Readers accustomed to Wright's gracious style will not be disappointed . . . South Carolina belongs in all public, high school, and undergraduate libraries. A lovely series of photographs . . . enhance the reader's pleasure."—Choice

43% Discount to Libraries Standing Order Plan I

To receive the entire set of 51 volumes at substantial savings, libraries have a choice of two standing order plans designed to suit different budgetary commitments.

Standing Order Plan I—$260 paid in advance for the entire 51-volume set of THE STATES AND THE NATION, publisher pays postage. Approximately 43% discount to the library. One order, one invoice. Each new title will be shipped as finished, on a "no-charge" invoice.

Standing Order Plan II—30% discount for the entire 51-volume set of THE STATES AND THE NATION, paid for as delivered (approximately $320), library pays postage. New titles will be shipped as finished; whenever possible two or more titles will be included, to reduce the number of invoices.

W.W. NORTON & CO., INC. Library Service Dept.
500 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y. 10036

Please send us the 51-volume STATES AND THE NATION series on the Standing Order plan we have checked. We will receive all titles available now, and each new title as finished

☐ Standing Order Plan I, as detailed above. ☐ Standing Order Plan II, as detailed above

NAME/TITLE/DEPT _____

LIBRARY

ADDRESS _____

CITY _____ STATE _____ ZIP _____

Ship to: Bill to:

PROPAGANDA has more pictures, posters, leaflets, stamps, post cards, sheet music, movie stills, cartoons, war cards, more "paper bullets," more artifacts from more countries on THE ART OF PERSUASION IN WORLD WAR II than any other book ever published.

"...lush, fascinating."
NEW YORK TIMES

"...beautiful, powerful, and frightening."
LOS ANGELES TIMES

"...a fine study of the art of persuasion...presents a good balance of text and art."
SEATTLE TIMES

"If you think you are immune to propaganda's cheerleading, its bull, this book might change your mind."
WASHINGTON POST

"...the book dazzles...brilliant and comprehensive... British newspaperman-historian Rhodes describes with flair and clarity, in seven skillfully organized chapters, how each warring country manipulated war fever at home and tried to undermine the enemy's psyche in his own country."
PUBLISHERS WEEKLY

"...a large, handsome volume wealthy in crisp text and sumptuous illustrations. It will fascinate any student of war."
HARTFORD TIMES

LIBRARY JOURNAL

Rhodes, Anthony. Propaganda: the art of persuasion, World War II.
Chelsea House, dist. by Whirlwind Bk. Co., 80 Fifth Ave., New York 10011. 1976. 319p. ed. by Victor Margolin. illus., some color. bibliog. index. LC 75-17545. ISBN 0-87754-029-2. $30.
HIST

This is an unusually fascinating and beautifully produced volume about a very complex topic. Rhodes, a widely traveled British scholar and writer, ably supported by the Chicago educator and author Margolin, presents a remarkably comprehensive analysis of how all of the major powers in World War II used "propaganda" for psychological warfare. The most complete attention is given to Goebbels and his clever manipulation of the German people, but Mussolini also is dealt with thoroughly. An afterword by Daniel Lerner about the psychological warfare campaign against Germany from D-Day to V-E Day enriches the volume. The abundant illustrative material, gathered from archives of many nations, has been carefully chosen and superbly reproduced: postage stamps, leaflets, pamphlets, newspaper stories, film stills, etc. In spite of its high price, the book is warmly recommended for public and academic libraries except the smallest.—Felix E. Hirsch

"Of inestimable value...This book is everything the publisher claims...[they] have succeeded magnificently in their efforts to assemble the definitive work...No library of modern history can be considered complete without this compendium."
ST. LOUIS GLOBE DEMOCRAT

"The most impressive book I've seen this year...extraordinary."
PUGET SOUNDER

"...well researched and presented...a fascinating pictorial history of war...The psychology behind propaganda is one of the book's more fascinating aspects...a valuable research tool."
WASHINGTON STAR

"...nostalgia with historic significance...marvelous reproductions of posters, leaflets, cartoons, comic strips, sheet music and the like."
OMAHA WORLD-HERALD

CHELSEA HOUSE·NEW YORK

Distributed to libraries by R. R. Bowker Order Dept. $30
P.O. Box 1807, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48106
All orders plus shipping and handling. Sales tax added where applicable. (Prices subject to change and slightly higher outside the U.S. and its possessions.)

LETTERS

Survivalism & security

Samuel E. Molod
Associate State Librarian, Division of Library Development, Connecticut State Library, Hartford:

The editorial ("Maximum security," LJ, Sept. 15, p. 1815) and Tom Galvin's article ("Beyond Survivalism . . ., LJ, Sept. 15, p. 1833-35) made my day! They should be recommended for all library staff members, from administrators on down. What a great topic for further discussion by library science students and for all who work in libraries. I, too, remember what my Library Administration course professor said over 25 years ago: "Many people want administrative positions, for that is where the higher salaries are; but they fail to realize that in time, for every dollar earned in administration, it comes out of your hide."

Kyu S. Kim
Assistant Professor, Library Department, College of Staten Island, New York:

. . . As an alternative to the "obsolete authoritarian style in management," Galvin introduced an idea of developing new styles of leadership that "seeks consensus" but "takes active responsibility for identifying appropriate directions." Does he mean that librarians can provide and discuss with their director information, but the director makes a final decision that affects them? What would be the required qualities in the future leadership? Should library education (M.L.S., D.L.S., Ph.D.) be the first requirement, or not?

As many behavioral scientists pointed out, when workers are underutilized, they become unhappy, reduce their work accomplishment, and begin to dislike their jobs. In accordance with Gerald Susman at Pennsylvania State University, such job dissatisfaction "can affect a worker's health, his relationships with his family and his neighbors," and tends to shorten their lives.

There would be more chances for effective leadership when the library director is no longer a hierarchical appointee but an elected one among the professional library staff. The election would be a vital ingredient to generate better working conditions which often make the maximum use of an individual's abilities. Effective opportunities for management must be found when the "elected" director demonstrates his leadership with strong confidence and in a maximum participatory way.

Jay Wozny
Extension Librarian, Wake County Public Library, Raleigh, North Carolina:

Your recent editorial and Tom Galvin's article both wallow in misdirected criticism and mislead with antiquated and sentimental reliance on "leadership." Leadership is not by any stretch of the imagination (or other critical faculty) the independent variable in library administration; it is not even a catalyst in most situations.

Leadership style emerges from organizational structure and technological advances. In the first place, most libraries are in the dark ages of bureaucratic hegemony and are unlikely to emerge any time soon. Perhaps the only bright spot is the application of computer technology to some library operations. Even this, however, is hardly enough to shake the traditional outlook of either library administrators or library educators.

Your call for "leadership" misstates the case. Library administration requires a complete structural analysis from an intellectual engineer. Unfortunately, the verdict will probably be that the building is unsound and unfit for human habitation. However, like the consultant studies we always fund and rarely heed, it is likely that the majority of library managers will go right on in the same old (safe) autocratic and self-satisfycing (sic) manner, oblivious to the facts that they are out-of-date and getting out-of-dater.

Howard P. Lowell
Salem, Oregon:

Your editorial and Galvin's article point out, once again, that a leadership crisis exists in American librarianship and that new styles of personal and organizational leadership are required. But, how does one find and develop these alternative leadership patterns? I suggest, contrary to your editorial, that the skills needed for leadership can be taught in graduate school and through continuing education programs.

One can define leadership in terms of a number of functions which successful leaders perform. These are generally grouped together as task functions (executed in the selection and carrying out of goals and objectives) and maintenance functions (executed in maintaining and strengthening group or organizational viability). For each, there are a number of behavior-based skills which can be used as tools to better perform these functions. And, these skills can be learned, practiced and improved by individuals and groups through educational and other structured experiences.

Leadership skills training is a vital part of leadership development and should be part of a librarian's professional preparation. Leadership, per se, cannot be taught, but the skills needed by leaders can be.

Pros & parapros—arm in arm

Theodore Figura
Assistant Documents Librarian, Old Dominion University, Norfolk, Virginia:

A comment on your editorial ("Maximum Security," LJ, Sept. 15, p. 1815): Instead of being pitted against each other, CLOUT and COLT should be pulling in the same direction. Librarians have historically been burdened with much that is semiclerical and quasi-professional. Today's highly educated labor force (and the shortage of jobs for college graduates) provides an excellent opportunity for librarians to transfer these "gray area" duties (which include simple reference work and line supervision) to their support staff. Librarians must unencumber themselves of relatively lower level, "unprofessional" tasks if they are to undertake more professional activity. However, this is not to say that it is beneath the dignity of librarians to shelve, file, or do whatever else needs to be done in extraordinary circumstances.

In thus upgrading the profession, we are enriching paraprofessional job descriptions also. Paraprofessionals may even be given supervisory responsibility over entire sub-units, e.g. copy cataloging and interlibrary loan. Librarians and paraprofessionals must rise together. This is true monetarily, also. We cannot expect support personnel to work to their full capabilities and to take on added responsibilities without a comparable raise in their salaries. Librarians, whose profession has traditionally been perceived as "women's work" and has, thus, been subject to gross pay discrimination, are also underpaid. One of the major challenges to our profession is that we substantially raise our overall salary level, an item which is inextricably bound with perceived professional status. So, let us not pit librarians and paraprofessionals against each other. Rather, let us march to the ramparts arm in arm!

Fairfax is in Virginia

William L. Whitesides
Director, Fairfax County Public Library, Springfield, Virginia:

We appreciate your giving our Affirmative Action program coverage in the September 15 issue of LJ (p. 1822), but no doubt you have noticed that the article misplaced Fairfax County in Maryland. We like very much our Maryland friends and colleagues, but Fairfax County is still in the Commonwealth of Virginia!!!

Since the article was printed, the Library stationery has been printed with a statement: "An Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer"; the Library Board has approved, at the request of the Affirmative Action Committee, a fellowship for Master's Degree to be awarded according to EEO guidelines, and the County has enrolled a committee member in a USDA course in "Sexism and Racism in Management." The Library Board has increased its efforts to obtain long overdue reclassification for all professional and nonprofessional grades.

Happenings in Canada

George Piternick
Professor, School of Librarianship, University of British Columbia, Vancouver:

I have just finished reading the August LJ. I think your coverage of the Canadian Library Association Convention therein exemplary—full, judicious, informative, interesting ("At CLA the Big Issue Was Money," LJ, August, p. 1595-99). Anne (Piternick) and my other colleagues agree with me that it is far better than any other reports which have so far appeared in print. I can find slight fault only with the terminal paragraph of the section on public lending right, where I think the compromise resolution is somewhat misinterpreted. The phrase that the resolution is "in support of the use of library holdings data in developing the system" is misleading. The resolution merely calls upon Canadian libraries to furnish holdings data freely if it is shown, upon proper study, that a system for increasing the rewards of authorship which is based upon library holdings data would be the most effective method.

Norman Horrocks
Director, School of Library Service, Dalhousie University, Halifax, Nova Scotia:

Your report of the CLA Conference says that in serving as local press officer I "fielded a battalion (or so it seemed) of students to cover meetings, take pictures, and provide reports to conventioners . . ." Actually there were just six of them—Dallas Bagby, Lucien Chassé, Reg Crossman, Mary Haase, Barbara James, and Barbara Shuh in a typical demonstration of the hard-working versatility of Dalhousie Library School students. But your accolade was indeed well earned by all of them and is much appreciated, as were the other comments.

Alan H. MacDonald
Health Sciences Librarian, Kellogg Library, Dalhousie University, Halifax, Nova Scotia:

I have finally had a chance to read your report on CLA Halifax. While modesty prevents my commenting on the penetrating and sagacious analysis of personalities in paragraph two, I should like to compliment you and LJ on the quantity and quality of the coverage of the Halifax meeting. Maybe some things really do happen away up there in Canada.

More on MARS

Ann G. Lipow, Peter G. Watson
MARS Steering Committee, University Research Library, University of California, Los Angeles:

Your excellent 1976 ALA Conference round-up ("Centering Down . . .," LJ, Sept. 1, p. 1695-1715) mentioned the formation of a discussion group on Machine-Assisted Reference Service (MARS). LJ readers may wish to know that this is part of the Reference and Adult Services Division, and is intended to be a broad-based interest group for those involved in the planning, performing, managing or teaching of computer-assisted forms of reference service in libraries. It is hoped that MARS will provide a means of professional interchange for this rapidly expanding body of librarians, and a vehicle for dialogue with our colleagues in other branches of library work, on the question of integrating this new type of service into the Library as a whole.

MARS is also designed to be an independent forum for discussion between librarians and the suppliers of the several components of the service (data bases, search systems, hardware, telecommunications, etc.). Here the aim is to strengthen the voice of the library community, and thus to ensure better service to library users, when vital service decisions are being made by the suppliers.

A newsletter is being launched and regular meetings at ALA conferences are planned. Anyone wishing to join us, or receive further information, please write to Peter Watson, Chairperson, MARS, c/o Library Administrative Office, UCLA Library, Los Angeles, California 90024.

CALENDAR

1977

JAN. 28-30—ASSN. OF AMERICAN LIB. SCHOOLS, Washington, D.C. Theme: "The New Information Professional." Keynote: Ronald G. Havelock, Center for Research in the Utilization of Knowledge, Inst. for Social Research, U. of Mich. Contact: Janet Phillips; (813) 238-0254.

JAN. 28-FEB. 7 —ART LIBS. SOC. OF NORTH AMERICA. Fifth Annual Conference, Statler Hilton Hotel, Los Angeles. Contact: Judith A. Hoffberg, P.O. Box 3692, Glendale, Calif. 91201.

JAN. 30-FEB. 5 —AMERICAN LA. Midwinter Meeting, Washington, D.C.

MAR. 24-26 —ILLINOIS ASSN. OF SCHOOL LIBRARIANS, Pick-Congress Hotel, Chicago. Theme: "Carnival of Knowledge." Contact: Ms. Jane Block, Belevidere Community Unit, District #100, Belevidere, Ill. 61008.

MAR. 27-28 —INSTITUTE ON QUANTITATIVE MEASUREMENT and Dynamic Library Service, Unit II, Critical Evaluation of Quantitative Methods for Library Management. School of Lib. Science, Simmons College, Boston. Contact: Coord. of Continuing Ed., School of Library Science, Simmons College, 300 The Fenway, Boston, Mass. 02115. (617) 739-2222.

APR. 6-8 —ALABAMA LA, Montgomery, Governor's House Motel. Contact: Patricia Moore, Exhibits Chairperson, Alabama LA, P.O. Box 9266, Mountain Brook, Ala. 35213.

APR. 12-16—TEXAS LA/NEW MEXICO LA, Joint Conference, El Paso Civic Center. Theme: "In Search of Learning." Contact: Jerre Hetherington, Texas LA, P.O. Box 505, Houston, Tex. 77001.

APR. 17-23—NATIONAL LIBRARY WEEK.

APR. 18-21—INFO. INDUSTRY ASSN., Information Industry Conference & Exposition, Washington, D.C., Shoreham Americana Hotel. Theme: "The Information Manager . . ." Contact: Paul G. Zurkowski, IIA/Washington, 4720 Montgomery Lane, Bethesda, Md. 20014; (301) 654-4150.

APR. 20-23—NEW JERSEY LA, Atlantic City, Howard Johnson's Regency Motor Hotel. Contact: Anne King, Exhibits Chairperson, 3-25 Dorothy St., Fair Lawn, N.J.

APR. 24-25—CONF. ON ED. FOR INFO. SCIENCE, Strategies for Change in Library School Programs. School of Library and Information Science, State U. of N.Y. at Albany. Sponsored by ISAD/LED of American LA, AALS, ASIS, SLA, MLA. Contact: Irving Klempner, School of Library and Info. Science, State U. of N.Y. at Albany, 1400 Washington Ave., Albany, N.Y. 12222; (518) 457-6157.

APR. 28-30—WASHINGTON LA, Vancouver, Washington. Contact: Janet Blumberg, Program Chair, Washington State Library, Olympia, Wash. 98504.

MAY 5-7—WYOMING LA, Jackson.

ANNOUNCING... NEW EDITION! ANNOUNCING... NEW EDITION!

the current and comprehensive guide for acquisitions, cataloging and research

BIBLIOGRAPHIC GUIDES: 1976

ANNUAL, MULTIPLE ACCESS SUBJECT BIBLIOGRAPHIES BASED ON PUBLICATIONS CATALOGED BY THE RESEARCH LIBRARIES OF THE NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY
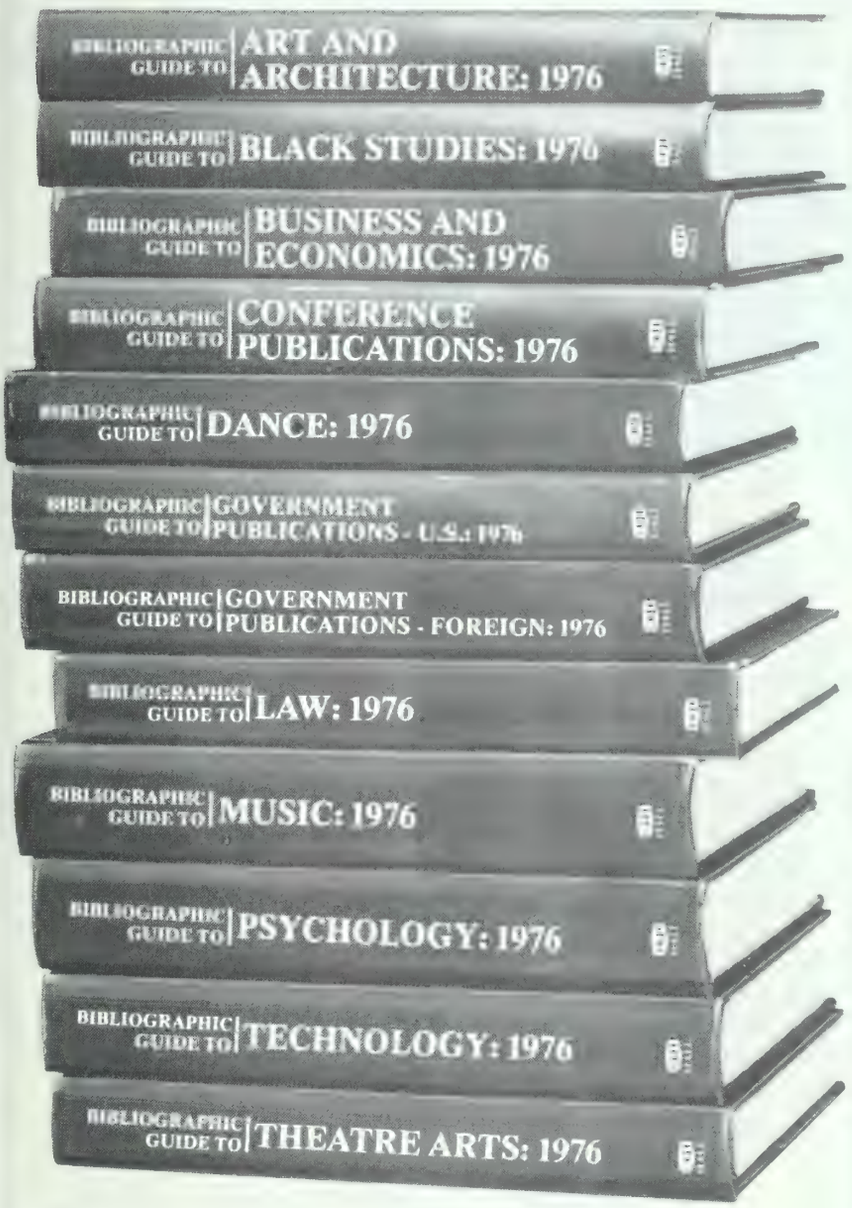
AND LIBRARY OF CONGRESS MARC TAPES



BIBLIOGRAPHIC GUIDE TO ART AND ARCHITECTURE: 1976
BIBLIOGRAPHIC GUIDE TO BLACK STUDIES: 1976
BIBLIOGRAPHIC GUIDE TO BUSINESS AND ECONOMICS: 1976
BIBLIOGRAPHIC GUIDE TO CONFERENCE PUBLICATIONS: 1976
BIBLIOGRAPHIC GUIDE TO DANCE: 1976
BIBLIOGRAPHIC GUIDE TO GOVERNMENT PUBLICATIONS - U.S.: 1976
BIBLIOGRAPHIC GUIDE TO GOVERNMENT PUBLICATIONS - FOREIGN: 1976
BIBLIOGRAPHIC GUIDE TO LAW: 1976
BIBLIOGRAPHIC GUIDE TO MUSIC: 1976
BIBLIOGRAPHIC GUIDE TO PSYCHOLOGY: 1976
BIBLIOGRAPHIC GUIDE TO TECHNOLOGY: 1976
BIBLIOGRAPHIC GUIDE TO THEATRE ARTS: 1976

Bibliographic Guides include:

- All types of materials — non-book resources as well as books and serials.
- Works in all languages, including non-Roman languages.
- Complete LC cataloging information including tracings (LC subject heading and added entries), ISBN, and identification of New York Public Library holdings.

Multiple access to this valuable information by:

- Main entry (personal authors, corporate names, names of conferences or symposia, etc.)
- Added entries (joint authors, editors or compilers, etc.)
- Titles and series title
- Subject heading

All conveniently arranged in one alphabetical sequence. Complete bibliographic information is given in the main entry, with abbreviated citations for secondary entries.

G.K.HALL & CO.
70 Lincoln Street
Boston, Massachusetts 02111

☐ YES, please send me complete information on G. K. Hall's Bibliographic Guides.

Name_____

Library_____

Address_____

_____ Zip_____

☐ Also please send me information on any 1975 GUIDES that are still available.

LJ-12

HERE'S TO OUR NEW OWNERS.

US.

We're the people who work at Library Bureau . . . the ones who have been creating that beautiful handcrafted library furniture, and running the office, and taking your orders.

A few months ago, we were told by Library Bureau's owners that their future corporate plans no longer included the library furniture market. This decision to close Library Bureau would have put 270 people out of work and ended production at one of the oldest and most respected furniture companies in the country. We couldn't let that happen.

So we bought Library Bureau ourselves. Production of the fine quality furniture you've come to expect from us will continue without change. After all, we're the same people you've been dealing with. And now, in addition to making furniture with such pride of craftsmanship, we're taking great pride in ownership, too.

The Employees

LIBRARY BUREAU
801 PARK AVENUE, HERKIMER, N.Y. 13350
Tel. No. (315) 866-1330

EDITORIAL

The building of libraries—1976

There is a strong sense today of standing at a point where the two roads of the past and the future part company; this is as true in the building of libraries as it is in the nation's bicentennial pause for reflection, and we're not sure yet whether we're at a wedding or a wake. In this issue, three major survey articles on academic, public, and community college libraries, identify trends and directions which may seem to be indigenous to each type of library, but may well be taken as harbingers for all libraries. Thus planners of both public libraries and traditional academic libraries would do well to consider the veritable torrent of change and development which Joleen Bock describes in her article on two year college learning resource centers; it seems more likely than not that all libraries in the future will undergo a kind of integration and interpenetration with other community agencies or other institutional facilities.

Hoyt Galvin, summing up public library construction in fiscal 1976, finds a surprise: a lot more federal money found its way into library construction than anyone had expected; and the number and variety of projects are a lot more impressive than was expected a few months ago in the depths of the recession. There are trends to be seen here, too: a widespread concern for the threat of ruinous energy costs is making architects and planners turn libraries into solar plants, bury them in the earth, or heap up earth berms around them in the first few pioneers like the Troy-Miami County Public Library (Ohio), our first solar public library, but surely not our last. Its contemporaries show many less spectacular strategies for making better use of natural light and reducing the need for energy to cool and heat libraries. Its successors are sure to go even further down the road of energy saving design.

Public libraries today are much more likely than a decade ago to save and remodel an existing building; there is also a clear trend toward the sharing of space with other community agencies: schools, recreation, and other civic facilities. And new ways of thinking about branch library functions, in an age of severe financial straits. Large numbers of well stocked, well equipped, and well staffed branches are now out of the question for many cities and metropolitan areas, and for the first time we are getting prefabricated "minilibraries" and "kiosks" capable of handling a high volume of book loans with minimal costs, and taking advantage of fast communications with a main library to provide some of the service depth a user might enjoy at a more traditional branch.

Academic library building, as it has been described and analyzed for the last decade in LJ by Jerrold Orne, continued in the past year at the rate that he has predicted it would settle into, with 45 substantial projects a year. His decade of work has been laying the foundations for a study of the academic library buildings that have sprouted on our campuses at an unprecedented pace in the last few years. This study will bring together the knowledge that librarians have gained of how these buildings have worked—or have not worked—and should provide the library planner of the future with an invaluable record of the experience of his peers. The libraries of four-year colleges and of universities have not yet shown the effect of a major commitment in higher education to nonprint learning technologies—with notable exceptions, of course. And the new demands of the new technologies associated with network participation and the automation of library housekeeping have challenged architects and planners only very recently. But they will be permanent factors, it now appears.

The biggest factor in the past decade of building all types of libraries has been federal funding, which stimulated flows of state and especially local money far beyond the actual federal contribution, especially in public library building. And as we move into a new democratic administration, one big question is how the White House will feel about libraries. Congress has been pretty well convinced of the value of libraries and the need for a federal share in their support—but the past administration gave low priority to this element in the quality of American life. Happily, the Carter record on libraries in Georgia is lustrous; in a recent letter to LJ and other library periodicals, Ella Yates of the Atlanta Public Library pointed out that during his term as governor Jimmy Carter doubled state aid to libraries and made Georgia the first state to provide substantial support for public library construction; in her opinion we can look forward to "a stronger national commitment to libraries and education." We may be standing at the opening of a new era of building America's libraries—we're betting on a wedding over a wake.

Karl Nyren

January 1977 marks the culmination of a remarkable publishing event.

THE READER'S ADVISER

A Layman's Guide to Literature

Volumes Two & Three of the new 12th edition of The Reader's Adviser: A Layman's Guide to Literature will be published in January, 1977. The 3-volume set will be complete. For more than a half a century previous editions of this classic work have filled the information needs of librarians, students, scholars, teachers, booksellers, and booklovers. This new 12th edition maintains and expands that tradition of service and excellence.

Volume One: The Best in American and British Fiction, Poetry, Essays, Literary Biography, Bibliography, and Reference
Edited by Sarah L. Prakken

"A must for the book-minded reader."—John Barkham Reviews

"In chronological order from Anglo-Saxon times to Colin Wilson and Philip Roth, each author is characterized in pleasant biographical and critical notes, and his or her books are listed with publishing data ... an incredible supply of carefully selected literary information."—Saturday Review

Each period is introduced by a critical essay written by an acknowledged specialist. It lists the most important general works on the period. It tells you about the most important writers of the period—who they were, why they wrote, what they achieved, how they were regarded in their own time and now. It lists all editions of all their works and all important works about them. It's a biographical directory, buying guide, comprehensive survey of English and American literature, booklover's feast of hidden elements in literature—all rolled into one, easy-to-use volume.
0-8352-0781-1, 1974, 808 pages, $23.50.

Volume Two: The Best in American and British Drama and World Literature in English Translation
Edited by F.J. Sypher

Here's the same "incredible supply" of carefully selected information on American and British drama and foreign literature in translation. Experts prepared the individual chapters, providing new introductions, new biocritical sketches on the pertinent authors, and annotated listings of books by and about the authors. Pub date, publisher, and price are given for the books listed. Chapters covering the sweep of American and British drama, from earliest times to the present, have been updated as have those on major European and world literatures. But the greatest expansion has been in the volume's coverage of other European, Middle East, and Asian literatures. Countries like Estonia, Bulgaria, Latvia, Albania, the Ukraine, Armenia, and Turkey are being adequately represented for the first time.
0-8352-0852-4, January 1977, c. 775 pages, $25 tent.

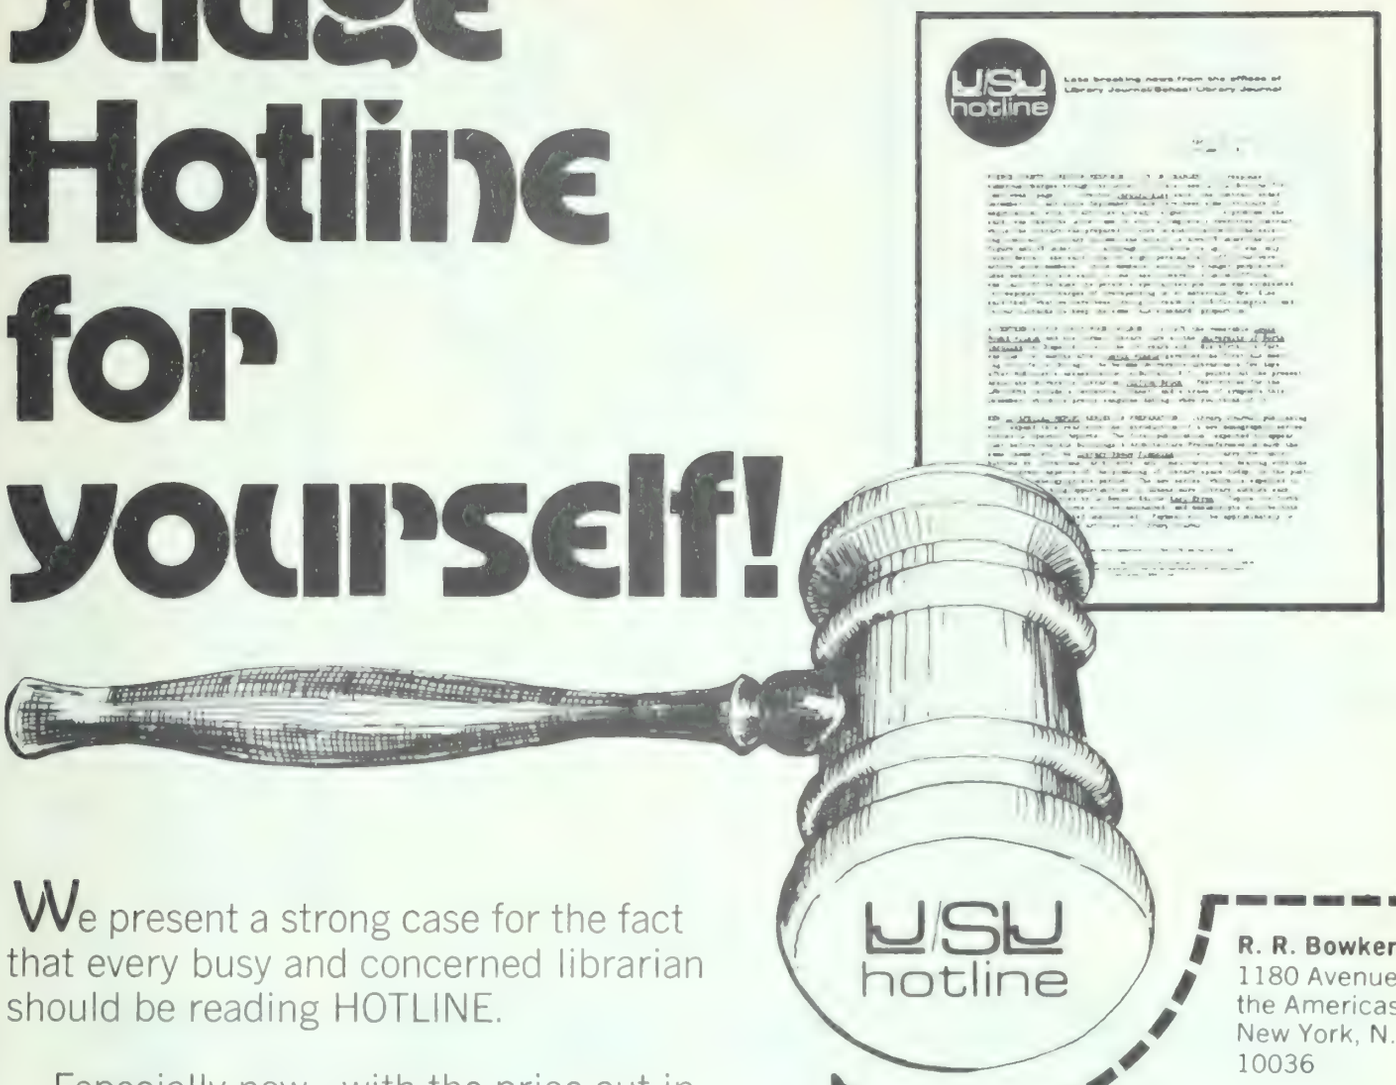
Volume Three: The Best in the Reference Literature of the World
Edited by Jack A. Clarke,
University of Wisconsin, Madison

The final volume of the 12th edition of The Reader's Adviser is a thoroughly updated, expanded guide to the best of the available English-language books on a wide range of nonliterary subjects. Covering general reference books and biography, Bibles, world religions, philosophy, psychology, the sciences, history, the lively arts, communications, folklore, humor, travel—it lists the most important authors in each subject together with complete bibliographic listings of their works in print. While the emphasis is on recently published material, available reprints of standard works are included.
0-8352-0853-2, January 1977, c. 950 pages, $25 tent.

BOWKER
NEW YORK & LONDON

Order all books from:
R.R. Bowker Order Department,
P.O. Box 1807, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48106.
Outside Western Hemisphere order from:
Bowker, Erasmus House, Epping, Essex, England.
All orders plus shipping and handling.
Sales tax added where applicable.
Prices are subject to change and slightly higher outside the U.S. and its territories.

Judge Hotline for yourself!



We present a strong case for the fact that every busy and concerned librarian should be reading HOTLINE.

Especially now—with the price cut in half. From $50 a year to only $25!

To back up our case, we offer the best possible evidence: a sample copy of HOTLINE in this issue of LJ. (See following pages.)

As a HOTLINE subscriber, you'll have this kind of useful, put-right-to-work information mailed to you every week. There's no faster, surer way to get late-breaking news and developments affecting you, your library, your services, and your patrons. (Unless you're moonlighting on the LJ/SLJ editorial staff!)

Look at the evidence. Then decide. If your verdict is that HOTLINE is for you, use the handy order form today to subscribe.

LJ/SLJ hotline

R. R. Bowker Co.
1180 Avenue of the Americas
New York, N.Y. 10036

Subscription Order Form

Price Reduced 50%-Act now!

Please enter _____ HOTLINE subscriptions as indicated below at the new, low price of only $25 each for one year. (Former price was $50.)

☐ Bill me ☐ Bill library or org. ☐ Payment enclosed (Please make checks payable to R. R. Bowker Co.)

HOTLINE is printed 44 times a year.

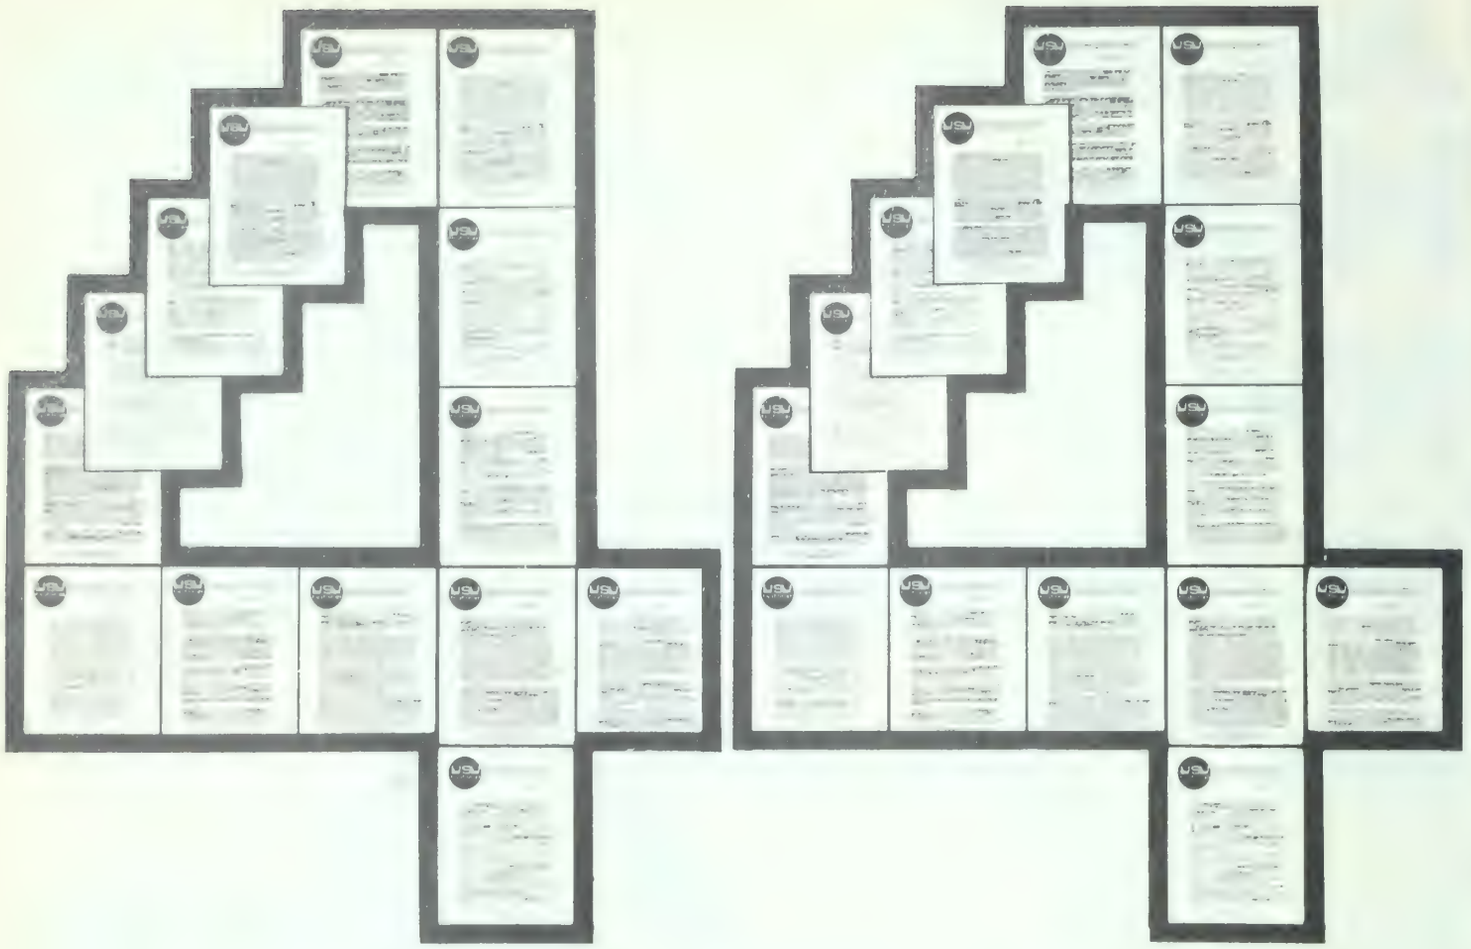
Name _____

Library or Organization _____

Address _____

City _____

State _____ Zip _____



ISSUES OF HOTLINE A YEAR.

THAT'S A LOT OF LATE-BREAKING NEWS, PUT-RIGHT-TO-WORK INFORMATION FOR ONLY $25—

HALF THE ORIGINAL PRICE!

ADVERTISEMENT

LJ/SLJ hotline

Late breaking news from the offices of Library Journal/School Library Journal

November 15, 1976
Volume V, No. 37

AMERICAN LIBRARIANS TO MOSCOW: After a long delay, the State Department is launching a 3-person mission to Moscow to arrange exchanges of librarians between the US and the USSR. On the November 13-December 1 trip will be Robert Wedgeworth, Executive Director of ALA; Susan Martin, University of California-Berkeley; and Natalie Delougaz of the Library of Congress.

IFLA US MEMBER ASSOCIATIONS MEET IN NY TO WORK OUT VOTE, $$ SHARING: At a November 9 meeting of representatives of the seven US national library associations that participate in IFLA (the International Federation of Library Associations), a tentative formula for the allocation among the seven of the 20 US votes and the division of financial support was reached. The formula must be now approved by the executive boards of the associations, pointed out Frank McKenna, Special Libraries Association Executive Director, who gave LJ/SLJ Hotline a report on the meeting held at SLA HQ in New York. He also noted that a meeting of the new IFLA Professional Board has been called for April 4-6 in London, to get organized before the 50th anniversary meet in Brussels in September.

ANTI-SHARING SENTIMENT STRONG AT NY MEET ON "ACCESS": This was the most surprising element of the October 29 meeting of the NY METRO group. The subject of the meeting was "access" which is something generally considered a good thing and one to be encouraged and extended. And addressing themselves to the problems of improving access were Milt Byam (Queens Borough, NY Public Library) condemning the "barriers," many of which are created by librarians; Robin LeSueur (Rockefeller University) comparing the European notion of a "right" of access to the American concept of access as a "privilege" and predicting a tightening of already formidable institutional barriers--but urging greater cooperation as an antidote. Kenneth Moody (SUNY Downstate Medical Center) also saw the need for better access, by both students and public, to medical libraries, and saw hope in the "mandate" created by the Medical Library Assistance Act for service to the public but deplored both the restrictive practises of librarians and the example set by the National Library of Medicine. Shirley Echelman (Chemical Bank) saw hope that special libraries owned by industry would be opened more to the public--as a public relations gesture. She also warned of a new danger to access in the lack of standardization in automated databases--and in the attitude of librarians who grant access by sumptuary standards: the service in public libraries, if you wear blue jeans, she said, is "appalling." Morris Gelfand (METRO President) saw the access problem in the New York consortium as one calling simply for improvement in finding tools and reader services, and

To report news items, telephone: 212-764-5179, ask for HOTLINE.

Published by R.R. Bowker Co., 1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10036
Copyright 1976 by Xerox Corporation. Not to be reproduced without permission.
Subscriptions: $25 per year

ANTI-SHARING SENTIMENT STRONG AT NY MEET ON "ACCESS", (Cont'd):
for dealing with the problems found also in other referral schemes around the nation: overload on some members and misreferrals. But a strong bill of particulars against the expansion of access was stated by Columbia's Patricia Battin--and she got a standing ovation that showed she spoke for a very strong opposition to a concept that the program as printed seemed to take for granted. Academic libraries can't afford to serve outsiders; librarians are promising more services than can be delivered; Carnegie's concept of free library service is "a snake in the garden"; service demands have multiplied as developing institutions mount graduate programs with insufficient library resources; continuing education for adults, unbacked by new financial support, is another new burden; interloan is no longer a sharing by equals but a system of dependent net borrowers and net lenders who must now set high fees to prevent the erosion of their collections. Battin summed up with a warning against counting on networking or on new federal aid, which she characterized as "socialism"--although she spoke approvingly of the new proposal to fund research libraries with $14 million annually in federal aid. Among the several recommendations made at working group meetings: a number of fee schemes. The foregoing is taken from a report by LJ's Noel Savage; her complete report will appear in the News section of the December 15 LJ.

ZERO-BASED BUDGETING: IN THE CARDS FOR LIBRARIES? One of the first buzz-words to surface in the Carter presidency is "zero-based budgeting" and along with "born again" and grits it suggests the onset of a whole new ball game. The idea is simple: every agency, department, institution in a Z-B situation must start from scratch every year and justify itself and the cost benefit, etc. of all of its operations and programs. The first briefing for libraries on this potentially scary concept will occur January 27 and 28 in Washington, D.C., just before the ALA Midwinter Meeting. Sponsor is the Librarians Committee of the Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments. Library administrators from the Council get first grabs at seats, but visiting librarians from outside the METRO area can put in for participation at $200 a throw. The workshop promises to "leave participants with a better understanding of the budget process and its function in policy making, skill in evaluating and improving their own budgets, and a method for systematically uncovering inefficient and low priority activities to reduce expenditures or reallocate resources." For more information: Mary Sage, Library Planning Office, Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments, 1225 Connecticut Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20036. Or 202-223-6800, Ext. 320.

THE MONEY TREE SHAKES IN YOUNGSTOWN: PR Person Jeannie Dykins called from the Youngstown and Mahoning County Library with an election victory story: The voters gave the library a fat 6/10 of a mill, which splits into 39/100 to continue existing support and 21/100 for the first increase in funding from this source since 1961. The library and its supporters put on a strong campaign, utilizing a tabloid mailing piece sent to all families. But "we didn't believe they'd ever get anything like this," said Ms. Dykins. The vote was 71,985 for, only 39,176 against the library.

BUILDING AMERICA'S LIBRARIES: Lawton, Oklahoma's 55 year old Carnegie building has been designated a national monument and placed on the National Register of Historic Places....and someday it is even possible that this same kind of honor will descend upon the humble but efficient library kiosks of Washington, DC: the third was opened in the capital on October 27 at 1430 Sumner Rd., SE. It will stock only 1000 books, but its planned book buying budget will give it bibliographic muscles that many a local public library or branch in the boondocks will never achieve....Jim Nelson called from the Cabell County Public Library (West Virginia) to report another election victory. 65% of the voters voted to provide $3.7 million over a period of three years to build a 50,000 square foot main library, four new branches, and an addition to an existing branch. The West Virginia State Library Commission has already promised $1 million. The campaign was helped, said Nelson, by the big election that got the voters out; the Friends had the help of a high powered consulting firm, Matt Reese Associates, which has handled big things like Kennedy campaigns, to put the drive across the 60% barrier. Reese, a home town boy, contributed his firm's expertise. But the Friends still wound up some $2500 in the hole, and are now hunting around for a way to pay the debt.

BUILDING AMERICA'S LIBRARIES, (Cont'd):

NATIONAL BIBLIOGRAPHIC NETWORK SUBJECT OF FEBRUARY 24-25 MEET: A key conclave in the current national discussion of a national network approach to library and information science will be the February 24-25 program to be put on the Information and Automation Science Division of ALA. It will be in Chicago, at the Hyatt Regency, with NYPL's Michael Malinconico as chairperson. Says MM: "This institute is intended to provide a forum for discussion of major policy issues that will need to be resolved before planning for a national bibliographic network is complete, as well as to provide the participants with information regarding developments toward establishment of a network. Problems to be discussed will include: formulation of a national bibliographic policy, centralization vs. decentralization, governance of a national network, impact on librarianship, and on the various types of libraries, and the roles of LC, NCLIS the library associations," etc. For the last year, meetings of this kind, which have drawn some of the best of the young and old leadership in the profession, have been hammering out the philosophical structure that must underlie any national network; this one will probably be, like them, a standing room only affair, so apply early if you want to sit in and contribute to the making of library history for the next century. Information and registration forms from: Donald P. Hammer, Information Science and Automation Division, American Library Association, 50 East Huron Street, Chicago, IL 60611. Or call him at 312-944-6780.

VOTER REGISTRATION COULD PAY OFF BIG FOR PUBLIC LIBRARIES: That seems to be one conclusion to draw from a progress report sent in by Verena Bryson, Chairman of the Public Libraries Section of the South Carolina Library Association. When the South Carolina Library Board expressed its inability get into the budget for next year a proposal for an increase in State Aid to $1 per capita, SCLA's Legislative Committee won an appearance before the South Carolina State Budget and Control Board. There they got a chance to plead their case, and to urge on legislators that they were talking about "funds that come back to the counties and have a direct and measurable impact on the constituency back home." But what really grabbed the attention of the Budget & Control Board was learning that Greenville County Library employees are deputized as voter registrars and do registration in the library. One legislator suggested a state law providing voter registration in all libraries. Clearly, nothing but good could flow from such a connection made firmly in the legislative mind.

THE CANADIAN LIBRARIAN: LOTS OF STATUS, LITTLE $$: The Montreal Star recently compared the results of two national surveys one of which charted the social status of various kinds of employment in Canada, and another showing the relative incomes received by people in various occupations. The information isn't very new, and things might be different if the surveys were taken today. But librarians ranked up there in social status with teachers, ship's pilots, real estate office managers, YMCA Directors, and ahead of such people as airline hostesses, symphony musicians, athletes, and moriticians. But on the other scale, (pay), librarians were well down: on a par with the morticians and well below teachers, travelling salesmen, disc jockeys, and livestock buyers.

VOLUNTEERS IN MARYLAND: A BUDGET PLUS: The Baltimore County Public Library reports that in fiscal 1975-76 a force of 26 volunteers gave the library a total of over 3300 hours of work valued in dollars at $9,209.75....CORRECTION: A typo in The October 25 LJ/SLJ Hotline report by Noel Savage on a NY City meeting that discussed the place of volunteers in libraries: On page 5, on the 12th line from the bottom, the figure of "17%" should read "70". The point being made was that most people who volunteer are already working at something else, so it's not a case of the volunteer being an unemployed person, like a housewife, who deprives someone else of a job by volunteering.

WONDERS & PORTENTS: THE OUTER LIMITS OF LIBRARY PROGRAMMING: The Chimayo (NM) Public Library was recently reported as passing out flea powder to area residents; the reason: fear of bubonic plague in the area....Also from New Mexico comes this story of an unusual library service to children: The Special Libraries Association, Rio Grande Chapter, got together the money to provide a supply of books for the children of Canjillon, who have an unusually long bus ride every day and need something to take their minds off the mileage....The West Virginia Library Commission (Director Fred Glazer) rang the PR bell in October with a full page ad in Time magazine. The ad plugged the new film service provided by the State Library agency, and boomed: "When they turn off the lights in West Virginia's public libraries, 'THE FUN BEGINS'"....a successful Writer's Workshop is reported at the Gary Public Library, Indiana, by Sandra Bokamba. Gary PL's Alcott Writer's Workshop has been running for two years now, bringing together local writers and would be writers, helping them to get published, and even producing a book as a collective effort.

RIGHT-TO-READ: DOES IT WORK? Yes, according to an evaluation of programs in 31 states by Applied Management Sciences, Inc. According to the newsletter Education Daily, the study found the programs, which are run by independent local groups, but are often aided by public and school libraries, to have achieved "meaningful effect utilizing a relatively modest amount of money." States get about $100,000 apiece to work with each year (the study itself cost $240,580, which is not so modest). Best results were found in projects that had a full time director, with "more emphasis on reading, higher student scores, and fewer problems in implementing the program."

JOB & CAREER PAMPHLETS WORK: A little grandma & grandpa publishing venture out on New York's Long Island produces two helpful little pamphlets that libraries are finding not only useful in job info work, but cheap enough to be given away in quantity. The pamphlets attack two problems of the neophyte worker: Selling Yourself at Your Job Interview and Getting Started and Getting Ahead on Your New Job. For a free sample, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Personnel Publications, P.O. Box 301, Huntington, NY 11743. They cost as little as 10¢ each in orders of 1000 or more, and only 12¢ each for the smallest order, 100 copies (plus postage unless check accompanies order).

HEAD LIBRARIAN AT MILITARY INSTITUTE PLEADS GUILTY OF BOOK THEFT: Lieutenant Colonel George Davis, head librarian at Virginia Military Institute for 11 years, has pleaded guilty to stealing 7500 books worth $34,000, reports the NY Times. LJ/SLJ Hotline contacted Mrs. Wylma Davis, Acting Librarian, who confirmed the report, but said that no new precautions would be taken because "the school runs on the honor system, which works very well."

WEST VA. IS AV ANGEL/HEW REPORTS AV $$ AVAILABLE/A TV LEARNING PROJECT: The West Va. State Library Commission (Fred Glazer, Director) has bought 1500 new films for its spanking new home, and has them listed in a catalog called Pickflicks, which is available for $7.50 and could be helpful as an example

WEST VA. IS AV ANGEL/HEW REPORTS AV $$ AVAILABLE/A TV LEARNING PROJECT, (Cont'd): of films picked within a short time period to form a collection. Order from the W. Va. Library Commission, Charleston, W. Va. 25305....The Office of Education has passed out $7.5 million to 774 postsecondary institutions in 50 states, DC, and Puerto Rico to buy "instructional equipment, materials, and related remodeling", i.e.: AV hardware, software, and places to put it....A $3,500,000 project to improve 5th and 6th grade learning will provide 60 15-minute video programs for US and Canadian classroom use starting September 1979. The series will "emphasize critical thinking and study skills and include reviews of math and communication skills." This, the ninth and biggest such project of the Agency for Instructional TV (AIT) has been in the works since 1974, and may lay groundwork for similar ventures for other age groups.

TROLLS/INDEX TO BRITANNICA/MEDBOOKS FOR LAYPEOPLE: If your acquisitions system is blowing fuses trying to order the several titles from Troll Associates which were highly praised by a recent SLJ, here is the address to plug in: Troll Associates, 320 Route 17, Mahwah, N.J. 07430. Phone: 201-529-4000....A very stung public librarian, who plunked down $195 for an index to the Britannica and received nothing in return, asks for anyone with similar experience to share it with him via the LJ/SLJ Hotline. The outfit involved was billed as Library Reference Sources, Suite 303E, 200 Park Avenue, NY, NY 10017. Britannica people have recently won a court judgement barring people from making indexes of its volumes and selling them, using the Britannica name....Public librarians are increasingly being expected to provide books on law and medicine to the nonlawyer and nonphysician--something that was a holy no-no not so many years ago. An aid for this sharing of the information wealth is the Boston Public Library's Medical Books for the Lay Person, by Marilyn McLean Philbrook, BPL Reference Librarian; it lists 300 titles and is available for $2 a copy from the BPL Information Office.

Karl Nyren

Karl Nyren, Editor

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

Rate: $3 per line; 4 line minimum. Deadline: Noon every Tuesday for issue dated the following Monday. To place ads, call 212-764-5179 or 5180. Or mail to: LJ/SLJ HOTLINE, R.R. Bowker Co., 1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10036.

POSITIONS AVAILABLE

DIRECTOR: The board of trustees of the Lewis & Clark Library (Helena, Montana) announces that the position of Director of the library is open. Salary: $1200 to $1500 per month depending upon qualifications and experience. Applications must be received by December 12, 1976. Employment begins no later than February 1, 1977. For more information, write G. Blewett, Chairman of the Board of Trustees, Lewis & Clark Library, 120 So. Last Chance Mall, Helena, Mont. 59601.

ASSOCIATE DIRECTOR FOR NETWORK: Salary $20,470-$26,124 per annum. Washington State Library, Olympia, Washington 98504. Plans, organizes, and directs day-to-day activities in programs of the Washington Library Network, with emphasis on telecommunications and computer systems. Coordinates use of human and physical resources with area of responsibility to achieve above objectives, in order to meet critical work load and provide adequate professional, paraprofessional, and clerical support for programs. Reports directly to the State Librarian and works with the Washington Library Network Representative Assembly and Executive Countil on issues related to area of responsibility, for the Washington Library Network Services, Washington Library Network Development, Statewide Library Development. Requirements: professional librarian with four years experience including DIRECTOR, LEARNING RESOURCES CENTER: Indiana University East. Reports to the Dean of the campus. Responsible for overall leadership, administration, operation, and development of I.U. East Learning Resources Center. Qualifications include (A) minimum of MLS from an accredited school of library science. (B) An ability to work effectively with faculty, students, staff, and the community in developing and promoting the Learning Resources Center and the campus. (C) library experience which includes position of relatively high level supervisory responsibility; good knowledge of the library service needs of an academic community; demonstrates sensitivity and management leadership skills. Salary from $13,500 to $16,000 depending on qualifications and experience. This is a 12 month appointment which carries library faculty rank with the possibility to tenure. Usual fringe benefits. Beginning date negotiable. Apply to: Professor George T. Blakey, Chairman, Search & Screen Committee, Office of the Dean, Indiana University East, 2325 Chester Boulevard, Richmond, Indiana 47374. Indiana University is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer. Deadline for applications: December 15, 1976.

HEAD, SCIENCE LIBRARY: Administrative responsibility for University's Science Library of over 260,000 volumes in the sciences, engineering, pharmacy, and nursing. Staff consists of five professionals, eleven full-time supportive experience in automated systems work and supervisory experience, or experience in a variety of libraries. Certification by Washington State Board for Certification of Librarians is required prior to appointment. Immediate applications are solicited and must be received no later than November 26, 1976. We would also appreciate your contacting the State Library immediately if you have a nomination for this position. Please write: Roderick G. Swartz, State Librarian, Washington State Library, Olympia, Washington 98504. The Washington State Library is an Equal Opportunity, Affirmative Action Employer.

ASSOCIATE DIRECTOR (Cont'd)

LIBRARY DIRECTOR: Kenosha, Wisconsin. Rewarding and challenging position to head library in industrialized South Eastern Wisconsin Community of 85,000. Library system includes four branches, employs 71, and has an operating budget of $1 million. Applicants must have an MLS degree or equivalent and 7 years of professional library experience including five years in administration. Starting salary $20,370 plus impressive fully paid employee benefit program. Send resume by 12/12/76 to City Personnel Office, Municipal Building, 625 52nd Street, Kenosha, Wisconsin 53140. Affirmative Action Employer.

PROJECT DIRECTOR INFO: Multi-county project serving 9 public libraries in two counties with staff of 4½ FTE. Qualifications are MLS degree & 3 years of supervisory experience in public libraries. Required are broad knowledge of library materials, library methodology, acquisitions, and familiarity with administration of federal funds. The salary is $12,000 to $14,000. Send resume by December 1, 1976 to Richard E. Willson, Director of Lorain Public Library, 351 Sixth Street, Lorain, Ohio 44052. EQUAL OPPORTUNITY EMPLOYER M/F.

LIBRARY DEVELOPMENT OFFICER: The Wyoming State Library is seeking a highly qualified individual to fill one of the most important library positions in the state. Responsibilities include all phases of statewide library development, with emphasis on continuing education for library personnel in all tax-supported libraries in the state. Minimum qualifications: 6 years professional experience in public and state library agencies, willingness to travel. Salary range: $12,384-$16,608. Contact: John M. Carter, Deputy State Librarian, Wyoming State Library, Cheyenne 82002.

HEAD OF REFERENCE: Large Medical Center library requires medical reference librarian and bibliographer. Should have experience in searching biomedical data bases, e.g. MEDLINE, BIOSIS, etc. Supervises three clerical assistants. Salary $13,200. The University of Virginia is an Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer. Dr. Wilhelm Moll, Director, Health Sciences Library, Box 234, University of Virginia Medical Center, Charlottesville, VA. 22901.

LIBRARY SCIENCE FACULTY POSITION: Teaching responsibilities: public librarianship and media design and production. Qualifications: MLS, doctorate in library science or related field; experience. Salary and rank open. Available January 1977. Apply to: Dr. Florence DeHart, School of Library Science, EKSC, Emporia, KS 66801. An Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer.

HEAD, CATALOG SECTION. Supervise 2 professional and 5 clerical staff. Perform original cataloging and Dewey classification. Supervise input to book or microform vendor. MLS; 2 years' professional library experience, cataloging experience preferred. Salary $13,278-$16,512. Deadline for applications December 20, 1976. Contact John Webb, Assistant Administrator, Library Services Division, Oregon State Library, Salem, Oregon 97310.

HEAD, SCIENCE LIBRARY (Cont'd)
staff plus student assistants. Annual acquisitions approximately 11,000 volumes, over 2400 journal subscriptions. The Science Library is a significant research resource to science and industry in Metropolitan Detroit. Required: Fifth year library science degree from an accredited library school; at least three years of experience with administrative responsibilities in a large science or technical library; evidence of professional interest and leadership in developing cooperative library programs and services to the scientific community. Salary: $20,000+ depending upon qualifications and experience. Fringe benefits: TIAA/CREF retirement plan; social security; health, hospital, and life insurance partially subsidized; liberal sick leave. Wayne State University is an equal opportunity and an affirmative action employer. Write to: Robert T. Grazier, Associate Director of Libraries, Wayne State University, Detroit, MI 48202.

REFERENCE LIBRARIAN (ASSISTANT): Provides a general reference service, selects library materials in assigned fields, prepares bibliographies and study aids as needed, conducts classes on library resources, maintains faculty contacts. MLS from accredited library school. Strong background in art and literature preferred, second master's desirable. Salary commensurate with qualifications. 12 month faculty appointment. Closing date for receipt of applications is December 3, 1976. Send vita and three references to: Dr. David Walch, Director of Academic Services, E.H. Butler Library, State University of New York College at Buffalo, 1300 Elmwood Avenue, Buffalo, NY 14220. An Equal Opportunity Affirmative Action Employer.

CATALOGING POSITION: With significant responsibilities in reference. Emphasis in cataloging will be on original cataloging in various languages and subject fields. Preference shown to candidates with MA/MS in business, economics, or physical sciences. Minimum 12 mo. salary $11,556. Applicants to specify working knowledge languages and three references. Closing date for applications Dec. 1, 1976. Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer. Applications or request for full vacancy announcement addressed to: David K. Oyler, University Librarian, Humboldt State University, Arcata, California 95521.

PUBLIC HEALTH LIBRARIAN: Combined technical service and reference responsibilities. Responsible for supervision of bibliographic checking, ordering for monographic and serial acquisition, serials entry, claiming, catalog processing and binding of approximately 2,000 serial publications. Reference service will include formulation and running of computerized searches, preparation of bibliographies participation in orientation tours and instructional programs and service at a reference desk. Requires MLS and library experience with serial publications and on-line data base searching. Preference will be given applicants with health science background, MEDLINE training and supervisory experience. Classification as Assistant or Associate Librarian in a salary range of $12,312-$21,708 depending on qualifications. This position funded on contract through 6/30/77 and is subject to renewal on a year-by-year basis. Full job description available on request. Send resume by 10 December 1976 to William E. Wenz, Library Personnel Officer, 447 Library, University of California, Berkeley, CA 94720. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

ASSISTANT HEAD LIBRARIAN: Southwest Chicago suburb seeking service-oriented person with 5 years experience after MLS, including at least one year of supervisory experience. Will coordinate efforts of four public service departments. Must be outgoing and enjoy working with people, experienced in collection building, PR-oriented, able to work with library board, able to make mistakes and profit from them. Salary range $15,000-$19,800, 4 weeks vacation, etc. Position available November 1, 1976. Submit resume with references to James M. O'Brien, Head Librarian, Oak Lawn Public Library, 9427 South Raymond Avenue, Oak Lawn, Illinois 60453.

NEWS

Book selection guidelines adopted by N.Y. Regents

In a move to assist the growing number of school districts that have encountered community opposition to textbooks and library books they have made available to students, the New York State Board of Regents has adopted its first set of guidelines on the selection of controversial books—including material dealing with sex.

Said the Regents, "If the schools are to carry out the important role of helping students to develop the skills and attitudes to function successfully in society, students must be provided with opportunities and experiences which foster critical thinking in an atmosphere of free inquiry." Distinguishing between the respective roles of parents and schools, the Regents urged that school boards honor requests from parents who ask that a specific item not be given to their child, but that schools should not permit "any parent or group of parents to determine what materials may be used for pupils other than their own children." As for materials "presenting accents on sex," the Regents urged that the criteria for selection be based on "a test of literary merit and reality." The inclusion of sexual incidents or profanity, the Regents said, should not automatically disqualify a book.

The Regents backed local autonomy and urged that each local school district develop its own selection policy—one reflecting the thinking of the district and insuring a consistent procedure by all school personnel. And it was urged that schools get community input in formulating a book selection policy via an appointed advisory committee representing various segments of the community—both parents and pupils as well as teachers, administrators, and school librarians. An appeal procedure for parents should be spelled out, the Regents said, but the school board should retain final authority for approving any plan.

The Regents came up with specific criteria to be included in district selection policies. Among them: "factual, unbiased material representing all major religions should be included in the library collection; materials should present a reasonable balance of opposing sides of controversial issues . . . ; materials should present an accurate portrayal of minority groups; . . . and materials should present the varied aspects of our society, including some that may be considered undesirable."

Only two out of the ten Regents voting on adoption of the guidelines objected to them. One of them, Genevieve S. Klein of Queens, had earlier pledged that she would work to "get garbage out of libraries." Now she charges that the new guidelines do not sufficiently protect the rights of parents and instead support "the right of teachers and librarians to force objectionable material on our children"—the sort of "garbage" which could corrupt them.

Libraries & gov't info: more federal $$ asked

The recently formed National Citizens Emergency Committee to Save Our Public Libraries has taken an interesting approach in its campaign for more federal aid to help bail out financially-ailing public libraries; it contends that the "nation's public libraries . . . are a basic information resource . . . and as such are absolutely essential to that unique American institution—the First Amendment." In a letter prefacing a sheaf of relevant documents that is to go to congressmen, governors, mayors, and state legislative leaders, and NCEC spokesperson author Theodore H. White argued that "the obvious answer" to government's fulfilling its espoused commitment to First Amendment guarantees "lies in dependable, long-range federal funding for public libraries, in partnership with state and local government."

Said White, "The starting place for any journalist on a 'big story' is his public library. Cut off this source and you impair the freedom of the press. Unfortunately, that is exactly what is going on today in our country. Public libraries are closing their doors or reducing hours in community after community. . . . America's literary output is bound to suffer in the long run if this situation is not corrected at once."

A 25-page fact sheet accompanying White's letter sets forth the role of libraries in aiding the flow of information. The report, prepared by NCEC Research Director Elizabeth Layne, notes that Congress in 1857 authorized public libraries to provide citizens with information about government operations through a depository program. But "the effect of distributing these government publications is to impose an extra financial burden on libraries which must shelve and maintain them out of their own budgets." Said the report, "What the federal government is actually doing by this program is creating an additional burden of millions of dollars on hard-pressed local libraries. Instead of providing for the 'free use' of this invaluable information about government, Congressional policy is actually helping to shorten the hours of library operation, force layoffs, and otherwise contribute to a denial of access to information."

The National Citizens Emergency Committee, which has as members such notables as Isaac Asimov, Terence Cardinal Cooke, Margaret Truman Daniel, Ralph Ellison, George Meany, and Leonard Woodcock, is headquartered at 1666 K St., N.W., 10th Floor, Washington, D.C. 20006. One contact person suggested: W. N. Seymour, Jr.; his phone number (212) 483-9000, ext. 368.

$$ for needy libraries: NEH legislation okayed

With the signing of legislation authorizing funding for the National Endowments for the Arts and Humanities ($93.5 million each for fiscal year 1977, $105 million each for 1978, and unspecified amounts for 1979 and 1980), libraries can expect to get some financial aid under special challenge grant programs provided by each endowment. The challenge grant programs will provide to "cultural institutions in great need" awards of one federal dollar to match $3 in funds from other sources; challenge grants totaling $12 million for 1977 and $18 million for 1978 will be made available by each Endowment.

Sarah Case of ALA's Washington Office had earlier told LJ that libraries, especially budget-squeezed urban libraries, would be eligible for challenge grants. Libraries were specifically mentioned in connection with the challenge grant programs in House floor debate. Both the National Endowment for the Humanities and the National Endowment for the Arts are in the process of developing guidelines for their challenge grant programs.

One indication that public libraries will be given a better chance in competing for Endowment money: Ronald S. Berman failed to get reappointed as chairperson of NEH because one top opponent (Senator Claiborne Pell of the Arts and Humanities Subcommittee) felt that NEH "has been too academically oriented and does not reach the average citizen."

Florida State Library to scrap processing service

The Florida State Library, reports Bureau of Book Processing Chief Glenn Tripplett, has decided to scrap its centralized book processing service, which had been offered to libraries across the state. The Bureau is slated to halt processing services to libraries on June 30, 1977; it will be renamed as the Bureau of Library Support Services for the State Library and will be responsible for the acquisition and processing of all State Library materials, automated State Library systems, and mail processing and courier services.

In announcing the termination of statewide processing services, State Librarian Cecil Beach said, "We no longer need a centralized book processing organization . . . the development of strong countywide and regional library services and systems has allowed most of these libraries to establish technical processing departments of their own." Other reasons for the phase-out of processing services given by Beach: commercial vendors attracted potential Bureau customers by offering processing service at a much lower cost and auditors became increasingly critical over the amount of federal money going into the operation.

In response to an LJ query, Bureau Chief Triplett said that 32 public, six institutional, and three community college libraries in the state were using the service, but cost-conscious libraries are switching to lower-priced commercial services, even at the sacrifice of quality. The State Library's processing bureau, noted Triplett, provided fast (a 14-day turnaround for full processing), efficient, and customized service with a system almost entirely based on the OCLC (Ohio College Library Center) system Florida has through SOLINET (Southeastern Library Network). It was not the cost of the latter, he stressed, that sank the program, but the inability to get enough state subsidies to keep prices competitive. Current prices cited: $1.60 per volume for LSCA-eligible libraries, $3.25 for others.

The failure of Florida's centralized state processing service again calls into question the practicality of such a system. It also lends more credence to a statement made last year by Walter Curley of Gaylord that commercial vendors would take over a lot of what library systems are now doing.

Nat'l Library Week PR: competition hurting ALA

The American Library Association has announced the availability of its PR materials for National Library Week 1977, slated for April 17-23. The theme this year is "Use Your Library," a message that is adaptable to all kinds of libraries and can be used all year long, not just during NLW. Order forms are available from NLW/ALA, 50 E. Huron St., Chicago, Ill. 60611; details on the prices of materials appear in the October issue of American Libraries.

But LJ has learned that the NLW program of ALA may be in trouble, mostly because of growing competition from both private firms and other library agencies and associations. The most severe competition, it is reported, comes from Upstart Library Promotions of Hagerstown, Maryland. ALA maintains that it uses the profits from the sales of promotional materials not just to develop the following year's materials, but also to pay for the national-level material it develops—TV and radio work that benefits all libraries.

Responding to an LJ query on the foregoing reports, NLW Committee Head Alice Norton said: "This year ALA's National Library Week posters, bookmarks, and TV slides combine superb design and a message for all—'use your library.' We wish ALA could give materials to every library. But the cost is modest and we hope every library will buy our materials and use them all year (outside the library as well as inside). A fraction of each sale helps finance ALA's year-long public information efforts."

As for competition from other producers of NLW materials, Norton said: "Because ALA's NLW poster designs appear in national magazines, newspapers, and on TV, libraries benefit when they display the same posters locally. That's just good merchandising. Local libraries can effectively combine ALA's materials with local ones that promote special events or campaigns for increased funding. But we reduce the impact of our national campaign when we dilute it with many themes and many designs. Libraries still lag behind other professional groups and trade associations in coordinated promotion. NLW can carry our library messages—if we'll use it!"

Stanford's book heist; thievery in Virginia

The latest reports on library security to come to LJ indicate that libraries are still vulnerable to book theft, a Stanford student and a Virginia Military Institute librarian were the latest to get nailed for having stolen thousands of dollars worth of books.

Stanford University reports recovery of some $100,000 worth of rare books from its library and the jailing of a former 1974-75 student-at-large, James Wilson Mull. According to the Stanford Observer, Mull had a burglary record in North Carolina and was also recently the subject of a 15-month chase by police officers from five countries—one that culminated in his imprisonment in Zurich; he was brought back to face charges stemming from the Stanford heist. The books were recovered in 13 boxes in a San Francisco warehouse; they included 193 rare books, ranging from 16th-Century publications to private press productions and first editions of modern British and American authors.

And from Lexington, Virginia comes a report that the head librarian at the Virginia Military Institute has pleaded guilty to stealing 7500 books from the school library—items valued at more than $34,000. Lieutenant Colonel George Davis has been head librarian at VMI for 11 years.

CU library school changes name

The University of California-Berkeley reports that its School of Librarianship has been renamed; it's now the School of Library and Information Studies.

We are smaller than 3M...
So are our strips...
So are our prices...

3M's strip

(Actual size photograph)

Our strip

When your library needs a book detection system, select the specialist who is the most capable and comprehensive, as well as the least expensive. Our only business is article protection (such as books, records, cassettes and periodicals), not gum tape or 30 other products. Our engineers have developed a stronger target strip that is about 50% shorter and narrower than those used by 3M, and is the smallest effective target strip in the world.

What advantage is this to you?

Lower Cost Smaller strips mean lower cost to you. Targeting 250,000 books initially could save your library $10,000, or allow you to target an additional 200,000 books. This saving goes on year after year on your new acquisitions.

Added Security Smaller strips are more easily secreted within the boards of books or deep in the spine where they cannot be reached and rendered inoperative. Gutter applications are significantly harder to detect (particularly in periodicals). Prove it to yourself, try it and see. We'll send samples of our strips at your request.

More Versatility Our smaller strips can be placed under book pockets, book plates and even in books as small as four inches without diminishing their strength.

Additional Coverage KNOGO's superior technology has also resulted in a unique, compatible semi-circular strip that can be affixed directly to phono records or tape cassettes, not merely to their jackets or covers, thereby protecting the actual items. No other system available offers this feature. It's another KNOGO exclusive.

Labor Savings Since our strips are stronger, more firm, shorter and narrower, the cost of placement by your personnel is significantly reduced because our strips are easier to handle and insertion can be combined with other operations such as book pocket or book plate processing.

And in one way... in the article surveillance field... we are larger than 3M, or any other company. We have over 2,000 article surveillance systems operating in libraries, retail stores and industry throughout the United States, Canada and Europe. When it comes to surveillance systems in which the article protects itself from theft, we are both the originators of the technique and the innovators of its advancing technology. We are the oldest company and the best company in the article surveillance field. We have to be. It's the only thing we do.

If you'd like additional information—send for our newest brochure on library book protection systems, and/or our catalog describing all of our products—and/or our annual report describing KNOGO. Best of all, send for our sales engineer.

knogo
Book Detection System

knogo corporation

100 Tec Street, Hicksville, New York 11801
(516) 822-4200/Telex 125527 (KNOGO HIC)

Europe
KNOGO Europe Ltd.
Rue Neuve 136, 1640 Rhode Saint Genese
Belgium/Tel: 02 358.52.02/Telex: 61371 (KNOBEL B)

SPECIAL FALL SALE

THE family practice

invites you to complete your file of family practice literature or add extra copies to your existing set during our special limited time only sale.

Place your order for complete sets of the 1975 volume before December 31, 1976 and we'll give you 25% off the current cost!

The six-issue volume sells for $40.50 during calendar year 1976; as of January 1, the set will be priced at $54.00.

Order it now and we'll bill you only $30.40, a full one-quarter off the list price!

Send your purchase order or check to:
Ms. Nancy Green
THE JOURNAL OF FAMILY PRACTICE
292 Madison Avenue
New York, N.Y. 10017

TO RESERVE YOUR SET BEFORE DECEMBER 31, CALL MS. GREEN AT (212) 490-8223.

JOSTEN'S 1977-78 LIBRARY SUPPLIES

SEND FOR THIS NEW USEFUL CATALOG TODAY

★ Our biggest catalog ever
★ 100's of "How To" hints and useful new items

BOOK PROCESSING SUPPLIES/ AUDIO-VISUAL EQUIPMENT/COMPUTERIZED CATALOGING MATERIALS/BOOKS FOR LIBRARIES/BOOK REPAIR & MAINTENANCE AIDS/LIBRARY FURNITURE/LIBRARY DISPLAY MATERIALS

Josten's
Library Supplies Div. 1301 Cliff Rd. Burnsville, MN 55337

YES! Please send me your new catalog right away!

NAME _____

LIBRARY _____

ADDRESS _____

CITY/STATE/ZIP _____

THE LIBRARY DOLLAR

Budget crunch prompts new priority setting

Faced with little prospect of an improvement in the budget slump, libraries and state library agencies are trying to gird for prospective dollar shortages by reviewing their priorities—picking those services felt to be most worth saving despite funding losses. Among the latest to recast their priorities are the Minneapolis Public Library and Information Center and the Wyoming State Library.

The need to "establish priorities in the face of the dollar shortage . . . a potential $150,000-200,000 budget deficit for 1977" prodded the Minneapolis Public Library to get its staff to draft a ten-point action plan, reports Director Joseph Kimbrough. The top objective picked by MPL staff: "providing a well-selected collection of books and materials for the use of the people of the city and its larger community. An increase in the materials purchasing budget will take precedence over controllable funds in 1977."

Other objectives of prime importance chosen by MPL staffers: maintenance of adequate staff (a study is underway to determine exactly how many staffers are needed for "effective library service"); providing service at hours convenient to the public even if hours are reduced; providing a more pleasant, efficient, and accessible physical plant; and making maximum use of human resources via "staff training and development, affirmative action hiring policies, and improved internal communications between staff and administration."

And MPL staffers pointed to the need for broader outreach service and improved resource sharing. Their recommendations: study the pattern of library service throughout the city and work "to achieve a balance in terms of buildings, staff, and services provided"; develop "alternative and imaginative ways of providing services . . . particularly to . . . the 'information poor'"; and let other educational and informational agencies "perform their functions in library buildings."

In Wyoming, the State Advisory Council on Libraries ("a statewide group of librarians and lay persons appointed by the State Librarian to assist in developing library service") met recently to discuss what their priorities would be in case efforts to get more state funding fail. Listed as the top priority by the Council was: "the continuation and strengthening of interlibrary loan and reference service"; followed by "continuing education in Wyoming libraries," with greater cooperation between the State Library and the University of Wyoming urged; and finally the creation of a statewide union catalog.

Schomburg's heat shortage; NYPL zapped for racism

The Citizens Coalition to Save the Schomburg is at it again; this time around the group has put New York Public Library's administration under fire for failing to act swiftly enough in repairing a broken boiler at the Schomburg Library, which is recognized as a major repository for materials about blacks. Because of the boiler breakdown, the second and third floors of the building were closed to the public. Said CCSS spokesperson Laurence Holmes, the fact that "the boiler at the Schomburg has been broken for over a week . . . [is another indication] of the policy of racial discrimination practiced by NYPL. Would NYPL allow the Lincoln Center Library or the 42nd Street main library to go without heat for so long? These glamourous buildings, located in high income white areas, are open today, but the largest black library in the world is closed to the public because of the racist neglect which has long characterized NYPL's funding policy."

And the Coalition charged that bad publicity given to such horrendous conditions at Schomburg as leaky ceilings, falling plaster, and lack of shelf space have only succeeded in getting NYPL to send over a crew of painters and plasterers to do "patch-up jobs."

The Citizens Coalition, which since its founding in June of 1976 has been organizing protest rallies (at the latest, Historian John Henrik Clarke spoke to an audience of over 250), has demanded that NYPL go ahead with the planned construction of a new building to house the Schomburg collection. And the Coalition disputed NYPL's claim that a lack of funding is holding back construction of a new Schomburg home. The city, it argued, purchased a site in 1972 and had earlier agreed to pay construction costs. And if NYPL is so short on construction money, the Coalition asked, where did it find the revenue to build an addition to the Lincoln Center Library and do extensive renovation on its main facilities?

The Coalition has also protested the terminations of Archivist Laurore St. Juste (in May of 1975) and Acquisitions Librarian Keith Kern (in May of 1976); it claims that both positions were adequately funded and that New York's budget drought did not prompt the firings. Both St. Juste and Kern are trying to get their jobs back; they've filed complaints with the State and City Human Rights Commissions in efforts to get the library to restore their positions.

Oregon tax levy scoreboard: small gains, big setbacks

The Oregon State Library reports the results of votes on library levies—proposals to up library tax support recently put before the voters in various areas of the state. Although a few victories at the polls were reported, there were still some stunning setbacks—a sudden reverse in the standard pattern; Oregon communities usually strongly support their libraries and show their sentiments at the polls.

In the victory column: the Josephine County Library won a 25 percent hike in its operating budget plus new construction money to go for a branch replacement and renovation work. With the increase in its operating budget, Josephine County will restore its normal service schedule, add four full-time staff members, and upgrade its film program. Also reported: the approval of a $52,969 tax levy in Seaside—it will enable the library to go back to its regular 43½ hour week service schedule.

And now the bad news: scant voter turnout in Clackamas County (only 11 percent of the electorate went to the polls) is blamed for the recent defeat—by a vote of 6,589 to 6,356—of a three-year serial levy which would have generated $450,000 annually for the county library system. The county library (headquartered in Oregon City) had been counting on the success of its tax proposal to provide it with enough revenue to keep going; the county—which had failed in its effort to win support for a separate tax levy to fill its own coffers—had announced earlier that it could no longer fund the county library system. City libraries, incidentally, are not affected by the county money shortage; they're supported with municipal funds. The failure of the county library levy has resulted in the closing of county library facilities (they will not reopen until July unless another tax levy is voted in), the layoff of system staff, and the termination of such programs and services as bookmobile operations, interlibrary loan, and central cataloging provided to city libraries served by the system.

Other setbacks reported: Coos Bay nixed a city tax levy for the third time—prompting reduction in library service hours to a mere 14 hours a week and cuts in book purchases, personnel, capital expenditures, and public services.

The failure of a city tax levy in Lebanon may lead to the closing of the public library. And the Jackson County Library System's budget is at a new low of $823,000—down some 18 per cent from last year. Besides reducing hours of service, the system has cut headquarters staff from 23 to eight people.

Emporia, Kansas votes building $$

Emporia, Kansas voters have passed a $1.25 million bond issue for the construction of a new 22,000 square foot library facility, reports Emporia Public Library Director Daniel Masoni. The voting margin was two to one, the largest majority for any bond issue since 1956. On top of bond issue money, there's $85,000 in Revenue Sharing for the new building and another $72,000 in private gifts. The new facility will replace the existing 6000 square foot Carnegie building, which is slated to become a county museum.

The Big One is Still The Best!

Soon after Information Design's microfilm reader was introduced in 1973, it was rated "best" in side-by-side tests with virtually every 35mm roll film viewer in use. It's still the easiest reader for patrons to use. And it's still the only reader that offers you all of these advantages: a big 24″ screen that projects an entire newspaper page; an automatic film gate that protects your film from being scratched; full 360° image rotation.

Since 1973, we've made dozens of engineering modifications to improve the I.D. 201's performance and ease of operation. Prove it to yourself—the big one's still the best and better than ever!

For a copy of the study entitled "User Evaluations of Microfilm Readers," or to arrange a demonstration of the Model 201-1 Microfilm Reader, write to Information Design, Inc., 3247 Middlefield Road, Menlo Park, CA 94025. Or telephone (415) 369-2962.

INFORMATION DESIGN, INC.

How to get the best Circulation Control System now. And guarantee your library the best system 20 years from now.

The Gaylord Computerized Circulation Control System: An answer to the growing demands of library service.

Plain and simple, libraries provide a service. And for 80 years now, Gaylord has been exclusively dedicated to maximizing that service. In response to the latest demands of today's libraries and library networks, Gaylord, in consultation with computer experts and librarians, has created the Gaylord Circulation Control System.

A complete service

The system satisfies virtually all circulation needs, from handling, issuing and returning items to automatically indicating delinquent borrowers and calculating overdue fines.

It's a complete service that includes equipment, its installation, maintenance and updating, processing of information, preparation of notices and reports, and staff training.

Flexibility

The system has been designed to improve the sharing of library resources, and is expandable regionally, statewide and nationally.

Since you can lease the equipment, rather than purchase it, you will never be "stuck" with obsolete equipment. Gaylord will continuously incorporate whatever technological advances are made, so you will always have the most advanced system available: 5 years from now . . . 20 years from now.

Simplicity

With our system, there is no need to add specialized technicians to your staff. As a matter of fact, Gaylord will teach your present library personnel to operate the system practically overnight.

Economy

Since five to eight people would be needed to perform the tasks that the system does automatically, it saves the library a great deal of money and frees the librarian to improve patron services. Yet it requires no large capital expenditure, and in fact, the system's cost can be defrayed even further if you share it with other libraries.

Gaylord reliability

Responsibility for the complete system rests with Gaylord, thereby eliminating the problems that can occur when individual parts of a system are the responsibility of several sources. Moreover, the servicing of the equipment is the finest in the industry—it is backed nationwide by 1,300 Digital servicemen who can be in your library within two to four hours.

Because Gaylord is committed to meeting changing library needs, the Gaylord Circulation Control System was designed with the future in mind. It will not only be the most effective circulation control system today: it will be the most effective one tomorrow.

The Gaylord name is your guarantee.

GLS

GAYLORD...ask any librarian.

GAYLORD BROS., INC., LIBRARY SYSTEMS, SUPPLIES, EQUIPMENT & PUBLICATIONS
Syracuse, NY 13201 TWX 710 545-0232 Stockton, CA 95208
Furniture Manufacturing Division Sanford, NC 27330
Distributed in Canada Exclusively by Lowe-Martin Ltd. Ottawa, K1G 3M4

Revenue Sharing extended

President Ford has signed into law (PL 94-488) legislation extending the Revenue Sharing program for almost four years; $25.6 billion in State and Local Fiscal Assistance Act money is slated to go to state and local governments before the law expires on October 1, 1980. But libraries are no longer listed as a priority area for RS allocations; the new law puts no restriction on how local and state government may choose to use RS, and the competition for these funds may get even tougher.

ERIC searches for sale

The Information Systems Department of Eastern Illinois University's Booth Library announces that it will start providing retrospective search of the ERIC data base to public and academic libraries willing to pay for the service. Search requests of ERIC's Resources in Education, Current Index to Journals in Education, and AIM-ARM will be accepted by mail or telephone. For details concerning charges and turnaround time, contact Information Systems Department, Booth Library, Eastern Illinois University, Charleston, Ill. 61920. The number to call is (217) 581-5433.

the large print Micro fiche Reader for brochure write to
LIBRARY MICROFILMS & MATERIALS CO.
5709 MESMER AVENUE · CULVER CITY, CA 90230 especially designed for LIBRARIES

RESOURCE SHARING

Cheers & caveats at UC-San Diego

Resource sharing is becoming a hot topic, and the University of California, San Diego was one instituion to bring together prominent librarians recently to explore the implications of resource sharing primarily among academic libraries. Among the views put forth: resource sharing is not the complete answer; there is a very real need for large academic library collections to meet the needs of both student and scholar; and libraries need to revamp their collection policies—they're still not responding to the real needs of scholars. These viewpoints, incidentally, differ dramatically with most of those expressed at the 1976 Pittsburgh Conference on Resource Sharing in Libraries, where many people seemed to feel it was time to move on networking nationally because resource sharing is inevitable and great independent resource libraries have become "castles in the sand" (LJ, November 15, p. 2336).

The San Diego meet was held to honor UC-San Diego's retiring Library Director, Melvin Voigt. Highlights of the symposium were reported to LJ by Nicola Daval of UCSD. The topic addressed: The Responsibility of the University Library Collection in Meeting the Needs of Its Campus and Local Community. Voigt himself started off the meet by noting that since he took the helm as University Librarian in 1960, UCSD has established itself as a major research library, and that in recent years the library has moved to strengthen its role as a "local/information resources exchange."

Working scholar's library needs

Both librarians and scholars set forth their ideas on what materials a university library should have at the symposium session, Defining Collection Parameters . . . the Ideal and the Reality. UCSD English Professor Andrew Wright said that ideally a working scholar needs access to a collection on the scale of those of the Library of Congress or the British Library. Most, he admitted, have to settle for large university collections that "have been established quite recently across the United States," but these library collections, he complained, "have grown without adequate realization of how scholars use them." There's a paucity of data useful in collection building, said Wright, contending that circulation figures and "sweepings studies" do not really reveal how scholars use library collections.

What a scholar needs, said Wright, is "bread-and-butter books" basic to ongoing scholarly research (a collection defined by him as far more extensive than that provided undergraduates) and access to comprehensive collections which would make "unpremeditated findings ('serendipity') possible." While admitting that the advent of such things as photocopying, microforms, and better cataloging "have made the lot of the scholar more tolerable," Wright said that "more efficient, and more productive, large collections of books near at hand remain indispensable."

Budget vs. user need

University Librarian Basil Stuart-Stubbs (University of British Columbia) saw collection building as a "dilemma of economics of space and budget versus the needs of a variety of users." Each user has his or her preferences: there's "the scientist, who gains access to his 'library' via indexes and abstracts, versus the humanist, who . . . relies heavily on a large collection in which to browse." Stuart-Stubbs said that there simply isn't a "neat pat formula for developing the right collection." UBC, he reported, tried one formula when a space crisis occurred; it used its automated circulation system to pin down books which

Stuart-Stubbs: ". . . there simply isn't a neat, pat formula for developing the right collection. . . . it's a dilemma of the economics of space and budget versus the needs of a variety of users" hadn't circulated since 1965, and then removed some 65,000 of its 1.4 million volumes from the shelves. But one unforeseen problem came up: there were calls (few in number) for books that are regularly used but not borrowed. Summing up, Stuart-Stubbs said "the findings of research and use of computer-based systems can assist in determining what should be in a collection, but a large element of human discretion is needed in deciding what must be readily available, and what can be safely placed at a distance or obtained from another library."

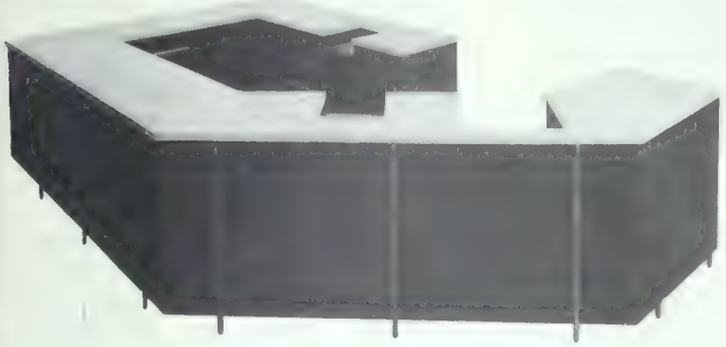
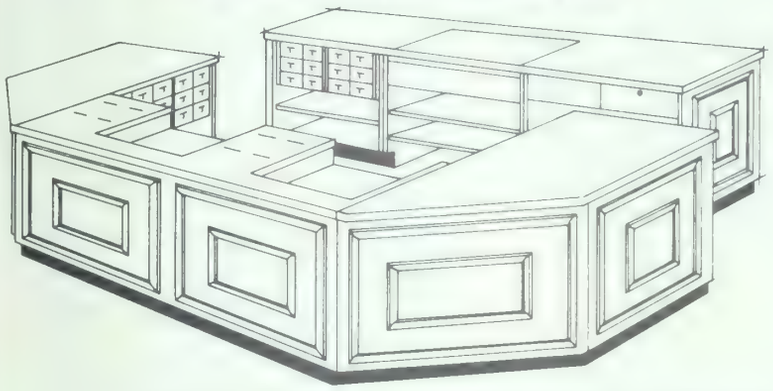
YOU CAN DESIGN A LIBRARY WITH OUR FURNITURE, OR WE CAN MAKE FURNITURE THAT YOU DESIGN.





Brodart can help you furnish and equip a library from our complete stock of practical, durable, and economical furniture. Our catalog lists more than 400 items, from catalog card cabinets to study carrels.

Or, we can help you with furniture custom built to your specifications, from custom shelving to circulation desks designed to accommodate the latest automated charging equipment.

We can help you meet the requirements of your client, whether you specify from our catalog, or ask us to meet your specifications.

But, perhaps most important, we can help you in a way few other furniture suppliers can. With the special knowledge of library functions 30 years of experience as a library supplier can provide.

When it comes to libraries, come to the company that can help you the most.

We salute the AMERICAN LIBRARY ASSOCIATION 1876–1976 ALA 100 Promoting Excellence in Library Service

PLEASE SEND THIS COUPON, OR WRITE TO:

Mr. Michael McInroy, Contract Sales Specialist
BRODART, INC., Dept. B 126
1609 Memorial Avenue
Williamsport, PA 17701

Dear Mr. McInroy: I would like to know more about Brodart's furniture and equipment capabilities, please have a representative contact me ☐. Please send me your catalog ☐.

Name_____

Title_____

Phone_____

Firm_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____ Zip_____

BRODART

THE LIBRARY COMPANY

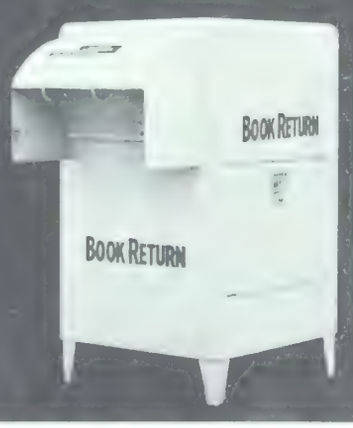
1609 MEMORIAL AVE., WILLIAMSPORT, PA 17701 1236 SO. HATCHER ST., CITY OF INDUSTRY, CA 91749 6 EDMONDSON ST., BRANTFORD, ONTARIO N3T 5N3

3-in-1

3 Pocket Sizes In One Rack!
. . . It holds virtually any size paperback and most children's books. No need to sort into different racks. Revolves in 25" circle. 63" height $69.50; new 46" height for children just $49.95. . . . One of many exclusive affordables in Highsmith's '76-77 Library/AV catalog. Send for your own free copy.

Highsmith
THE HIGHSMITH CO. INC
P.O. 25/0800
Fort Atkinson, WI 53538

Drive-Up Book Collector



- Auto-Page works around the clock to reduce overdues and increase lending volume
- Sturdy steel construction resists weather and theft
- Spring lowering feature cushions and protects books
- Priced within all library budgets. Call or write today:

The BOARDMAN Company
P. O. Box 26088
Oklahoma City, Oklahoma 73126
Phone (405) 634 5434

Eclipse of the big library

Michael Buckland, dean of the School of Library and Information Studies at UC-Berkeley, agreed that circulation studies can be misleading; many volumes are "decaying in use" until a scholar comes along to discover them. And Morris Polan, director of libraries, California State University, Los Angeles, stressed "the need for cooperation and sharing in this time of dwindling resources." Suggesting that the era of the giant library may be ending, he said that "It's up to the library community to realize that we can actually get more by sharing resources than by trying to make every library great." Polan's vision: "the future of library service is tied basically to our ability to combine all elements of library service together into a system where less will become more."

Polan: "It's up to the library community to realize that we can actually get more by sharing resources than by trying to make every library great"

Nat'l. vs. local access

Russell Shank of the Smithsonian Institution asserted that the scholar will probably have to rely on local resources for both "new knowledge in a given field (current awareness) and everyday demands for information in the conduct of research." Said Shank, "national collection development schemes will likely be inappropriate to supporting everyday needs. However . . . it is highly unlikely that any but a few library-rich regions can guarantee the universality of holdings required. The need to turn to remote resources for everyday needs will be important . . . though increasingly burdensome and expensive to support." National or even international resource sharing "will be of value in satisfying in-depth study needs . . . but widely dispersed material makes concentrated research a problem, and local resources will have to serve as core materials for research."

Shank stressed that "resource sharing cannot be isolated or restricted to specific regions or locations . . . and libraries must recognize the volume of literature needed, the timing involved, and the economic and psychic costs to the scholar" who depends on them for materials.

Shank: ". . . national collection development schemes will likely be inappropriate to supporting everyday needs. But . . . it is highly unlikely that any but a few library-rich regions can guarantee the universality of holdings required"

Resource sharing now

Robert Hayes, dean, School of Library Service, University of California, Los Angeles, stressed that resource sharing "is an essential part of the responsibility of the university library in meeting the needs of its campus and local community." Cooperation, he said, is being encouraged by technological developments and by federal legislation supporting the creation of library networks. Hayes said that it is important to distinguish between the two types of networks now developing: centralized or hierarchical, with a few major resource libraries handling most requests and distributed networks, with participating institutions sharing responsibility to a certain degree. Distributed networks, said Hayes, face such problems as slow response time, "low profile needs," duplication, and uneven distribution of usage. Hayes emphasized that the relative merits of a centralized network over a distributed network are too great to be ignored. "Though the choice may be unpopular in an egalitarian society—especially in these times of economic constraint—care must be taken that the major resources are maintained as such."

Public library visibility

Speaking up for public libraries, Detroit Public Library Director Clara Jones said that "public libraries have not become obsolete as major sources of information," but librarians must "reassess their values and goals in the light of the social revolution that has swept the U.S. since World War II." Jones maintained that the percentage of the population using libraries has stayed about the same for 20 years, and she urged libraries to find new ways to expand clientele. Offered up as an example: Detroit Public Library's successful experiment in providing information and referral. Detroit's TIP (The Information Place) phone service, said Jones, has reached residents of all economic and educational levels. But Jones said public libraries can go beyond such a service as TIP; "Detroit is now ready to move into a cooperative service, and possibly to a statewide network."

INTELLECTUAL FREEDOM

Canada's censors go after kids & diet buffs

The latest reports on intellectual freedom to come from Canada tell of efforts by striking teachers to keep their pupils from taking textbooks home, a nutrition group's campaign to persuade people to buy diet books it feels are medically sound, and the work of Indian police in tracking down Indian journalists who are smuggling out reports forbidden by the Ghandi government.

• Bookbag inspection: A report from Montreal says that striking teachers at the Mt. Bruno Intermediate School intercepted children attempting to take home textbooks to study, confiscating the books and giving the youngsters a list of activities to keep them busy during the school strike. The school principal, who ordered the inspections, denied that his ruling was influenced by the union. He explained that in the case of one book, there was a danger that some children would get too far ahead of others; as for workbooks confiscated, he said these were taken lest they be written in.

• Quacky diet books snubbed: The British Columbia Nutritional Council has mounted a campaign against a flood of what it calls "faddy, quacky" health and diet books hitting the market. Its tactic: BCNC is putting gold seals of approval on those nutrition books it feels are sound, trying in this way to persuade people to steer clear of diet books containing "misleading, nonsensical, and dangerous" information. The books BCNC frowns upon include those that recommend megadoses of vitamins, single food diets, and ketogenic diets high in proteins or fats and low in carbohydrates. Among the titles blessed by the Canadian organization: The Family Guide to Better Food and Better Health; Nutrition for Athletes; The Nutrition Factor, a Dozen Diets for Better or Worse; The Mother-Child Cookbook; Help! My Child Won't Eat Right; Feed Me, I'm Yours; Diet for a Small Planet; Nourishing Your Unborn Child; Slim Chance in a Fat World; and What Happened to a Hamburger. The Council stresses that it wants to guide—and not censor—the public choice in reading; and no one has yet raised the old library cry against "labelling."

• India cracks down on journalists: Canadians are concerned about recent reports of Indian police officers coming to Canada in apparently successful missions to find out the identities of the few Indian journalists who have continued to smuggle out reports forbidden by the Ghandi government since it declared a state of emergency. Indian journalists face a long stay in a jail cell if they fail to submit their reports to censors before they file them for publication abroad. So far, there doesn't seem to be anything Canadian police can do to stop Indian nationals from tracking down its erring journalists. But Canada's Department of External Affairs has denounced Indian intelligence operations and claimed that "appropriate steps are being taken to rectify the situation and to ensure that it will not happen again."

Mahwah, N.J. board rescinds "anti-car" book ban

For a while at least, it seemed as if Mahwah, New Jersey, home of a huge Ford plant, would stick with its own commandment—blessed are the car-makers and let no one denigrate them; Mahwah's school board had pledged its continued allegiance to the car industry when it banned a textbook (American Civics by William Hartley and William Vincent) as "anti-car." But the fracas raised over the anti-car book prompted the school board to review its position and repent. The board now says that it is against banning books or censorship. The civics, textbook will stay in the school system, and an earlier ban on Alexander Solzhenitsyn's One Day in the Life of Ivan Denisovich has been lifted—the book is still listed on a reading list as an alternative.

The rationale behind the ban of the civics book is interesting in that it shows the arguments that can be used to justify censorship. One board member (who also belongs to the John Birch Society) had explained his decision to

For libraries,
universities and Faculty
FRENCH and European BOOKS FROM ALL PUBLISHERS
Special fast handling
at lowest prices
OFFICE GENERAL DU LIVRE
14 bis, rue Jean Ferrandi
75006 Paris

nix the book in this way: "The book doesn't seem to be Mahwah; we're basically a middle-class, working-class, car-driving, home-owning community . . . without the car, where's Mahwah?"

But the Bergen Record saw things a different way, and in an editorial lambasting the board for its shortsightedness it said: "This may come as a shock to . . . school trustees . . . but there is a little more to this world of ours than Mahwah . . . Mr. Blatt complains that the textbook advocates increased mass transit and public housing and that its thrust favors cities. But transportation, housing, and general urban malaise are problems that this country will have to come to grips with. If it doesn't, they will be Mahwah's problems, too, before long . . . In a way, it might be good that this latest book-banning flap has taken such a ridiculous turn. It demonstrates how sinister book censorship can be."

"MACOS" assailed again: $1 million suit in N.Y.

The National Science Foundation-funded multimedia educational series Man, a Course of Study is again under fire. Last year it raised the ire of parents who objected that teachers were usurping their role by employing self-analysis techniques recommended for MACOS and were also exposing youngsters too early to cultural traditions that run counter to the American ideal. This time around, MACOS opponents are going to court: a $1 million suit has been filed in New York State in an effort to block the use of the controversial curriculum.

Librarians interested in the issues, especially in the role of government in education, will want to check an article appearing in the October 1 issue of Science magazine; it describes the role being played in the actual writing of science books by a nonprofit corporation which was originally a project funded by the National Science Foundation.

Texas board nixes nursing, okays dictionary slang

A picture of a mother nursing a child seems to have been the main reason for the rejection of a ten-volume reading series by the Texas Board of Education. The picture of the nursing mother prompted cries protesting blatant "pornography" at a hearing held to review the reading series in question, Who Am I?, published by the Santillana Company of Spain. But the firm's U.S. trade sales manager, Samuel Laredo, said that it was ludicrous that a book produced and written in Spain under close scrutiny of the Catholic church could be turned down on the basis of obscenity.

In contrast with its position on the Santillana series, the same Texas Board showed some degree of enlightenment when it okayed the second edition of the Random House College Dictionary for high school use, thus ignoring earlier objections to its inclusion of slang terms for sexual acts and other four letter words.

Censorship flap in N.Y.: library to keep "Show Me"

New York's Rochester Public Library reports that it refused to yield to demands (coming from a City Councilman, among others) for the removal of the controversial children's sex book, Show Me. LJ called RPL's Children's Services Consultant Julie Cummins to find out how she had justified the library's stance on a book some parents object to because it features photographs of both children and adults exploring each other.

Cummins' response: "It's not a children's book; it was purchased for use by adults and viewed as just another kind of sex education book which would satisfy people who want to take a different approach to sex education. The library has all kinds of books for all kinds of people; this one is for adults, and definitely not for children."

And Cummins reports that the library board has voted against banning the book.

Film censorship spotted

At the annual meet of the New York Library Association, John S. Robotham of New York Public Library's Richmond Regional Library charged that Time-Life Multimedia Films has taken steps to discourage libraries from buying To Die, To Live, Survivors of Hiroshima, a BBC-TV production based on Robert Jay Lifton's book, Death in Life. Time-Life, he charged, has removed the film from its catalog, will not provide preview copies as is customary, and sells the film to libraries for $1100, "about double the price of comparable films." Said Robotham, "These actions alone constitute effective censorship," and one result is that "the majority of viewers who normally see such films through the courtesy of their public libraries are destined never to see this movie." But at least some New York librarians were able to preview the film at a special screening session at the NYLA meet.

Parents as censors

Parents in Spokane can prevent their youngsters from getting at library books which are deemed offensive; all they have to do is fill out at the Spokane County library a form that requests the library to ban the individual child's use of specific library materials.

Danger in kid's book caught

One alert young mother who noticed that the book At Work (published by the British firm of Hamlyn) might encourage toddlers to reach for a kettle of boiling water or a hot oven has succeeded in getting the publisher to withdraw the book from bookstores. The book carries an illustration which urges youngsters to "touch these" kitchen items—coffee pots, irons, kettles, and the oven. Ken Roud of the Royal Society for the Prevention of Accidents also complained, and Hamlyn has agreed that the text is "too ambiguous" for inquisitive youngsters. It's reprinting the book and altering the "touch these" heading to "look at these."

1977 Downs awards

The Graduate School of Library Science at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign asks for nominations for the 1977 Robert B. Downs Award "for outstanding contribution of intellectual freedom in libraries. The $500 award, reports Herbert Goldhor of UI, "may go to a library board member, a nonprofessional staff member, a professional librarian, a government official, or anyone who has worked to further intellectual freedom and the cause of truth in any type of library." Nominations must be in by April 15.

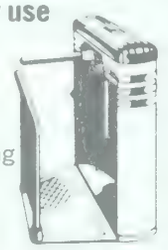
PLAN TO REDUCE BOOK LOSSES! with Perey Turnstiles specially designed for Library use
• at ENTRANCE-EXIT
• at CHARGE OUT
• at STACKS
Application Engineering Available, write:


PEREY TURNSTILES
101 Park Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10017

Booksellers/Publishers
specializing in calligraphy & paleography
Pentalic Corporation
152 West 22nd Street New York, N.Y. 10011
catalog on request

LIBRARY COOPERATION

Colorado State Library joins WILCO organization

The Colorado State Library, reports Deputy State Librarian Anne Marie Falsone, has joined the Western Interstate Library Coordinating Organization (WILCO), a program of the Western Interstate Commission for Higher Education (WICHE). Other WILCO member states include Alaska, Arizona, California, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, Oregon, South Dakota, and Washington.

WILCO, which had started out as the Western Library Network, changed its name and settled for a much smaller role in western library network development that it had originally envisioned.

Burgeoning networks and service agencies (such as Denver's Bibliographic Center for Research and AMIGOS) had protested and eventually were successful in convincing WLN to take a back seat in network development, thus staving off what they saw as a threat to their autonomy. WILCO agreed to serve as a coordinating agency instead of a network planner, and it now says its responsibility is for "multistate programs in continuing education, resource sharing, networking, and library and information science research."

In response to a query from LJ, Karl Pearson of WILCO provided the following explanation to differentiate the functions of WILCO and agencies like AMIGOS, BCR, and California's CLASS: "There is a division of responsibility; WILCO coordinates the efforts of the state library agencies, helping them to coordinate, within their own states, the use by individual libraries of network technology, and their sharing of resources and methods of taking advantage of technology in the region as a whole. WILCO provides a forum for all libraries and network people to get together and see how they can help each other."

In the area of network coordination, WILCO says it works with the Library of Congress and area bibliographic utilities and service centers in "facilitating cooperation in the West and in national network planning." One of WILCO's products is the publication, Library Networking in the West; the Next Three Years. It's available free from WILCO, P.O. Drawer P, Boulder, Colo. 30302.

RLG launches delivery services

With no end in sight to the two-month-old strike affecting the United Parcel Service, the Research Libraries Group (the New York Public Library-Yale, Columbia-Harvard consortium) has started a small-scale delivery service to get interlibrary loan materials to consortium members. A shuttle van makes delivery trips between New York City and Cambridge, Massachusetts every other day.

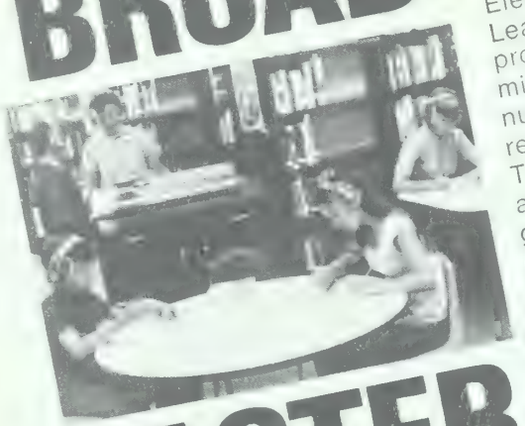
Cooperation in Mississippi library council formed

The latest report of intertype library cooperation to reach LJ comes from Jackson, Mississippi, where area libraries have formed the Central Mississippi Library Council. CMLC members have agreed to try out as their first cooperative venture an "Information Passport" program, which will enable patrons (whose information request cannot be filled by his or her area library) to tap the resources of CMLC members to which he is referred.

CMLC members include: Educational Media Services, State Department of Education; Hinds Junior College's George M. McLendon Library; Jackson State University's Henry Thomas Sampson Library; the Mississippi Library Commission; the Information Services Division of the Mississippi Research and Development Center; the Jackson Metropolitan Library System; Tougaloo College's L. Zenobia Coleman Library; Mississippi College's Leland Speed Library; Millsaps College's Millsaps-Wilson Library; and the Warren Hood Library of Belhaven College.

James Parks of the Millsaps-Wilson Library has been elected CMLC chairman for a one-year term; James Knox of Jackson Metropolitan was elected vice president of the Mississippi group.

CLASSROOM BROAD-CASTER



BRINGS THE SOUND OF LEARNING TO YOUR LIBRARY

Convert your library into an Instructional Materials Center with P/H Electronics' Classroom Broadcaster Learning System. Two to 12 separate programs or more can be transmitted simultaneously to unlimited numbers of students using desk-top receivers and plug-in headphones. They can select, or be assigned, any program by turning the program selector switch on their receivers to a specific channel. Consoles accommodate standard cassettes; an auxiliary input panel accepts sound from any radio source—open-reel tape, phonograph, radio, television, or motion picture projector. Because the system is wireless, students may sit anywhere within the antenna loop area. For a free, no-obligation demonstration, contact P/H Electronics . . . also manufacturers of MONI-COM II, the patented two-way wireless language laboratory.

P/H ELECTRONICS

A Division of Duncan Electric Company
117 E. HELENA STREET,
DAYTON, OHIO 45404
(513) 461-5898

Commenting on the new cooperative, Knox said, "This development is inevitable because of the extent of print and other materials which must be gathered and stored today, the increased demand for retrieval . . . and the certainty of shrinking financial support for many library institutions."

SOLINET & SREB: affiliation to terminate

Just as the Southern Regional Education Board (SREB) announced that it had retained R&D Associates of Stanford, California to do a study on the role of libraries and network in the Southeast, the newsletter Advanced Technology/Libraries reported that SOLINET (Southeastern Library Network) had "withdrawn from affiliation" with SREB.

Answering an LJ query on the latter report, Chuck Stevens of SOLINET said that there had been "no disaffiliation," but that it was true that "the SOLINET Board has voted to terminate its affiliation under the present memorandum of agreement." This would presumably leave open the possibility of continued affiliation under an altered agreement. As for the network study sponsored by SREB, Stevens said that SOLINET had on two different occasions asked SREB to postpone it.

Kellogg $$ to Michigan for more OCLC, data bases

The Michigan Library Consortium (headquartered at Wayne State University's G. Flint Purdy Library) has received a $145,000 grant from the Kellogg Foundation to "improve library services throughout the state," mostly via investment in data bases. The consortium has as members 69 library agencies, 38 colleges and universities, 11 community colleges, 15 public libraries, two school systems, two hospitals, and the State Library.

Noting that the aim of Kellogg Foundation grant funding to libraries is to encourage resource sharing "by exploiting existing technology," MLC reports that it will use its Kellogg grant "to make the most effective use of the . . . Ohio College Library Center (OCLC) data base . . . to utilize the 35 or more other bibliographic computer readable data bases available through national computer networks, and to improve and extend document delivery services." The grant will also fund a statewide library preservation project and an educational program aimed at both library personnel and user groups.

PROGRAM ALERT

Inmates as Braillists, 24 hr. TTY & theater

Reports of a Braille library project utilizing inmates as volunteers, a new 24-hour TTY service for the deaf, and a puppet theater put on the road to reach youngsters in rural areas indicate the different approaches now being explored by libraries interested in reaching patrons and nonusers of all ages.

• Prison Braillists: Prisoners serving life sentences at Wisconsin's Waupun State Prison are doing Brailling for the Volunteer Service Unit of the Milwaukee Public Library; Linda Horton, assistant coordinator of volunteer services, goes to the prison once a week to provide training in the technique.

• 24-hour TTY service for the deaf: The Metropolitan Cooperative Library System of Pasadena, California has initiated a new service for the deaf community—a toll-free, 24-hour TTY service reaching all of Southern California. The TTY number is (800) 352-3498; phone access to the Resource Center and Project Director is via (213) 863-4227.

• Disney flick for the deaf: Merrillville, Indiana's Lake County Public Library recently invited deaf youngsters, their families, and people who work with the deaf to the main library for a special screening of a captioned version of Walt Disney's film, The Love Bug.

• Puppet theater: This past summer children's librarians at California's Stanislaus County Free Library went on tour with a traveling puppet theater (called the Puppetmobile) and gave 36 performances throughout the mostly rural county, reports Susan Novak, head of the Children's Department. Some 2500 youngsters saw the shows. The librarians had helped design and build the puppetmobile; they also wrote their own plays, which centered on such characters as Giant Jaws, Loudmouse, and Archie the vampire.

• Large print books: Announcing the second edition of Large Type Books in Print, R.R. Bowker notes that large type publishing is growing. In 1968 there were only six American publishing houses producing books in 14 point type or larger; by 1970 there were 30; and for 1976, 45. Titles listed in LTBP jumped from 1200 for 1970 to 2500 this year. Copies of Large Type Books in Print, which is itself printed in 18 point type, are available for $14.95 each, plus shipping and handling.

• Large print catalog: The Large Print catalog of over 1500 titles in the Boston Public Library's collection is available for $7.50 from the BPL Sales Office, Box 286, Boston, Mass. 02117. The catalog is arranged by subject categories, with information including author, title, publisher, date, pagination, size, and even call number to make it useful in book selection.

• Talking book on CB: The South Carolina State Library reports that it got Mercury recording artist Jay "Cledus Maggard" Huguely (who won national attention with his recording, The White Knight) to record his Unabridged Dictionary of CB Radio Lingo as a talking book to serve South Carolina's Library Service for the Blind and Physically Handicapped.

• The law & the aging: The St. Louis Public Library recently brought in five young lawyers to put on a program on Legal Concerns of the Aged. Among the topics covered in panel discussions: wills and insurance, real estate and housing, consumer affairs, and medical problems.

Libraries help public review issues & candidates

As the election date grew closer, LJ learned of the efforts of two libraries to help their communities evaluate the qualifications of both national and local politicians.

• Election debates: The Hennepin County Library of Edina, Minnesota is taping the televised debates of the presidential and vice-presidential candidates and making them available to the public for checkout at the media desk of the system's area library. Hennepin started videotaping programs back in 1973, when it taped the Viking games; it has since expanded coverage to include both local and national TV programs, finding that for the most part TV stations and sponsors have been cooperative.

• "Meeting the candidates": The Pickens County Library (James Swan, Director) of Easley, South Carolina recently held a three-hour "meeting the candidates rap-session" with the aim of giving the voters and candidates for County Council an opportunity to discuss campaign issues on an informal basis. Prior to the meeting, the library had candidates answer a questionnaire, which served as a basis for a one-page summary it prepared on each candidate's qualifications and views on various issues.

• Registering Voters: The Public Library of Youngstown and Mahoning County (David W. Griffith, director) reports that "swarms of people" came to libraries in the system at the last minute to register to vote. One branch registered over 600 voters; two others registered over 200 each.

•Election info for the blind: Michigan's Wayne County Federated Library System helped blind people decide what candidates to vote for by providing them with cassette tapes with information about candidates and ballot issues. Volunteers had recorded League of Women Voters publications which summed up county, state, and national election issues, and blind people who hadn't yet made up their minds thus had the information needed to make a decision.

Halloween & book fairs

The Minneapolis Public Library and Information Center reports that it helped draw attention to the start of its October 31-November 7 Book Fair by inviting both youngsters and adults to don Halloween costumes and "join in hijinks with the Illusion Mime Theatre." The Book Fair, which featured new children's books, included a special program for school children: called Color Collage, it "dealt with the meaning of color in movement, music, and sketches, as interpreted by dancer Charlotte Holzermann, musician Karen Dienard, and artist Jenny Holzermann."

Thumbs down on bookmobiles

Basing its decision on the results of a study, the Board of Directors of the Chicago Public Library has voted to discontinue bookmobile service to schools, both public and private. CPL's Task Force on the Use of Mobile Units had earlier reached the conclusion that "the cost of operating mobile service is far greater than the cost of providing service through a branch library." While noting that there is heavy traffic at a few mobile stops, the Task Force said that "overall use is too low to justify the continuation of the service." Dollar and energy shortages pose new threats.

SPECIAL REPORT

Volunteers in libraries

To the some 100 librarians who came to the October 13 all-day workshop on Volunteers in Libraries—a meet sponsored by the New York Metropolitan Reference & Research Library Agency (METRO)—it was apparent that many New York librarians view volunteers as a serious job threat; their unions back them in their opposition to volunteers; and some administrators are afraid to launch volunteer programs during the budget crunch because of their probably adverse effect on staff morale.

At the METRO meet, several speakers argued that volunteers do not jeopardize jobs and should be accepted as part of the library team, but their testimony didn't seem to alleviate the fears of librarians who have helplessly witnessed massive layoffs. One librarian emotionally exclaimed that only those volunteers willing to campaign for more funding and the restoration of lost jobs would be acceptable to her. But another fired back, saying that libraries wouldn't be on the cutting block now if they had looked to the future earlier and built valuable support via volunteers.

The workshop was organized by METRO's Volunteers in Libraries Task Force. What follows is an attempt to synthesize the various viewpoints expressed.

One union's tough stance

Alan Viani of District Council 37 of the American Federation of State, County, and Municipal Employees (AFSCME) said that New York City's fiscal crisis—during which it looked as if volunteers would be used to replace staffers who had been laid off—prompted his union to take a hard stance against volunteers in libraries. At one point AFSCME threatened the city administration with a strike—a move which got the city to promise that volunteers would not be used to ease widespread job shrinkage, nor would they jeopardize jobs still budgeted for. Viani charged that when money is tight, management too often "takes the easy way out" and cuts costs by "cutting people" instead of reviewing its own policies and programs for possible cutback.

Viani contended that unions do accept volunteers in such traditional areas as hospitals and consumer affairs, but he then undercut his own statement by saying that "volunteers do not work." His criticisms: volunteers are too unreliable (most administrators, he argued, shy away from relying upon them in a long-term project), and they tend to want a job of their own choosing—one which they will do only at a time most convenient to them. But Viani later admitted under questioning that unions themselves have always depended upon volunteers and that there probably would be less resistance to their use in libraries if volunteers had been called upon earlier.

Librarian/feminist votes nay

Joan Marshall of Brooklyn College went on record as opposing volunteers as a librarian, as a feminist, as a union member, and as an ordinary citizen. She asserted that "expenditures in staff time lost in training volunteers often nullify any forthcoming benefits." And you are faced with the problem of "protecting your investment"—giving volunteers choice assignments instead of dog work just to keep them from leaving. Whatever way you look at it, said Marshall, volunteers adversely affect staff morale, and "the work of professional librarians is denigrated by volunteers." It all boils down to a question of priorities, whether you're interested in "quality" or just "in keeping the doors open." But volunteerism, she admits, is reaching "epidemic proportions"—one indication being the increase in Library of Congress subject headings on volunteers.

Stating her position as a feminist, Marshall said that she supported the National Organization of Women's (NOW) stance that volunteerism is just another form of exploitation of women, and that the only acceptable volunteer jobs are those that are "change-oriented." Anyone—student, housewife, or career woman—who feels they must volunteer to pick up job experience is just getting exploited. Marshall contended that women want to work and not volunteer, and she had statistics to prove that more women are in the labor force, thanks to the women's movement, the equal opportunity law, the mushrooming divorce rate, and soaring inflation.

Volunteers, argued Marshall, are being asked to "take up the slack for vital social services"; government "must be held accountable" for any cutbacks it makes—especially in the areas of social services. Even change-oriented volunteers are doing too much—they shouldn't have to prod government to live up to its proclaimed responsibilities.

Brown: "Volunteers create jobs for people instead of eliminating them. . . . Criticisms that students and the unemployed are exploited do not take into account the hard facts of today's economy. . . ."

The new volunteerism

Responding to critics who characterized the growth of volunteerism as "a step backward" and a trend posing a serious threat to job security, Winifred Brown of the Mayor's Voluntary Action Center (New York City's first centralized volunteer agency) declared that trying to get volunteers to replace paid workers would be the "stupidest approach" possible. Volunteers, she argued, work only three to six hours a week, and "even if you have a dozen, you still won't replace a researcher." And in New York, unions have a say in whether a job opening should be filled; agency requests for volunteers that are processed by the Action Center must be approved by the Office of Labor Relations before a volunteer gets the job in question. It's a closed case if a union raises an objection.

As for criticism that volunteers are unreliable and that you can't fire a volunteer, Brown retorted, "Try getting rid of paid staff." What really counts, she said, is how you get them. One standard problem faced by libraries, she noted, is that everyone wants to work the circulation desk. An in-depth interview with a prospective volunteer is crucial, said Brown, adding that you must be frank in specifying just what duties and responsibilities the job entails. Other advice offered to libraries that want to go the volunteer route: spend time on planning and make sure your staff has a say in how the program will work; write volunteer job descriptions; conduct performance appraisals; and give prestige to your volunteers.

Getting back to job security, Brown argued that more often than not volunteers create jobs for people instead of eliminating them. Volunteers, she observed, have traditionally been a moving force that has prodded government to pay for social services. One recent example cited: women's protest got government to start to act on rape prevention. Not too many people are born activists, she said, noting that volunteers were among the first to demand change in nursing homes.

People who are against volunteers, she observed, do not consider what can happen when you don't have them as backup: New York City's Department of Continuing Education, which had refused to let volunteers help it in its fight against illiteracy, vanished without a whimper when city funding ran out—there were no volunteers to keep it alive. Said Brown, "You need people as advocates, as workers, as helpers. The city is afraid to eliminate fire, police, and sanitation departments. You must get them scared to death to kill services that make the city worth living in—libraries and museums." Volunteers could help significantly in getting the message across.

Today's volunteer, said Brown, is 18-36 years of age; 70 percent are already in the labor force; many are former clients of volunteers (the handicapped, inmates, the mentally ill); and a good many are students who want field experience, people stuck in dead-end jobs and on the lookout for another career, and the unemployed. Criticisms that students and the unemployed are exploited, argued Brown, do not take into account the hard facts of today's economy. Schools no longer have the money for paid internships on a large scale; teachers and other professionals who have lost their jobs do not know how to translate their competencies into job market commodities. Volunteerism is one way of edging into the tight job market. And it is one trend definitely on the upswing: the Action Center used to process about 6000 volunteers a year; with the budget crunch, the count is up—10,000 for just a six-month period.

Volunteers are a plus

Charlotte Devers of the North Castle Public Library (Armonk, New York) said that resistance to volunteers can stem from more than just "a gut fear of loss of job . . . which must still in itself be recognized; there's also the old status hangup . . . some librarians are afraid that the volunteer they work with may be smarter," and instead of welcoming the expertise that might be provided by a "specialist aide," they flatly reject the whole notion of volunteers. And she acknowledged that this kind of thinking is what is holding back acceptance of the nonprofessional as a colleague instead of just a clerk.

But volunteers, argued Devers, can tell librarians (too many of whom suffer from the remoteness of an ivory tower) what the community really wants in service. This is something that cannot always be learned at library conferences, which are isolationist in nature. Said Devers, "Volunteers can help you improve your relationship with the community . . . can sell your services . . . can help you change . . . and can help the library deliver personalized services that wouldn't be possible otherwise." Also: Volunteers are "powerful lobbyists" with much more clout than librarians themselves, and they are a "reservoir for future manpower."

Initiating a volunteer program implies change, and it requires "self-analysis aimed at determining whether you are ready for volunteers." You've got to decide whether volunteers would enhance the character of your library, whether they would fit in with your "management style," and whether there are enough "community resources"—potential volunteers. Know the "depth of your commitment" before you start.

Among the tips offered to libraries that want to go with volunteers: pick a volunteer coordinator; prepare guidelines and a volunteer manual for supervisors; decide how volunteers will be recruited and trained (and put a dollar figure on this); prepare job descriptions, peg qualifications needed, and specify who is to be the supervisor; put volunteer posts on the organizational chart; decide what you're going to do about insurance, injuries, and reimbursement for lunches and transportation; keep records useful in recognizing volunteer achievements; and publicize your volunteer effort—"you've added something."

And, Devers said, it's important to anticipate problems such as how to handle a tipsy storyteller, how to deal with staff if, with the arrival of volunteers, they start stretching their lunch hours and coffee breaks, and what to do in case of a poor personnel match.

North Castle, reported Devers, started out with volunteers and is now staffed by both professionals and volunteers—one example of how volunteers pave the way for paid jobs. She credits volunteers with building the government support which eventually led to a library budget of $180,000.

Advice from a volunteer coordinator

Miriam Pineo, volunteer coordinator for the American Museum of Natural History, advised libraries not to load up on volunteers: five overworked volunteers are better than 15 with not enough to do. One suggested recruitment route: advertisements in local newspapers. Said Pineo, don't overlook as potential volunteers the unemployed or patients from half-way houses—take a chance. But if a personality clash comes up, remember that some staffers can't work with their own colleagues and this problem can carry over to volunteers.

Pineo urged: "Know what you're looking for . . . what the job requires; do a careful screening in the interview . . . you do not have to take everyone; make sure volunteers know their responsibilities such as getting to work on time; give volunteers an orientation; stick with volunteers even when they need a lot of training—they're the ones most likely to stay on." And keep records of hours volunteered—transportation and related cost are tax-deductible. As for recognition, said Pineo, "pins and teas are old-hat and too costly; instead, put your thanks in writing, mention volunteers in your newsletter, and make them feel part of the organization by giving them complimentary tickets to library events and receptions."

One volunteer tells why

Doris Lee Schild, an IBM Systems Research Institute librarian who has put in eight years as a volunteer at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, said that the museum's volunteer waiting list testifies to the success of its program. Over the years, the museum "has extended and enriched its volunteer program . . . every fall there's an orientation day at which both new volunteers and old are introduced to departments and informed about museum programs . . . volunteers get evaluated and get assistance from curators on conducting a tour. Volunteers are treated as staff, and the museum newsletter spotlights their achievements."

MMA volunteers, she said, know that they've got to get someone to fill their spot in case of absence and that they must do their homework in preparing for a tour. The administrator "has the right to lay down ground rules"; anyone who doesn't comply is simply asked to resign.

Emergency volunteers

Eugene Bockman, director of New York's Municipal Archives and Records Center, recounted his experience with volunteers who were called upon when the center uncovered in a basement some 30,000 cubic feet of city documents. Media coverage prompted a deluge of volunteers; the best were college students (some of whom got credit for doing archival work); others included librarians who needed experience in cataloging, retired people (who were reliable and devoted when given a specific task), and high school students (who were the least reliable).

Bockman cautioned libraries to "be security-minded . . . the Archives Center attracted some adventurous amateur collectors." He said that libraries who are looking for volunteers should remember that they are offering valuable training. He reported his initial success (the deal fell through when colleges lost city funding) in getting free graduate work for his own staff members from colleges whose students were working as volunteers. He plans to try again. As for staff morale, he claimed that staff members were "pleased that the work was being done."—Noël Savage

PEOPLE

RALPH J. FOLCARELLI, formerly Professor, Palmer Graduate Library School, C. W. Post Center, Long Island University, Greenvale, New York, has been named Assistant Vice President for Academic Affairs at Post. He will continue to teach courses in the School.

DOROTHY GREGOR, formerly at the Public Health Library at the University of California, Berkeley, is now Head of the Serials Department of the University of California, Berkeley, Libraries.

SAM HITT, formerly Executive Director, Texas Medical Center Library, Houston Academy of Medicine, is now Director, Health Sciences Library, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill.

JUDY KLAPPROTH, formerly Assistant Librarian, Redwood City Public Library, California, is now Humboldt County Librarian, Eureka-Humboldt Library, Eureka, Calif.

DENNIS LAMPKOWSKI, formerly librarian in the Science Library, Queens College, City University of New York, is now Information Services Librarian, Lee Coombe Memorial Library, Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center, New York City.

CHARLES MARTELL, JR., a doctoral candidate at the School of Library and Information Studies, University of California, Berkeley, and former Project Leader for the Swedish Council for Scientific Information and Documentation, is now Assistant to the University Librarian, University of California, Berkeley.

NANCY MESSER, formerly Periodicals Librarian, Washburn University, Topeka, Kansas, is now Serials Librarian, College of Charleston, S.C.

NORMAN A. NELSON, has been promoted to the position of Assistant Librarian for Administrative Services, Oklahoma State University Libraries, Stillwater.

CYRIL O. PACKWOOD, formerly Reference Librarian, Borough of Manhattan Community College, City University of New York, has been appointed Chief Librarian at the College.

CHARLES D. PIPES, formerly Head, Downtown Branch, Flint Public Library, Michigan, is now Director, Northwestern Regional Library, Elkin, N.C.

PATRICIA SANDERS, formerly a reference librarian at Montclair State College, New Jersey, has been promoted to the position of Coordinator of Reference Services at the College.

ELAINE SLOAN, currently Assistant Director of Libraries for Management and Development at the Smithsonian Institution Libraries, Washington, D.C. has been appointed Associate University Librarian for Public Service at the University of California, Berkeley, effective "on or before" January 31, 1977.

JANICE F. STARR, formerly Special Services Librarian at the University of Portland, Oregon, has been appointed Technical Services Librarian at Portland.

KENDON L. STUBBS, Associate Professor and formerly Head of the Reference Department, University of Virginia Library, Charlottesville, has been appointed Associate University Librarian.

JOHN A. WALKER, formerly Associate Professor, of Library Administration, University of Illinois, Urbana, is now Head Librarian, East Central University, Ada, Okla.

JOAN S. ZENAN, formerly Librarian, Arctic Environment Information and Data Center, University of Alaska, has been appointed Life and Health Sciences Librarian, University of Nevada, Reno.

GILBERTA ZINGLER, Assistant Librarian for Resources, Fondren Library, Rice University, Houston, Texas, has retired after 23 years of service.

LJ's People columns are open to any news of developments or changes in the careers of librarians. These include appointments, promotions, retirements, honors, special assignments or achievements, and deaths. Items submitted for People should include the full name of the librarian involved, and the position title, library or institution, and city and state of the individual's most recent position, as well as the same information for her or his new position. Photographs of the individuals concerned are most welcome. Send full information, as early as possible, to People Editor, Library Journal, 1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10036.

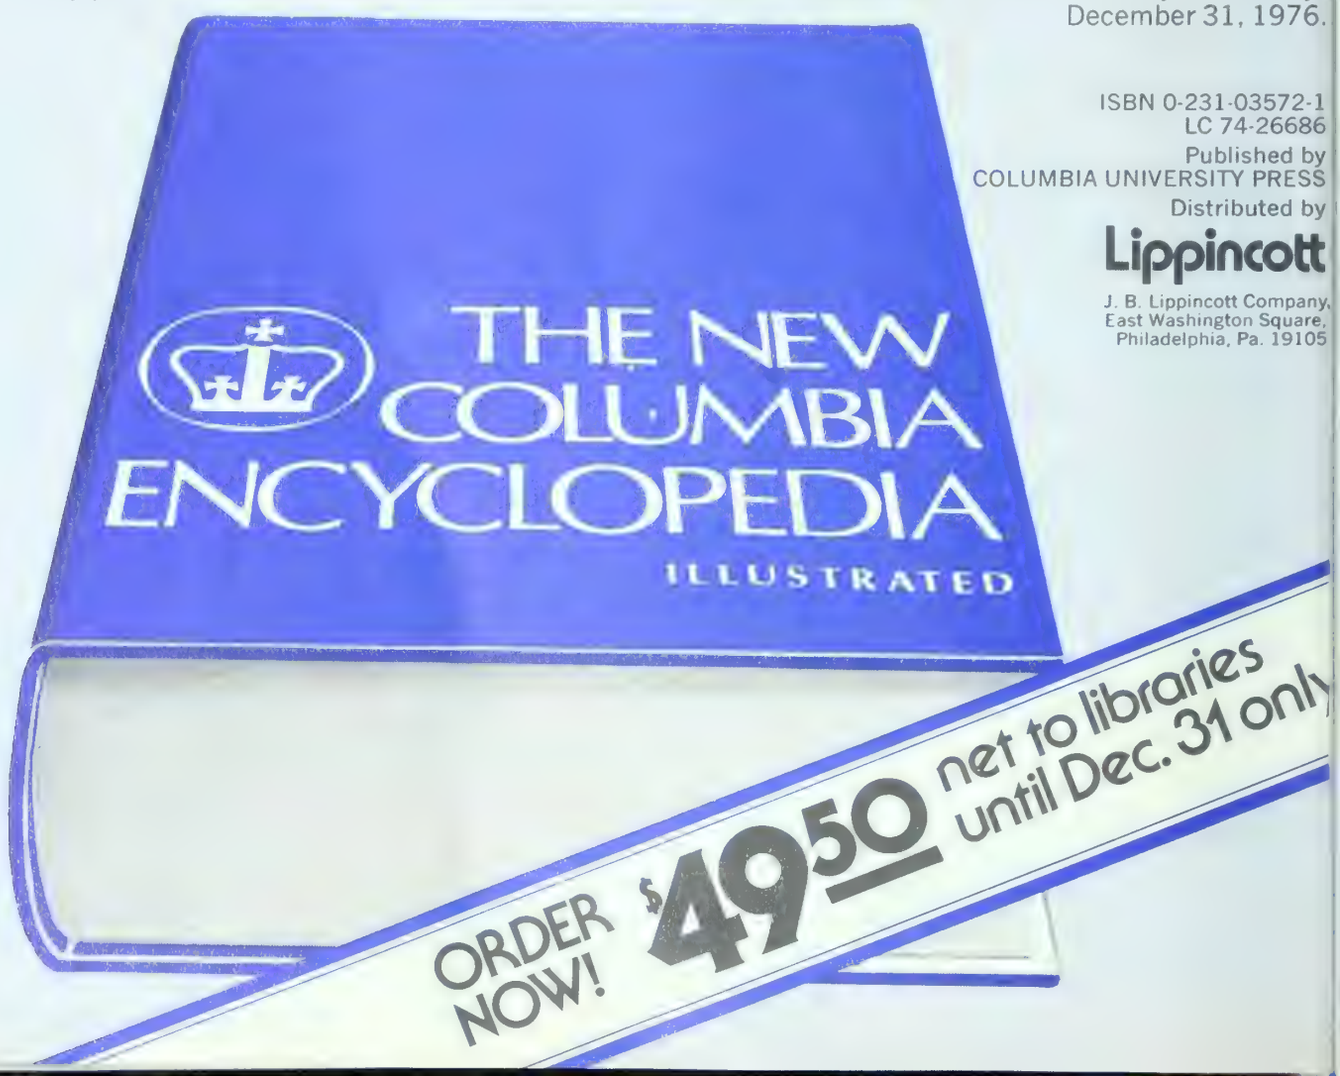
"In a class by itself" says Bowker's 1976 ENCYCLOPEDIA BUYING GUIDE "Unquestionably the finest single-volume encyclopedia in the English language."

The most authoritative of all encyclopedia evaluation authorities, ENCYCLOPEDIA BUYING GUIDE by Kenneth Kister (R.R. Bowker, 1976) is unequivocal in its judgment: "The New Columbia stands as the most authoritative one-volume encyclopedia available today . . . its up-to-dateness and reliability unmatched, and its style admirably precise."

Choice Magazine had already declared THE NEW COLUMBIA ENCYCLOPEDIA "essential for all reference collections." The Kirkus Reviews called it "the single most indispensable reference volume . . . The perfect acquisition for individual or institution." And critical reception in leading magazines and newspapers has been unanimously favorable.

Since there is no question that "the best one-volume encyclopedia around is now bigger and better than ever" (Chicago Tribune), now is the time for you to purchase the copies your library needs—at a limited time price that also makes THE NEW COLUMBIA ENCYCLOPEDIA an extraordinary bargain. Regularly $79.50—but just $49.50 net to libraries if you order by December 31, 1976.

ISBN 0-231-03572-1
LC 74-26686
Published by
COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY PRESS
Distributed by
Lippincott
J. B. Lippincott Company,
East Washington Square,
Philadelphia, Pa. 19105



Academic Library Building in 1976

Jerrold Orne and Jean O. Gosling

1976 MARKS the close of our ten-year record of new library construction, a period of remarkable growth in the history of academic libraries. The challenge of enormous increases in student numbers, in research, and in facilities to serve them has been successfully met; partly, to be sure, with large infusions of federal funds. However, the evidence of continuing support for new library construction without federal money over the second five years of the decade is incontrovertible. In this year's report we will offer a gross analysis of the ten-year period, a comparison of the first and second halves of that period, and our usual annual analysis for the new libraries of 1976.

Our records for ten years represent 647 new library projects, which cost nearly $1.9 billion. More than two-thirds of these were completed in the first five-year period. The average cost for all the new libraries was $2.9+ million, and the average size 92,877 square feet. The average building cost was 77.40 percent of the average project cost. This constitutes a sound planning figure, with 22.6 percent left for fees, equipment, site costs if any, landscaping, and art. Equipment expenditures totalled nearly $187 million, and averaged just a little less than ten percent of the average project cost. Equipment is the prime target for administrative economy, and it appears to have held its level, as compared with building costs. It is commonly asserted that 15 percent of the project cost should be assigned to equipment, yet our annual figures have usually fluctuated very little above or below the ten percent level. This percentage may be totally inadequate for a library in which bookstacks are included in equipment. Bookstacks are usually made a part of the building contract.

The 647 library projects of this ten-year period were designed to accommodate more than 208 million volumes, for an average capacity of 323,608. The total provision of seating was 536,597, with the average library having 829. In a number of these statistical series, interesting differences are found between the first and second five-year periods.

In the years 1967 through 1971 most of the library projects represented were funded largely by federal grants and loans, and the total of project costs came to

© Edward Jacoby

Harvard goes underground: the Nathan Marsh Pusey Library preserves the open space and greenery of the Cambridge campus

Jerrold Orne is professor emeritus at the School of Library Science, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. Jean O. Gosling, formerly of the Library of Congress and a law librarian in Washington, is now a research assistant to Dr. Orne and a volunteer in the law library at Duke University

The University of Maine at Orono: as severely and classically understated as Maine speech

$984+ million. During the second period the funding picture was quite different; most of the buildings were funded exclusively by local public or private money. Nonetheless, the total expenditure was still over $902 million. The initial large infusion of federal funds surely influenced the willingness of academic administrators to make funds available for new library facilities; the continuing pressure of student numbers, rapidly growing collections, and higher cost of construction served to maintain a very high level of spending. The difference in the average project costs for the two periods, $2.21 million vs. $4.47 million, is striking. This difference, considered together with the number of projects, 445 vs. 202, leads to one obvious conclusion: the larger institutions are continuing to spend and build libraries, while the more numerous smaller institutions are easing off, if not closing down. The inflation of building costs—from the $26.20 average square foot cost from 1967 through 1971, to $33.97 from 1972 through 1976—is considerable, but not large enough to account alone for the doubling of the unit costs shown above. The relentless increase in building costs can readily be seen in our second table, with the progression from $29.65 in 1972 to $39.22 in 1976. The 1976 figure is one-third larger than the average of the first five years, about 13 percent larger than the average of the second five years, and actually 13 percent larger than the average for 1975. The rate of increase in costs is clearly greater this year than in any year of our series.

The overall difference in expenditures for equipment in the two five-year periods is not great, about ten percent, but the average unit expenditure is nearly doubled. This conforms to the parallel doubling of project costs for the two periods and confirms the tight limits placed upon expenditures for equipment. A notably low level of expenditure for equipment in the projects of 1976, $363,137, is considerably below ten percent of the average project costs, $4,379,313.

We cannot boast of useful gains in planning for book storage. The average book capacity for 1972-76, 400,973 volumes, is nowhere near twice the average for the earlier period, 286,242, despite the basic doubling of both project and building cost. This suggests less concern or poor planning for book capacity or possibly severe pressure for seating capacity. However, our data reveals a similar disproportion in seating provided, and we are forced to conclude that neither book handling nor student seating has been able to compete with aims not related to functional excellence.

Finally, it is interesting to note that fewer than half as many academic libraries were built in the second five years of the decade compared with the first five years. The average of the early period was 89 per year. The average for the second period was 40.4, and that of the present year 36, a decrease of nearly two-thirds. Except for one year, 1974, with 58 projects, each year of the past five has scarcely varied from the mean of 36; this confirms our early estimate of a durable plateau of about 35 academic libraries per year in our country.

As we have indicated earlier, the year 1976 was not a banner year in terms of numbers. We are reporting 36 new academic library projects this time, including 15 new libraries, eight additions and renovations, five additions, three special libraries, and two libraries having renovation only projects. We also include three libraries not previously reported for 1975, for a total of 36. For the first time we have excluded medical and law libraries from our lists, since a parallel ten-year review is now being prepared for each of these types of libraries by experts in those fields. These will appear soon in issues of Library Journal and will comprise an important addition to the comprehensive coverage of library building over the past ten years.

Once more we note the marked trend toward an increased proportion of additions, with or without renovation of an older building. In this year we have data on an equal number (15) of new structures and additions (15). The three special types of libraries are recorded because of their unusual character; we have not always recorded such projects. We have three libraries notable for exceptional design: Scripps, a library cut into the side of a hill; the Harvard Pusey Library, entirely underground; and Benedict College, a glass house. Other libraries of this year offer equally interesting design patterns; these will be presented in another context.

The 1976 list of libraries required a total expenditure of only $158,655,280, down nearly 25 percent from the $202+ million of 1975. This is the lowest annual expenditure of the past four years, despite the highest square foot cost of the past ten years. Because of this high cost, the yield in area has decreased drastically, 99,840 square feet, as compared with 153,594 in 1975. Comparable decreases in expenditures for equipment, $363,137 in 1976, compared with $519,342 for the average project in 1975, have already been commented on. The average book capacity and seating also dropped proportionally with the area decrease. Book capacity is down nearly 25 percent, seating about 15 percent. Just about the only figure that remains constant through the years is the assignable space proportion, always within one or two points of 76 percent.

No one today is surprised at constantly increasing costs of building, but this year's $39.22 per square foot is such a large increase over 1975 ($34.16) that one cannot but wonder how long such increases can continue. The high for new libraries is $55.54, and for additions alone $64.37. The highest cost for the year is $74.17 for an addition plus renovation. The extensive renovation and relatively small addition may account for this cost. The square foot cost for renovation alone cannot be considered with new construction costs; it varies greatly depending upon the extent of physical change involved. Among the 15 new libraries there are still four under $30 per square foot. Of the highs cited each has its logical explanation, as do the lows. The logic of costs goes far beyond simple numeric data.

This brief review of academic library buildings of the past ten years cannot fully analyze the salient points even a limited number of statistical series represent. The gathering of this data over such an extraordinary period of academic library development, and the efforts of all those who have contributed data and comments, should serve for more than a simple recording of general facts. The nearly 650 library projects in ten years will now be verified and completely analyzed by computer in 1977. Each library included will be asked not only to verify the accuracy and completeness of the record, but to comment frankly on the successes and failures of their new libraries as revealed in use. The complete data record in definitive form and a synthesis of the experience gained in this significant decade will then be made available in book form for the benefit of future library planners. Any librarian we may have failed to reach for inclusion in this record is urged to write at once to assure the completeness of the record.

To all those who have made possible this year's record by their cooperation, we are deeply grateful. Such contributions to the professional record inevitably redound to the credit of the whole profession.

TABLE I
ACADEMIC LIBRARIES
1967-1976

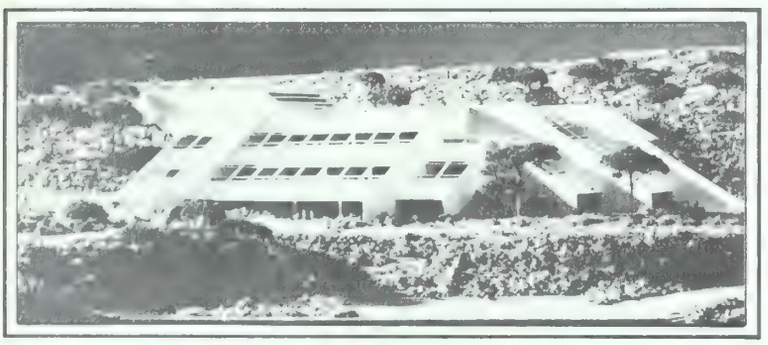
	Project Cost	Gross Area	Percent Assignable	Sq. Ft. Cost	Building Cost	Equipment Cost	Book Capacity	Seating Capacity	Number of Projects
1967-71 Total	$984,919,814	34,000,000†			$ 731,638,065	$ 98,127,468	127,377,821	338,458	445
1967-71 Average	2,213,303	76,404	76.33	$26.20	1,861,674	220,511	286,242	1,352	89
1972-76 Total	902,794,885	26,091,147			730,642,920	88,649,763	81,996,634	198,139	202
1972-76 Average	4,479,182	129,164	75.95	33.97	3,617,044	438,860	400,973	981	40.4
1967-76 Total	1,887,714,699	60,091,147			1,462,280,985	186,777,231	209,374,455	536,597	647
1967-76 Average	$ 2,917,642	92,877	76.14	$30.08	$ 2,260,094	$ 288,682	323,608	829	64.7

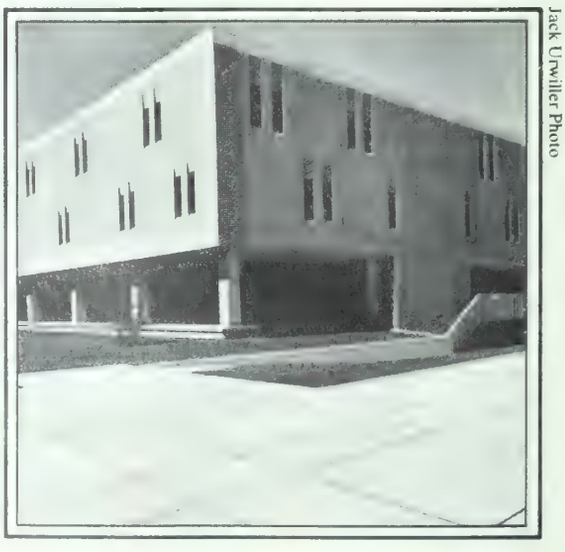
TABLE II
Annual Data 1972-1976

1972 Total	$150,052,736	4,178,285			$116,298,581	$15,643,758	16,503,311	43,620	36
1972 Average	4,168,131	116,063	76.30	$29.65	3,322,816	434,548	458,425	1,211
1973 Total	176,906,226	4,653,173			148,104,038	19,401,760	16,631,737	38,545	35
1973 Average	5,054,463	132,947	75.31	35.09	4,231,543	554,335	475,192	1,101
1974 Total	214,703,323	8,182,159			167,320,446	21,315,632	16,139,686	41,820	58
1974 Average	3,701,781	141,071	74.90	31.63	2,884,835	367,510	278,270	721
1975 Total	202,977,320	5,682,980			169,878,450	19,215,679	17,749,860	40,392	37
1975 Average	5,485,873	153,594	77.79	34.16	4,591,309	519,342	479,725	1,091
1976 Total	157,655,280	3,394,550			129,041,405	13,072,934	14,972,040	33,762	36
1976 Average	4,379,313	99,840	75.43	39.22	3,584,483	363,137	388,112	938
1972-76 Total	902,794,885	26,091,147			730,642,920	88,649,763	81,996,634	198,139	202
1972-76 Average	4,479,182	129,164	75.95	33.95	3,617,044	438,860	400,973	981	40.4

NEW LIBRARIES—1976

Name of Institution	Project Cost	Gross Area	Net Assignable	Non-Assignable	Percent Assignable	Sq. Ft. Cost	Building Cost	Equipment Cost	Book Capacity	Seating Capacity	Notes
University of Arizona Tucson, Arizona	12,494,646	294,939	228,330	66,609	77.42	36.22	10,682,531	1,812,115	945,911*	1945	*Potential 2,000,000
University of Northern Illinois, DeKalb, Illinois	12,344,000	293,323	204,139	89,184	69.60	35.91	10,536,000	1,454,000*	704,000	2400	*Budgeted, not final
Sangamon State Univ. Springfield, Illinois	10,395,100	201,132	119,736	57,649	59.53	42.73	8,594,500	1,136,900	280,500	880
University of Texas at San Antonio, Texas	9,000,000*	225,891	150,859	75,032	66.78	33.92	7,477,529	449,733	290,000	1600	*Estimated 50% library, 50% admin.
Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Troy, New York	6,900,000	108,028	90,668	17,360	83.93	55.54	6,000,000	550,000	500,000	875
Connecticut College New London, Conn.	6,350,000	100,000	80,000	20,000	80.00	52.72	5,272,000	275,000	550,000	565
University of Colorado at Denver, Colo.	5,479,376	184,000	131,250	37,632*	71.33	29.02	5,339,376	140,000	560,000	2600	*Includes 15,125 square feet in media center
Allegheny College Meadville, Pa.	4,490,800	83,653	69,469	14,184	83.04	46.52	3,891,573	340,000	445,750	660*	*Includes 95 seats in multipurpose room
Old Dominion University Norfolk, Va.	4,302,539	130,696	104,556	26,140	80 00	29.33	3,833,039	144,325	616,000	1200
University of Colorado at Colorado Springs, Colo.	3,699,261	72,845	57,209*	15,636	78.54*	37.78	2,752,263	473,124	156,250	455	*Multi-function bldg. library 38,294 square feet
Benedict College Columbia, S.C.	2,693,741	54,150	49,922	4,228	92.19	41.73	2,259,785	433,956	250,000	800
Augusta College Augusta, Ga.	2,526,983	80,350	61,800	18,550	76.91	29.64	2,381,669	145,314	475,314	900
Savannah State College Savannah, Ga.	2,520,936	61,972	41,422	20,550	66.83	38.66	2,395,936	125,000	291,604	577
Wilberforce University Wilberforce, Ohio	1,500,000	28,842	22,842	6,000	79.20	40.75	1,175,300	200,000	60,000	250
Central Wesleyan College, Central, S.C.	1,095,000	33,652	28,399	5,253	84.39	28.01	942,851	36,509	105,000	300





Jack Urwiller Photo

Clockwise from top left: The Scripps Institution of Oceanography, La Jolla, California: set deep into the surrounding earth. . . . Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, N.Y.: blocky and powerful, yet with a sense of grace and dynamism appropriate to this school for scientists. . . . Connecticut College, New London: austere lack of detail and rifle slit windows reflect a time of growing scarcity. . . . Sangamon State University in Springfield, Illinois: a new and striking home for a new concept in academic library organization

ADDITION PLUS RENOVATION

Name of Institution	Project Cost	Gross Area	Assignable	Non-Assignable	Percent Assignable	Sq. Ft. Cost	Building Cost	Equipment Cost	Book Capacity	Seating Capacity	Notes
University of Richmond, Va	4,035,000	89,250*	74,450	14,800	83.42	41.45	3,699,560	335,000	400,000	1030	*Addition 53,520
Weber State College Ogden, Utah	3,900,000	75,000	50,250	24,750	67.00	50.66	3,800,000	100,000*	300,000*	1200*	*Estimates
University of Rhode Island, Kingston, R.I	3,776,220	81,638*	68,073	13,565	83.00	41.42	3,381,123	289,292	330,125	443	*Addition 68,980
Vassar College Poughkeepsie, N.Y	3,700,000	32,778*	25,341	7,437	77.31	74.17	2,431,000*	232,500	165,000*	266*	*Addition only
University of Northern Iowa, Cedar Falls, Iowa	2,850,000	82,925*	73,425	9,500	88.54	24.28	2,013,370	450,000	600,000	1550	*Addition only
North Carolina Central University, Durham, N.C.	2,545,000	104,000*	80,958	23,042	77.84	23.32	2,425,000	120,000	500,000	1250	*Addition approx. 60,000
Wheaton College Wheaton, Illinois	2,230,000	63,700*	53,800	9,900	84.46	29.73	1,894,000	267,000	265,000	648	*Addition 42,700
Oklahoma Baptist University, Shawnee, Okla.	1,900,000	62,082*	50,259	11,769	80.45	24.16	1,500,000	150,000	240,000	500	*Addition 33,196

ADDITIONS ONLY

Name of Institution	Project Cost	Gross Area	Assignable	Non-Assignable	Percent Cost	Sq. Ft. Cost	Building Cost	Equipment Capacity	Book Capacity	Seating Capacity	Notes
Brigham Young Univ. Provo, Utah	10,000,000*	225,000	168,750	56,250	75.00	36.44*	8,200,000*	1,000,000*	1,000,000	2370	*Estimated
Harvard University Pusey Library Cambridge, Mass.	8,400,000*	87,000	65,000	22,000	74.71	64.37	5,600,000	92,000	1,125,000	176	*Includes site preparation and improvements Including 32 faculty studies
Coppin State College Baltimore, Md.	4,772,000	95,400	63,600	31,800	66.66	41.61	3,970,000	350,000	200,000	750
West Chester State College, West Chester, Pa.	3,334,960	89,759	67,320	22,439	75.00	25.60	2,297,781	458,122	300,000	850
University of Maine, Me.	2,500,000	57,200	49,525	7,675	83.04	46.52	2,200,000	170,000*	226,000	660	*Estimated

RENOVATION ONLY

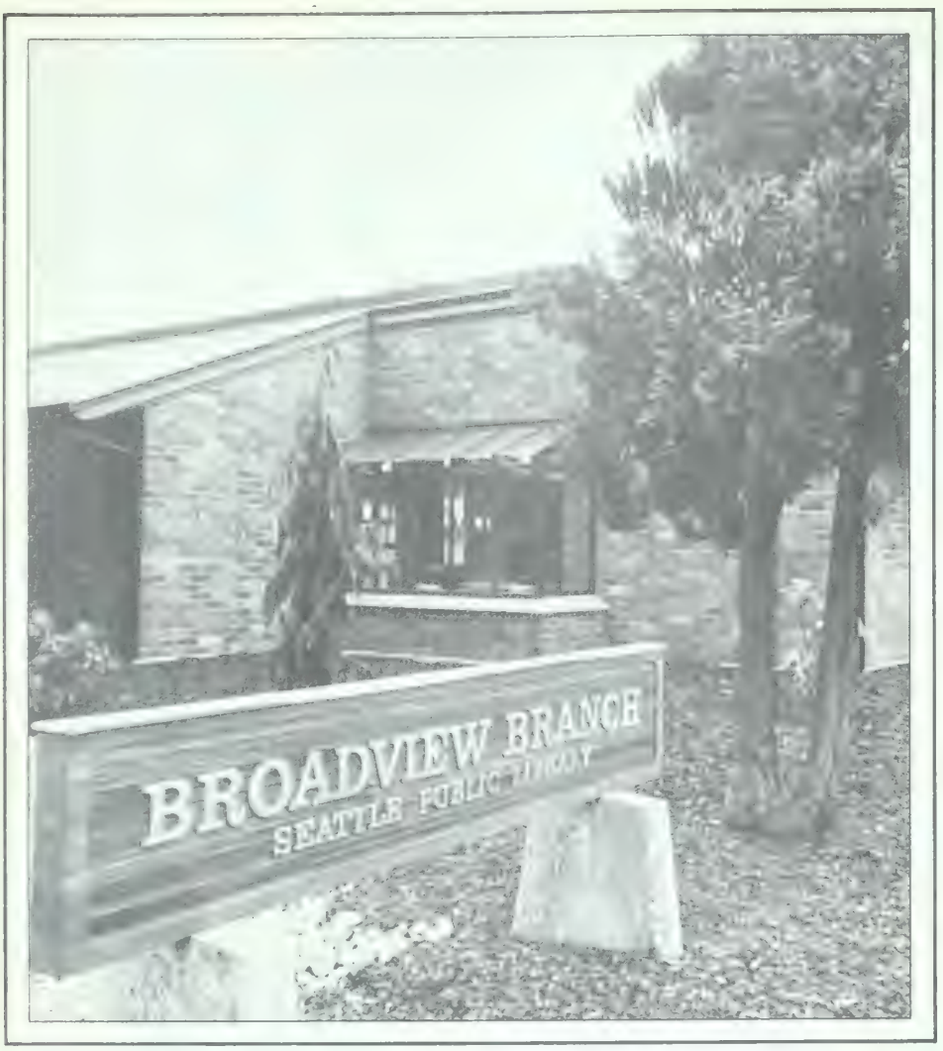
University of Michigan Ann Arbor, Mich.	3,971,520	190,136	131,776	58,360	69.00	15.79	3,001,266	190,000	850,000	809
University of Evansville Evansville, Ind.	292,034	27,680	23,300	4,380	83.09	8.40	232,500	31,534	250,000	300

SPECIAL LIBRARY TYPES

Name of Institution	Project Cost	Gross Area	Assignable	Non-Assignable	Percent Assignable	Sq. Ft. Cost	Building Cost	Equipment Cost	Book Capacity	Seating Capacity
Washington State University (Science Library) Pullman, Wash.	6,228,110	123,231	94,186	29,045	76.43	42.51	5,238,610	408,700	411,911	888
University of Wisconsin—Madison (Engineering & Physical Science Library)	3,395,000	70,690	53,440	17,250		42.00	2,969,178	425,822	275,000	625
Scripps Institution (Oceanography) La Jolla, Calif.	3,091,000	44,216	31,993	12,223	72.36	56.54	2,500,000	294,000	150,000	150
St. John's University (Manuscripts Library) Collegeville, Minn.	640,000	13,014	10,968	2,046	84.27	41.49	540,000	100,000	16,000	20

1975 LIBRARIES

Fort Valley State College Fort Valley, Ga.	2,100,270	70,212	61,000	9,212	86.88	24.21	1,699,500	267,810	250,000	550
University of Maine at Presque Isle,	980,000	28,472	20,343	8,129	71.44	29.08	828,000	45,000	81,875	220
University of Pittsburgh at Greensburg, Greensburg, Pa.	616,784	16,200	10,800	5,400	66.66	37.70	610,784	6,000	80,000	125



Public Library Buildings in 1976

A statistical report on 277 public library building projects completed in the USA during the year ending June 30, 1976

By Hoyt R. Galvin and Barbara N. Asbury

WE EXPECTED FEWER reports for completed public library buildings in F1976 because of the recession and the lower funding in recent years for Title II of LSCA, the Library Services and Construction Act. Instead, all sources of funding were at or near a high-water mark with "federal funds used" at the highest level since we began these tabulations in F1968.

Federal revenue sharing appears to have caused the acceleration in funding for the new buildings. Of the $27,353,925 of "federal funds reported used," we were able to identify two percent as ARC (Appalachian Regional Commission), HUD & EDA (Economic Development Administration); 14 percent as LSCA; and 73 percent as local revenue sharing. Eleven percent of the federal funding could not be identified in the reports received for F1976. In addition, an amount of $2,149,535 that was logically reported as "state funds used" was actually (federal) state revenue sharing. This amount was equal to eight percent of the other federal funds reported as used.

The year's public library building construction costs increased 12.5 percent for 187 new buildings reported completed; furniture and equipment costs were up 11.3 percent; and other costs (architect & consultant fees, surveys, etc.) were up 17.7 percent.

The following gives a six-year summary of square foot costs for new public library buildings completed by June 30 of the year indicated:

Co-editors of Library Journal's Public Library Building Survey: Library Consultant Hoyt Galvin and his Assistant Barbara Asbury

	148 bldgs. in F1971	139 bldgs. in F1972	96 bldgs. in F1973	121 bldgs. in F1974	125 bldgs. in F1975	187 bldgs. in F1976
Construction	$23.97	$28.20	$28.67	$31.17	$32.45	$36.52
Furniture & equip.	2.96	3.05	3.03	3.28	4.06	4.52
Other costs	2.86	2.99	2.95	3.31	3.67	4.32
Totals	29.79	34.24	34.65	37.76	40.18	45.36
Sites (when purchased) per sq. ft. of bldg.	4.76	5.99	3.63	5.52	4.42	4.29

In the library-by-library tables that follow, the square foot costs can be calculated for each building's furniture and other costs. Our data forms allow no input for the value of existing furniture moved from the old to the new buildings. An economical budget for library furniture and equipment in 1976 would be no less than $5 per square foot.

Book capacity and reader seats per gross square foot of new public library building continued about the same as shown for the past six years:

	Book Capacity per Sq. Ft.	Reader Seats per Sq. Ft.
F1971	3.8	.0061
F1972	4.0	.0056
F1973	4.2	.0064
F1974	3.96	.006
F1975	4.55	.0059
F1976	4.24	.0067

Offstreet parking was provided on 87 percent of the new building sites with about one square foot of parking space for each square foot of building. Air conditioning was provided in 95 percent of the new buildings, and carpeting was used in 88 percent.

Detailed data on the 277 public library construction projects reported as completed are listed in the tables which follow. In addition to the 187 new buildings, there were 90 buildings with additions, remodeling or refurbishing (ARR's), and 20 libraries occupying newly leased space.

State library agencies assist in directing our data forms to libraries having building completions. Without the state agency cooperation, it would not be feasible to collect this data.

Completed data forms were due to our offices by August 1 to begin tabulation. Data forms received after August 20, 1976 could not be included, but are being held for inclusion with the F1977 tables. Librarians wishing to report omitted buildings are invited to write Hoyt Galvin, 2259 Vernon Dr., Charlotte, N.C. 28211, or telephone (704) 366-4335.

Chula Vista: the completely planned library (see p. 2457)

PUBLIC LIBRARY BUILDINGS— A SIX YEAR COST SUMMARY

(For 1968 thru 1970 data, see p. 3857 of December 1, 1972 Library Journal, or p. 439 of 1973 Bowker Annual)

	Fiscal 1971	Fiscal 1972	Fiscal 1973	Fiscal 1974	Fiscal 1975	Fiscal 1976
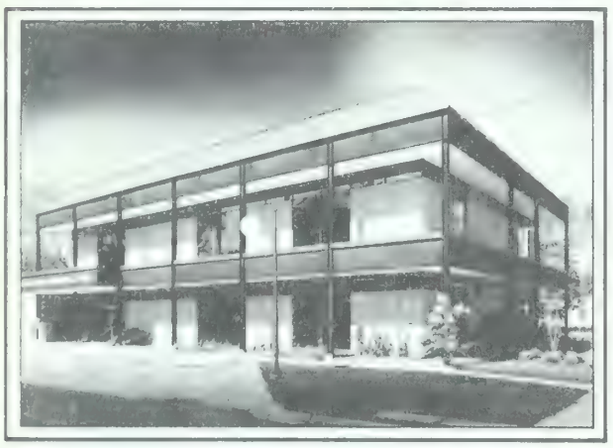
Number of new bldgs.	148	139	96	121	125	187
Number of ARR's[1]	60	52	47	74	87	90
Sq. ft., new bldgs.	2,032,252	2,091,203	1,479,887	1,649,962	1,474,751	1,817,272
Sq. ft., ARR's	462,240	586,236	1,112,877	514,393	586,854	980,338
New bldgs:
Construction cost	$48,501,338	$57,703,631	$ 42,424,822	$51,427,583	$47,860,591	$ 66,374,466
Equipment cost	6,015,692	6,330,786	4,486,595	5,410,499	5,982,891	8,212,051
Site cost	4,867,338	9,914,761	4,004,503	6,574,522	4,364,214	5,266,693
Other costs	5,809,078	6,076,095	4,369,043	5,458,811	5,417,981	7,858,816
Total—Project cost	65,193,446	80,025,273	55,284,943	68,871,415	63,625,677	87,712,026
ARR's—Project cost	10,952,245	14,458,707	45,484,955*	13,918,096	17,220,607	36,966,911
New & ARR Project cost	$76,145,691	$94,483,980	$100,769,898*	$82,789,511	$80,846,284	$124,678,937
Fund Sources:
Federal, new bldgs.	$11,214,090	$ 9,962,573	$ 6,639,755	$ 6,152,183	$ 8,599,789	$ 23,030,416
Federal, ARR's	2,211,752	1,846,280	2,064,830*	1,414,257	2,924,804	4,323,509
Federal, total	$13,425,842	$11,808,853	$ 8,704,585*	$ 7,566,440	$11,524,593	$ 27,353,925
State, new bldgs.	$ 2,507,715	$ 1,264,234	$ 1,938,194	$ 1,483,444	$ 1,955,815	$ 5,241,537
State, ARR's	648,397	123,860	699,637*	282,739	823,164	2,264,815
State, total	$ 3,156,112	$ 1,388,094	$ 2,637,831*	$ 1,766,183	$ 2,778,979	$ 7,506,352
Local, new bldgs.	$45,803,096	$64,838,308	$ 42,632,364	$56,225,651	$46,813,074	$ 50,501,926
Local, ARR's	7,249,611	9,226,366	34,855,584*	11,172,752	12,049,376	26,900,408
Local, total	$53,052,707	$74,064,674	$ 77,487,948*	$67,398,403	$58,862,450	$ 77,402,334
Gift, new bldgs.	$ 5,668,545	$ 3,960,158	$ 4,074,630	$ 5,010,137	$ 6,256,999	$ 8,938,147
Gift, ARR's	842,485	3,262,201	7,864,904*	1,048,348	1,423,263	3,478,179
Gift, total	$ 6,511,030	$ 7,222,359	$ 11,939,534*	$ 6,058,485	$ 7,680,262	$ 12,416,326
Total funds used	$76,145,691	$94,483,980	$100,769,898*	$82,789,511	$80,846,284	$124,678,937

[1]Additions, Remodeling and Renovation
*Figure corrected since 12-1-73 publication as one large project submitted incorrect data to compilers



© Edward Jacoby

© Edward Jacoby

Clockwise from top left: the Madison County-Canton Public Library, Mississippi: verandas and clerestories . . . . The Newburgh Free Library, N.Y.: with a view of the river and the Hudson Highlands, a library where urban blight once ruled the waterfront (exterior and interior)

NEW PUBLIC LIBRARY BUILDINGS CONSTRUCTED during year ending June 30, 1976

Symbol Code: B—Branch Library; BS—Branch & System Headquarters; M—Main Library; MS—Main & System Headquarters; S—System Headquarters

Community	Pop in M	Code	Project Cost	Gross Sq. Ft.	Constr. Cost	Sq. Ft. Cost	Equip. Cost	Site Cost	Other Costs	Vols.	Reader Seats	Fed. Funds	State Funds	Local Govt. Funds	Gift Funds
ARIZONA
Camp Verde	4	M	102,885	4,100	85,365	20.82	10,474	5,000	2,046	20,000	30	50,000			52,885
Casa Grande	15	MS	391,262	9,980	285,000	28.55	23,762	50,000	32,500	60,000	88	130,421		260,841
Prescott	43	M	1,102,440	18,800	897,037	47.71	50,429	66,780	88,194	85,000	90	450,000		561,778	90,662
ARKANSAS
Atkins	3	B	67,700	2,160	56,661	26.23	666	5,000	5,373	9,000	38	36,600			31,100
Paragould	12	MS	275,136	14,000	239,380	17.09		18,000	17,756	75,000	105	139,366			135,770
Russellville	12	B	324,700	8,100	199,576	24.63	54,700	52,000	18,424	30,000	73	258,000			66,700
CALIFORNIA
Anaheim	26	B	342,901	10,672	263,996	24.73	65,076	owned	13,829	50,000	92	342,901
Anaheim	25	B	288,503	10,622	209,598	19.73	65,076	owned	13,829	50,000	92	288,503
Aptos	16	B	454,500	8,000	349,500	43.69	42,000	34,000	29,000	40,000	74			454,500
Ceres	12	B	176,271	4,500	123,400	27.42	34,893	8,000	9,978	25,000	48	103,378		34,893	38,000
Chula Vista	75	M	2,302,000	55,000	1,800,000	32.73	400,000	owned	102,000	250,000	350	2,302,000
Citrus Heights	64	B	944,489	12,000	706,087	58.84	61,182	52,883	124,337	65,000	146	944,489
Clovis	35	B	567,800	8,627	455,000	52.74	57,800	owned	55,000	50,000	70	567,000		800
Dinuba	9	B	400,777	8,240	309,502	37.56	35,342	24,221	31,712	35,000	66	382,777			18,000
Exeter	5	B	258,352	4,950	200,125	40.43	20,347	24,865	13,015	20,476	28	250,852			7,500
Fremont	38	B	290,450	6,000	228,591	38.09	36,264	owned	25,595	30,000	51	228,591		60,845	1,014
Indio	20	B	1,300,000	20,000	730,000	36.50	90,000	100,000	380,000	100,000	100			1,300,000
Irvine	31	B	614,572	10,000	471,903	47.20	69,296	50,000	23,373	60,000	110			564,572	50,000
Lompoc	7		58,231	1,500	38,131	25.42	3,600	15,000	1,500	15,000	22	3,600		54,631
Los Altos	35	B	230,492	4,600	188,500	40.98	old		41,992	18,000	47			230,492
Manhattan Beach	35	B	766,701	12,150	622,063	51.20	78,969	owned	65,669	43,000	85	625,863		140,838
Marina del Rey	36	B	283,796	5,368	248,721	46.33			35,075	20,000	43			283,796
Oakdale	10	B	395,000	6,500	331,394	51.00	43,606	10,000	10,000	30,000	46	385,000			10,000
Patterson	7	B	265,000	3,800	162,108	42.66	82,892	20,000		20,000	20	265,000
Petaluma	25	B	1,424,016	25,000	1,046,626	41.86	158,660	owned	218,730	100,000	165	220,000		1,204,016
Redding	78	M	388,452	14,068	319,720	22.73	26,286	owned	42,446	56,000	85	388,452
Riverside	25	B	574,461	9,000	401,872	44.65	47,589	90,000	35,000	50,000	52	574,461
Sacramento	71	B	1,050,288	12,400	814,113	65.65	61,143	67,644	107,388	65,000	142	1,050,288
Sacramento	50	B	967,820	12,100	753,807	62.30	62,629	43,457	107,927	65,000	150	967,820
San Diego	12	B	345,268	8,000	292,424	36.55	26,344	owned	26,500	32,000	74			345,268
San Jose	19	B	525,000	7,223	324,000	44.86	58,000	45,000	98,000	40,000	69			525,000
San Leandro	7	B	76,430	1,680	58,725	34.96	6,172	owned	11,533	8,000	19	38,215		38,215
Seaside	34	B	578,178	10,000	442,000	44.20	57,000	31,681	47,497	50,000	81	290,880		287,298
Strathmore	1		133,405	2,854	98,694	34.58	14,042	11,669	9,000	12,770	19	133,254			151
Tahoe City	6	B	226,778	2,600	196,778	75.68		30,000		20,000	29	150,000		31,788	45,000
Tustin	60	B	667,284	15,000	474,866	31.66	97,840	55,000	39,578	85,000	138			612,284	55,000
Walnut Creek	20	B	955,985	14,138	780,705	55.22	54,900	75,000	45,380	40,000	100			870,985	85,000
Watsonville	19	M	936,544	16,294	682,505	41.89	87,789	owned	166,250	95,500	109	686,544		250,000
FLORIDA
Perry	14	M	235,344	7,268	188,351	25.92	28,493	5,000	13,500	50,000	60	174,000		61,344
Starke	15	M	102,642	4,068	86,543	21.27		8,000	8,099	20,000	30			102,642
GEORGIA
Adel	12	B	268,083	5,876	194,584	33.12	39,425	17,500	16,574	29,000	70	125,290	62,645	69,500	10,648
Americus	59	MS	609,930	21,000	421,308	20.06	65,949	65,000	57,673	105,800	114	200,000	250,000	10,729	149,201
Bainbridge	36	MS	605,810	14,753	347,424	23.55	184,888	owned	73,498	60,000	116	191,000	200,000	125,000	89,810
Bowdon	5	B	135,404	4,000	91,488	22.87	14,572	21,464	7,880	13,000	24		64,000	69,404	2,000
Bremen	5	M	157,906	4,000	129,429	32.36	21,131	owned	7,346	13,000	24		64,000	92,306	1,600
Griffin	300	MS	1,007,227	26,726	746,551	27.93	87,695	98,000	74,981	121,000	165		250,000	617,526	139,701
LaGrange	88	MS	807,587	17,000	681,803	40.10	77,832	owned	47,952	65,000	92		250,000	272,763	284,824
Marietta	30	B	250,000	7,500	219,207	29.23	14,374	owned	16,419	15,000	60		75,000	175,000
Marietta	20	B	377,365	7,500	267,578	35.68	37,718	30,600	41,469	15,000	60		145,000	232,365
Mt. Vernon	6	B	115,537	3,081	86,020	27.92	20,008	owned	9,509	15,000	28		52,687	25,000	37,850
Watkinsville	9	B	157,148	5,818	127,186	21.86	14,921	owned	15,041	25,000	47		80,000	41,000	36,148
IDAHO
Caldwell	14	M	570,992	16,000	435,212	27.20	94,660	owned	41,120	50,000	80	19,616	30,384	220,992	300,000
Cambridge	1	M	13,250	720	11,600	16.11	150	1,500		3,500	30		7,950	5,300
Horseshoe Bend	1	M	35,505	2,100	28,885	13.75	3,719	1.per yr	2,900	20,000	10	7,000	16,000	11,705	800
Midvale	1	M	65,375	1,800	54,741	30.41	5,252	100	5,282	10,000	11		28,000	37,375
Pocatello	10	M	174,460	6,000	151,360	25.23	10,000	5,000	8,100	30,000	36	100,000	40,000	34,460

New Buildings, continued

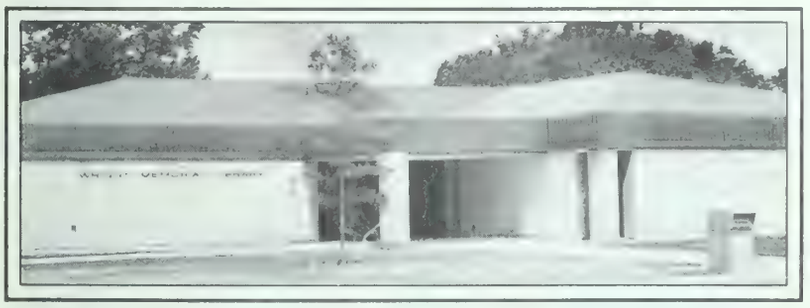
Community	Pop in M	Code	Project Cost	Gross Sq. Ft.	Constr. Cost	Sq. Ft. Cost	Equip. Cost	Site Cost	Other Costs	Vols.	Reader Seats	Fed. Funds	State Funds	Local Govt. Funds	Gift Funds
ILLINOIS
[illegible]	4	M	163,432	4,476	148,531	33.18	6,732	owned	8,169	40,000	16	71,454		8,459	83,519
[illegible]	35	M	708,409	28,800	577,772	20.06	17,756	58,000	54,881	105,000	105	253,000		432,624	22,785
Geneseo	8	M	449,246	7,981	334,531	41.92	19,195	58,125	37,395	50,000	60	40,621	0	103,000	305,625
Lyon	1	B	74,928	2,400	70,633	29.43	3,645	owned	650	6,000	26	4,441		55,786	14,701
Lake Bluff	5	M	372,073	7,700	290,955	37.79	42,882	owned	38,236	40,000	53			287,073	85,000
M[illegible]	15	M	351,114	9,952	303,919	30.54	22,699	owned	24,496	32,000	74			351,114
[illegible]	29	M	1,542,000	32,400	1,277,000	39.41	100,000	40,000	125,000	145,000	110	200,000		1,342,000
[illegible]	5	M	188,002	5,600	128,412	22.93	13,013	35,000	11,577	30,000	36			163,412	24,590
Palatine	41		1,628,000	32,600	1,020,229	31.30	220,831	116,000	270,940	120,000	180	208,000		1,420,000
[illegible]	20	M	870,893	25,000	638,602	25.54	65,289	37,514	129,488	100,000	100	130,000		732,375	8,518
KENTUCKY
Falmouth			255,864	4,690	215,444	45.94	9,051	11,530	19,839	29,500	18		135,000	120,864
[illegible]	14	B	249,648	4,200	179,567	42.75	19,975	25,850	24,256	20,000	30		140,000	109,648
Florence	32	M	608,820	11,600	453,753	39.12	47,628	40,000	67,439	80,000	78		225,000	383,820
Hardin	.	B	100,000	2,100	71,166	33.89	15,229	6,000	7,605	12,000	28		62,000	38,000
Marion	8	M	295,604	4,000	212,497	53.12	20,607	35,000	27,500	20,000	24		140,000	155,604
LOUISIANA
DeRidder	26	M	413,179	12,374	318,430	25.73	65,760	owned	28,989	75,000	70	125,000		288,179
Edgard	4	B	45,076	1,225	36,000	29.39	5,849	owned	3,227	5,000	13	631		44,205	240
Lake Charles		B	168,238	3,775	135,980	36.02	15,809	7,000	9.44	8,500	26	168,238
LaPlace	21	M	256,131	6,400	179,087	27.98	17,868	43,418	15,758	35,000	33	7,604		231,600	16,927
Port Allen	18	M	339,811	9,138	284,127	31.09	35,000	owned	20,684	35,000	42	140,000		199,811
Tallulah	15	M	365,001	8,489	267,680	31.53	43,057	17,000	37,264	45,000	56	88,766		276,235
MARYLAND
Aberdeen	30	M	700,568	14,200	551,921	38.87	60,940	50,000	37,707	66,000	72			700,568
Annapolis	345	S	1,387,161	18,380	1,148,438	62.48	94,270	owned	144,453			297,800	97,331	992,030
Baltimore	14	B	586,331	9,100	498,130	54.74	58,039	7,312	22,850	8,000	24	233,984		345,035	7,312
Baltimore	32	B	60,377	1,082	50,421	46.60	4,914	owned	5,042	8,000	24		40,694	19,683
Bethesda	45	B	2,168,000	25,000	1,059,000	42.36	248,000	722,000	139,000	150,000	240			2,168,000
LaVale	13	B	605,454	8,806	469,847	53.36	43,790	50,000	41,817	26,000	60	337,224	78,250	170,380	19,600
Rockville	40	B	926,000	15,000	570,000	38.00	140,000	152,000	64,000	50,000	200		91,879	834,121
MASSACHUSETTS
Byfield	4	M	35,000	2,880	25,000	8.68	10,000	owned		8,000	20	5,970	1,426	17,650	9,954
MICHIGAN
Farmington	30	B	850,000	18,000	690,000	38.33	85,000	10,000	65,000	60,000	102			850,000
Haslett	7	B	87,192	2,400	62,669	26.11	8,023	5,500	11,000	15,000	20	18,750		67,942	500
Hemlock	5	M	50,000	2,000	40,000	20.00	10,000	owned		10,000	27			50,000
Kentwood	25	M	637,686	15,400	528,686	34.33	75,000	owned	34,000	50,000	140			622,686	15,000
Lake Leelanau	1	M	230,006	3,090	125,444	40.60	12,000	82,000	10,562	10,000	20			40,006	190,000
Marysville	6	B	339,528	7,500	280,613	37.42	36,114		22,801	20,000	50	65,000		274,528
Portage	34	M	1,076,521	35,000	875,034	25.00	103,980	45,000	52,507	80,000	110	158,843	0	913,678	4,000
Saginaw	27	B	297,174	8,314	248,745	29.92	32,349	owned	16,080	45,000	86	258,283			38,891

Lens-Art Photo ©

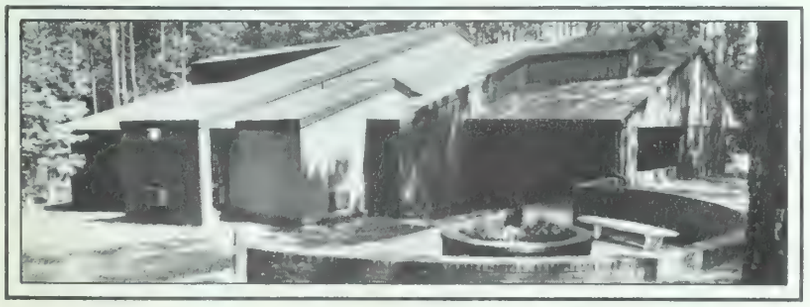
Left: sunlight and firelight flood the Farmington Community Library, Connecticut. . . . Above: the Sallie Logan Public Library, Murphysboro, Illinois: a severely functional public area relieved by a well-placed decorative screen

Community	Pop in M	Code	Project Cost	Gross Sq. Ft.	Constr. Cost	Sq. Ft. Cost	Equip. Cost	Site Cost	Other Costs	Vols.	Reader Seats	Fed. Funds	State Funds	Local Govt. Funds	Gift Funds
MINNESOTA
Brooklyn Park	34	B	847,677	15,000	644,834	42.99	69,203	46,239	87,401	50,000	60			847,677
Fridley	30	B	693,294	10,800	541,550	50.14	44,375	56,874	50,495	30,000	73			693,294
Granite Falls	7	M	147,521	3,025	109,668	36.25	11,416	7,500	18,937	30,000	25	9,420		136,105	1,996
Hawley	2	B	91,975	2,460	75,000	30.49	6,975	owned	9,820	10,000	27	70,000		21,975
Minneapolis	32	B	966,630	15,116	684,382	45.28	68,435	147,169	66,644	26,000	95	585,000		381,630
Roseau	11	B	64,038	2,064	51,600	25.00	8,598	owned	3,840	10,000	12	51,230		12,808
St. Charles	4	M	127,070	3,380	99,187	29.35	12,440	8,500	6,943	10,010	24	117,070		10,000
MISSISSIPPI
Ackerman	2	B	165,384	4,466	128,700	28.82	24,394	3,250	9,040	12,700	26		82,692	77,692	5,000
Bay St. Louis	2	MS	366,749	9,800	258,170	26.34	50,943	39,000	18,636	23,440	71	204,521		157,228	5,000
Belzoni	3	MS	145,000	3,492	117,933	33.77	19,539		7,528			15,000	65,000	65,000
Biloxi	5	M	41,036	1,766	33,681	19.07	3,948	1,050	2,357	8,000	10			41,036
Bruce	2	B	165,450	4,888	127,272	26.04	25,601	5,000	7,577	10,550	25		82,725	82,725
Burnsville	1	B	22,164	1,800	19,592	10.88	1,522	900	150	6,000	12		11,088	11,076
Canton	11	MS	337,415	11,334	265,627	23.44	34,000	21,000	16,788	40,000	40	160,376		174,039	3,000
Chunky	1	B	3,700	400	2,500	6.25	1,200			3,000	3			3,700	labor
Columbia	8	MS	478,953	10,404	401,932	38.63	52,600	owned	24,421	35,000	56		200,000	278,953
Eupora	2	MS	159,047	2,923	126,898	43.41	15,066	9,000	8,083	12,500	22		79,523	69,524	10,000
Glen Allan	1	B	71,365	1,850	54,760	29.61	13,320		3,285	3,650	19	71,365
Hazlehurst	3	B	22,185	1,732	21,842	12.61	275	gift	68	6,000	24	21,842			343
Jackson	25	B	505,690	11,884	378,111	31.82	42,318	62,574	22,687	28,450	84		200,000	305,690
Liberty	1	B	100,850	2,800	82,847	29.59	13,118	owned	4,885	7,950	14	12,212	44,319	44,319
Lucedale	2	B	156,000	3,602	116,827	32.43	19,612	10,000	9,561	11,550	26		78,000	75,000	3,000
Lumberton	2	B	106,600	2,752	83,630	30.39	17,801	owned	5,169	8,500	23		53,100	53,500
Madison	1	B	234,825	4,200	182,632	43.48	17,744	15,800	18,647	14,800	24		117,412	117,413
Magee	3	B	223,034	6,350	189,328	29.82	25,002	owned	8,704	18,500	35		111,517	111,517
Magnolia	2	B	97,730	2,720	82,839	30.46	10,100	owned	4,791	11,000	38	11,000	43,365	43,365
Mendenhall	3	B	150,000	3,442	108,542	31.53	13,945	21,000	6,513	12,495	24		75,000	75,000
Monticello	2	B	192,000	5,266	122,436	23.25	51,985	8,000	9,579	17,900	50		96,000	96,000
Newton	4	M	166,648	5,806	143,536	24.72	14,500	owned	8,612	24,000	35	10,000		81,648	75,000
Pascagoula	4	B	36,482	1,676	30,483	18.19	3,475	750	1,774	4,500	14			36,482
Polkville	1	B	25,000	300	23,000	76.66	2,000	owned						25,000
Pontotoc	4	MS	429,344	12,000	345,010	28.75	39,534	18,000	26,800	60,000	60		200,000	200,000	29,344
Progress	1	B	31,412	864	25,854	29.92	4,007	owned	1,551	5,000	12	4,007		27,405
Runnelstown	2	M	14,525	1,560	12,943	8.30	1,582	owned		2,525	9			14,525
Sardis	3	B	153,019	3,536	116,577	32.97	15,182	13,500	7,760	12,650	20		76,509	76,510
Scooba	5	B	18,797	940	15,747	16.75	2,050	1,000		6,000	11	2,050		15,747	1,000
Sebastopol	3	B	79,674	2,525	62,346	24.69	6,551	6,000	4,777	6,300	16		39,837	39,837
Senatobia	5	B	262,748	6,300	194,761	30.91	30,788	22,500	14,699	14,650	40		130,000	132,748
Sumrall	1	B	55,748	2,400	34,998	14.58	14,500	5,456	794	10,000	26	12,000		43,748
Taylorsville	1.4	B	116,613	3,975	90,392	22.74	13,697	7,000	5,524	10,250	29	6,830	54,891	16,892	38,000
Tunica	2	B	215,077	5,358	176,488	32.94	28,000	gift	10,589	16,000	48			215,077
Union	29	MS	262,824	6,100	208,237	34.14	32,018	8,000	14,569	18,000	34		131,412	131,412
Weir	1	B	13,344	600	11,844	19.74	1,500			3,900	10			13,344
Wiggins	3	B	142,596	3,618	95,224	26.32	27,160	12,000	8,212	9,875	25		71,298	71,298
MISSOURI
Creve Coeur	40	BS	1,199,360	19,500	944,328	48.42	97,282	77,827	79,923	100,000	174	50,000		1,149,360

Mrs. Charles Wallace photo



Joe Gentry photo

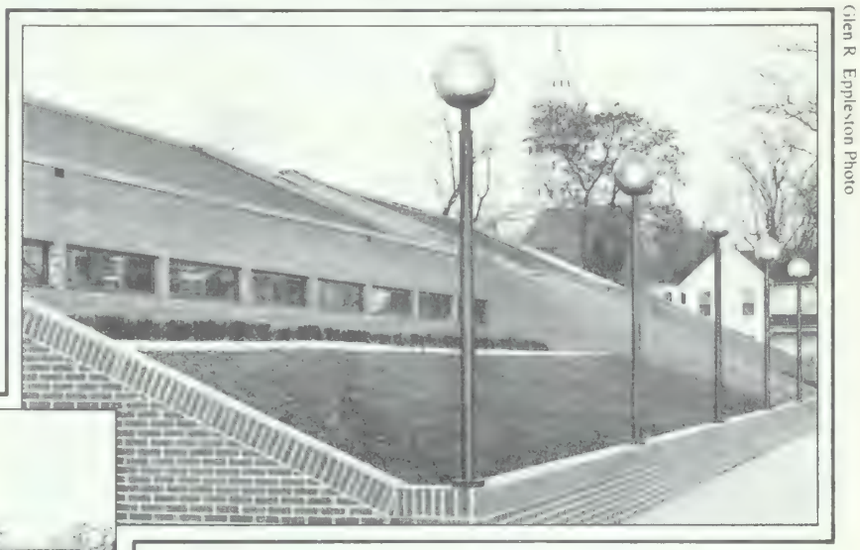


Top and bottom: The Wright Memorial Library, Paragould, Arkansas. . . . The Gritters Library, Cobb County System, Marietta, Georgia is at home in the pine woods

Community	Pop in M	Code	Project Cost	Gross Sq. Ft.	Constr. Cost	Sq. Ft. Cost	Equip. Cost	Site Cost	Other Costs	Vols.	Reader Seats	Fed. Funds	State Funds	Local Govt. Funds	Gift Funds
NEBRASKA
Bellevue	2[illegible]	M	[illegible]88,056	24,000	603,992	25.17	107,203	34,582	42,279	95,000	200	288,056		500,000
Kearney	19	M	901,688	22,000	731,307	33.24	99,410	owned	70,971	90,000	150	132,000		769,688
NEW HAMPSHIRE
Hanover	10	M	994,640	17,000	842,880	49.58	61,211	owned	90,549	50,000	91			399,000	595,640
NEW JERSEY
East Brunswick	38	M	1,832,958	34,600	1,453,088	42.00	233,932	owned	145,938	150,000	271	132,958		1,700,000
NEW YORK
Binghamton	369	MS	821,987	26,670	658,579	24.69	41,573	70,920	50,915	225,000		287,048		534,939
Briarwood	26		778,994	7,500	521,244	69.50	38,300	60,000	159,450	40,000	104			778,994
Central Islip	41	M	1,282,000	20,000	997,500	49.88	90,000	30,000	164,500	100,000	175			1,282,000
Corning	40	M	2,307,477	40,000	1,760,727	44.02	289,524	28,500	228,726	175,000	135	500,000			1,807,477
Flushing	21	B	616,275	7,500	380,415	50.72	44,460	40,000	151,400	40,000	100			616,275
Fonda	1	M	52,093	2,500	46,000	18.40	2,413	owned	3,680	10,000	15				52,093
Liverpool	45	M	670,000	20,370	555,918	27.29	42,375	owned	71,707	50,000	85			670,000
Maspeth	27	B	602,643	7,500	442,610	59.01	46,100	67,533	46,400	40,000	100			602,643
New York The Bronx	43	B	582,882	8,000	496,761	62.10	51,100	owned	35,021	20,300	76			582,882
New York The Bronx	35	B	706,685	9,680	520,488	53.77	59,300	89,177	37,720	30,000	80			706,685
New York The Bronx	33	B	577,530	8,250	445,330	53.98	51,400	52,000	28,800	29,500	72			577,530
New York Staten Island	25	B	649,010	7,500	479,048	63.87	49,000	93,562	27,400	25,790	79			649,010
Newburgh	65	M	3,600,000	69,130	2,900,000	41.95	248,000	35,000	417,000	250,000	210			3,440,000	160,000
Rego Park	28	B	653,332	7,500	378,799	50.51	34,700	75,000	164,833	40,000	100			653,332
Richmond Hill	42	B	626,378	7,500	456,126	60.82	44,000	68,452	57,800	40,000	100			626,378
South Hollis	31	B	644,236	7,500	387,650	51.69	46,887	47,544	162,155	40,000	100	122,327		521,909
NORTH CAROLINA
Elizabeth City	32,000		401,605	11,264	320,287	28.43	51,622	owned	29,696	54,000	99	215,248		55,000	131,357
Erwin	3	B	88,958	2,630	66,069	25.12	4,437	10,000	8,452	50,000	36			74,521	14,437
Lincolnton	33	M	579,431	16,050	414,315	25.82	70,046	60,000	35,070	90,000	158	129,185		440,246	10,000
Murphy	28	MS	467,600	17,120	384,096	22.44	35,344	16,000	32,160	75,000	100	374,080		68,000	25,520
OHIO
Eaton	7	BS	240,933	7,000	184,657	26.38	35,561	owned	20,715	25,000	60	90,000		492	150,441
Oxford	15	B	299,476	5,400	224,777	41.63	32,503	25,000	17,196	20,000	56			261,902	37,574
Troy	35	M	1,043,799	24,000	877,250	36.55	72,549	owned	94,000	175,000	95	211,000		47,000	785,799
OKLAHOMA
Duncan	20	M	558,501	11,000	455,185	41.38	51,701	32,815	18,800	50,000	65				558,501
Jenks	10	B	145,131	3,080	97,211	31.56	9,420	10,000	28,500	15,000	35	135,131			10,000
Sand Springs	7	B	119,269	3,100	91,376	29.48	7,849		20,044	15,000	30	119,269
Seminole	25	M	311,648	10,000	248,798	24.88	25,188	30,360	7,302	35,000	75	214,238		97,410
Tulsa	22	B	830,315	18,344	720,393	39.27	43,000	owned	66,922	20,000	32	830,315

© Nick Wheeler Photo

Clockwise from top left: the Lavale Library, Maryland. . . . The Houston Public Library: handsome but as functional as an oil derrick. . . . The Howe Library, Hanover, N.H.: sharp planes and vigorous, springing timbers



Counterclockwise from top left: an interior view of the Howe Library in Hanover, N.H. . . . The Myrtle Creek Public Library, Myrtle Creek, Oregon. . . . The Troy-Miami County Public Library: First solar-powered public library building in the U.S.; massive earth beams help keep out the cold of winter—and the heat of summer

Glen R. Eppleston Photo

Community	Pop in M	Code	Project Cost	Gross Sq. Ft.	Constr. Cost	Sq. Ft. Cost	Equip. Cost	Site Cost	Other Costs	Vols.	Reader Seats	Fed. Funds	State Funds	Local Govt. Funds	Gift Funds
OREGON
Myrtle Creek	3	B	166,731	3,344	127,959	38.27	4,544	20,000	14,228	10,000	46	142,731		21,127	2,873
PENNSYLVANIA
Coatesville	37	M	755,126	16,000	493,457	30.84	50,002	175,000	36,667	45,000	64	112,502		68,500	574,124
Harrisburg	40	B	848,560	18,000	546,841	30.38	79,175	75,000	147,544	50,000	183	100,000		450,000	298,560
New Cumberland	10	M	652,004	9,612	315,647	32.84	42,682	270,000	23,675	45,000	50	150,000			502,004
RHODE ISLAND
North Kingston	27	M	1,300,000	20,000	1,128,454	56.42	28,611	42,396	100,539	100,000	100	109,439	540,561	650,000
SOUTH CAROLINA
Great Falls	3	B	92,000	2,000	66,000	33.00	15,000	3,000	8,000	8,000	25	89,000			3,000
Hampton	16	B	137,015	3,600	119,250	38.06	4,373	1,320	12,072	30,000	25	129,046		2,473	5,496
Hilton Head Island	7	B	320,499	9,192	234,071	25.46	32,553	35,000	18,875	36,000	50	265,000		2,160	53,339
Lexington	1	B	150,000	3,700	130,000	35.14	13,780	owned	6,220	16,000	15	20,000		20,000	110,000
Pickens	3	B	106,800	4,992	61,800	12.38	16,000	22,000	7,000	6,000	50			58,000	48,800
TENNESSEE
Clinton	60	M	297,927	7,000	231,750	33.10	27,413	23,794	14,970	30,000	42	133,810		84,882	79,235
Crossville	20	M	290,338	8,346	259,267	31.06	13,938		17,133	7,500	50	158,107		68,172	64,059
TEXAS
Comanche	12	M	169,340	5,000	123,742	24.75	21,415	3,000	21,183	17,000	40	50,000		42,981	76,359
Roy	25	B	217,774	4,800	142,590	29.71	38,444	23,250	13,490	16,000	58	79,942	30,042	84,540	23,250
VIRGINIA
Bon Air	15	B	416,995	8,000	350,976	43.87	19,803	25,000	21,216	30,000	46			416,995
Ettrick-Matoaca	12	B	410,604	8,000	366,975	45.87	21,050		22,579	30,000	46			410,604
WASHINGTON
Seattle	35	BS	472,291	8,936	362,717	40.59	18,010	44,985	46,579	30,000	100	411,291		61,000
Grand Total			$87,712,026	1,817,272	$66,374,466		$8,212,051	$5,266,693	$7,858,816	7,708,481	12,155	$23,030,416	$3,341,537	$50,501,926	$8,938,147
per sq. ft.					$36.52	$36.52	$4.52		$4.32	4.24	.0067
STATE LIBRARY AGENCY BUILDINGS
Montgomery, Ala.	3,444	S	795,975	22,677	530,795	23.41	68,671	130,000	66,509	100,000	25	302,383		483,624	9,968

PUBLIC LIBRARY BUILDING ADDITIONS, REMODELING AND RENOVATION completed during year ending June 30, 1976

Symbol Code: B—Branch Library; BS—Branch & System Headquarters; M—Main Library; MS—Main & System Headquarters; S—System Headquarters

Community	Pop in M	Code	Project Cost	Gross Sq. Ft.	Constr. Cost	Sq. Ft. Cost	Equip. Cost	Site Cost	Other Costs	Vols.	Reader Seats	Fed. Funds	State Funds	Local Govt. Funds	Gift Funds
[illegible]
Arkadelphia	22	M	90,130	4,445	79,065	17.78	2,159	owned	8,906	45,000	60	54,078			36,052
CALIFORNIA
Berkeley	15	B	355,000	7400	245,000	33.11	20,000	50,000	40,000	32,500	58			355,000
Cedarville	1	B	11,538	968	1,438	1.49	100	10,000		8,000	12	938		600	10,000
Granada Hills	48	B	259,732	5,070	248,205	48.95	11,527	owned		65,000	80			259,732
Oakland	15	B	30,353	2,250	30,363	13.49								30,363
Porterville	40	M	412,203	18,500	343,805	18.58	23,299		45,099	70,000	120	369,500		42,703
Ripon	5	B	51,778	2,680	41,224	15.38	5,554	5,000		12,000	29	30,000		5,000	16,778
Tulare	19	M	255,720	12,754	170,202	13.34	29,688	owned	55,830	80,000	131	255,720
29 Palms	15	B	187,956	5,000	122,113	24.42	16,384	20,000	29,459	28,000	28	171,572		16,384
West Covina	68	B	1,992,159	43,393	1,537,000	35.42	195,303	75,592	184,264	165,000	125			1,992,159
CONNECTICUT
Terryville	11	M	559,461	10,670	415,059	38.90	52,977	owned	91,425	44,000	82	75,000		465,000	19,461
Windsor	25	M	1,500,000	23,000	1,220,000	53.04	130,000	owned	150,000	100,000	110		92,000	1,258,000	150,000
FLORIDA
Tampa	630	M	2,558,000	65,000	2,224,000	34.22	120,000	owned	214,000	400,000	210			2,558,000
GEORGIA
Atlanta	100	B	402,710	14,403	303,047	21.04	60,063	owned	39,600	100,000	120	153,000		249,710
Macon	123	M	241,396	14,000	173,453	12.39	50,598	owned	17,345	75,000	87	241,396
Moultrie	14	MS	130,000	2,800	108,200	38.64	12,050	owned	9,750	12,000	30		62,500	67,500
HAWAII
Honolulu	43	B	25,000	2,000	22,000	11.00			3,000			25,000
Honolulu	770	S	708,000	16,000	590,000	36.88	69,000		49,000			45,000	663,000
Honolulu	30	B	21,000	13,000	19,000	1.46			2,000			21,000
Honolulu	865	S	239,000	6,187	187,000	30.22	30,000		22,000				239,000
Honolulu	9	B	139,000	1,000	125,000	12.50			14,000			50,000	89,000
IDAHO
Aberdeen	2	M	20,500	1,534	17,500	11.41		owned	3,000	11,000	10	8,000	3,000	2,000	7,500
Bellevue	1	M	4,635	480	4,471	9.31	100	owned	64	5,000	25		2,962	1,673
ILLINOIS
Bellwood	22	M	159,342	6,563	134,595	20.51	4,750	owned	19,997	85,400	108			159,342
Creve Coeur	[illegible]	M	107,264	4,044	93,261	23.06	7,516	owned	6,487	24,000	18			103,164	4,100
Deerfield	19	M	80,070	8,000	41,501	5.19	34,269	owned	4,300	32,000	60			80,070
Harvey	35	M	446,944	8,000	359,196	44.90	31,383	25,000	31,365			25,000		421,244	700
Highland Park	33	M	1,354,434	43,000	1,020,755	23.74	211,486	50,693	71,500	126,000	229			1,354,434
Hoffman Estates	15	B	184,774	5,000	163,696	32.74	12,586	owned	8,492	17,500	31	43,000		141,774
Marshall	4	M	8,800	4,320	8,800	2.03		owned		7,000	34			8,800
Moline		B	41,803	864	19,693	22.79	5,548	12,999	3,563	6,000	14			41,803
Mundelein	12	M	124,631	6,000	108,571	18.10	5,203	owned	10,857	33,306	50			124,631
Northbrook	28	M	1,195,500	22,000	947,303	43.06	45,400	owned	202,797	68,500	48			1,195,500
South Beloit	4	M	84,142	3,370	69,560	20.64	1,921	owned	12,661	35,000	44			80,342	3,800
INDIANA
Bedford	28	M	74,797	1,965	61,665	31.38	8,200	owned	4,932	843	15			44,017	30,780
Hartford City	10	M	38,819	4,234	38,679	9.14	140	owned		28,000	59			38,819
Ligonier	4	M	89,000	120	75,000		5,100	owned	8,900	7,500	22			89,000
KENTUCKY
Bedford	5	M	96,080	2,500	79,533	31.81	10,754	owned	5,793	10,000	20		60,000	36,080
Bowling Green	54	M	729,796	18,965	606,570	31.98	72,799	owned	50,427	130,000	65		332,900	396,896
Franklin	13	M	208,000	4,800	176,574	36.79	14,516	owned	16,910	25,000	32		115,000	93,000
Harrodsburg	16	M	217,646	5,964	94,852	15.90	19,359	94,500	8,935	40,000	34		115,000	102,646
Lancaster	9	M	16,129	1,400	14,129	10.09		owned	2,000	20,000	24		10,000	6,129
Winchester	25	M	187,938	2,716	150,320	55.35	17,681	owned	19,937	50,000	26		100,000	87,938
LOUISIANA
Ruston	34	M	445,722	14,000	355,656	25.40	31,555	30,450	28,061	70,000	139	300,000		145,722

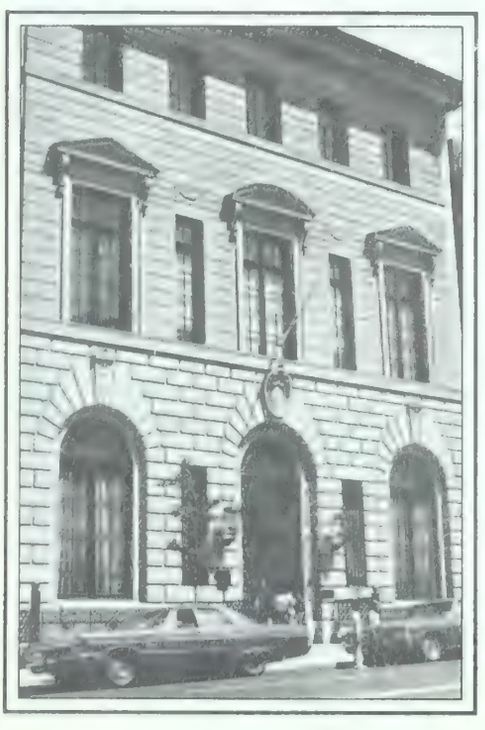
Community	Pop in M	Code	Project Cost	Gross Sq. Ft.	Constr. Cost	Sq. Ft. Cost	Equip. Cost	Site Cost	Other Costs	Vols.	Reader Seats	Fed. Funds	State Funds	Local Govt. Funds	Gift Funds
MARYLAND
Mt. Airy	5	B	108,734	2,200	56,370	25.62	12,707	35,663	3,994	17,000	20			108,734
MASSACHUSETTS
Edgartown	3	M	321,416	6,860	228,416	46.85	26,000	owned	67,000	30,000	60			209,416	112,000
Gloucester	28	M	1,326,884	24,562	1,009,591	41.10	140,567	owned	176,726	100,000	111	150,000	59,000	660,000	457,884
Lexington	32	M	1,682,500	38,000	1,267,800	33.36	125,000	104,000	185,700	150,000	256			1,682,500
Somerville	90	M	1,613,023	33,890	1,231,164	36.33	91,200	owned	290,659	130,000	200	110,229		1,501,094	1,700
MICHIGAN
Albion	20	M	454,859	15,320	401,737	26.22		25,000	28,122	46,000	91	96,750		314,703	43,406
Allegan	11	M	321,112	7,500	266,171	35.49	36,239	owned	18,702	45,000	65	101,112		200,000	20,000
Climax	2	M	10,700	1,032	10,550	10.22	150	owned		10,000	8			500	10,200
Ludington	25	M	328,400	9,600	271,500	28.28	29,578	7,000	20,322	50,000	90	101,158		227,242
Monroe	125	BS	518,649	25,219	498,177	19.75		owned	20,472	500,000	20			518,649
Pinconning	10	B	115,255	2,955	84,380	28.55	15,055	10,000	5,820	18,000	31			80,200	35,055
Rochester	43	M	1,048,000	22,000	662,700	30.12	159,000	85,000	141,300	110,000	206			1,048,000
MINNESOTA
Cambridge	17	MS	403,833	17,700	327,607	18.51	48,240	owned	27,986	75,000	53	215,000		188,546	287
MISSISSIPPI
Durant	23	MS	164,225	4,680	136,407	29.15	14,644	owned	13,174	14,725	34		82,112	82,113
Greenwood	1	B	13,067	1,689	11,879	7.03			1,188	10,450	22		6,533	6,534
Moorhead	3	B	54,400	1,600	49,358	16.61	3,045	owned	1,997	3,750		3,045	27,200	24,155
West	1	BS	1,632	440			1,632					1,632
MONTANA
Fairfield	2	M	38,000	1,680	37,100	22.08	400		500	3,800	20	31,000			7,000
NEBRASKA
Tekamah	2	M	12,072	2,500	11,222	4.49	850	owned		12,000	30		385	11,687
NEW HAMPSHIRE
Portsmouth	25	M	761,786	16,400	663,786	40.47	43,000	owned	55,000	80,000	115	369,000		314,786	78,000
NEW JERSEY
Rutherford	20	M	1,400,000	35,000	1,130,000	32.29	70,000	200,000		130,000	100			300,000	1,100,000
West Caldwell	12	M	615,500	11,000	147,500	13.40	60,000	390,000	18,000	65,000	95	1,000		614,500
NEW MEXICO
Socorro	10	M	103,000	2,688	86,000	31.99	4,448	owned	12,552	20,000	32	79,000	0	24,000	0
Zuni	4	M	13,070	1,856	13,070	7.04	0	owned	0	9,280	24	10,455	0	2,615	0

© Steve Rosenthal

© Steve Rosenthal

Top left, the Windsor Public Library, Connecticut preserved and enhanced a fine old building with a sympathetic new structure. . . . In Lexington, Mass. (left and upper right) the second remodeling of the library building that looks out on the Minuteman of Lexington makes the most of precious space with a walled exterior court

Community	Pop in M	Code	Project Cost	Gross Sq. Ft.	Constr. Cost	Sq. Ft. Cost	Equip. Cost	Site Cost	Other Costs	Vols.	Reader Seats	Fed. Funds	State Funds	Local Govt. Funds	Gift Funds
NEW YORK
Bedford Hills	5	M	39,023	1,113	37,523	33.71		owned	1,500	9,000	11				39,023
Cortland	26	M	78,910	1,890	71,257	37.70	3,000		4,653	14,000				25,000	53,910
East Hampton	14	M	184,206	5,010	161,907	32.32	1,338	owned	20,961	16,000	24				184,206
Frankfort	[illegible]	M	111,000	2,200	92,000	41.82	12,000	owned	7,000	12,000	35			107,000	4,000
Glen Oaks	25	B	68,250	10,000	68,250	6.82			in-house	50,000	75			68,250
Hempstead	42	M	1,354,516	28,077	877,739	31.26	148,046	owned	328,731	180,000	168			1,354,516
Herkimer	11	M	309,469	7,800	124,968	16.02	10,932	165,000	8,569	40,000	60	20,000		60,000	229,469
New York	51	B	1,039,061	16,002	879,479	54.96	63,800	owned	95,782	31,690	90	350,000		689,061
[illegible]	3	M	86,188	3,285	51,213	15.59	11,591	22,934	450	12,000	21			2,688	83,500
Scarsdale	19	M	969,754	19,800	817,763	41.30	61,593	owned	90,398	90,000	138			800,000	169,754
South Salem	7	M	169,593	3,000	143,187	47.73	13,406	owned	13,000	43,000	72	53,000		22,121	94,472
Spencerport	12	M	98,495	3,800	40,165	10.57	18,286	37,500	2,544	24,000	34			90,852	7,643
Watertown	31	M	1,200,000	23,000	983,757	42.77	79,000	owned	137,243	160,000	125	16,131		1,081,869	102,000
NORTH DAKOTA
Dickinson	13	M	261,256	4,950	205,483	41.51	26,715	10,000	19,058	35,000	67	155,841		105,415
OHIO
Enon	15	B	14,168	1,152	12,082	10.49	2,086	owned		20,000	25			1,303	12,865
Jackson	13	M	320,900	10,269	185,500	18.06	42,000	80,000	13,400	70,000	50	90,000		50,750	180,150
Lakewood	71	M	110,104	4,110	24,084	5.85	7,835	70,000	8,185	40,000	32			110,104
OKLAHOMA
Vinita	15	M	192,390	6,000	109,865	18.32	18,809	53,040	10,676	30,000	25	88,500			103,890
OREGON
Gold Beach	2	M	10,044	896	7,166	8.00	746	owned	2,132	300		10,044
Tigard	20	ML		5,300		74.00				30,000	25
PENNSYLVANIA
Burgettstown	12	M	46,397	6,310	34,540	5.47	11,857	owned		24,000	43			34,540	11,857
Evans City	4	M	77,000	1,475	70,000	47.45		owned	7,000	12,000	8			71,000	6,000
Lykens	10	B	65,175	4,000	56,709	14.18	5,102	1	3,363	15,000	30			25,000	40,175
Mars	8	M	8,918	1,365	900	0.66	8,018	owned		15,000	19	3,000		3,000	2,918
Mount Union	9	B	13,944	1,900	5,077	2.67	8,867	owned		9,000	34			11,650	2,294
Upper Darby	96	M	415,995	7,800	325,756	41.77	61,590	owned	28,640	46,368	74	100,000		315,995
RHODE ISLAND
Cumberland	27	M	700,000	24,278	515,036	21.21		owned	184,964	75,000	75	144,777	205,223	350,000
SOUTH CAROLINA
Marion	30	M	213,695	7,392	194,875	26.36	3,470	owned	15,350	25,000	52	75,000		138,695
Saluda	16	M	169,000	3,600	100,840	28.01	17,260	owned	50,900	10,000	24			169,000
TEXAS
Nacogdoches	36	M	90,000	10,000	73,000	7.30	17,000	owned		50,000	52			90,000



Left: The Hamilton Grange Branch of the New York Public Library; Top: The Hempstead, N.Y., Public Library—old building at left, entrance of new children's room at right

Community	Pop in M	Code	Project Cost	Gross Sq. Ft.	Constr. Cost	Sq. Ft. Cost	Equip. Cost	Site Cost	Other Costs	Vols.	Reader Seats	Fed. Funds	State Funds	Local Govt. Funds	Gift Funds
VIRGINIA
Falls Church	39	B	409,681	12,800	333,759	26.07	25,950		49.972	79,290	79			409,681
WASHINGTON
Granite Falls	1	B	12,750	640	11,000	17.19	1,750	owned		7,500	19	11,000			1,750
WYOMING
Rock Springs	25	M	610,000	14,394	480,000	33.35	20,000	75,000	35,000	100,000	130	68,631		537,769	3,600
Grand Total			$36,966,911	980,338	$28,544,428		$2,952,770	$1,744,372	$3,725,341	4,763,702	5,778	$4,323,509	$2,264,815	$26,900,408	$3,478,179

LEASED PUBLIC LIBRARY BUILDING SPACE newly occupied during year ending June 30, 1975

Symbol Code: B—Branch Library; BS—Branch & System Headquarters; M—Main Library; MS—Main & System Headquarters; S—System Headquarters

City or post office	Pop	Code	Project Cost Total of all	Gross Sq. Ft.	Construction Cost	Cost per Sq. Ft.	Furniture Equip.	Site Cost	Other Costs	Book Capacity	Reader Seats	Federal Funds	State Govt.	Local Govt. & Library	Gift Funds
Bodfish, CA	3	B	Rental	1,000						3,000	10
Escalon, CA	7	B	$10,175	2,042	$2,365	1.16	7,810			10,950	22			6,710	3,465
Fresno, CA	26	B	[leased]	2,085						10,000	12
Fresno, CA	46	B	500	7,500			500			50,000	43			500
Highland, CA	31	B	10,000	10,000			10,000			52,000	78			10,000
Jacumba, CA		B	1,000	500			1,000			2,265	6			1,000
Meiners Oaks, CA	6	B	12,003	1,800	12,003	6.67				7,500	8	12,003
Milpitas, CA	33	B		4,830						60,000	46
Oakland, CA	20	B	10,275	2,184	10,275	4.70				16,500	50	10,275
Oakland, CA	45	B	10,200	3,445			10,200			25,000	50			10,200
Palm Desert, CA3		B		700						3,652	15
Palo Alto, CA	18	B		7,000
Prunedale, CA		B		5,200						30,000
San Juan														annual rent
Capistrano, CA	12	B		1,600						12,700	18			8,136
Santee, CA		B	12,000	6,470			12,000			13,000	30			12,000
Sun City, CA	7	B		3,000						13,000	24
Crofton, MD	15	B	407,056	14,009	288,634	20.60	55,762	$62,660		75,000	185	189,544		217,512
Charlotte, NC	52	B	24,235	8,000	10,731	1.34	13,504			38,000	58			17,915	6,320
Bala Cynwyd, PA	17	B	649,850	15,000	537,600	35.84	60,000	52,250		75,000	125	10,000		589,850	50,000
Erie, PA		B	112,045	4,500	86,741	19.28	10,725	14,579		35,000	29	10,725	55	101,265
TOTALS			$1,259,339	100,865	$948,349		$181,501	$129,489		532,567	809	$232,547	$55	$966,952	$59,785

Left: The East Hampton Free Library, N.Y., hewed to the original Tudor style in its addition; Below: The Bala-Cynwyd Library, Pa.

Two-Year College Learnin

DURING THE YEARS 1965-75, junior/community colleges reported 325 new library/learning resources centers. During that same period, the number of two-year colleges increased more than 50 percent, from 771 to 1,230, and enrollments tripled to total 4,069,279 students in 1975-76. The number of new campuses and additional buildings on existing campuses was, in itself, not enough to handle students in the traditional classroom/laboratory approach to learning. Even the heavy departmental installations of foreign language audio laboratories in the early 60's, followed by similar shorthand and biology facilities, were not enough to take care of the large enrollments. The largest percentage increase in numbers of students was fall 1965, an increase of 23.8 percent over the previous year. The influx of veterans in fall 1975 accounted for part of the next largest increase—15.4 percent over 1974. The next effort to handle these increased enrollments was in the format of audio learning laboratories to serve more than one discipline via audio tapes, either by dial access, over-the-counter circulation of tapes, or distribution of programs on request. Videotapes are now available in many colleges.

Since 1970, individualized learning laboratories in all disciplines, learning assistance centers, and tutoring programs account for a significant change in learning environments. Some of these categories are included in learning resources programs; some are within English, mathematics, and counseling departments; and some are physically in learning resources centers, but administered by other jurisdictions. That they are at least physically in learning resources centers buildings is shown in Table 1, which indicates that 50 percent of the new buildings reported both tutorial services and learning assistance programs. Another recent phenomenon is the career information center. While libraries have always collected career books, pamphlets, and college catalogs, the new concept of career information centers is a comprehensive program which includes many nonprint materials and, when fiscally feasible, a counselor and/or counseling aide. As in the case of learning assistance and tutorial services, these are sometimes administered by other departments of the college.

Two survey questions were not related to buildings, but to integration of nonprint materials in the stacks and public catalog. Of the 108 colleges, 80 interfile cards for nonprint materials in the public catalog, and 25 intershelve nonprint media in the stacks. Size of colleges intershelving materials did not appear to be a factor. Those colleges reporting intershelving ranged in enrollment from 74 to 18,874. The 1972-73 survey (LJ, December 1, 1973) reported only six of 55 new learning resources centers intershelving materials.

As indicated in Table 2, assignable square feet ranged from 504 to 80,000 with square footage costs ranging from $18 to $116. This is higher than reported in 1972-73 ($14-$89), an increase of 28-30 percent. Excluding leased buildings and local renovations, the average cost per square foot in 1973-75 was $41.60.

Total seating ranged from 27 to 1,270, both at private colleges, and both seating approximately 23 percent of their student populations. The percentage of seating as it relates to FTE (full-time enrollment equivalency) ranged from 1-75 percent, both at public colleges. The median was 12.5 percent. The FTE percentage of seating was bimodal, with 10 and 20 percent FTE seating both being cited nine times. These figures show that, despite tremendous enrollment increases, two-year colleges generally are maintaining a satisfactory ratio of seating to full-time students.

Not indicated in Table 2, but important to two-year college learning resources programs, are the adult learning centers built by Yakima Valley College in Ellensburg, Sunnyside, and Yakima, Washington, all of which include learning resources and learning assistance programs. Renovations at New Mexico Junior College and Alabama Aviation and Technical College contained learning assistance and library-audiovisual services respectively. Of special interest also is Roxbury Community College, Massachusetts, which leased 10,000 square feet at a cost of $1.75 per square foot. An agricultural hall was renovated at University of Nebraska School of Technical Agriculture, Curtis, for production of audiovisual materials and distribution of equipment.

TABLE 1:

Facilities Included in 108 Learning Resource Centers*
Built July 1, 1973-June 30, 1976

Service	No. of Colleges
Library	98
Audiovisual distribution	102
Graphic/photographic production	79
Audio/video production	86
Reprographic production (other than a copy machine)	44
Audio learning laboratory	86
Video learning laboratory	63
Tutorial services	53
Learning assistance services	56
Career information center	46

*A Learning Resources Center was defined as "a building containing library and audiovisual services, as well as related instructional services such as audio/video learning laboratories, career information centers, learning assistance services, and reprographics."

Joleen Bock is Dean of Instructional Resources, College of the Canyons, Valencia, California

esources Center Buildings

Comments outside the coverage of the questionnaire

Arizona—Navaho: All buildings on the campus are designed like a hogan—eight-sided. Northland Pioneer: A mobile unit has been outfitted as an LRC.

California—Cabrillo: Includes a center for coordinated instructional courses in reading, writing, and speech. Sierra: Although they do not intershelve nonprint media with books, they use dummies and keep the materials at the circulation desk. Skyline: LRC is half of a student center and also includes a computer center.

Florida—Gulf Coast: Includes the campus mail room. Pensacola: Includes a computer lab and an in-service training lab.

Illinois—Triton: Includes an FM radio station. Wilbur Wright: Includes 24 Plato stations.

Maryland—Allegany: Includes a multi-media classroom. Harford: Includes a testing center and instructional development lab.

Massachusetts—Northern Essex: Includes an ERIC fiche center.

Michigan—Lansing: LRC services are decentralized at seven different sites as well as through 12 AV tutorial laboratories in various disciplines.

Minnesota—University Minnesota Tech. Coll., Waseca: Includes a mail center.

New Jersey—Middlesex County: Includes a computer center.

New York—Fashion Inst. of Technology: Includes a design laboratory and galleries.

South Carolina—Orangeburg-Calhoun: a Manpower LRC has been built. It also includes a bookstore, veterans office, students center and first aid center.

Texas—Grayson County: Established mini-learning centers in nursing, automotive, and accounting. More are underway. San Antonio: Established a branch library. Temple: Four library rooms were converted to a media center.

Virginia—J. Sargeant Reynolds: Also has a LRC on a downtown campus in a converted furniture store.

Washington—Whatcom: Mini LRC's are being established in Class One Industrial Centers.

Wisconsin—District One Technical Institute: Includes an LRC in a mobile unit.

Summary

The largest increases in types of learning resources center facilities in two-year colleges during the past ten years have been in production (graphic/photographic; audio/video and reprographic) and learning laboratories (audio, video, learning assistance, and tutoring). Not measured in prior years, career information centers were well represented in the current survey. Related instructional services are becoming a major function, and costs have accelerated nearly one-third in three years. There has been a gradual decrease of growth in learning resource center buildings from a yearly high of 55 in 1972-73 to 36 in the current study. This is in keeping with the national growth pattern of new colleges, but not with enrollment increases of the past year. Heavier use of current facilities, rearranged priorities of service, and increased use of all types of paraprofessionals have made it possible for learning resources centers to cope with more programs, more students, and more service demands.

TABLE 2

College	Gross Area	Total ASF*	Sq. Ft. Cost	Bldg. Cost	Furn & Equip. Cost	Seats	Percent Fall '75 FTE	Key to Facilities
ALABAMA
Ala. Lutheran	NA	504	26.00	500	21,000	27	23	BCDFGHI
George C. Wallace State	NA	12,672	18.00	500,000	75,000	450	25	ABDFGJK
ALASKA
Sheldon Jackson	12,000	10,715	40.00	675,000	13,100	133	55	ABCDFGHIKL
ARIZONA
Arizona Coll. of Tech.	2,900		26.00	75,400	31,200	39	6	ABJ
Navajo	28,598	21,455	29.00	835,208	69,500	300	75	ABDFGK
ARKANSAS
Ark. State Univ.—Beebe	17,904	16,567	23.17	414,917	47,159	246	47	ABCDEFGK
CALIFORNIA
Butte	NA	35,314	56.89	2,009,134	283,635	331	14	ABCDEFGHJ
Cabrillo	15,000	12,000	52.00	1,900,000	112,000	300	6	BCDEFGHI
Cerro Coso	5,620	4,620	NA	NA	NA	80	6	ABCDFGHIK
Chabot Coll.—Valley	4,500	3,950	60.50	272,000	43,313	93	11	ABDFIJK
Chaffey	1,271	1,197	42.77	54,363	15,000	20	4	I
College of the Canyons	55,994	34,939	71.17	487,000	425,000	400	20	ABCDEFKL
Cuesta	48,000	33,088	40.70	1,953,600	306,775	250	7	ABCDEFGHIJK
Evergreen Valley	12,240	8,062	73.06	NA	910,000	120	46	ABCDEFGHIJKL
Lake Tahoe	2,600	2,600	NA	NA	NA	100	20	ABCDFGKL
Merritt	30,007	26,908	74.65	2,239,614	169,882	335	7	ABCDEFGI

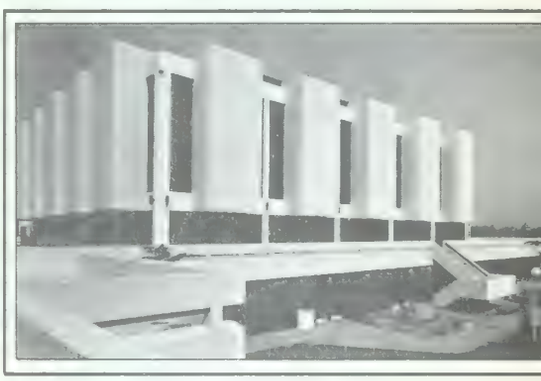
KEY TO SERVICES AVAILABLE
A=library
B=AV distribution
C=graphic/photo prod.
D=audio/video prod.
E=reprographic services
F=audio learning lab
G=video learning lab
H=tutorial services
I=learning assistants
J=career center
K=AV cards interfiled
L=AV materials intershelved

*ASF = Assigned Square Feet

Top to bottom: South Oklahoma City Jr. College: broad open spaces and a sassy little fountain. . . . Lorain County Community College, Elyria, Ohio

College	Gross Area	Total ASF	Sq. Ft. Cost	Bldg. Cost	Furn. & Equip. Cost	Seats	Percent Fall '76 FTE	Key to Facilities
Calif. cont'd
Ohlone	82,285	51,642	116.26	4,224,152	300,000	435	9	ABCDEFGHJK
San Joaquin Delta	45,431	32,645	53.69	1,752,732	182,000	486	10	AK
Sierra	32,284	26,970	NA	NA	NA	275	7	ABCDFGHK
Skyline	NA	17,892	NA	NA	NA	275	7	ABCDFGK
Southwestern	30,600	21,075	27.19	832,146	123,261	375	7	BCDEFGHI
West Valley	15,000	13,000	73.00	1,100,000	300,000	700	6	BCDEFGHK
CONNECTICUT
Norwalk State Tech.	6,064	3,875	NA	NA	NA	113	12	ABEFIJK
DELAWARE
Del. Tech. & CC—Stanton	15,800	13,875	60.00	8,000,000	150,000	207	24	ABCDFGK
Del. Tech. & CC—Terry	67,000	4,500	104.00	3,840,000	424,000	135	15	ABDFGK
FLORIDA
Brevard	58,410	32,075	26.57	1,552,169	150,000	207	4	ABCDEFGHIKL
Chipola	17,235	7,500	30.00	225,000	30,000	217	6	ABCDEFGK
Gulf Coast	50,000	50,000	23.00	1,400,000	200,000	500	30	ABCDEFGIJ
Indian River	31,923	20,000	25.00	804,528	200,500	400	9	ABDFK
Pensacola	46,828	39,552	30.71	1,438,000	150,000	750	9	AFGHK
IDAHO
Ricks	83,000	52,000	34.00	3,300,000	500,000	1,270	22	ABCEFGL
ILLINOIS
Illinois Central	35,652	35,052	NA	NA	463,472	571	10	ABCDEFGHIJK
John A. Logan	19,375	15,500	32.00	620,000	113,000	308	20	ABCDFGIK
Lincoln Trail	7,500	7,304	27.00	202,500	20,000	120	10	ABCDEFGK
Olney Central	20,234	14,319	28.00	566,599	13,406	112	8	ABCDEFIJ
Triton	111,000	80,000	32.82	3,644,029	818,583	600	7	ABCDFGHIJKL
Wabash Valley	8,719	7,795	28.00	244,132	NA	61	4	ABCDEFGIJKL
Wilbur Wright	16,534	16,534	26.69	441,250	101,000	450	10	ABDFI
IOWA
Area One Voc/Tech School	30,000	21,000	33.33	700,000	60,000	75	15	ABCDEFHIKL
Hawkeye Inst. of Tech.	2,000	2,000	NA	NA	NA	50	3	ABFK
Marshalltown	7,305	7,305	27.20	198,696	6,061	127	8	ABCDFGK
Scott	NA	6,746	30.00	1,300,000	35,000	116	20	ACDFHIK
Western Iowa Tech.	7,477	7,477	20.10	2,535,043	181,313	160	13	ABCDK
KENTUCKY
Jefferson	23,190	18,160	40.38	936,482	162,100	401	11	ABFJK
MARYLAND
Allegany	NA	8,500	NA	2,000,000	160,000	130	12	BCDEFGK
Harford	54,000	52,000	42.00	2,600,000	280,000	530	20	ABCDEFGHIK
MASSACHUSETTS
Mt. Wachusett	15,000	NA	NA	15,000,000	500,000			ABCDEFGHIJK
Northern Essex	22,000	18,126	158.00	3,500,000	280,000	410	15	ABCDEFGHKL
Roxbury	10,000	NA	1.75	LEASED	65,000	150	17	ABCDFGHIK
MICHIGAN
Wayne County	4,790	4,029	30.00	3,200,000	15,000	100	5	ABDFGHIJ
MINNESOTA
Univ. Minn. Tech.—Waseca	16,000	13,640	63.38	864,533	232,000	176	38	ABCDEFIJK
MISSISSIPPI
Itawamba	8,590	7,858	26.43	227,084	45,000	145	18	ABDFK
Mississippi Gulf Coast—Jefferson Davis	5,536	5,071	NA	NA	NA	105	7	BCDFGHIJ
Pearl River	4,600	4,250	27.00	124,000	25,000	100	8	BFGHI
MISSOURI
Maple Woods	68,840	34,794	39.73	1,067,000	35,639	125	6	AFJK
NEVADA
Clark County	6,528	6,000	41.38	1,800,000	250,000	85	3	ABCDKL
NEW HAMPSHIRE
NH Voc/Tech.	5,860	5,860	36.00	211,000	14,500	78	22	ABCJKL
NEW JERSEY
Brookdale	7,010	7,010	45.00	NA	NA	80	NA	A
Camden County	40,879	40,879	64.11	2,620,652	350,000	1,250	27	ABCDEFGHIJK
Essex County	60,000	52,000	102.00	31,000,000	1,365,000	384	E	ABCDEHIK
Middlesex County	52,930	37,120	37.00	1,921,252	NA	686	12	BCDFHIK
NEW MEXICO
NM State Univ.—San Juan	12,000	10,107	40.00	404,280	50,000	114	19	ABCDEFHJ

College	Gross Area	Total ASF	Sq. Ft. Cost	Bldg. Cost	Furn. & Equip. Cost	Seats	Percent Fall '75 FTE	Key to Facilities
NEW YORK
CC of the Finger Lakes—Lincoln Hill	16,018	196,000	NA	10,700,000	30-50,000	269	21	ABCDH
Erie—South	34,897	31,700	35.00	NA	134,900	578	41	ABK
Fashion Inst. of Technology	71,536	53,085	206.87	14,799,000	488,000	455	11	ABCDEFGKL
Maria Regina	1,105	1,105	NA	NA	17,000	36	9	CEFHIJK
Niagara County	71,000	48,402	34.53	2,461,000	1,250,000	689	20	ABCDEKL
NY Agric. & Tech.—Delhi	12,939	6,765	45.29	3,592,000	279,000	28	1	BCDEFGKL
Tompkins Cortlandt	34,480		40.00		500,000	351	25	ABCDFGHK
NORTH CAROLINA
Caldwell CC & Tech. Inst.	14,086	14,086	24.00	238,064	56,900	150	10	ABCDEJK
Durham	15,000	7,500	(Unavailable-renovated)			200	33	ABFIJL
Guilford Tech. Inst.	46,465	44,000	26.14	1,119,827	266,000	828	17	ABCDFGHIJK
Roanoke-Chowan Tech. Inst.	51,920	43,510	38.46	2,016,000	486,000	104	15	ABDFHIK
OHIO
Columbus Tech. Inst.	35,823	26,617	33.00	1,183,000	265,000	557	20	ABCDFGHIKL
Kent State Univ.—Stark	42,314	32,550	47.75	2,020,647	475,000	630	24	ABCDFGIK
Lorain County	69,509	49,188	38.00	2,912,000	412,000	530	16	ABCDGHIK
Ohio University—Zanesville	19,600	16,000	35.97	542,600	99,500	261	45	ABDK
Michael J. Owens Tech.	NA	18,750	35.36	2,405,000	28,455	80	4	BDFGHK
Stark Tech.	42,314	32,649	50.00	2,100,000	280,000	840	34	ABCFGHI
OKLAHOMA
Carl Albert	9,800	9,200	22.00	100,000	30,000	70	10	ABJK
Claremore	15,680	13,000	NA	446,250	34,000	88	7	ABFHK
Seminole	24,000	10,700	18.00	430,240	69,760	168	16	AB
South Okla. City	9,852	8,700	NA	NA	NA	1,000	60	ABCDEHJ
Western Okla. State	11,000	1,044	29.00	34,452	60,000	150	10	ABDEFGJ
OREGON
Chemeketa	89,000	50,000	49.00	4,500,000	750,000	500	14	ABCDEGHIJK
PENNSYLVANIA
Butler County	24,200	22,269	23.50	568,700	106,790	330	25	ABCDEFHK
Luzerne County	14,484	13,760	53.98	613,345	1,559,230	203	11	A
SOUTH CAROLINA
Aiken Tech. Center	65,000	3,752	34.53	2,400,000	37,500	75	11	ABCDFHIJKL
Chesterfield Marlboro Tech.	10,000	9,000	33.00	330,000	11,000	200	25	ABCDFGHIKL
North Greenville	25,035	16,652	34.31	859,000	77,969	180	30	ABCDEFGHI
Orangeburg-Calhoun Tech.	18,135	14,667	30.60	1,115,653	225,000	290	15	ABCDIK
SOUTH DAKOTA
Freeman	4,200	4,200	15.00	63,000	12,000	50	65	ABFIJKL
TENNESSEE
Shelby State	21,318	16,637	52.00	1,108,536	140,000	143	5	ABCDJKL
TEXAS
Midland	44,360	32,400	37.33	1,655,794	160,000	645	42	ABCDEFGHIJKL
Odessa	35,756	29,132	30.00	990,758	100,000	600	20	ABCDEFGIJKL
Texas State Univ.—Rolling Plains Campus	26,292	48,292	24.92	655,347	100,000	450	11	ABCDIK
Victoria	49,768	33,366	35.17	1,829,198	204,581	455	20	ABCDJK
VIRGINIA
Central Virginia	25,080	16,340	NA	NA	NA	235	1	ABCDFGI
J. Sargeant Reynolds	10,271	9,509	26.86	275,879	219,201	278	58	ABCDEFGHIJK
John Tyler	32,000	22,942	40.00	920,000	230,000	390	22	ABCDEFJK
Northern Virginia Manassas Campus	57,988	3,386	28.02	1,719,698	NA	102	NA	ABCDFHIJ
Thomas Nelson	70,000	26,733	NA	NA	420,000	380	15	ABCDFGK
Tidewater	24,300	20,998	22.00	534,600	223,642	375	10	ABCDFGHIK
WASHINGTON
Olympia Tech.	72,100	4,208	43.71	4,300,000	22,033	100	10	ABCDJ
WEST VIRGINIA
Parkersburg	13,000	13,000	NA	NA	NA	186	7	ABDFGJK
WISCONSIN
Lakeshore Tech. Inst.	4,573	4,256	NA	NA	NA	150	NA	ABCDEFGHJKL
Mid-State Tech. Inst.	18,000	13,580	34.50	621,000	105,000	126	18	ABCDFGHIJK
Southwest Wis. Voc/ Tech. Inst.	12,000	11,000	25.00	960,000	60,000	160	NA	ABCDEFGJ
Wisconsin Indianhead VTAE Inst.-Ashland	44,300	33,225	NA	750,000	NA	NA	40	ABFGHIJKL
Tech. Inst.-New Richmond Campus	50,700	38,025	35.00	1,800,000	NA	NA	NA	ABCDFGHIJKL



Top to bottom: The State University of New York Agricultural and Technical College, Delhi, N.Y.: Library and administrative offices share space, with the library taking up one floor and planned to expand to another. . . . Navajo Community College, Tsaile, Arizona: with roots in traditional Navajo dwellings. . . . Niagara County Community College, Sanborn, N.Y.: stark as a power plant

Two Ways of Planning

The Chula Vista Public Library exemplifies the success of the completely planned library, with each and every element specified before construction begins. In contrast, the Penrose Library at the University of Denver is a triumph of a diametrically different approach: phased construction. Two planners explain how they did it

Penrose

Morris Schertz

IN LOOKING TOWARD a new library, we had no expectation of doing anything out of the ordinary. We had anticipated writing a building program and having the time to have it reviewed by a consultant; choosing an architect; spending substantial time in working with the architect, the consultant, and university committees in the design phase; finally going out on bid; and having a building perhaps three or four years after the initial planning start.

The planning for the new building began along these lines in August 1971. The university had received a gift of $4.5 million for a new library. One of the interesting facts we discovered was that the university had promised the donor a building of 150,000 square feet ($30 per square foot), including all necessary furnishings. The price per square foot had been mentioned as a possibility by a consultant who had visited the campus the prior year. In any event, it became apparent when we had interviews with architects that there was a considerable problem about the price per square foot agreed to.

Architects were seen in December 1971. In the meantime, the library had produced a detailed building program which was submitted to prospective architects prior to their interview on campus. Only two of the several firms we saw said it could be done for the price, using the term "phased construction" to describe the technique they would use to build the building. The other firms, who said it could not be done, quoted prices as high as $50 per square foot.

"Phased construction" is a concept that involves a team approach, a merger of architect and builder. It also provides for a stipulated time schedule in the design and the construction phases of the building. It means that these two elements, design and construction, go on simultaneously; this marks the radical difference between this approach and the more typical method where these phases are accommodated in separate stages. What is important is the control of time. If one can determine the start and completion of the building, one can more easily predict the cost for labor and materials, and if these costs are under control, then it is possible to build for a specific agreed-to price. Gyo Obata, the architect for the building, stated it in this way: "The team approach, with the architect and builder working together, was one of the most important elements of this project. In many cases where the architect does the design and it goes out for bids, you really do not have a clear picture of cost. But when you have the builder as part of a team and you're feeding costs back and forth, the architect has a much closer realization of costs." He goes on to say, "We were able to build and furnish the building in a year, which is incredible. Normally, we would have figured 18 months to build." The builder stated in the same article, "Between [the architectural firm] and ourselves, we defined materials at the time the package was prepared. We knew how the various elements would come in, which gave us a pretty good fix at the bid time on what the building would cost. There was not any gamble. We made an estimate based on a design-build type of package."

It is clear that this approach allowed us to get a building of 150,000 square feet fully furnished for $30 per square foot. It could not have been done in any other way. In our case, the university signed a contract with the team (architect-builder) in April 1971, stating the cost, the total footage, and the furnishings we would get for that price. The library building program was a part of the contract. In July 1971, three months later, foundation work began. This was six months after our first interview with architects and less than a year after receiving the gift that allowed us to begin planning for a new building. At that point, interior design was only in bare outline. Interior planning began in earnest soon after ground breaking, and this went on simultaneously with the construction of the building. The interior design work was completed six months later, in January 1972. Construction for the building was finished seven months after that, in August 1972. This was 13 months after ground breaking and 16 months after the contract was signed.

Morris Schertz is director, Penrose Library, University of Denver

Although phased construction worked for us and we would use the technique again if there were need for a new building, it is not a technique one should decide upon lightly. It is clear it would be difficult to use a consultant with this approach. There is insufficient time to debate and consider alternatives. The building program must be very specific in order to avoid confusion. Further, there is no possibility of using a committee to build the building. Responsibility for decisions must rest with one individual. It is also necessary that the building be considered a total package, which must include interior furnishings. It is important to understand that the university signed a contract with the builder-architect for a fixed price. At that point, it was left to that team to choose subcontractors to allocate the amounts to be spent on furnishings and other parts of the building. There was no attempt on our part to predict what these costs would be other than insisting that specifications agreed to as to the quality of the furnishings and so on were to be adhered to. This meant that we were free of these concerns and were able to devote the time and energy required to get the internal segments completed and in a relationship that would work.

Has the building worked? We feel it has. User reaction has been very favorable. Outside visitors have also reacted quite well to the building. For example, F. Spritzer in his article on library microforms facilities states the following: "In 1972 . . . the collection moved to Penrose Library, a new building, which, while it has a rather unpretentious exterior, probably deserves to be recognized as another landmark library. The interior is bold, inviting, warm, colorful, dramatic, attuned to young people today—and truly functional." He goes on to say, "The unusual quality of the space which surprises and delights the visitor cannot be illustrated by the floor plan any more than it can be shown in black and white photographs."

References

Articles which have appeared in professional journals concerning design and construction of the building are listed below. The article in Interior Design includes color photographs.

"Building Portfolio," College Management, January 1973, p. 23-31.

Spritzer, F. F. "Library Microfilm Facilities," Library Technology Reports, July 1976, p. 407-35.

"Penrose Library, University of Denver," Interior Design, April 1973, p. 124-29.

"The Short, Happy Birth of Penrose Library," Building Design & Construction, April 1973, p. 46-49.

Chula Vista

Raymond Holt

WHEN THE NEW 55,000-square-foot Chula Vista Public Library opened its doors on July 4, 1976 to a throng of eager users, it was far more than just another Bicentennial event! As the public spread through the building, the members of the project team moved with the human tide to hear the comments of individuals exploring the library for the first time.

It seemed that a sizeable portion of the city's 80,000-plus inhabitants had decided to participate in what might be described as the "litmus test" to see whether or not the project team's attempt to satisfy a broad range of user needs was acceptable. The comments that began that afternoon and continue to this day have provided abundant evidence that user expectations have been more than satisfied.

As the public explored the building, more than 50 colorful quilted banners hung in delightful array, doubling as graphics and decor and catching the attention and fancy of everyone. Gone were many of the traditional library trappings, and in their place stood specially designed furnishing ranging from a prominent, saw-toothed shaped circulation counter and circular desks for library stations to clusters of user accommodations interspersed among shelving for a quarter million volumes. Nonprint materials were well represented with specially designed cabinets for recordings on discs and tape. Audiovisual carrels invited use of nonprint media while a loop antenna system secreted under the carpet was ready to broadcast a variety of programs to comfortably seated listeners in the various lounge areas.

The genesis of a library building such as this has to be of more than usual interest to those concerned with planning libraries for tomorrow. Its beginnings can be traced to a library feasibility study commissioned by the City of Chula Vista nearly ten years before. After exploring various alternatives, library consultant Raymond M. Holt advised officials of the impending need for a new library structure which could adequately serve the expanding needs of a population which was expected to grow from 60,000 to nearly three times that size in the next 25 years. As a step in this direction, the consultant was then asked to prepare a building program which would project the kind of library a sophisticated public might require in the years to come.

There followed a five-year hiatus during which several attempts to fund the project failed. Then, in 1973, the City Council pledged to use the city's federal revenue sharing funds for the project. The consultant was asked to update the building program and to begin work with Thomas T. Williamson, project architect for the firm of Richard George Wheeler and Associates. At this point it was decided to use a team approach in hopes of creating a truly exceptional library. Bluma Levine, library director, and Patsy Row, special assistant for the project, became the library's representatives.

Frequent meetings of the four-member project team ensued. Many hours were spent discussing user needs and expectations as far as they could be projected. Emphasis was placed on maximizing space utilization and creating an effective vehicle for the delivery of library services of all kinds.

The architect carefully analyzed the updated building program. Soon space requirements were defined, and major space relationships took the form of expanded bubble diagrams. The building's eventual shape became a response to the internal arrangement of spaces. Each new sketch was diagnosed by the team for its implications for user convenience, unhampered traffic flow, and effective library management. Because the architect was sympathetic to the library's requirements and flexible in his approach to design, the painful compromises which so often characterize the building design processes were largely avoided.

Raymond Holt is a library consultant in Del Mar, Calif.

Meanwhile, the city had decided that the library building was to reflect the Spanish tradition shared by other neighboring civic buildings. Further, the northern half of the 8½-acre site would be developed as a city park. Using these guidelines, the architect determined that the library should be light in scale with large open flexible spaces. In keeping with the building program, the public areas could be arranged around a single entry point on the ground level with only staff work areas, mechanical equipment rooms, and storage sheltered on a lower level.

The architect further determined that the single-story ground level design with a long east-west axis would permit use of large clerestory windows facing north. This conformed to the desire for minimizing energy consumption without compromising the comfort of staff and users. The high ceiling permitted efficient use of high voltage mercury vapor lamps which yield a maximum amount of light for the least amount of power. Because of the temperate climate, the air-conditioning system was designed so that exterior air could be filtered and circulated much of the time without heating or cooling thereby minimizing the need for the high-energy-using boilers and condensers normally required. After a cost engineering study, a steel frame was determined as the most economical structural system.

As the team moved into the design development stage of planning, it became increasingly apparent that furnishings and equipment would strongly influence the building's effectiveness. A key decision was made at this point to add Marshall Brown, an experienced and innovative interior designer, to the team. He brought with him an extensive knowledge of furniture and equipment, along with enthusiasm, inventiveness, and a sympathy for the project goals.

With Brown's arrival on the team, a comprehensive review of the plans was undertaken. Special attention was given functional requirements, and the role furnishings and equipment were expected to play. Interaction among the team members and a reassessment of budget requirements resulted in some revisions of priorities and in the quantities of materials to be housed. This, and all succeeding plan reviews, enabled the team to concentrate on a common goal of providing the library user with an exciting and inviting environment which would encourage extensive use of the library. Attention was also given to enhancing the library's ability to accommodate routine operations and procedures which promise to change rapidly under the influence of computerization and telecommunications. Here, effective utilization of space for efficient personnel productivity was given particular heed. Diagrams were used to trace the anticipated flow of traffic generated by users, staff, and materials so that possible areas of confusion and/or conflict could be eliminated.

Logical locations for staff service desks began to emerge as Brown prepared schematic layouts of furnishings. These became focal points as the team determined the need for present and future utility requirements for each site based on the functions which would occur there. Included were provisions for electrical outlets, telephones, computer terminals, public address, etc. Brown then began the design of counters and desks which would best accommodate these functions and relate them to their surroundings.

Similarly, the requirements for each of the behind-the-scenes staff work areas were reviewed in detail. A determination was made as to whether the functions could best be served using purchasable items of furnishings and equipment or whether specially designed casework would provide for greater efficiency. In each case, the interior designer became thoroughly familiar with the operations to be performed and then worked directly with library staff members to refine requirements. Subsequent drawings were reviewed by the team.

Using the completed architectural elevations, the interior designer developed detailed color, finish, and graphic information schedules. Each wall was separately drawn to show the projected colors, finishes, graphics, etc. The team reviewed these, aiming always at achieving low maintenance and vandal resistant surfaces without unduly sacrificing beauty. Because of the scale and detail of these drawings, the team was able to visualize decisions made in the weeks and months before. In some cases changes resulted; though, in general, close inspection reaffirmed the original conclusions.

After months of work, the team gave approval to the final bidding documents, including the extensive working drawings and bid specifications. Contractors voiced their appreciation for receiving plans and specifications so carefully delineated that even the manufacturers and the quality of all products to be used in the construction and finishing of the building were clearly specified. The result was a number of highly competitive bids representative of the best building contractors in the area. The winning bidder proved to be more than 20 percent lower than the most optimistic estimate!

While construction proceeded, the team finalized plans for the interior furnishings. The interior designer assembled samples of furniture and carpet for review. He indicated the strengths and weaknesses of the various pieces and determined their desirability as library furnishings. In almost every instance some modification was decided upon. The carpet, it was decided, should be used to tie areas together; therefore, contrasting colors were selected to provide a visually distinctive guide to the library. In the children's room, an apparently random pattern of the five carpet colors combines circles of various sizes and colors to form subtle reasons for locating furnishings in any given spot.

To facilitate control over cabinetry, movable furniture, and carpet installation, these items were excluded from the general contractor's work. The coordination fee normally received by the contractor was saved by the client with supervision provided by the interior designer. Contracts were released through bidding to specified vendors providing the desired quality of materials and workmanship. As in the case of the construction bid, the client saved more than 20 percent of the planned budget for furniture and equipment while being assured of quality in selection and care in installation.

The completed library is entered through either of two corridors which open from the adjacent parking lots. These corridors join at right angles before they penetrate into the library itself, thereby separating the 150-seat, pitched-floor meeting room and the two large conference rooms from the rest of the library. These meeting facilities, complete with kitchen and rest rooms, can be operated independently of the library. A decorative iron grill screen rolls into place to provide a closure between the library and meeting area when the library is closed but meeting rooms are in use.

Perhaps the most striking feature of the entry core is the lighted canopy designed to subtly guide the user into the library. It continues past the book return counter and registration/circulation counter to terminate at a large semicircular information desk designated by an oversized question mark made of mirror glass. The entry core plan is the result of many hours of team work to eliminate the congestions which often mark this part of larger libraries.

Visible from the entrance, but separated from the rest of the library by its design as an attached wing, is the Children's Department. The carpet, with its random pattern of circles of various sizes and colors, is complemented by shelving with vividly colored end panels. Movable book bins for picture books glide easily around the fireplace, which is located at the end of the room. An oversized baseball glove serves as a novel seat for a number of children, while several other types of unusual furniture have attracted hordes of youngsters. A full array of nonprint media and facilities for their use is available. Overhead, colorful quilted banners in reds and yellows add a special note of excitement. Some of them spell out "A" "B" "C" and "1" "2" "3," while others positioned over the reference desk and card catalog relay messages such as "ASK" and "LOOK" in bold vertical letters. A story hour room is adjacent, complete with puppet stage and craft facilities. A picture window looks out onto the new park to the north, but drapes can be drawn for film showings.

The adult area features a large variety of comfortable study and reading accommodations arranged along windowed areas and grouped in convenient lounges, including one adjacent to a magnificent fireplace. The metal book shelving is a special shade of brown dramatized by thick white oak end panels. The shelving is divided into several basic segments, each carefully delineated to contain a particular portion of the book collection, yet flowing into one another for maximum flexibility and convenience.

The reference room is defined by a large semicircular reference counter work station placed beneath a curved dropped ceiling area. Task lighting is used over and behind the desk. Shelving at the back of the counter provides space for ready-reference tools while a variety of drawer spaces, custom designed for their specific purposes, have been integrated into the counter to further assist in organizing reference response.

The reference room contains stacks and reader accommodations for reference books and periodicals. In addition, carrel-like spaces along one wall are lined with carpet from floor to ceiling for sound absorption; these house microform reading equipment and typewriters for public use. Windows along the north side of the room overlook the park, and this source of natural light is augmented by the flood of light pouring in from the clerestory above. Here again colorful banners suspended from ceiling tracks break the large volume of space while doubling as bearers of graphic information.

Between the reference and adult reading areas is an intermediate area devoted to a reading lounge, shelving for new books, and the card catalog. Beneath this lounge, and most of the others, a loop antenna system enables users to hear book reviews and other library programs broadcast to readers seated here.

The library's extensive audiovisual center was strategically placed for utmost convenience for user and staff alike. Located adjacent to the circulation area, the counter forms a continuation of the casework. Similarly, the workroom ties into the circulation area, a cable television studio, and a public media production room complete with extensive dark room. The collections are housed in custom-designed furnishings which provide ample room for all types of audiovisual materials. Wet carrels are placed nearby to permit in-library use as well as home use of materials. In addition, this area contains a preview room for public and staff as well as a piano room with a piano for those wishing to enjoy the library's collection of scores and sheet music.

Future development of the CATV studio will permit production and distribution of video tapes. Twelve locations have been selected in the library where viewers may watch television receivers with a potential for simultaneous airings of 12 different videotaped programs.

Because the Chula Vista Public Library is one of the busiest in the country, three readers' advisors may be stationed at circular desks designed to provide panoramic supervision and easy user access. These stations are in addition to the reference desk which can easily accommodate three librarians, the audiovisual counter with room for an AV librarian and one or more clerks. The circulation counter has four checkout points along a serrated edge carefully designed to divide the frequently long lines of borrowers into manageable groups. The separate book return station doubles as an initial sorting area and base for the pages. Compartments were designed into the counter for the temporary storage of framed art, posters and other hard-to-handle items returned by borrowers.

Staff offices and work areas occupy the lower level which relates to a depressed service entry on the north side of the building. This depression enables most offices and work rooms to have windows along the north side. Here are located activities as varied as library administration, technical processes, public services, extension services, and interlibrary loan. A large mail and delivery room complete with trash compactor is adjacent to the delivery entrance garage and technical services and extension areas. A staff library-conference room, a vault and storage space plus spacious staff lounge further enhance the lower level. The custodial staff enjoys a sizable workroom outfitted with a shop for simple repair work and for storage of custodial materials. Each work area has been designed to accommodate its own particular traffic and task flow to maximize efficient and effective staff utilization. As in the public area on the main level, color and graphics have been used to identify the location of each office and work area.

In summary, the Chula Vista Public Library building represents a total team effort dedicated to the single goal of providing library users with an environment which will best encourage full utilization of the library's complex array of collections and services.

You are a buyer of French books.
You need information —
complete, accurate, rapid, and within your budget

For $ 40.00

(least expensive of French bibliographical journals)

Le Bulletin du Livre

brings you, 30 times a year,

- all new French titles listed by subject, with descriptive text (and two monthly indexes)
- special bibliographies of current interest, surveys, book trade news and views.

For $ 22.00

(least expensive of French book indexes)

Six mois de nouveautés

twice each year, February and September

- a subject index of half a year of French book publishing, with title and author indexes.

Request for sample copy

Name .....

Institution .....

Address .....

..... Zip code .....

Please send specimen issue of ☐ Le Bulletin du Livre

☐ Six Mois de Nouveautés

Mail to :

M. Jean-Pierre Vivet
Le Bulletin du Livre
18, rue Dauphine
75006 Paris, FRANCE

PROFESSIONAL READING

Language manual

ALLEN, C. G. A Manual of European Languages for Librarians.

Bowker. 1976. 803p. ISBN 0-85935-028-2. LC 73-6062. $56.50.

There is not a librarian, scholar, or student who ever needs to know something about books in languages other than his own who will not find amazing new knowledge and incredible enlightenment in this remarkable volume. Compiled by the former Superintendent of Readers' Services at the British Library of Political and Economic Science, the book is arranged by 38 languages within the following seven language groups: Germanic; Latin & Romance; Celtic, Greek, & Albanian; Slavonic; Baltic; Finno-Ugrian; and Other—Maltese, Turkish, Basque, Esperanto. The Latin and Greek provide the simplest modern manual for the common languages of old books that most librarians are likely to handle. For each language, in a coded plan of organization, there are explanations and examples of the languages' general characteristics; bibliolinguistics (forms and idiosyncracies of authors' names, titles, volumes and parts, editions, imprints, series, and periodicals); alphabet; phonetics and spelling; all parts of speech; and word-formation. Clarity of arrangement, realistic understanding of problems unique to every language, and an interpretative ability to translate problems into commonsense and understandable examples mark the book as both tutorial and fascinating. Every cataloger and reference librarian will make good use of it. Unfortunately, it is not sturdily bound and the gutter margins are limited.—LEE ASH, LIBRARY CONSULTANT, BETHANY, CONN.

Cooperation in Ohio

LUCIOLI, Clara E. Trend Toward Partnership: a Study of State Institution and Public Library Cooperation in Ohio.

State Library of Ohio. 1976. 45p. pap. $3.

Initiated by the Ohio State Library Board, this short, lucid, well-documented study of Ohio State institution and public library cooperation, considers the state institution as "a large and important local business," an integral part of the local public library community. The author, former head of Professional and Institution Services at the Cleveland Public Library, addresses her considerable experience and high degree of expertise to an appraisal of Ohio state institution library needs and to the mutual benefits of cooperation to both public and institution libraries. Her recommendations emphasize dynamic professional institutional librarianship, funds, and affiliation with local and regional library consortia. Particularly timely and useful in view of the rapidly increasing emphasis on community and institutional involvement in all areas.—MARGARET M. KINNEY, VA HOSPITAL LIBRARY SERVICE, BRONX, N.Y.

Public library effectiveness

TOTTERDELL, Barry & Jean Bird. The Effective Library: Report of the Hillingdon Project on Public Library Effectiveness.

The Library Association. (Research Publication No. 16). 1976. 207p. ed. by Margaret Redfern. illus. index. appendixes. ISBN 0-85365-248-1. £10; LA members, £8.

This somewhat complex book about a British Library Effectiveness Survey should be looked at by all public librarians. The basic conclusion of the book is that "Public libraries do not promote themselves adequately and they dismiss unmet needs as either already satisfied or not capable of being satisfied all too easily." Although the British terminology may be different, the basic concepts of planned program budgeting and attention to user wants and management objectives should be familiar to most public library administrators.

The report centers around an in-depth study of only one public library system whereas the somewhat similar American study Performance Measures for Public Libraries has a much wider base of factual information. The British study is useful in pointing out the discrepancies between users' view of libraries and that of librarians. Progressive English librarians are just as concerned as American ones about our historical emphasis on library input as opposed to library output, and this study is a careful documentation of ways of measuring library output. One of the most interesting charts shows the percentage of people using libraries for particular purposes. For example, they show that in the particular library surveyed 64 percent borrow books, 10 percent look at newspapers or periodicals, 11 percent use the record library and 8 percent use reference books. They also have some rather interesting categories such as bringing children, accompanying a relation or friend. It is interesting to note that both in this study as well as in the Rutgers University/U.S. Office of Education study very little attention is paid to use of films in libraries, although information services are covered.—NOLAN LUSHINGTON, GREENWICH LIBRARY, CONN.

Staff management overview

DUREY, Peter. Staff Management in University and College Libraries.

Pergamon. (International Series in Library and Information Science, Vol. 16). 1976. 170p. index. appendix. ISBN 0-08-019718-3. LC 75-31515. In the U.S., $8.50. (£4.25 in UK & Eire only)

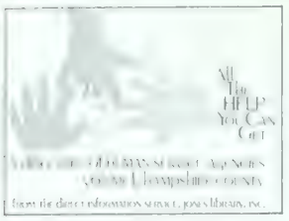
This is a chatty discussion of what some major university and college libraries in the U.S., Great Britain, New Zealand, Australia, and Canada were doing in the late 1960s and early '70s. The book is divided into two sections: "The Organisational Framework" and "The Human Aspects." The author seems to be a proponent of consultative management and in his chapter on Styles of Management, he doesn't really discuss styles too different from his own.

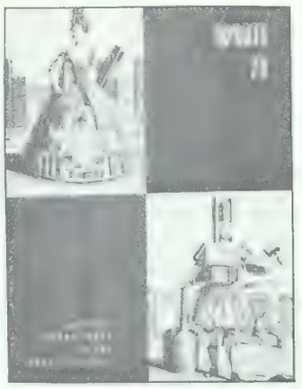
Although the publication date is 1976, most of the material and references are prior to 1973. The 1974-75 additions often include prose and seem to be an attempt by the author to make his material more current. The text quotes well known academic librarians in the U.S. particularly, citing Rogers' and Weber's University Library Administration in seven of the ten chapters.

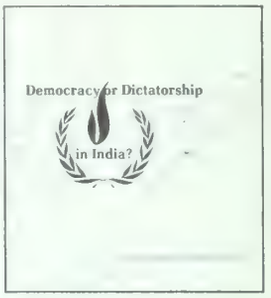
The book provides an overview of some areas of staff management in academic libraries, but it doesn't go far enough since a good many changes have taken place in the last three or four years. There is no mention of OCLC, CONSER, the increasing involvement in consortia, blanket order acquisition policies, etc. The changes required by the presence of these organizations and new policies have had a major impact on staff management, but they are not discussed here.

The topic of the book is an interesting one. The material covered might be useful for quick reading for library school students and nonsupervisory staff members in academic libraries; however, it presents nothing new to the librarian in a managerial position who has been keeping up with management and library literature.—JOYCE D. VEENSTRA, COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY LIBRARIES

CHECKLIST







Agencies directory

All the Help You Can Get, two volumes of detailed information on Western Massachusetts agencies that help people in need, has been published by Direct Information Service, an LSCA Title III-funded information and referral program of the Jones Library in Amherst. Each 200-page indexed volume offers detailed information on more than 400 public and private organizations; the volumes represent distillations of more complete information available on a massive computer data base. The volumes cost $4 plus 50¢ for postage and handling from DIS, Jones Library, 43 Amity St., Amherst, Mass. 01002. Orders must be prepaid.

Feminist gerontology

A selective bibliography of current literature on the impact of aging on women in contemporary America has been compiled with the support of a grant from the National Organization for Women's Legal Defense and Education Fund. The list is designed to fill a gap in gerontological bibliographies, which its compilers perceive give short shrift to the special problems of aged women. The bibliography annotates 150 titles which focus on varied aspects of the subject, including career re-entry, social security and retirement systems, health and sexuality, widowhood, and the older women in selected fiction and autobiography. Copies of Age Is Becoming are available for $2.50 each from its compilers, a collective of librarians: Interface Bibliographers, 3018 Hillegass Ave., Berkeley, Calif. 94705.

Scientists' lives

Hypatia's Sisters: Biographies of Women Scientists, Past and Present presents brief sketches of 23 women scientists and more detailed biographies of 17 others. The 72-page booklet was developed by a class in the Women Studies Program of the University of Washington. It is illustrated and lists suggestions for further reading on the subject. Copies cost $2 each from Feminists Northwest, 5038 Nicklas Pl. N.E., Seattle, Wash. 98105.

Library services directory

Libraries for College Students with Handicaps is a directory of special services and equipment in academic libraries in Ohio. It could serve as a model for other areas. The 30-page booklet notes features of the libraries that add to their accessibility for the handicapped and provides names of persons at each institution to contact for further information. It is available from the State Library of Ohio, 65 S. Front St., Columbus, Ohio 43215.

Social sciences references

Update 76 is a bibliography of recent reference and acquisitions tools in the social sciences which were selected by 55 librarians who met at the Special Libraries Association annual meeting in June. There are from 25-40 titles listed for each of 28 subject areas. For the most part, citations represent works published since 1970 and new editions of important earlier works. A copy of the 31-page list costs $3 from Technical Report Clearinghouse, International City Management Assn., 1140 Connecticut Ave. N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036. Checks should be made payable to Technical Report Clearinghouse and the order number 19984 indicated. Please include a self-addressed mailing label.

Book calendars

Universe Books has an attractive selection of book calendars for 1977 that do more than mark time. The Crafts Engagement Calendar provides a crafts idea for each week of the year; An American Datebook illustrates American public and private life through cartoons, posters, photos, popular art, quizzes, songs, and memorable dates; and The Liberated Women's Appointment Calendar, in addition to relevant photos and quotations, contains a section of "How To File a Complaint of Sex Discrimination" and includes a sample Equal Employment Opportunity Commission form and a bibliography. Each spiral-bound book costs $3.95. For copies or a complete catalog write Universe Books, 381 Park Ave. S., New York, N.Y. 10016.

Indian civil rights

The Committee for Freedom in India, an organization of U.S. citizens and citizens of India residing in the U.S., has published a collection of documents, statements, and resolutions in response to justifications Prime Minister Indira Gandhi has given for her suspension of democratic freedoms in India. Democracy or Dictatorship in India? also includes a list of sources of uncensored news from India, organizations protesting and resisting the present government, and committees whose overriding concern is for the release of political prisoners. The 80-page publication costs $1.50, with 40 percent off for ten or more. Of related interest is International Human Rights Kit (88 p., $2.50). It includes texts of major declarations, covenants and conventions, a bibliography and resources for action. Both publications are distributed by World without War Bookstore, 110 S. Dearborn, Chicago, Ill. 60603. Add 35¢ for postage and handling.

Transcription advice

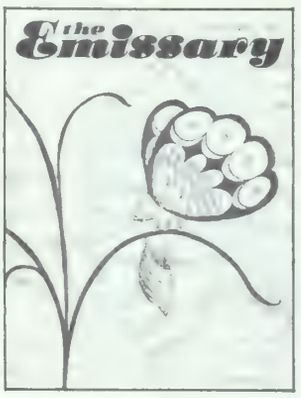
Transcribing without Tears is a practical booklet designed to help transcribers and editors of oral history interviews. The 40-page guide discusses the basic principles of oral history transcription and gives examples of typical problems and how to handle them. There are sections on setting editorial policy, alternatives in editing style, interviewee corrections, and indexing, among others. A copy costs $2.50 plus 25¢ for postage and handling from George Washington University Library, Oral History Program, 2130 H St. N.W., Washington, D.C. 20052.

Book sale tips

The Friends of the Torrance Libraries have raised more than $75,000 for the libraries through book sales over the past nine years, and now they are letting others in on their secrets. They've compiled a manual which relates the procedures and pitfalls of sponsoring a book sale. Single copies cost $2.25 from the Friends, Torrance Public Library, 3301 Torrance Blvd., Torrance, Calif. 90503.

MAGAZINES

Bill Katz, PROFESSOR, SCHOOL OF LIBRARY SCIENCE, STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK, ALBANY



The Emissary

1975. Monthly. $6. Eden Valley Pr., Sunrise Ranch, P.O. Box 328, Loveland, Colo. 80537. Illus. Aud: Ga. (Subject: General Magazines. Issues examined: Vol. 1, Nos. 1 & 2, July, August 1975)

A pocket-sized glossy magazine of 48 pages, this is dedicated "to the practical art of living." Emphasis is on personal experience type articles. There are a wide variety of essays from "trust" and "reflection," to childhood, to being a fighter pilot, to notes on publications and books. Careful editing smoothes out the amateur writer's efforts, and there is a good balance of professional writing as well. The overall impression is one of people at ease with themselves and their world. Still, it is rarely unctuous, and as it is put out by a nonprofit organization it does not worry about impression on advertisers. All and all a good, easy read for a casual afternoon or evening, and particularly useful for the library seeking a pleasant, yet thoughtful general magazine.—BK

Creative Computing

1975. Bimonthly. $15; individuals, $8. Ed: David H. Ahl. Ideametrics, P.O. Box 789-M, Morristown, N.J. 07960. Illus. adv. Aud: Ac, Ga, Hs. (Subject: Computers and Automation. Issue examined: Vol. 1, No. 4, May-June 1975)

Anyone who thinks that person behind the computer is no more than an extension of a machine should look at this 75-page offset tribute to fun and games with your friendly computer. Aside from reams of material for computer games (many of which can be played without IBM around), there are historical and social items, comments on stellar exploration, cartoons, short news notes, and bits of fiction. Contributors range from professors to high school students. A high proficiency in computer operation is not necessary to grapple with the games or, for that matter, the humor of Creative Computing. Yet this is not a magazine for the rank amateur. The editors claim it is "nontechnical," but it requires a person with some ability in the field to appreciate its contents. However, that person could be anyone from a high school student to a senior scientist, and for that reason it is recommended.—BK

International Journal of Instructional Media

1973. Quarterly. $30. Baywood Publishing Co., 43 Central Dr., Farmingdale, N.Y. 11735. Aud: Sa. (Subject: Education)

This is addressed to the general field of educational communications. Uniquely different from Educational Technology Magazine and Media and Methods, it provides a much needed forum for research in the theoretical and philosophical foundations of utilizing instructional media. The journal also includes research in the relationship of media to the curriculum as well as its evaluation. All articles are abstracted and average ten pages in length. Most contributors are educators with experience in curriculum or instructional media. Recommended for libraries serving teacher education programs.—James J. Groarik, University Libraries, State University of New York at Albany

Canadian Short Story Magazine

1975. Quarterly. 60¢ an issue. Ed: Louis Burke. Lethbridge, Alberta. Adv. Aud: Ejh, Hs, Ga. (Subject: Fiction. Issues examined: Vol. 1, Nos. 1-3, 1975)

A 64-page magazine of primarily beginner's fiction which requires a Canadian setting to be accepted. About one-quarter of each issue represents original work by children and teenagers. The remainder is by adult starters. The extremely mixed bag of talent and ages makes this a questionable addition for libraries, although the children's entries give it interest for Canadian libraries.—BK

Vegetarian World

1974. Quarterly. $2. Ed: William Blanchard. Suite 216, 8235 Santa Monica Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif. 90046. Illus. adv. Aud: Ga. (Subject: Food and Nutrition. Issues examined: Various, 1975)

In a tabloid newspaper format of 24 pages, Vegetarian World offers timely opinions and news items of interest to vegetarians throughout the United States. Personalities, notes, legislation, food products, recipies, hints on how to cut the cost of living via the vegetarian diet, sports, and exercise features—all of this and more make up a typical number. Good book reviews, particularly of cook books. Aside from the obvious interest in plugging the vegetarian way of life, the reporting seems quite objective. Heavy on advertising. (The tabloid appears irregularly, but about once a quarter.)—BK

Rain

1974. Monthly. $10; Individuals, $5. 2270 N.W., Irving, Ore. 97210. Illus. Aud: Ac, Ga. (Subject: Alternative Cultures. Issues examined: Various, 1975)

A 32-page information publication which supplies readers with a type of Whole Earth Catalog approach to everything from plants and energy conservation to home sewage systems, to education, to . . . well, just about anything of interest to those dedicated to working out a better life on their own. Departments, which include notes on supply sources, books, organizations, etc., move from "agriculture—foods" to "appropriate technology" to "comindex"—information on information sources from computer programs to libraries—"energy," etc. In view of the vast amount of reliable bibliographical and directory data, as well as useful annotations, not to mention the low price, this can be recommended for just about any library. Note: although published in Oregon, most of the material and comments are national.—BK helps you make better use of your library space tomorrow.

LIBRARY SPACE PLANNING

Perhaps you are involved with plans for a new library. Or with remodeling the library you're in now. Or simply making more efficient use of existing space—on a non-existing or minimum budget.

Whatever the case, you will want a copy of the new LJ Special Report #1—LIBRARY SPACE PLANNING.

Here, in one practical, 80-page, paperbound handbook—8½ x 11 size—are the thinking and ideas of 32 leading librarians, library consultants, and architects.

Among the subjects covered: Energy . . . Cooperation . . . Library Organization . . . New Technology . . . Collection Development . . . The Site . . . Remodeling . . . Community Information . . . Book Centers. The information you'll find in LIBRARY SPACE PLANNING will be equally valuable to librarians in public, academic, and special libraries . . . in urban, suburban and rural communities.

LIBRARY SPACE PLANNING is the first of the LJ Special Reports—designed to keep librarians well informed on topics of immediate interest and importance.

In the library field, where so many changes occur so often, yesterday's plans and assumptions must also change.

The problems of library funding, the energy crisis, the evolution of the local library into a community information center, the response of the academic library to the new demands of higher education—all these and other factors require innovative thinking and planning now for libraries of the future.

LJ Special Report #1—LIBRARY SPACE PLANNING—is currently off press and copies are available to LIBRARY JOURNAL readers on a first come, first-served basis.

The cost is only $3.95 per copy on prepaid orders; $5.00 per copy on billed orders.

Use the convenient coupon to send in your order now.

Better use the coupon below to send for your copy today!

To: Edward W. Martin, Circulation Director—R. R. Bowker Co.
1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10036

Please send LJ Special Report #1—LIBRARY SPACE PLANNING—as indicated:

_____ (No.) at $3.95 each, for which payment is enclosed.

_____ (No.) at $5.00 each. Send bill as shown.

Name _____

Address _____

City _____

State _____ Zip _____

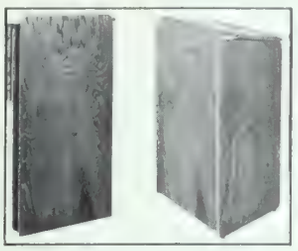
☐ Send information on quantity discount orders—10 or more copies.

SLJ

BUYERS' GUIDE

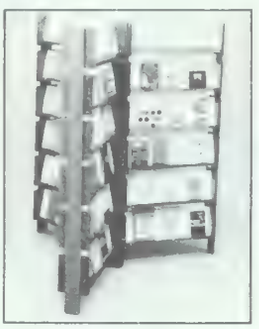
Thomas W. McConkey CHIEF, ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICE, FREE LIBRARY OF PHILADELPHIA

Every effort is made to evaluate carefully the products listed. However, mention here is not an endorsement. Prices are subject to change, and may vary in different geographical areas.

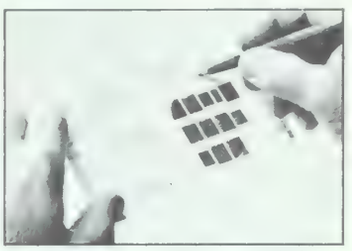


COLLAPSIBLE PODIUM

MOTORIZED SELECTOR



PAPERBACK STACKS



TRANSPARENT SLEEVES

Folding lectern

A new lectern that folds flat for storage or moving from room to room is now available in oak plywood with finishes of natural oak, dark oak, or walnut oak. All exposed edges are bound with extruded aluminum for protection against scrapes and splintering. The Speaker's Stand No. 312 is 42″ high, 24″ wide, and 18″ deep. A folding, table model lectern is also available. From Claridge Products and Equipment, Inc., Harrison, Ark. 72601. (501) 743-2200.

Mechanical book picker

A high-rise shelving system incorporating a travelling order picker and featuring self-contained, single aisle storage is particularly suitable for archival, deposit, or other large library collections. Heart of the system is the Hustler travelling order picker, a mechanized riding vehicle which can simultaneously carry an employee horizontally at 160′ per minute and vertically at 48′ per minute. The staff member picks the required book, places it on a load table, and then moves on to the next pick or to the unload station.

Working in aisles as narrow as 37″, the Hustler enables the operator to store and retrieve materials from shelving up to 40′ high in ranges up to 130′ in length. Considerable operator time can be saved by concentrating frequently used materials in the center, while lesser used material is kept at the top, bottom, and ends of the stack.

For new installations, the high rise shelving made possible by this system can effect savings in space costs; floor and roof areas, usually more expensive to build than walls, can be reduced in size. Moreover, the cost of the decking and stairs required for conventional stacks is eliminated.

The order picker meets applicable safety standards and features slow down and stop switches, mechanical motor breaking, and an overspeed safety device that automatically locks a double-acting brake. Other features are a well-lighted cab, padded seat, and ample space for paper work and books. For further information, contact Hallowell Div., Standard Pressed Steel Co., Box 316, Jenkintown, Pa. 19046. (215) 884-7300.

CINEMA SLIDE-SHOW

Portable slide theater

A slide projecting device that can be moved anywhere in the library or for showing to small groups consists of a portable projection frame of lightweight structural aluminum with rigid screen. Requiring only 12″ × 18″ desk, table top, or shelf space, it can be used in many locations. The 11″ x 17″ 3M rigid screen shows slides in normal room light so that there is no need to darken the projection area. The unit is easily assembled or disassembled without tools and fits into a standard size briefcase or its shipping carton can serve as a carrying case. Price is $95.50 (projector shown is not included). From Visual Horizons, 208 Westfall Rd., Rochester, N.Y. 14620. (716) 442-3600.

Paperback shelving

A new paperback shelving, designed by a librarian to provide maximum display space in a minimum of floor space, can accommodate over 200 titles showing the full covers of all books. Free standing, the unit saves valuable wall space; two or more units can be grouped together to take advantage of available space. The unit is of three-wing double-faced design and features a sloped shelf with retaining lip to hold books firmly in place. There is a total of 36 display shelves with 12 to each wing and six on each side. Each display shelf is 27″ wide by 10″ tall by 1 $^{3}/_{16}$″ deep, offering ample room for showing paperbacks of varying sizes. Finishes are in a choice of fruitwood, Danish walnut, fawn, dark or light birch. Price is $495 per unit. Available from BroDart, Inc., 1609 Memorial Ave., Williamsport, Pa. 17701. (717) 326-2461.

Microfiche card jacket

A new record keeping method which combines the advantages of microfiche with the added advantage of typed or handwritten information permits the retention of microfilmed copies of reports, correspondence, catalogs, newspaper clippings, advertising brochures, drawings, etc. in easily located and identifiable form. The contents of Card Jacket can be listed, and updated as new material is added. Registration files on Card Jackets for shut-in, blind or handicapped patrons could include microfilms of their choice of books, list of interests, etc., while providing space for changed addresses, telephone numbers, etc. Large library personnel offices could list medical records, service ratings, changed assignments, etc.

Card Jackets hold the microfilm in transparent sleeves which accommodate from 15 to 60 images depending on the format selected. They are compatible in size with standard 105mm fiche format, are easily interfiled with fiche systems, and can be used with all standard fiche readers and duplicators. Four formats are standard, but custom Card Jackets are also available. They can be color striped or notched to facilitate retrieval and filing and can be provided with x-y coordinates for easy image location and identification. Available from Microseal Corp., 2000 Lewis Ave., Zion, Ill. 60099.

Professional Publications . . .
For Library Professionals

Bibliography of Bioethics

Edited by Dr. LeRoy Walters. Volume 1 in the series of annual volumes is in print; Volume 2 ready January 1977. $24.00/vol.

"Walters, director of the Center for Bioethics, Kennedy Institute, Georgetown University, has compiled this first volume in a projected series of annual sourcebooks on a multidimensional subject. It presents a controlled vocabulary for the central issues of bioethics, and provides comprehensive, cross-disciplinary coverage of current English-language print and nonprint materials published during 1973. The thesaurus with scope notes has been carefully and consistently developed. The main part of the volume, the subject entry section, contains 800 unusually complete citations to a wide variety of sources. A list of journals cited, title index, and author index are also included. This timely and excellent work is indispensable for all academic and medical libraries." (James E. Bobick, Library Journal, December 15, 1975)

Library of Congress Classification Schedules: A Cumulation of Additions and Changes 1974-75

Edited by Helen Savage. 31 separately-bound cumulations of all material in LC's quarterly Additions and Changes for 1974 and 1975. Cumulations available separately—prices on request. Most cumulations are in print; all will be ready January 1977. $225.00/set.

This new set of cumulations supplements Gale's Library of Congress Classification Schedules: A Cumulation of Additions and Changes Through 1973. Used together with LC's basic schedules, Gale's cumulations will enable libraries and catalogers to drastically reduce search time.

"Gale has given us a simple search formula. . . . Not just catalogers, but all librarians affected by the search problems involved in keeping up-to-date on L.C. classification are grateful." (Jeanne Osborn, RQ, Winter 1973)

Bookman's Price Index

A Guide to the Values of Rare and Other Out-of-Print Books. Edited by Daniel F. McGrath. Volumes 1-11 are in print; volume 12 ready January 1977. $58.00/vol.

The BPI series now contains over 500,000 listings. Selected from the catalogs of leading book dealers, entries provide: author; title; place and date of publication; description of book, including condition when offered by the dealer; dealer's name, catalog number, and item number; year the catalog was issued; and price.

"The value of Bookman's Price Index as a basic price guide increases with each succeeding volume. . . . BPI is the most up-to-date and most comprehensive reference book of its kind available to bookmen." (John R. Payne, Papers of the Bibliographical Society of America, Vol. 68, No. 2, 1974)

"Because the series is very useful for larger libraries, we certainly recommend standing orders for BPI." (American Reference Books Annual, 1974)

Book Review Index — Subscribe Now for 1977

Edited by Gary C. Tarbert. Periodical Issues are published bimonthly, with every second issue cumulating the preceding issue. Subscription, with binder for new subscribers, $68.00/year. Annual Cumulations for 1965 through 1975 are in print. $68.00/year.

BRI now indexes all reviews in over 250 widely consulted periodicals. Starting in 1976, both the periodical issues and the annual cumulations contain title indexes. Entries give: author, title, reviewing publication, and date and page of review. BRI covers over 70,000 reviews of 35,000 new books each year.

"Book Review Index is comprehensive, accurate, and current. . . . Recommended." (Booklist, "Reference and Subscription Books Reviews," March 1, 1976)

THESE TITLES ARE AVAILABLE ON STANDING ORDER
ALL GALE BOOKS ARE SENT ON 30-DAY APPROVAL

Gale Research Company Book Tower • Detroit, Mich. 48226

BOOK REVIEW

The Contemporary Scene

Blair, John M. The Control of Oil.

Pantheon. Jan. 1977. 418p. index. LC 75-38116. ISBN 0-394-49470-9. $15. INT AFF/ECON

Blair presents a convincing and well-documented brief against the "seven sisters" (the major international oil companies) and their role in the oil price explosion of 1973-1974. He traces the evolution of cartel control of the international and U.S. oil markets, noting how vertical integration and the friendly assistance of Congress and successive administrations have sustained this control. Blair concludes that the "sisters" have shifted their main profit-taking from crude production to refining and retail sales—a logical step given OPEC's rising share of the profits on crude. His policy prescriptions for the energy crisis focus on restoring competition. He recommends antitrust prosection and divestiture legislation that would prevent any major oil firm from dominating more than one stage of the business. Blair would also push such technological alternatives as shale oil, solar heating, and lightweight fiberglass automobiles.—Donald J. Murphy, Dept. of History, Chabot Coll., Livermore, Calif.

Chase, Allan. The Legacy of Malthus: the social costs of the new scientific racism.

Knopf. Jan. 1977. 623p. $17.95. SCI/SOC SCI

Chase, a science writer of some repute, inveighs against those who believe "bad genes" (i.e., heredity) are responsible for poverty, crime, and ignorance. The pseudoscientific underpinnings of this so-called racism began with Malthus and found further expression in Herbert Spencer's Social Darwinism and the Eugenics movement. Recent manifestations of scientific racism include immigration quotas for "non-Nordics," the forced sterilization of "200,000-plus poor people subjected to irreversible surgery on their gonads every year in America," IQ tests which "prove" blacks are cognitively inferior to whites, and politico-medical "do-nothingism" in the areas of universal vaccination and adequate nutrition for the poor. (This latter point echoes Chase's earlier The Biological Imperatives, LJ 3/1/72). The author further charges that the U.S. ruling class from Theodore Roosevelt on has tended to ignore valid research data which refute the pseudoscientific likes of Malthus and his modern disciples. Chase's big, sprawling book is often repetitive, rambling, disorderly, and strident, and all this will discourage the average reader. But, above all, it is an important book, one which could revive the debate sparked in recent years by William Shockley, Richard Herrnstein, and Arthur Jensen.—Kenneth F. Kister, Tampa, Fla.

Ginzberg, Eli, ed. Jobs for Americans.

Spectrum: Prentice-Hall. 1976. 385p. ISBN 0-13-510024-0. $8.95; pap. ISBN 0-13-510016-X. $3.95. LABOR/ECON

The Employment Act of 1946 mandated a government commitment to seek full employment for all those willing and able to work. Thirty years later, the American Assembly convened a conference, in part to consider progress on this goal, using the papers included in this book for background. The eight authors are all distinguished economists who have been directly involved in employment policy making: Moses Abramowitz, Robert Solow, Arthur Okun, Lloyd Ullman, Barbara Bergmann, Andrew Brimmer, Robert Lampman, and Juanita Kreps. There is little in the book that could be called new, but taken as a whole it is an excellent history and summary of issues. One might object that the range of opinion represented is too narrow; however, the authors' closeness to the policy process during the period described is reason enough to make the book interesting to a wide readership.—Robert J. Caswell, Dept. of Economics, Ohio State Univ., Columbus

Glasser, Ronald J., M.D. The Greatest Battle.

Random. 1976. 175p. ISBN 0-394-40018-6. $6.95. ENVIRONMENT/HEALTH

Cancer may not be curable but pediatrician Glasser believes unequivocally that it is preventable; that the majority of cancers are caused by environmental pollutants we could eliminate if we try. As in his recent The Body is the Hero (LJ 4/1/76), Glasser writes simply and dramatically, here beginning with cell physiology and going on to describe the work of cancer researchers who have identified carcinogens and the way they enter the cell and interfere with its genetic material. He tells how research and concentrated effort have eradicated a few specific cancer-causing agents, but counts many more—especially cigarettes—still flourishing uncontrolled, which will certainly cause the cancer rate to continue to rise in the decades ahead. The book is a heartfelt plea that we begin to fight environmental disease the way we fought and overcame infectious diseases. This battle is much harder, Glasser admits, because we are not fighting bacteria but our own way of life.—Peggy Champlin, California State Univ. Lib., Los Angeles

Hodgson, Godfrey. America in Our Time.

Doubleday. 1976. index. LC 75-36625. ISBN 0-385-11572-5. $12.95. POL SCI/HIST

Hodgson's massive social and political history of the years from 1961 to 1973 is a major achievement. Far surpassing earlier efforts, it will please both schol-

CONTENTS

The Contemporary Scene 2467
Letters 2468
Reference 2468
Art 2472
Biography 2477
Business & Economics 2479
Communications 2481
Education 2481
History 2482
Home Economics 2488
Language Arts 2489
Literature 2489
Music 2493
Philosophy 2493
Poetry 2493
Political Science & International Affairs 2495
Psychology & Psychiatry 2497
Religion 2498
Science & Technology 2499
Social Science 2503
Sports & Recreation 2505
Theater 2508
Fiction 2509
Mystery, Detective & Suspense 2513
Book Review & Professional Reading Author Index 2516

Library Journal reviews are indexed in Book Review Index and in Book Review Digest.

ars and concerned citizens. In sum, his thesis is that a "liberal" consensus arose in the U.S. after World War II because of economic abundance and great international power. In the 1960's these strengths were first eroded, then destroyed by the Vietnam war. Americans were then forced to place limits on their expectations and make choices between competing visions from within the old consensus. No work attempting to explain so much can be uniformly successful; thus, the greatest strengths here are the discussions of foreign policy decisions and the influence of the media on politics. By contrast, the complex causes of the black power and counterculture phenomena are treated a bit simplistically. But I found provocative even ideas with which I disagreed, and small quibbles were dwarfed by the stunning overall success.—James Levin, Dept. of Special Programs, C.C.N.Y.

Myrdal, Alva. The Game of Disarmament: how the United States and Russia run the arms race.

Pantheon. Jan. 1977. 448p. bibliog. index. LC 76-9587. ISBN 0-394-40901-9. $15. INT AFFAIRS

This important book is based on the author's participation in multilateral disarmament negotiations for more than 12 years as a Swedish representative. Myrdal first surveys the history of disarmament attempts and then describes a plan for the future. Her basic position is one of pessimism, but she gives good and cogent reasons for continuing disarmament efforts. The writing is authoritative, the documentation is extensive, the lengthy quotations permit many of the people involved to speak for themselves, and the entire book conveys a sense of urgency. It is unfortunate that the United States appears to be the chief villain, but on balance, this book is the best one available on the needs and problems of disarmament. It may not be widely read, but all libraries should have a copy available.—Edward Gibson, Washington Coll. Lib., Chestertown, Md.

Wise, David. The American Police State: the government against the people.

Random. 1976. ISBN 0-394-49677-9. $12.95. LAW/POL SCI

A former New York City police detective named Ulasewicz, who reportedly made 47 trips to Boston and Martha's Vineyard between 1969 and 1971 to find information damaging to Senator Edward Kennedy, was paid with funds raised for the 1968 Presidential campaign of Richard Nixon. This is one of many detailed and well-documented examples Wise offers to support his contention that the real significance of Watergate was the "misuse of the police power of the state against individuals who dissent from established policy." Wiretapping of government officials and reporters, domestic spying by the CIA, illegal FBI activities, the use of the IRS against political opponents, and more are all discussed in an eminently readable and convincing style. The wealth of data leads Wise to the inevitable conclusion that "an American police state has evolved, operating in the shadows side by side with the legitimate system of government." It's a very chilling conclusion, but one which deserves to be brought to the attention of every American.—Wes Daniels, Univ. of Lowell Lib., Mass.

LETTERS

Of writers and directories

We are sorry to find that Timothy Schobert's review of A Directory of American Fiction Writers (LJ 8/76) is in error on several points.

First, he is wrong in stating that the basis for including writers is not disclosed. Page iv of the Directory explains that "publication credits and/or other professional exposure count heavily. . . . Panels of writers meet regularly to review applications and reevaluate policy. The panelists change annually, and names of past and current panelists are available on request." A glance at the listings shows that all authors have been published by a non-vanity book publisher, commercial magazines, or prestigious little magazines.

Second, Mr. Schobert misleads librarians by terming the Directory's Service Section "a hodgepodge" and "just so much padding," and by failing to mention that the information in this section is available nowhere else. The section's several bibliographies, listing 525 current U.S. poetry and fiction anthologies and works of criticism, are unique. The few similar lists available either do not separate current U.S. from older and foreign works or they mix fiction and poetry with other genres.

Even more unusual is the section's listing of authors on 120 films and 281 videotapes, with prices and distributors. Nothing comparable existed until the Directory staff compiled these. Mr. Schobert may be unfamiliar with the audio-visual field and may therefore be unaware of the usefulness of these lists. . . . Mr. Schobert also seemed to be unaware that A Directory of American Fiction Writers is a companion volume to A Directory of American Poets—hence the inclusion of updated poetry information in the Service Section, as well as information on fiction.—Galen Williams, Executive Director, Poets & Writers, Inc.

The reviewer replies

I would like to respond to the points made by Mr. Galen Williams. . . .

First, I remember reading the passage on page iv which explains the reasons for inclusion or exclusion. I still contend that these "criteria" are not definitive. By definition a writer has to have "publication credits"; and what does "professional exposure" mean? All that was wanted was a clear statement about the seriousness of these writers' intentions. The fact is that when I go to something called a Directory of American Fiction Writers and do not find Harold Robbins or Mickey Spillane listed therein, I want to know why not. . . .

Second, perhaps I would not have been so negative about the Service Section if the compilers had not maintained that they were producing a directory. Even granting that a compiler can call his thing what he wants to (although as a reference librarian I have a natural prejudice for books with titles that accurately herald their contents), I maintain that much of the information is not terribly useful. While I may have unduly slighted the section on authors on film and videotape, I find a listing of anthologies practically useless without an additional listing of their contents.

I was vaguely aware of the Directory of American Poets at the time of writing the review, however I fail to see how its existence should alter my opinion of the other directory. For library patrons these works may be far apart in the classification, and besides one would not ordinarily go to a directory of fiction writers for information on poetry. I can see from the newsletter which Mr. Williams kindly sent along to me that his organization is performing an important and even vital service to serious writers of fiction and poetry, and it should be encouraged in every way possible so that this breed of writer will survive and flourish. However, a reference work has to be judged according to its utility no matter how well-intentioned the authors or compilers may have been. As a publication to accompany the newsletter, this directory could be useful: to subscribers the context is clear. In the context of the library where this directory would be just one among many, its usefulness is highly limited.—Timothy Schobert

REFERENCE

Beaudouin, John T. & Everett Mattlin. The Phrase-Droppers Handbook.

Doubleday. 1976. 115p. illus. by William Hamilton. ISBN 0-385-05519-6. LC 75-38161. $5.95. LANG/REF

This is a guide for boors who wish to out-bore other bores in the most intellectual sounding ways. The book is a compendium of esoteric and pseudo-esoteric catchphrases guaranteed to stop any literate or pseudo-literate conversation and make the reader appear more literate than the other conversants. Why anybody would want to associate with such people is a question that is not covered in the book. Not recommended.—David M. Hoffman, "Newsday" Lib., Garden City, N.Y.

Briggs, Katharine. An Encyclopedia of Fairies: hobgoblins, brownies, bogies and other supernatural creatures.

Pantheon. Jan. 1977. 481p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-12939. ISBN 0-394-40918-3. $12.95. FOLKLORE/REF

Noted British folklorist Briggs adds another volume to her extensive literature on British folklore. This eclectic encyclopedia covers British fairy lore, broadly constituted as "that whole area

Beautiful, authoritative reference books for hobbyists and collectors from

HAMLYN/AMERICA

A Collingridge Publication
The Amateur Gardener
A.G.L. Hellyer

"Even the hesitant garden lover who consults this volume throughout the year may...become as successful as some professionals. A comprehensive reference." —ALA Booklist. 696 pp. 180 photographs of plants; over 160 practical line drawings. ISBN 0-600-30082-X $12.50

A Collingridge Standard Guide
The Amateur's Greenhouse
A.J. Macself. Revised by John Warren

The sixth, completely revised edition of this ultimate reference covers everything from types of greenhouses to equipment, management and growing plants in a variety of heated or unheated environments. 696 pp. 64 b & w photographs; over 160 drawings.
ISBN 0-600-30151-6 $6.95

The Collingridge Standard Guide
Roses
Leonard Hollis

"The color photos alone make this stunning book worth perusing, but the instructions are also of the highest quality." —ALA Booklist. 240 pp. 60 full color and 120 b & w photographs; 20 line drawings.
ISBN 0-600-38110-2 $12.50

Shrubs and Small Trees for Your Garden
Geoffrey Smith

This splendid book surveys a multitude of garden plants from the exotic to the everyday variety, and offers advice on creating garden features, hedging, climbing and wall shrubs. And more! 176 pp. 44 full color photographs; over 100 drawings.
ISBN 0-600-01722-2 $10.00

POCKET GUIDES 4¾" x 6¼"
Amateur Gardening Pocket Guide
A.G.L. Hellyer

Like having a professional by your side! "It is difficult to find significant omissions from this easy-to-carry, easy-to-read resource. A convenient assemblage of facts for any gardener."—ALA Booklist. 696 pp. 64 pages of b & w photographs; over 160 drawings.
ISBN 0-600-30070-6 $4.95

Country Life Collector's Pocket Book

A superb reference for antique buffs, crammed with details on furniture, clocks, ceramics, enamels, glass, metalwork, coins, prints, maps, music boxes and more. Plus what to look for, how to date objects and spot fakes and forgeries. Index. 352 pp. Over 800 drawings.
ISBN 0-600-43063-4 $5.95

The Pocket Book of Furniture
Therle Hughes

A handy reference and traveling companion for collectors of English antiques covering designers and major craftsmen in each period. Glossary of terms used in sales rooms and museums. 416 pp. Over 1000 drawings.
ISBN 0-600-43067-7 $5.95

CONCISE GUIDES IN COLOR—popular pocket-sized reference books written by experts and illustrated in color. Each volume approximately 250 pages, 4¾" x 6¾" in size—$3.50

Garden Flowers
ISBN 0-600-33852-5

Flowering Bulbs
ISBN 0-600-33566-6

Herbs
ISBN 0-600-31681-5

Birds' Eggs and Nests
ISBN 0-600-31241-0

Cage and Aviary Birds
ISBN 0-600-31648-3

Mammals of Britain and Europe
ISBN 0-600-36079-2

Freshwater Fishes
ISBN 0-600-33476-7

Ships
ISBN 0-600-37972-8

Constellations
ISBN 0-600-00893-2

Spotting Birds
ISBN 0-600-03614-6

The Shorter Dictionary of English Furniture
Ralph Edwards

The work hailed the foremost authority on the evolution of English domestic furniture from the Middle Ages to the Georgian period—now revised, updated, and condensed from its original three volumes into one! 684 pp. 1900 b & w photographs. ISBN 0-600-43082-0 $75.00

Eagles, Hawks and Falcons of the World
Leslie Brown and Dean Amadon

An exquisitely illustrated, definitive work offering all available knowledge on the world's diurnal birds of prey. 946 pp. Two volume boxed set. 165 full color plates; 94 distribution maps plus line drawings. ISBN 0-600-43124-X $87.50

LAROUSSE ENCYCLOPEDIAS
Paperback Editions

Beautifully illustrated in color and black-and-white, complete, unabridged and bound in laminated covers. Each volume—approximately 425 pages. $13.95

Larousse Encyclopedia of Byzantine and Medieval Art
Edited by René Huyghe
ISBN 0-600-02378-8

Larousse Encyclopedia of Renaissance and Baroque Art
Edited by René Huyghe
ISBN 0-600-02373-7

Larousse Encyclopedia of Modern History
Foreword by Hugh Trevor-Roper
ISBN 0-600-02376-1

Distributed by A & W PROMOTIONAL BOOKS 95 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y.10016

of the supernatural which is not claimed by angels, devils or ghosts." Entries are alphabetically arranged, and terms are capitalized in the text to indicate that they have separate entries. Items included range from names of specific supernatural beings, to names of stories concerning fairies (occasionally including the text of one version of the story), to persons in some way important to the study of fairy lore, to concepts and customs regarding fairies (e.g., "Time in fairyland," "Fairy food," "Origins of fairies"). Supplementary material includes a selected reading list and indexes of tale types and motifs mentioned in the text. Recommended for public and academic libraries.—Joan Berman, Humboldt State Univ. Lib., Arcata, Calif.

Dennys, Rodney. The Heraldic Imagination.

Potter, dist. by Crown. 1976. 224p. illus., some color. index. LC 76-5231. $15.

Neubecker, Ottfried with contrib. by J. P. Brooke-Little. Heraldry: sources, symbols, and meaning.

McGraw. 1976. 288p. illus., some color. index. LC 76-20187. ISBN 0-07-046308-5. $39.95; until May 31, 1977, $34.95. HIST/REF

Both these attractive, large-format books are interesting and worthwhile; and each in its own way offers a sound and useful introduction to heraldry and armory. Dennys, the Somerset herald of arms in England, takes a relatively narrow and intensive approach focused chiefly on English developments. The first part of his book explores the historical origins of heraldry, stressing the military role of the herald; the second part discusses medieval English heraldic treatises, their authors, contexts, and significance; the third part, which comprises nearly two-thirds of the text, deals with the heraldic imagination, chiefly as expressed in the pervasive use of fabulous creatures. Neubecker, a board member of the International Academy of Heraldry, adopts an encyclopedic approach. Although both books are exceptionally well illustrated, Neubecker's is particularly striking in the use of many maps, charts, and diagrams to accompany the reproductions. The text, though adequate, is less impressive: Neubecker tends to offer anecdote where Dennys provides penetrating analysis. Nevertheless, Neubecker is a good deal more comprehensive in coverage. There is surprisingly little overlap, and the two books are more complementary than competitive.—B. C. Hacker, formerly with Dept. of History, Iowa State Univ., Ames

Doyle, Paul A. Guide to Basic Information Sources in English Literature.

J. Norton Pub., dist. by Halsted: Wiley. (Information Resources). 1976. 143p. index. LC 75-43260. ISBN 0-470-15011-4. $10.95. LIT/BIBLIOG

In spite of the useful annotations, this is not one of the better guides to sources in English Literature. Anomalies abound. Why, for example, are the bibliographies of MLA and MHRA included in the same section ("Guide to Articles in Magazines and Journals") as Ulrich's and not included as main items under serial bibliographies? Of what use is an organizational principle that includes Jacob Blanck's Bibliography of American Literature and Dorothy N. and Arthur Curley's "Library of Literary Criticism" series in the same section? Why have a section on drama that doesn't include critical bibliographies? (Their inclusion with "Explication Checklists" is understandable but diminishes the usefulness of the section on drama.) Furthermore, instead of lumping together such disparate items as "Serif" bibliographies and "Twentieth Century Interpretations" (collections of critical essays) simply because they are both series, it would have been better to assign them appropriate sections according to their forms—such as "primary bibliographies" and "critical works." Basically, then, the lack of clear-cut organization renders this a less than satisfactory reference work.—Timothy Schobert, Univ. of Ottawa Lib., Canada

The Encyclopedia of Comic Book Heroes. Vol. 2: Wonder Woman. by Michael L. Fleisher with assist. of Janet E. Lincoln.

Macmillan. 1976. 253p. illus. LC 76-965. $14.95; Collier pap. $7.95. REF

First appearing in 1941 in All-Star #8, Wonder Woman was psychologist William Moulton Marston's answer to masculine violence in the comics. This work records Wonder Woman's first 27 years of comic book adventures in All-Star, Comic Cavalcade, Sensation Comics, and Wonder Woman. Entries include all characters appearing in more than one adventure. A 55-page article on Wonder Woman includes a month-by-month chronology of her crime fighting career, as well as details concerning origin, equipment, etc. Illustrations properly cite original publication dates. The only complete reference source to the best known comic book heroine in the U.S. (For a review of Volume 1, Batman, see LJ 8/76.)—Charles A. Wagner, Peru P.L., Ind.

Hisamatsu, Sen'ichi. Biographical Dictionary of Japanese Literature.

Kodansha pub. in collab. with Internat. Society for Educational Information. 1976. 437p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-14730. ISBN 0-87001-253-8. $29.50. LIT/REF

This dictionary presents background information on 320 figures prominent in the development of Japanese literature. Entries are grouped according to a five-fold periodization of Japanese literary history; arrangement of entries within each period is alphabetical. An index, a useful diagram of the major schools of Japanese literature, a glossary, and a bibliography of Japanese sources are included. I would have preferred an alphabetical sequence without the separate index; and, regrettably, the English of the entries is flat and pedestrian. These shortcomings, however, in no way detract from the book's usefulness. It will be welcomed by specialist and general reader alike and should be acquired for medium and large reference collections. One might add that the dictionary continues the high standard of bookbinding that one has come to expect from Kodansha.—Warren Collins, Honolulu

Land Tenure Center Library Staff, comp. Land Tenure and Agrarian Reform in Africa and the Near East: an annotated bibliography.

G. K. Hall. (Bibliographies & Guides in African Studies). 1976. 423p. index. LC 76-3652. ISBN 0-8161-7921-2. $22. AGRICULTURE/BIBLIOG

This impressive work consists of hundreds of citations, most of them helpfully annotated, based on University of Wisconsin holdings. Arrangement is by country and region, access via author and subject indexes. Only a few smaller countries, such as Guinea-Bissau, are not represented. Numerous references are made to unpublished reports, and articles are cited from well over 200 journals. But a bibliography based on the holdings of only one institution will invariably exclude some basic works. Thus, there are citations to two versions of an article by Arthur Gaitskell on the Gezira Scheme, but no mention of his Gezira (1959). Several well-known agricultural histories and bibliographies (especially, but not exclusively, older titles) are also missing; and there are altogether fewer government documents than one might expect in a book of this sort. Nevertheless, the book is essential for any library with major interest in the areas covered, or in land tenure generally.—Elizabeth A. Widenmann, Columbia Univ. Libs.

Lass, Abraham & Betty Lass. Dictionary of Pronunciation.

Quadrangle, dist. by Harper. 1976. 334p. LC 75-36252. ISBN 0-8129-0614-4. $12.50. LANG/REF

The right-and-wrong approach to English pronunciation is at last being overcome. The authors recognize that, within the bounds of educated speech, words may have one, two, or several accepted pronunciations. Departing from this principle, they have collated the pronunciations of what they deem to be the 8000 most controversial words as given in four major American desk dictionaries (Webster's New World, American Heritage, Webster's New Collegiate, and Random House College). Numbers (1-4) following the pronunciation indicate in how many of the dictionaries it occurs (the authors' personal preference is asterisked). The pronunciation key (that of Webster's New World—with permission) is repeated in boxed form at the foot of each recto.—B. Hunter Smeaton, Dept. of Linguistics, Univ. of Calgary, Alberta, Canada

Levine, Herbert M. & Dolores B. Owen. An American Guide to British Social Science Resources.

Scarecrow. 1976. 293p. index. LC 76-22690. ISBN 0-8108-0950-8. $11. SOC SCI/REF

This is an overextended effort to enlighten the American scholar on the use of "important social science library resources" and on the practical details of dwelling in the U.K. One finds helpful nuggets: for instance, good quality typewriter paper is difficult to obtain in Britain. But complex aspects of living, such as health care and schools for one's children, are treated superficially. Most of the pages are devoted to descriptions of more than 200 libraries and archives, with characterizations of their relevant holdings, requirements for access, photoduplication facilities, and hours. Pertinent services of 35 organizations are also noted. Yet nowhere is the reader referred to the standard, germane publications, e.g., the UNESCO World Index of Social Science Institutions (Unipub, 1971), or even the I.R.S. Tax Information for American Scholars in the U.S. and Abroad.—Sally Linden, Wellesley Coll. Lib., Mass.

REFERENCE

Lloyd, Christopher. Atlas of Maritime History.

Arco. 1976. 144p. color maps. illus. index. LC 74-32634. ISBN 0-668-03779-2. $35. HIST/REF

Lloyd, an internationally known maritime historian, has created a work that will be equally useful to the specialist and the general reader. Indeed, unlike most atlases, this entire work can be read with pleasure. The maps are very well done in a color-coded style that is instantly comprehensible. The supporting text and well-chosen illustrations place the maps into proper historical perspective. I know of no other work that covers the same subject matter; thus most libraries will do well to add this to their reference shelves.—Jack Goodwin, Smithsonian Institution Libs.

Marihuana: an annotated bibliography by Coy W. Waller & others.

Macmillan Information. 1976. 560p. index. LC 76-20635. $14.95. MED/BIBLIOG

The authors set out to produce a comprehensive, annotated bibliography of the technical literature on marijuana from 1964 (where the UN Commission on Narcotic Drugs bibliography ends) through 1974. The 3045 entries are arranged alphabetically by first author, with a full author index and a useful, well-subdivided subject index. Annotations are clear and helpful. Still, "comprehensive" doesn't necessarily mean complete, and this volume is no exception. Spot checks of two other bibliographies (neither listed in the present volume)—the National Clearinghouse of Drug Abuse Information's A Bibliography of Drug Abuse Literature 1972 and Joseph Menditto's Drugs of Addiction and Non-Addiction (LJ 3/15/71)—turned up a number of items not listed here. For the popular literature one must also look elsewhere. Nevertheless, where there is any demand for the scientific literature on marijuana, this reasonably priced, well-produced bibliography will prove very useful.—Ilse Moon, Montclair P.L., N.J.

Nash, Jay Robert. Darkest Hours: a narrative encyclopedia of worldwide disasters from ancient times to the present.

Nelson-Hall. 1976. 812p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-7390. ISBN 0-88229-140-8. $39.95. HIST/REF

The book is described in its subtitle, although coverage concentrates heavily on most recent times. For Nash's purposes, a disaster is something natural or accidental that costs at least 20 lives —floods, or streetcar wrecks may qualify, but not wars and other manmade atrocities. The style is decidedly journalistic, each narrative resembling a feature story, usually with a photo. The stories are arranged alphabetically in the text, listed chronologically by type of disaster in the 14 appendixes. Despite certain pretensions, this is not a serious reference work, but the topic is intrinsically fascinating and the newsy style makes for good browsing.—B. C. Hacker, formerly with Dept. of History, Iowa State Univ., Ames

Salaman, R. A. Dictionary of Tools Used in the Woodworking and Allied Trades, c. 1700–1970.

Scribners. 1976. 545p. fwd. by Joseph Needham. illus. bibliog. LC 75-35059. ISBN 0-684-14535-9. $47.50. HIST/REF

This is a scholarly, impressively researched work which defines, to give just two examples, some 60 types of axes and about 100 hammers. Much of the information was gleaned from manufacturers' catalogs and cannot be found in conventional library resources. In addition to understandable definitions, which include both manufacturers' terms and workshop usage, superb illustrations are provided for all but minor variants of each tool. Extensive cross references obviate the need for an index. Useful not only to historians, but to collectors and craftsmen; indispensable for museums collecting such artifacts.—Jack Goodwin, Smithsonian Institution Libs.

Tudor, Nancy & Dean Tudor. Cooking for Entertaining.

Bowker. (Bibliographic Guides for Contemporary Collections). 1976. 256p. index. LC 76-9841. ISBN 0-8352-0885-0. $19.95. COOKERY/BIBLIOG

This is a selective, annotated bibliography of cookery which covers reference sources, cookbooks of all types and books on related subjects, AV materials, periodicals, and societies. The number of recipes in each book and degree of expertise required (beginner, intermediate, advanced) are included. Starred books are recommended for a basic library collection. Timeliness is an important factor in bibliographies, and it is unfortunate that the majority of the items listed were published before 1974. Necessary only for libraries that want to form a cookery collection.—Christine Bulson, SUNY at Oneonta Lib.

Watts, Peter. A Dictionary of the Old West, 1850–1900.

Knopf. Jan. 1977. 517p. illus. bibliog. LC 76-13724. ISBN 0-394-49013-4. $12.95. HIST/REF

This lexicon contains more than 2400 entries, ranging from "abergoin" (supposedly a corruption of "aborigine" and commonly used by 19th-Century writers to refer to the Indians) to "zorillas" (line-back Longhorns). In between are hundreds of succinct, informative, and delightful essays on such subjects as buffalo wallows, the dehorning of cattle, and wish-books. In most cases, the authority is cited; words or phrases entering the language from French or Spanish are so indicated, generally with their original meaning; and the area of usage (Northwest or

From Harper & Row

New Editions of Standard Works

THE ABC OF LETTERING
Fifth Revised Edition
J. I. Biegeleisen. The most popular instruction book on lettering, updated to reflect the recent technical developments in lettering and typography, and the current revival of antique and decorative alphabets—an indispensable tool for teachers, students and professionals. Profusely illustrated.
LC 76-5165
ISBN 0-06-010329-9 $15.00

DEPTHS OF THE EARTH
Caves and Cavers of the United States
Revised and Enlarged Edition
William R. Halliday, M.D. With almost 50% new material, this richly varied account of America's caves and their explorers spans centuries of adventure and history—from the pioneer explorations of the young George Washington to the recent aqualung recovery of mastodon remains in Florida.
LC 75-6338
ISBN 0-06-011748-6 $14.95*

THE ENCYLOPEDIA OF MILITARY HISTORY
Revised Edition
R. Ernest Dupuy, Col., U.S.A., Ret., and Trevor N. Dupuy, Col., U.S.A., Ret. The world's military history from the beginning of recorded time updated through 1975 to include the "official" end of the Vietnam war and the Arab-Israeli wars. 1,488 pages, over 250 maps and illustrations; charts; index. (Coming in February).
LC 75-6333
ISBN 0-06-011139-9 $25.00

THE CHILD FROM FIVE TO TEN
Revised Edition
Arnold Gesell, M.D., Frances L. Ilg, M.D., and Louise Bates Ames, Ph.D. With new material relevant to social and cultural changes, this "bible" on the care and training of young children, organized into a year by year series of psychological portraits with concrete guidance suggestions, remains as indispensable as ever for parents and educators. (Coming in March)
LC 76-5123
ISBN 0-06-011501-7 $15.00

*Short discount

Harper & Row
10 E. 53rd St., New York 10022
1817

Southwest) is frequently specified. Watts claims neither completeness nor total accuracy, which would be impossible in a subject as slippery as this. Yet he does not even indicate first known usages or give page numbers for the authorities cited. Nevertheless, anyone interested in the old West, whether scholar or buff, will find this dictionary as useful as it is amusing. The illustrations, reproduced from the period, are an extra bonus.—Peter J. Coleman, Dept. of History, Univ. of Illinois at Chicago Circle

Woy, James B. Commodity Futures Trading: a bibliographic guide.

Bowker. 1976. 206p. index. LC 76-23430. ISBN 0-8352-0899-0. $15.75. BUS/BIBLIOG

This volume consists of an alphabetical list of more than 100 terms used in commodity trading, each of which is followed by a concise definition and a bibliography that includes a clearly written abstract for each entry. The work covers topics such as frozen pork bellies and women as commodity traders, with greatest emphasis on commonly used terms such as "spread" or "seasonal price trends." The arrangement is superior: frequent use of practical cross references, clear page headings, etc. The main body of the book is followed by a bibliography of all cited sources, a bibliography of suitable government publications, a list of relevant publishers and their addresses, and indexes. This excellent reference book, written by a highly qualified author, fills a gap for libraries serving patrons with an interest in the commodity market.—Thomas Heenan, Omaha P.L., Neb.

Recently Revised Reference Works

Biegeleisen, J. I. Art Directors' Workbook of Type Faces: for artists, typographers, letterers, teachers & students. 3d ed.

Arco. 247p. illus. LC 76-17128. ISBN 0-688-04041-6. pap. $9.95. GRAPHIC ARTS/REF

This edition of a work first published in 1963 and revised in 1970 includes a supplement of 16 modern and traditional type faces representing current favorites and a special section of modern photo-lettering designs. The book offers 75 faces shown in full font on double-spread pages and 940 one-line specimens.

Chamberlin, Waldo & others. A Chronology and Fact Book of the United Nations, 1941-1976. 4th ed., rev.

Oceana. 1976. 302p. index. LC 76-18777. ISBN 0-379-00189-6. $12.50. INT AFFAIRS/REF

Updated through 1975.

Responsible Information

THE LANDSCAPE ARCHITECTS [illegible]

A Basic [illegible] ment (includes 200 full-color photographs of the most commonly used North American Plants)

[illegible] ISBN [illegible] through tbsco/ T.W. Faxon/McGregor [illegible] the publisher

BASIC INFORMATION SERVICES, INC
125 North Cambridge Street, Orange, California 92666

Pomeranz, Virginia E., M.D. & Dodi Schultz. The Mothers' and Fathers' Medical Encyclopedia. rev. ed.

Little. Feb. 1977. 561p. illus. by Marika. ISBN 0-316-71320-1. $14.95. MED/REF

This work was originally published in paperback under the title The Mothers' Medical Encyclopedia (New American Lib., 1972). In this edition "there are many new entries; much material has been wholly rewritten and some has been dropped."

Salem, James M. A Guide to Critical Reviews. Pt. 2: The Musical, 1909-1974. 2d ed.

Scarecrow. 1976. 611p. index. LC 73-3120. ISBN 0-8108-0959-1. $20. THEATER/BIBLIOG

This updated work offers a bibliography of critical reviews of the musical on the New York stage (for the most part, productions listed are Broadway presentations, "although Off-Broadway and Off-Off Broadway presentations have been included when accurate data could be obtained").

Spahn, Theodore Jurgen & Janet Peterson Spahn. From Radical Left to Extreme Right: a bibliography of current periodicals of protest, controversy, advocacy, or dissent, with dispassionate content-summaries to guide librarians and educators. Vol. 3. 2d ed., rev. & enlarged.

Scarecrow. 1976. 1748p. index. LC 79-126558. ISBN 0-8108-0883-8. $22.50. POL SCI/BIBLIOG

This edition covers 474 periodicals in signed reviews and an additional 176 in unsigned entries (a new feature). There are also five new chapters: "Radical Professional," "Labor & Unions," "Comics," "Conservation & Ecology," "Prisons."

Treasures of Britain and Treasures of Ireland. 3d ed.

Norton. 1976. 680p. prep. by Automobile Assn. of England. illus., mostly color. maps. $19.75. TRAV/REF

This edition has been updated with revised maps and new entries.

The Writers Directory, 1976-78.

St. Martin's. 1976. 1236p. LC 77-166289. $35. REF

This revised and expanded third edition of a biennial reference work lists more than 12,000 living writers in English.

–This highly selective listing was compiled by Robert R. Harris

ART

Boyce, John. Aphrodisiac: erotic drawings for selected passages from the works of Anaïs Nin.

Crown. 1976. unpaged. intro. by Anaïs Nin. LC 76-15163. ISBN 0-517-52678-6. $7.95; pap. ISBN 0-517-52679-4. $4.95. LIT/GRAPHIC ARTS

Although Nin notes in her brief introduction that today "erotic drawings and vulgarity are inseparable," the statement does not make this tasteless collection of lewd drawings any more palatable. The brief excerpts from Nin's works are completely overwhelmed by Boyce's "beardsley-esque" contortionists cavorting in the nude. At first the drawings are distracting, but they soon become merely repetitive. It is Nin's often beautiful prose evocations of physical love which suffer most in this union with Boyce's explicit drawings. Her words have more power in their original settings. Not recommended.—Margaret Anne O'Connor, Dept. of English, Univ. of North Carolina, Chapel Hill

Driskell, David, comp. Two Centuries of Black American Art.

Knopf. 1976. 221p. illus., some color. bibliog. index. LC 76-13691. ISBN 0-394-40887-X. $15; pap. ISBN 0-394-73428-0. $7.95. ART

This museum catalog is a winner and should wind up as a best seller in its category. Two-hundred years (1750-1950) of the history of art by black Americans is grandly presented in a major survey, enhanced by 147 illustrations and career highlights of 63 individual artists. The work will appeal to the specialist because of an authoritative text and to students at all levels as well as the general reader for the factual data and generous spread of illustrations. The ample bibliography lists catalogs and newspaper articles in addition to books and essays published in scholarly journals. The exhibition recorded here, made of 205 works, is currently on view in Los Angeles. During 1977, it will circulate to Atlanta, then Dallas and will conclude its run at the Brooklyn Museum next summer.—William J. Dane, Newark P.L., N.J.

English Art Today, 1960-76. 2 vols.

Rizzoli. 1976. 468p. illus., some color. LC 76-19195. ISBN 0-8478-0060-1. bilingual ed. slipcased $30. ART

This is a model exhibition catalog: it not only documents the work in a major survey exhibition (at the Palazzo Reale in Milan), but also places the art in its larger context so that it can be understood and appreciated. Over 60 artists and groups are represented, in five categories: painting, sculpture, "alternative developments" (conceptual art, land art, etc.), performance art, and film. The emphasis is on the work of young artists, rather than the contemporary work of more established artists, but some historical information is supplied in the introductory essays for each section. For each artist, several works are illustrated, accompanied by a biography, portrait, personal statement, bibliography, list of exhibitions, and catalog of works in the present exhibition. There are many good-quality color illustrations. The result is an up-to-date survey of a vigorous art scene.—Christina Huemer Bostick, Oberlin Coll. Lib., Ohio

The Farnese Hours.

Braziller. 1976. 167p. comm. & intro. by Webster Smith. color illus. bibliog. LC 76-4041. ISBN 0-8076-0856-4. slipcased. $30; until Dec. 25, $25. ART

Between circa 1537 and 1546 the scribe F. Monterchi and the miniaturist Giulio Clovio produced a book of hours that rapidly became the most famous manuscript of the late Renaissance, elaborate-

A universe of forms

Lipman, Jean. Calder's Universe.

pub. in coop. with the Whitney Museum of American Art by Studio: Viking. 1976. 351p. illus., some color. bibliog. index. LC 76-28232. ISBN 0-670-19966-4. $28.50. ART

What a magnificent treasure for Calder fans and scholars! This major American sculptor, whose work is often awesome, always delightful, feels his basic theme is the universe, and his work does encompass a universe of forms, from monumental sculpture in a variety of materials, drawings and paintings to toys, jewelry, posters, tapestry and theatrical sets. Every medium in which he works is discussed and beautifully illustrated here, with excellent accompanying statements from friends, critics, and scholars. This most complete look at Calder and his work to date is part of a major retrospective project undertaken by the Whitney Museum of American Art. The author, who directed the project, is a long-time friend of the artist, and her preface and introduction provide a unique personal view. A chronology, thorough annotated bibliography, and index of personalities add research value to this work. [Calder's death was announced just as this issue of LJ was going to press.—Ed.]—Elizabeth B. Bailey, Univ. of Alabama in Huntsville Lib.

ly described and acclaimed in Vasari's Lives. Through the courtesy of the Morgan Library staff, this reviewer was able to compare several pages of the original with this facsimile. There are some minor coloristic variations, but it is evident that considerable care was exercised in the reproduction of these little masterpieces. All of the 26 full-page miniatures and 37 illustrated pages of text are included. The accompanying scholarly essay provides a good accounting of Clovio's life and a fine art-historical description of the manuscript. Art librarians should note that the Grimani Breviary—an important influence on the Farnese Hours—also exists in a handsome facsimile edition (LJ 12/15/74).—Robert Cahn, Dept. of Social Sciences, Fashion Inst. of Technology, New York

Green, Christopher. Leger and the Avant-Garde.

Yale Univ. Pr. 1976. 341p. illus., some color. bibliog. index. LC 75-11499. ISBN 0-300-01800-2. $35. ART

This serious, well-documented study of Leger delineates the social and aesthetic context for the artist's development from 1909 through 1925. The analyses of Leger's paintings and the explanation of the avant-garde milieu within which he strove for a "maximum realization of modern subjects by means of plastic contrasts" successfully reflect his changing views of the reality of modern life and of pictorial representation. Although the illustrations (8 color plates, 214 black-and-white) are not high quality, this important work is essential for all collections with interests in modern art.—Robin Kaplan, Los Angeles County Museum of Art Lib.

Justema, William. Pattern: a historical panorama.

New York Graphic Society: Little. 1976. 202p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-8451. ISBN 0-8212-0665-6. $15. ART

The author is a professional designer of some stature who understands that much of the commerical work in printed surface design finds its inspiration in historical antecedent. The eight sections devoted to pattern types are each arranged in a rough chronology and contain nearly 300 crisp black-and-white photos of examples from all major periods and styles internationally. There are other more specialized compendia of pattern motifs, but the combination of a wealth of illustration and a clear and systematic introduction covering the function of repeating motifs makes this title a useful addition to design study collections. For the practicing designer, professional or amateur, it's more a book to own than to borrow but, because of the author's reputation and earlier work, Pleasures of Pattern (LJ 3/15/69), public libraries will probably get requests for it.—Julia Van Haaften, N.Y.P.L.

Lauf, Detlef Ingo. Tibetan Sacred Art: the heritage of Tantra.

Shambhala, dist. by Random. 1976. 228p. illus., some color. bibliog. index. LC 76-14204. ISBN 0-87773-089-X. $37.50. REL/ART

Tibetan art is unique in that its study provides a complete picture of the entire culture itself. Unlike many Western mediators of Eastern art, German Tibetologist Lauf approaches his subject not as an art historian, but as a scholar with an immense grasp of the significance this art had for the Tibetans themselves. His narrative is lucid and communicates a complicated theology well to Western noninitiates. Lauf begins with a discussion of the nature and origins of Lamaism. Chapters unfold around esoteric meanings in Tantric art forms, mystic experience, visionary unfolding in the mandala, and detailed explanations that provide the full scope of Tibetan iconography. The color plates are exquisite and illustrate well the renown Tibetan artists have as perhaps the best colorists in art history. Lauf's book is a brilliant achievement that replaces Antoinette K. Gordon's classic Tibetan Religious Art (LJ 4/1/53) as a definitive treatment for Western readers.—Robert S. McCully, Dept. of Psychiatry & Behavioral Science, Medical Univ. of South Carolina, Charleston

Messum, David. The Life and Work of Lucy Kemp-Welch.

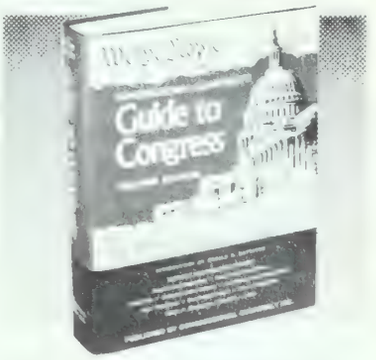
Antique Collectors' Club c/o Publishers Marketing Group, 1515 Broadway, N.Y.C. 10036. 1976. 111p. illus., some color. $30. ART

Messum's monograph is the only comprehensive study of Lucy Kemp-

Just Published!
Second Edition



Guide to Congress
Second Edition

1,100 pp. 8½" x 11". $49.50

Just published, an extensively revised edition of the work widely accepted as the reference on the U.S. Congress. Includes major Congressional reforms enacted in the aftermath of Vietnam and Watergate. How Congress works, its powers, history and the pressures upon it.

This is no coffee-table edition. It belongs in every high school, college and public library.

Please order directly from:

Congressional Quarterly Inc.
Box 77, 1414 22nd St. N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20037

PUBLICATIONS FROM UNITED NATIONS

Demographic Yearbook 1974

The twenty-sixth issue of the Demographic Yearbook contains 1974 statistics of area, population, natality, mortality, nuptiality and divorce for every country of the world, latest available data on expectation of life and a 7-year trend of international arrivals and departures. Data on the economic characteristics of the population are shown, including labour force participation rates by age and sex as well as various cross-classifications of population by industry, occupation, status, age and sex. The Special Topic for this edition is: Mortality Statistics.

Order No. E/F.75.XIII.1
Clothbound $42.00

United Nations Publications
Room LX-2300, New York, N.Y. 10017
or
United Nations Publications
Palais des Nations
1211 Geneva 10, Switzerland

An unnamable presence

O'Keeffe, Georgia. Georgia O'Keeffe.

Studio: Viking. 1976. unpaged. color illus. LC 76-23452. ISBN 0-670-33708-0. $75; until Dec. 25, $60; ltd. signed ed. ISBN 0-670-33709-0. $2[illegible] ART

This magnificent book is truly O'Keeffe's creation: she chose the paintings to be included, she wrote the text, and together with two close associates she supervised every stage in the design and execution of the painstakingly produced, oversized volume. It is surprising that there has been only one previous book on O'Keeffe, Lloyd Goodrich's monograph occasioned by her 1970 retrospective exhibit (LJ 3/1/71). Many of the 108 paintings splendidly reproduced here in color were also included in Goodrich's volume, although on a much smaller scale and mostly in black and white. O'Keeffe's text is simple, direct, ascerbic at times; it incorporates various statements she made earlier in exhibition catalogues. And the paintings? Those sun-bleached bones, transfigured flowers, vast skies, desert hills? Some 40 years ago, O'Keeffe wrote that bones "seem to cut sharply to the center of something that is keenly alive on the desert even tho' it is vast and empty and untouchable—and knows no kindess with all its beauty." Why no kindness? Not because the unnamable presence she senses is cruel, but because it surpasses human dimensions. In her best works O'Keeffe is able to contain and evoke some of its tremendous energy. That kind of painting requires courage even more than great artistry. She has both.—Anne-diese Schwarzer, "Library Journal"

Welch, a minor figure in 19th-Century English plein-arism and the first president of the Society of Animal Painters. Along with various biographical details, the author presents a chronological development of the artist's work. Her emphasis on life study and mastery of the human figure produced compositions with a sense of accuracy, motion, and power. Her animals were never idealized, always true to nature. The monograph contains a complete listing of the artist's Academy paintings and a detailed catalogue of her studio collection (containing 163 paintings, watercolors, pastels, charcoal drawings). More than one-half of these works appear in the monograph in excellent reproductions, making Messum's study a commendable collation of previously obscure material.—Elsie M. Schmutz, Graduate Sch. Lib., CUNY

Rogers, Mondel. Old Ranches of the Texas Plains.

Texas A&M Univ. Pr. 1976. 124p. fwd. by Mitchell A. Wilder. illus., mainly color. LC 76-17980. ISBN 0-89096-019-4. $27.50; until Dec. 31, $22.50. HIST/ART

A young artist who was trained as an architect has brought together here an impressive collection of his paintings of historic ranches. The book presents 80 fine reproductions, 56 in color, of Rogers's strikingly realistic tempera and watercolor paintings of the old Texas ranch scene. Amon Carter Museum director Mitchell Wilder has contributed a thoughtful foreword. Appropriate for American and Western art and history collections.—Richard Lietz, Graduate Sch. of Librarianship, Univ. of Denver

Spitzweg, Carl. Carl Spitzweg.

Rizzoli. 1976. 97p. text by Siegfried Wichmann. illus., some color. LC 76-11255. ISBN 0-8478-0028-8. trilingual ed. $16.50. ART

This first English-language book devoted to Carl Spitzweg, a self-taught 19th-Century German painter of anecdotal and landscape scenes, is problematic. The trilingual text (German, French, English) unsuccessfully attempts to explain the variety of Spitzweg's subjects by prefacing each illustration with one or two sentences. The plates, of dubious quality, have no relationship to each other, and the text, which might total three pages if treated in an essay format, sheds no light on the artist. There is no table of contents, no bibliography, no index, although there is a page of biographical notes and a list which incompletely identifies the illustrations. Wichmann's 1967 catalog, Carl Spitzweg und sein Freundeskreis, although in German, and Chapter 10 in Fritz Novotny's Painting and Sculpture in Europe 1780-1880 (Penguin, 1974), are more elucidative sources.—Robin Kaplan, Los Angeles County Museum of Art Lib.

Stebbins, Theodore E., Jr. with assist. of Caldwell & Carol Troyen. American Master Drawings and Watercolors: a history of works on paper from colonial times to the present.

pub. in assoc. with the Drawing Society, Inc. by Harper. 1976. 480p. illus., some color. bibliog. index. LC 75-37156. ISBN 0-06-014068-2. $50; pap. ISBN 0-06-014069-0. $10.95. GRAPHIC ARTS/ART

A fine, belated Bicentennial present—and a first attempt at such comprehensive coverage. Stebbins has truly thrown his net widely, beginning with topographical watercolors of the explorers and ending with Smithson's "Spiral Jetty." Most of the subject matter is treated chronologically; watercolor and pastel are studied separately, and so is folk art, and, somewhat oddly, turn-of-the-century illustration—perhaps to allow for the inclusion of Remington and Russell whom he could not otherwise bear to include. Inevitably, Stebbins is best when he pauses to analyze the work of major figures (he is especially good on Homer and De Kooning) and less effective in his conscientious chronicling of many artists working in a particular style. The discussion of technical and stylistic developments is always lucid. In addition, he surveys the literature of drawing, discusses exhibitions and collections, and considers the artistic climate of particular periods. There are 360 illustrations, about 50 in fine color and an excellent classified bibliography.—Margot Karp, Pratt Inst. Lib., Brooklyn

Architecture

Historic Buildings of Massachusetts: photographs from the historic American buildings survey.

Scribners. (Historic Buildings). 1976. 320p. photogs. LC 76-12600. ISBN 0-684-14567-7. $14.95; pap. ISBN 0-684-14560-X. $7.95. ARCHITECTURE

This handsome catalog provides a list of measured drawings, photographs, and written documentation on Massachusetts architecture, drawn from the federally administered Historic American Buildings Survey. Based on a 1965 publication of the Massachusetts Historical Commission, this edition includes some 500 photographs from the HABS collection, many of which have never been published before. Unfortunately no attempt was made to include documentation collected since 1965 or to check which buildings have been demolished since that time. It is also regrettable that no effort was made to reproduce the high-quality measured drawings which are the backbone of the HABS collection. Despite these limitations, the catalog provides a superb survey of colonial and federal style architecture in the Bay State—and a fascinating glimpse into this unique architectural archive.—H. Ward Jandl, National Register of Historic Places, Washington, D.C.

Sergeant, John. Frank Lloyd Wright's Usonian Houses: the case for organic architecture.

Whitney Lib. of Design: Watson-Guptill. 1976. 207p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-7281. ISBN 0-8230-7177-4. $24.50. ARCHITECTURE

This scholarly yet readable book documents the history, design, and social implications of Wright's Usonian houses—residences designed between 1936 and 1941 which made use of prefabrication and simplified construction techniques to provide the average modern family with low-cost, high-quality housing. While only a few of these houses were ever built, their influence on American residential design was tremendous; they became, in fact, the prototype for the modern ranch-style house of today. Well-illustrated and carefully researched, Sergeant's book documents the impact of Wright's "populist social" program on American life and discusses the relevancy of his Usonian ideals to the lifestyles and environmental and energy concerns of the 1970's.—H. Ward Jandl, National Register of Historic Places, Washington, D.C.

Decorative Arts & Crafts

Coskey, Evelyn. Christmas Crafts for Everyone.

Abingdon. 1976. 144p. illus. photogs. bibliog. index. LC 76-4916. ISBN 0-687-07815-6. $8.95. CRAFTS

Coskey gives clear and simple directions for making various Christmas decorations and explains a bit of the history behind each and the customs that surround it. There are directions for advent calendars, creche scenes, tree ornaments, baked foods and decorations, yarn crafts, and items made of paper. Recommended for school children as well as adults looking for something different to try this year.—Judith Odiorne, Wells, Me.

Guild, Vera P. Good Housekeeping Book of Quilt Making.
Hearst Bks. 1976. 159p. illus., some color. LC 76-4189. ISBN 0-87851-017-6. $10.95. CRAFTS
Attractive color illustrations, general directions for cutting and quilting, and patterns for making 26 pieced and appliquéd quilted items make up this volume. The problem is it's all been done before, and done more completely and more beautifully in other works such as Carter Houck & Myron Miller's American Quilts and How To Make Them (Scribners, 1975), Lenice Bacon's American Patchwork Quilts (LJ 10/15/73), and Alfred Lewis' The Mountain Artisans' Quilting Book (LJ 8/73). Unless a library is trying to collect everything published on quilting, other books would make a better first choice or addition to the crafts collection.—Nina Kahn Fenenbock, formerly with City-County Lib., Glasgow, Mont.

House, R. Thom. Creative Sand Art.
Grosset. 1976. 144p. illus., some color. LC 75-34874. ISBN 0-448-13340-7. $7.99; pap. ISBN 0-448-12357-6. $5.95. CRAFTS
The hobbyist looking for clearly written, well-illustrated instructions on sand art will be pleased with this book. In addition to the numerous line drawings used for instruction, there are illustrations of finished designs and 16 pages of color plates. Preliminary exercises are followed by chapters giving step-by-step instructions for numerous types of designs—seascapes, skies, flowers, animals, etc.—of various degrees of complexity. Suggestions are given for the purchase of colored sands by brand name, the composition of the potting mixture, and sealers to use for the finished product. A good introduction for beginners.—Linda Pletzke, Northwestern Univ. Lib., Evanston, Ill.

Laury, Jean Ray. A Treasury of Needlecraft Gifts for the New Baby.
Taplinger. 1976. 191p. color illus. LC 76-12186. ISBN 0-8008-7858-2. $12.95. CRAFTS
This book contains hundreds of ideas for gifts which can be sewn or embroidered (as opposed to knitted or crocheted). Many items are relatively inexpensive and easy to make. Major sections include gifts for baby to wear, for baby's room, for play, and for going out. The dolls and quilts are especially nice. More inclusive than its title suggests, gift ideas are also offered for siblings, parents, and grandparents. Recommended.—Olivia Opello, Inst. for Pharmaceuticals, Univ. of Mississippi, University

Méras, Phyllis. Miniatures: how to make them, use them, sell them.
Houghton. 1976. 150p. illus. LC 76-16493. ISBN 0-395-24344-0. $12.95. CRAFTS
As the interest in miniatures continues to grow, Méras combines a survey of the current state of collecting and con-

ENCYCLOPAEDIA OF THE MUSICAL THEATRE
Stanley Green
An alphabetically arranged fact-crammed, scrupulously researched reference volume on the musical theater both in New York and London. Included are backgrounds, plots, casts, and credits of over 200 musicals, long runs, awards, and a discography. $17.50

BALLET GUIDE
Walter Terry
The dean of dance critics presents the background, listings, credits, synopses, and descriptions of more than five hundred of the world's major ballets, as well as a capsule history of the ballet, a guide to "How to Look at Ballet," and a glossary of ballet terms. Illustrated with photographs. $15.00

THE BEST PLAYS OF 1975-1976
The Burns Mantle Yearbook of the Theater,
Otis L. Guernsey Jr., Editor
The latest edition in the outstanding reference series on the American theater highlights the year's "ten best" (including Chicago, The Norman Conquests, Travesties, and Pacific Overtures). "...A theater lover's must."—Clive Barnes. Drawings by Al Hirschfeld. 48 pages of photos. $17.95

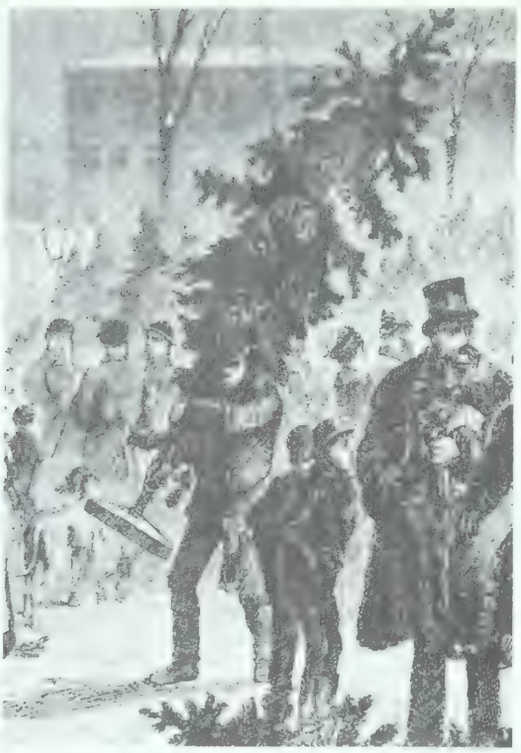
THE RITZ AND OTHER PLAYS
Terrence McNally
This collection represents the work of one of America's most important young playwrights. Included are four full length plays plus two short plays: The Ritz, Bad Habits, Where Has Tommy Flowers Gone?, "...And Things That Go Bump in the Night," Whiskey, Bringing It All Back Home. $9.95

THE NUTCRACKER
The Story of the New York City Ballet's Production Told in Pictures
Martha Swope
Introduction by Lincoln Kirstein
Filled with all the wonders of the classic Christmas production of The Nutcracker, this is a great gift for both children and adults. $6.95

DODD MEAD

ART

ART



from "The Christmas Tree Book" by Phillip Snyder (Viking)

structing by professionals with how-to suggestions and patterns for the beginner. The plans and suggestions for furniture and accessories (metal and soft goods, food, etc.) include a list of materials, suggestions for looking for offbeat things that fit the miniature world and clear instructions for completing projects. The book is enticing, but it makes clear that the miniaturest is working at an exacting craft and, if he intends to become a professional, he must be a perfectionist.—Ann M. Friedman, Montgomery County Pub. Libs., Md.

Naar, Jon & Molly Siple. Living in One Room.

Random. 1976. illus. ISBN 0-394-40846-2. $10.95; Vintage pap. ISBN 0-394-72076-8. $5.95. INTERIOR DEC

The one-room environments depicted and analyzed here make studio living seem eminently feasible, challenging, and appealing. Emphasis is on organizing space and designating functional areas. Although many of the apartments belong to design professionals or were "done" with outside help, the ideas are adaptable and generally not too costly. Careful planning yields either spacious effects or aesthetic clutter, as Naar's excellent photographs show. With Siple, a designer and shelter-magazine editor, he presents numerous solutions to space and structural limitations. Varied approaches to sleeping, cooking, storage, and at-home working areas are particularly helpful. Text and photographs are well-coordinated. This is a sensible and good-looking book, useful for anyone's studio, loft, or garret.—Mary Pradt Ziegler, Brooklyn P.L.

Snyder, Phillip V. The Christmas Tree Book.

Viking. 1976. 176p. photogs., some color by Roy Coggin. bibliog. index. LC 76-40224. ISBN 0-670-22115-5. $10.95. DEC ARTS

Snyder, a collector of tree ornaments, has put together a fascinating compendium. He tells of the history of the fir tree in America and traditions surrounding it, and describes in detail various types of decorations—glass ornaments, candles, sugar plums, Santa Clauses, electric lamps, and the modern plastic ornaments. The inclusion of some full-color illustrations provides a nice magical touch. This title is the perfect companion to The Trees of Christmas (LJ 10/1/69), compiled by Edna Metcalfe. Recommended.—Helen Wright, Santa Fe Springs Lib., Calif.

Vidler, Virginia. American Indian Antiques: arts and artifacts of the Northeast.

A. S. Barnes. 1976. 156p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 74-9302. ISBN 0-498-01495-9. $20. DEC ARTS

Indian antiques are defined herein as objects made between 1760 and 1900 (about) by American Indians in the northeast. Since most of the things described and pictured by Vidler are neither tremendously attractive, original, nor interesting, one must conclude that this is a book for devoted collectors, and a straggling attempt to produce another American Indian book. Some of the items shown are baskets, beadwork, cooking utensils, and cornhusk dolls. The writing, along with the conception as a whole, is at best thoroughly mediocre; libraries will not find it difficult to do better.—Judith McPheron, Oklahoma County Lib., Edmond

Photography

Brassaï. The Secret Paris of the 30's.

Pantheon. 1976. unpaged. tr. by Richard Miller. illus. LC 76-9976. ISBN 0-394-40841-1. $17.95. PHOTOG

Released to coincide with an exhibition in New York City, this book will fascinate many viewers. Brassaï photographed only after dark and concentrated on the seamy side of Parisian night-life, that of the prostitutes, transvestites, and opium addicts. However, in spite of the insinuating title, there is nothing cheap or merely titillating here. Brassaï's text offers recollections of the period and of his experiences in taking the photographs, but unfortunately it is poorly written. It is the photos taken by available light in the cabarets and on the streets which re-create, with honesty and immediacy, a world of darkness and desire.—Robert Enequist, Coll. of Insurance Lib., New York

Lady Ottoline's Album: snapshots and portraits of her famous contemporaries (and of herself), photographed for the most part by Lady Ottoline Morrell.

Knopf. 1976. 117p. ed. by Carolyn G. Heilbrun. intro. by Lord David Cecil. fwd. by Julian Morrell Vinogradoff. index. LC 76-13678. ISBN 0-394-48758-3. $12.50. LIT/PHOTOG

When Lady Ottoline Morrell was entertaining her famous weekend guests, she usually had the presence of mind to circulate among them with camera in hand. The nearly 200 photographs gathered here were culled from 12 albums, and they're utterly marvelous. We find Virginia Woolf in animated conversation, E. M. Forster wearing trousers rather too short for him, André Gide looking like a major international criminal, T. S. Eliot like a confident young business executive, W. B. Yeats like an aged art student—and this is to name but a few. The text consists of snippets from memoirs, letters, and diaries in which the guests talk engagingly about each other and themselves. The venerable Lord David Cecil, himself a visitor at Garsington while an Oxford undergraduate, supplies a genial introduction. This book is a delight.—Keith Cushman, Dept. of English, Univ. of North Carolina at Greensboro

O'Neal, Hank. A Vision Shared.

St. Martin's. 1976. 320p. fwd. by Bernarda Shahn. photogs. LC 76-5381. $39.50; until Jan. 1, 1977, $35. PHOTOG

From 1935 to 1943 a small group of dedicated photographers employed by the federal government traveled through the country to record and interpret the life of Depression America. Directed by Roy Stryker, an economist, they made some 270,000 photographs. Since they worked under the wing of the Resettlement Administration and later the Farm Security Administration, their primary goal was to document rural poverty in the hope of building public pressure for measures of relief and rehabilitation. Such extraordinary artists as Walker Evans, Dorothea Lange, and Ben Shahn worked at one time or another for Stryker, creating brilliant and powerful images of the human suffering brought about by both social and natural forces in the Thirties. In recent years several books have dealt with aspects of the achievements of this remarkable crew (see Walker Evans, Photographs for the Farm Security Administration, 1935-1938, and Roy Stryker and Nancy Wood, In This Proud Land; LJ 5/1/74). But A Vision Shared makes a new and unique contribution. O'Neal shifts the focus from the guiding role of Stryker to the nature and talents of the individual photographers. There is a brief biographical sketch of each of the major photographers, based upon interviews by O'Neal or others. How the nine men and the two women saw their own contribution to "The File" is central, and the quoted comments allow the reader to share their view. The 250 photographs offered us are rarely the familiar images seen in so many other places. They cannot replace those superb pictures, but they extend our knowledge of the unit's work and they are what the photographers themselves chose as most representative of the huge body of unknown pictures. They are reproduced in very good duotone process, uncropped, and mostly in 8″ x 10″ size. Each print has the complete caption as filed in the Library of Congress, and the index gives the LC negative numbers. O'Neal's energy and diligence are admirable: I wish his copy editor had shared those traits. This is a valuable book for anyone interested in social history, documentary photography, or the artist's vision of the human spirit under stress.—Milton Meltzer, New York

Riefenstahl, Leni. The People of Kau.

Harper. 1976. 224p. color photogs. by the author. tr. from German by J. Maxwell Brownjohn. LC 76-5526. ISBN 0-06-013569-7. $25.

CULTURAL STUDY/PHOTOG

The beauty captured by these photographs is entrancing. Riefenstahl transmits to us images of a people who celebrate the beauty of the body—by anointing, coloring, adorning, but never covering it. Particularly striking is her portrayal of the Kau art of masking, with one exciting asymmetrical graphic following another, each an original, each self-painted on the face of the man. But these images are seductive, and one must resist looking at these pleasurable forms and colors as works of art—for they are people. Then one sees the distance in their eyes, and a lack of communication between the photographer and the subject. This eminent German-born documentary filmmaker and photographer explains in her brief text that unlike the photographs in her first pictorial study of an African people, The Last of the Nuba (LJ 12/15/74), the Kau photos had to be snatched from events which she attended uninvited or unheeded. As art The People of Kau is eminently successful; but as anthropology it is highly questionable. A book of photographs examining a remote culture without providing some information about that culture is not sufficient to impart a balanced understanding of its subject.—Gayla Cook, Dept. of Communications, Antioch Coll., Washington, D.C.

BIOGRAPHY

Chancellor, John. Charles Darwin.

Taplinger. 1976. 230p. photogs., some color. index. LC 76-5175. ISBN 0-8008-1434-7. $13.95.

BIOG

Whether or not evolution and natural selection were ideas whose time had come in the mid-19th Century, Darwin's work brought them to the attention of the public, triggered the intense debates between his supporters and religious conservatives, and ultimately established them as fundamental biological processes. Historians of science have rightly emphasized his impact on biology and social thought, but many facets of his personality remain puzzling. Chancellor balances our knowledge of Darwin the naturalist with a focus on Darwin the person. He discusses scientific issues in sufficient depth to provide a context for Darwin's personal life, but the reader will learn more about Darwin's early years as a sociable medical and divinity student and about his later life as a retiring invalid than about Alfred Wallace's independent development of a parallel theory of evolution or about the raging controversies surrounding Darwin's work. The illustrations—mostly reproductions of contemporary portraits and drawings—are superb. Unfortunately the text is flawed by several inconsistencies in dates. Recommended.—John S. Henderson, Dept. of Anthropology, Cornell Univ.

Cliff, Tony. Lenin. Vol. 1: Building the Party. Vol. 2: All Power to the Soviets.

Urizen Bks., dist. by Dutton. 1976. Vol. 1, 398p. Vol. 2, 412p. ea. vol: index. Vol. 1, $15; pap. $6.95. Vol. 2, $17.50; pap. $7.95. POL SCI/BIOG

Unfortunately, this study's merits are almost overwhelmed by its manifest deficiencies. Certainly Cliff has produced a lucid political biography, one which will appeal to readers with a wide range of abilities and interests. By attempting to depict, whenever possible, "the interrelations between the working class, the party and Lenin," Cliff has placed his subject in clear, recognizable perspective, and this is no mean accomplishment. However, much of Cliff's material consists of lengthy series of quotations taken from the writings of Lenin and other members of the Marxist pantheon. The author does not appear to have utilized many of the pertinent primary sources, and his sympathy for Lenin often bars objectivity. These first two volumes of a tentative trilogy conclude with the Bolshevik takeover in 1917. Generous print size and roomy margins suggest that they could easily have been compacted into a single, substantial volume.—Mark R. Yerburgh, SUNY at Albany Lib.

Cogley, John. A Canterbury Tale: experiences and reflections, 1916-1976.

Seabury Pr. Dec. 1976. 208p. $8.95. AUTOBIOG

In this gentle, low-key autobiography, a longtime editor and columnist for the Catholic weekly Commonweal vividly recalls one of the most turbulent periods in our nation's religious history. Born in Chicago to an Irish-American family, Cogley grew up during the Depression and was educated in parochial schools with the intention of entering the priesthood. He eventually found his "true vocation" in public affairs journalism, becoming a leading advocate of progressive Catholicism during the 1950's. Cogley was a friend and associate of Dorothy Day and later of Father H. A. Reinhold. Toward the end of his life he "transferred his Christian allegiance" to the Anglican Communion and became an Episcopalian priest. Cogley's style is anecdotal and often digressive but his lively narrative captures the reader's attention and holds it fast. This is American cultural history in the best sense of that term: colorful, interesting, and full of insights.—Jack A. Clarke, Univ. of Wisconsin Library Sch., Madison

Debo, Angie. Geronimo: the man, his place, his time.

Univ. of Oklahoma Pr. (Civilization of the American Indian). Dec. 1976. 350p. illus. maps. bibliog. LC 76-13858. ISBN 0-8061-1333-2. $14.95.

HIST/BIOG

Debo, who has been writing about Indians and the Southwest for more than 30 years, brings a rich store of knowledge to this first full-length biography of Geronimo. Based on careful research and judicious sifting of the evidence, Debo's book is a well-written account of the turbulent eight decades from the Era of Good Feeling to the Age of the Progressives, showing how

"A frank, wholly absorbing account"*

MEN, MONEY & MAGIC

THE STORY OF DOROTHY SCHIFF

JEFFREY POTTER

"Charismatic, witty, restless and outspokenly independent, Dorothy Schiff's life story makes terrific copy...the narrative sympathetically explores Mrs. Schiff's four marriages and numerous affairs, her friendships and encounters with the Kennedys, Stevenson, Nixon, Einstein, many others, and the struggles of the Post over 30 years."—Publishers Weekly.* "FDR's paramour or not, she can hardly miss...her memos of latter-day meetings...bristle with privileged remarks and close observations."—Kirkus Reviews. 66 photos, index.

SBN 698-10666-0 $9.95

COWARD, McCANN & GEOGHEGAN, INC.

200 Madison Avenue, New York 10016

Geronimo was caught in the tragic web of white history. To the invading settlers, as well as to the people in the East and the government in Washington, the Apaches became the focus of national hatred and fear, and Geronimo the preeminent symbol of Indian resistance. Because many of the sources available for such a biography are problematic, this study cannot be definitive. Yet it is likely to remain the standard work on the subject, even though some readers may object to Debo's devoting of a third of the study to Geronimo's 20 years in captivity.—Peter J. Coleman, Dept. of History, Univ. of Illinois at Chicago Circle

Hosier, Helen Hooiman. Kathryn Kuhlman: the life she led, the legacy she left.

Revell. 1976. 160p. photogs. LC 76-18277. ISBN 0-8007-0827-X. $5.95; pap. ISBN 0-8007-0826-1. $2.95. REL/BIOG

Conductor of "miracle services" which drew thousands in search of salvation and healing, well-known radio and television personality, author of books translated into multiple languages, Kuhlman was a deeply committed, vivacious, enigmatic, and controversial figure. Though it attempts to be a complete biography, this book is rather a tribute to Kuhlman and a defense against her critics. There are unexplained gaps in the coverage of her life suggesting incomplete research and hasty writing. The book's worshipful approach will please Kuhlman's many followers. Still, the definitive biography remains to be written.—Robert A. Morrison, Santa Clara County Lib., San Jose, Calif.

Isherwood, Christopher. Christopher and His Kind, 1929-1939.

Farrar. 1976. 339p. $10. LIT/MEMOIR

Homer's Odysseus has nothing on Isherwood for varieties of voyages, peripetias, and tackings about. While it is doubtful that he will long hold a high place in British-American letters, he will remain important as a minor writer in the circle of writers whose luminaries were W. H. Auden and E. M. Forster, with whom he shared certain heterodox views on sexuality, as well as antifascism and Marxism. These associations and viewpoints are adequately, if delicately inscribed in Isherwood's memoir which is written from a third-person point-of-view, somewhat in the style of Virginia Woolf's Orlando, but lacking her verve. Much space is given over to his European and American itineraries. He impresses this reviewer as a sort of latter-day Oscar Wilde, but, unfortunately, with little of Wilde's talent and force. Obviously, the book is indispensable to university libraries, if to no others.—John R. Marvin, Dept. of English, Univ. of Massachusetts, Boston

Kimbrough, Emily. Better Than Oceans.

Harper. 1976. 240p. drawings by Mircea Vasiliu. illus. ISBN 0-06-012371-0. $8.95. PER NAR

Better Than Oceans covers two barge excursions Kimbrough and several of her friends embarked upon during the past few years. The majority of the book is devoted to her trip through the canals and rivers of France. The second journey took place on the Hudson River and its environs. Kimbrough is a mannerly writer who offers only the mildest anecdotes and has only good things to say of her fellow travelers, among whom were such notables as Sam Jaffee and his wife. There is an audience for this type of book in most public libraries; it should be purchased accordingly.—Saul J. Amdursky, Albion P.L. Mich.

Kraft, Barbara. The Restless Spirit: journal of a Gemini.

Les Femmes Pub. Dec. 1976. 204p. pref. by Anaïs Nin. LC 76-11372. ISBN 0-89087-917-6. pap. $4.95. PER NAR

Some journals reveal fascinating or unusual lives, but often we read them not for their intrinsic value but for insights into the minds of figures whose public work has already been acknowledged. Apart from this, journals are necessarily insulated in their ideas, sometimes obscure and repetitious. Kraft seems a bright, sensitive woman, but this record of her struggle to find herself as a woman and writer is self-indulgent and commonplace. Since her main character is her own psyche, she does not develop those around her. As a result, the journal is peopled with stick figures; her husband, her lover, a sympathetic therapist, a beneficent mentor (Anaïs Nin). Kraft's husband is portrayed as the stock villain of feminist literature failing to recognize his wife's independent spirit. The writing is full of clichés ("he wants to possess my soul"; "in love with love itself"). Dramatically, philosophically, aesthetically, therefore, the journal fails.—Rita Weinberg Tesler, Dept. of English, Jersey City State Coll.

Lasky, William R. with James F. Scheer. Tell It on the Mountain.

Doubleday. 1976. 271p. illus. LC 76-2998. ISBN 0-385-11366-8. $7.95. AUTOBIOG

Written with unchecked sincerity, this combined memoir and sermon makes one wish that conversion stories were not so embarrassingly saccharine. The author, born in 1921, is the son of the late Hollywood mogul Jesse Lasky. He tells numerous anecdotes about his father and about his opulent childhood. When he grew up, he became a minor film and T.V. director. In the early 1970's he was "born again" into pentecostal Christianity and refers to himself thereafter as a "completed Jew who has accepted Jesus Christ as my Messiah." For a time he hitchhiked around Southern California delivering this message to those who gave him a lift. It would have been interesting to read about some of the comments this witnessing must have elicited, but, alas, the narrative becomes more and more suffocatingly wholesome. One scoffs not at the author's spiritual experiences, but rather at his treacly view of them.—Sammy Staggs, Columbia Univ. Libs., New York

McCracken, James A. Innocents at Sea.

Readers Digest Pr., dist. by Crowell. 1976. 288p. ISBN 0-88349-110-9. $7.95. PER NAR

A thoroughly enjoyable, unpretentious story of day sailing on the Long Island Sound and along the New England coast. McCracken makes no false claims for his seamanship and is quick to admit and illustrate his errors. His complaints, including a dislike for storms and discomfort, an eccentric motor, and a lack of cash, are standard for many sailors. Equally typical are the author's love for the sea and the boats he has owned. Many weekend captains will be able to identify with McCracken's book.—Saul J. Amdursky, Albion P.L., Mich.

Meyers, Michael, M.D. Goodbye, Columbus, Hello Medicine.

Morrow. 1976. 288p. LC 76-15403. ISBN 0-688-03090-4. $8.95. MED/PER NAR

Meyers has a rather flippant style of writing as well as a disorganized way of darting between his TV and movie acting roles (he played the younger brother in Goodbye, Columbus) and the drama of his medical school and internship experiences in an inner-city hospital in Newark, New Jersey. His descriptions of anatomy and pathology classes, emergency and operating room experiences are grossly vivid; medical jargon is always explained. Meyers does rescue the humanity and fun out of what must be a grueling experience for medical students and interns: long hours without sleep, responsibility in life-

"A visionary and deeply troubled man"

Oates, Stephen B. With Malice Towards None: the life of Abraham Lincoln.

Harper. Feb. 1977. 416p. illus. index. ISBN 0-06-013283-3. $15.95. HIST/BIOG

Lincoln resides securely in the pantheon of our gods, yet this biography presents him as a most human diety. Oates writes with lucidity and a proper touch of poignancy about this "complex, paradoxical, and richly human" man, as his thoroughly professional presentation traces Lincoln's evolution from an inscrutable lawyer to that most challenging of anomalies: a pragmatic politician with a sense of principle. He shows that along the route of Lincoln's career, victories were few and mostly bitter, with little personal satisfaction. While this is by no means a "debunking" biography, Oates's desire to humanize makes Lincoln's errors and shortcomings stand out. We see a Lincoln who grievously misinterpreted Southern feelings about secession, who clung tenaciously to the plans for Negro colonization, and who approached the abolition of slavery slowly and apprehensively. In all, Oates gives us a compelling biography of "a visionary and deeply troubled man."—Mark Norton Schatz, Ann Arrundell County Historical Society, Glen Burnie, Md.

and-death situations, learning while doing.—Ellen R. Paterson, SUNY at Cortland Lib.

Patterson, Paul. Crazy Women in the Rafters: memories of a Texas boyhood.

Univ. of Oklahoma Pr. 1976. 255p. LC 74-34035. ISBN 0-8061-1280-8. $8.95. PER NAR

Thanks to his good-humored approach, the author turns the story of his poverty-stricken childhood into a readable and moving account of everyday life in rural west Texas in the 1910's and 1920's. The dominant figure in the book is the narrator's father, a foot-loose ex-cowboy who moved his family 36 times in 24 years. Mother Patterson gave up and left after the 29th move, but father and the children carried on alone until his remarriage in 1927, which is when the main narrative ends. More like the 19th Century than the 20th in general atmosphere and life style, this strangely arresting narrative will be chiefly of interest to libraries in the southwest.—Thomas M. Bogie, Dallas P.L.

Potter, Jeffrey. Men, Money and Magic: the story of Dorothy Schiff.

Coward. 1976. 352p. photogs. LC 74-30608. ISBN 0-698-10666-0. $9.95. COMM/BIOG

This biography of the owner–publisher of the New York Post was written in collaboration with the subject and includes many quotations from her personal papers. Born into a wealthy New York family, Schiff has known many famous people, both in America and in Europe, and some of these are discussed at great length here. The book describes Schiff's four marriages and numerous love affairs—including one with FDR—and her experiences with politics and psychoanalysis. Though it does describe her work at the Post in some detail, especially during the 1962 newspaper strike, it does not offer any new insights into the history of journalism or the role of the press. It is a gossipy work, short on objectivity and psychological insight. Still, there is likely to be a demand for this book.—Sandy Whiteley, Northwestern Univ. Lib., Evanston, Ill.

Reich, Charles. The Sorcerer of Bolinas Reef.

Random. 1976. 250p. $8.95. AUTOBIOG

An awkward, intense, intimate autobiography by the author of The Greening of America. Reich traces his life from an uptight Washington lawyer hobnobbing with Justices Hugo Black and "Bill Douglas" (plus some lesser souls), through a decade of teaching at Yale, and finally to "freedom" as a writer in San Francisco. His sexual repressions and their resolution are explicitly and painfully revealed. At times Reich vacillates between self-righteousness and naive idealism, still displaying a searching intellect behind it all. His credo is, "Stop doing what you don't want to do." (Nice, unless you're dependent on what you're doing to support yourself and others.) His hopes for improving the political and physical environment lie with increasing personal communication and self-growth. Some will scoff that this is highly superficial; others intent on finding life's meaning and coping with existence in an impersonal world will find solace and companionship in Reich's trials and resolutions.—Ruth E. Almeida, North County Lib., Glen Burnie, Md.

Roosevelt, James with Bill Libby. My Parents: a differing view.

Playboy, dist. by S. & S. 1976. 345p. ISBN 0-87223-476-2. $12.50. MEMOIR

This is not the sensational book one might have expected it to be, following as it is in the wake of Elliott Roosevelt's An Untold Story (Putnam, 1973) and Joseph Lash's Eleanor and Franklin (LJ 9/15/71). In contrast to these revelations concerning the private lives of the late President and his wife, this new book contains the rather restrained and thoughtful memoirs of their eldest son. He offers his perspective on their lives and on the conditions placed upon his own life by their fame. While James occasionally differs in specific interpretations from his brother's account (e.g., in his discussion of the nature of his father's relationship with Missy LeHand) he generally adds little that is new. The book is poorly organized, tending to ramble on occasion and to repeat the same material in different contexts; yet, in general, its judgments are balanced and add another perspective on this now rather overworked story.—Scott Wright, Coll. of St. Thomas Lib., St. Paul, Minn.

Thomas, Lowell & Edward Jablonski. Doolittle: a biography.

Doubleday. 1976. 368p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-21247. ISBN 0-385-06495-0. $8.95. BIOG

Doolittle's contributions to aeronautical history go much further than the famous Tokyo raid of World War II, and this book helps put his career in perspective. When he received a doctorate in aeronautics from M.I.T. in 1928, Doolittle became one of a handful of officers in military aviation to have an advanced degree. During World War II, Doolittle made significant contributions to air-power doctrine and also commanded the Eighth Air Force in Europe. Thomas is an old acquaintance of Doolittle's; Jablonski has written several studies of the European air war. Although the result of their collaboration is a quite readable biography, scholars will regret the lack of both citations and a worthwhile bibliography. The book is especially suited to public libraries.—Roger E. Bilstein, Univ. of Houston at Clear Lake City, Houston

Tobias, Andrew. Fire and Ice: the story of Charles Revson—the man who built the Revlon empire.

Morrow. 1976. 282p. photogs. LC 76-6124. ISBN 0-688-03023-8. $10. BUS/BIOG

This biography of Revson is a readable work, but not exactly the "classic" one reviewer, quoted on the dust jacket, tells us it is. Nor is "Turning the pages . . . as much as fun as counting money." Still, anyone who has built an empire that is a legend in its own time has to be a fascinating figure. Tobias seems bent on emphasizing the more negative aspects of Revson's character, suggesting as the basis for most of his behavior an inferiority complex that is the result of small physical stature.—Susan S. DiMattia, Commack P.L., N.Y.

BUSINESS & ECONOMICS

Abel, I. W. Collective Bargaining: labor relations in steel, then and now.

Columbia Univ. Pr. 1976. 84p. ISBN 0-915604-05-1. $6.95. HIST/LABOR

Abel, president for the past 11 years of the United Steelworkers of America, has been an important participant in organized labor's struggle since the 1930's. In this book, based on three lectures delivered in 1975 at Carnegie-Mellon University's Benjamin F. Fairless Memorial Lecture series, Abel attempts to trace the development of the steelworkers union and its relationship with the steel companies. It is unfortunate that he has not expanded upon his original presentation; still, those libraries with an interest in industrial relations will want to add this slender and somewhat overpriced volume to their collections.—Steven Wecker, Lehman Coll. Lib., CUNY

Doyle, Michael & David Straus. How To Make Meetings Work: the new interaction method.

Wyden, dist. by McKay. 1976. ISBN 0-671-22403-4. $8.95.

Heirs, Ben & Gordon Pehrson. The Mind of the Organization: a study of the interrelationship between the decision-thinking processes of the human and the decision-thinking processes of organizations.

Harper. Jan. 1977. 128p. index. ISBN 0-06-011818-0. $8.95. BUS

Both of these books discuss how people think together in organizations, but they differ widely in style and effectiveness. Although The Mind of the Organization was written for "busy senior executives," neither executives nor others are likely to find reading it worth their time. The argument that an organization has a mind of its own is presented with sloppy logic, digressions, and repetitions. The strongest section gives practical pointers on identifying and reducing barriers to the flow of ideas in an organization.

THE TREASURER'S HANDBOOK

Ed. J. Fred Weston and Maurice B. Goudzwaard

78 Contributing Leaders in Finance
•
57 Chapters
•
1210 Pages

Written essentially by business and financial executives for financial decision makers. A new, original, practical, idea-filled book. Belongs in the business reference section of every public library—in special libraries catering to all levels of business management—in the library of every school of business.

$30.00

Dow Jones-Irwin
1818 Ridge Road, Homewood, Ill. 60430

How To Make Meetings Work is more modest in scope and more successful. It is oriented to government, businesses, public meetings, associations, and even families. It offers an alternative to the win/lose solutions generated by the parliamentary procedure typified by Robert's Rules of Order. Doyle and Straus's "interaction method" encourages the formation of consensus solutions that satisfy all parties. The jargon-free style and the wealth of down-to-earth ideas, such as how to cope with the doubting Thomas, whisperer, loudmouth, or busybody in your group, should make this book useful in public, as well as college and business school libraries.—Judith C. A. Plotz, Univ. of Pittsburgh Lib.

Imfeld, Al. China as a Model of Development.

Orbis. 1976. 159p. tr. by Matthew J. O'Connell. bibliog. LC 76-4827. ISBN 0-88344-053-9. $5.95. ECON

Brevity, simple prose, and clear exposition are hallmarks of this book, and for these things alone it is worth recommending. It was obviously written with a general audience in mind, since there is little academic jargon or superfluous data. On the contrary, statistics are used only to illustrate discussion of the general principles adopted by the Chinese themselves. For beginners especially, I know of few other books that so cogently sum up the distinctive features of China's development style, the philosophy underlying it, and its most material results. A brief comment is added to each chapter on the significance of China's path for other Third World countries. Because the author's writing lacks a critical edge, some people may read into it a Maoist bias, but they should not be put off.—Maxwell Brem, Dept. of Sociology, Ryerson Polytechnical Inst., Toronto, Canada

Kamoroff, Bernard. Small-Time Operator: how to start your own small business, keep your books, pay your taxes, & stay out of trouble.

Bell Springs Pub., Box 322, Laytonville, Calif. 95454. 1976. 192p. illus. photogs. index. LC 76-29817. ISBN 0-917510-00-3. pap. $5.95.

Taetzsch, Lyn. Opening Your Own Retail Store.

Regnery. Feb. 1977. 224p. LC 76-6293. ISBN 0-8092-8285-2. $14.95; pap. ISBN 0-8092-7981-9. $6.95.

Weber, Judith & Karol White. Profits at Your Doorstep: a complete guide to setting up a successful business in your own home.

Hawthorn. 1976. 224p. LC 76-15428. ISBN 0-8015-8842-1. $7.95. BUS

How-to books are much sought after by fledgling entrepreneurs, and the above titles reflect the best and worst of the genre. Kamoroff has put together a remarkable step-by-step manual that is a delight to read. All the nitty-gritty of business is here—permits, bookkeeping, taxes, and more. Taetzsch, too, has come off with a top performance, going deep into the financial aspects of business and beyond—selling, promotion, decor, and display, though her prose style and design lack the excitement and bravado of Kamoroff's work. Profits at Your Doorstep is far from a complete guide to setting up a business at home. Written somewhat crassly, the book spews forth with one money-making idea after another, but there is little of the much-needed technical information here. Public libraries would do well to ignore this title and invest instead in the Kamoroff and Taetzsch works.—Mark Leggett, Knoxville-Knox County P.L., Tenn.

Matthews, Kathy. On Your Own: 99 alternatives to a 9-5 job.

Random. Jan. 1977. 157p. bibliog. ISBN 0-394-40980-9. $10; Vintage pap. $3.95.

Strunk, Frank C. The Great American Dream: making money in a small business of your own.

Independent Business Information Services Corp., 255 North Stonestreet Ave., Rockville, Maryland 20850. 1976. 208p. bibliog. LC 76-17413. $12.95. BUS

On Your Own is a useful little item that contains descriptions of 99 mostly unusual ways for people to make a living or to pick up a few extra dollars in their spare time. Listed for most of the suggested vocations and avocations are the skills required, the best location, the investment needed, the potential income, and some of the relevant associations and periodicals. The book includes some traditional occupations—cab driving, substitute teaching, holding garage sales—but it is most interesting for the unorthodox possibilities it presents: collecting fireflies, growing fingernails, contributing to a sperm bank, monitoring TV commercials, serving as a mercenary, and such. This book should find a ready audience in most public libraries.

It is difficult to know who the intended audience is for Strunk's book. It's an odds-on probability that anyone who knows anything at all about business and finance will find it a terribly elementary job. It bears scant resemblance to the many books on going into business for oneself of the J. K. Lasser variety, being little more than a pep talk of sorts, a catalog of the author's experiences and preferences in his own ventures, and an outline in the most general terms of what should be considered when setting up a small business of the orthodox kind. Not recommended.—A. J. Anderson, Sch. of Library Science, Simmons Coll., Boston

Moggridge, D. E. John Maynard Keynes.

Penguin. (Modern Masters). Dec. 1976. 170p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-14-004319-5. pap. $2.50. BIOG/ECON

In this brief biography, Moggridge, joint editor of Keynes' collected writings, gives a clear account of Keynes' intellectual origins, beliefs, and ideas, while excluding all details of the economist's personal life. This is strictly a book of economic concepts. A sizeable chapter is devoted to the General Theory of Employment, Interest and Money—which probably ranks with Adam Smith's The Wealth of Nations as a benchmark in the development of economics. Indeed, Keynes was responsible for much of the framework of modern macroeconomic theory. Moggridge also believes that Keynes' greatest legacy has been the general acceptance of the notion that economic management is a necessary and normal activity of governments in advanced capitalist economies. Recommended for most libraries.—Ted Samore, Sch. of Library Science, Univ. of Wisconsin, Milwaukee

Pinto, Robert J. How To Save Taxes Through Estate Planning.

Dow Jones. 1976. 200p. index. LC 76-10099. ISBN 0-87128-502-9. $6.95. LAW/BUS

This is a clear explanation in layman's language of estate and gift taxes and estate planning. Especially helpful is the chapter on types of asset ownership in which the author explains why joint ownership for married partners is sometimes not the most advantageous way to hold assets. Although some blank forms are included, this is not a do-it-yourself book: the author strongly urges the reader to consult experts before writing a will or engaging in financial and estate planning. But, with the aid of this book, the layman will be more knowledgable when consulting lawyers, insurance agents, and accountants. The appendixes include a survey of state inheritance laws, and executor, administrator, and trustee fees. The massive Tax Reform Act of 1976 might change some of the specifics in the book, but the principles should remain the same. Recommended for all but the smallest public libraries.—Wayne D. Kryszak, District of Columbia P.L.

Scott, James C. The Moral Economy of the Peasant: rebellion and subsistence in Southeast Asia.

Yale Univ. Pr. 1976. index. LC 75-43334. ISBN 0-300-01862-2. $15. SOC SCI/ECON

In this major work, Scott analyzes the impact that colonialism and the extension of the world market system had on subsistence peasant economies. His thesis is, in brief, that as the increasing financial claims of landlords and the modern state came into conflict with the traditional subsistence ethic of the local community, peasants in many places were pushed below their margin of survival. Economic desperation, coupled with an aggrieved sense of justice, increased the potential for peasant rebellion, or where the power of the state was too great, led to a festering sense of discontent. Scott views peasants as political and moral actors defending their values as well as their individual security, making his book vital to an understanding of peasant politics.—Steven I. Levine, East Asian Inst., Columbia Univ.

Silk, Leonard. The Economists.

Basic Bks. 1976. 294p. index. LC 76-27741. ISBN 0-465-01810-6. $10.95. BIOG/ECON

This is the story of the life and ideas of five economists: Kenneth Boulding, Milton Friedman, J. K. Galbraith, Wassily Leontief, and Paul Samuelson. This skillful synthesis of biography and economic analysis is most successful when Silk deals with Galbraith and Boulding, since their writings have been directed toward developing a broad, coherent economic philosophy. When he compares Friedman with Samuelson, the former's policies are made to appear unconvincing because they are inextricably bound to his free-market philosophy. On the other hand, Samuelson's major contributions were to theoretical economics and Silk can more easily separate them from Samuelson's politics. This book is essential if America's greatest generation of economists and contemporary economic ideas are to be accurately assessed. However, unlike the economists in Robert Heilbroner's Worldly Philosophers, Silk's authors are alive to correct any mistakes.—Raymond L. Raab, Dept. of Economics, Univ. of Minnesota, Duluth

Sinha, Radha. Food and Poverty.

Holmes & Meier: Africana. 1976. 196p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-3727. ISBN 0-8419-0262-3. $17. INT AFFAIRS/ECON

The author covers the expected aspects of poverty and malnutrition in Third World countries: unemployment, land reform, agricultural credit and pricing policies, trade, aid, etc. Nevertheless, it is a curiously unsatisfying book. There is an abundance of fact and statistics, but too little analysis. It does offer an interesting comparison of the perspectives of the Club of Rome, Gandhi, and Mao in terms of their applicability to less developed countries, yet it does not make a significant contribution to the literature on economic development. Mahbubul Haq's recent book, The Poverty Curtain: Choices for the Third World (LJ 11/15/76), provides a more perceptive and analytic presentation of many of the same problems, although without the emphasis on food and agriculture.—Carol Holbrook, Univ. of Michigan Lib., Ann Arbor

Wucherer, Ruth. How To Sell Your Crafts.

Drake. 1976. 102p. illus. index. LC 75-13669. ISBN 0-8473-1130-9. pap. $4.95. CRAFTS/BUS

Wucherer covers such basics as how to determine the best selling price, selling on consignment, record keeping (with sample forms), wholesaling, hiring a sales representative, commission selling, and forming a co-operative. More complete information is available elsewhere, and the photographs of handicrafts are unnecessary and uninteresting. In fact, this duplicates information found in Herb Genfan & Lyn Taetzsch's How To Start Your Own Craft Business (Watson-Guptill, 1974), although it is less expensive. Buy only if you don't own the other.—Judith Ellyn Wegener, Monroe County P.L., Bloomington, Ind.

communications

Andrews, Bart. Lucy & Ricky & Fred & Ethel: the story of the "I Love Lucy" show.

Dutton. 1976. 170p. photogs. index. LC 76-22170. ISBN 0-525-14990-2. $8.95. COMM

I Love Lucy fans will enjoy this fully detailed and researched account of that TV series, from its original conception to the present-day reruns. The often stormy off-screen interrelationships of Lucille Ball, Desi Arnaz, Vivian Vance, and William Frawley are described with tasteful candor and contrasted with publicity blurbs that indicated that the actors were all good friends in real life as well as on the screen. The show employed some ingenious innovations, such as using three cameras to film one program and allowing a pregnant actress to continue working by incorporating her baby into the story line; the discussions of these will interest students of the medium as well as general readers. Complete plot summaries for the original 170 half-hour shows round out the book.—Marion Amdursky, Albion, Mich.

Campbell, Robert. The Golden Years of Broadcasting: a celebration of the first 50 years of radio and TV on NBC.

Rutledge Bk: Scribners. 1976. 256p. fwd. by Bob Hope. photogs. LC 76-19034. ISBN 0-684-14816-1. $20; until Dec. 31, $16.95. COMM

This book resembles a full-color, slick "annual report to stockholders," multiplied by 50. Taking it for what it's worth, one can sit back and more or less enjoy this paean to NBC. More, if you devour anything that either starts with "the golden years of" or includes in its title "broadcasting." Less, if you're looking for something special. The pictures and captions are only interesting, the writing engaging if pedestrian. Among the 14 chapters are a rather compelling look at how the evening news is put together and a funny bit on viewer feedback. Lots better things cover the same ground with a wider-angle lens and a good deal more depth. Buy it if you must.—Richard Moses, Oakville P.L., Ontario, Canada

Herbert, Evan. The Best Book on CB Radio.

HP Bks. 1976. 194p. illus. LC 76-41094. ISBN 0-912656-52-2. $4.95. TECH/COMM

Books on CB radio aren't particularly noted for their modesty; but title aside, this is a good book. It contains coverage of the usual topics—uses of CB, selecting and installing the CB radio, optimizing performance from various CB components. However, unlike most CB books, this one offers very helpful comparative evaluations of many current models. The book is well illustrated and the text avoids both heavy technical jargon and excessive CB slang. If you're considering buying a CB book, this would be a suitable choice.—Gerard Cullen, Datapoint Business Computers, San Antonio, Tex.

The Journal of the Century.

Studio: Viking. 1976. 352p. comp. by Bryan Holme & others. illus., some color. index. LC 76-22767. ISBN 0-670-40941-3. $16.95. HIST/COMM

A sampler of just about any kind of material the Ladies Home Journal published between December 1883, when it began, and 1976, this beautifully made gift-type book is rewarding for browsing or for reading in sequence. Variety, nostalgia, surprise, information, advice, and humor mingle with fiction, poetry, and juveniles. You can't open the book anywhere without encountering an illustration. Some disappointment comes when one looks for representative advertisements and finds none, or when one desires to know the date or volume number of any of the pieces. The reason given for the lesser quality of some of the illustrations, and probably for the low percentage of color prints, is that many original art works and photos are not available, so engravings for this book had to be made from the magazine pages. No matter, there's fun for all, at a fair price.—Julia Morrison, New York

EDUCATION

Featherstone, Joseph. What Schools Can Do.

Liveright: Norton. 1976. 212p. LC 76-23382. ISBN 0-87140-619-5. $8.95. ED

The 12 essays in this collection have previously appeared in the New Republic, Harvard Educational Review, and similar journals, and are reprinted with a minimum of editing. Many of the essays present Featherstone's views on current educational problems. They range from school-centered topics such as open classrooms, curriculum reforms, models of good learning, and educational fads, to broader concepts placing the school in the context of contemporary society. Others are critiques of recent educational writing, including Daniel Bell's The Coming of Post-Industrial Society, Dan Lortie's Schoolteacher: a Sociological Study (LJ 3/15/75) and James S. Coleman & others' Youth. A serious evaluation of John Dewey's thought points out its relevance today, and an analysis of the background of Boston's current educational troubles rounds out the picture of our recent educational past. Featherstone, author of Schools Where Children Learn (LJ 5/15/71) writes well and has much of importance to say. Libraries with holdings of the periodicals in which the articles first appeared may question the need to purchase this volume; however, it is useful to have them gathered together in one place.—Shirley L. Hopkinson, California State Univ., San Jose

Melton, David. How To Help Your Preschooler Learn More—Faster—& Better.

McKay. 1976. 205p. index. ISBN 0-679-50614-4. $10.95; pap. ISBN 0-679-50633-0. $5.95. ED

Melton presents convincing arguments to support his theory that the younger the child, the faster and easier it will learn. Rejecting the developmental theories of Rousseau, Gesell, and Piaget, he draws heavily upon the ideas of Glenn Doman, director of the Institutes for the Achievement of Human Potential and author of How to Teach Your Baby To Read (LJ 10/1/64). Melton believes that Doman's methods of teaching the brain-injured can be used to increase vastly the potential of the normal or bright child. He attacks the myths of learning readiness, the static IQ, creativity as an inborn gift, and challenges the beliefs that children should

A magnificent treasury for ship-lovers

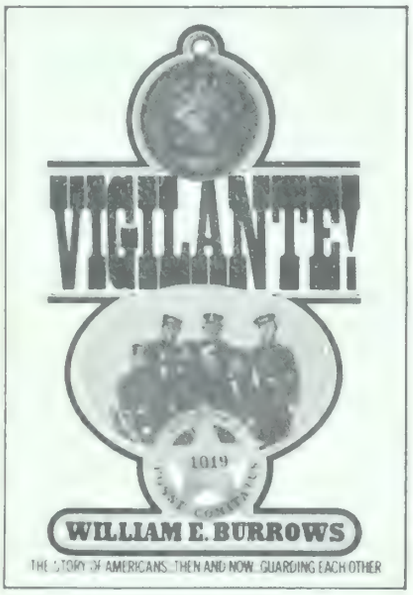
Tall Ships
THE WORLD OF SAIL TRAINING

By MALDWIN DRUMMOND

Foreword by H.R.H. The Duke of Edinburgh. Authoritative text and superb pictures recreate the great days of sail in a stunning volume that includes all the ships that made history on July 4th in Operation Sail 1976. "The value of Drummond's book, other than the sensitive and superb drawings (21 in color), is its technical discussion and brief history of each of the 39 ships covered. ..Operation Sail witnesses will enjoy it."—Library Journal. 14¼" x 10¾". 160 monochromes; 21 full-color plates; bibliography; index. SBN-399-11751-2. $20.00

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

LJ reviews HBJ



"Burrows demonstrates that there has been a strong trend toward violence throughout American history ... This selective historical survey is well researched, accurate, and well-written. It is probably the best available history of the American vigilante tradition."
—Library Journal

ISBN: 0-15-193655-2
$12.95

HBJ Harcourt Brace Jovanovich

only be taught by professionals in school and that it is bad to compare children's development. He describes and recommends the Doman-Delacato Developmental Profile, a set of norms for comparing a child's development from birth to 72 months. He is vitally concerned with the importance of the mother–child relationship and home teaching during the early years and opposed to placing children in day-care and preschool centers. A provocative book addressed to parents, particularly mothers, but of interest to educators as well.—Shirley L. Hopkinson, California State Univ., San Jose

HISTORY

Akin, William E. Technocracy and the American Dream: the technocrat movement, 1900-1941.

Univ. of California Pr. Jan. 1977. 221p. bibliog. index. LC 75-22651. ISBN 0-520-03110-5. $9.50. HIST

A work clearly for specialists, this is an exhaustive study of a footnote in American history. For only a few months during the Depression did technocracy receive serious consideration from intellectuals or the media. However, Akin ties the rather insignificant work of Howard Scott, Walter Rautenstrauch, and Harold Loeb to broader strands of American thought. The severe economic dislocations of the early 1930's led some to embrace the idea of salvation through social planning by engineers. Akin's explanation of the collapse of these ideas because of their failure to include representative democracy is provocative and useful. Here the intellectual history rather than the chronology of technocrat activities is the main contribution.—James Levin, Dept. of Special Programs, C.C.N.Y.

Bauer, Wolfgang. China and the Search for Happiness: recurring themes in four thousand years of Chinese cultural history.

Continuum: Seabury. Dec. 1976. 600p. bibliog. index. LC 76-10679. ISBN 0-8164-9276-X. $22.50. REL/HIST

This is a translation of a 1971 German work that is an ambitious attempt to trace concepts of paradise, utopia, and the ideal society through China's history up to the present. Bauer divides his work into five roughly chronological parts. He sees religion as the dynamic, revolutionary force in China that was suppressed by the superior, irresistible rationality of Confucianism. For Bauer, the peak of Chinese development thus occurred in the T'ang Dynasty (618-907), when Taoist and Buddhist ideas held full sway, but this was cut short by the Neo-Confucian victory. Throughout long periods of Confucian dominance, however, religious beliefs survived among the people, to be reasserted in times of misery. The decline of Confucianism and rise of Maoism, according to Bauer, have reintroduced this religious component. The author presents stimulating interpretations which sometimes clash with accepted wisdom; yet his work should be welcomed by those interested in comparative religion and intellectual history, as well as by those seeking new perspectives on Chinese thought.—Evelyn S. Rawski, Dept. of History, Univ. of Pittsburgh

Bell, J. Bowyer. Terror Out of Zion.

St. Martin's. 1976. 448p. bibliog. index. LC 75-26172. $12.95. HIST

In the 1920's and 1930's Palestine, then under British Mandate control, was severely shaken by repeated revolts and acts of terrorism by Arabs who feared a Zionist takeover of their territory. British action against these terrorists was consistently too little, too late. The infamous Irgun Zvai Leumi (National Military Organization) arose from earlier, less militant Zionist self-defense groups, and waged its own clandestine war against rival Zionist groups, Arab opponents, and the British "enemy." With this book Bell, author of other works on terrorism, restores to the Irgun its rightful place in history. Through interviews with former Irgun members and others with first-hand knowledge of their activities, the author has assembled an inside view of the underground military organization, an inspiring account of personal courage. He supports his narrative with a large body of source material, all thoroughly annotated. The result is a history which will prove useful for research purposes but is lively enough to be appreciated by the layman.—Marcia R. Hoffman, Woodbridge P.L., Colonia, N.J.

Ben-Sasson, H. H., ed. A History of the Jewish People.

Harvard Univ. Pr. 1976. 1170p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-29879. ISBN 0-674-39730-4. $40; until Dec. 31, $32.50. REL/HIST

This joins a long list of tomes on Jewish history: Solomon Grayzel's, Salo Baron's, Cecil Roth's, the recent two-volume work of Daniel Silver and Bernard Martin (LJ 11/1/74), etc. Despite this plethora, several chapters in Ben-Sasson's compilation fill an actual void in current archaeological historiography. Abraham Malamat and Hayim Tadmor have gathered much current scholarship in their areas of the developmental years of the Bible and the First Commonwealth. Menahem Stern's chapter on the Second Temple period is sketchy—he has devoted but ten pages to the Great Revolt. Shmuel Safrai deals in a very rudimentary way with the era of the Talmud. Ben-Sasson's own section, "The Middle Ages," is excellent and offers some interesting personality analyses. Finally, Shmuel Ettinger compacts the modern period (17th Century to the present) fairly well, although it is hard to avoid feeling distressed at finding the Holocaust treated in just pages. This work is worthwhile, if only for the first two chapters and for Ben-Sasson's contribution; but since its price may stretch many budgets, I do not see it as a vital acquisition—as long as your library possesses some of the other works noted above.—Moshe H. Spero, Sch. of Applied Social Sciences, Case Western Reserve Univ., Cleveland

Blair, Peter Hunter. Northumbria in the Days of Bede.

St. Martin's. Dec. 1976. 256p. illus. index. $12.50. HIST

Few scholars know the traditional sources of Anglo-Saxon civilization—the writings of Bede, riddles, sermons, poetry, illuminated manuscripts—so well as the distinguished Cambridge historian Peter Hunter Blair, who here has also imaginatively used the evidence of aerial photography. Even fewer scholars could have written so lucid, sensitive, and at the same time so detailed an account of that civilization in the golden age of its achievement—the seventh and eighth centuries, when it was the center of European culture. Intended for the general reader, this splendid synthesis treats the impact on the common man of geography, religion, monarchy and government, nature and science, education and the arts. Everyone from the potential tourist to the advanced scholar will enjoy and benefit from this book which combines deep learning with rare understanding. Public and academic libraries should acquire it.—Bennett D. Hill, Dept. of History, Univ. of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign

Chan, F. Gilbert & Thomas H. Etzold, eds. China in the 1920s: nationalism and revolution.

New Viewpoints: Watts. (History of Modern China). 1976. 249p. index. LC 76-8246. ISBN 0-531-05383-0. $12.50; pap. ISBN 0-531-05589-2. $5.95. HIST

This, the first of a planned three-volume series covering Chinese political history to 1975, consists of ten short articles especially written for this collection. The introduction characterizes the decade as one in which new concepts of social order, as well as political power, were opposing disintegrating traditional values. In the work of the essayists, however, the political aspects of this process, rather than the social and economic ones, receive the greatest attention. Four of the articles deal with the revitalized center of Chinese nationalism and revolution in Canton under the direction of Sun Yat-sen, while most of the others explore the response of the Chinese warlords, the student movement, and the foreign powers to the nationalist movement. The best piece is Okamoto Shumpei's examination of the contradictions of the Japanese Sinologist Naito Torajiro's support for Japanese imperialism in China. The book is dedicated to Professor Emeritus C. Martin Wilbur of Columbia University, and the essays reflect his own careful attention to historical accuracy.—David D. Buck, Dept. of History, Univ. of Wisconsin, Milwaukee

Chesneaux, Jean & others. China from the Opium Wars to the 1911 Revolution.

Pantheon. Jan. 1977. 400p. tr. fr. French by Anne Destenay. bibliog. index. LC 76-9570. ISBN 0-394-49213-7. $17.95; pap. ISBN 0-394-70934-9. $6.95. HIST

Three outstanding China specialists from France have written a competent but disappointingly pedestrian survey of Chinese history from 1840 to 1911. The authors' previous research has contributed greatly to our knowledge of Chinese social history, Chesneaux having worked on secret societies, popular rebellions, and the proletariat and Marie-Claire Bergère on the rise of the bourgeoisie. These topics are touched on in the present text, but the overall framework is one familiar to and pioneered by American scholars. The authors give most attention to reform efforts, which are described accurately yet too briefly to make a vivid impression. They also fail to highlight and discuss controversies in the field. Each chapter is supplemented by a bibliographical listing and a selection of translations from original documents of the period.—Andrew J. Nathan, East Asian Inst., Columbia Univ.

Engle, Paul. Women in the American Revolution.

Follett. 1976. bibliog. illus. ISBN 0-695-80603-3. $12.95. BIOG/HIST

Engle sketches the lives of 18 women who left some record of their activities during the Revolutionary era. The figures were loyalist as well as patriot, and several are as obscure as others are famous. As homemakers, wives, artists, authors, and businesswomen they were all caught up in the drama of the birth of the United States. The individual sketches are competently written, although Engle's research from published sources provides little that is new for the scholar. His contemporary viewpoint and current bibliography

The Princeton Encyclopedia of Classical Sites

Richard Stillwell, Editor • Marian Holland McAllister, Assistant Editor

William L. MacDonald, Associate Editor

Here in one volume are the results of centuries of archaeological research—authoritative, up-to-date information on ancient Greek and Roman civilization from 750 B.C. to A.D. 565. The Princeton Encyclopedia of Classical Sites is essential not only for the new material it provides and the information previously available only from scattered sources, but also for the overview it offers of work accomplished, in progress, and still to be undertaken.

- Over 1,000 pages of authoritative and current information on nearly 3,000 sites of the Classical era.
- Written by 375 scholars from 17 countries.
- Sixteen 2-color area maps keyed to entries describing sites.
- Each entry complete with selective bibliography.

1,072 pages. 16 maps. 8½ x 11". ISBN 0-691-03542-3

$100.00 until December 31, 1976. $125.00 thereafter

A prospectus is available on request.

Princeton University Press

Princeton, New Jersey 08540

should make the work appeal to public and secondary school libraries.—Bayly Ellen Marks, Dept. of Social Sciences, Catonsville Community Coll., Md.

Farber, Samuel. Revolution and Reaction in Cuba, 1933-1960: a political sociology from Machado to Castro.

Wesleyan Univ. Pr. 1976. 352p. bibliog. index. LC 76-7190. ISBN 0-8195-4099-4. $15.95. SOC SCI/HIST

Written from the viewpoint of a "revolutionary democratic socialist," this is a studied analysis of the background of the "totalitarian and bureaucratic state" of Castro's Cuba in the dictatorships of Gerardo Machado and Fulgencio Batista. The author finds that the existing social and constitutional structures were increasingly unable to deal effectively with the Cuban reality, ultimately leaving Batista with the support of only a parasitic and corrupt army. This provided a unique opportunity for the emergence of "Bonapartist" rule in opposition to a social order united in its dissatisfaction with Batista, but still conservative and less disposed to revolutionary solutions than during the 1930's. A competent and tightly written study that is of value for understanding the background to the Cuban Revolution.—Joseph A. Ellis, Dept. of History, C.C.N.Y.

Fraginals, Manuel Moreno. The Sugarmill: the socioeconomic complex of sugar in Cuba, 1760-1860.

Monthly Review. 1976. 320p. tr. from Spanish by Cedric Belfrage. illus. index. ISBN 0-85345-319-5. $23.50. ECON/HIST

Cuban historian Fraginals has taken very seriously Auguste Cochin's assertion that "the story of a lump of sugar is a whole lesson in political economy, in politics, and also in morality." This book is a translation of the first part of a projected three-volume study involving a vast amount of laborious and often imaginative research in an enormous array of sources. Although the plethora of detail will probably limit readership to those with particular interests in Cuban history, economic history generally, and/or plantation economies, Fraginals certainly demonstrates that the importance of sugar to all aspects of Cuban life can scarcely be overstated. The book is of special interest since its undisguised Marxist framework provides a sharply contrasting perspective on the subject from that of other major works.—Richard Lee Clinton, Dept. of Political Science, Oregon State Univ., Corvallis

Gerson, Lennard D. The Secret Police in Lenin's Russia.

Temple Univ. Pr. 1976. bibliog. index. LC 75-44707. ISBN 0-87722-085-9. $15. POL SCI/HIST

Using heretofore unpublished Soviet documents, Gerson has written a detailed, lucid, and fascinating account of the origins and development of the Soviet security apparatus. His thesis, that Lenin, not Stalin, opened the gates to rule by police terror is not new. Gerson's chief contribution is to detail the VCheka's structure and operations, while further documenting that its institutionalization was well underway prior to Lenin's death in 1924. The author's portrayal of Felix Dzerzhinsky, first head of the VCheka, is illuminating. An ardent Catholic and Polish nationalist, the young Felix dreamt of possessing a cap which would make him invisible and better able to slay Russians—a youthful fantasy that would one day become a savage reality. Suitable for specialists and laymen alike, this book will be a valuable addition to any library's collection.—Fred E. Friedel, Dept. of Social Science, Bellevue Community Coll., Wash.

Gerson, Simon W. Pete: the story of Peter V. Cacchione, New York's first Communist councilman.

Internat. Pubs. 1976. 216p. ISBN 0-7178-0482-8. $10; pap. ISBN 0-7178-0473-9. $3.50. POL SCI HIST

Cacchione, the son of Italian immigrants, grew up in a small Pennsylvania town, and as a result of the Depression, found himself in New York City in 1932, spending his first night in a flophouse. In 1941, he became the first Communist to be elected in a major U.S. city and was reelected twice. Gerson, a Communist Party supporter and Pete's close friend, has written a highly partisan political biography. Despite the bias and his failure to develop the subject in personal terms, Gerson does vividly portray aspects of pre-Cold War politics in New York. His work is recommended for collections on the American Left or urban politics.—Gregor A. Preston, Pennsylvania State Univ. Libs., University Park

Gordon, Linda. Woman's Body, Woman's Right: a social history of birth control in America.

Grossman, dist. by Viking. 1976. 479p. illus. index. LC 76-22691. ISBN 0-670-77817-6. $12.50. SOC SC/HIST

Gordon holds that "reproductive patterns everywhere are determined by sexual morality, by the over-all status of women, by class formations, and by the nature of the struggles for social change." Though medical and technical histories of contraception have been written and the women's movement has produced biographies of personalities active in birth-control reform, this is the first book to approach birth control as a social movement. Gordon reviews birth-control practices from ancient times to the 19th Century, when the birth rate dropped as a result of industrialization, increased numbers of women in the work force, and the influence of neo-Malthusians and eugenicists. She asserts that the suppression of birth control in the early 20th Century was ultimately tied to imperialism and a fear of "race-suicide," and that legalization of birth control came about as the direct result of the struggle of women to gain control over their own bodies. Her perceptive comments on population control, the medical profession, reform movements, and women's status in American society make this a book well worth reading.—Leslie Kane, Central Michigan Univ. Lib., Mt. Pleasant

Hillel, Marc & Clarissa Henry. Of Pure Blood.

McGraw. Jan. 1977. 248p. tr. by Eric Mossbacher. illus. bibliog. LC 76-8508. ISBN 0-07-028895-X. $10. HIST

This is the first detailed account of SS Lebensborn, the shadowy organization that supervised human breeding farms and maternity shelters throughout the Third Reich. The authors present valuable documentation of Lebensborn's attempts to stimulate the development of a vast Nordic superrace and the ways in which the organization meshed with the overall directions of Nazi eugenics. Predictably, the fragmented nature of the evidence permits only a blurred and ambiguous portrait to emerge. Nevertheless, Of Pure Blood represents a unique (though rather unscholarly) glimpse into a brave new world gone mad, one which promoted life and its perpetuation for an anointed minority and required sinister elimination for countless others.—Mark R. Yerburgh, SUNY at Albany Lib.

The basis for Afro-American culture

Gutman, Herbert G. The Black Family in Slavery and Freedom, 1750–1925.

Pantheon. 1976. index. ISBN 0-394-47116-4. $15.95. SOC SCI/HIST

The classic studies of E. Franklin Frazier and Daniel P. Moynihan on the Negro family contend that the devastating impact of slavery had destroyed the integrity of the black family, resulting in irreversible social disorientation. Gutman's impressively researched volume utilizes slave narratives, plantation records, and census tracts to produce a stinging refutation of those theories and to document the continued existence of a strong, universal family structure in both slave and post-slave society. Gutman emphasizes the ability of the Afro-American family to adapt to a dominant white culture during the periods of slavery, emancipation, and internal migration. Springing from strong West African cultural roots, slaves developed a set of common beliefs regarding morality, domestic arrangements, marital rules, naming practices, and kin networks that formed the basis for a distinct Afro-American culture. Central to the formation of such slave traditions were the family unit and the extended family network which perpetuated and reinforced basic Afro-American values. This seminal work will encourage historical debate on its challenging premises, but Gutman's innovative approach has already established a prominent place for this book in Afro-American historiography. Highly recommended.—Philip F. Mooney, Balch Inst. Lib., Philadelphia

Hodges, Donald C. Argentina, 1943-1976: the national revolution and resistance.

Univ. of New Mexico Pr. 1976. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-8263-0422-2. $9.95; pap. ISBN 0-8263-0423-0. $4.95. HIST

Hodges has written a remarkable history of modern Argentine politics. He briefly describes Perón's first administration (1943-1955) and then concentrates on Perón's struggle to regain power after the military golpe toppled him. Hodges sees the Peronist resistance against military dictatorship as a model for similar activity in other Latin American countries. Although this reviewer cannot agree with the thesis, the author builds his case persuasively, demonstrating a formidable knowledge of both right and left wing antidictatorial movements in Argentina and elsewhere. He also discusses the rise and fall of Isabelita Perón and predicts the eventual return of Perón-like political forces which will complete Argentina's socialist transformation. This book belongs in academic libraries with large Latin American collections. As it is largely interpretative, it is not a beginner's book, but it does include a useful chronology of events and bibliography.—Carol Fitzgerald, CUNY Grad. Sch. Lib.

Jackson, Robert. Fighter Pilots of World War II.

St. Martin's Dec. 1976. 176p. LC 76-11691 $8.95. BIOG/HIST

Jackson has selected 14 fighter pilots from the World War II roster and provided capsule accounts of their exploits. The collection centers on their flying techniques, their planes, and the missions they undertook. There is undoubtedly a hardcore readership for books of this kind, but the cliché-strewn writing is difficult to take (e.g. "bitter cold," "overwhelming odds," "flying was in his blood," "gloomy shadows," etc.). Some aviation-minded readers may find the writing comfortable and familiar, but little pity may be felt for the reviewer who, on a clear day, ceiling unlimited, pulse racing, struggled gallantly against overwhelming odds to write a few sentences about a book he found dismal.—Michel Ridgeway, U.S. Military Academy Lib., West Point

Kessner, Thomas. The Golden Door: Italian and Jewish immigrant mobility in New York City 1880–1915.

Oxford Univ. Pr. Jan. 1977. 256p. illus. ISBN 0-19-502116-9. $12.95. SOC SCI HIST

This book focuses on the experiences of the two major immigrant groups who settled in New York City during the late 19th and early 20th centuries—Southern Italians and Eastern European Jews—and, in doing so, makes a substantial contribution to the literature on American social and occupational mobility. Kessner argues that Italian and Jewish immigrants, because of their poverty and lack of skills, provide an ideal case study for testing the myth of social mobility in America. He concludes that "immigrant mobility was far more than a literary device or an ideological weapon; it was a fair interpretation of American reality." Although Kessner's argument rests on statistical analyses of census data and city directories, he enriches this somewhat dry evidence with lively illustrations from memoirs, contemporary fiction, and journalism. In other instances, he traces the occupational careers of specific immigrants. Kessner is obviously familiar with American life during the period, but he is on less sure ground when discussing the European context of the Italian and Jewish immigrants. Nonetheless, this remains an eminently readable book on a fascinating subject, suitable for both academic and public libraries.—Judith E. Endelman, Dept. of Sociology, Boston Coll., Chestnut Hill, Mass.

Lewis and Clark's America. Vol. 1: A Voyage of Discovery. Vol. 2: A Contemporary Photo Essay.

Seattle Art Museum, dist. by Univ. of Washington Pr. 1976. Vol. 1, 95p. illus., some color. bibliog. Vol. 2, 96p. photogs. by Paul Macapia. journal & sketches by Mary E. Macapia. boxed set. LC 76-23167. ISBN 0-294-95524-4. pap. $10. PHOTOG/HIST

A most attractive catalog of a special Bicentennial exhibit arranged by the Seattle Art Museum. Volume 1 contains paintings, drawings, maps, and photographs of Indian artifacts of the early 1800's; an essay by Willis F. Woods, Director of the Museum; and short biographies of the artists whose works are included. Volume 2 is a contemporary record in photographs by a husband and wife who attempted to retrace the Lewis and Clark trail. Accompanying text expresses the difficulties they experienced in finding the original locations and in photographing them without including the clutter of present-day America. In both volumes printing is clear; color plates and black and whites are of good quality. A fine job of book making in a delightful duo.—Evelyn G. Callaway, formerly with Nebraska Lib. Commission, Fairbury

Lockwood, Charles. Manhattan Moves Uptown: an illustrated history.

Houghton. 1976. 328p. illus. LC 76-22487. ISBN 0-395-24674-1. $17.50. ARCHITECTURE/HIST

Lockwood has followed up his history of the New York row house, Bricks & Brownstone (LJ 4/1/73), with an admirable social and architectural study of Manhattan's remarkable growth during the 19th Century. In this period, even the most optimistic projections about the city's growth tended to err on the side of conservatism. When daily headlines spell out the city's bleak prospects, Lockwood's book about Manhattan's boom days makes for pleasant reading. The work gives a good idea of how the city assumed its present physical form; it reminds us that demolition and construction have always been features of city life, as have noise and dirt. This well-written, handsomely illustrated book should be in any collection concerned with urban or architectural history.—Michael Lordi, NYU Business Sch. Lib.

Atlas of Early American History

The Revolutionary Era, 1760-1790

Lester J. Cappon, Editor-in-Chief

"An exceptional atlas and reference work compiled by an outstanding group of authorities on historical geography and the history of the Revolutionary period, this work should be available in every college library. It can be used by students on any level. There is no other available work that approaches it."— Choice

Published for The Newberry Library and The Institute of Early American History and Culture

286 maps, 271 in color. 13¼ × 18¼. ISBN 0-691-04634-3

$100 until December 31, 1976. $125 thereafter.

An illustrated prospectus is available on request.

Princeton University Press

Princeton, New Jersey 08540

The Medieval Health Handbook: Tacuinum Sanitatis.

Braziller. 1976. 153p. intro. by Luisa Cogliati Arano. tr. by Oscar Ratti & Adele Westbook. illus., some color. bibliog. LC 75-21725. ISBN 0-8076-0808-4. slipcased. $25. HIST

Pictures of daily life in the Middle Ages and accompanying texts describing the use of plants to regulate health are effectively presented in this handsome volume. Almost 300 finely reproduced plates (48 color, 243 black-and-white) from five manuscript versions of the Tacuinum Sanitatis provide vignettes of such activities as gathering beets, purchasing olive oil, catching partridges, and harvesting rye. The 45-page introductory essay, with its scholarly discussion of the provenance of the manuscripts, will appeal almost exclusively to art historians. That audience will also value this volume as the first to reproduce the entire contents of the Liege and Rouen manuscripts. The remaining pages will charm a more general audience, especially those expressing contemporary enthusiasms for the medieval period, "back to nature" diets, and herbal medicine. The book makes available otherwise inaccessible material and provides an all-too-rare opportunity to see the medieval mind at work through words and pictures.—Lorna J. Sass, Dept. of English, Queens Coll., CUNY

Persico, Joseph E. My Enemy, My Brother: men and days of Gettysburg.

Grossman: Viking. Feb. 1977. 228p. photogs. maps. bibliog. ISBN 0-670-49861-0. $12.95. HIST

This vivid, absorbing, action-packed narrative of the greatest battle ever fought in North America practically transports the reader onto the scene, causing sweating palms and a sense of danger and animation. Some of the earthy prose is perhaps a little too crude, and is definitely not for the squeamish. Persico did admirable research in printed sources, and although he then took literary license to dramatize some of the events, it is very likely that the "re-created" eyewitness experiences did occur at one time or another. Above all, one does get a rather good idea of what the battle was like.—Herman Hattaway, Dept. of History, Univ. of Missouri, Kansas City

Reid, William. Arms Through the Ages.

Harper. 1976. 280p. illus. bibliog index. LC 76-10105. ISBN 0-06-013527-1. $35; until Dec. 31, $29.95. TECH/HIST

A scholarly and thoughtful study of the development of weapons and armor from the time of the Lower Paleolithic Age to the advent of the atomic bomb. Reid traces the evolution and the manner in which various weapons were used, with descriptions of personalities, battles, and fortifications. The plates are not only well drawn, but arranged in a way that avoids the annoying gymnastics of flipping back and forth through the pages. This is not, however, just another picture book of weapons. Although making no pretense at being a detailed account of weapons development, the work is comprehensive enough to serve in most reference areas. Highly recommended.—George F. Scheck, SUNY at Oswego Lib.

Samora, Julian & Patricia Vandel Simon. A History of the Mexican-American People.

Univ. of Notre Dame Pr. 1976. 256p. $9.95; pap. $5.95. HIST

To correct and amplify standard American textbooks, Samora and Simon have written a straightforward, objective account of the Mexican-American role in U.S. history. Their book is a careful overview which begins with the arrival of the Spanish in the New World and then goes on to focus on Mexico's history, its interaction with the U.S., and developments in the Southwest through the early 1970's. It also briefly explores the too-frequently ignored areas of Chicano literature, music, and art. Although this is one of the most complete histories now available, the authors' pedestrian style keeps the narrative at a less-than-lively level. References at the end of each chapter are useful for further study but it is unlikely that many readers will be so inspired.—Susan Jones, formerly with Blue Island P.L., Ill.

Shapiro, Theda. Painters and Politics: the European avant-garde and society, 1900–1925.

Elsevier. 1976. 322p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-20954. ISBN 0-444-99012-7. $13.50. ART/HIST

A brilliant scholarly study of the relationship between the avant-garde artists and art movements of the early 20th Century, such as Cubism, Futurism, Dadaism, and Surrealism, and the political ideologies of socialism, anarchism, and communism. This work examines the political opinions and activities of 80 revolutionary artists, including Severini, Klee, Kirchner, Boccioni, Kandinsky, Duchamp, and Arp, in order to determine their role in the revolutionary social changes of the 20th Century. This is not just another interpretation of these artists' works or styles, but a history of attitudes and opinions gleaned from their private writings, memoirs, and manifestoes. An extremely valuable sourcebook for the history of art. The appendixes and notes contain biographical sketches of the principal avant-garde painters as well as an extensive bibliography of primary and secondary sources. Highly recommended for college and university art libraries and for large public libraries.—Elizabeth Lindquist-Cock, Dept. of Art History, Massachusetts Coll. of Art, Boston

Sitchin, Zecharia. The Twelfth Planet.

Stein & Day. 1976. 329p. bibliog. index. LC 75-37857. ISBN 0-8128-1939-X. $12.95. ARCHAEOLOGY/HIST

This is an attempt, in the best tradition of von Däniken, to prove that Earth was originally peopled by settlers from another planet (the biblical Nefilim) and that these extraterrestrial colonists were the gods of ancient lore. Sitchin postulates that the theogony/cosmogony of Greece and the ancient Near East, far from being mythological, was strictly true. He has done extensive research, especially in surviving Sumerian and Akkadian texts; and this reliance on the living word of the early peoples rather than on the usual mute and ambiguous archaeological debris makes his study exciting, even credible. Although at times a bit forced, his main argument is most provocative and compelling. The Twelfth Planet presents documentation for a radical new theory which, by answering some age-old questions, merely widens the ripples in the pool. (As the author notes, "If the Nefilim . . . created Man on Earth, who created the Nefilim?") The book should be as talked-about as its von Däniken predecessors.—Jo-Ann D. Suleiman, Wright Patterson Air Force Base Medical Lib., Dayton, Ohio

Taylor, Benjamin J. & Thurman J. White, eds. The Evolution of Issues and Ideas in America, 1776-1976.

Univ. of Oklahoma Pr. 1976. 375p. LC 76-18769. ISBN 0-8061-1327-8. bibliog. index. $19.95; pap. $8.95. PHIL/HIST

The aim of this mammoth production is to demonstrate American accomplishments and contributions to the evolution of thought in 17 ambitious and somewhat related essays, arranged in five different sections (history, law, government, economics, and ecology). In between are such rest stops as society, education, psychology, philosophy, and science. This is a potpourri, which, in its attempt to fulfill the expectations of the title, unavoidably flirts with fragmentation. Yet, the individual contributions are so self-contained that it is easy, even obligatory, to overlook that pitfall. An example of the diversity: When William F. Swindler discusses the "Rights of Man," he starts with Locke and the Enlightenment, progresses through Jefferson, Hamilton, and company to South America, then to the UN and the Universal Declaration of Human Rights by way of the laissez faire period and the New Deal. Lest the reader be intimidated by its very bulk, this volume invites informative browsing.—Mark Norton Schatz, Anne Arundel County Historical Society, Glen Burnie, Md.

Torrey, Volta. Wind-Catchers: American windmills of yesterday and tomorrow.

Stephen Greene. 1976. 226p. photogs. bibliog. index. LC 76-13816. ISBN 0-8289-0292-5. $12.95. TECH/HIST

Although there have been a few recent books on windmills, owing their origin either to antiquarian interest or to interest in wind as an alternative energy source, none has attempted to deal with windmills from both points of view as this book does. Although the author, a journalist, writes in a journalese (should I say in a breezy style?) which tends to pass lightly over essential technical detail, his sources are excellent and his facts are accurate. In addition to a good summary of ancient windmill history, Torrey covers more recent attempts to use wind energy to drive electric power generators such as the Grandpa's Knob experiment in 1941 in Vermont and the government's continuing projects. A good selective bibliography and sources of information on modern windmills as practical generators for farm and home use are also included.—Eleanor A. Maass, Swarthmore Coll. Lib., Pa.

HISTORY

Tugwell, Rexford G. Roosevelt's Revolution: the first year.

Macmillan. Jan. 1977. 400p. ISBN 0-02-620370-7. $14.95. POL SCI/HIST

More than 43 years after the genesis of the "Roosevelt Revolution," several New Dealers still live to recount it. Tugwell, one of the original members of the Brain Trust and for a time assistant secretary of agriculture, paints his story in vivid colors. Although the professional historian will find few surprises here, the interested reader will enjoy Tugwell's views on Roosevelt's thinking, Washington's bureaucratic politics, and the New Deal (and its adherents) in general. Tugwell still smarts from his political wounds, but in taking sides he brings history to life and offers a fascinating glimpse into the first year of FDR's presidency. Sometimes awkwardly written, yet always entertaining.—Wayne A. Wiegand, Coll. of Library Science, Univ. of Kentucky, Lexington

Tute, Warren. The North African War.

Two Continents. 1976. 221p. illus., some color. maps. index. LC 76-12216. ISBN 0-8467-0197-9. $12.50. HIST

A survey or introduction to the war in North Africa during World War II of necessity will avoid much detail, and Tute does just that in his heavily illustrated volume. He examines the seesaw struggle from February 1941, when Rommel first arrived in North Africa, to the final defeat of the Axis forces there in May 1943 (although the war had begun in North Africa in the summer of 1940). Tute describes Allied strategy in the Mediterranean area, general planning for the Allied invasion of northwestern Africa, the political maneuvering involving Vichy France, and some of the major battles—El Alamein, the Torch landings in Algeria and Morocco, and the final engagements in Tunisia. For libraries that need an introductory work.—John Buechler, Univ. of Vermont Lib., Burlington

Van Sertima, Ivan. They Came Before Columbus.

Random. Jan. 1977. 212p. illus. index. $12.95. HIST

The author claims to have amassed evidence for a "revolutionary" thesis with "far-reaching consequences for both American and African history." But his book is just another trying piece of pseudoarchaeology. The "evidence" is a motley assemblage of secondhand travelers' accounts, discarded century-old syntheses, popular books of questionable worth, and oddly quoted legitimate sources. In a variation on the old "Lost Tribe" and "Egyptian" theories of the origins of New World civilization, Van Sertima finds Africans everywhere. Arriving from all parts of the continent at strategic times, Africans became models for Olmec statues, builders of pyramids at La Venta, designers of platform pipes. Van Sertima begins most chapters with highly dramatic "scenarios" of hypothesized events. Implausible interpretations are made to appear reasonable through comparison with other, wilder notions. (Certainly Africans are more likely than spacemen to have built pyramids in Mexico and drawn camels in South America.) It is unfortunate that popular audiences may fall for this book at a time when serious scholars are reviewing the legitimate evidence for transoceanic contacts and the fascinating materials on black participation in historic Native American cultures.—Christine Roysdon, Lehigh Univ. Lib., Bethlehem, Pa.

von Hagen, Victor Wolfgang. The Royal Road of the Inca.

Gordon Cremonesi, dist. by Atheneum. 1976. 200p. illus., some color. maps. index. ISBN 0-86033-009-5. $29.95. ARCHAEOLOGY

Guided by journals of the soldier–chronicler Pedro de Cieza de León and other Spanish observers, von Hagen takes the reader on a journey along the 3000-mile network of roads that linked settlements in the Inca Empire. The road system extended from Quito, Ecuador to Taltal, Chile, and rivaled contemporary European and Asian roads in length and engineering. The author personally explored many miles of the road, and his engaging narrative includes many first-hand accounts. More than a documentary of an extraordinary pre-Columbian achievement, the book is a unique glimpse at the culture and geography of ancient Peru and a commentary on the Spanish conquest of the Inca Empire. Highly recommended for the student and the general reader.—William Dancey, Dept. of Anthropology, Ohio State Univ., Columbus Whitehill, Walter Muir & Norman Kotker. Massachusetts: a pictorial history.

Scribners. 1976. 379p. illus. index. LC 76-28586. ISBN 0-684-14358-5. $25. HIST

Here is an excellent, comprehensive pictorial history of all aspects of life in the state during the past 350 years. The work contains 750 pictures, many never before published, which are contemporary with the events described so well by Whitehill. His succinct historical essay at the beginning of the book serves to familiarize the reader with periods illustrated. Although this delightful work will be enjoyed by the public, its special index makes it invaluable as a reference source to the social and economic life of America in general and of Massachusetts in particular. Not only is the text indexed, but the contents of the pictures themselves, if important enough, are also indicated. Whitehill, a former librarian, has not forgotten the reference department. Highly recommended.—David Bower, Morse Inst. P.L., Natick, Mass.

Travel, Exploration & Adventure

Gross, Eugene & Jeffery Gross. The Soviet Union: a guide for travellers.

Harper. Feb. 1977. 512p. maps. index. ISBN 0-06-011609-9. $8.95. TRAV

This is a guide to Intourist's Soviet Union—museums, art galleries, botanical gardens, and seemingly endless monuments named after Lenin—in those selected cities open to foreign tourists. There is a fine 20-page description of the Hermitage, for example.

"A well-documented spellbinder...certain to stir controversy"*

Scapegoat

THE LONESOME DEATH OF BRUNO RICHARD HAUPTMANN

By ANTHONY SCADUTO

"Did Hauptmann kill the Lindbergh child? NO, ex-police reporter Scaduto insists, and spends nearly 600 seductive pages proving and reproving it....Finding unshakable documents to bolster each charge, Scaduto produces a richly assured piece of investigative reporting."—Kirkus Reviews (Special Mention). "Gripping and persuasive."—Publishers Weekly.* "Recommended for large collections."—The Booklist. Photos, index, notes.
SBN-399-11660-5. YA. $12.50

G.P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

Travelers, scholars, swashbuckling brigands—

geographer-priests, scientists, diplomats and dreamers—all the remarkable men who discovered and recorded the realities of the mysterious East are here—and the drama of their 600-year-old adventure is breathtakingly retold. "Superbly accomplished"—Publishers Weekly. Beautifully illustrated in color and black-and-white.

THE ORIENTAL ADVENTURE
Explorers of the East
TIMOTHY SEVERIN author of The Golden Antilles and Explorers of the Mississippi
$17.50
LITTLE, BROWN

Brief and cautious accounts of the histories of the cities are provided, but hardly any mention is made of the people and their ways of life. This is a highly sanitized survey of the country, much like one would expect from Intourist itself, but without the political haranguing. It will suffice for packaged tourists but serious travelers and librarians seeking guidebooks having substantial reference value may be disappointed.—Harold M. Otness, Southern Oregon State Coll. Lib., Ashland

Montas, Michele. Haiti.
LC 75-39808. ISBN 0-8467-0165-0.
Putigny, Bob. Tahiti and Its Islands.
LC 75-39803. ISBN 0-8467-0163-4.
ea. vol: Two Continents. (Island Series). 1976. 128p. color photogs. pap. $5.95. TRAV
These are mini-coffee-table books in heavy paper covers. Every page carries lavish color photographs, and the text consists of little more than extended captions. Both books focus on tourist features of the areas considered—the romanticized past, the spectacular (and not necessarily representative) scenery, and the bizarre customs of the inhabitants. The political situation in Haiti is gently brushed aside to make room for voodoo rituals. The Tahiti book pushes the standard South Seas paradise image. These are well-done books of their genre and would be quite nice as souvenirs for tourists, but they do not provide enough background or practical information to satisfy most libraries' needs.—Harold M. Otness, Southern Oregon State Coll. Lib., Ashland

THE CRITICS AGREE!

THE UNITED STATES AIR FORCE
A TURBULENT HISTORY
HERBERT MOLLOY MASON, JR.

"A very readable popular history, filled with anecdotes."
—Publishers Weekly

"A well-written and informative account."
—Library Journal

"A stirring history!"
—Robin Moore (Author of the French Connection)

The complete story of a technological metamorphosis—from Orville Wright to the F-15 and beyond in less than 70 years.

0-88405-149-8
Nonfiction/284 pp./$12.95

MASON / CHARTER
641 LEXINGTON AVE. NEW YORK, N.Y. 10022

Payne, Robert. The Splendor of the Holy Land: Egypt, Jordan, Israel, Lebanon.
Harper. 1976. 208p. photogs. index. ISBN 0-06-013294-9. $12.50. TRAV
Experienced travel writer Robert Payne has mastered a style of restrained hyperbole which will delight armchair travelers. In this book, he records his impressions of such places as the Valley of the Kings, Petra, Baalbek, Jerusalem, and many lesser known sites. Payne is a captive of the romantic spell of the past, and he draws upon his broad knowledge of history to bring each city to life for the reader. In Jerusalem, Payne pays a visit to almost every biblically significant site. Despite the Coca-Cola stands and the Bedouin who poses for tourists at the River Jordan, Payne is able to sense and convey the spirit of each place he visits. His book will have a ready readership at most public libraries.—Victoria K. Musmann, Glendale P.L., Calif.

Wilcox, Desmond. Ten Who Dared.
Little. Jan. 1977. 313p. illus. ISBN 0-316-94023-2. $14.95. ADVENTURE
Rugged exploits and intense human drama surface in this entertaining collection of real-life adventures. It unfolds a procession of eipic figures whose names read like a veritable who's who of exploration and conquest—Roald Amundsen, Charles Doughty, H. M. Stanley, Burke and Wills, Mary Kingsley, Jedediah Smith, Baron von Humboldt, Captain Cook, Pizarro, and Columbus. Wilcox's lucid text lends dimension to the personalities described and attempts to view events in proper perspective. Although nothing new is added to the existing literature, considerable information has been synthesized within the limits of the short chapters of this book. Beginning in January 1977, these narratives will be presented as a ten-part TV series.—Monica F. Hasimoto, formerly with Los Angeles P.L.

Home Economics

Milani, Lucille. Tailoring: the easy way.
Prentice-Hall. 1976. 196p. illus. index. LC 76-3691. ISBN 0-13-882183-6. $11.95; pap. ISBN 0-13-882175-5. $4.95. HOME ECON
Reading this book is reminiscent of your tailoring instructor standing over your shoulder telling you what to do next and how to do it. After explaining traditional methods, Milani includes "contemporary methods," a description of quick-and-easy techniques through the use of extensive machine sewing and fusibles. The instructions, aided by illustrations, are to the point, making this book an outstanding ready reference source for the seamstress who has had a class in tailoring. However, because the book lacks a glossary and the instructions are brief, the beginner may find it rough going. Not nearly as comprehensive as The Vogue Sewing Book (Butterick, 1975) or Doris Beck's old standby, Custom Tailoring for Homemakers (Bennett Co., 1972), the Milani book is much cheaper than the former and more up-to-date than the latter. Highly recommended in paperback but in hardcover, The Vogue Sewing Book is still the one to buy.—Olivia Opello, SUNY at Albany Lib.

Olney, Ross R. Simple Appliance Repair.
Doubleday. 1976. illus. by Mary Ann Duganne. LC 76-2810. ISBN 0-385-11098-7. pap. $2.95. TECH/HOME ECON
The introductory advice on safe, methodical appliance repair is the best part of this book. For major appliances like washers, adequate problem descriptions and solutions are offered, but the line drawings, though numerous, are often superfluous or too small to clearly illustrate the more complex machinery. Surprisingly, air conditioners are not included at all. The information on small appliances is disappointingly brief and usually inadequately illustrated (hair dryers are covered in a few sentences with no illustrations). The price is nice, but something more complete, though expensive, is a better long-term buy—for example, How Things Work in Your Home (and What To Do When They Don't) (Time-Life, 1975).—Frances S. Worthington, formerly with P.L. of Nashville & Davidson Co., Tenn.

Philbin, Tom & Fritz Koelbel. The Nothing Left Out Home Improvement Book.
Prentice-Hall. 1976. 336p. illus. LC 76-16515. ISBN 0-13-624353-3. $8.95. HOME ECON
This book is about home improvement through change, with instructions on finishing basements and attics; adding a porch, concrete drive, or room; putting in a new bath or kitchen; installing oak or resilient flooring, and so forth. Directions are clear and mostly adequate for the home handyman who has a bit of repair-type work under his belt. Some 200 drawings add to the instructions. Recommended.—W. T. Johnston, Coastal Plain Regional Lib., Tifton, Ga.

Cookery

Boulding, Elise with asst. of Brother Victor Antonio Avila & Sister Jean-Marie Pearse. From a Monastery Kitchen.
Harper. 1976. 128p. illus. by Daniel Marshall. index. ISBN 0-06-060980-X. $6.95. COOKERY Boulding invites us into the monastery kitchen to sample 112 primarily vegetarian dishes (fish is included) that are arranged in harmony with the seasons and by type of repast. Not intended to be an introductory primer of vegetarian cookery or completely to advocate health foods (sugar, cornstarch, etc.

were found in some recipes), the book contains an array of dishes—lentil soufflé, oatmeal croquettes, eggplant omelette, festive desserts—that aren't the standard fare in most vegetarian cookbooks. Poignant quotations (from secular and religious sources) in praise of a natural lifestyle surround the recipes and alone form a rich and inspirational treasury, as do the well-chosen, charming illustrations. A jubilant celebration of monastic life and meals which vegetarians and nonvegetarians alike can enjoy in the contentment of their own kitchens.—Gail Jacobson Yaffo, formerly with Columbia-Greene Community Coll. Lib., Hudson, N.Y.

Clancy, John & Frances Field. Clancy's Oven Cookery.

Eleanor Friede: Delacorte. 1976. 256p. illus. by Marika. ISBN 0-440-01372-0. $8.95. COOKERY

Clancy was executive chef for the Time-Life "Foods of the World" series, Field is the widow of Clancy's teacher, Michael Field. This book reflects a sophisticated and knowledgeable approach to food and its preparation. The 125 recipes are for all kinds of dishes from appetizers to desserts. There is a chapter devoted entirely to the making of the different types of pastry which are an important feature of many of the dishes. The dessert recipes are perhaps the most innovative and unusual—a luscious three-crust blueberry pie and an upside-down apple pie are two examples. Many of the soups and entrées are old favorites but done with a new twist to add interest. And of course they are all adapted for oven preparation. Included are menu suggestions and metric conversion tables. —Gail R. Haar, Prosser Lib., Bloomfield, Conn.

Reiger, Barbara & George Reiger. The Zane Grey Cookbook.

Prentice-Hall. 1976. 238p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-15178. ISBN 0-13-983759-0. $9.95. COOKERY

A fine collection for any cook, this book includes recipes for game (bear, buffalo, deer, squirrel) and wild fowl, but is not limited by what is available to the hunter. There are excellent recipes for lamb, beef, fish, vegetables, and other supermarket fare. Aimed at the experienced outdoorsman, there is a brief chapter on building campfires. Camp cooking methods are described, but are readily adapted to home stove and barbeque. Preparation is usually simple. Dishes are hearty, tasty, and by no means primitive. The recipes are hung loosely on episodes from Zane Grey's books and life and the book makes entertaining browsing. Recommended.—J. R. Mosler, formerly with Ocean County Lib., Toms River, N.J.

Sherwin, Sally. 7 Steps to Rock-Bottom Food Costs: a guide to kitchen economy.

Morrow. 1976. 192p. index. LC 76-12637. ISBN 0-688-03069-6. $6.95. COOKERY

Sherwin's seven steps begin with "market awareness" and move on to such things as "apple pie alternatives" (foreign cuisines), and "marathon cooking" (cook one day for all the week's meals). I agree with almost everything she suggests in the great scheme to lower a family's food costs; however, it's all been said before. Although this book would be useful for a young person "starting out," it is not a necessary purchase for libraries.—Johanna Ezell, Washington County Free Lib., Hagerstown, Md.

Townsend, Doris McFerran. Culinary Crafting: the art of garnishing and decorating food.

Rutledge Bks.: Scribners. 1976. 192p. illus., some color. index. ISBN 0-87469-003-X. $10.95. COOKERY

Here is a worthy companion to the finest collection of general and specialty cookbooks. Townsend writes for fledgling and experienced cooks and designs combinations of food that enhance its inherent beauty and please both eye and palate. She provides hundreds of ideas, both simple and complex, delicate and dramatic, for garnishes and decorations suitable for appetizers, beverages, soups, main dishes, sandwiches, salads, vegetables, desserts, and special occasions. Most ingredients are readily available, and are used with imagination and restraint; only recipes not likely to be found in general cookbooks are included. Desserts such as "Sparkling Fruit Pyramid" serve also as a striking autumn centerpiece. A lively and unique addition to all cookbook collections.—Eleanor H. Broadus, formerly with Northern Illinois Univ. Lib., DeKalb

LANGUAGE ARTS

Morse, J. Mitchell. Prejudice and Literature.

Temple Univ. Pr. Dec. 1976. c. 200p. LC 76-20169. ISBN 0-87722-072-7. $8.95. LANG

A noble cause forms the central argument of this book—that the ability to express oneself verbally with coherence and precision is not merely an intellectual nicety, but a social necessity for those who would avoid political or economic exploitation. By accepting fuzzy verbal expression, Mitchell says, we lose the ability to distinguish between fuzzy thought and valid principles. The author backs up his thesis with a multitude of examples from politics, history, and literature in which misuse or misunderstanding of words leads to pain and trouble for the mass of mankind. Unfortunately, he chooses to categorize his examples as the abuse of metaphor when in fact most of his categories of verbal imprecision result not from linguistic myths but from notional myths. Furthermore, his own writing style has an irritating tendency to drift from the sublime to the coyly familiar. However, for those concerned, the book may serve as inspiration to go on fighting the good fight against sloppy language.—Joan M. Friedman, Yale Center for British Art and British Studies

Literature

Athanassakis, Apostolos N., tr. The Homeric Hymns.

Johns Hopkins. 1976. 157p. index. $8.50; pap. $2.45. POETRY/LIT

The "Homeric" Hymns are a rich source for students of Greek religion, mythology, and thought; they are also fine poetry. Because this translation is stately, graceful, and close to the original (it is similar in tone to the famous versions of the Iliad and Odyssey by Lattimore), it will serve its readers' purposes well. Its value is enhanced by a brief but useful introduction and copious notes which mark cult practices, context of time and place, mythical variants, and literary parallels. The notes may leave the uninitiated unsatisfied, however (e.g., the reader must equate Hades with Aidoneus) and occasional information seems gratuitous (e.g., modern Greek Easter celebrations applied to Demeter's mourning).—Elizabeth A. Fisher, Dept. of Classics, Georgetown Univ., Washington, D.C.

Clareson, Thomas D., ed. Voices for the Future: essays on major science fiction writers. Vol. 1.

Popular Pr: Bowling Green Univ. 1976. 283p. LC 76-10939. ISBN 0-87972-119-7. $12.50; pap. ISBN 0-87972-120-0. $4.95. LIT

This book of 12 longish essays is as good an introduction to the work of the

"The search for Cheap Chow (as it's called here) has always been an international concern. Lo directs the chef to the Chinese way . . . He advocates using cheese in a number of recipes to add milk products to Chinese cuisine and so heighten its healthfulness. Lo aims to cut food bills by 50%. For too many people today, this may well be a necessity."
—Publishers Weekly

LC: 76-9474
Cloth $8.95 ISBN: 0-394-40771-7
Paper $3.45 ISBN: 0-394-73231-6

CHINESE COOKING ON NEXT TO NOTHING
by Kenneth H.C. Lo
Author of Chinese Vegetable Cooking
Cloth $6.95, paper $3.95

Recommended

201 E. 50th St.
New York 10022

giants of the sf world as one could wish for. It is, in addition, an indication of how many academics these days are treating that world to the benefits of the scholarly, analytical mind. The stories of Jack Williamson, Olaf Stapledon, and Heinlein are exhumed, explicated, examined, and extolled by literary critics such as Maxine Moore and David N. Samuelson. Also included are pieces on Vonnegut, Clarke, Bradbury, C. L. Moore, Simak, and Asimov. All the essays are thoughtful and probing. The book is designated Volume 1, and Clareson hints at more of the same in years to come. This reviewer hopes so.—Matthew Hartman, Univ. of British Columbia Lib., Vancouver, Canada

Coxe, Louis. Enabling Acts: selected essays in criticism.

Univ. of Missouri Pr. 1976. 164p. LC 76-4485. ISBN 0-8262-0200-4. $9.50. LIT

Arguing that American literature has lost its way in the maze of extremist symbolism, Coxe calls for a practical working aesthetic with a commitment to language—especially to the language of metaphor. This central concern with metaphor echoes throughout these 13 essays. An accomplished poet and dramatist, Coxe writes perceptively and sensitively about writers mostly out of fashion at present: E. A. Robinson, Thomas Lovell Beddoes, James Gould Cozzens, Edith Wharton, Edward Thomas, John Peale Bishop, and Phelps Putnam. He also writes incisively on such topics as the imaginative use of the past, poetry and religion, and the narrative poem. Coxe is a writer of force and originality, and he possesses a piercing wit which only occasionally lapses into glibness. If his new aesthetic remains somewhat vague and sketchy, his essays accomplish the critic's primary task: they send his readers back to those authors he cares about convinced of the pleasure and profit to come. For large literature collections.—Richard J. Kelly, Univ. of Minnesota Lib., Minneapolis

Creeth, Edmund. Mankynde in Shakespeare.

Univ. of Georgia Pr. 1976. 192p. index. LC 74-15204. ISBN 0-8203-0373-9. $8.50. LIT

Ever since Willard Farnham wrote The Medieval Heritage of Elizabethan Tragedy (1936), scholars of English Renaissance drama have been working to prove a continuum between the English drama of the Middle Ages and the contributions of the Tudor-Stuart period. Creeth argues that three of Shakespeare's four great tragedies are direct-line successors to specific medieval plays: Macbeth is the last English temptation play, a type established by The Castell of Perseverance; Othello succeeds Wisdom Who Is Christ partly because the color black in the latter play stands for sensuality and white for reason; and King Lear inherits the values of The Pride of Life, a play about the coming of death. Due to the paucity of surviving morality plays Creeth has little evidence to support his contribution to the unbroken line theory. There is not a shred of evidence to prove that Shakespeare ever read or saw a morality play. Nevertheless, because the readings of the three aforementioned medieval plays are excellent, this book is recommended for advanced collections of research materials in early English drama.—Sanford Sternlicht, Dept. of Theater, SUNY at Oswego

Dolby, William. A History of Chinese Drama.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. 1976. 327p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-1800. ISBN 0-06-491736-3. $30. LIT

Dolby's ambitious effort to encompass in one volume an outline history of 1000 years of Chinese drama is a noteworthy contribution to the growing number of studies of Chinese literature. Any such work is bound to suffer from unavoidable shortcomings, and Dolby is fully cognizant of this. His success lies in his ability to provide a clear-cut exposition of the major patterns of development and change, in his astute selection of important playwrights and their works, and in his analysis of the interaction between the native tradition and the foreign influences (ranging from Buddhism in the pre-Tang period to Marxism in the 20th Century). The study is enriched by 18 excerpts from representative writings in the different periods. The book ends with the current movement to make a radical break with the traditional theater. A note explaining Pinyin romanization would have been helpful.—Ranbir Vohra, Dept. of Political Science, Trinity Coll., Hartford, Conn.

Doubleday, Neal Frank. Variety of Attempt: British and American fiction in the early nineteenth century.

Univ. of Nebraska Pr. 1976. 218p. index. LC 75-38057. ISBN 0-8032-0876-6. $12.95. LIT

Doubleday is no stranger to this rich literary period, during which, he argues, not only in Britain but also in America both well and lesser known fiction writers were searching for new subjects and techniques to expand the genre of the Romantic novel. Just as in Britain contemporaries of Austen and Scott taught novelists how to deal with characters from all walks of life, in America, minor works along with those of Cooper and Hawthorne adapted the Gothic to the American scene and altered and developed the tradition of fiction. Doubleday points up the concurrent influence of an emerging company of American critics exploring the possibilities for fictional expressions of the American experience. His modest, readable study persuasively illustrates "the interplay between convention and the new attempt," but so much space is devoted to detailed analyses of novelists seldom studied below the graduate level, many libraries will balk at the book's high price.—Suzanne Sutton, Bloomfield Township P.L., Bloomfield Hills, Mich.

Eagleton, Terry. Marxism and Literary Criticism.

Univ. of California Pr. 1976. 87p. bibliog. index. LC 76-6707. $6.95; pap. $2.95. LIT

Short treatises on literary theory and criticism are rare, perhaps because it is much easier to expatiate. Eagleton's brief, but concise, analysis of Marxist criticism is consequently a welcome addition to the evaluative material already in existence. It ranges from Marx and Engels to Lenin and Trotsky, from Lukács and Benjamin to Goldmann and Macherey; and facts are deftly coupled with careful interpretations that emerge quickly and succinctly in four categories: literature and history, form and content, the writer and commitment, the author as producer. Wisely disclaiming comprehensiveness, Eagleton has nevertheless succeeded in creating cameos. And perhaps the greatest virtue of his study is that it stimulates the reader's curiosity. Good footnotes and a selected bibliography provide ample information for further study. In short, a prodigious booklet. It should be in most public and academic libraries.—Gari R. Muller, Div. of Humanities, New Coll., Sarasota, Fla.

Landrum, Larry N. & others. Dimensions of Detective Fiction.

Popular Pr: Bowling Green Univ. 1976. 290p. LC 76-14646. ISBN 0-87972-123-5. $12.95; pap. ISBN 0-87972-124-3. $4.50. LIT

This serious and usually successful collection of essays suffers from the inherent pitfalls of all such works, yet the quality of the essays is generally quite good. Some pieces are reprinted from journals (the earliest such reprint originally appearing in 1950), but most are quite recent articles. The essayists generally consider the mystery genre to be worthy of legitimate literary criticism, although one or two jump to an analysis of mystery readers "in terms of their unsatisfied motivational drives." Roughly divided into "The Genre," "Styles," and "The Genre Extended," the essays probe the historical and political context of a very popular form of literature. Any anthology that can explore within its pages J. Edgar Hoover's "treatment of crime as a public relations problem" is definitely recommended.—Sheila Pepper, McMaster Univ. Lib., Hamilton, Ontario, Canada

Literary Monographs. Vol. 8. Mid-Nineteenth Century Writers: Eliot, De Quincey, Emerson.

Univ. of Wisconsin Pr. 1976. 216p. ed. by Eric Rothstein & Joseph Anthony Wittreich Jr. LC 66-25869. ISBN 0-299-06950-8. $12.50. LIT

This is the eighth volume in this respected series of American and English literary studies. Inaugurated in 1967, the series serves scholars "whose work might take a form too lengthy for journals but too brief for a separate book." Volume 8 contains three insightful essays: "The Inward Vocation: an Essay on George Eliot's Daniel Deronda" by Thomas P. Wolfe, "Lonely Empires: Personal and Public Visions of Thomas De Quincey" by Robert M. Maniquis, and "Necessary Truths: the Poetics of Emerson's Proverbs" by Ralph C. La Rosa. Academic libraries will find this book equal in quality and value to previous volumes in the series.—Dennis Petticoffer, California Inst. of Technology Lib., Pasadena

Martin, John Sayre. E. M. Forster: the endless journey.

Cambridge Univ. Pr. 1976. 174p. LC 76-4755. ISBN 0-521-21272-3. $14.95; pap. ISBN 0-521-29082-1. $3.95. LIT

This introductory study of Forster's fiction offers an adequate overview. Martin's methodical analyses of the six novels and various short stories are unexciting but competent. His emphasis on "the fundamental dichotomy between public life and private, between the aims and needs of society and those of the individual," is well placed; and he accurately perceives that all of Forster's protagonists undergo a spiritual and often physical journey during which they become aware of this crippling split between inner and outer lives. While his evaluations of the novels, like his analyses, are largely traditional, the ranking of A Room with a View as more successful than Howard's End is both a surprising and provocative departure from the critical norm. The reader new to Forster will find this study to be a useful literary Baedeker, but those not needing such hand-held guidance are likely to be bored.—William A. Ott, Timberland Regional Lib., Lacey, Wash.

Montale, Eugenio. Poet in Our Time.

Urizen Bks. 1976. 87p. tr. from Italian by Alastair Hamilton. ISBN 0-916354-49-0. $5.95; pap. ISBN 0-916354-50-4. $2.95. LIT

A slim volume of prose by a Nobel laureate whose métier is poetry. Items written 50 years ago are included with one or two more recent pieces. Most entries are brief—mere jottings, yet Montale expounds upon civilization, a semidestroyed world, diminished man, God, poetry, criticism, but particularly the coarse materialization and death of art and the problems of communication in a contemporary society whose language is in a state of crisis. If it all seems a bit abstruse, it is because Montale neglects to supply specific illustrations of his brilliant exegetic generalizations. The book includes a selected bibliography of criticism of his works.—James J. Martine, Dept. of English, St. Bonaventure Univ., N.Y.

Pate, Janet. The Great Villains.

Bobbs. 1976. 120p. illus. LC 75-10956. ISBN 0-672-52153-9. $8.95. CINEMA/LIT

The author has attempted to provide brief glimpses of 40 villains from various media. This pastiche includes such unlikely candidates as Captain Hook, Goldfinger, and Brer Fox, as well as the more "legitimate" villains such as Bluebeard, Edward Hyde, and Fu Manchu. For each character the author offers a descriptive passage from the original novel, myth, comic strip, or what have you; a horridly condensed synopsis of the story; the historical background of the character (if any); a few photos or sketches of the villain as he/she has been represented in films or illustrations; and an incomplete list of theatrical, cinematic, and published versions of the work in which the villain appeared. There is no logical order to any of this. The bibliographic information about the various publications is practically worthless; the layout is poor; and the information is scanty and misleading. The author has only succeeded in rendering some of literature's most intriguing characters as uninteresting as cold toast.—Judith Riva Bossman, Fort Lewis Coll. Lib., Durango, Colo.

Peterson, William S. Victorian Heretic: Mrs Humphry Ward's "Robert Elsmere."

Leicester Univ. Pr., dist. by Humanities. 1976. 259p. bibliog. index. $8. LIT

This study is an excellent companion to Enid Huws Jones's Mrs. Humphry Ward (LJ 11/15/73). However, where Jones's book was an account of Ward's life and career, Peterson deals chiefly with her best-selling novel Robert Elsmere (1888) and uses it as a focal point in showing Ward's intellectual, literary, and religious growth. As a granddaughter of Dr. Thomas Arnold and the niece of Matthew Arnold, Ward was at the center of the religious and intellectual crisis of Victorian times; thus, Robert Elsmere, her novel of a doubting Anglican clergyman, is her attempt to portray these conflicts and to deal with the "higher criticism" of continental biblical scholarship. Peterson's study is an informative, well-written analysis of a once-important figure in English literary history. Recommended for large public and university libraries.—David A. Dillon, Univ. of New Orleans Lib.

Malraux
LIFE & WORK

CONTRIBUTORS:
Walter G. Langlois
Isaiah Berlin
Hugh Thomas
A.J. Ayer
Pierre Bockel
Gaston Palewski
André Holleaux
Chang Mai Yuang
Girija Mookerjee
Tadao Takemoto
Françoise Dorenlot
John Lehmann
Manes Sperber
E. H. Gombrich
Jean Leymarie
C. L. Sulzberger
Victoria Ocampo

In this series of biographical and critical essays edited by Martine de Courcel, the contributors each offer a different view of Malraux's life and work. Malraux himself completes the image by contributing a major new essay, a meditation on art and literature. Includes 32 pages of photographs, some from Malraux's own collection. $12.95.

HBJ HARCOURT BRACE JOVANOVICH

Rippier, Joseph Story. The Short Stories of Sean O'Faolain: a study in descriptive techniques.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. 1976. 162p. bibliog. [illegible] LIT

Although Rippier limits himself to selected O'Faolain short stories, he discusses them within the context of English-language short stories of the 1930's. Thus, his unassuming analyses are useful for any student of the short story (as opposed to the tale, sketch, etc.) or writer of it. After all, O'Faolain is merely a talented writer who, unlike Yeats or Joyce—or Hemingway or Welty—does not transcend regionalism. Rippier shows how O'Faolain succeeds when he uses language to mediate between the reader and the real story, how he disappoints (he is too slick to fail) when he loads language in an attempt to circumvent the brevity and plot limitations of the genre.—Marilyn Gaddis Rose, Dept. of Comparative Literature, SUNY at Binghamton

Singh, Amritjit. The Novels of the Harlem Renaissance: twelve black writers, 1923-1933.

Pennsylvania State Univ. Pr. 1976. 175p. bibliog. index. LC 75-27170. ISBN 0-271-01208-0. $12. LIT

The Harlem Renaissance and black America in the Twenties are given extensive coverage in this thoroughly researched book, which is based primarily on 21 novels by 12 black writers, including W. E. B. Dubois, Arna Bontemps, Countee Cullen, Langston Hughes, and Jean Toomer. Singh first presents an excellent overview of the Twenties by combining the social, political, and cultural forces into a cohesive narrative. In examining the novels Singh focuses on the issues of self-definition, class, caste, and color. Singh demonstrates a deep knowledge and understanding of this era by providing a smooth flowing criticism of the works that have helped shape the black novel as it is known today. Highly recommended.—Pamela G. Bonnell, Ft. Rucker, Ala.

Skulsky, Harold. Spirits Finely Touched: the testing of value and integrity in four Shakespearean plays.

Univ. of Georgia Pr. 1976. 288p. index. LC 74-18586. ISBN 0-8203-0368-2. $12.50. LIT

Skulsky confronts us with serious reinterpretations—and better yet, questions—in and behind plays about which we may have presumed critical familiarity: Hamlet, Measure for Measure, King Lear, and Othello. He concerns himself with a particular kind of dramatic suspense, involving the possibility "that we shall be compelled to give up . . . the premises on which we ground our concern [for a character's] moral integrity." He shows how a questioning of the existence of grounds for moral choice is related to the accessibility of characters' minds to one another. The book is masterfully articulated, attesting a judicious knowledge not only of Shakespeare and Shakespearean criticism, but of the classical and Christian tradition so poignantly at stake in the issues Skulsky raises. The book will reward full and repeated attention.—Ralph Flores, Dept. of English and Comp. Lit., Univ. of California, Irvine

Swingewood, Alan. The Novel and Revolution.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. 1976. 288p. LC 75-21103. ISBN 0-06-496682-8. $22.50. LIT

Swingewood's book pivots on the contention that "If there is a crisis in the novel then it must be traced not to collectivism but to the problematic nature of bourgeois hegemony and the failure of proletarian revolution in Russia and Europe." The author's analyses of the theories of Goldman, Lukács, and Gramsci, his elaboration of a "genuinely dialectical" theory of the novel with emphasis on the idea of praxis, his examinations of various novels (by Conrad, Gissing, Bely, Serge, Koestler, and Solzhenitsyn) whose theme is revolution, and his discussions of the historical events or periods to which the novels refer are likely to strike the reader not as unscholarly nor as dealing with insignificant matters but as cramped and hollow. And the book is fearfully expensive.—Richard Kuczkowski, Dept. of English, Bronx Community Coll., CUNY

Traversi, Derek. T.S. Eliot: the longer poems; "The Waste Land," "Ash Wednesday," "Four Quartets."

HBJ. 1976. 237p. bibliog. LC 76-18793. ISBN 0-15-191380-3. $10; pap. ISBN 0-15-692020-4. $3.95. LIT

In what may be the most comprehensive study of Eliot's major poems to date, Traversi identifies themes and references, explores images and techniques, distinguishes structures, and demonstrates convincingly the continuity of poetic development throughout the poet's work. Avoiding both the polemical or quirky position, the author imposes neither theological nor philosophical argument upon the poems, but carefully focuses attention upon the poetry itself. His study of the Four Quartets, perhaps the most thorough critical exposition in print of that work, merits the attention of scholars and students alike. This clearly written and carefully documented work is recommended for all collections devoted to modern poetry.— Walter Waring, Dept. of English, Kalamazoo Coll., Mich.

Tucker, James. The Novels of Anthony Powell.

Columbia Univ. Pr. 1976. 197p. index. LC 76-15201. ISBN 0-231-04150-0. $12. LIT

It's good to have another book on Powell, especially since he recently completed his monumental 12-volume novel A Dance to the Music of Time (see Hearing Secret Harmonies, LJ 3/1/76). This book of criticism is marked by a readable, pleasant writing style. It is not very scholarly, but it does include a useful 30-page who's who index to the many characters in Powell's magnum opus. Tucker, while concentrating on this mammoth work, does include some highly perceptive discussions of Powell's early novels and preliminary techniques that would become most successful later. Tucker is also amazingly even-handed in his evaluation of Powell, seeing both the cleverness of his irony and the narrowness of his ironic range. Highly recommended for libraries with major collections on the modern British novel, but it's not for the general circulation library.—John Louis DiGaetani, Dept. of English, Long Island Univ., Brooklyn

Tucker, Nicholas, ed. & intro. Suitable for Children?: controversies in children's literature.

Univ. of California Pr. 1976. 224p. bibliog. index. LC 76-6016. ISBN 0-520-03236-5. $12.95. LIT

The objective of this book is never very clear. There is a limited amount of the "controversy" mentioned in the subtitle. What we have is a series of articles on children's literature, with an occasionally incisive introduction. Most of the selections are from English magazines—some are critical essays, others are extracts like G. K. Chesterton's "Story of the Sixth Commandment" from The History of the Fairchild Family. Most interesting to American readers may be Part 2, which deals with comic books. Nevertheless, selections remain short and without a great deal of development. However, since there is still little criticism of children's literature, this book is recommended.—Gilbert B. Cross, Dept. of English, Eastern Michigan Univ., Ypsilanti

Williams, Ellen. Harriet Monroe and the Poetry Renaissance: the first ten years of "Poetry," 1912-22.

Univ. of Illinois Pr. 1976. 280p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-252-00478-7. $8.95. LIT

Using the correspondence files of Poetry, Williams has thoroughly studied the role of the journal, its editor, and its contributors. Her account is clear and readably interesting, if somewhat humorless. She delineates precisely Monroe's accomplishment; and although she adds nothing startlingly new to our understanding of the individuals involved (Pound, Lindsay, Sandburg, Stevens, et al.) and the resurgence of interest in poetry in which they played a part, she has greatly clarified Pound's role in the venture and the politics of poetry in that era by providing more informed judgments and supportive details (many from heretofore unpublished letters) than we have had before. The book will be of primary value to students of literature, but it is also a significant contribution to publishing history and it reveals enough of the personalities of its cast of charactrs to appeal to a much wider readership. The bibliography is fairly extensive and useful.—Arthur E. Jones Jr., Drew Univ. Lib., Madison, N.J.

Williams, Merryn. A Preface to Hardy.

Longman. (Preface Bks.). 1976. 182p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-28382. ISBN 0-582-35113-8. $9; pap. ISBN 0-582-35114-6. $6. BIOG/LIT

This preface contains a healthy sampling of information. The question is, who will use it? There is a brief life of Hardy, in connection with a section on the man as a representative of rural areas when all intellectual and social movement was toward the cities. There is also a supply of background information on Hardy as a Victorian, supplemented by snippet-lives of historical individuals. The book reviews the major novels, concentrating on The Mayor of Casterbridge. It gives special attention to some of Hardy's themes and to his growing troubles with the complacent public. Finally, there is a selection of ten of Hardy's poems, each with a brief interpretive review. The information here is too thin and stereotyped for college use. The discussion of the literary environment is especially weak. A full biography would do all the jobs better.—Stephen R. Rounds, Dept. of English, Kansai Gaidai, Hirakata, Japan

Wolfe, Peter. John Fowles: magus and moralist.

Bucknell Univ. Pr. 1976. 178p. bibliog. index. LC 75-5149. ISBN 0-8387-1700-4. $9.50. LIT

This is a superb, concise introduction to the primary works and philosophy of Fowles. As Wolfe explains, Fowles has maintained a unique position in literature as a best-selling author who has managed to retain a respected literary reputation. After presenting a general introductory survey of Fowles's philosophy as revealed in The Aristos, Wolfe examines in greater depth The Collector, The Magus, and The French Lieutenant's Woman, devoting separate chapters to each. Wolfe's lucid, readable style should appeal not only to general readers, but it should also provide insight for scholars. The book is therefore a worthy addition to public and college libraries alike.—Dennis Petticoffer, California Inst. of Technology Lib., Pasadena

MUSIC

Palmer, Tony. All You Need Is Love: the story of popular music.

Grossman, dist. by Viking. 1976. 352p. ed. by Paul Medlicott. photogs., some color. index. ISBN 0-670-11448-0. $15. MUSIC

As the title might suggest, this is not a pedantic history but rather a lively, slick survey of popular music, focusing on its forms and styles, social environments and commercial development. The book is based on research and interviews originally incorporated into the BBC Television series of the same name, which traced popular music's paths in this country and in England in film clips and photographs and music. In the book, jazz, ragtime, blues, vaudeville, musical comedy, swing, country, folk, and especially rock music are surveyed with an interpretive treatment. Three features of the book stand out: there has obviously been an attempt to get facts straight and interpretations about events and people accurate; 465 black-and-white illustrations show early performers and places, grotesque portraits of new glitter rock groups and hundreds of historical scenes and people in between; and, 12 interesting early sheet music covers reproduced in full color. Anecdotes and quotes relating to important popular music personalities appear throughout the text, and there is a name and topical index. This is a substantial, if rather informal, historical study.—Stephen M. Fry, UCLA Music Lib.

Specialists in medieval music who are interested in reviewing for LJ are invited to contact Anneliese Schwarzer, The Book Review.

Weiss-Stauffacher, Heinrich with collab. of Rudolf Bruhin. The Marvelous World of Music Machines.

Kodansha, dist. by Harper. 1976. 244p. tr. from German by James Underwood. illus., mainly color. bibliog. index. LC 75-13109. ISBN 0-87011-258-9. $75. MUSIC

This is one of the most beautifully illustrated books of musical automata and mechanical musical instruments ever produced; it is also one of the most expensive. The more than 300 music boxes, clocks, orchestrions, player pianos, performing mechanical figurines, automatic organs, carillons, and other esoteric mechanized instruments, shown here in excellent color and annotated with full descriptions and measurements, are all examples from the author's world-renowned collection and typify the highest achievements of the mechanical instrument artisan of the last three centuries. Organization and layout are well planned and artistic, making this as much an art book as a musical instrument catalog. A five-page introduction concisely explores the development of mechanical instruments, and there is a useful index. Appendixes contain technical data and reproduced documents describing the Welte-Mignon reproducing piano, the Hupfeld player piano plus orchestrions and other pneumatic instruments.—Stephen M. Fry, UCLA Music Lib.

Philosophy

Malcolm, Norman. Memory and Mind.

Cornell Univ. Pr. Jan. 1977. 288p. index. ISBN 0-8014-1018-5. $12.50. PHIL

In Part 1, which concerns mental mechanisms of memory and deals with such matters as the objects of memory, representation and direct awareness of the past, dispositional vis-à-vis occurrent memory, the picture theory of memory, etc., Malcolm discusses the major philosophical accounts of memory. In Part 2 he examines the physical basis of memory, analyzing the concept of a memory trace in terms of its three allegedly defining features: causing a memory response, storing an experience or information, and representing what is remembered by being structurally similar to it. Here, he is especially good in showing how unacknowledged philosophical assumptions lead to confused conclusions in empirical science. A lucid, sophisticated, and incisive work.—Robert Hoffman, Dept. of Philosophy, York Coll., CUNY

Needham, Joseph. Moulds of Understanding: a pattern of natural philosophy.

St. Martin's. 1976. 320p. ed. & intro. by Gary Werskey. index. LC 75-37252. $18.95. PHIL

These 11 essays by the well-known historian of Chinese science, British biochemist, and "Christian socialist of the left" span over 40 years. Needham's world view is that of emerging evolution—similar to Spencer's—but based on dialectical and historical materialism, achieving its peak in a world socialist society, with the means of production collectively owned by mankind and a classless democratic society which equals the kingdom of God on earth. The moulds of understanding reality are science, philosophy, religion, art, history, all complementing each other. Needham's breadth of interest and learning is astonishing. He moves with ease through different fields—often with too much ease, without solid arguments for his theses. His style is urbane, his openness of mind engaging, his faith in the communist society robust—and naïve.—Victor Antolin, Dept. of Philosophy, Loyola Coll., Baltimore, Md.

POETRY

Ackerman, Diane. The Planets: a cosmic pastoral.

Morrow. 1976. 159p. illus. LC 76-14840. ISBN 0-688-03088-2. $6.95. POETRY

Admirable. I find the vigorous language in these poems which celebrate and catalogue the planets, and the spry imagination of this poet, admirable. Ackerman tells us she gambles "to pull "Written in the latter part of the 14th Century . . . Three Kingdoms is filled with characters and adventures that have made it one of the most popular as well as one of the greatest of Chinese literary masterpieces. It was one of the classics most enjoyed by Mao in his youth . . . It should be considered by most libraries."

—Library Journal

ISBN: 0-394-40722-9
LC: 76-9607 $10

THREE KINGDOMS
China's Epic Drama
by Lo Kuan-chung

Recommended

free of Earth's whalebone stay/ and sally out in the cold compress/ of the universe. . . ." But what are the stakes, really? Certainly she risks losing her terrestrial readers who consider earthly forms universe enough. She risks losing our patience, for the poems are often tedious. She risks her own judgment that the sequence is "nothing more than a cerebral eddy." Although it is a tour de force for those interested in a spritely, gravid marriage of scientific fact and poetic fancy, I don't think she risks enough. One reads, says: o.k. or bravo. But not, yes.—Margaret Gibson, New London, Conn.

Arnett, Carroll. Tsalagi.
unpaged. $10; pap. $5.
Perlman, John. Nicole.
unpaged. $10; pap. $5.
Perlman, John. Self Portrait.
95p. $16; pap. $8. ea. vol: Elizabeth Pr. 1976. POETRY

The bewilderment and anguish of the Indian break into Arnett's poems: he cares; he is angry and able to name the absurdities. Arnett forces the Marine Corps motto semper fidelis to coexist with whorehouses, with the White Man's "tenant" Indian who says, "LAND/ Without this/ what is/ worth doing." In such ironies we learn just how short the distance between pride and prey: "a slave is anyone/ who waits for someone/ else to set him free."

Perlman's Nicole is not intended to be profound. It is a book of astonishment, a tribute to his daughter: "so she might know/ we come/ together for it/ for the knowing." Songs, dances, names, drawings, bedtimes, holidays occasion Nicole's discovery of novelty in the ordinary. The poems are not unexpected, yet thrive on surprise: " 'Is there only one/ life?/ I want to live a hundred lives./ I think I'll try/ to stay awake/ when I die.' " The book-length Self Portrait is another matter. Here Perlman creates a thing less of wonder than timelessness. True, it's been done, and well, by Williams—poems from paintings. Perlman, however, does it well again. His terse imagery captures light, shade, mood, and gesture: "the skull/ floats/ to the surface of the face/ her eyes/ low riding/ in that water/ right hand/ closes on the left wrist/ there her hands/ will pass/ untended/ down & thru the ribs' embrace" (after Woman on Her Deathbed by Jacques de Gheyn the younger).—Val Morehouse, Sandwich P.L., Mass.

Bennett, Jean, ed. Japanese Love Poems.
Doubleday. 1976. illus., some color. by Scott Cumming. ISBN 0-385-03085-1. $4.95. POETRY

It is always fascinating to read the love poetry of another culture and realize how similar people are. Bennett has chosen a wide range of poems (from Empress Iha-no-Hime of the 4th Century to Shimazaki Toson of the 20th Century) to display Japanese love poetry, but across time and culture the images of love remain understandable. Two samples—a folk song: "Nightingales in the plum tree,/ Deer in the maples/ Me and you:/ Fish and water." and Ishikawa Takuboku: "Today it seems to me that all my friends/ Have won distinction more than I in life,/ However, I have flowers bought/ And love my wife." A good addition to poetry collections.—Gary Hotham, Laurel, Md.

Burgess, Anthony. Moses: a narrative.
Stonehill, dist. by Dell. 1976. 189p. LC 76-13266. ISBN 0-88373-043-X. $8.95. POETRY

Before writing the TV script for a six-hour series on Moses (also made into a feature film), Burgess defined for himself the artistic problems inherent in his subject by writing "this sort of epic poem" based on Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy. He views the form of narrative verse as more workably cinematic than that of the novel, and observes that "Epics have more to do with wings than with walking, just like films." The Burgess wit and style are thus more economically in evidence here, but happily so. He has worked this graceful and readable long poetic narrative with touches both common and mythic, telling in vivid scenes and ringing dialogue the sweeping biblical story, giving it wings thereby.—Mary Soete, Phoenix P.L., Ariz.

Cummings, E. E. Tulips & Chimneys.
Liveright: Norton. 1976. 256p. ed. & afterword by George James Firmage. intro. by Richard S. Kennedy. LC 76-10204. ISBN 0-87140-622-5. $10; pap. ISBN 0-87140-112-6. $3.95. POETRY

E. E. Cummings once observed that it was impossible to "retranslate [his] poems out of typewriter language into linotype-ese." So readers and scholars will applaud the appearance of this new edition of Tulips & Chimneys, the first in a series of Cummings Typescript Editions, under the general editorship of George J. Firmage, the poet's friend and official biographer. This facsimile edition amounts to a conflation of the original Tulips & Chimneys (1923) and two other works, XLI Poems (1925) and & (1925). The latter two were deemed aesthetically and morally unacceptable by the publishers Cummings first approached, and so the three works are here reunited in the typographically playful form their author intended.—Daniel L. Guillory, Dept. of English, Millikin Univ., Decatur, Ill.

Ferlinghetti, Lawrence. Who Are We Now?
New Directions, dist. by Lippincott. 1976. 80p. $6.50; pap. $1.95. POETRY

Ferlinghetti believes in Utopia and his conviction about what is stalling the new age is firmly held. The poems depend on familiar dichotomies: Bob Dylan against "the ones with The Wall Street Journal/ who never speak to strangers," wilderness against freeway, Big Sur against the rest of the world. Ferlinghetti tells us we are the same people we were 15 years ago. This vision of the world is not new but Ferlinghetti takes it as far as it can go. "Manhatta steaming in sea-vines/ the only sound a vast thrumming of crickets/ a cry of sea-birds high over/ in empty eternity."—Lynn Emanuel, Dept. of English, Univ. of Pittsburgh

Figueroa, John. Ignoring Hurts: poems.
Three Continents. 1976. intro. by Frank Getlein. 121p. LC 76-16342. ISBN 0-914478-43-5. $9; pap. ISBN 0-914478-44-3. $7. POETRY

Most of these poems are uneventful, although those in the last section display zest and humor. Repeatedly, poems that start out fine are spoiled because Figueroa doesn't know when to let go of a poem, as in "I watch the light return," "Lacrymae Rerum," and "Oh when in green fields/ I have recalled thy." And there are such transgressions as "the inscooped corner" and "belcantoing. But I recommend "At Home the Green Remains" with its marvelous lines—"At home the green remains: The palm throws/ back/ its head and breathes above the still blue sea"; "Portrait of a Woman (and a Man)" with West Indian speech as counterpoint; and "From the Caribbean with Love"—a long poem filled with restless questioning and contrasts capable of stirring heart and mind.—Louis Sasso, Boston P.L.

Graves, Robert. New Collected Poems.
Doubleday. Jan. 1977. intro. by James McKinley. LC 76-14051. ISBN 0-385-11507-5. $10. POETRY

This is the fifth time Graves has collected his poems, and a hefty portion (about 300 poems) of this volume is new work. In 1965 Graves wrote: "My main theme was always the practical impossibility, transcended only by a belief in miracle, of absolute love continuing between man and woman." These new poems in no way belie that judgment. In 1959 Randall Jarrell praised him as "a craftsman, but a craftsman whose heart was in his fingers." That eminent craftsman is still very much present too, alongside the lover, in his latest poetry. Graves' mastery of his traditional forms is complete: they serve him perfectly, never calling attention to themselves except as graceful supports to the whole of each poem. He is eager to press on, "To start all over again; indeed why should I not?/ With a new pen, clean paper, full inkpot." Indeed, why should he not? We'll all be in his debt.—James McKenzie, Dept. of English, Univ. of North Dakota, Grand Forks

Griffin, Susan. Like the Iris of an Eye.
Harper. 1976. 144p. ISBN 0-06-011513-0. $7.95. POETRY

If there is a stronger, better, more forceful feminist poem than Griffin's "An Answer to a Man's Question, 'What Can I Do About Women's Liberation?'," I'd like to see it—and that is only one excellent poem in a uniformly excellent collection by one of the most-quoted feminist poets writing today. A fine anthology of work that has been available before this only in anthologies and small press offerings, for collections serving women and/or lovers of good contemporary poetry.—Audrey B. Eaglen, Cuyahoga County P.L., Cleveland

Kerman, Judith. The Jakoba Poems: 1968-1974.
Lifshin, Lyn. Some Madonna Poems.
Shiffert, Edith Marcombe. A Grasshopper.

ea. vol: White Pine Pr., 15 Mt. Vernon Ave., Buffalo, N.Y. 14210. 1976. unpaged. pap. $1.50. POETRY

These inexpensive poetry pamphlets in uniform format are each conceived as a book or series complete in itself rather than a compilation of assorted poems.

Lifshin is the best known poet here. In Some Madonna Poems she attempts to re-create herself as a tough, gutsy woman. As in most of her books, the quality of the poems varies greatly. She's best where she's forced to the limits of her imagination, so that the rhythm of the poem takes over ("Saw Dust Madonna" or "Rat's Nest Madonna"). Other times, she tries to toss out a poem, offhandedly, self-conscious of herself as a poet, and the result is trivia and flatness, as in "Letter Writing Madonna" or "Nickel Madonna." But there are enough good poems here to make the book well worth reading.

In The Jakoba Poems, Kerman speaks of two subjects which have become almost clichés in recent poetry: women and madness. Yet she seems to bring a freshness to them. Her words are calm. Lines and images lead naturally from one to the next. She has a soothing way of letting the poem have its own life without imposing her controlling thoughts on it. With all her seriousness, she knows how to be playful at the same time.

It's hard to believe the same editor chose Shiffert's work. These pseudo-haiku tell us nothing of nature or man in nature (as Gary Snyder's poetry might), and have almost nothing to do with the interests of the reader. If one compared them with traditional haiku, one would see that Shiffert perceives only the surface, never the deeper relations behind it.—Rochelle Ratner, Poetry Columnist, "Soho Weekly News," New York

Różewicz, Tadeusz. The Survivor and Other Poems.

Princeton Univ. Pr. Dec. 1976. 159p. tr. & intro. by Magnus J. Kyrnski & Robert A. Maguire. bilingual ed. bibliog. $12.50. POETRY

Since the late 1960's Różewicz has been attracting increasing international attention. As the translators point out, he has been writing primarily prose and drama since 1969, but, notwithstanding this less poetic interlude, Różewicz is one of the best, most powerful, most accessible poets of our time. His matter-of-factness, which comes through in almost all the English translations, catches the bland, detached voice of modern man in the West. His poetry does not merely identify the banality of the present, it makes readers uncomfortable about it. The translators have given us some new poems not already translated by Czesław Miłosz, Adam Czerniawski, and others. A helpful and interesting introduction for non-Polish readers accompanies these good translations.—Hubert F. Babinski, Dept. of Comparative Literature, Columbia Univ.

POETRY

Smith, Dave. Cumberland Station.

Univ. of Illinois Pr. Dec. 1976. 112p. LC 76-13582. ISBN 0-252-00581-3. $7.95; pap. ISBN 0-252-00582-1. $3.45. POETRY

The geographical locus of these poems lies in a rough triangle formed by the tidewater marshes of Virginia, the coal country of the Cumberland Valley, and the rusty citadel of Detroit. The psychological terrain is that of "grinding loneliness" suffered by working men in trawlers, steel mills, and coal mines. The South generally becomes a metaphor for failure. We witness a montage of Appalachian ghost towns where the mail is "left to rot" like the lives of the former tenants. The characters in Cumberland Station are all tragic victims, like the snake-bitten fundamentalists in "Snake Sermon." Yet the lesson of their lives is not lost on the poet; he is replenished by the same nature that sometimes quashes the workers. In "Picking Cherries," he harvests the sweet fruit after much labor, posing the essential question, "Haven't we loved this climbing?"—Daniel L. Guillory, Dept. of English, Millikin Univ., Decatur, Ill.

Stafford, Kim Robert & William Stafford. Braided Apart.

Confluence Pr., Art Center, Lewis-Clark Campus, Lewiston, Idaho 83501. 1976. 61p. illus. LC 76-29136. ISBN 0-917652-01-0. pap. $3.50. POETRY

Braided apart: in the ambiguities of that usually straightforward verb "to braid" we already have a clue to the relationship between the two poets in this book, William Stafford and his son Kim. The two alternate poems here, often sharing a common landscape, even a common diction, but what we have finally is dialogue, not monologue. William Stafford's poems, though their surfaces seem simpler, are never really simple. They keep leading us, albeit gently, deeper and deeper within themselves, within ourselves. Kim's poems are more peopled, they sparkle more, have more images. How lucky we are, I think, to have two Staffords writing poetry. In the words of William: "the hidden streams of Oregon/ extravagantly tangled in the dark/ are rushing by all night . . ."—Linda Pastan, Potomac, Md.

Political Science & International Affairs

Bell, Geoffrey. The Protestants of Ulster.

Urizen Bks., dist. by Dutton. 1976. 159p. index. pap. $4.95.

Farrell, Michael. Northern Ireland: the Orange state.

Urizen Bks., dist. by Dutton. 1976. 406p. bibliog. index. $10. HIST/POL SCI

The authors of both of these books are apparently linked with People's Democracy which, as described in the useful list of organizations in Farrell's book, is a leftist Irish political group formed in 1968 as part of the Civil Rights movement in Northern Ireland and which is now attempting to provide a non-Communist Marxist alternative in both the North and the Republic.

Highly Recommended Columbia Titles

THE POLITICS OF EXCLUSION

Michael N. Danielson. "A truly outstanding study of the social effects of American housing policy...it demonstrates that too many suburbanites are determined to prevent even small numbers of poorer citizens, mainly blacks, from living in their neighborhoods and that zoning laws and county governments facilitate their prejudices. The book devotes special chapters to the unsuccessful attempts of municipal, state, and federal governments to scale these barriers and reviews relevant actions in the court system. The pessimistic conclusions on the limits of social mobility as a result of exclusionary housing policies are supported by massive research and sound reasoning." —Library Journal. LC 76-7609
ISBN 0-231-03697-3 Cloth $17.50
ISBN 0-231-08342-4 Paper $6.95

DEVELOPING THE ICBM
A Study in Bureaucratic Politics

Edmund Beard. "One of the major debating points of the 1960 presidential campaign was the 'Missile Gap' that existed between the U.S. and the Soviet Union. In this book Beard relies heavily on primary sources in order to assess the events, decisions, and personalities that led to a situation where a gap could be claimed...The picture that ultimately emerges is one of organizational inertia rather than villainy: policy rivalries both within and without the Air Force conspired to impede the development of missiles until a civilian Assistant Secretary forced through a crash program." —Library Journal. Institute of War and Peace Studies. LC 76-16037
ISBN 0-231-04012-1 $15.00

COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY PRESS
Address for orders:
136 South Broadway
Irvington, New York 10533

Northern Ireland is a very detailed history of events in that unhappy land from 1918 to June 1975. The author's political opinions intrude occasionally but are mostly given expression in his conclusionary summing up. Although the dust jacket describes it as the "first full-length political history of Northern Ireland," most of the information is available in other monographs on Ulster, and Farrell's book will be needed only in the most inclusive collections on the subject.

The Protestants of Ulster, although it also inevitably touches on history, chiefly attempts to identify the forces that have produced in Northern Ireland's majority Protestant working class a fierce, unbending siege mentality. Bell blames, in varying degree, the Ulster upper classes (capitalists and landowners); English Tories, Labourites, and trade unionists; and the governing classes in the Republic. He provides statistical support for his arguments as well as some very intriguing if arguable criticism of other attempts to analyze Northern Ireland. His effort may be recommended for general collections in both public and academic libraries.—John Moran, SUNY at Fredonia Lib.

Brecher, Jeremy & Tim Costello. Common Sense for Hard Times: the power of the powerless to cope with everyday life and transform society in the nineteen seventies.

Two Continents. 1976. 277p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-7270. ISBN 0-8467-0149-9. $11.95; pap. ISBN 0-8467-0175-8. $3.95.

LABOR/POL SCI

A popularly written analysis of modern times, emphasizing that lack of control over our everyday life is an integral feature of contemporary capitalism. Although the rough edges of such a society have been smoothed over by the postwar affluence, the hard times predicted by both establishment and radical economists for the foreseeable future mean increased dissatisfaction: here is the potential for a radical labor movement. The authors focus on the role of informal work groups at the shop floor level as the basis for such a movement, arguing for decentralized organizational forms if workers are to be in control of the very organizations with which they are fighting for control of society. Their book is a primer on class consciousness, written in popular style but with ample guidance for further reading in lengthy footnotes. Recommended for wide purchase.—Ken Nash, Queens Borough P.L., New York

Cottam, Richard W. Foreign Policy Motivation: a general theory and a case study.

Univ. of Pittsburgh Pr. 1976. 375p. bibliog. index. LC 76-6659. ISBN 0-8229-3323-3. $12.50.

HIST/INT AFFAIRS

Cottam works on two levels—the theoretical and the historical: the first half of the book attempts to systematize the motivational, perceptual, and purposed aspects of policy making; the second half focuses upon six "generic moments" in the British occupation of Egypt that Cottam believes verify his theoretical propositions. The results are both tentative and fulfilling. Cottam's approach does not confront the real value conflicts that permeate international politics, yet his abiding faith in man's capacity to reduce conflict through improved modes of perception is appealing. Indeed, his faith, findings, and propositions together make this book what he hoped it would be: a combined contribution to and stimulus toward more systematic attempts at a theory of peace.—Charles DeBenedetti, Dept. of History, Univ. of Toledo, Ohio

Juviler, Peter H. Revolutionary Law and Order: politics and social change in the USSR.

Free Pr. 1976. 256p. bibliog. index. LC 76-12832. $13.95. HIST/POL SCI

Juviler's subjects in this work are crime, criminology, law, official violence, the criminal justice system, and their relation to political and social change in the Soviet Union. The book is a historical survey of the interrelations of these phenomena during the past 100 years. An excessive concern with quotation and documentation—a text of about 180 pages is saddled with 80 pages of notes—and the presentation of a year-by-year account of the problems of law and order make this a work deficient in originality and explanatory power. The explanations of the central variables are unconvincing because the analysis of evidence is impressionistic rather than rigorous and systematic. No formal testing of hypotheses is attempted.—Stephen Lowry, Dept. of Political Science, St. Joseph's Coll., Philadelphia

Lowenthal, Richard. Model or Ally? the communist powers and the developing countries.

Oxford Univ. Pr. Jan. 1977. 384p. index. LC 76-9273. ISBN 0-19-502105-3. $12.95.

INT AFFAIRS

No leader since Lenin has been able to reconcile the competing Soviet goals of promoting revolutionary change while attaining good relations with non-Communist nationalist governments. Lowenthal, a veteran observer of Soviet and international Communist politics, skillfully analyzes the vicissitudes of Communist theory and practice in regard to the developing world. He stresses the definite limits of the Soviet developmental model and the problems this has created for ideologists and policy makers alike. When Lowenthal strays from Soviet politics into broader comparative politics his argument loses its luster. These essays, mostly a decade or so old, have been refurbished and brought up to date, but a more thorough editing might have eliminated unnecessary repetition.—Steven I. Levine, East Asian Inst., Columbia Univ.

Pearce, Frank. Crimes of the Powerful: Marxism, crime and deviance.

Urizen, dist. by Dutton. 1976. 172p. index. ISBN 0-904383-05-9. pap. $4.95.

CRIMINOLOGY/POL SCI

It is time for a full-scale, sophisticated Marxist analysis of the vulnerable "scientific" tenets of what passes for Criminology, but this abbreviated treatment provides only a sketchy primer for such a work. As a critique of both liberal and traditional theories, it is reasonably incisive; as a description of the American criminal justice process, it is both simplistic and derivative. When contending that both law enforcers and criminal syndicates are mere (disposable) servants of capitalism, it is self-admittedly speculative. At the end, it lamely applies a potentially intriguing radical perspective to such diverse phenomena as early unionization battles in the auto industry, organized crime's control of the New York docks, and the decline of trade union radicalism. Egregious misspellings of such familiar names as Ramsey Clark and Ferdinand Lundberg are minor, though not insignificant examples of the book's strangely cursory qualities and ultimate intellectual collapse.—Isidore Silver, Dept. of History, John Jay Coll. of Criminal Justice, CUNY

Phillips, David Atlee. The Night Watch.

Atheneum. Feb. 1977. c. 277p. index. ISBN 0-689-10754-4. $10.95. HIST/INT AFFAIRS

Phillips, who served for 25 years with the CIA—retiring in 1975 after rising to the post of director of the Western Hemisphere Division—has written a balanced, well-reasoned response to some of the agency's most vocal critics, such as Philip Agee, Victor Marchetti, and John Marks. He makes his case for intelligence activity in general and CIA actions specifically without giving his blanket approval to all that has been done in the name of intelligence. Written with humor and at times with skill, his book gives little new information, but puts much of what has been known into perspective and into human terms. It will be of interest to Latin Americanists, intelligence buffs, and those who like a good story.—I. E. Cadenhead, Jr., Dept. of History, Univ. of Tulsa, Okla.

Suh, Dea-Sook & Chae-Jin Lee, eds. Political Leadership in Korea.

Univ. of Washington Pr. 1976. 272p. illus. index. LC 76-5480. ISBN 0-295-95437-X. $9.50.

POL SCI

This volume contains papers presented at conferences in Seoul in 1971 and 1972. Included are studies of the contemporary political, legislative, and bureaucratic leadership of South Korea, as well as of the North Korean Communist administration and the traditional leadership of the Yi dynasty. Although the quality of the papers is generally high, some of the arguments are difficult to agree with (e.g., Chong-Lim Kim and Byung-Kyu Woo's contention that there was no significant decline in the legislative function and autonomy of the National Assembly from 1948 to 1967). Yet, the studies on the popular perception of the political leadership, on bureaucracy, and on politics in the north contain valuable empirical data. This book is a pioneering work that is essential for anyone interested in Korean politics.—Hong N. Kim, Dept. of Political Science, West Virginia Univ., Morgantown

Wolfers, Michael. Politics in the Organization of African Unity.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. (Studies in African History). Dec. 1976. 229p. bibliog. index. LC 76-40880. $14.50. INT AFFAIRS

Wolfers, for many years a reporter in Africa for the London Times, presents a short study of the OAU from its inception in 1963 until 1973 (with a brief postscript on 1974–1975). He notes that the organization has played a significant role as a forum for African leaders and in settling some disputes (such as the Algeria–Morocco border conflict of the 1960's), but that it remains in the 1970's a small body with little influence over major issues (e.g., the Angola civil war in 1975). The volume contains hitherto unpublished material (notably extracts from OAU documents and from transcripts of meetings) and conveys well the flavor of the often contentious politics within the organization. But it lacks an analytical framework, and thus suffers severely; often the author rambles aimlessly. Even rudimentary comparisons with other supranational organizations are missing. The slim book is vastly overpriced, and libraries wishing to cover an important topic will be better served by The Organization of African Unity After Ten Years (Praeger, 1975), edited by Yassin El-Ayouty.—Thomas F. Hirsch, New York

Psychology&Psychiatry

Baumgardner, Patricia & Fritz Perls. Gifts from Lake Cowichan by Patricia Baumgardner and Legacy from Fritz by Fritz Perls.

Science & Behavior Bks. 1976. 218p. LC 75-23594. ISBN 0-8314-0046-3. $7.95. PSYCH

This is a continuation of Perls' last comprehensive book The Gestalt Approach & Eye Witness to Therapy (LJ 10/15/73). It presents additional theoretical ideas drawm from "mini-lectures" Perls gave at the training center at Lake Cowichan plus previously unpublished transcripts of therapy sessions. Given the format, the book will be of interest to psychotherapists rather than lay persons. Baumgardner, a student of Perls, shares pleasant reminiscences about him and provides a readable introduction to Gestalt theory. Interesting but not essential.—Roger Thies, Depts. of Physiology & Psychiatry, Univ. of Oklahoma Health Science Center, Oklahoma City

Belotti, Elena Gianini. What Are Little Girls Made Of?

Schocken. 1976. 158p. intro. by Margaret Drabble. LC 76-9136. ISBN 0-8052-3630-9. $7.95. PSYCH

Belotti, director of the Montessori "Pre-Natal" Center in Rome, explores the factors leading to that sexually differentiated behavior which is confirmed and observable by the time a child is three or four. The book is based on observation of adult interaction with young children. Some role-conditioning is deliberate; some is based on a substratum of ancient cultural attitudes. (Of the superstitions for predicting the sex of an expected baby, the positive signs all indicate maleness.) The Italian studies cited reveal differences in feeding patterns, toilet training, and early discipline which are rooted in the mother's view of women's role and in her sexual interaction with a male or female child. (One wonders if American research would show the same degree of discrimination.) The sections on games, toys, books, and early schooling, though more broadly applicable, cover material which is now familiar to the American general reader.—Sally Mitchell, Milwaukee

Gordon, Thomas with Judith Gordon Sands. P.E.T. in Action.

Wyden, dist. by McKay. 1976. 363p. illus. index. ISBN 0-671-22406-9. $10.95. PSYCH

Based on in-depth questionnaires and interviews with parents who have attended P.E.T. training sessions and have used the method, P.E.T. in Action is really a sequel to Parent Effectiveness Training (12/15/70), and aims to explore the ways Parent Effectiveness Training has changed the families who have used it. It presents new insights into the P.E.T. theory of interpersonal relationships as well as an interpretation and analysis of why the methods are effective and, conversely, what has gone awry in various situations. The book motivates parents to develop new skills for "fostering effective two-way communication, for getting kids to solve their problems themselves, for resolving conflicts between parent and child so nobody loses." Concepts put forth in Gordon's earlier work are summarized at the beginning of each chapter.—Hilda Slosberg, Free Lib. of Philadelphia

Ismael, Cristina. The Healing Environment.

Celestial Arts. 1976. bibliog. index. LC 75-28758. ISBN 0-89087-021-7. pap. $4.95. PSYCH

A Utopian view of the spiritual dimension necessary to healing. The first part is a compendium of the usual "wisdoms," superficially introduced. Ismael has read a few good books and has a pleasant eye for a good quotation, but most of her information is undigested and fragmentary. The second part of the book is a list of "shoulds" for the ideal environment for the mentally ill. The author has spent time in an unsatisfactory position on the staff of a mental institution; it is typical of her to introduce her assertions of truth with an airy "it occurs to me" or "the first thing that comes to mind." This is an irritating, simplistic, platitudinous book on an important subject.—Rosemary Feitis, New York

Lasswell, Marcia & Norman M. Lobsenz. No-Fault Marriage: the new technique of self-counseling and what it can help you do.

Doubleday. 1976. 252p. LC 76-2225. ISBN 0-385-04906-4. $8.95. PSYCH

No panaceas here—self-counseling, the authors stress, is hard work—but a sound, logical guide to helping solve marital problems. As the title suggests, spouses are advised not to blame each other. Instead, following step-by-step techniques, they can open up communi-

"Fascinating reading for believer or skeptic"*

THE GHOST OF FLIGHT 401

By JOHN G. FULLER

Author of Interrupted Journey and Incident at Exeter

"With his customary investigative thoroughness, Fuller explores the 1972 crash of an Eastern airliner and the subsequent manifestations aboard other Eastern planes of crew members killed in that accident....Surpasses Fuller's We Almost Lost Detroit in attracting and sustaining reader interest."—The Booklist.* "Readers with a serious interest in psychic manifestations will be intrigued."—School Library Journal. A BERKLEY PUTNAM BOOK.

SBN-399-11763-6. YA. $8.95

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS

200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

"A unique synthesis... thought-provoking"
—Publishers Weekly

BETWEEN ANIMAL AND MAN

The Key to the Kingdom

Dr. Michael W. Fox

"Contains discussion of both animal and human psychology, and explores the kinship between animals and man....According to Fox, if people better understand their place in the continuum of nature, then they will be concerned naturally with conservation and ecology....This provocative, well-written book, is of interest on both a scholarly and a popular reading level. Most types of libraries should consider purchasing this title."—Library Journal. Photos.

SBN 698-10710-1 $8.95

COWARD, McCANN & GEOGHEGAN, INC.

200 Madison Avenue, New York 10016

cation to get at the meaning behind words spoken to first identify and then work out their problems (and, if necessary, to go beyond self-help to professional assistance, as the final chapter explains). Transcripts from Lasswell's counseling practice illustrate techniques, and several tests help the reader to analyze his or her own marriage. Occasionally the procedures seem simplistic, but on balance the book offers valuable assistance for persons with marital problems and insights for everyone. Both authors have good credentials—Lasswell as a counselor and psychology professor and Lobsenz as a writer who specializes in the subject—and their book is recommended.—Michele M. Leber, Virginia Beach P.L.

May, Gerald G., M.D. Simply Sane: requiem for the human fix.

Paulist: Paulist/Newman. Jan. 1977. ISBN 0-8091-0215-3. $8.95. PSYCH

The author is a psychotherapist who has grown weary of the constant search for a better life, new ideas, and self-improvement. Conventional therapy, he asserts, starts out with the premise that something is "wrong" with the patient and needs to be "fixed." This encourages people to see themselves as objects to be manipulated and controlled, and alienates them from the rest of the world. May calls for a return to sanity by recognizing we can only participate in the process of growth, not cause or control it. This approach is not as new as May seems to think it is. The cure-all, become-a-better-person approach is increasingly giving way to more relaxed, self-accepting "awareness" therapies. May has good insights into some of the destructive aspects of our culture, but he does not offer enough concrete examples of how to "go sane."—Barbara Zelenko, U.S. Attorney's Lib., Southern District of New York

A glorious survey of Jewish Life in Art and Tradition

By YEHUDA L. BIALER

"An unusual presentation of traditional Jewish observances—from marriage and childbirth through the annual festivals—as embodied in ceremonial objects from the Wolfson Museum in Jerusalem. Impressive as the objects are...what they convey is more significant: their close relationship with the flow of Jewish life."—Kirkus Reviews. "The photography is splendid....An impressive book."—Library Journal. 7½" x 10". 200 monochromes; 48 full-color plates; glossary. SBN-399-11695-8. $16.95

G.P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

Roazen, Paul. Erik H. Erikson: the power and the limits of a vision.

Free Pr. 1976. 246p. index. LC 76-10497. ISBN 0-02-926450-2. $8.95. PSYCH

Roazen, whose controversial Freud and his Followers (LJ 9/15/74) described the personal rivalries among the early Freudians, has written a fascinating study of Erikson's work and its relation to Freud and the post-Freudians. The author's approach is pleasantly straightforward and undogmatic. Chapters on the ego, psychohistory, the life cycle, normality, and ethics, show the development of Erikson's ideas. Erikson's originality, Roazen shows, is frequently tied to the words of Freud, as though he were fearful of sounding too un-Freudian. Insisting on declaring his psychoanalytic roots, Erikson almost incidentally reveals much of his own history. As a therapy which emphasizes increasing psychic comfort in a set social system, psychoanalysis is inherently a conservative process. An awareness of the ethical implications of this led Erikson to turn his idealistic emphasis on health to advantage. By focusing on the social environment as well as on the strengths of the individual, he humanized depth psychology; Roazen illuminates this process clearly and with a satisfying critical common sense.—James Charney, M.D., Dept. of Psychiatry, Yale Univ. Medical Sch.

Robbins, Arthur & Linda Beth Sibley. Creative Art Therapy.

Brunner/Mazel. 1976. 261p. illus. bibliog. LC 76-3647. ISBN 0-87630-122-7. $15. ART/PSYCH

This book makes a valuable contribution in a relatively new field of ever-growing interest. Theoretical definitions are followed by case studies based on a variety of field reports by art therapy students in the Master's program at Pratt University. The case studies vary; most are well presented and informative, some make moving reading. A third section provides a very useful summary of materials and schematized references to techniques from painting, sculpture, and writing to movement and film making. The authors are well aware that being creative and attempting rigid definitions are contradictory pursuits. For the time being, their book is a first comprehensive survey of where art therapy stands today, of interest to practitioners and students as well as to anyone concerned with psychotherapy and the humanities. As is well demonstrated here, art therapy has to mean openness to the new. It may not replace older, tried (though sometimes in danger of going stale) methods like the depth-psychological therapies to the degree the authors seem to suggest. But the two therapeutic approaches have much to learn from each other to be both on solid ground and alive and growing.—Edith Wallace, M.D. (Pisa), Editor, "Journal of Art Psychotherapy"

Singer, June. Androgyny.

Anchor: Doubleday. 1976. 375p. fwd. by Sheldon S. Hendler. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-2825. ISBN 0-385-11025-1. $8.95. PSYCH

The author, a Jungian analyst, defines androgyny as the oldest archetype which symbolizes the One containing the Two, namely the masculine and feminine within and outside of sexuality. It is the archetype underlying the Aquarian age and must be realized in consciousness if one wants to live in harmony with oneself, others, and the universe. Examples of androgyny in myths from the West and East, from the Middle Ages and current science are given in simple language, summarizing the essence of a vast amount of material. Case studies seen from the point of view of androgyny shed new light on masturbation, homo- and bisexuality. In spite of some unevenness in presentation, the book has high relevance for those who seek to orient themselves within the contemporary confusion of sex and gender roles.—Gertrud B. Ujhely, formerly Director, Graduate Psychiatric Nursing Program, Adelphi Univ., Garden City, N.Y.

Parapsychology & Occultism

White, Rhea A. Surveys in Parapsychology.

Scarecrow. 1976. LC 76-119. ISBN 0-8108-0906-0. $17.50. PARAPSYCH

This excellent book is a thorough and worthwhile review of the most significant journal articles on parapsychology of the past and present. Divided into five broad categories, the book covers theory and specifics of psychic research and is fully documented with extensive bibliographies and lists for additional readings. A most useful starting-gate for any researcher; it should be an annual.—Susan C. Curzon, Los Angeles County P.L. at South El Monte

Religion

Baly, Denis. God and History in the Old Testament.

Harper. 1976. 256p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-06-060369-0. pap. $6.95. REL

Due to his or her lack of acquaintance with the period, the student of biblical times will usually project today's concept of God back 3500 years and try to fit the Old Testament deity into it. This book attempts to enable readers to avoid these presuppositions in order to appreciate the mode of perception of the ancient Israelites, and to come to perceive God as He revealed Himself then. The author strikes a commendable balance in his presentation of Old Testament theologies and Old Testament histories. He also deals meaningfully with the question of the validity of the Old Testament for the contemporary world. His book provides a good basic introduction for the general reader and would also be useful, especially as supportive reading, in undergraduate libraries. The bibliography is classified, and partially graduated.—Barbara Gannon, St. Anselm's Coll. Lib., Manchester, N.H.

Blue, Lionel. To Heaven, with Scribes and Pharisees: the Jewish path to God.

Oxford Univ. Pr. 1976. 114p. ISBN 0-19-519831-X. $5.95. REL

Although brief, this discussion of Judaism as a fundamental philosophy is provocative and refreshing. The author, a Reform Jew, challenges the assumption that religious belief is synonymous with traditional observance. He presents penetrating comments about the chosen people concept, about the Jewish religion's emphasis on existence rather than on wish fulfillment, and about the Jewish home. He makes some questionable assertions, such as his statement that the synagogue experience is not an aesthetic one. Indeed, his book may appear flippant to some Orthodox Jews. Still, this adds more to the lay reader's understanding of Judaism than does the usual compendium of religious practices and tenets. Glossary appended.—Margaret Norden, Univ. of Pittsburgh Lib.

Kraines, Oscar. The Impossible Dilemma: who is a Jew in the state of Israel?

Bloch. 1976. 156p. bibliog. index. LC 76-8321. ISBN 0-8197-0392-3. $6.95. LAW/REL

While Israel is surrounded by enemies, there is an ongoing struggle of conflicting political, cultural, and religious ideologies on the home front. This book is an attempt to portray an unusual aspect of Israel's domestic Kulturkampf—the question of who is considered a Jew in all its political, legal, religious, and social aspects in an overtly nonclerical democratic Jewish state. Kraines, a leading American legal authority, correlates the relevant material. His succinct analysis of landmark "Who is a Jew" cases is particularly noteworthy, but his knowledge of Jewish religious law could be better. An interesting work, recommended for popular Judaica collections.—Zev Garber, Dept. of Jewish Studies, Los Angeles Valley Coll., Van Nuys, Calif.

McCreary, Alf. Corrymeela: hill of harmony in Northern Ireland.

Hawthorn. 1976. 144p. illus. ISBN 0-8015-1773-7. $5.95. REL

McCreary, a staff writer for the Belfast Telegraph, writes of an ecumenical Christian community on the northern coast of Ireland which brings both Protestants and Catholics together for discussions, work, and prayer. Originally founded in 1964 by a small group of students who perceived the scandal of civil violence, Corrymeela stands as an alternative. The impact of Corrymeela is presented very simply: stories and experiences told by both children and adults carry far more weight than any abstract conception. An eloquent example of how to build a Christian community amidst strife and violence.—R. MacDonald, Dept. of Theology, Mount Senario Coll., Ladysmith, Wis.

Zweig, Paul, ed. Muktananda: selected essays.

Harper. Jan. 1977. 160p. ISBN 0-06-069860-8. pap. $3.95. REL

Swami Muktananda is a sadguru, a "fully-realized master" of Siddha Yoga. As such his main interest is to liberate his followers by helping them to also become sadgurus. This book consists largely of essays formed from transcripts of talks he made during his visits from India to the West in 1970 and 1974. They enunciate the principal aspects of his teachings and touch on subjects such as the nature of a guru, meditation, mantra, and the uncovering of the underlying self, all liberally interspersed with stories. Each chapter finishes with representative questions asked by his audiences. General libraries will find the works of Maharishi Mahesh Yogi and the TM movement more in demand. But Swami Muktananda's book, which articulates its points lovingly and convincingly, is a good addition for in-depth collections.—Ruth S. Haas, formerly with Harvard Coll. Lib.

SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

Crandall, Chuck. "What's Wrong with My Plant?": a guide to the care and cure of ailing houseplants.

Chronicle. 1976. 96p. illus. index. LC 76-19086. ISBN 0-87701-080-3. pap. $4.95. HORT

Aimed at the ignorant, indifferent, or overindulgent plant owner, this brief manual offers familiar advice on preventive care, plant shopping, and proper surgical techniques. The longest chapters describe, separately, habits, damage, favorite targets, and suggested controls for plant diseases and parasites. Crandall's discussion of pesticides is poorly organized and ignores several chemical controls currently available. Catchy title and clever illustrations notwithstanding, this is not an essential purchase.—Judith Israel, Dare County Lib., Manteo, N.C.

Lee, Albert. Weather Wisdom.

Doubleday. 1976. 180p. illus. by William C. Sherb. index. LC 75-40733. ISBN 0-385-11016-2. $6.95. FOLKLORE/SCI

An entertaining account of weather proverbs and sayings from the time of the ancient Greeks to that of the early settlers in America. Lee gives the reader basic meteorological information to make one's own weather predictions; and he shows that by watching birds, wild animals, stars, and even your pet cat or dog, basic weather forecasts can be made. The only other source in this field is Eric Sloane'e Folklore of American Weather (LJ 4/1/63). Lee's book complements Sloane's and adds insight into world proverbs.—Edward Schultz, Dover P.L., N.J.

London, Keith R. The People Side of Systems: the human aspects of computer systems.

McGraw. 1976. 281p. index. ISBN 0-07-084463-1. $15.00. BUS/COMPUTERS

With this book London makes an enormous contribution to the study and practice of computer systems analysis. He examines and measures the "conflict potential" in every aspect of the interface between computer people and the users they are supposed to serve, from initial user request to delivery of a fully implemented system. He suggests workable solutions to many of these conflicts in a style that is very readable, well organized, and full of lively and relevant examples. Unfortunately, the bibliography is slightly dated. Because it shows how to improve the effectiveness of any task-oriented or problem-solving communication or behavior, this book belongs not only in data-processing collections but in those of general management and organizational behavior.—Naomi Lee Bloom, American Insts. for Research, Palo Alto, Calif.

Aeronautics & Astronautics

Cooper, Henry S. F., Jr. A House in Space.

Holt. 1976. 184p. illus. LC 75-42991. ISBN 0-03-016686-1. $8.95. ASTRONAUTICS

During the Skylab missions, three separate crews of astronauts lived and worked in space for a total of 171 days. This book delves into the human side of their experiences. Insights into the astronauts' personalities as well as some of the problems that developed are particularly interesting. Under total weightlessness and in quite cramped quarters, the astronauts were expected to carry out experiments in solar astronomy, medicine, botany, biology, and metallurgy. The unusual aspects of Sky-

"NATUREBIRTH is a challenging and thought-provoking book. Having myself written several books on preparing for childbirth, I feel that the author's words are not only emotionally provocative but are practical at the same time. Her chapter on medications, on fetal monitors, her practical suggestions on how to prepare yourself for childbirth, her description of the actual labor and delivery are accurate and helpful."
—ELISABETH BING
LC: 76-7935
Cloth $8.95 ISBN: 0-394-49571-3
Paper $3.95 ISBN: 0-394-73259-6
NATUREBIRTH
You, Your Body, and Your Baby
by Danaë Brook
Recommended
201 E. 50th St.
New York 10022

Outstanding additions to Natural History shelves...

The Living Sea

AN ILLUSTRATED ENCYCLOPEDIA OF MARINE LIFE

By ROBERT BURTON, CAROL DEVANEY & TONY LONG. "Many close-up, full-color photographs make a striking complement to the encyclopedic text in an inviting and informative examination of...the physiology, habitats, and behavior of a wide variety of invertebrates, fish, reptiles, seabirds, and mammals. Suggested for browsing as well as supplementary classroom reading."—The Booklist. 9¼" x 12". 350 color plates; over 100 drawings & diagrams; index. SBN-399-11748-2. YA. $20.00

The Coral Seas

By ANDREW C. CAMPBELL. "Lavishly illustrated with color photographs, this focuses on the ecology of the coral reefs of the world...the formation and structure of reefs, the living coral and its skeletal remains, the variety of reef fish...the way of life of human inhabitants of coral atolls....A conservation-oriented approach suitable for interested browser or student." —The Booklist. "RECOMMENDED." —Library Journal. 9" x 11¾". 120 full-color plates; bibliography; index. SBN-399-11778-4. YA. $12.95

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

lab space exploration, experimentation, and technology have proved to be dramatic extensions of man's consciousness and experience. Thirty pages of NASA photographs accompany the text.—William A. McIntyre, Laconia State Sch. Lib., N.H.

Eddy, Paul & others. Destination Disaster: from the tri-motor to the DC-10; the risk of flying.

Quadrangle, dist. by Harper. 1976. 434p. illus. index. LC 75-36263. ISBN 0-8129-0619-5. $12.50.

Johnston, Moira. The Last Nine Minutes: the story of flight 981.

Morrow. 1976. 317p. illus. LC 76-21251. ISBN 0-688-03084-X. $10. AERONAUTICS

These two books provide factual accounts of the March 3, 1974 crash near Paris of a Turkish Airlines DC-10. The failure of a cargo door to close properly caused a rapid depressurization of the aircraft which resulted in the deaths of more than 300 passengers and crew—the largest air disaster in aviation history. Both books are well written and similar in content. The authors of the two books claim that this crash could have been avoided had the aircraft industry and the Federal Aviation Administration taken immediate action to correct a known defect in the cargo door's design. Destination Disaster provides considerable documentation from company and government records. The Last Nine Minutes recreates more vividly the horrifying events that the passengers and crew must have experienced prior to the crash. Both these books are well worth considering; but if a choice must be made, purchase Destination Disaster if only because of the unique appendix on airline safety, which will allow the reader to judge which airlines he'd like to patronize.—Jerold M. Bernstein, Wickliffe P.L., Ohio

Agriculture & Animal Husbandry

Caras, Roger A. The Roger Caras Pet Book.

Holt. Jan. 1977. 256p. LC 76-4730. ISBN 0-03-017506-2. $7.95. PETS

Collected here are nearly 200 revised-for-reading transcripts of the popular CBS radio Pets and Wildlife series. In these three-minute spot programs well-known naturalist Caras explored many subjects, including pets as gifts, traveling with pets, and the relationship of man to all kinds of animals. His approach is good but basically superficial in coverage (how detailed can a three-minute talk be?). The best material here is on dog breeds, for which Caras explains the characteristics of different breeds and their suitability for various people.—Mary Blackwell, Detroit P.L.

Fireman, Judy, ed. Cat Catalog.

Workman. 1976. 350p. illus. LC 76-25473. ISBN 0-911104-81-X. $12.50; pap. ISBN 0-911104-82-8. $6.95. PETS

An incredible, visually pleasing compendium of cat lore, care, and philosophy, with separate sections dealing with most aspects of felines. The historical information can be found in other volumes presently available, as can the "literary" material. However, most enlightening are those sections Fireman solicited from cat breeders and fanciers. Hints on grooming, medicating, selecting cats; a visit to a show cattery; show etiquette and scoring; organizational histories; all these and more combine to form an entertaining potpourri guaranteed to delight the ailurophile. The extensive illustrations and the highly readable text recommend this book for placement in public libraries and under cat-lovers' Christmas trees.—Colleen Power, Arizona State Univ. Lib., Tempe

Gregory, Diana. Owning a Horse: a practical guide.

Harper. Jan. 1977. 224p. illus. drawings by Claudia O'Keefe. index. LC 76-9192. ISBN 0-06-011622-6. $11.95. ANIMAL HUSBANDRY

Aiming her text at the novice horse owner, Gregory discusses where to buy a horse, what to look for, how to earn some money once the purchase has been made (a novel and useful section), how to care for the newly purchased horse, how to buy and run a trailer, and what sort of tack and clothing will be needed. Each chapter concludes with a glossary of appropriate terms. The illustrations could be much better: drawings range from good to rather cutesy, and several of the photos show a distinctly disgusted-looking horse, not at all what the author had in mind. Still, public libraries will find this has an audience.—Suzan H. Stephenson, Prince George's County Memorial Lib., Md.

Biology

Dawkins, Richard. The Selfish Gene.

Oxford Univ. Pr. Jan. 1977. 236p. $8.95. PSYCH BIOLOGY

In recent years behavioral and evolutionary biologists have questioned whether apparent altruistic behavior in animals, which aids other members of the species at some risk to the "altruist," is truly unselfish. Are such actions harmful to the doer but beneficial to the species, or are they useful in some way unapparent to the "altruist"? Dawkins emphatically contends that such behavior is selfish because it may aid the propagation of genes, the fundamental "selfish" units. He uses simple game theory to support this notion and brings together recent ideas on kin selection, parent–child interaction, sex competition, and symbiotic arrangements. He also discusses culture, a force which may exempt some human actions from the dictates of the selfish gene. This theoretical work will appeal primarily to biology students, who will find much meat for discussion. It is a clearly written, up-to-date synthesis and therefore may find broader appeal.—Margery C. Coombs, Dept. of Zoology, Univ. of Massachusetts, Amherst

Karp, Laurence E., M.D. Genetic Engineering: threat or promise?

Nelson-Hall. 1976. 340p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-88229-136-X. $15. BIOLOGY

For those who see modern genetics research as a breeding ground for future armies of hybrid Goliaths, this book offers a current, logical, and often humorous rebuttal. A rather pedestrian introduction to principles of heredity and to rationales for genetic screening, counseling, and diagnostic-therapy programs leads the reader into a consideration of "reproductive engineering" that covers artificial insemination, cloning, ectogenesis, parthenogenesis, sex determination, and the possibility of creating a super-Homo sapiens. The researcher will find nothing new; the educated individual, however, will benefit from Karp's rationality. Although a one-sided appraisal, this volume offers a welcome balance to an often too-imaginative, fearsome picture of genetics research painted by the media. Recommended for libraries with standard biology or upper-level social psychology collections.—Dade T. Curtis, Illinois State Univ. Libs., Normal

Health & Medicine

Barrett, Stephen, M.D. & Gilda Knight, eds. The Health Robbers: how to protect your money and your life.

Stickley Co., 210 W. Washington Sq., Philadelphia, Pa. 19106. 1976. 350p. LC 76-22281. ISBN 0-89313-001-X. $10.50.
CONSUMER AFFAIRS/HEALTH

A first-rate book to counter the recent avalanche of health-fad books written to promote bizarre treatments and enrich their authors. The Health Robbers is written by an outstanding group of doctors and health professionals. The book points out the false claims made for everything from unhealthy diets to faith-healing "cures." Hopefully, this well-written and well-organized book will alert the unwary consumer.—Alyce Bowers, Rockaway Township P.L., N.J.

Newman, Jo Hynes. What Every Woman Should Know About Breast Cancer.

Major Bks. 1976. 192p. bibliog. index. LC 76-8656. ISBN 0-89041-082-8. pap. $1.75. MED

Predictably, this book includes chapters on the occurrence of breast cancer, on self-examination, on choosing a physician, on alternative forms of therapy, and on postsurgical adjustment. But the treatment of these topics is superficial and somewhat oversimplified. For example, only married women are considered in the section on postsurgery adjustment. An unnecessary addition to the wealth of information already available to the public in books and magazines on the subject of breast cancer.—Jane Port, Levy Lib., Mt. Sinai Sch. of Medicine, New York

Selzer, Richard. Mortal Lessons: notes on the art of surgery.

S. & S. Jan. 1977. 224p. illus. ISBN 0-671-22356-9. $7.95. PER NAR/MED

Selzer is a surgeon and a perceptive, and graphically realistic observer. These traits, evident in this collection of reflections about his work, will delight some readers but disturb or revolt others; for example, descriptions found in "The Corpse" and "Abortion" will likely upset more than a few. Selzer early states, "So shall I make of my fingers, words; of my scalpel, a sentence; of the body of my patient, a story". He has done all of these things often throughout this at times provocative book. Parts of the body, human functions, and relationships between doctor and patient, man and woman, and man and himself are explored in realistic detail. An imaginatively conceived and arrestingly written book.—William K. Beatty, Northwestern Univ. Medical Sch., Chicago

Spingarn, Natalie Davis. Heartbeat: the politics of health research.

Luce, dist. by McKay. 1976. 202p. index. LC 75-28551. ISBN 0-88331-081-3. $9.95.
POL SCI/HEALTH

Spingarn's important and exciting book covers the political scene at the National Institutes of Health. Using facts and examples primarily related to the National Heart and Lung Institute, she tries "to cast light rather than heat on the issues" and personnel involved in the politics of government-funded health research. In a vivid manner she discusses the history and current problems of the NIH, and addresses the issues of relevance and accountability in biomedical research. This thoroughly researched, perceptive, and timely account is highly recommended for most libraries.—James E. Bobick, Temple Univ. Libs., Philadelphia

Von Furstenberg, Diane with Evelyn Portrait. Diane von Furstenberg's Book of Beauty: how to become a more attractive, confident and sensual woman.

S. & S. Jan. 1977. illus. index. ISBN 0-671-21904-9. $8.95. HEALTH

Reading this book is like having a nice conversation with a sensible woman who has some very sensible ideas. Diane offers basic information about putting on makeup, about choosing clothing, about eating well, about plastic surgery (she's careful to point out its pitfalls), without endless details of blue shadow, peach blush, etc. I like the exercises (they require a minimum effort), designed to make you feel more sensual. Diane doesn't push her line of dresses, her cosmetics, her scarves, etc. and that's especially nice. Mainly, the author urges the reader to be herself, to develop her own style.—Irene Stokvis Land, formerly with "Library Journal"

Natural History & Zoology

Griffin, Donald R. The Question of Animal Awareness: evolutionary continuity of mental experience.

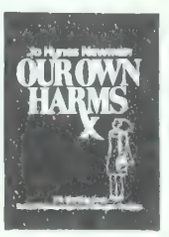
Rockefeller Univ. Pr. 1976. 144p. bibliog. index. LC 76-18492. ISBN 0-87470-020-5. $8.95.
PSYCH/ZOOLOGY

While most pet lovers are convinced that animals have minds and are capable of conscious communication, the bio-psychological community has long argued that nonhuman animal activities are mindless and mechanistic. Though recognizing the pitfalls of the layman's unrigorous approach, Griffin believes that the time has come to reexamine negative opinions about animal awareness. He cites recent work with chimpanzees and honeybees to show that animal communication is not always rigid but can approach true language. To him it

We, ignorant of ourselves, Beg often our own harms.

OUR OWN HARMS
by Jo Hynes Newman



The Startling Facts Behind Menopause and Estrogen Therapy. Contact your local Bobbs-Merrill representative.

0-89307-005-X $8.95 September

The Quail Street Publishing Company...Watch us fly

"Highly Recommended"*

Volcanoes

By ALFRED & LOREDANA RITTMANN

"Two well-known volcanologists present a beautifully illustrated resumé of our knowledge of volcanic phenomena—the origin of the requisite heat, the building of volcanic forms, the rocks and minerals associated with volcanoes, similar structures on other planets, and the effects of volcanic activity on man. ...Combines scientific accuracy with a popular style." —Library Journal. "A worthwhile purchase....Science students will find it a valuable additional resource."—The Booklist. 9" x 11¾". 120 full-color plates; bibliography; index. SBN-399-11725-3.

YA. $12.95

G.P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

For the "vast majority of today's middle-aged . . . here is essential information and expert guidance on one intergenerational crunch: caring for aging and aged parents. The book . . . offers valuable advice on how to carry out responsibility without emotional entrapment on both sides [and] deals with the critical problem of determining the care needed by an aged parent and obtaining it."

—Library Journal

ISBN: 0-394-49948-4
LC: 76-9608 $10

YOU AND YOUR AGING PARENT

by Barbara Silverstone and Helen Kandel Hyman

Recommended

is not parsimonious to allow physical and particularly neurological continuity of animals with man while rejecting continuity in awareness. Animal awareness, if it exists, is hard to demonstrate scientifically, but Griffin concludes that more experimental methods are becoming available and should be used openmindedly. The results could have important philosophical and scientific consequences. This book is carefully argued and documented, though a trifle repetitive. Its appeal will be primarily to professionals and their students.—Margery C. Coombs, Dept. of Zoology, Univ. of Massachusetts, Amherst

More, Daphne. The Bee Book: the history and natural history of the honeybee.

Universe Bks. 1976. 143p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-15044. ISBN 0-87663-245-2. $12.50.
NAT HIST

Many books have been written on the hobby of beekeeping and on the science of bees and honey; this is one of the few that also provides a historical look at bees. Theories of the origin of bees, beekeeping in early times, myths and legends about bees, and the scientists who contributed to our present-day knowledge of bees are discussed in well-researched chapters. Each type of bee found in the hive—queen, worker, drone—has a chapter concerning its physical structure and sociology. Photographs are extraordinarily clear. Although the list of further reading is too brief, the book would be of value in science collections.—Susan Spak, Hobart & William Smith Colls. Lib., Geneva, N.Y.

Ricciuti, Edward R. Killer Animals.

Walker. 1976. 319p. illus. index. LC 75-12193. ISBN 0-8027-0509-X. $12.50. ZOOLOGY

Killer animals have long captured the human imagination. We have sought to show our domination of the wild by subjugating such traditional killers as brown bears, tigers, and bulls. At the same time human civilization has created new confrontations with animals which previously only rarely or innocuously encountered people. Ricciuti embellishes his accounts of venomous creatures, circus and zoo animals, house pets, large game, disease carriers, and exotic pests with details of mishaps between human and beast. These stories should make readers pause: for example, one learns that domestic dogs are responsible for more deaths and injuries than many notorious killer animals. Ricciuti likes animals and has had much experience with them in the wild and in zoos. He emphasizes that most mishaps arise from human failure to accord animals the respect and distance they deserve as beasts. This book will spark controversy, but it is absorbing and simply written, with a cogent message.—Margery C. Coombs, Dept. of Zoology, Univ. of Massachusetts, Amherst

Sandved, Kjell B. (photogs.) & Jo Brewer (text). Butterflies.

Abrams. 1976. 176p. photogs., mainly color. bibliog. index. LC 74-23357. ISBN 0-8109-0717-8. $18.50. PHOTOG/NAT HIST Brewer's rambling text discusses the use of butterflies in art, the development and structure of butterfly wings, the structure of compound eyes and miscellaneous aspects of coloration, mimicry, and behavior. Technical minutiae and scientific jargon are kept to a minimum, so lay readers should have little difficulty understanding the book. However, the persistent injection of panegyric declarations is tiresome. Sandved's photographs are excellent and have been reproduced with vibrant colors. Particularly attractive are close-up details of wing color and scalation. Unfortunately, the reader may be misled to believe all the butterflies shown were alive—in fact many are clearly pinned specimens that have been posed on flowers or suspended on a glass plate above a leafy background. Also, there are a few misidentifications (e.g., Ornithoptera labeled Papilio in plate 91, Eurytides labeled Graphium in plate 186). As a popular photographic essay on butterflies Thomas Emmel's Butterflies (LJ 2/1/76) is superior, but at half the price, the Sandved and Brewer book is a good buy.—Walter P. Coombs Jr., Pratt Museum, Amherst Coll., Mass.

Technology

Bolster, John. The Upper Crust: the aristocrats of automobiles.

200p. LC 74-31858. ISBN 0-695-80583-5.

Setright, L. J. K. The Designers: great automobiles and the men who made them.

194p. LC 74-31857. ISBN 0-695-80584-3.

ea. vol: Follett. 1976. illus., some color. index. $12.95. HIST/TECH

Bolster's emphasis is on the great cars—Mercedes, Bentley, Packard, Daimler, Rolls Royce, etc. Design features and mechanical developments of these and other marques are discussed and illustrated. Coachwork is emphasized rather than engineering or engineers. Excellent photos and line diagrams add to the book's usefulness.

Setright stresses the men, the designers who created the industry. Body designers, chassis men, engine builders, mechanics, and theoreticians are credited with their part in automotive history. The evaluations of some of the great names (Porsche and Duesenberg) ought to be good for a few arguments. Developments for and because of auto racing are emphasized. Coachwork is not really discussed except as it relates to performance.

Many of the same cars and people appear in both books, but the approach is different. Both are well written and illustrated; but if you can only afford one, Setright would be more useful in most libraries. Extensive automotive collections need both.—Susan Ebershoff Coles, Indianapolis-Marion County P.L., Ind.

Howard-Williams, Jeremy. Care and Repair of Sails.

SAIL, dist. by Norton. 1976. 139p. illus. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-914814-06-0. $9.95.
SPORTS/TECH

The excellence of this book is partly due to careful editing for the American market (the author is a prominent British sail expert), making it easy to read and understand. The scope is broad, the treatment sound and generally succinct, and the writing first-rate. The book's goal of showing how anyone can care for and repair sails is achieved. Combined with Bill Schmit's Sailmaking Made Easy (Water, Wind & Sail. pap.), it intelligently answers all but the most esoteric questions about caring for, repairing, and restoring sails. Small, but articulate and informative, it is recommended.—James Tazelaar, U.S. Army Engineer Topographic Labs., Fort Belvoir, Va.

Kenward, Michael. Potential Energy: an analysis of world energy technology.

Cambridge Univ. Pr. 1976. 227p. illus. index. LC 75-36174. ISBN 0-521-21086-0. $14.95; pap. ISBN 0-521-29056-2. $5.95. ENVIRONMENT/TECH

Understandably, books are proliferating that discuss energy sources which offer alternatives to gas and oil. However, given the limited state of development of most of these energy sources, some of these books inevitably will be redundant. This is such a book. Very closely paralleling the content of Donald Carr's Energy and the Earth Machine (LJ 5/1/76), it discusses new uses of coal, extraction of petroleum from oil shales and tar sands, and the progress (and dangers) of the nuclear power program. Kenward also covers solar energy and "earth power," which includes geothermal energy and power from tides, waves, and wind. Unfortunately, Kenward offers little new material and none of Carr's wit and sparkling pen. —Daniel La Rossa, Systems Management Engineering, South Huntington, N.Y.

Social Science

Borland, Hal (text) & B. A. King (photogs.). A Place to Begin: the New England experience.

Sierra Club, dist. by Scribners. 1976. 78p. LC 76-21312. ISBN 0-87156-182-4. $14.95. PHOTOG/SOC SCI

By his own admission Borland is an "outlander," but no native could sing a more beautiful love song to New England. History and natural history entwine with personal comments to form a lyrical narrative capturing the essence of the region. The Yankee character is well illustrated by terse anecdotes of famous and not-so-famous natives. The black-and-white photographs which divide the text are well chosen and of high artistic quality, but they portray New England as a stark, bleak land. I would have liked to see some photographs of another side of New England—its glorious colors and the warmth of its people. Essential for New England libraries and for those who serve folks with New England in their hearts.—Betty Page, Guilford Public Schs. Libs., Conn.

Subject specialists who wish to review books on alcoholism are invited to submit sample reviews to Marlene Charnizon, Book Review.

Burger, Sarah Greene, R.N. & Martha D'Erasmo, R.N. Living in a Nursing Home: a complete guide for residents, their families and friends.

Continuum: Seabury. Dec. 1976. 160p. LC 76-17890. ISBN 0-8164-9294-8. $8.95. HEALTH/SOC SCI

In this sensitively written first-hand account of life in a nursing home, the reader is given a chance to understand what old age, loneliness, isolation, and death are all about. One meets the "typical" elderly grandmother and widow; follows what happens to Minnie Jones after a hip fracture, hospitalization, placement in a nursing home, and finally death; and learns of some of the financial and legal problems of nursing-home residents. Though it reads well enough, this brief book offers nothing new to the existing literature on the subject.—Ellen R. Paterson, SUNY at Cortland Lib.

Draznin, Yaffa. How To Prepare for Death: a practical guide.

Hawthorn. 1976. 224p. ISBN 0-8015-3736-3. $7.95. SOC SCI

Draznin is concerned here with "the secular problems of death, . . . with such mundane matters as funeral and burial arrangements, insurance and social security allotments, wills." She emphasizes that the subject of death should be brought out into the open and discussed with family and friends. Decisions made can be changed anytime during your lifetime, but family and friends should know what your wishes are. If death is imminent and the dying person refuses to face it, the next of kin is advised to make whatever arrangements seem best: start preparations for the funeral; with the doctor's help get a lawyer in to execute a will, where the size of the estate warrants pressing the matter. If no arrangements have been made at time of death, crucial decisions must be made under pressure. Draznin outlines what happens to the body immediately after death in the hospital, in the home, or in another country, and in such special cases as suicide and homicide; religious customs; moneys which may be immediately available; probate. Some repetition, but a useful general overview.—Marian Petrow, formerly with Queens Borough P.L., New York

Erikson, Kai T. Everything in Its Path.

S. & S. Jan. 1977. 200p. index. ISBN 0-671-22367-4. $8.95. SOC SCI

In the winter of 1972 several coal mining towns along the banks of Buffalo Creek, West Virginia were wiped out when a reservoir of mine waste water broke through the crumbling walls of a slag dam. The wall of water that roared through Buffalo Hollow claimed 125 lives and millions of dollars in property damage. The author was one of a team of social scientists retained by a law firm which represented the survivors in a suit brought against the coal company. This book is a report of Erikson's observations of the individual and collective traumas which resulted from the flood. Far from being a dry sociology treatise, it is a compassionate and moving account of the aftermath of disas-

Appraising the state of critical writing a year ago in The New Republic, J. Hillis Miller wrote, "A distinctive feature of English and American literary criticism in 1975 has been its naturalization of recent continental criticism. This is an obvious enough fact, but its full implications are perhaps not so easy to pin down. Another way to put this is to say that literary criticism at this moment is an international enterprise. Even if one is working on an entirely English or American topic, to ignore criticism in other countries is to risk being provincial."

The influences of European critics, Miller continues, "seem more likely to happen these days in certain universities than in others: Johns Hopkins, Buffalo, Cornell, Iowa, Yale." Such a happening is the publication by Johns Hopkins of Jacques Derrida's Of Grammatology with "an excellent long introduction" by Gayatri Spivak which will be "a major event for those who do not read French". It will be available later this month in both hardcover and paperback editions.

The launching of a much needed forum for critical "international enterprise" is another new project of ours. To be ready in February is the first of a semi-annual series of volumes, Glyph: Johns Hopkins Textual Studies. A project of the Johns Hopkins Humanities Center, Glyph will present the work of scholars, both young and established, whose writings on literature, art, anthropology, sociology, psychology, and philosophy derive from both American and European intellectual traditions. Serial standing orders are available at a special discount; please write for a brochure and particulars.

While we are constantly increasing our list, the publication of influential French critics is not really a new endeavor for us. We were in the forefront with such books as:

The Structuralist Controversy. Edited by Richard A. Macksey and Eugenio Donato. LC 78-95789. 8018-1381-6. $3.95 paperback

The Language of the Self. Jacques Lacan. LC 68-15446. 8018-0673-9. $15.00

Life and Death in Psychoanalysis. Jean Laplanche. LC 75-36928. 8018-1637-8. $10.00

Of Grammatology. Jacques Derrida. LC 76-17226 8018-1841-9. $19.50. 8018-1879-6. $5.95

Glyph I. Edited by Samuel Weber and Henry Sussman. LC 76-47370. 8018-1930-X. $12.00 hardcover 8018-1931-8. $3.45 paperback

from Johns Hopkins

The Johns Hopkins University Press
Baltimore, Maryland 21218

ter. In an excellent review of the Appalachian social structure and the "mountain ethos" Erikson shows the Appalachian's dependence on communal support. The massive property damage caused by the flood and the inept handling of relocation efforts has caused a loss of communality which the author believes has left deeper scars on the survivors of Buffalo Creek than the more immediate shock of personal loss. A significant addition to the literature on Appalachia and a thoughtful lesson for those who deal with the aftermath of disaster.—Mark Neyman, Washington County P.L., Marietta, Ohio

Goldberg, M. Hirsh. The Jewish Connection.

Stein & Day. 1976. 256p. bibliog. index. LC 75-35941. ISBN 0-8128-1924-1 $8.95. REL/SOC SCI

Goldberg has searched for the "strange" events of Jewish history, and has compiled the oddities in this Jewish "Ripley's Believe It or Not." Did you know that there was a Jewish Pope? That a Jew invented the telephone? As Goldberg shows, "the Jewish connection" has been present almost without exception in the major events of Western history. Always entertaining, the one drawback of this work is lack of complete documentation; the author claims that all has been carefully researched, but more footnotes would have helped.—Arthur Kurzweil, formerly with Plainfield P.L., N.J.

Hendrickson, Robert. The Great American Chewing Gum Book.

Chilton. 1976. 238p. illus. index. LC 76-6055. ISBN 0-8019-6254-4. $9.95. SOC SCI

Finally, a tribute to "the greatness . . . the glory of gum." It may surprise readers to learn of the pervasive role this American institution has played in the nation's history over the past century. Ofttimes it was there whether our heroes were off to wars, ball fields, or outer space. All because a few dedicated individuals (Adams, Beeman, Wrigley, et al.) had the "gumption" to recognize its commercial potential. This is a chronicle of how they discovered it, manufactured it, marketed it, and immortalized it in a pluralistic society now "stuck together" by it. A pun-loving book, particularly for those who can read and chew at the same time.—William H. Hoffman, Wichita P.L., Kan.

Mercatante, Anthony S. The Magic Garden: myths and folklore about flowers, plants, trees, and herbs.

Harper. 1976. 185p. illus. by the author. bibliog. index. LC 76-9992. ISBN 0-06-065562-3. pap. $5.95. BOTANY/FOLKLORE

Following the format of his previous book, Zoo of the Gods (LJ 12/1/74), Mercatante examines the legends, lore, and popular stories surrounding approximately 100 different plants and trees around the world. Drawing on a wide range of mythology—from Christian beliefs to popular political superstitions—he interconnects various stories to form a brief, anthropomorphic study of each botanical subject. While it is no way a major reference work, The Magic Garden should have a wide appeal to students of literature, history, social and cultural studies, and botany. Though not illustrated as well, it is superior to Ernst Lehner and Johanna Lehner's Folklore and Symbolism of Flowers, Plants and Trees (Tudor, 1960.op) in terms of coverage and depth. Therefore, most libraries should appease the gods by buying this book.—Timothy Daum, Ohio Univ. Lib., Athens

Nash, June & Helen Icken Safa, eds. Sex and Class in Latin America.

Praeger. (Special Studies in Internat. Politics & Govt.). 1976. 330p. index. LC 75-19814. ISBN 0-275-55720-0. $23.50. SOC SCI

This is a collection of papers, previously unpublished, from a 1974 conference sponsored by the Social Science Research Council in Buenos Aires. The papers, which are provocative and thorough, describe (but offer few solutions to) a myriad of problems involving the aspirations of women in industrialized societies and in most Latin American countries where class inequalities take priority over sexual inequalities. The papers study such subjects as women in the labor market, female political participation, and sex roles in the social structure. This book is important, but its inflated price will limit purchase to only the more specialized Latin American or women's studies collections.—Carol B. Fitzgerald, CUNY Graduate Sch. Lib.

Nelson, John Wiley. Your God Is Alive and Well and Appearing in Popular Culture.

Westminster. 1976. 250p. bibliog. ISBN 0-664-24866-7. pap. $5.95. REL/SOC SCI

Nelson examines movies, country music, popular magazines, television, and detective fiction in order to show that many works of American popular culture are ritual celebrations of religious values that Americans take for granted. He constructs an elaborate "belief-system analysis" by means of which he tries to define "the values Americans hold as part of their self-understanding." This theorizing works best in his discussion of television; he shows that plots and characters in weekly TV shows repeat themselves in ways that reinforce the unstated assumptions of the audience. Since he does not define what he understands the values of organized religion to be, the concluding chapter—which offers advice to churches on how to cope with popular culture—lacks focus.—Philip Milner, Dept. of English, St. Francis Xavier Univ., Antigonish, Nova Scotia, Canada

Law & Criminology

Amacher, Ryan C. & Richard James Sweeney, eds. The Law of the Sea: U.S. interests and alternatives.

American Enterprise Inst. 1976. 196p. LC 76-1303. ISBN 0-8447-2073-9. $9; pap. ISBN 0-8447-2072-0. $4. INT AFFAIRS/LAW

As negotiations are continuing in the effort to codify an international law of the sea, this book presents the edited proceedings of a 1975 conference sponsored by the Treasury Department and the American Enterprise Institute to explore possible alternatives to a comprehensive treaty. The participants warn of the potentially adverse effects an international pact might have upon U.S. interests, with most participants preferring a continuation of the current system of bilateral or multilateral agreements. Although the major issues remain unresolved, the reservations expressed in this volume should help to focus attention on the objectives of American participation in law of the sea negotiations. Recommended.—Steven Wecker, Lehman Coll. Lib., CUNY

Bosmajian, Haig A., comp. & ed. Obscenity and Freedom of Expression.

Burt Franklin, dist. by Lenox Hill Pub. & Dist. Co. 1976. 348p. bibliog. index. LC 75-23138. ISBN 0-89102-034-9. $27.50. REF/LAW

Bosmajian provides the text of 70 important legal decisions involving obscenity handed down by the Supreme Court (for the most part) in this century. The cases are arranged chronologically in categories dealing with printed matter, pictorial matter, live performances, broadcasting, and the like. There is a subject index and a table of cases. A larger (144 cases) but less up-to-date collection is Edward de Grazia's Censorship Landmarks (Bowker, 1969). For instance, de Grazia includes both lower and high court decisions regarding Fanny Hill, whereas Bosmajian reprints only the latter. On the other hand such recent significant cases as Stanley vs. Georgia and Miller vs. California are in Bosmajian but not de Grazia. In general, libraries owning Censorship Landmarks can safely pass up the Bosmajian collection, unless there is a special need or the book budget is brimming.—Kenneth Kister, Tampa, Fla.

Meskil, Paul S. The Luparelli Tapes: the true story of the Mafia hitman who contracted to kill both Joey Gallo and his own wife.

Playboy, dist. by S. & S. Jan. 1977. LC 76-15256. ISBN 0-87223-450-9. $8.95. CRIME

Considered "the most important witness on organized crime since Joe Valachi," Joe Luparelli turned federal informant to save the lives of his family, as well as his own. Ever a faithful soldier carrying out orders, including murder, Luparelli finally balked when commanded to kill his own wife. As chauffeur and bodyguard to Joe Yacovelli, the brains of the Colombo family, Luparelli knew all and has told all about the family rackets, the contract murders, etc. His story is a near compendium of recent East Coast Mafia activities, covering the Joey Gallo murder, the rise and fall of Joe Colombo and his Italian-American League, etc., as well as the banal viciousness of daily Mafia operations. Inevitably, much of the background has been told elsewhere, but Meskil has done a superior job stringing together old information with Luparelli's revelations. The result is an entertaining and brisk account, a cut above the usual fare, that will definitely find its audience among Mafia buffs.—Jerry Maioli, Walla Walla County Rural Lib. Dist., Wash.

SOCIAL SCIENCE

Natural Resources Defense Council, Inc. Land Use Controls in the United States: a handbook on the legal rights of citizens.

Dial. 1976. 346p. ed. by Elaine Moss. index. ISBN 0-8037-4676-8. $15.95; pap. ISBN 0-8037-4677-6. $7.95. ENVIRONMENTAL LAW

"The intent here is to set out the basic framework of land use legislation and regulation," with emphasis on how the citizen can become involved in the implementation and enforcement of specific laws. Interpretations of the law are included, and naturally enough represent the environmentalist viewpoint. The greater portion of the book is concerned with federal law, though regional and state controls are discussed. In particular, regional land use programs and standard acts are treated. The book can hardly be described as easy reading or a first text, but it will be a useful resource item for a time for intelligent citizens in need of a guide to the law. Because of the book's cost and the changing nature of the law, the paperback might be most desirable as a circulation item.—Carolyn Simon, Austin P.L., Tex.

Rosenheim, Margaret. Pursuing Justice for the child.

Univ. of Chicago Pr. Jan. 1977. 150p. fwd. by Robert Maynard Hutchins. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-226-72789-0. $12.95. LAW/CORRECTIONS

The dominant theme here is the proper function of the juvenile court. The work is divided into four parts to deal with the concept of justice for the child, the delinquent, the nondelinquent, and the child in other countries. The essays discuss such topics as the policing of juveniles, pretrial detention, probation, the development of constitutional rights for children, and current systems of juvenile justice in Massachusetts, Great Britain, and Scandinavia. The book is a good study of current thinking concerning justice and the juvenile but is a necessary purchase for comprehensive collections only.—Vincent P. Schmidt, Cumberland Trail Lib. System, Flora, Ill.

Regional Studies & Anthropology

Maloney, Clarence, ed. The Evil Eye.

Columbia Univ. Pr. Jan. 1977. 296p. illus. bibliog. ISBN 0-231-04006-7. $15. ANTHROPOLOGY

In this book, anthropologists explore how belief in the evil eye arose; what distinguishes those societies where the phenomenon prevails; and how evil-eye beliefs and practices fit into the psychological, cultural, and social systems of the many societies in which they are found. The extensive ethnographic material provided for more than 15 societies is valuable by itself. Yet, what is most striking here is the interpretive nature of the contributions. As a whole the collection is uneven: not all contributions succeed in building a consistent, fully elaborated argument; and none provides a definitive theory for the evil-eye phenomenon. This book reminds one of the primitive state of cross-cultural analysis.—Patricia R. Pessar, Social Science Research Council, New York

Powell, Jay & Vickie Jensen. Quileute: an introduction to the Indians of La Push.

Univ. of Washington Pr. 1976. 80p. photogs. maps. bibliog. LC 75-40877. ISBN 0-295-95492-2. $10; pap. ISBN 0-295-95493-0. $4.95. CULTURAL STUDY

Prepared for the Quileute tribe with its full cooperation, this brief volume serves as one of the few modern works on this tribe of 350 members located on the Olympic Peninsula of Western Washington. With information garnered from personal interviews and prior research studies, the book presents a chronicle of Quileute life and culture from earliest times to the present. Coverage includes contact with white explorers and settlers, myths and legends, language, and cultural rituals. Appended are recipes and food preparation, the Quileute alphabet with a pronunciation key, and a list of words and phrases. Supplementing the clearly written text are more than 80 expressive photographs, many taken by Jensen, others brought together from earlier studies. The work succeeds in grasping the essence of Quileute heritage in an easily understood, attractive manner. It will be welcomed into anthropology and native American collections.—Hene F. Rockman, California Polytechnic State Univ. Lib., San Luis Obispo

SPORTS & RECREATION

Arneil, Steve & Bryan Dowler. Better Karate.

Sportshelf: Soccer. 1976. 96p. photogs. $10.50.

Egami, Shigeru. The Way of Karate: beyond technique.

Kodansha, dist. by Harper. 1976. 127p. illus. LC 75-12069. ISBN 0-87011-254-6. $12.95.

Manners, David. Teach Your Child Self-Defense.

Arco. 1976. 159p. photogs. LC 75-13889. ISBN 0-668-03850-0. $8.95. SPORTS

Better Karate rightly stresses the importance of direct instruction and provides advice on selecting a school. It covers most important aspects of the Kyokushinkai style of Japanese karate in a simple text. Generous illustrations are posed mostly by children, and their form is not always precise. This volume is competent, but overpriced when compared to the authors' Modern Karate (LJ 6/1/75), which is more comprehensive but less expensive.

The Way of Karate reflects 40 years of study by a student of Gichin Funakoshi, the founder of Japanese karate. The subtitle is misleading because the book is, in fact, an informed, historical study of Shoto-kan karate techniques. Egami's observations on kata (formal exercises) and sparring are in contrast to practices of sport karate now popular in this country. Well-illustrated and clearly written, this study will be of interest to all serious students of karate.

Teach Your Child Self-Defense describes techniques from boxing, as well

THE HUMAN COUGAR

by Lloyd Morain

(Co-author of "Humanism As the Next Step")

Possessions, women, marriage, work, unions, big business, nature, and hard play in the dramatic words of America's working drifters - an endangered human species tracked across our land.

A gold mine of values and emotions for teachers of English, Americana, and the social sciences.

"What a marvelous time for Morain to show us how to save the human cougar in each of us."
Nicholas Johnson

"Highly recommended."
Robert A. Heinlein

NON-FICTION

Hard Cover (Second Printing)
$8.95 ppd.
ISBN 0-87975-062-6

Prometheus Books
923-J Kensington Avenue
Buffalo, N.Y. 14215

NEW REPUBLIC BOOKS suggests

"At last a sports book different from most others. Not so much a book about sports per se, it deals with the weird and wacky ways in which athletes and fans sometimes act and/or react....The book is refreshing, revealing, and humorous. Highly recommended."—Library Journal

FANS!
How We Go Crazy Over Sports
by Michael Roberts
ISBN 0-915220-20-2 $8.95
Distributed by E. P. Dutton & Co

as from judo and karate. Manners is not a traditional martial artist, and his approach is that of a coach. He emphasizes defense, rather than attack, for children of both sexes. Text and illustrations are clear, and many of the moves and exercises appear effective. Although it is no substitute for regular instruction, this book is recommended for those interested in the fundamentals of self-defense for children.—John Newman, Colorado State Univ. Libs., Fort Collins, Colo.

Brokefield, Tom. Hunting Big-Game Trophies: a North American guide.

Outdoor Life, dist. by Dutton. 1976. 446p. photogs. index. LC 75-31060. ISBN 0-87690-214-X. $10.95. SPORTS

Brokefield, whose The Sportsman's Complete Book of Trophy and Meat Care (LJ 2/1/76) was very good, has produced another excellent book on hunting. He covers almost all big-game animals of North America and discusses rifle calibre, where and how to hunt, trophy heads, setting up the hunt, selecting guides, photography, selecting a taxidermist, etc. This is not an all-around how-to book since it does not explain how to field dress a trophy; Brokefield's first book does this. Together his books provide complete information on trophy hunting. Recommended.—Steve George, Yuma City-County Lib., Ariz.

Darden, Anne. The Sports Hall of Fame.

Drake. 1976. 236p. photogs. LC 76-28312. ISBN 0-8473-1025-6. $15. REF/SPORTS

This book provides a cursory examination of 104 famous athletes from 14 sports. The most popular performers are here (Ruth, Aaron, Jabbar, Ali, et al.), but there seems to be no real criteria for inclusion. A full-page photograph is given for each person, together with a brief biographical sketch, a chronological list of key achievements, and in some instances, a tally sheet of career totals. Missing is a discussion of the sports themselves, which would have put the accomplishments of these individuals in some perspective. Because of the sparseness of information, this work is limited in reference value; and it is not very appealing for browsing collections.—Scott Cohen, Jackson State Comm. Coll., Jackson, Tenn.

Elman, Robert, ed. & intro. All About Deer Hunting in America.

Winchester, dist. by Scribners. 1976. 255p. photogs. index. LC 76-12560. ISBN 0-87691-176-9. $10 SPORTS

No matter where the reader lives in the United States, this book will provide him with valuable information about deer hunting because each chapter is by a regional specialist. Whitetail, mule, and blacktail deer hunting is discussed, and there is an effort to show the slight differences in effectively hunting each kind of deer in its own habitat. Topics such as handguns, black-powder weapons, and archery are discussed by experts. The editor has done a commendable job of compiling an informative, comprehensive work.—Donald C. Rowland, Black Hawk Coll. Lib., Moline, Ill.

Evans, Donald P. Hanover: the greatest name in harness racing.

A. S. Barnes. 1976. 240p. illus. index. LC 75-20589. ISBN 0-498-01694-3. $12. SPORTS

This book chronicles the development of Hanover Shoe Farms from a collection of mediocre horses into the leading standardbred breeding and racing stable in the world. Full of stories about the great personalities and the great horses in harness racing, it cannot fail to fascinate anyone who ever plunked down two dollars on a nose or marveled at the awesome power of a first-class trotter or pacer. Recommended for libraries, especially in areas where harness racing is popular.—Susan Ebershoff Coles, Indianapolis-Marion Co. P.L.

Gallwey, W. Timothy. Inner Tennis: playing the game.

Random. 1976. 173p. $8.95. PSYCH/SPORTS

Gallwey has taken the basic concept of his successful The Inner Game of Tennis (LJ 6/1/74) and has applied it to numerous other life situations ranging from sex to washing the dishes. Learn to trust your body to do what is right naturally, he says, and overcome the mental obstacles such as anxiety, self-doubt, boredom, etc. that inhibit you from living up to your potential. Once you become really aware of what is and stop judging yourself at all times you are bound to do better in life and on the tennis court. Tennis instructors will argue, but even if you disagree with his fundamental principle and hold that the tennis swing is not natural but a highly artificial motion that must be taught, you should get this one.—David Peele, Coll. of Staten Island Lib., New York

Giles, Jack. Squash Rackets.

SportShelf. 1976. 96p. illus. ISBN 0-7182-0905-2. $12.50. SPORTS

There is good squash instruction in this book, but U.S. libraries shouldn't buy it. When a book like this is imported from England a minimum of translation is necessary for the new market—don't quote racket prices in pounds, don't use an English term when there is a different American term, and don't give the English rules. All those don'ts were done in this book, so in spite of the good information on strokes and tactics and an especially good chapter on errors and their correction, spend your money on John Truby's The Science and Strategy of Squash (LJ 9/15/75).—David Peele, Coll. of Staten Island Lib., New York

Greene, Robert Ford. Championship Tennis Drills.

Hawthorn. 1976. 224p. illus. by Joan Greene. LC 75-28689. ISBN 0-8015-7525-7. $14.95. SPORTS

In 1975 we had Bill Murphy's Complete Book of Championship Tennis Drills (LJ 5/15/75), and now we have Greene's book which repeats much of the same information. Libraries that have Murphy won't need to buy Greene; libraries that don't have either should probably purchase Greene because his book is aimed at the individual (his drills are those that one person or one with a partner can perform; Murphy was directed more at the tennis coach) and Greene has illustrations (Murphy used only line drawings). That very fact, of course, makes Greene more expensive. He gives drills for beginners, intermediates, and advanced-tournament-level players and shows that many of them can be done in rainy weather or when a court is not available.—David Peele, Coll. of Staten Island Lib., New York

Jones, C.M. & Angela Buxton. Starting Tennis.

Transatlantic. 1976. 96p. illus. $7.50. SPORTS

There are two reasons why libraries should not buy this book. The first is that it has not been translated from English English to American English, and it can only be confusing to the beginning student (at whom the book is aimed) to read about "tramlines," "chopper grips," "van in," etc. The second is that the book is confused about its audience; in the beginning the pictures and text seem aimed at children, but the vocabulary level throughout and later portions of the text on mixed doubles tournament play are certainly not at a child's level. Topics covered are the standards—stroking, practicing, tactics, etc.—and there's nothing wrong with the advice given, but American libraries can do better.—David Peele, Coll. of Staten Island Lib., New York

Levy, David. Chess and Computers.

145p. ISBN 0-914894-03-X. $11.95; pap. ISBN 0-914894-02-1. $7.95.

Levy, David. 1975 Computer Chess Championship.

86p. LC 76-241. ISBN 0-914894-00-5. $6.95; pap. ISBN 0-914894-01-3. $4.95.
ea. vol: Computer Science Pr., 4566 Poe Ave., Woodland Hills, Calif. 91364. (Computer Chess). 1976. illus. bibliog. COMPUTERS/GAMES

This series seems likely to be both entertaining and instructive. Chess and Computers is primarily a library of the topic, and an introduction for laymen (i.e., noncomputer types) to the theory behind computer chess. Including the most significant work (e.g., current Soviet and American progress), it covers the field thoroughly and well, and gives some illustrative games and an exhaustive bibliography. The 1975 Computer Chess Championship is primarily a tournament book. All games from the championship are annotated, together with those of a simultaneous exhibition played by the author against the computers. A brief bibliography and a description of the field are included. These two works are complementary and would be well obtained together. Chess players may use them to gloat, computer scientists to bemoan.—David R. Williams, Douglas Coll. Lib., Surrey, Canada

Ljungquist, Bengt. Practical Dressage Manual.

the author, 12711 River Rd., Potomac, Md. 20854. 1976. 166p. photogs. index LC 76-15459. $16. ANIMAL HUSBANDRY/SPORTS

Ljungquist is the U.S. Olympic dressage coach who brought our team up from nowhere to win a bronze medal. It is fitting that his book should be published immediately after such a success; it's a pity he had to publish it him-

elf. The outstanding books on dressage until now have been Waldemar Seunig's Horsemanship (Doubleday, 1961. rev. ed.) and Alois Podhajsky's Complete Training of Horse and Rider (LJ 3/15/67), but both these books have the disadvantage of having been translated from another language. Jungquist learned English in order to teach, and his writing reflects his clarity of expression. The photos and drawings are excellent and well related to the text. The one danger is that Jungquist's simple and succinct prose may lead the reader to underestimate the importance of what he is saying. A very fine book indeed.—William R. Chamberlain, Virginia State Lib., Richmond

Look, Dennis. Joy of Backpacking: People's guide to the wilderness.

Jalmar Pr. 1976. 208p. illus. bibliog. LC 76-9649. ISBN 0-915190-06-0. pap. $5.95. RECREATION

Other writers have expressed the "joy" of backpacking better, but this is a suitable addition to library collections. The depth and scope of the coverage are adequate and the information is generally accurate, but the author has contributed little that is new. Patrons should find the book readable, but slight biases are apparent in favor of "natural" foods and against teen groups (Scouts, etc.) The author has attempted to correct these leanings with short statements on the environmental impact of people living off the land and by suggesting that experienced backpackers volunteer to work with teen groups in educating them to the new wilderness ethic. Other publications are mentioned in the body of the work and in the bibliography.—Ronald J. Wimmer, Ohio State Univ. Lib., Columbus

Nickels, Nick. Nick Nickels' Canoe Canada.

Van Nostrand Reinhold. 1976. 278p. illus. maps. bibliog. LC 75-43066. ISBN 0-442-29930-3. pap. $9.95. TRAV/SPORTS

This is the most complete guide to Canadian canoeing yet published. It covers more than 600 routes all over Canada canoed by either the author or his correspondents. The book is divided into chapters by province, region, and river drainages. Each chapter gives a short history of the region, mentions climate, and offers detailed lists of map sources, outfitters, and equipment suppliers. Each trip or route includes information on length, duration, difficulty, and camping and fishing spots; and hazards of certain routes are carefully pointed out. The last three chapters briefly cover canoe types, techniques, map reading, and camping. The only thing lacking is an index, although it is not a serious omission. Canoe Canada is an essential guide for the North American canoeing enthusiast, beginner and expert alike.—Ryan Hoover, Univ. of Utah Libs. Salt Lake City

Schapiro, Boris. Bridge Analysis.

Sterling Pub. 1976. 187p. illus. LC 76-1167. $4.95. GAMES

A player of international stature, Schapiro has written a lively, informative book that should appeal to a wide variety of bridge players. His chatty, informal analyses make interesting reading for anyone concerned with bettering his or her play, while the topics he considers (percentages and odds, squeezes, psychological tactics) are sophisticated enough to hold the interest of even the best players. It's fun to see how the experts bid and analyze a hand or to learn from their occasionally hilarious mistakes and misunderstandings. This compilation of well-chosen hands would make a pleasant addition to a general collection, although it's by no means an essential title.—Gail R. Haar, Prosser Lib., Bloomfield, Conn.

Scott, Bob. Lacrosse: technique and tradition.

Johns Hopkins. 1976. 248p. illus. index. $14.95; until Dec. 31, $12.95. SPORTS

This book fills a void in lacrosse literature because of the lack of materials in print. (Jim Hinkson's Box Lacrosse, LJ 7/75, offers limited competition.) In addition to good historical coverage, there is a solid core section on techniques and tactics. Scott is experienced both as a player and as a coach, and his primary aim is to spell out the various methods and styles of the game. He deals with the different offenses and devotes considerable space to defense, plus goal tending, fast breaks, and drills. Thus he achieves his goal of offering fundamental coverage, yet also discusses some of the finer points of the game. I have not seen the illustrations, but this should be a welcome addition to the sports shelf.—Eugene J. Millich, Univ. of Wisconsin Lib., La Crosse

Tarr, Bill & Barry Ross. Now You See It, Now You Don't: lessons in sleight-of-hand.

Random. 1976. 225p. illus. ISBN 0-394-40981-7. $10.95; pap. ISBN 0-394-72202-7. $5.95. RECREATION

Tarr and Ross have produced an excellent book: the lessons are interesting and clearly illustrated, making them easy to read and to follow. Cards, coins, rope, silks, balls, and many more objects are used in the tricks. This fascinating book is highly recommended for special collections, public libraries, and would-be magicians of any age and ability.—Ann Zaeske, Anheuser-Busch Lib., St. Louis

Telander, Rick. Heaven Is a Playground.

St. Martin's. 1976. 256p. LC 76-13045. $8.95. SOC SCI/SPORTS

Basketball has become largely the black man's game—in high school and college, in the pros, in the ghetto. Heaven Is a Playground touches upon this theme, upon how inner-city environs make basketball an obvious chosen escape for thousands of ghetto youths. Telander etches a grim, squalid portrait of basketball's urban aura. The ghetto, he says, mirrors the jungle; only the cruelest survive. These sentiments are hardly novel; they have often been reached by sociologists before. What makes the book intriguing, however, is Telander's lively and articulate prose; his character sketches are especially incisive. The language—often obscene—is hardly appropriate for elementary

"A lively, original book"
—The New Yorker

DOCK ELLIS
IN THE COUNTRY OF BASEBALL

BY DONALD HALL
WITH DOCK W. ELLIS

"Ellis' childhood and adolescence were filled with escapades involving a junior high school 'insurance' racket and a stolen vehicle among other things. This series of misadventures was supplemented with a keen interest (coupled with exceptional skill) in baseball that finally led him to the major leagues. The book provides interesting insights into his controversial career...[Reveals] a good deal about the life style, setbacks, and successes of one who has played the game so well."—Library Journal. Photos.
SBN 698-10658-X $8.95

COWARD, McCANN & GEOGHEGAN, INC.
200 Madison Avenue, New York 10016

MATH WITHOUT TEARS
By Roy Hartkopf

"The author should be commended for the ease with which he handles complicated mathematical concepts. His anecdotal approach in which he indicates through a plain story the nature of a given concept, can be emulated by many mathematics teachers. His skeptical attitude toward some of the sacred cows of mathematics is very refreshing and, in some cases, amusing. He covers the field from the basic concepts of arithmetic through logarithms, momography, graphs, trigonometry series, and calculus. This is a broad spectrum of subject matter to cover in one book; but by sticking to basic ideas and not getting involved in detailed calculation, Hartkopf succeeds admirably. Although the book is aimed at adults not specifically trained in mathematics, bright high school youngsters can read it with pleasure and profit. 151 line drawings. Highly Recommended."—Library Journal
SBN-87523-173-X $7.95

TEACH YOURSELF KARATE
By Eric Dominy

"Beginning with basic postures and movements, a judo black-belt holder teaches how to build up dexterity, strength and speed in one of the best means of self-defense. Line drawings illustrate use of hands, feet and body and their vulnerable parts."—Army Magazine, SBN 87523-163-2 116 line drawings $5.95

EMERSON BOOKS, INC.
Reynolds Lane, Buchanan, New York 10511

and high school libraries; other centers may find Telander's rhetoric more well-suited to their audience. In sum, this book offers a mature look at basketball as an escape from poverty and squalor.—Curt Smith, Assist. Director of Communications, Hamilton Coll., Clinton, N.Y.

Wiley, Jack. Boat Living.

Internat. Marine Pub. 1976. 136p. LC 76-5201. ISBN 0-87742-078-5. $8.95. RECREATION

A growing number of people have made the decision to give up life ashore and live aboard some type of boat. This work outlines the problems and pleasures of a floating home. The discussion includes the choosing and equipping of a boat, deciding where to live, legal considerations, etc. Although the information given is generally accurate and clear, it is this reviewer's opinion that one should gradually, over many years of boating experience, move toward the step of exchanging a land home for a floating one. This work should be used to implement a decision that has been made, not as a starting point.—Jay Schwartz, Suffolk County Community Coll. Lib., Selden, N.Y.

Wilkes, Kenneth. Ocean Yacht Navigator.

McKay. 1976. 183p. illus., some color. index. LC 76-338. ISBN 0-679-50636-5. $9.95. SPORTS

An orderly format, a refreshing clarity in writing about a difficult subject, and informative illustrations define this useful book. Through careful descriptions and explanations of instruments used in offshore navigation (including electronic long-distance aids), through examples of navigation underway, and through an emphasis on accuracy in recording data, Wilkes adequately explains the intricacies of celestial and offshore navigation and provides explanations of variations used to ensure a better positioning at sea. He keeps theory to a minimum and places his emphasis on putting into immediate practice, in a somewhat pro forma manner, the steps involved in obtaining adequate solutions to navigational problems. Of interest to novice and advanced navigators, and worth every cent.—James Tazelaar, U.S. Army Engineer Topographic Labs, Fort Belvoir, Va.

Williams, Guy R. The World of Model Cars.

Putnam. 1976. 208p. photogs., some color. index. LC 75-29665. ISBN 0-399-11694-X. $14.95. HOBBIES

Williams' latest book on models is a well-written and beautifully illustrated introduction to the manufacture, assembly, collection, and operation of model cars. Written from a survey rather than a how-to point of view, it covers everything from museum models to dime-store toys to plastic kits to gasoline-powered, radio-controlled racers. Williams is British, and the book has a certain international—if not British—flavor, which probably increases its utility. Less advantageous is the fragmentary inclusion of aspects of automotive history; books on models might do better to stick to models. Nevertheless, along with Williams' other books on models, this is a fine item, and it's recommended for both adult and juvenile collections.—Frederick A. Schlipf, Urbana Free Lib., Ill.

THEATER

Jones, Preston. A Texas Trilogy: "The Last Meeting of the Knights of the White Magnolia"; "LuAnn Hampton Laverty Oberlander"; "The Oldest Living Graduate."

Hill & Wang: Farrar. 1976. $15; pap. $6.95. THEATER

These full-length, interrelated seriocomic dramas constitute an impressible comment on the frustrations and unfulfilled dreams of small town life in America. In The Last Meeting the purpose is to bring new life into a dying brotherhood, but proceedings backfire, and the order falls. LuAnn Hampton is the portrait of a loser from her high school days in the 1950's to her widowhood in the 1970's. The Oldest Living Graduate is the expression and view of a colonel on the brink of death whose once active life was perhaps not as interesting when lived as in retrospect. Although some of the characters and comments on characters are common to all three plays, they can be read and produced individually or collectively and in any sequence. Jones writes in a lively, humorous style and has a true ear for the common speech of the region. By virtue of the Broadway and numerous regional productions, the trilogy has already become an integral part of the American theater scene. Performing arts and American literature collections will surely want to include it.—Louis A. Rachow, Walter Hampden-Edwin Booth Theatre Collection & Lib., New York

Lion, Eugene & David Ball, eds. Guthrie New Theater. Vol. 1.

Grove, dist. by Random. 1976. 316p. fwd. by Michael Langham. LC 75-15099. ISBN 0-8021-4010-6. pap. $4.95. THEATER

The Guthrie Theater in Minneapolis is one of the most important regional theaters in the country. In early 1976 the Guthrie 2, an alternative theater designed to advance new talent and innovative drama, was opened. This collection of seven plays by six authors represents part of the premier season of the Guthrie 2. Since the object of experiment is not to succeed, but to learn, we must not judge these plays by the standards of conventional drama, but by their own criteria. Likewise, as these plays document a general movement away from verbal opulence to visual complexity, the printed text tends to embalm the play rather than communicate the excitement and energy of live performance. Briefly to summarize the plays, then; "The Future Pit" by Menzies McKillop is an absurdist exploration of power relationships derived from Ionesco's dramaturgy. "Swellfoot's Tears" by Leon Katz is a spectacularly theatrical Beckett-like reevaluation of Oedipus and the plague. "Cold" by Michael Casale explores by curt gestures the conflicting images of Marilyn Monroe. "Waterman" by Frank Ford is a black comedy of army life. Gladden Schrock is represented by two plays: "Glutt," probably the best play in the collection, is a painful image of death; and "Taps" is a vaudevillian history of man. "Afternoon Tea" by Harvey Perr is an exploration of the little ceremonies that keep us going. As experiments all the plays are valuable for what they teach us about the limits of theater.—Thomas E. Luddy, Dept. of English, Salem State Coll., Mass.

Towsen, John H. Clowns.

Hawthorn. 1976. 416p. illus. LC 75-41793. ISBN 0-8015-3962-5. $14.95. THEATER

What Towsen has attempted in this book and, by and large, has succeeded in accomplishing, is to present a historical survey of the art of clowning from its earliest manifestations up to the present. Most of the previous literature on this subject has either been involved with a philosophical interpretation of the art or has been deeply rooted in the morass of nostalgia. As a result, this book is invaluable both to historians and students. The only problem, and by its nature it is probably an insurmountable one, is that the scholarly approach and the subject of clowns often make strange bedfellows. However, Towsen has managed to avoid an overdose of pedantry by liberally sprinkling his text with various clown routines which help to lighten the tone. Recommended for academic and large public libraries. (The illustrations were not seen by this reviewer.)—Alan C. Hochberg, SUNY at Farmingdale Lib.

Victor, Thomas, ed. & photogs. The Making of a Dance: Mikhail Baryshnikov and Carla Fracci in "Medea."

Holt. 1976. intro. by Clive Barnes. LC 76-4717.ISBN 0-03-016866-X. $17.95; pap. ISBN 0-03 016861-9. $8.95. PHOTOG. DANCE

Victor, who has contributed photographs to Time and Newsweek as well as other publications, traces the development and creation of the dance "Medea." He does this through candid pictures (taken during rehearsals) of John Butler, the choreographer; Baryshnikov, the great Russian dancer; and Fracci, the beautiful prima ballerina of Italy. Although the photos are uneven (the rehearsal conditions were less than ideal for photographs) and although it is questionable if one really does see the act of creation, The Making of a Dance is still an interesting and provocative work. It more than captures the bold, intense, and impish personality of Baryshnikov, and it clearly reveals the dramatic gifts of the lovely and elfish Fracci. Barnes's introduction is informative, perceptive, and well written.—Norma Feld, Rochester Sch. Dist. Libs., N.Y.

Cinema

Barsam, Richard Meran, ed. Nonfiction Film Theory and Criticism.

Dutton. 1976. 382p. bibliog. ISBN 0-525-47425-0. pap. $6.95. CINEMA

This anthology is loosely structured in-) four sections of uneven quality, rang- ıg from the major theorists on "the onfiction film idea" to rambling es- ıys on documentary history, with sec- ons on biographical material and es- ays on film making rounding out the ork. The book concentrates largely n the documentary film, particularly ıe British documentary of the 1930's nd the tradition it engendered. Most of ıe major figures of this movement are overed (including John Grierson, Paul otha, Humphrey Jennings, and Lind- ay Anderson) by selections from their wn work and by commentaries on ıeir films. Other areas briefly covered ıclude war-propaganda films, news- eels, and such seminal figures as Rob- rt Flaherty and Leni Riefenstahl. This ollection will no doubt be used as a asic text in college courses on the ocumentary and is particularly recom- ıended for college libraries. The range f its coverage, however, will also ıake it valuable for general collec- ions.—Evelyn Ehrlich, Dept. of Cine- ıa Studies, NYU

McCaffrey, Donald W. Three Classic Si- ent Screen Comedies Starring Harold Lloyd.

Fairleigh Dickinson Univ. Pr. 1976. 264p. photogs. bibliog. index. LC 74-4993. ISBN 0-8386-1455-8. $15. CINEMA

McCaffrey's book closely analyzes hree of Lloyd's most successful features: Grandma's Boy, Safety Last, and The Freshman. Shot-by-shot scenarios for each film have been developed by the author and studied in terms of the structure and development of the action, the characters, and the comic and film techniques used. This method allows the reader to visualize the films without actually viewing them. In addition, Lloyd's comic material and techniques are considered in historical perspective. The style is clear and readable, though occasionally repetitious. The book can be recommended both as a study of Lloyd's work and as an example of in-depth film study that is seldom seen. For all libraries serving students and scholars of film.—Barbara Kemp, Univ. of Michigan Lib., Ann Arbor

Minney, R. J. The Films of Anthony Asquith.

A. S. Barnes. 1976. 284p. photogs. index. LC 74-3613. ISBN 0-498-01558-0. $10.

BIOG/CINEMA

Asquith (1902-1968), a British director best known for his Shaw adaptations and collaborations with Terence Rattigan, had the benefit of an insulated, intellectual childhood, untouched by the world's woes, and a strong, lively mother. This uncritical study by an adoring friend is unnervingly British and written with relentless good taste. It is much too proper (perhaps like its genteel subject) for its own good, largely ignoring Asquith's considerable complexities. The artist gets praise, of the eulogistic sort, mostly from a slew of people who worked with Asquith and whom Minney interviewed, but the man never comes to life. Surprisingly, the films are not discussed in any detail.—David Bartholomew, N.Y.P.L.

fiction

Alley, Robert. The Front.

Pocket Bks: S. & S., dist. by Pocket Bks-Ace. 1976. 158p. based on the screenplay by Walter Bernstein. ISBN 0-671-80739-0. pap. $1.50.

CINEMA/F

Alley has fashioned a highly readable movie-tie-in novel. Set in the McCarthy era, the book satirizes the idiocy of the blacklist. Alfred Miller, a formerly successful television writer, finds that he can no longer sell his product. Therefore he asks his friend, Howard, to submit his works under his own name. Howard consents, and soon finds himself serving as the front for several other black-listed writers. The characterizations are shallow, but the writing moves along at a fast clip and the book can be finished in a few hours by even the slowest of readers. Not essential for any collection by a long shot, but someone may ask for it. Use discretion.—Andrew Aros, Rosemead P.L., Calif.

A wacky, witty "masterpiece of surrealistic fantasy"* by the 20th-century's answer to Lewis Carroll
"Marian Leatherby, the 92-year-old narrator of this strange and wonderful novel, begins to hear the world again when a friend gives her a hearing trumpet. The first thing she hears is that her family is about to send her to a home for senile old ladies...This book is a masterpiece of surrealistic fantasy, combining rich symbolic suggestion with a gripping narrative."
—Library Journal*
"Reading The Hearing Trumpet liberates us from the miserable reality of our days."
—Louis Bunuel
The Hearing Trumpet
Leonora Carrington
$7.95 at bookstores everywhere
St. Martin's Press
175 Fifth Avenue, New York 10010

"Entertaining"*

SURVIVORS

by

TERRY NATION

"A passenger on a Boeing international flight falls ill with the flu. Soon countries all over the world report cases of the virus, and people begin to die. Only a handful survive the epidemic and set out to organize new lives for themselves in the disease-ravaged English countryside."—Library Journal."The recent 'Legionnaire's Disease' outbreak lends this at times chilling novel by a BBC-TV writer considerable topicality."—Publishers Weekly. "The best of its kind I've read since Malevil."—Thomas Page, author of The Hephaestus Plague.
SBN 698-10664-4 $8.95

COWARD, McCANN & GEOGHEGAN, INC.
200 Madison Avenue, New York 10016

"Highly Recommended"*

The Miracle Season

By LINDA CLINE

"A beautifully written fable for our time."—Library Journal. The mission of a spirited young bird named Crow is to awaken the animal kingdom to the danger they face from man. Through story and song, Crow teaches them the true secret of survival in a wise, witty, heartwarming tale for all seasons. "A haunting allegorical novel....Ms. Cline's images have considerable evocative power."—Publishers Weekly. A Berkley/Putnam Book. SBN-399-11654-0.
YA. $6.95

G.P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

Andersen, Isabelle. Gentle Asylum: life at a mental hospital.
Continuum: Seabury. 1976. 192p. LC 76-23426. ISBN 0-8164-9292-1. $8.95. PSYCH/F

Introducing her book, Andersen states: "This is a work of fiction. The stories are true, in that all the incidents related actually occurred, but the setting and the characters were created by the author." At "Hunter's Landing," the state mental hospital where Andersen worked as a psychiatric social worker for 12 years, you meet characters with story-book names such as Coleman Martinius (called Speedy), Stoy Vick, Dimity Proudhammer, and Dumbarton Minor. Unfortunately, Andersen's prose flattens characters and situations until they are preserved only as quaint vignettes. Suffering and tragedy, if at all recognizable, are kept to operetta-like proportions. In fact, cozy would be an appropriate term to describe the feeling which pervades this book. The closing lines of the last chapter sum up the tone of the book quite nicely: "Farewell, Hunter's Landing, you weird and weary old wonderland of tragedy and dreams! God bless forever, and farewell."—Joan W. Gartland, Univ. of Detroit Lib.

Brown, Rita Mae. In Her Day.
196p. LC 76-7817. ISBN 0-913780-14-6. $4.50.

Harris, Bertha. Lover.
214p. LC 76-7816. ISBN 0-913780-13-8. $4.50.

Mace, Betty Webb. You Can Have It When I'm Through with It.
160p. LC 76-7813. ISBN 0-913780-12-X. $4.
ea. vol: Daughters, Inc. 1976. pap. F

Of these three feminist novels published by Daughters, Inc., Harris' Lover is the best, simply because she takes chances with language, has a sense of humor (grim, but funny) and tries to make fiction as well as points for her cause. A story about several generations of women—mothers of daughters who are mothers of daughters—Lover is an experimental lesbian novel which draws on myth and history to universalize the condition of women. But Harris' narrative is such a jungle of stream-of-consciousness tricks that few readers will want to fight their way through.

Like her first novel Rubyfruit Jungle, Brown's book is about lesbian relationships. This description of a love affair between two women of different generations is really a treatise on the history and present status of lesbians in America. Brown's style is so literal and humorless, and her objectives so apparent, that one will read this novel for information rather than enjoyment.

You Can Have It When I'm Through With It is about a lady painter who believes that her place is not in the home but can't convince the world, especially men, that she's a real person, not a sex object. All the clichés and stereotypes of the women's movement are woven into this awkward, contrived story which may or may not have been intended as parody. Either way, it doesn't work.

Ilse, the young lesbian in In Her Day, says "I'm not what any woman was raised to be. I'm a new world. I haven't even got a language yet for what's happening to me." Maybe that's the problem. These feminist writers have a strong message, but the need to say it seems stronger than the desire to say it well. All three books will be of limited interest; librarians may wish to consider for large fiction collections.—Janet Wiehe, Cincinnati Hamilton County P.L., Ohio

Davis, John Gordon. Leviathan.
Dutton. 1976. 255p. ISBN 0-525-14460-9. $9.95. F

An adventure yarn about modern-day whaling with ardent conservationists cast as the heroes, whale hunters as villains, and whales as super-mammals curiously like humans but much better. Justin Magnus and his crew of the Jubilee, similar in many ways to Cousteau's Calypso operation, set themselves the task of saving the world's remaining blue whales, the biggest species of them all. Their strategy is sabotage of the whaling industry's fleets. The book opens with the explosion of a docked Japanese factory ship and closes with the massive destruction of a similar Russian ship in the Antarctic. Davis skillfully and suspensefully combines believable characters, technical details, and a spicy subplot to produce a saga in the tradition of Alistair McLean. Using a didactic technique, Davis preaches the cause of saving the whales, arguing passionately in defense of drastic measures. Colorful and realistic, this is appropriate for most fiction collections.—Barbara Conaty, formerly with Madison P.L., Wis.

Ford, Richard. A Piece of My Heart.
Harper. 1976. 297p. LC 75-5536. ISBN 0-06-011362-6. $8.95. F

A first novel of two men who come to an island just off Mississippi, one to get away from it all and put his life together, the other to follow through a ruinous sexual obsession which, a prologue tells us, will end in his violent death. Ford is clearly talented, despite heavy overtones of Faulkner (tangled descriptions of Arkansas and Mississippi), Hemingway (doggedly paced details of masculine activities), and the now dated pop alienation of the Jack Nicholson character in Five Easy Pieces. Despite the overfamiliarity of the material, the first half has fine atmospheric writing and some good dramatic scenes; but the writing falls into sluggish, predictable bleakness. Ford works very hard at conveying inertia and despair but does little with his novel's basic relationships and motivations, especially in the crucial sex episodes. A Piece of My Heart has already been sold to the movies and is being expensively marketed.—John Alfred Avant, Brooklyn P.L.

Greene, Gael. Blue Skies, No Candy.
Morrow. 1976. 288p. LC 76-17870. ISBN 0-688-03082-3. $7.95. F

The author's feel for telling detail, wit, and ambience are evident in the restaurant critiques (for New York magazine) for which she is best known. Her first novel is also erotic, cinematic, and bluntly honest. The protagonist is a successful scriptwriter, 40, not monognous but attuned to her husband, d obsessed with her sexuality. Her nd-blowing affair with an American ancial wizard culminates in Paris and nnes, in graphic and steamy sex enes. Predictable crises of adult life, feed, but excitingly delineated. Sure- it's all after Jung and Jong, but there an archetypal, elemental woman ething through all the acting-out. The nost-frantic prose abounds in throw- ay black humor, movie metaphors, d celebrity circuit stuff. One reads e novel almost compulsively too fast focus, but it's viscerally enjoyable d credible.—Mary Pradt Ziegler, ooklyn P.L.

unn, James. The Magicians.
Scribners. 1976. 197p. LC 76-17558. ISBN 0-684-14782-3. $7.95. F

irk (Casey) Cullen, also known as Ga- iel, schoolteacher turned private in- stigator, enters a world of magicians, itches, and demons in this mystery of e occult. This slow-starting tale rapid- gains momentum as Casey attempts determine the identity of a lunatic ower broker within a group of other- ise well-intentioned magicians. Hired an elderly lady to find the real name this madman who is attempting to ervert magic for his own personal in, Casey becomes entangled in itchcraft, spells, and demonology. He scovers that Christian names and oth- personal effects (hair, nail clippings, c.) render one vulnerable to all sorts insidious trickery. Besides the use of eudonyms, the magicians use a vari- y of other techniques to conceal iden- ies, such as changing physical appear- ice. Casey pursues his prey and falls love with his employer, who is not e old woman she originally appeared be. Casey eventually gets both his nan" and his "girl" in a powerful onclusion in which the detective and s employer are the guests of honor at contemporary sacrificial rite with the llain cast as Satan.—Fred M. Hirsh- ld, Dept. of Speech, Language & earing, Darien Public Schs., Conn.

ayden, Sterling. Voyage: a novel of 396.
Putnam. Dec. 1976. 596p. LC 76-40593. ISBN 0-399-11665-6. $12.95. F ctor-sailor Hayden uses his knowl- dge and love of the sea this time to re- eate the voyage of the brand-new ennebec windjammer Neptune's Car ound the Horn to San Francisco. here are a variety of subplots and plot reads: an abortive scientific expedi- on to Japan by an effete yachtsman, s wife, and a beautiful young San ranciscan with enormous sexual appe- tes; the futile attempts of labor orga- zers to improve the lot of the com- on seaman; the struggle of en- enched business against a rising ocial conscience, as exemplified in the ryan-McKinley presidential cam- aign. But what pulls the readers along the ill-starred voyage of Captain ons Saul Pendleton and the Nep- ne's Car, with a burning load of coal her bowels, an adverse passage ound the Cape, a sadistic yet cowardly ate, and a crew driven to mutiny and murder by overwork and ill treatment. The book is in spots over-literary, its structure a mite sprung, it fizzles some- what at the end; but in the main it is a well-written, gripping account of the in- credible hardships and cruelty of life at sea.—L. W. Griffin, Univ. of Wisconsin Lib., Madison

Jhabvala, Ruth Prawer. How I Became a Holy Mother and Other Stories.
Harper. 1976. 224p. ISBN 0-06-012198-X. $8.95. F

Jhabvala is at the top of her form in these stories. Her civilized irony has often been compared to Chekhov's or Jane Austen's, and both comparisons seem to become more apt with each new publication. The irony has, if anything, grown both sharper and more subtle with time; a few of these stories are small triumphs of perception and wit. In "How I Became a Holy Mother," a twice-married, 23-year-old English model finds salvation in India as the blond consort of one of the new breed of globe-trotting gurus. The girl says of her new profession: "We do our best. It's not hard; mostly we just have to sit there and radiate. The results are quite satisfactory." The stories are about misfits, life's square pegs, many of them women. Their characteristic in common is the ability to make lives out of the most outrageous circumstances. Their situations are full of pathos, but Jhabvala never sentimentalizes. She is closer here than ever before to that difficult fine balance between comedy and tragedy.—Shernaz Mehta Mollinger, New School for Social Research, New York

Mewshaw, Michael. Earthly Bread.
Random. 1976. 212p. $7.95. F

Here is a tight, seriocomical morality tale by a good and funny writer. The three principal characters—a Paulist priest, a Ted Patrick-like deprogrammer, and a Jesus freak—are locked in a conflict of moral beliefs at a seedy motel/brothel in West Texas. The owners are Belle and Zack, characters worth the price of the book alone. Michael Mewshaw uses this arid setting, where sweat is cheap and air conditioners go on the blink, as his arena to illustrate what can happen when anyone interferes with another's moral beliefs. With considerable skill and drama, he asks, clearly, for us to examine our own religious tolerance. The somber title disguises a meaningful and zany novel.—Page Edwards, Jr., Haverhill P.L., Mass.

Petrakis, Harry Mark. The Hour of the Bell: a novel of the 1821 Greek war of independence against the Turks.
Doubleday. 1976. LC 75-40738. ISBN 0-385-04877-7. $8.95. F

Those who would understand the mutual animosity of the Greeks and Turks, a hatred which continues to simmer over centuries (making the fate of Cyprus one of the longest unsettled inter-

A New Gothic Romance from the Publishers of Clare Darcy

Autumn Lace

By Eileen Jackson

Readers charmed with the Regency splendor of Miss Jackson's first novel, LORD RIVINGTON'S LADY will be enchanted by Miranda Courtney, the beautiful, spirited heroine of AUTUMN LACE.

Steeped with emotion and brimful of intrigue, Miss Jackson's new gothic romance is set in the rough, storm-plagued countryside of Wales.

$8.95

WALKER AND COMPANY
720 Fifth Ave.
New York, N.Y. 10019

"Miss Read is her charming self once more as she spins a delightful tale of ordinary people and ordinary lives in her own extraordinary way. Tuck it under the Christmas tree for someone special."
—Publishers Weekly

"A sip of cheer."
—Kirkus Reviews

$6.95 ISBN 0-395-24768-3

No Holly for Miss Quinn

a novel by
MISS READ

Houghton Mifflin Company
2 Park St., Boston, Mass. 02107

"A fetching book."
—N.Y. Times Book Review

Jack

a novel by Frank Walker

"The hero of this tale is Jack, a Belgian sheepdog with all the best features of that sturdy breed—fearless, loyal, intelligent and handsome. His master is a Yorkshire farmer with whom Jack develops an unusual affinity and mutual understanding....This is a homey story, strongly evocative of the English countryside where Jack becomes an obedience champion and an excellent working dog."—Library Journal. "The conclusion is enormously moving."—Publishers Weekly.

SBN 698-10752-7 $7.95

COWARD, McCANN & GEOGHEGAN, INC.
200 Madison Avenue, New York 10016

national problems in modern history), will get a vivid notion from this novel. It is unlike Petrakis' earlier novels in that its chief protagonist is not an individual but a religious and political movement—the Greek war of independence which began in 1821 and continued for ten years. The novel deals with its initial phase, closing with the siege, conquest, and scourge of Tripolitsa by the Greek insurgents. It is not a pretty tale. Barbarism and butchery are portrayed in sickening detail. Petrakis has made an effort to hew closely to historical events and to be accurate in the depiction of historic personages, thereby instructing us in the unchanging aspects of human nature.—Aaron L. Fessler, Merrick Editorial and Research Service, Merrick, N.Y.

Roiphe, Ann. Torch Song.
Farrar. Jan. 1977. 242p. $8.95. F
If you have never sipped a brew in New York's White Horse Taven while discussing the great German philosophers, never fled a college dorm after curfew (when curfews existed), care little for the literary life or the nature of genius, have not once wished to be more physically attractive, nor ever loved in vain, then you may find this perceptive novel to be of little consequence. But I doubt it. When Marjorie Weiss, a pampered but rebellious product of the 1950's upper-class Jewish society, meets Jim Morrison, a lanky blonde teenage alcoholic who is the living reincarnation of Byron, it is the beginning of a lengthy, often brutal, one-sided love affair. What sets this story apart from others of its ilk are the marvelous characterizations, beautifully human dialogue, and an admirable handling of details. From the steamy vaporizers of a germ-ridden childhood, to the unpleasant finding that not just one's parents, but even a first, achingly true love can be a fallible, possibly contemptible being, we are imbued with a sense of the moving reality of Marjorie's plight.—Lisa R. Bankoff, Guadalajara, Mexico

Smith, Godfrey. Caviare.
Coward. Dec. 1976. LC 76-25854. ISBN 0-698-10800-0. $8.95. F
From childhood Ben Freeman has loved Leila, the daughter of his grandparents' employers, a Jewish Nobel prize-winning scientist and a Russian musician. When Leila defects to Russia with one of her father's coscientists, a stunned Ben marries someone else. Years later, Leila contrives to meet Ben in New York and explains that she delivered the scientist in exchange for her uncle, who'd helped her escape the Nazis. Told with sophistication and charm, this is an intriguing, sensitive, and enjoyable book.—Melanie Axel-Lute, Montclair P.L., N.J.

Stephens, Martha. Cast a Wistful Eye.
Macmillan. Feb. 1977. 124p. ISBN 0-02-614110-8. $6.95. F
More an elegy than a novel, Cast a Wistful Eye is a tribute to the kind of life that almost no fictional characters are allowed to lead in these alienated times: contented, fruitful, and old-fashioned. As the book opens, its 19-year-old narrator Dorcas is being driven to the hospital by her devoted husband to have her first child; the concluding scene is the baby's homecoming. Between labor pains, Dorcas remembers her unexceptional growing up in a small Georgia town and reflects upon the brevity of individual life, the interrelatedness of all human beings and the continuity of generations. While this may sound like schmaltz, Dorcas tells her brief story honestly and with common sense, and her philosophizing is rooted in re-created events and a vivid evocation of the physical world. Taken on its own uncomplicated terms, Stephens' deceptively modest book is a well-written paean to life as it is timelessly experienced in rural America.—Frances Esmonde de Usabel, State Reference & Loan Lib., Madison, Wis.

West, Morris. The Navigator.
Morrow. 1976. 405p. LC 76-5504. ISBN 0-688-03061-0. $8.95.
An uncharted Pacific island is the landfall for a motley group of scientists and anthropologists led by the descendant of great Polynesian navigators. Gunnar Thorkild, the navigator, the tribal chief, must create a new social order from the remains of his shipwrecked crew. West examines Thorkild—his personality, his motives, his emotions—the navigator emerges as a true leader who lends stability and direction to the group. West's following will not be disappointed with his newest psychological drama.—Deirdre R. Murray, formerly with Free Lib. of Philadelphia

White, Patrick. A Fringe of Leaves.
Viking. Jan. 1977. 416p. ISBN 0-670-33073-6. $10.
It is 1836. Ellen Roxburgh, transformed from an untutored Cornish farm girl to a proper middle-class wife by her well-bred husband and mother-in-law, survives further transformations during a voyage to Tasmania. An affair with her husband's brother arouses dark, forbidden impulses. On the return voyage the Roxburghs' ship is wrecked; Mr. Roxburgh is murdered by savages and Ellen is taken captive. Her accommodation to primitive life, including sacramental cannibalism, is clearly part of a pattern: she has spent her life yielding and surviving, as any intelligent 19th-Century woman had to do. Out of a jumble of generic antecedents (Austen, Dickens, and Melville particularly), Nobel prize winner White has fashioned more than an expert and entertaining imitation of the 19th-Century novel. He has used the novel to ask important questions about the human condition.—George J. Soete, Arizona State Univ. Lib., Tempe

Zetterling, Mai. Bird of Passage.
St. Martin's. Dec. 1976. 107p. $7.95. F
An unnamed Scandinavian woman drives aimlessly through Spain, sustained by coffee, cognac, and cigarettes, obsessed by her tragic past and the seamier aspects of her present surroundings. Rejected as a child, she is attracted to a similarly isolated little boy whom she sees in a scruffy village and eventually she returns there after ending several days wandering ound Madrid airport. The woman's rceptions of the world around her are relievedly negative and her immern in the past is self-pitying and lack- in perspective. Moreover, her griefewn story is re-told rather than reeated, and one becomes bored with the unappetizing details that don't equately convey the protagonist's deair. The only live element in the novis the boy; one hopes that he'll be lared the narrator's morbidity.—ances Esmonde de Usabel, State ference & Loan Lib., Madison, Wis.

ience Fiction

ake, David J. Walkers on the Sky. DAW, dist. by NAL. Dec. 1976. 192p. pap. $1.25. F planet where people live on three levs separated by sky skin was colonized illennia ago by refugees from Earth, nd, since then, has been ruled from a stant moon by "gods" who ordain at the most heinous crimes are too uch knowledge and inventiveness. gni Signison of the Middle World, in earch of fortune, finds adventure and anger in the society of his world that ccepts with equanimity the evils of cism, degradation of women, slavry, violence. He breaks into the Netherworld where the way of life is based n the law of love and to which he rings the skills and weapons of war for s defense against attack from the Middle World. The book is good sf with well-developed plot and smooth style rded with 20th-Century slang.—Sister Avila, Acad. of the Holy Angels ib., Minneapolis trugatski, Arkadi & Boris Strugatski. he Final Circle of Paradise. DAW, dist. by NAL. 1976. 176p. pap. $1.25. F his poorly plotted sf novel involves a oviet astronaut on vacation in a very trange city where the people speak in ddles and the social customs are odd arodies of Western society. The plot evelopment is simply puzzle piled upn mystery leaving the frustrated readr confronted with chapter after chapr of apparently unrelated plot lines, irational characters, and a dialogue eaturing the non sequitur. The reason or all this (the scientific evil secretly at ork in the city) is revealed near the nd of the book, but too many readers ill have lost interest by then. The tructure of the novel makes it very ard to read, and the content is not orth the effort. The only interesting eature about the book is its origin: it as translated from the Russian, but his isn't enough to make it worth buyng.—Raymond L. Hough, Dept. of Chemistry, Univ. of Michigan, Ann Arbor

Wollheim, Donald A., ed. The Best rom the Rest of the World: European cience Fiction. Doubleday. 1976. LC 74-27594. ISBN 0-385-04550-6. $7.95. F f this anthology represents the best sf eing produced in Western Europe, hen European sf is sad indeed. Fourteen authors are presented here and, as in most such compilations, the quality of the work is extremely uneven. All 14 stories are translations, which certainly must account for some of the mediocrity; it does not explain stories which appear incomplete or others which are downright dull. Perhaps cultural differences account for my disaffection. The depressing tales, for example, are unrelieved by gallows humor as American sf so often is. Only three of these stories are good enough to recommend. Save your money.—Jerry L. Parsons, Univ. of Illinois Lib. at Urbana-Champaign mystery ... detective ...suspense...

Mirror Image (Doubleday. 1976. LC 75-14824. ISBN 0-385-11072-3. $6.95) by Stephen HARPER is a first novel directly based on an only slightly askew view of Francisco Franco. An aged Spanish dictator sends his double, an old and failing peasant, to a ceremony at the Valle de los Caídos, where the double is shot by an equally aged Republican disguised as a monk. The intrigue, power struggles, and treachery that result end in political chaos. There is perhaps too much detail concerning Spanish politics, and the premise, against an authentic background, teeters on fantasy. However, the sinuous plot, full of action and excitement, is convincing beyond all expectations. The irony at the end is particularly satisfactory.

The plot of The Semonov Impulse (St. Martin's. 1976. LC 76-5378. $7.95) by James MELDRUM is not the freshest, but there are a few new twists which make for a reasonably interesting read. The recognition of a Nazi war criminal playing the violin in Bulgaria leads to an attempted hijack by an Israeli ex-secret agent. This fails miserably when the Russians foil the attempt in Rome. Several Israelis are killed, and the leader finds himself escaping from his own people as well as from the Russians. Flight to England to enlist the help of some of his old friends leads to mayhem and to murder, not to mention pursuit by the British Secret Service. The Israeli kidnaps a very young Russian athlete to serve as a shield, and nastiness is evenly spread among the three nationalities, with the ruthlessness of the British and the Israelis only slightly exceeded by that of the Russians. It will not come as a surprise that all ends well, or sort of.

The Order of Death (S. & S. 1976. ISBN 0-671-22357-7. $6.95) by Hugh FLEETWOOD is a curious and rather offensive thriller, oddly compelling in spite of an incomprehensible beginning. A large Irish New York cop has two obsessions, cleanliness and the downfall of the weak at the hands of the strong. He also has an odd attachment to his partner, a corrupt cop on the CORRECTION: Toby Olson's The Life of Jesus (LJ 10/15) is published by New Directions.

HARPER NOVELS OF SUSPENSE

GIDEON'S DRIVE
J. J. Marric. Commander Gideon of Scotland Yard tackles assorted urban crises—two mysterious cases of food poisoning, hijacked trucks, the "mob," and murder, in this fascinating, and final Gideon adventure. "Brisk, suspenseful, absorbing."—Harold Q. Masur
LC 76-5544
ISBN 0-06-012821-6 $7.95

AN UNSUCCESSFUL MAN
Torben Nielsen. Two cases—an apparent suicide and the rape-murder of young girls—are chillingly intertwined in this haunting police procedural by a distinguished Danish writer. "Solidly satisfying."
—Publishers Weekly
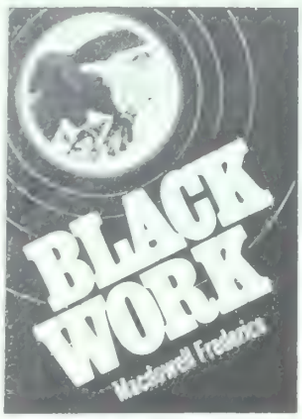
LC 76-5550
ISBN 0-06-013201-9 $6.95

CONSIDER THE VERDICT
Anders Bodelsen. This psychological study of a taxi driver who is accused of a sexual murder is "one of the most powerful and enlightening crime stories I have read in a long time."—Stanley Ellin
LC 75-25077
ISBN 0-06-010408-2 $8.95

THE MOMENT OF TRUTH
K. Arne Blom. A manhunt for a psychopathic killer whose victims are the wives of policemen culminates in a harrowing denouement for the entire police force, in the new thriller by an award-winning novelist. (Coming in January)
LC 76-5538
ISBN 0-06-010409-0 $6.95

Harper & Row
1817
HARPER NOVELS OF SUSPENSE

THE CROWELL CORNER



BLACK WORK
Macdowell Frederics author of The Interns

"A political thriller redolent of evil. ...The scheme. ...is to launch a coup d'état and murder the popular black vice-president. ...There is appeal to the paranoia in all of us, but the excitement is genuine and the fear is real." —Library Journal

ISBN: 0-690-01104-0
LC: 76-940 $6.95

T. Y. CROWELL
666 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10019

"A real winner"*

Hans Hellmut Kirst's

THE NIGHTS OF THE LONG KNIVES

Translated by J. Maxwell Brownjohn

"As in a previous novel, The Night of the Generals, Kirst expertly knits together the suspense of murder investigation with the brutal tone of the Nazi era into a forceful story....Flashing back to the days of the Third Reich, Kirst traces the sordid history of the Wesel group; pieces of the puzzle of the murdered man fall into place."—Booklist. "Detailed and thorough."—Library Journal.*
SBN 698-10760-8 $8.95

COWARD, McCANN & GEOGHEGAN, INC.
200 Madison Avenue, New York 10016

take, with whom he secretly shares an apartment on Central Park West. The big Irishman thinks that he is being pursued by a mysterious Mr. Smith, who turns out to be a gangling lad whom he imprisons and tortures in a classical homosexual sadomasochistic way, up to the equally classical dénouement, the wished-for punishment. Peculiar and special.

In Moths (Holt. 1976. LC 76-4724. ISBN 0-03-016831-7. $6.95) by Rosalind ASHE a mood of beauty and love slowly turns to haunting and horror. In Oxford, a young couple, glamorous and attractive, buy a pretty old house. During their housewarming bash, the ghost of a woman, cold, luminescent, redolent of evil (absolute heaven!), possesses the body of the hostess. The wife behaves more and more peculiarly, sexily yet murderously, and her diary reveals terror and madness. The narrator, another Oxford intellectual, is swamped by his masochistic fascination for the bewitched woman, and he ends up conniving in murder. Stupendously romantic and I loved it.

The Predator (Mason/Charter. 1976. LC 76-18208. ISBN 0-88405-357-1. $8.95) by Denis PITTS is outrageously entertaining nonsense. The Common Market is in shambles and four heads of government have been summoned to an expensive house on Elba by a tycoon. The purpose is to arrange for the takeover of Europe vengefully to destroy terrorists and other left-wingers via the tycoon's specially trained private army. It's all not very probable, but there is a considerable side benefit in a careful description of the unorthodox education of the powerful: birth in a cozy Port Said brothel, drafting into Nasser's Youth Corps where he murders an instructor, lessons in fraud by a jailed banker, escape to the streets of Marseilles, and so on, until he becomes the richest man in Europe. Difficult to resist.

I am getting to like historical romantic mysteries more and more, and The Golden Crucible (Stein & Day. 1976. LC 75-37713. ISBN 0-8128-1903-9. $8.95) by Jean STUBBS is timelessly charming with well-defined goodies and baddies. The story starts in London in 1906. A cold and ruthless San Francisco tycoon tries to bribe a poor but honest retired Scotland inspector to arrange a fatal accident to the tycoon's beautiful but misunderstood wife. When this does not succeed, out of pique the tycoon arranges the kidnapping of a prestidigitator's sister and shanghais her to San Francisco. Happily the magician follows, accompanied by the detective and his daughter, where they encounter all sorts of exciting adventures typical of a criminally corrupt San Francisco of the Barbary Coast days. The culmination is naturally the earthquake and the fire, and highly suitable it is, too, for such a colorful tale.

Firmly by the Tail (Putnam. Dec. 1976. LC 76-12053. ISBN 0-399-11767-9. $8.95) by P. N. GWYNNE is a good-humored and jaunty adventure story involving a British agent for a diamond conglomerate in a new African country recently liberated from the French. Th suspense element—a diamond theft, hijack, and a lively and grisly run i with a bunch of hopped-up rebels—i only a small part of the plot. By far th most interesting part consists of a clos and level scrutiny of a Franco-Africa society, broken down and boundless corrupt in a country gone hopelessly in sane. The characters are splendid: th fat, murderous, and probably mad pres ident; Peace Corps Kathy; the loca CIA agent, a black Rhodes scholar. A lot of highly gaudy crookery and unex pected fun. A knowledge of dis reputable gutter French might be a hel to the reader: Gwynne is an expert at it Murder Out of Commission (Double day. 1976. ISBN 0-385-12058-3. $5.95 by R. B. DOMINIC is a highly exper political thriller taking place in Wash ington and in Ohio. The controversia location of a nuclear power plan causes a confrontation between the pros and the cons at a town meetin and results in a riot and in the murde of an AEC agent. This uncovers in iquity and bribery, as well as stubborn ness and stupidity on the part of all: a great utilities concern, the Atomic En ergy Commission, the media, the envi ronmentalists. The final push is pro vided by the murder of an entirely too powerful and knowledgeable scientist. Low key, not very fast, but incorpo rates a crystalline view of the workings of the government and the law.

MYSTERY

Robert UPTON's Who'd Want To Kill Old George? (Putnam. Dec. 1976. ISBN 0-399-11867-6. $6.95) introduces a new private detective from San Francisco, sexy, drunk, and disorganized. He is employed to spy on a tycoon's beautiful wife and to report on her probable adultery. The tycoon, recently turned from money grubbing to meditating, is murdered. The suspects are a sordid lot: the sexpot wife, the dubious beach boy who may have seduced the wife, a crooked but powerful real estate broker, a fraudulent stress therapist. The lazy chief of police allows the private eye to investigate, which he does when he manages to get out of the wife's bed, and the murder of his star witness, another beautiful woman, prods him into getting the culprit. Adequate though faded.

The Long Shadow (Doubleday. 1976. ISBN 0-385-11590-3. $5.95) by Celia FREMLIN is not much of a thriller, being a jaundiced if honest view of the beastliness of married life, the worse beastliness of widowhood, and the absolute beastliness of the family. A middle-aged woman, recently widowed, tries to make her way back into the world, and is faced with the problem of step-children, in-laws, and lodgers in her house. There seem to be a great many people around her, and one more making no difference, it should come as no surprise that her ghastly husband, a bone-selfish intellectual, may be reappearing with disagreeable and increasingly frightening psychic manifestations. Domestic and quietly spooky, until the very end when the mood is destroyed by a ludicrous cop-out.

Bustillo (Coward. 1976. ISBN 0-598-10762-4. $7.95) by Kenneth ROYCE is a slightly bogus though very busy tale of wickedness among the newly rich in today's Japan. A drunken ex-CIA agent uncovers corruption in a conglomerate owned by his debauched girl friend's family. In self-defense they try to destroy him by using a British hit man, but through luck, good or bad depending on the vantage point, the agent survives. Desperate, they import a mafioso with the result being more shootouts and more hairbreadth escapes that seem to go on without end. Rather boring in spite of the background of unprincipled, gangsterish big money.

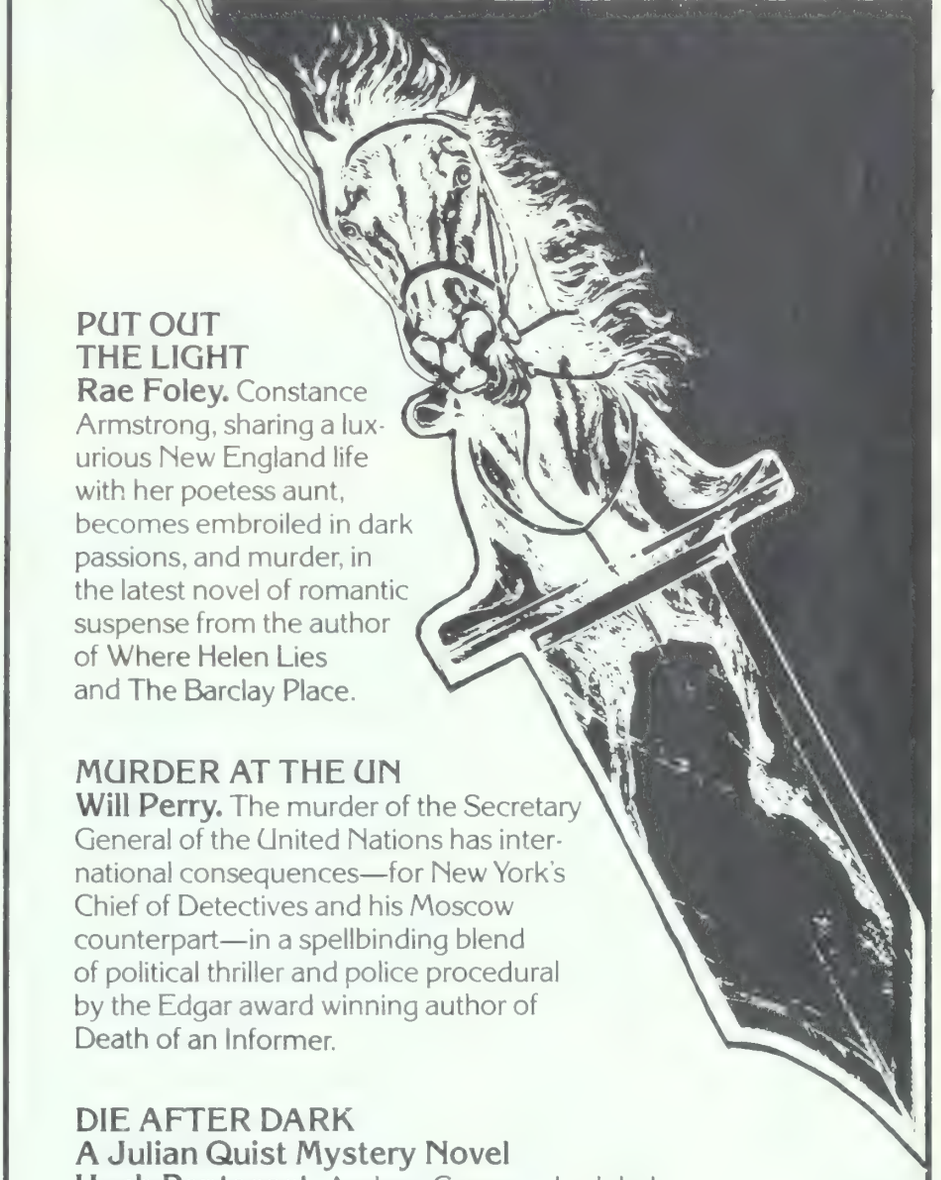
A Game of Titans (Prentice-Hall. 1976. LC 76-27370. ISBN 0-13-346080-0. $8.95) by Gary Alan RUSE involves the crash of an off-course jet on an atoll in the South Pacific called Tongareva. The aircraft is carrying a cargo of one defecting Iron Curtain scientist, something dangerously toxic in the hold, and perhaps one murderous hijacker. The Russians get on the way with a flotilla gathered around a super-battleship, and the Americans come up with their nuclear-powered super-blimp, not much smaller than the Empire State Building, no less. The plot involves a nip-and-tuck race by the two juggernauts across the Pacific, culminating in a pitched battle. A lot of fuss and fury, and the dialogue is largely hot air.

The Hunters (Dial. 1976. ISBN 0-8037-3939-7. $7.95) by Clark HOWARD is a sluggish quasi-macho thriller in which a quartet of unattractive Californians go on a deer hunt, drinking, bragging, and bickering along the way, like a lot of grubby schoolboys. One is impotent unless he wears his wife's knickers, the second has ulcers, the third has a childish fixation on policemen, and the fourth is a cheapskate salesman. During this time, an aging policeman on the narcotics squad gets shot, and his young partner, a crooked pill popper with an addicted girl friend, goes on the trail of the murderer. Neither the cops nor the hunters do particularly well with their quarry, and they do it very slowly. Fortunately another cop is killed, bringing a flat and sordid story to a well-deserved end.

Bill PRONZINI's Games (Putnam. 1976. ISBN 0-399-11588-9. $7.95) is par for the Pronzini course. An upright U.S. Senator takes off to his private island off the coast of Maine for a restful but dirty weekend with his mistress. From the beginning things go awry: a large collection of guns is missing, a squirrel is discovered disemboweled on a makeshift altar, a fawn is mutilated, and all the boats vanish, leaving the pair marooned. The weekend is dirty, all right, but not restful, especially when the girl is beheaded and her head is placed on a pole. In spite of all these events, the action is dragged back by too much pseudo-psychiatric theorizing. The reason for all this to-do is finally revealed at the very end, and is not a bit convincing.

The Man Who Lost Everything (Sterling. 1976. LC 76-17142. ISBN 0-8069-0152-7. $8.95; lib. ed. ISBN 0-8069-0153-5. $7.19) by Paul KUTTNER is a first novel that takes place in New

RED BADGE NOVELS OF SUSPENSE



PUT OUT THE LIGHT
Rae Foley. Constance Armstrong, sharing a luxurious New England life with her poetess aunt, becomes embroiled in dark passions, and murder, in the latest novel of romantic suspense from the author of Where Helen Lies and The Barclay Place.

MURDER AT THE UN
Will Perry. The murder of the Secretary General of the United Nations has international consequences—for New York's Chief of Detectives and his Moscow counterpart—in a spellbinding blend of political thriller and police procedural by the Edgar award winning author of Death of an Informer.

DIE AFTER DARK
A Julian Quist Mystery Novel
Hugh Pentecost. Andrew Crown, scheduled to announce his candidacy for the U.S. Senate, finds himself a prime suspect in the murder case of an attractive Long Island divorcee, in the latest novel featuring the suave young public relations counsel, Julian Quist.

THE CHANGELING CONSPIRACY
Helen McCloy. A terrorist group abducts a young woman, but meeting their demands leads only to more capricious fanaticism and murder, in this chilling new tale by the author of The Sleepwalker and A Change of Heart.

$6.95 each

DODD MEAD

York. A middle-aged man, a publisher, is having a steamy affair with a middle-aged woman, a survivor of Nazi concentration camps, when she announces that he has made her pregnant, and that he must make an honest woman of her by divorcing his wife and marrying her. She is, mind you, 44 years old. Conveniently the wife is kidnapped, or otherwise vanishes, and the man does his own snooping, while vainly trying to raise the ransom. This involves run-ins with a very odd lot of neighbors and strangers, all lovingly described in pitiless detail. This one is three times too long and the stylistic self-indulgence is like elaborate Edwardian cooking, tasting of nothing except complication.

Death Is Academic (McKay. 1976. ISBN 0-679-50638-1. $7.95) by Amanda MACKAY displays all the worst aspects of hermetic academic life. A suburban New York housewife, recently hatched from Columbia, goes to Duke University, where an attractive professor is poisoned by something funny in the fruit cup, which serves him right. The atmosphere is sealed in and the woman is a fearful snob, enthralled by her cocooned position at Duke. A vacuous tale which is not helped by compresses of gracious prose.

Gideon's Drive (Harper. 1976. ISBN 0-06-012821-6. $7.95) is the last, the very last Gideon thriller from the atelier of J. J. MARRIC, alsò known as John Creasey. Aaron Marc STEIN's Lend Me Your Ears (Doubleday. Dec. 1976. LC 76-18368. ISBN 0-385-12245-4. $5.95) is his 30-somethingth mystery. Some original paperbacks: The Big X (Pocket Bks: S. & S., dist. by Pocket Bks-Ace. 1976. pap. $1.50) by Dor TRACY; Confess, Fletch (Avon. 1976. pap. $1.75) by Gregory McDONALD; The Shaggy D.A. (Fawcett: Gold Medal. 1976. ISBN 0-449-13642-6. pap. $1.25) by Vic CRUME; and Always Lock Your Bedroom Door (Fawcett: Gold Metal. 1976. ISBN 0-449-13674-4. pap. $1.50) by Roy WINSOR. The Hard-Boiled Detective (Random. Jan. 1977. ISBN 0-394-72156-X. pap. $2.50) edited by Herbert RUHM is a Vintage Original of stories from Black Mask, 1920-1951.—Henri C. Veit, Brooklyn P.L.

INDEX:

Abel, I. W., 2479
Ackerman, D., 2493
Akin, W. E., 2482
Allen, C. G., 2461
Alley, R., 2509
Armacher, R. C., 2504
Andersen, I., 2510
Andrews, B., 2481
Arneil, S., 2505
Arnett, C., 2494
Ashe, R., 2514
Athanassakis, A. N., 2489

Baly, D., 2498
Barrett, S., 2501
Barsam, R. M., 2508
Bauer, W., 2482
Baumgardner, P., 2497
Beaudouin, J. T., 2468
Bell, G., 2495
Bell, J. B., 2482
Belotti, E. G., 2497
Bennett, J., 2494
Ben-Sasson, H. H., 2482
Biegeleisen, J. I., 2472
Blair, J. M., 2467
Blair, P. H., 2483
Blue, L., 2499
Bolster, J., 2502
Borland, H., 2503
Bosmajian, H., 2504
Boulding, E., 2488
Boyce, J., 2472
Brassaï, 2476
Brecher, J., 2496
Briggs, K., 2468
Brokefield, T., 2506
Brown, R. M., 2510
Burger, S. G., 2503
Burgess, A., 2494

Campbell, R., 2481
Caras, R. A., 2500
Chamberlin, W., 2472
Chan, F. G., 2483
Chancellor, J., 2477
Chase, A., 2467
Chesneaux, J., 2483
Clancy, J., 2489
Clareson, T. D., 2489
Cliff, T., 2477
Cogley, J., 2477
Cooper, H. S., 2499
Coskey, E., 2474
Cottam, R. W., 2496
Coxe, L., 2490
Crandall, C., 2499
Creeth, E., 2490
Crume, V., 2516
Cummings, E. E., 2494

Darden, A., 2506
Davis, J. G., 2510
Dawkins, R., 2500
Debo, A., 2477
Dennys, R., 2470
Dolby, W., 2490
Dominic, R. B., 2514
Doubleday, N. F., 2490
Doyle, M., 2479
Doyle, P. A., 2470
Draznin, Y., 2503
Driskell, D., 2472
Durey, P., 2461

Eagleton, T., 2490
Eddy, P., 2500
Egami, S., 2505
Elman, R., 2506
Encyclopedia of comic book heroes, 2470
Engle, P., 2483
English art today, 1960-76, 2472
Erikson, K. T., 2503
Evans, D. P., 2506

Farber, S., 2484
Farnese hours, 2472
Farrell, M., 2495
Featherstone, J., 2481
Ferlinghetti, L., 2494
Figueroa, J., 2494
Fireman, J., 2500
Fleetwood, H., 2513
Ford, R., 2510
Fraginals, M. M., 2484
Fremlin, C., 2514

Gallwey, W. T., 2506
Gerson, L. D., 2484
Gerson, S. W., 2484
Giles, J., 2506
Ginzberg, E., 2467
Glasser, R. J., 2467
Goldberg, M. H., 2504
Gordon, L., 2484
Gordon, T., 2497
Graves, R., 2494
Green, C., 2473
Greene, G., 2510
Greene, R. F., 2506
Gregory, D., 2500
Griffin, D. R., 2501
Griffin, S., 2494
Gross, E., 2487
Guild, V. P., 2475
Gunn, J., 2511
Gutman, H., 2484
Gwynne, P. N., 2514

Harper, S., 2513
Harris, B., 2510
Hayden, S., 2511
Heirs, B., 2479
Hendrickson, R., 2504
Herbert, E., 2481
Hillel, M., 2484
Hisamatsu, S., 2470
Historic buildings of Massachusetts, 2474
Hodges, D. C., 2485
Hodgson, G., 2467
Hosier, H. H., 2478
House, R. T., 2475
Howard, C., 2515
Howard-Williams, J., 2502

Imfeld, A., 2480
Isherwood, C., 2478
Ismael, C., 2497

Jackson, R., 2485
Jhabvala, R. P., 2511
Johnston, M., 2500
Jones, C. M., 2506
Jones, P., 2508
Journal of the century, 2481
Juliver, P. H., 2496
Justema, W., 2473

Kamoroff, B., 2480
Karp, L. E., 2500
Kenward, M., 2503
Kerman, J., 2495
Kessner, T., 2485
Kimbrough, E., 2478
Kraft, B., 2478
Kraines, O., 2499
Kuttner, P., 2515

Lady Ottoline's album, 2476
Land Tenure Center Library Staff, 2470
Landrum, L. N., 2490
Lasky, W. R., 2478
Lass, A., 2470
Lasswell, M., 2497
Lauf, D. I., 2473
Laury, J. R., 2475
Lee, A., 2499
Levine, H. M., 2470
Levy, D., 2506
Lewis and Clark's America, 2485
Liftshin, L., 2495
Lion, E., 2508
Lipman, J., 2473
Literary monographs, 2490
Ljungquist, B., 2506
Lloyd, C., 2471
Lockwood, C., 2485
London, K. R., 2499
Look, D., 2507
Lowenthal, R., 2496
Lucioli, C. E., 2461

McCaffrey, D. W., 2509
McCracken, J. A., 2478
McCreary, A., 2499
McDonald, G., 2516
Mace, B. W., 2510
Mackay, A., 2516
Malcolm, N., 2493
Maloney, C., 2505
Manners, D., 2505
Marihuana: an annotated bibliography, 2471
Marric, J. J., 2516
Martin, J. S., 2491
Matthews, K., 2480
May, G. G., 2498
Medieval health handbook, 2486
Meldrum, J., 2513
Melton, D., 2481
Méras, P., 2475
Mercatante, A. S., 2504
Meskil, P. S., 2504
Messum, D., 2473
Mewshaw, M., 2511
Meyers, M., 2478
Milani, L., 2488
Minney, R. J., 2509
Moggridge, D. E., 2480
Montale, E., 2491
Montas, M., 2488
More, D., 2502
Morse, J. M., 2489
Myrdal, A., 2468

Naar, J., 2476
Nash, J., 2504
Nash, J. R., 2471
Natural Resources Defense Council, 2505
Needham, J., 2493
Nelson, J. W., 2504
Neubecker, O., 2470
Newman, J. H., 2501
Nickels, N., 2507

Oates, S. B., 2478
O'Keeffe, G., 2474
Olney, R. R., 2488
O'Neal, H., 2476

Palmer, T., 2493
Pate, J., 2491
Patterson, P., 2479
Payne, R., 2488
Pearce, F., 2496
Perlman, J., 2494
Persico, J. E., 2486
Peterson, W. S., 2491
Petrakis, H. M., 2511
Philbin, T., 2488
Phillips, D. A., 2496
Pinto, R. J., 2480
Pitts, D., 2514
Pomeranz, V. E., 2472
Potter, J., 2479
Powell, J., 2505
Pronzini, B., 2515
Putigny, B., 2488

Reich, C., 2479
Reid, W., 2486
Reiger, B., 2489
Ricciuti, E. R., 2502
Riefenstahl, L., 2477
Rippier, J. S., 2492
Roazen, P., 2498
Robbins, A., 2498
Rogers, M., 2474
Roiphe, A., 2512
Roosevelt, J., 2479
Rosenheim, M., 2505
Royce, K., 2514
Rózewicz, T., 2495
Ruhm, H., 2516
Ruse, G. A., 2515

Sake, D. J., 2513
Salaman, R. A., 2471
Salem, J. M., 2472
Samora, J., 2486
Sandved, K. B., 2502
Schapiro, B., 2507
Scott, B., 2507
Scott, J. C., 2480
Selzer, R., 2501
Sergeant, J., 2474
Setright, L. J., 2502
Shapiro, T., 2486
Sherwin, S., 2489
Shiffert, E. M., 2495
Silk, L., 2480
Singer, J., 2498
Singh, A., 2492
Sinha, R., 2481
Sitchin, Z., 2486
Skulsky, H., 2492
Smith, D., 2495
Smith, G., 2512
Snyder, P. V., 2476
Spahn, T. J., 2472
Spingarn, N. D., 2501
Spitzweg, C., 2474
Stafford, K. R., 2495
Stebbins, T. E., 2474
Stein, A. M., 2516
Stephens, M., 2512
Strugatski, A., 2513
Strunk, F. C., 2480
Stubbs, J., 2514
Suh, D., 2496
Swingewood, A., 2492

Taetzsch, L., 2480
Tarr, B., 2507
Taylor, B. J., 2486
Telander, R., 2507
Thomas, L., 2479
Tobias, A., 2479
Torrey, V., 2486
Totterdell, B., 2461
Townsend, D. M., 2489
Towsen, J. H., 2508
Tracy, D., 2516
Traverski, D., 2492
Treasures of Britain, 2472
Tucker, J., 2492
Tucker, N., 2492
Tudor, N., 2471
Tugwell, R. G., 2487
Tute, W., 2487

Upton, R., 2514

Van Sertima, I., 2487
Victor, T., 2508
Vidler, V., 2476
Von Furstenberg, D., 2501
Von Hagen, V. W., 2487

Watts, P., 2471
Weber, J., 2480
Weiss-Stauffacher, H., 2493
West, M., 2512
White, P., 2512
White, R. A., 2498
Whitehill, W. M., 2487
Wilcox, D., 2488
Wiley, J., 2508
Wilkes, K., 2508
Williams, E., 2492
Williams, G. R., 2508
Williams, M., 2492
Winsor, R., 2516
Wise, D., 2468
Wolfe, P., 2493
Wolfers, M., 2497
Wollheim, D. A., 2513
Woy, J. B., 2472
Writers directory, 1976-78, 2472
Wucherer, R., 2481

Zetterling, M., 2512
Zweig, P., 2499

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

All advertisements for the Positions Open and the Positions Wanted classifications will be edited to exclude direct or indirect references to race, creed, color, age, and sex as conditions of employment. Positions open and positions wanted, $1.70 per line, minimum charge, $5.10, all other types of ads, $2.60 per line, minimum charge $7.80. If vouches forms are required for billing, please send them at the time advertisements are submitted for insertion. Copy for ads and requests for cancellations must be received at the LJ office 45 days preceding date of issue. Write: Classified Advertising Department, Library Journal, 1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York, New York 10036.

OUT-OF-PRINT

XCLUSIVE WANT LISTS get prompt at-ntion, wide search, reasonable prices. om International Bookfinders, Inc., Box 1-J, Pacific Palisades, Calif. 90272.

OLONIAL "out-of-print" Book Service, nc. Want Lists invited, 23 E. 4th St., New ork City 10003.

XCLUSIVE WANT LISTS advertised & earched plus 150,000 vol. indexed stock. AB 2917 Atlantic, Atlantic City, NJ 08401.

VE FIND BOOKS. Free International earch. Exclusive want lists invited. Realis-ic prices. Eva Davis Books. 108 Prince Charles, Williamsburg, VA 23185.

OUT OF PRINT books located. Send in title, uthor to: Free Search Service, Dept. LJ, 1 Union Square West, New York, NY 10003.

OP BOOKS in literature; social sciences, hu-nanities. EGLI; Lamont; BCL, etc. Book ande, 8926 National Blvd., Los Angeles, A 90034.

RREGULAR SERIALS are one of our spe-ialties. Foreign books and periodicals, cur-ent and out-of-print. Albert J. Phiebig Inc., Box 352, White Plains, N.Y. 10602.

WOMEN IN THE XX century. Fiction & on-fiction. Catalogue available from Cesi Kellinger, Bookseller, 735 Phila. Ave., Chambersburg 17201.

MAGAZINES—BACK NUMBER

INTERNATIONAL UNIVERSITY Book-sellers, Inc., 101 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10003. We buy: Would like to hear of periodical backfiles of scholarly significance, ndividual titles or entire collections, surplus o your present needs. We sell: We carry one of the most comprehensive inventories of periodicals in all fields and langauges and are a major supplier to academic libraries in all parts of the world. Call or write Mr. Becker.

BUY, TRADE, SELL National Geographic Magzines & related material. Box 30045, Denver, CO 80230.

BACK ISSUE MAGAZINES, general, scholarly, technical. Designed to serve high school and jr. college libraries. Please send want lists to Back Issues West: P.O. Box 6688, Tucson, Arizona 85716.

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC Magazine: (1888-1976) Any issue from 1910. (Fine cond.) Reasonable. Price list furn. Don Smith, 3830 Rankin St., Louisville, KY 40214.

LACKING ISSUES. Subscribers to journals listed in Science Citation Index have a good chance of immediately locating lacking issues for years 1970-1975 with the Replacement Serials Section of M.S.I., the worldwide back-issue house. Please address your queries to Maxwell Scientific International (now a Pergamon Press, Inc. division), Fairview Park, Elmsford, New York 10523.

OVER 2,000,000 backdate magazines. Send want lists. Magazine Center, Room 406, 145 West 29th, New York, NY 10001.

MICROFORMS

MICROFORMS. Good second-hand microfilm of periodicals of established micropublishers bought and sold. Write or call Microforms International Marketing Company, Fairview Park, Elmsford, New York 10523. (914) 592-9141.

SERVICES—PERSONNEL

THERESA M. BURKE Employment Agency, 8 West 40th St., N.Y., N.Y. 10018. Specializing in the recruitment of library and information personnel for special, academic, and public libraries.

SERVICES

U.S. GOVT. PUBS: TRY us as your first source. Sentry Service right on Capitol Hill. Fastest to get in hand, fastest delivery. Standing orders, service for your full requirements. Write Air-There, Box 2605, Wash., DC 20013, Tel: (202) 544-5566.

FOR SALE

CHEMICAL ABSTRACTS: v. 1-84 (1907-February 9, 1976). First four decennial indexes. Volumes bound through 1971. Condition excellent. All offers considered. Deadline December 31, 1976. Write: Serials Department, North Dakota State University Library, Fargo, North Dakota 58102.

POSITIONS OPEN—NORTHEAST

COORDINATOR OF LRC MEDIA UTILIZATION SERVICES

Responsible for planning and directing all public services of the library facility of a comprehensive Learning Resources Center with specific emphasis on promotion of instructional media. To work with teaching faculty, media producers and librarians in use of print and non-print media in instructional programs. Master degrees in Library Science and Educational Media required. Minimum 5 years' experience in a library or media center, two of which should have been in a supervisory capacity. Faculty rank and salary commensurate with educational background and experience. Liberal fringe benefits.

Send résumé to: Mrs. Yvonne Lowen, Personnel Department

ESSEX COUNTY COLLEGE
303 University Ave.
Newark, New Jersey 07102
Affirmative Action and Equal Opportunity Employer

POSITIONS OPEN—NORTHEAST

ASSISTANT CATALOGER. Salary range $9,500-$10,500 plus excellent fringe benefits. Experience preferred. Apply: Clyde L. Haselden, Librarian: Lafayette College, Easton, PA 18042. An equal opportunity employer.

LIBRARIAN, SENIOR DOCUMENTS Reference. Harvard University Library. Duties include general reference with foreign and domestic documents, including assisting with research and giving bibliographic instructions; directing day-to-day operations of a section of two other librarians and two supporting staff; developing and articulating a collection development policy for documents including selection and retention responsibilities; and communicating to faculty, students, and library staff information about government documents. Qualifications: M.L.S., administrative experience, at least three years' of full-time work with documents, knowledge of foreign languages. Salary: $15-$18,000. Rank: Librarian II or III, depending on qualifications. Available: 1 July 1977. Call or write: Philip E. Leinbach, Assistant University Librarian for Personnel, Harvard University Library, Cambridge, MA 02138. (617) 495-3721. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

LIBRARIAN, SPECIALIST in Book Selection for French and Italian. Harvard University Library. Chief responsibility is selection and collection building, both new and retrospective, in the humanities and social sciences in French and Italian language materials. Also supervision of searching and preparation of orders and exchange records; working with faculty and students on bibliographical problems and research needs; and coordination with other libraries in the Harvard University Library. Qualifications: Graduate degree in either French or Italian with fluency in the other language; library experience and knowledge of book trade and publishing highly desirable; MLS desirable but not essential. Available: Immediately. Rank: Librarian I or II, depending on qualifications. Salary: $12,000-$16,000. Call or write: Philip E. Leinbach, Assistant University Librarian for Personnel, Harvard University Library, Cambridge, MA 02138. (617) 495-3721. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

BRANCH LIBRARIAN: new building opening Spring 1977. If you have three years public service experience, an M.L.S., the energy to start a program of service from scratch, and want to live in Maine and earn $11,700, send your résumé to: Personnel Director, City Hall, 25 Cottage Road, South Portland, Maine 04106.

POSITIONS OPEN—SOUTHEAST

CATALOG LIBRARIAN: Position available Jan. 15. M.L.S. degree from accredited school and at least 2 ys. LC cataloging experience required. Working knowledge of German or Spanish desirable. OCLC or similar exp. desirable as library plans future SOLINET participation. Salary negotiable, min. $10,500 for 12 mo. Liberal benefits, 20 days vacation. Closing date for receipt of applications, Dec. 20. An affirmative action/equal opportunity employer. Send résumé to: Librarian, Columbus College, Columbus, Georgia 31907.

CONSULTANT. Alabama Public Library Service. Position open immediately. In this state library, the jobs have multi-responsibilities which will make you a more complete librarian. Responsibilities include working with public libraries; consulting with institution libraries in developing a program for service; and have responsibility of federal program officer. M.L.S. from ALA accredited library school; minimum of five years' experience preferably with public libraries or state library; usual benefits. Salary $13,286-$16,874. Apply to: Anthony W. Miele, Director, Alabama Public Library Service, 6030 Monticello Drive, Montgomery, AL. Mailing address: State of Alabama, Montgomery, AL 36130. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

UNIVERSITY LIBRARIAN. Responsible for administration of modern, attractive library of state-supported undergraduate university of 1200 FTE students. Collection of 95,000 volumes; budget of $270,000; staff of 3 professionals, 9 paraprofessionals, 30 assistants. Member SOLINET. Requirements: M.L.S. from ALA accredited school, with Master's degree in second subject desirable; at least 5 years full-time professional experience in college libraries; ability to plan, supervise, and coordinate expansion and staff development; talent for interpreting to others the needs and functions of the library. Faculty status, rank open; salary competitive. Starting date: September, 1977. UNC-Asheville is an equal opportunity, affirmative action (m/f) employer. Send inquiries and résumés to: Dr Richard Reed, Chairperson, Librarian Selection Committee, The University of North Carolina at Asheville, Asheville, NC 28804.

TENNESSEE: Head of Catalog Branch of Technical Services, has responsibility for supervising cataloging and classification of all materials (including non-book) for central library and 19 branches. Requirements: ALA accredited fifth year degree and at least six years' experience, including three years' administering or supervising the cataloging operation of a large library or system. Must be familiar with LC Subject Headings and Dewey Classifications, and must be interested in conversion to on-line cataloging procedures and other cooperative cataloging projects. Salary range $12,012-$16,104 with liberal fringe benefits. Apply by November 30, 1976 to: Mildred S. O'Connor, Personnel Officer, Memphis and Shelby County Public Library and Information Center, 1850 Peabody, Memphis, Tennessee 38104. An equal opportunity employer.

THE GRADUATE SCHOOL of Library Service of the University of Alabama will have a teaching position open effective August 16, 1977. Candidates should have a Doctorate, completed or nearing completion, with a specialization in the utilization, production, and administration of non-print media. Desirable strengths would include teaching experience on the elementary or secondary level, familiarity with inter-relating media with the school curriculum, and an aptitude in graphics and photography. Appointment would ordinarily be at the assistant professor level with a nine-month salary of $15,000 or more, depending upon experience. The GSLS is accredited by ALA and has a full-time faculty of eleven. Quarters are new and well equipped. Send Résumé and references to: James D. Ramer, Dean, P. O. Box 6242, University, AL 35486. The University of Alabama is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

HEAD LIBRARIAN. To assume responsibility for service to population of 52,586. Must have M.A. in library science with at least 5 years' experience. Salary: $14,000. Send applications including vita and letters of reference to: Mrs. Edgar Stark, Chairperson, Monroe County Library Board, 700 Fleming Street, Key West, FL 33040.

ADMINISTRATIVE ASSISTANT, Librarian II. Work with director in setting up workshops, conferences, board meetings; drafts documents, position statements, etc. for director's consideration in areas of specific professional concern; assists director in handling correspondence of a professional nature; handles routine personnel problems; handles building supervision and performs other duties assigned. Accredited M.L.S. required. Salary $11,076-$13,286; usual benefits. Position open immediately. Apply to: Anthony W. Miele, Director, Alabama Public Library Service, 6030 Monticello Drive, Montgomery, AL. Mailing address: State of Alabama, Montgomery, AL. 36130. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

DIRECTOR for county library with budget of $100,000 and staff of 9, serving population of 33,000+. Located in beautiful S.C. Low Country, close to beaches. M.L.S. degree from ALA accredited school and 1 or 2 years of library experience. Salary range $10,000-$10,900. 20 days vacation; health insurance. Contact: Mr. Allen D. Read, Chairperson of the board, Georgetown County Library, Drawer D, Georgetown, SC 29440.

POSITIONS OPEN—MIDWEST

LIBRARY SCIENCE-Professor: Senior level position beginning Aug. 1977 for book selection, bibl. of the humanities, and one of the following: research methods, tech. proc., cataloging. Qualifications: M.L.S. from ALA accredited school, doctorate in Librarianship preferred; Ph.D. in humanities will be considered; tchg. experience at ALA accredited school; pub. lib. experience in selection and reference preferred; college, univ. or spec. humanities lib. experience acceptable; appropriate publication record. Salary dependent upon qualifications. Affirmative action, equal opportunity employer. Closing date for applications, Feb. 15, 1977. Send letter of application and résumé to: Lewis F. Stieg, Chairperson, Dept. of Lib. Sci., Northern Ill. Univ., DeKalb, IL 60115.

NORTHWESTERN UNIVERSITY Library. Assistant Circulation Services Librarian. Participates in the planning, services and supervisory activities of a centralized circulation department which consists of 2.5 FTE librarians, 8.5 FTE support staff and a large staff of student assistants. Directly responsible for circulation and library privileges desks and entrance and exit control. M.L.S. from an accredited library school required and minimum two years' supervisory experience required. Academic library experience highly desirable. Hiring Range: $10,200-$11,200. Applications accepted through December 15, 1976. Apply: Robert L. Ireland, Personnel Officer, Northwestern University Library, Evanston, IL 60201. An equal opportunity employer.

READERS' SERVICES Librarian. Administrative and educational responsibilities. M.L.S. and graduate degree in subject field required. Salary range: $10,000-$11,500. Position open January 1, 1977. Contact: Douglas L. Wilson, Knox College Library, Box 500X, Galesburg, IL 61401. Knox College is an affirmative action/equal opportunity employer.

EAD, UNDERGRADUATE Libraries. ank: Faculty rank is commensurate with ualifications. Expected to meet university quirements for research, service and publi- ation. Duties: Responsible for provision nd coordination of dynamic program of li- rary services for undergraduate libraries onsisting of undergraduate library (East ampus), West Campus Learning Re- ources Center and five regional campuses. Works with faculty and staff in development library collections to support educational rograms. Cooperates in development of bliographic instruction program. Works osely with directors of regional campuses. eports to assistant director of libraries, iblic services. Qualifications: M.L.S. from rogram accredited by ALA required; mini- um of three years' appropriate experience quired. Demonstrated administrative and rganizational ability to plan and coordinate ervices in a large, dispersed library system. alary: $15,620-$18,360, dependent upon ualifications. Available January 1, 1977. end résumé to: Rita Hirschman, Personnel ibrarian, The Ohio State University Librar- s, 1858 Neil Avenue Mall, Columbus, hio 43210. An affirmative action and equal pportunity employer.

IBRARY DIRECTOR: The University of Visconsin-Madison seeks an experienced dministrator for the Steenbock Memorial ibrary, College of Agricultural and Life ciences. The director supervises a staff of pproximately 13 people, and manages a col- ection of 162,000 volumes. The directorship arries a professorial rank, a minimum sala- y of $25,000 and is a tenured 12-month ap- ointment. Minimum requirements include: 1) M.L.S. degree from an accredited library chool and (2) proven abilities in academic brary administration. Inquiries, nomi- ations or applications (résumés plus ames, addresses and telephone numbers of hree references) should be directed to: Pro- essor O. Fennema, Steenbock Memorial Li- rary, University of Wisconsin-Madison, Madison, Wisconsin 53706, (608) 263-2003. Applications will be accepted until 15 Janu- ry 1977 or until the position is filled. An qual opportunity/affirmative action employ- r.

IBRARY SCIENCE Faculty. Teaching po- ition for undergraduate and graduate ourses in program with school library me- lia emphasis. 1977-78 academic year ap- ointment. Requirements include an ALA ccredited Master's degree and school li- rary media experience. Prefer Doctorate or Post Master's study in library science or re- ated area, and university teaching experi- nce. Deadline is February 1, 1977. Send ap- lication and credentials to: Dr. Roger J. Goenner, Department of Library Science, Central Michigan University, Mt. Pleasant, MI 48859. CMU is a nondiscriminatory edu- ational institution and employer.

IBRARY DIRECTOR. Rewarding and challenging position to head library in indus- rialized southeastern Wisconsin commu- nity of 85,000. Library system includes four branches, employs 71, and has an operating budget of $1 million. Applicants must have M.L.S. degree or equivalent and seven years of professional library experience in- cluding five years in administration. Starting salary $20,370 plus impressive fully paid em- ployee benefit program. Send résumé by De- cember 12, 1976 to: City Personnel Office, Municipal Building, 625 - 52nd Street, Ke- nosha, WI 53140. An affirmative action em- ployer.

DIRECTOR for a northern Wisconsin public library, which is the resource center for the Northwest Wisconsin Library System. Requirements: M.L.S. from ALA accredited university; 5 years' experience with 3 in administrative position. Starting salary: $14,000. Fringe benefits. Send résumé and names of 3 references by January 1, 1977 to: Mrs. June West, 1122 N. 21st St., Superior, WI 54880. An equal opportunity employer.

CHILDREN'S LIBRARIAN. Administer and provide print and audiovisual services to pre-school through sixth grade children. Must enjoy children. M.A. in library science or B.A. in elementary education with minor in library science. 40 hour week. Salary $9,000+. Open January 1977, but will hold for winter term graduate. Please mail letter of application and résumé to: Dennis Davis, Director, Ottumwa Public Library, 129 North Court Street, Ottumwa, Iowa 52501.

SENIOR STAFF SPECIALIST, Technical Processing. Responsible for managing the technical processing unit of the library which acquires and organizes materials through mechanical or manual means, so that service can be provided to membership, staff, allied hospital associations, related health care organizations, and educational institutions. M.L.S. from an ALA accredited library school; demonstrated supervisory skills; three to five years of professional experience in the technical processing section of a business or health sciences library; familiarity with health care administration literature. Salary from upper teens to lower twenties, with an attractive fringe benefit program. Send résumé with salary requirement and availability to: American Hospital Association, Manager of Recruitment, 840 North Lake Shore Drive, Chicago, Illinois 60611. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

POSITIONS OPEN—SOUTHWEST

MEDICAL CENTER Librarian. The Health Sciences Center Library serves students and professionals in medicine, nursing, pharmacy, allied health and associated sciences. This is a young library but one with a well-established and balanced collection. There are currently 85,783 catalogued volumes held and 2,555 serial titles being received. The staff consists of 13 professional librarians, 15 sub-professional and clerical positions, and 25 FTE assistants. The librarian is responsible for administering all aspects of the library and reports to the vice president for health sciences. It is expected that applicants will have an M.L.S. from an ALA accredited program and extensive experience in medical or bioscience libraries. Interest and experience in non-profit media is desirable. Background should include at least 5 years of professional library experience with documented administrative responsibilities. Salary is competitive. Usual fringe benefits are provided plus a choice between state and TIAA retirement. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer under state and federal law and regulations, including Title IX, 1972, Education Amendment. Application form can be obtained by writing to: David Lucas, Ph.D., Chairperson of Search Committee, Department of Microbiology, Arizona Health Sciences Center, University of Arizona, Tucson, AZ 85724.

LIBRARIAN to head the Fayetteville Public Library, a branch of the Ozarks Regional System. A Bachelor's degree with library science and proven ability in public library service are required. An accredited M.L.S. degree is desirable. The book stock in Fayetteville is 63,000, staff 12, circulation 250,000. The minimum starting salary is $9,500. Send résumé to: Search Committee, Ozarks Regional Library, 217 East Dickson Street, Fayetteville, AR 72701.

HEAD OF REFERENCE. $1,250+/month, depending on experience. The incumbent of this position has overall responsibility for providing reference and information services; assists in defining goals, making plans, and setting policies for the reference department including organizing and allocating staff and physical resources; and supervises, coordinates, delegates, and evaluates the work of 12 librarians, 9 full time staff, and several part-time staff and student assistants. Performs other duties as assigned. Fifth year degree from an accredited library school; second Master's degree desirable; educational background in the social sciences desirable; substantial experience (5+ years) in public service in a large university library; demonstrably outstanding supervisory and administrative ability; demonstrated capability of working well with others; proficiency in oral and written communication is required. The position carries faculty rank. Expected to meet research and publication requirements of the university. Send résumé to: Robert V. Haynes, Interim Director of Libraries, University of Houston, 4800 Calhoun Road, Houston, Texas 77004. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

ORAL ROBERTS UNIVERSITY
O.W. COBURN SCHOOL OF LAW LIBRARY

Challenging opportunity to assist in developing a new school of law library in a dynamic Christian environment.

ORU has an opening for Law Library Director

Opening class September 1979. Acquiring 110,000-volume collection. Law degree and graduate library degree preferred.

Salary commensurate with professional experience. ORU is an equal opportunity employer and welcomes applications from persons of any race, color, and national or ethnic origin.

Send résumé indicating experience, professional philosophy, salary history to: Dr. William W. Jernigan, Vice-President for Learning Resources and Instruction, Oral Roberts University, 7777 South Lewis, Tulsa, OK 74102.

ORAL ROBERTS UNIVERSITY
O.W. Coburn School of Law Library

Oral Roberts University has immediate openings for top-quality Christian librarians in these areas of the O.W. Coburn School of Law Library:

- Cataloger—graduate library degree, legal experience, OCLC use preferred
- Acquisitions Librarian—graduate library degree and legal experience preferred

Salary competitive and commensurate with professional experience. ORU is an equal opportunity employer and welcomes applications from persons of any race, color, and national or ethnic origin.

Send résumé indicating experience, professional philosophy, salary history to: Dr. William W. Jernigan, Vice-President for Learning Resources and Instruction, Oral Roberts University, 7777 South Lewis, Tulsa, OK 74102

POSITIONS OPEN—SOUTHWEST

OKLAHOMA. Two replacement faculty positions for August, 1977. Teaching specialties needed: special libraries, government publications, literature of the sciences, basic and advanced reference, subject bibliography. Requires M.L.S. from an accredited library school, Ph.D. in library science, or subject area, library and teaching experience, and record of research and publication. Appointment at rank of Assistant Professor: minimum salary $15,500. Both salary and rank are negotiable. Send application and credentials by Jan. 15, 1976 to: Search Committee, c/o Dr. James Healey, Director, School of Library Science, University of Oklahoma, Norman OK 73019. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

LEGISLATIVE SERVICES Librarian. Devise an organizational scheme for the extensive research holdings of the Legislative Council, including the working files; maintain the council collection, including responsibility for acquisitions, circulation, cataloging and reference; analyze incoming materials for purpose of assigning subject headings and routing; consult regularly with division heads on library topics; and assume other library-oriented responsibilities assigned by the director or assistant director of the Legislative Council. Minimum qualifications: M.L.S. and two years' professional library experience. Prefer, but do not require, candidates who have an academic background in public administration and/or political science. This position will require a person who has a great deal of initiative and who can assume the total responsibility for organizing and maintaining a large and very complex collection of governmental documents, committee files, research reports, legislation, journals, pamphlets, etc., in a coherent manner for use by the staff of the Research, Fiscal and Legal divisions of the Legislative Council. Salary: $11,760. Oklahoma Legislative Council, 305 State Capitol, Oklahoma City, OK 73105.

POSITIONS OPEN—NORTHWEST

THE MSU LIBRARY has an opening beginning January 1, 1977 for a Creative Arts Librarian. Duties are to direct the branch library in the creative arts Complex, which has collections in art and architecture. Professional library degree from an ALA accredited library school required. Prefer Bachelor's or Master's Degree with major in art or architecture. Experience in reference service and staff supervision desirable. Conditions of employment include 40-hour week, 21 working days annual vacation, Academic rank, normal benefits. Beginning salary $9,500-up, depending on background and experience. Send applications and résumés to: Miss Alice McClain, Director of Libraries, Montana State University, Bozeman, MT 59715. An equal oppty employer.

POSITIONS OPEN—WEST

SCIENCE CATALOGER. Requires accredited M.L.S. and academic degree in biological sciences or equivalent academic qualifications and at least one of the following additional qualifications (list in order of preference): 1. Advanced study in biological or physical science. 2. Facility with European languages (prefer German). 3. Relevant experience. 4. Advanced cataloging. 5. Academic honors. $12,312-$15,804. Send résumé by January 15, 1977 to: Keith C. Blean, Assistant University Librarian, University of California, Santa Barbara, CA 93101. An equal oppty/affirmative action employer.

UNIVERSITY LIBRARIAN, University of California, Santa Barbara campus. Reports to: Vice-Chancellor, Academic Affairs. Responsibilities: Administers campus library system including, but not limited to implementation of policy, preparation and administration of annual budget, supervision of library personnel, promotion of personnel development, coordination of planning for most effective use of material and human resources, cooperation with local and statewide academic communities. Qualifications: Graduate degree in library science or equivalent, demonstrated competence in successfully administering a research oriented complex library system, academic training and background necessary to command the respect and cooperation of the library staff and academic community. Experience with automation, collection development, information services and bibliographical control. The University of California at Santa Barbara is one of the nine campuses of the University of California, has an enrollment of 14,000 students, a faculty of more than 800, and offers degrees in a wide range of academic disciplines, including doctoral programs in 28 fields. The library has a strong, balanced collection of over 1,100,000 volumes and employs a staff of approximately 250 of which 56 are professional librarians. A four-story addition to the library is under construction and is scheduled for completion in the fall of 1977. The deadline for receipt of applications and nominations is January 31, 1977. Salary range competitive, dependent upon experience and qualifications. Applications and nominations should be sent to: Chairperson, Search Committee, c/o Personnel Office, UCSB, Santa Barbara, CA 93106. UCSB is an equal opportunity affirmative action employer.

REFERENCE LIBRARIAN/Literature Searcher. To perform manual and computerized scientific, technical, and business literature searching for an information center which provides library services for Colorado companies. Req. M.L.S. & 2 years' appropriate literature searching experience. Faculty status and benefits. Prefer scientific background. Salary $10,500-13,000 depending upon qualifications and experience. Send complete résumé by January 15, 1977 with references and letter detailing what you can bring to position to: Saundra K. Smith, Colorado Technical Reference Center, University of Colorado Libraries, Boulder, CO 80302. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

BLACK STUDIES Librarian. Position number BSL-1. In charge of black studies collection; performs reference desk service and liaison with black student organizations, faculty and community at large. Required: M.L.S. and Afro-American history courses or relevant work experience with Afro-Americans and Africans. Potential career appointment to be effective July 1, 1977 at an appropriate grade as assistant or associate librarian (ranges $12,312-$21,708) based upon qualifications. Apply prior to January 2, 1977 to: Eugene Graziano, Library, University of California, Santa Barbara, CA 93106. The University of California is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

ASSISTANT LIBRARY DIRECTOR: Available March 1, 1977. ($1,191-$1,448) City of Upland Public Library is a member of Inland Library System and SIRCULS network. M.L.S. from an accredited library school plus considerable experience in library work with at least 2 years at a supervisory level. Résumés accepted until January 14. Personnel, P.O. Box 460, Upland, CA 91786. An equal opportunity employer.

INDEX TO ADVERTISERS

Basic Information Services 2472
Boardman Co. 2426
R. R. Bowker Co. 2408, 2409-2416, 2464
Brodart 2425
Bulletin du Livre 2460

Chelsea House 2402
Columbia University Press 2495
Congressional Quarterly 2473
Coward, McCann & Geoghegan 2477
2497, 2507, 2510, 2512, 2514
Thomas Y. Crowell Co. 2514

Dodd, Mead & Co. 2475, 2515
Dow Jones-Irwin 2479

Emerson Books 2507

Gale Research Co. 2466
Gaylord Bros. 2422, 2423

G. K. Hall & Co. 2405
Hamlyn/America 2469
Harcourt Brace Jovanovich 2482, 2491
Harper & Row, Publishers 2471, 2513
Highsmith Co. 2426
Houghton Mifflin Co. 2512

Information Design 2421

Johns Hopkins University Press 2503
Josten's Library Services Division 2420
Journal of Family Practice 2420

KNOGO Corp. 2419
Library Bureau 2406

Library Microfilms & Materials Co. 2424
J. B. Lippincott Co. 2434
Little, Brown & Co. 2487

Mason/Charter Publishers 2488
Microfilming Corp. of America 4th Cover

New Republic Book Co. 2505
W. W. Norton & Co. 2401

Office General du Livre 2427

P/H Electronics 2429
Pantheon Books 2489, 2493, 2499, 2502
Pentalic Corp. 2428
Perey Turnstiles 2428
Plenum Publishing Corp. 3rd Cover
Princeton University Press 2483, 2485
Prometheus Books 2505
G. P. Putnam's Sons 2482, 2487, 2497
2498, 2500, 2502, 2510

Quail Street Publishing Co. 2501

St. Martin's Press 2509

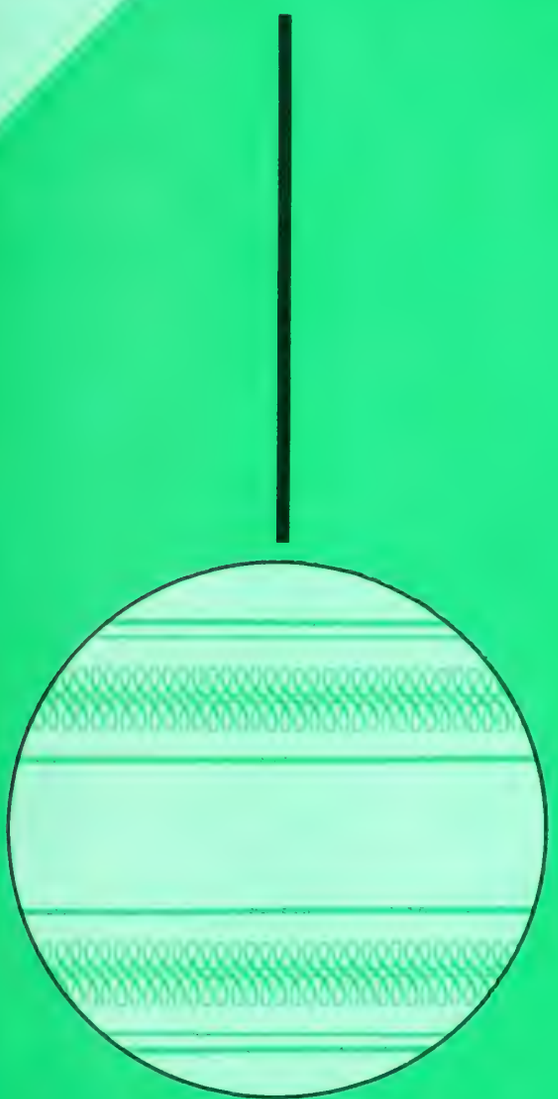
United Nations 2473

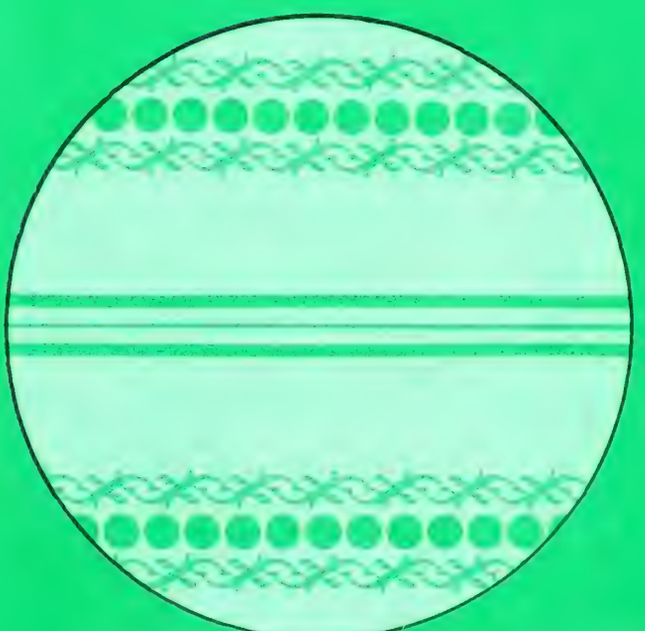
Walker & Co. 2511

DECEMBER 15, 1976/ISSN 0000-0027

LIBRARY JOURNAL

LJ Small Press Roundup '76
Information, Politics, & Money: the ASIS Conference
In the News: Pros and cons of YA service debated; Carter's for libraries; access decried and applauded





Reason's Greetings

Bro-Dart, Inc.
1609 Memorial Ave.
Williamsport, PA 17705

LIBRARY JOURNAL

John N. Berry III
Shirley Havens
Karl Nyren
Janet Fletcher

Book Review: Robert R. Harris
Bibliographic: Bette-Lee Fox
News: Noel Savage
Ellen Mangin
ART EDITOR: Carlos Delgado
Marlene Charnizon
Ellen Kozlowski
Philip Mattera
Anneliese Schwarzer
ASSISTANT EDITORS: Maureen Crowley
Ann Sankar
PRODUCTION ASSISTANTS: Nancy Brown
Ann Yazejian
EDITORIAL ASSISTANTS: Andrea Kowler
Anne Richter
ADV. SALES MANAGER: Richard H. Brown
BUSINESS & PRODUCTION MANAGER: Maureen J. Rose
PUBLISHER: Paul J. Carnese

LIBRARY JOURNAL is published by R. R. Bowker Co., a Xerox company. Robert F. Asleson, President.

Direct editorial and advertising correspondence to 1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York 10036. Telephone: (212) 764-5100. Subscription inquiries and changes of address should be directed to R. R. Bowker Company, Subscription Dept., P.O. Box 67, Whitinsville, Mass. 01588. Publications Offices at 117 Church Street, Whitinsville, Mass. 01488. Issued twice a month, September through June, monthly in July and August. Second class postage paid at Whitinsville, Mass. and additional mailing offices. Copyright © 1976 Xerox Corporation.

LIBRARY JOURNAL is indexed in Library Literature, Library & Information Science Abstracts, and Reader's Guide to Periodical Literature. SUBSCRIPTIONS: USA: 1 year $19.00; 2 years $36.00; 3 years $51.00. Canada and Postal Union of the Americas and Spain, add $2 per year; elsewhere, add $3 per year. Single copy $1.35. Spring, fall, and winter announcement numbers, $3.25 each. POSTMASTER: Please send Form 3579 to R. R. Bowker Company, P.O. Box 67, Whitinsville, Mass. 01588.

LIBRARY JOURNAL reserves the right to make its own independent judgment as to the acceptability of advertising copy and illustrations in advertisements. Advertiser and advertisng agency assume liability for all content (including text, representation and illustrations) of advertisements printed, and also assume responsibility for any claims arising therefrom against the publisher. Offers to sell products, which appear in LIBRARY JOURNAL, are subject to all laws and regulations and are void where so prohibited.

Letters 2522

Calendar 2523

Editorial 2525

News:

YA services debated at OLA . . . library network planning meet slated . . . archival revolution explored . . . Carter's library record suggests nat'l. commitment . . . SALALM addresses the role of the subject specialist . . . AALS plans accreditation study . . . OLA to seek new source of library aid . . . victories at the polls reported by Ohio, W. Virginia, & N.Y. libraries . . . voter registration is a plus in S.C.'s $$ try . . . METRO conference report on library access 2528

People 2535

FEATURES

Best Titles of 1976
LJ's Small Press Roundup
BY BILL KATZ 2537

Information, Politics, & Money
The 39th Annual Conference of ASIS
BY SUSAN K. MARTIN 2546

Skirmish Line 2550

Professional Reading 2553

Checklist 2554

Magazines 2555

THE BOOK REVIEW

Book Reviews 2556

Index to Reviews and Professional Reading 2600

Classified 2605

Index to Advertisers 2608

Today, more than ever, Baker & Taylor is working for your library.

Great discounts, the largest inventories, the highest fill rates, and the most complete range of services have made Baker & Taylor the foremost book distributor to school, public, and academic libraries.

Today, librarians face greater challenges than ever before: coping with budget problems, book selection, staffing decisions, and, most importantly, servicing an increasingly sophisticated clientele.

At Baker & Taylor, we realize all of this. Today, more than ever, we are committed to working for your library.

For example, each of our five regional distribution centers has a Customer Relations Department, managed by trained library specialists.

These managers and their staff are ready to work with you the moment you need them. By mail or phone, they can help you select the most appropriate services for your library, prepare an order, open an account, or set up billing procedures that fit your accounting needs.

More Services, Programs, Flexibility, and Economy.

Baker & Taylor provides the most complete range of services: direct order plans, Approval Programs, Current Awareness Services, standing order plans, cataloging and processing, automated acquisitions systems, paperback packages, and more. Each program can be tailored to your needs . . . to fit your budget.

No matter where you are, our regional distribution centers offer you the most complete service . . . the most personal service.

Jill Bartholomew
Commerce, Georgia

Bill McEwen
Clarksville, Texas

Lolita Studer
Momence, Illinois

Michael Utasi
Somerville, New Jersey

Helen Kennedy
Reno, Nevada

Baker & Taylor

Working for your library. Today, more than ever.

50 Kirby Ave., Somerville, NJ 08876 (201) 722-8000 • Commerce, GA 30529 (404) 335-5000
Gladiola Ave., Momence, IL 60954 (815) 472-2444 • Industrial Park, Clarksville,TX 75426 (214) 427-3811
380 Edison Way, Reno, NV 89502 (702) 786-6700

LETTERS

Library education in Chicago

Robert D. Stueart
Dean, School of Library Science, Simmons College, Boston:

The September 1 editorial (p. 1679) addresses a timely issue relating to ALA's Library Education Division (LED), and I speak only of LED—not COA or AALS. You state "there was very little on the recent ALA Conference program about library education." In terms of quantity this may be true, but a real quality program was held Wednesday afternoon on: "New Sciences, New Technologies, New Media: Their Impact on Library Education." Also a panel addressed some of the issues in a general discussion with Personnel Administrators of Academic Libraries and Deans of Library Schools. It was a large gathering—which at times was heated, but which did open another channel. Finally, there was a business meeting where the future of LED was discussed. One of the real problems which LED has always had is very evident in your statement that "they should be decided only after involvement by all of those they affect, not just members of the 'faculty clubs' of LED . . ." The problem has always been that LED was not intended as a "faculty club" but rather "serves as clearinghouse for exchange of ideas among administrators, practicing librarians and library educators" (from Goals Statement in Handbook). Unfortunately, many people think it is a faculty club—but. . . . How to change that image? How to address the whole issue of ALA's role vis à vis library education? The Board of LED will be presenting a proposal to council for an alternative structure which will allow for input from all concerned with education for librarianship. This proposal will need general membership support.

The basis of the proposal is that interest in library education is not a "divisional" one where educators talk to educators but rather an interest which permeates every unit of the Association—therefore a standing committee, with staff support, would be a more viable and indeed more legitimate alternative. The proposal is still in draft form so I can't give details at this point but will reflect the discussion we have been having over the last couple of years. You will remember that ideas from non-LED members were solicited through an article in AL—and also at the open meeting in Chicago.

Defending ALA scholarships

Michael H. Harris
Chairman, ALA Awards Committee, College of Library Science University of Kentucky, Lexington:

In a letter (LJ, August, p. 1572) Gerald Shields articulated his concern over ALA's lack of commitment to the Minority Scholarship program established in 1972, but never funded. Generally, I subscribe to his criticisms of ALA's failure to fund this program but several parts of his letter struck me as uninformed. . . . First, Shields deals rather harshly with the "languid ALA Awards Committee," suggesting that they have shown no concern for the problem. This is not the case. A reading of the Awards Committee's minutes will show that the matter has been discussed with great frequency. The problem has been that the Awards Committee has been repeatedly directed not to attempt to raise funds without first clearing their proposals through the Executive Director and the Executive Boards of ALA. In the past, the Awards Committee's suggestions for the allocation of money for the Minority Scholarship have met with responses ranging from uninterested to hostile. These responses appear to be based on one or all of the following arguments: 1) Given the tight job market, scholarships are no longer necessary—for blacks or whites. 2) The ALA should not offer scholarships, but rather the library schools should shoulder this responsibility. 3) Minority librarians already have clear advantages in the job market, and there is no need to offer them additional help.

I think the record will show that the Awards Committee has vigorously opposed all three of these arguments. But it is true that they have not been successful in convincing the ALA establishment that the program should be funded. This year, however, the Awards Committee, under the leadership of David Lane, moved to force a resolution of this issue. First, they accepted the short-range, but clearly inadequate, solution of using half of the David A. Clift Scholarship fund to support one minority scholarship for 1976-77. This would at least get the scholarship off dead center. Much more important was their resolution, adopted by Council, that the membership be given the opportunity to contribute directly to the scholarship programs by means of a simple check off system on the membership renewal form.

This approach should resolve, in a participatory fashion, the question of whether or not membership supports these programs. For instance, if approximately half of the membership would contribute $1, by this means, the minority scholarship program could be funded at twice its proposed level. If, on the other hand, membership should choose to ignore this possibility, for whatever reasons, the message will also be clear, and Shields' pessimism would then be justified. I, for one, believe that ALA's treatment of blacks and other minorities represents the most disgraceful chapter in our history, and I am hopeful that the members of the association will give solid support to the Minority Scholarship program as evidence of our growing awareness that we must actively recruit humane and dedicated librarians who are committed to meeting the information needs of all of the people of this country.

". . . quite mad"

Sherrill Cheda, Phyllis Yaffe
Emergency Librarian, Toronto:
Celeste West
Booklegger, San Francisco:

After being publicly pressured to review the radical feminist library press (LJ, August, p. 1570-72), LJ commissioned an exhausting, cold blooded, five-page dissection of Booklegger Magazine (USA) and Emergency Librarian (Canada). The result, by Jane Robbins (LJ, October 1, p. 2010-14) is quite mad. However, both staffs feel obliged to register repudiation of the exercise.

In a full column apologia, Robbins admits, "I am not an expert, nor even a student of movement/underground/radical literature nor feminism." (Emphasis ours.) So much for expertise. Yet Robbins still was not concerned or even conscientious enough to communicate with Emergency Librarian or Booklegger in order to understand our goals, hopes, and struggles. Thus the piece is rife with speculation: "As far as I can tell," "Perhaps she means," "If I am wrong here, I assume the Emergency Librarian staff will report," etc. We are people, not paper. Ask!

But Robbins' distance is not holy objectivity. She castigates Booklegger in matters of personal taste, style, and politics in one of the most schizoid, approach-avoidance reviews ever written. Considered by Robbins to be inferior to Emergency Librarian in every way except "fun," Booklegger is nevertheless given six times more space!

We resent this tactic of pitting the magazines against one another for library workers' attention, the attempt to trivialize us as women competing. The feminist library movement is richly diverse, its implications huge. We need to publish more voices, not centralize. Emergency Librarian and Booklegger complement one another, but are not interchangeable, especially in national focus. Emergency Librarian is committed to Canada's publications and its movements for social change.

Paula Lichtenberg
San Francisco:

Jane Robbins' statements throughout her review and particularly her apologia at the end make me feel that she will consider anyone who disagrees with her evaluation of Booklegger to be a frenzied radical feminist. While I am neither frenzied nor radical, I very strongly disagree with her. To the degree that this was a subjective article—and it does seem to be one of those reviews where we learn more about the reviewer than we do about the item being reviewed—all that can be done is admit that our tastes differ.

Likewise, I cannot accept her subjective disapproval of Booklegger as being too "movement" a publication. Certainly any attempt at change will turn off the more staid, but Booklegger, as valiantly as it struggles to fight the status quo, is hardly so hard-line radical in content and style as not to have wide appeal and value, even among those who may not avidly accept all of its concepts.

The entire excessively detailed examination seemed to repeatedly turn to the negative. Every compliment seemed to be accompanied by some sort of criticism, as if to give the review an air of objectivity. I also found it astonishing that someone who writes as frequently as Ms. Robbins could bombard us with so many trivial items about Booklegger (the staff is listed on the back of the cover, the first page includes the table of contents) and then regret that more space couldn't be devoted to Emergency Librarian because the article was running too long.

One wishes that Ms. Robbins had contacted Celeste West to explain many of the points that were not clear to her, forcing Ms. Robbins to resort several times to guessing, in phrases like "perhaps what she meant . . ." At one point Ms. Robbins hopes that Booklegger's publishers "don't become bored with it and let it die." Let me assure her that Booklegger's publishers are excited and committed to their publication, and if it dies of anything, it will be from inconsistent and contradictory reviews like hers, not from boredom.

Allan J. Dyson
Head, Moffitt Undergraduate Library, University of California, Berkeley:

I'd like to add my voice to the letters you will no doubt receive protesting the self-centered drivel that passes as a review. The fact that you seem not to have bothered to edit such embarrassingly bad writing is very much a putdown of the women who pour their energies into the magazines.

I find the review to be contradictory and confusing, to say the least. Are the two magazines "complementary," or are they "similar in purpose and in outcome"? How can anyone supposedly comparing two items spend 19 paragraphs on one and two on the other? If EL is one-fourth smaller in coverage than Booklegger, and devotes much of its smaller coverage to "materials published by the Canadian movement," how come the conclusion that EL is the better buy for U.S. librarians? Because its typeface and colored paper are prettier? Aw, come on.

I want to assure those readers who were thoroughly confounded by your article that Booklegger is extremely valuable, that its bibliographies form a substantial portion of our pamphlet file (and are heavily used by our patrons), and that the magazine is priority reading by our professional staff and should be read by any librarian serving the public (especially young adults and college-level students). It's the best $8 you can spend on professional literature.

Book prices in England

John D. McCallum
The Library, Wilfrid Laurier University, Waterloo, Ontario:

An information update on your item "Book Prices in England" (LJ, July, p. 1474): The Times Higher Education Supplement (July 23, 1976, p. 4) reported the Library Management Research Unit's figures for 1975 academic books, showing a 21 percent rise on average, from £5.58½ in 1974 to £ 5.56½. Luckily for us, if not for British librarians, we won't be feeling the full effects of this increase due to the pound sterling's decline. It is also interesting to note, according to THES, the most significant increase occurred in the category of books on librarianship, up 90 percent from the previous year.

CALENDAR

1977

JAN. 28-30—ASSN. OF AMERICAN LIB. SCHOOLS, Washington, D.C. Theme: "The New Information Professional." Keynote: Ronald G. Havelock, Center for Research in the Utilization of Knowledge, Inst. for Social Research, U. of Mich. Contact: Janet Phillips; (813) 238-0254.

JAN. 28-FEB. 7 —ART LIBS. SOC. OF NORTH AMERICA. Fifth Annual Conference, Statler Hilton Hotel, Los Angeles. Contact: Judith A. Hoffberg, P.O. Box 3692, Glendale, Calif. 91201.

JAN. 30-FEB. 5 —AMERICAN LA, Midwinter Meeting, Washington, D.C.

MAR. 24-26 —ILLINOIS ASSN. OF SCHOOL LIBRARIANS, Pick-Congress Hotel, Chicago. Theme: "Carnival of Knowledge." Contact: Ms. Jane Block, Belevidere Community Unit, District #100, Belevidere, Ill. 61008.

MAR. 27-28 —INSTITUTE ON QUANTITATIVE MEASUREMENT and Dynamic Library Service, Unit II, Critical Evaluation of Quantitative Methods for Library Management. School of Lib. Science, Simmons College, Boston. Contact: Coord. of Continuing Ed., School of Library Science, Simmons College, 300 The Fenway, Boston, Mass. 02115. (617) 739-2222.

APR. 6-8 —ALABAMA LA, Montgomery, Governor's House Motel. Contact: Patricia Moore, Exhibits Chairperson, Alabama LA, P.O. Box 9266, Mountain Brook, Ala. 35213.

APR. 12-16—TEXAS LA/NEW MEXICO LA, Joint Conference, El Paso Civic Center. Theme: "In Search of Learning." Contact: Jerre Hetherington, Texas LA, P.O. Box 505, Houston, Tex. 77001.

APR. 17-23 —NATIONAL LIBRARY WEEK.

APR. 18-21 —INFO. INDUSTRY ASSN., Information Industry Conference & Exposition, Washington, D.C., Shoreham Americana Hotel. Theme: "The Information Manager . . ." Contact: Paul G. Zurkowski, IIA/Washington, 4720 Montgomery Lane, Bethesda, Md. 20014; (301) 654-4150.

APR. 20-23—NEW JERSEY LA, Atlantic City, Howard Johnson's Regency Motor Hotel. Contact: Anne King, Exhibits Chairperson, 3-25 Dorothy St., Fair Lawn, N.J.

APR. 28-30 —WASHINGTON LA, Vancouver, Washington. Contact: Janet Blumberg, Program Chair, Washington State Library, Olympia, Wash. 98504.

MAY 5-7 —WYOMING LA, Jackson.

To inspire and enchant grown-ups and children alike:

ANDREW GREELEY'S

NORA MAEVE & SEBI

a fanciful tale of a remarkable young girl and a dog.

Pictures by DIANE DAWSON

$5.95/$3.95 paper

"...combines sober realism with considered optimism for humankind." Margaret Mead $9.95

TOWARD A HUMAN WORLD ORDER: Beyond the National Security Straitjacket

BY GERALD AND PATRICIA MISCHE

"...undoubtedly one of the important books in the field of international relations to appear over the past several years... a tour de force." Dr. Robert Manley Editor, International and Comparative Public Policy

"Those with courage enough to explore the meanings of the Holocaust should begin or end their melancholy journey with this noble book." Kurt Vonnegut

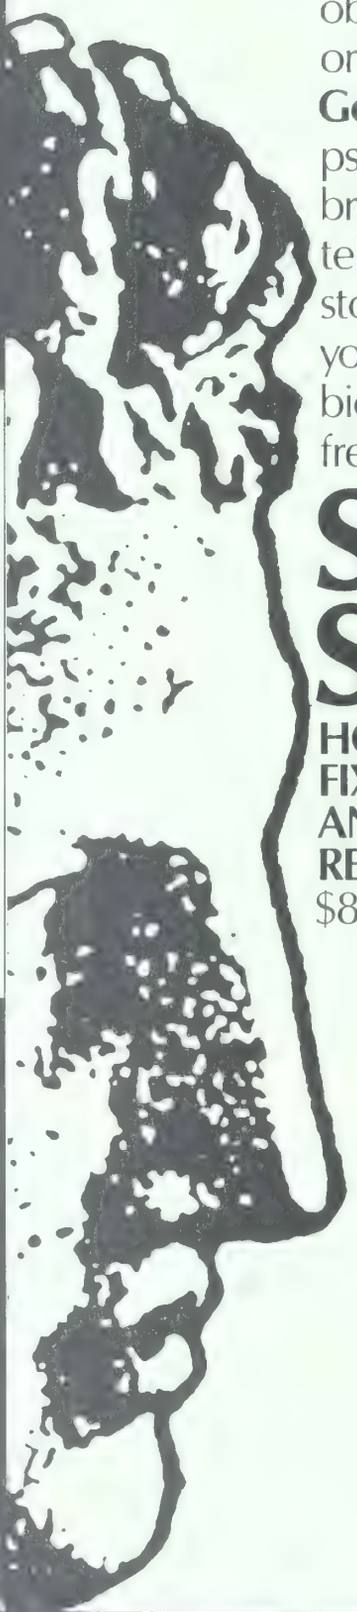
"A moving volume which gives us a resonant portrait of Wiesel as man, writer and visionary prophet..." Publisher's Weekly

HARRY JAMES CARGAS IN CONVERSATION WITH

ELIE WIESEL

$6.95

A new way to get your head together...



Human beings are not objects to be built or improved upon. Gerald May, a practicing psychiatrist and brother of Rollo May, tells you why you should stop trying to "fix" yourself. Cast aside TM, biofeedback and EST—free yourself to go...

SIMPLY SANE

HOW TO STOP FIXING YOURSELF AND START REALLY LIVING

$8.95

PAULIST PRESS 545 Island Road Ramsey, New Jersey 07445

EDITORIAL

LJ's old year awards—1976

We are happy to return to LJ's recent tradition (skipped in 1975) of devoting our December 15th editorial to Annual Awards to celebrate the progress, regress, input, output, and throughput, of life in library land in 1976. We'll leave it to our readers to separate the serious from the snide, the real praise from the affectionate jabs. Letters nominating others for special recognition for their 1976 performances are most welcome.

THREE CHEERS AND PROSPERITY to the City Council of San Jose, California for reaffirming its strong stand against censorship in defense of a Cheech and Chong record; to the Oklahoma County Library Board for sticking to its guns on access for children despite threats against the library's director and budget from local politicians; and to the Pasadena, Texas, Mayor and Council for refusing to buckle under to censorship pressure, and for stating that: ". . . the library's function is to provide books, not censor . . ."

THE CREATIVE SERIAL RECORDS AWARD to the National Serials Data Program at LC for interpreting LJ's logo as a title change and issuing a new ISSN and title in its records without any communication with the publisher; then, when the offending logo was dropped, issuing a third title change and a third ISSN.

NEW YEAR TOASTS (using appropriate beverages) to the following: Trueheart C. Lindley, the library clerk who brought an equal opportunity action in Montgomery County, Maryland to get parity for library clerks with the clerks in state liquor stores; to the Lake County, Indiana, Public Library for packing some 200 patrons into its program on beer can collecting; and to the West Virginia Library Commission, Governor Arch Moore, and State Librarian Fred Glazer for trying to get the state legislature to put 50 percent of its liquor tax profits into public library support.

AN "ALL DELIBERATE SPEED" CITATION to the Oakland City Council, California, for appointing Leila White as Director of the Oakland Public Library. Ms. White is the first woman to hold the job in 102 years. (Kudos to Women Library Workers and the California Library Association for their help.)

THE MYOPIA PLACEMENT AWARD, first given in 1974, is dusted off for two responses from the library school deanery to the suggestion that enrollments be limited due to the job shortage in libraries: Said Bill Summers from South Carolina, "We are downgrading our education if we believe success equals getting a job . . ." and Nasser Sharify from Brooklyn's Pratt Institute, ". . . the shortage of jobs is healthy . . . there are lots of opportunities for nontraditional information jobs . . . more market research is needed here . . ."

THE "IF YOU CAN'T BEAT 'EM" AWARD to the ALA Nominating Committee, which, after seeing its nominees for ALA President lose to petition candidates for two years, decided to nominate previous petition candidate Russ Shank for a second time, now as the "official" candidate.

AN INNOVATIVE SEMANTICS AWARD to Chuck Stevens of the Southeastern Library Network (SOLINET). When asked by LJ if SOLINET had disaffiliated from the Southern Regional Education Board (SREB), he replied, ". . . there's been no disaffiliation . . . the SOLINET Board has voted to terminate its affiliation under the present memorandum of agreement . . ."

A LIBRARY OUTREACH AWARD to the Woodbridge Public Library, New Jersey, for its very effective and very creative RSVP program to entertain and educate the children of inmates during the visits of their parents to the Rahway State Prison.

THE ALA FRAGMENTATION GRENADE to the Division Interests Special Committee (DISC) for its proposal to charge ALA members a $10 a head tax to attend conferences of ALA (the money to go to the Divisions) and its proposal to charge fees for admittance to conference programs, with special discounts to members of sponsoring divisions.

THE NEW POST OF PERMANENT, PERPETUAL, DIVISION CZARINA to Alice Ihrig who very aptly responded to debate over who should get the profits from CHOICE by saying: "CHOICE shouldn't be thought of as a source of income, but as a means of providing a needed service at a reasonable cost . . ."

THE ANGEL'S FEAR AWARD, consisting of a weekend debating Eugene Garfield of ISI, to Anita Schiller for having the courage to undertake a study of the "university library/commercial sector interface" under a Council on Library Resources grant.

THE EASY ACCESS AWARD to the Arlington County Public Library, Virginia for its attempt to raise funds by installing parking meters in the library parking lot. (The move was thwarted by citizen protests.)

The Editors

From Thurber to Brautigan and John Dean from beauty tips and horseback riding to kite flying and crochet—

OUR '76 ADULT LIST HAS THE TITLES YOUNG ADULTS ARE REACHING FOR!

A JOURNALIST'S EARLY JOURNEYS

20th CENTURY JOURNEY: A Memoir of a Life and the Times: The Start: 1904-1930, by WILLIAM L. SHIRER. In this first volume of his autobiography, William Shirer recalls his growing up years in the Midwest and later in Paris, where he began his career as a cub reporter. Shirer was to become a crack American foreign correspondent who reported the news from Europe and Asia in the times before satellites and television, and with the publication of The Rise and Fall of the Third Reich, an internationally celebrated historian. The A.L.A. Booklist recommends his book "for older students" and describes it as "a richly appointed narrative of people, places, and events." Library Journal notes that Shirer "understands as few memoir writers do, that autobiography is essentially a genre of fiction and that the writer must perforce re-create the historical characters, including his own, and reinterpret the facts." Title #22195-7 75-41417 070'.92'4 6⅛ x 9¼ 510 pp. Photos. Index $12.50

NOTABLE NOVELS

THE DISTANT SUMMER by SARAH PATTERSON. In that distant summer of 1943, Kate Hamilton, not yet 17, meets and falls in love with Johnny Stewart, a young RAF war hero. "A tender story inevitably to be compared with Raucher's Summer of '42 . . . is also concerned with lost innocence, but the backdrop of the Second World War is more vivid, and the sexual awakening is far more muted." ". . . a story with wide teenage appeal." —A.L.A. Booklist (starred YA review). "The characterizations are good, and . . . Patterson conveys Kate's emergence into womanhood and the impact of war on young lovers very well."—School Library Journal (YA review). (Young Adult readers might find it interesting that Sarah Patterson was 14 when she wrote THE DISTANT SUMMER and is only 16 today.) Title #22257-0 75-45013 823'.9'14 5½ x 8½ 153 pp. $6.95

HEARTBREAK HOTEL by ANNE RIVERS SIDDONS. The year is 1956, and Maggie Deloach, a charming Southern belle at Randolph University, finds that the accepted "rules" for success no longer hold true for her; slowly, then surprisingly suddenly, she develops a set of values very different from those of her friends. ". . . the best novel I have ever read about coming of age in the late fifties." —Paul Hemphill. ". . . a marvelously detailed record of a South as gone with the wind as Scarlett O'Hara's." — The New York Times Book Review. Title #22315-1 76-10735 813'.5'4 5½ x 8¼ 252 pp. $7.95

THE 400 EELS OF SIGMUND FREUD by A.G. MOJTABAI. A group of exceptional teenagers are brought together as interns for the summer at a distinguished scientific research laboratory. Into this utopian community, where scientific humanism is the gospel, comes a rebel, a boy with a violin and a passion for music, who raises the conflicts between self-definition and the constraints of a technological society. "A thought-provoking novel suggested for mature teenagers."—A.L.A. Booklist (YA review). ". . . worthwhile fiction with appeal to adolescent and adult readers." —Choice. Title #22248-1 76-1987 813'.5'4 5⅜ x 8 258 pp. $7.95

POETRY AND FICTION

SOMBRERO FALLOUT: A Japanese Novel by RICHARD BRAUTIGAN. "A riot scene mushrooming from a dropped sombrero alternates with memories of the hero's failed love affair . . . Brief, ingenuous, the novel seems to follow Brautigan's eccentric muse wherever she leads . . . " —A.L.A. Booklist. Title #22331-3 76-16137 813'.5'4 5⅜ x 8 187 pp. $6.95

THE CAMP GRANT MASSACRE by ELLIOT ARNOLD. "In Arnold's well-written, taut novel set in the Arizona territory in 1871 and based on a true incident, an Apache chief and a U.S. cavalry lieutenant forge a friendship and make an ill-fated attempt at establishing a lasting peace. Suggested for older readers." —A.L.A. Booklist (YA review). Title #22193-0 75-25995 813'.5'2 5½ x 8¼ 448 pp. $9.95

LADY ORACLE by MARGARET ATWOOD. Recommended for mature teenagers, this searching novel explores the life of a young woman who stages her own death in order to seek her true identity behind the many roles she has lived: overweight teenager, thin adult, wife of a radical, lover of a poet, secret writer of gothic novels. ". . . a superior novel of delicious drollery." — A.L.A. Booklist (starred review). ". . . thoroughly funny and truly serious, i.e., genuine comedy . . . a high point in fiction about women." — Library Journal. Title #22339-9 76-15612 813'.5'4 5½ x 8½ 348 pp. $8.95

LOADING MERCURY WITH A PITCHFORK by RICHARD BRAUTIGAN. "Few poetry collections can afford to be without this work."—Library Journal. "Brautigan cultists will lead the applause." —A.L.A. Booklist (YA review). Title #22263-5 76-2001 811'.5'4 5⅜ x 8 127 pp. $6.95 paper #22271-6 $2.95

MOIRA by CAROLINE STAFFORD. On the Scottish coast, "21-year-old Moira Lindsay embarks on a course of action that places her in danger. A traditional gothic with appeal for teenagers." —A.L.A. Booklist (YA review). Title #22373-9 76-25220 813'.5'4 5⅜ x 8⅛ 252 pp. $7.95

BIOGRAPHY

BIG BILL TILDEN: The Triumphs and the Tragedy, by FRANK DEFORD. Big Bill Tilden dominated the game of tennis as no one before or since during the 1920's, but died disgraced as a result of his criminal convictions for homosexuality. "Suggested for mature older readers." — A.L.A. Booklist (YA review). "This fascinating account... is essential for most libraries." — Library Journal. Title #22254-6 75-45011 796.34'2'0924 5½ x 8½ 286 pp. Photos. Index $8.95

WALT DISNEY by BOB THOMAS. The only biographer ever given access to Disney's private, family and business papers has written the official story of the man behind the legend. "Disney remains a popular figure, and this biography should please many readers."—Library Journal. "Thomas has brought Disney fully alive for the general reader."—Publishers Weekly. Title #22332-1 76-13028 791'.092'4 6 x 9 379 pp. Photos. Index $9.95

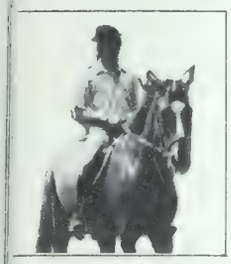
SELF-HELP

HOW TO SURVIVE THE LOSS OF A LOVE by MELBA COLGROVE & others. "The book's main appeal to teenagers will be the advice on how to get over a shattered romance. Sound, general advice . . . presented in a quiet way, good for many re-readings." — School Library Journal (YA review). Title #22270-8 75-42844 5⅜ x 8 131 pp. $5.95

CUTTING LOOSE by HOWARD HALPERN, Ph.D. Recommended for older teenagers, this "guide to adult relationships with your parents" is a helpful aid for dealing with parental controlling behavior and building new ways of relating based on affection and caring. New: watch for forthcoming reviews. Title #22318-6 76-17289 301'.42'7 5½ x 8¼ 256 pp. $8.95

DIANE VON FURSTENBERG'S BOOK OF BEAUTY by DIANE VON FURSTENBERG. A world renowned fashion expert writes about her life and her success, giving specific advice about health and beauty, including exercise and diet; make-up; care of skin, hair, and nails; and choosing the right clothes for you. Title #21904-9 76-19060 646.7'2'024042 6⅜ x 9¼ 224 pp. Photos. Illus. $8.95

HOBBIES



INVITATION TO RIDING by SHEILA WALL HUNDT. A fine introduction to horsemanship of all kinds, a sport which is growing at an explosive rate among young people. Title #22239-2 76-769 798'.23 6⅛ x 9⅛ 334 pp. Photos. Index $10.95

THE USET BOOK OF RIDING: The First Quarter-Century of the U.S. Equestrian Team, by WILLIAM STEINKRAUS, ed. This book covers every aspect of team activities in all three international disciplines—jumping, dressage and combined training — and is filled with riding strategies, training methods, and fascinating (often hilarious) personal anecdotes. New: look for forthcoming reviews. Title #22371-2 76-13495 798'.23'0973 8⅛ x 10¾ 287 pp. Photos. $12.50

GROWING HERBS IN POTS by JOHN BURTON BRIMER. "Going a step further than the usual manual on growing herbs in containers, this clear, simple guide provides more than 75 herb recipes running the gamut from beverages to desserts." —A.L.A. Booklist (starred YA review). Title #22252-X 76-2529 635'.7 6 x 7⅞ 206 pp. Illus. Index $6.95

THE COMPLETE BOOK OF KITES AND KITE FLYING by WILL H. YOLEN. "A mixture of history and personal anecdote, this is a definitive work on kite flying. One chapter supplies detailed instructions on constructing and flying numerous kites, while others cover unusual uses such as fishing and kite riding. Recommended as a first purchase on the subject." —A.L.A. Booklist (YA review). Title #22191-4 75-30747 629'.133'32 8⅜ x 10⅞ 256 pp. Illus. Photos. Index $9.95

THE WOMAN'S DAY BOOK OF KNITTED SWEATERS. "For anyone interested in knitting a sweater, here are more than 100 patterns to choose from. All styles and sizes are included — each with the necessary directions—and knitting equipment, yarns, and techniques are explained." —A.L.A. Booklist (YA review). Title #22204-X 75-40460 746.4'32 6⅜ x 9¼ 288 pp. Illus. Photos. $9.95

THE BEST OF WOMAN'S DAY CROCHET: A Treasury of Classic and Contemporary Crochet Patterns. "Basic instructions are followed by numerous items of clothing and home furnishings for both the beginning and experienced crocheter." —A.L.A. Booklist (YA review). Title #22225-2 76-2460 746'.4'34 8 x 10¾ 256 pp. Illus. Photos $9.95

PLANTS THAT REALLY BLOOM INDOORS by GEORGE & VIRGINIE ELBERT. Illus. by Helen Matsubu. "For the teenager who enjoys house plants or student working in a school greenhouse."—A.L.A. Booklist (YA review). Title #21797-6 74-9890 635'.9'65 6⅝ x 9⅜ 224 pp. Illus. Index $8.95 paper #22279-1 6 7/16 x 9⅜ $3.95

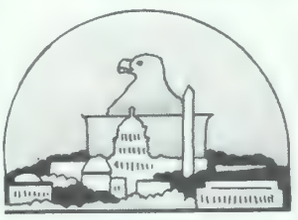
THE YARN ANIMAL BOOK by CAROLINE M. STAPLES. A complete introduction to working with yarns in seven basic techniques, this is also a great collection of 100 animals to make, with step-by-step instructions, supplemented with over 450 how-to diagrams. New: watch for forthcoming reviews. Title #22336-4 76-20465 746.4 8½ x 11 224 pp. Illus. $9.95

THE WOMAN'S DAY BOOK OF WILDFLOWERS by JEAN HERSEY. "Conveniently arranged by blossom color and blooming season, the treatment will be a useful identification aid for both botany students and nature lovers." — A.L.A. Booklist (YA review). Title #22251-1 76-57 582'.13 6⅛ x 9⅛ 160 pp. Illus. $6.95

SIMON AND SCHUSTER'S COMPLETE GUIDE TO PLANTS AND FLOWERS edited by FRANCES PERRY. "More than 500 plants are included in this quick reference guide. Each entry is illustrated in full color and supplies a general description plus information on use, soil, light and water needs, zones or hardiness, flowering time, and propagation."—A.L.A. Booklist (starred YA review). Title #22246-5 75-34618 635'.9 4⅝ x 7 1/16 521 pp. Col. Illus. Index $12.95 paper #22247-3 $6.95

IT'S GOING TO STING ME! by RONALD N. ROOD. "An enlightening and entertaining introduction to the out-of-doors . . ." —A.L.A Booklist (YA review). Title #22192-2 75-26533 591'.65 5⅜ x 8 125 pp. Illus. Index $7.95

POLITICAL INTRIGUE



THE COMPANY by JOHN EHRLICHMAN. Recommended for the older teenage reader of political fiction. "Though his material was ready-made for the task, Ehrlichman deserves credit for having done a professional job in presenting it." — A.L.A. Booklist (YA review). Soon to be a major Paramount motion picture. Title #22273-2 76-2508 813'.5'4 5½ x 8 1/16 313 pp. $8.95

THE PRESIDENT'S MISTRESS by PATRICK ANDERSON. "Mature teenagers, particularly those who keep up with the national political scene, will enjoy this taut tale of murder in which the U.S. president may be implicated." — A.L.A. Booklist (starred YA review). Title #22194-9 75-37533 813'.5'4 5½ x 8½ 320 pp. $8.95

WALK-IN by VIRGIL SCOTT and DOMINIC KOSKI. A Red Chinese intelligence agent defects shortly before the visit of the Premier of the People's Republic of China. Recommended for mature teenagers. "A taut tale all the way, without a single loose end." — A.L.A. Booklist (starred review). Title #22327-5 76-18220 813'.5'4 5 1/16 x 8⅜ 253 pp. $7.95

THE WINTER SPY by PAUL HENISSART. "Double dealings abound when a Hungarian secret police colonel is set up as a patsy by a power-hungry woman in his own organization . . . Suggested for mature readers." — A.L.A. Booklist (starred YA review). Title #22375-5 76-23332 813'.5'4 5½ x 8¼ 288 pp $7.95

IN OUR TIMES

BLIND AMBITION by JOHN DEAN. Recommended for the older reader with an interest in politics. "The flip side of All the President's Men — a document, a minefield, and prime entertainment." — The Kirkus Reviews. ". . . downright dynamite." — Publishers Weekly. Title #22438-7 76-26488 364.1'32'0973 6⅛ x 9¼ 415 pp. Photos. Index $11.95

THE FINAL DAYS by BOB WOODWARD and CARL BERNSTEIN. "Its contribution to our understanding of the aftermath of the events broadly labeled 'Watergate' is immense." — Library Journal. Title #22298-8 75-43719 973.924'092 6⅛ x 9¼ 476 pp. Illus. Index $11.95

MORTAL LESSONS: Essays in the Art of Surgery, by RICHARD SELZER. In this remarkable book, Richard Selzer, a surgeon at the Yale Medical Center, invites the reader into the operating room. Title #22356-9 76-25481 671 5½ x 8¼ 224 pp. $7.95

FUTURE FACTS: A Forecast of the World As We Will Know It Before the End of the Century, by STEPHEN ROSEN. "Thorough survey of future facts, here defined as specific products, concrete ideas, and detailed processes soon to be realized... Excellent material for studies on the future." — A.L.A. Booklist (YA review). ". . . a mixed bag of future tricks that may appeal to bright high-schoolers . . ." —The Kirkus Reviews. Title #22078-0 75-15545 609'.04 5½ x 8¼ 535 pp. Illus. Index $14.95

HUMOR AND COMICS

CHAS ADDAMS' FAVORITE HAUNTS Chas Addams' first collection of diabolical cartoons since 1964. Title #22429-8 76-41359 741'.5'973 8⅜ x 11 96 pp. Illus. $7.95

POGO'S BATS AND THE BELLES FREE by WALT KELLY. Another ever-lovin' Pogo original never before in book form. Title #22393-3 741.5 5¼ x 8¼ 127 pp. Illus. paper $2.95

THE WONDERFUL O by JAMES THURBER, illus. by MARC SIMONT. Cnfusin and chas reign when pirates banish all words containing O from the island of Ooroo. Inimitable Thurber fantasy. Title #22423-9 57-7942 5 7/16 x 8¼ 73 pp. Illus. paper $1.95

BRING ON THE BAD GUYS: Origins of Marvel Villains, by STAN LEE. The Supervillains strike back in the third in the series of Mighty Marvel origins. New: look for forthcoming reviews. Title #22354-2 76-22779 741'.5'973 7 x 10 253 pp. Illus. $10.95 paper #22355-0 $6.95

MIGHTY MARVEL STRENGTH AND FITNESS BOOK by STAN LEE. Basic exercises are demonstrated by the Marvel superheroes — an amazing and amusing way to learn the fundamentals of fitness. Title #22312-7 76-14486 613'.7'1 6 15/16 x 9 15/16 122 pp. Illus. paper $3.95

SIMON AND SCHUSTER

NEWS

YA services in Ohio: cheers and jeers

Some of the library administrators who participated in a meeting on YA services at the recent Ohio Library Association Conference held that budget-pinched libraries cannot afford to provide specialized services to young adults now and that YA programs are too often prone to "gimmickry." But others contended that it's the responsibility of libraries to reach out to the young adult, and that by failing to do so libraries are simply "disenfranchising" one of America's unrecognized minorities. One indication of interest in YA services: over 350 conference-goers flocked to the OLA Young Adult Task Force meeting, YA Services: Pro and Con. Cuyahoga County Public Library Young Adult Services Coordinator Robert Smith sent LJ a report on the meeting.

Cleveland Public Library Director Ervin Gaines questioned the need for YA programming "when posed against other library priorities." Said Gaines, "Services to teens are hard to justify as a separate budget entity because adolescence represents such a short period in a person's life. In this society, too much has already been made of the unique qualities of YA's, and more service could be provided by treating their needs as human rather than as special problems." He contended that libraries are the "only institution in this society that provides information in great quantity for free" and held that "libraries should adhere to basic functions." But Gaines said that he is not against YA programming per se, and just objects to the "gimmickry" dominating much YA programming. Gaines' perception of the YA could have something to do with his hard stance in regard to YA programming: he described young adults as "solitary" individuals and adolescence as a stage to be "endured in isolation."

Library Director Joseph Bana contended that the Euclid Public Library doesn't need a YA program because the community is "over-programmed" and youngsters can choose from a number of community agencies offering programs for teens. He asserted that he would take YA programming more seriously if just one staffer showed an interest in this kind of programming; Euclid's YA librarian confronted him after the meeting, reported Smith. And James Hafer, director of the Newark Public Library, said that "small libraries in rural areas are hard pressed to find local talent to help present and formulate effective YA programs." Recounting his own experience, he noted that Newark's attempts at YA programming had flopped—hardly anyone showed up.

Responding to YA service critics, Larry Rakow, secondary school specialist for the Cuyahoga County Public Library, assailed their indifference to what he described as "the largest disenfranchised minority in the United States." School libraries and public libraries providing YA service, he noted, have common goals, but their emphasis is different; each has a different "psychological environment" and provides separate information services. Said Rakow, "We need both school and public libraries to provide separate but coordinated service to the YA."

And Janet Polacheck, YA coordinator at the Stark County District Library, argued that it's important for libraries to provide an "alternative environment in which YA's can safely obtain survival information in a non-judgmental atmosphere." The existence of even one young adult librarian on the staff helps, she said, but "YA program and service needs cannot possibly be met without strong administrative leadership and support." And Polacheck argued that there is a demand for YA services: staff and patrons participating in a recent Baltimore County Public Library survey indicated their overwhelming support for service to the YA.

In a telephone interview with LJ Cuyahoga's Smith observed that in some areas YA programming is on the upswing. Libraries in Cuyahoga County and Los Angeles were among those to reinstate YA programming, and the Columbus Public Library has just appointed a new YA librarian. Cuyahoga, he reports, has drawn big crowds with some of its programs; over 300 teens came to the library to learn the hustle and other dances, and high attendance at Cuyahoga's rock concerts demonstrates the demand for programs of this sort. Smith contended that libraries that have budget flexibility are going to either start or expand their YA programming, while those forced to trim costs will probably cut back. New York's Rochester Public Library was one that had to abandon its YA service when the budget crunch hit. Noting the resistance to YA programming expressed by library chiefs, Smith said: "We must educate our administrators to the needs of YA's and the library's role in addressing them."

Nat'l. library network: policy meet slated

ALA's Information Science and Automation Division announces a February 24-25 institute on the National Bibliographic Network; its aim is "to provide a forum for discussion of major policy issues that will need to be resolved before planning for a national bibliographic network is complete." The institute, which is to be chaired by S. Michael Malinconico of New York Public Library, will be held at the Chicago Hyatt Regency Hotel.

The meeting, says ISAD, will provide participants with up-to-date information about new "developments towards the establishment of the national network," and spell out "the impact of such a network on various facets of the information dissemination field." Representatives of various segments of the library community are expected to zero in on "the requirements for a national bibliographic network . . . from the viewpoint of the public library, the research library, existing networks, the academic library, and the Library of Congress." Such topics as the international implications of a national network and the respective roles of the National Commission on Libraries and Information Science, the Library of Congress, and professional associations will be debated.

Among the big questions ISAD sees as coming up for review: "What is a national bibliographic network? Centralization vs. decentralization—how should a national network be governed? What will be the physical components? Who should be part of it? What will be the impact on library service and librarianship?"

More information and registration forms are available from Donald P. Hammer, Information Science and Automation Division, ALA, 50 E. Huron St., Chicago, Ill. 60611. The number to call is (312) 944-6780, ext. 266.

"Archival revolution" is theme of ICA meet

The National Archives and Records Service reports that 568 archivists from the U.S. and abroad came to Washington, D.C. for the September 27-October 1 meeting of the International Council on Archives—the first regular meeting of ICA to be held in the western hemisphere. The impact of developing technology and the trend towards more public access to records were among the topics addressed at ICA's Eighth International Congress on Archives. The Congress was held concurrently with the 40th annual meeting of the Society of American Archivists, which was itself attended by 830 people.

Today's archivists, reports NARS, see their profession "coming of age" and perceive a number of issues and changes in their world. The Eighth Congress focused on change; it had as its theme The Archival Revolution in Our Time. Accelerating technology (including TV, computers, photocopying, microforms, and reprographic techniques), it was noted, "has revolutionized the work of archivists." Other revolutionary changes noted: new ways of handling the increased volume of words and data; generally greater public access to records; new records management programs in many countries; and international programs aimed at providing archival assistance to developing countries.

Archivists attending the meeting were urged to try to move with the modern world. The concept of the archivists "as a neutral records collector" was challenged, and archivists were instead urged to be more active as record managers. There were proposals for a code of ethics for records collecting, and for work in "building constituencies sympathetic to the archival cause." Also voiced were expressions of concern for the new wave of archival theft.

Carter's library record suggests nat'l. commitment

Atlanta Public Library Assistant Director Ella Gaines Yates contends that if Jimmy Carter's record as governor of Georgia is an indicator of his attitude towards library funding as President, libraries can expect "a stronger national commitment to libraries and education."

Yates notes that during the Carter administration, Georgia's expenditures for public libraries went up from $2,918,103 to $4,794,476. Georgia became the "first state to appropriate monies for library construction"—$500,000 during his first year as governor, $1 million during his second, and $1.7 million for the third. And for the first time, Georgia public libraries received funding for shared positions; 18 professional librarians were paid to work with two or more regional libraries in special programs.

Said Yates, "A governor who took time out on a Sunday afternoon to attend a ribbon cutting ceremony of a storefront library and remained for the entire festivities, and who also welcomed a library committee into the governor's mansion to maintain his library there . . . does not reflect a personage insensitive to the viability of libraries."

Role of subject specialist addressed at SALALM

The 22nd Seminar on the Acquisition of Latin American Library Materials, slated for June 12-17 in Gainesville, Florida, will have as its theme The Multifaceted Role of the Latin American Subject Specialist. The role is seen as including selection, acquisition, technical processes, making materials available to the public, and also reference work and classroom instruction. And SALALM plans as special session topics for the Latin American subject specialist: bibliography preparation, archival collections, and "the ramifications of the political situation in Argentina, Peru, and Chile for publishing activities." There will also be book exhibits from the U.S. and abroad.

SALALM, originally an activity sponsored by the Organization of American States, is an independent, incorporated association. Address inquiries to the SALALM Secretariat, Benson Latin American Collection, the University of Texas at Austin, SRH 1-108, Austin, Tex. 78712.

AALS directors' meeting; accreditation study slated

Reporting on the October 21-23 meeting of the Association of American Library Schools' Board of Directors, AALS President Guy Garrison (Drexel) says the board okayed a study of the accreditation of library programs; the AALS Task Force on Accreditation Issues will send out questionnaires to all those who have served on accrediting teams for the ALA Committee on Accreditation under the 1972 standards. Among the questions to be asked: who should do the accrediting; what programs other than the M.L.S. should be considered; what is good and what is bad about the present process; and what has been the impact of accreditation visits on library education. COA, he notes, plans its own questionnaire study, this one addressed to deans of schools—an example of "the evaluators evaluating themselves," said Garrison.

Other actions taken by the AALS board: it cancelled research grants for lack of good proposals; endorsed a membership drive aimed at both accredited and nonaccredited library schools; endorsed a plan to seek members in foreign schools; and decided against seeking more formal ties to ALA until the fate of ALA's Library Education Division is known (LED is threatened under the new self-supporting Divisional plan). But the AALS Task Force on Organizational Alignment, notes Garrison, was asked to strengthen present ties to ALA, IFLA (International Federation of Library Associations), CNLA (Council of National Library Associations), CLENE (Continuing Library Education Network Exchange), and the Council of Communication Societies; and to develop links to ASIS (American Society for Information Science), AECT (Association for Educational Communications and Technology), SLA (Special Libraries Association), and MLA (Medical Library Association).

AALS' board also received notice of the approval of its application for 501-C-3 status by the Internal Revenue Service, and it approved final plans for the January 28-30 Washington, D.C. AALS Annual Conference—this one on the New Information Professional, his goals and priorities.

Garrison also spelled out the AALS 1977 priorities for action: ". . . We have in progress and intend to issue brief position papers on what should a 6th year post-master's program consist of . . . the role of the library school in continuing education . . . what a doctoral program should consist of . . . internships and practicums."

Papers & speakers asked for LRRT research forum

ALA's Library Research Round Table asked for papers and prospective moderators for its 1977 Research Forum Series (Charles Curran, chairperson)—a program to be held during ALA's 1977 Annual Conference in Detroit. Says Curran, "Five forum programs are planned for Conference week. Each . . . will focus on a topic of current interest (such areas as methodology for investigating library networks, performance measures used by public libraries, and interactive information networks) and will consist of the presentation of two or three papers followed by a discussion period." LRRT plans to publish forum papers.

Completed or nearly completed projects, says Curran, will receive priority. Send a notice of intent accompanied by a proposal no later than December 31 to: Charles Curran, College of Librarianship, Davis College, University of South Carolina, Columbia, S.C. 29208, or call him at (803) 777-2909.

LRRT research competition: $400 awards for papers

Barbara Slanker, director of the Office for Research of ALA, asks submission of papers for the Library Research Round Tables 1977 Research Competition; two awards of $400 will be given to papers picked by the LRRT Research Development Committee. Winners will be announced by LRRT Chairperson Gary Purcell prior to the 1977 ALA Conference in Detroit; they'll be expected to present their research papers at the LRRT Information Exchange Suite during ALA-Detroit.

Research papers (such as theses, seminar papers, and dissertations) done to meet degree requirements are not eligible, but papers utilizing data gathered during preparation of such are acceptable. Papers generated as a result of a research grant or prepared by joint investigators are also eligible. Research papers submitted will be judged on the following points: definition of the research problem; application of research methods; clarity of reporting; and significance of the conclusions, as judged by the committee. For a complete set of criteria, contact Slanker at ALA, 50 E. Huron St., Chicago, Ill. 60611.

The papers must be submitted no later than April 1. Send three copies to: Leslie Morris, Chairman, LRRT Research Development Committee, Xavier University of New Orleans Library, New Orleans, La. 70125. Phone: (504) 486-7411, ext. 317.

THE LIBRARY DOLLAR

New source of library $$ sought in Ohio

During the annual meet of the Ohio Library Association in Columbus, Lewis Naylor of the Toledo-Lucas County Library was among those to denounce the Ohio intangibles tax (the primary source of library funding in the state) as an outmoded and inequitable source of funding for most libraries—especially those in poorer counties. But William Chait (Dayton & Montgomery County Library) and John Rebenack (Akron-Summit County Library) held that now was not the time to push for change. OLA's membership listened to the heated debate and then voted nearly two to one to request that Ohio's General Assembly appoint a joint, bipartisan legislative committee to work with librarians towards the development of an alternative source of funding. Also resolved: that OLA's president appoint a committee of public librarians and trustees to work with the legislative study team in developing an alternate funding scheme.

The resolution passed by the membership took OLA to task for failing to act decisively in correcting funding disparities. It said, "The Ohio Library Association has chosen to substitute a totally defensive posture towards the intangibles tax for any positive action to develop an alternative funding program . . . in defiance of the high priority expressed repeatedly by librarians and trustees." A 1970 study by Frederick Stocker, it was noted, urged that alternative modes of funding be sought lest ". . . the problems noted earlier . . . continue or perhaps worsen." Said Stocker, ". . . the lower-income counties of the state will continue to be deprived of access to modern library service . . . the fiscal difficulties of libraries in some of the wealthier counties, where standards of library performance are high, would probably necessitate cutbacks." The funding situation of Ohio libraries, noted the resolution, is now at a "critical stage requiring a number of library districts to seek relief through voted levies."

The intangibles tax, a tax on earnings from stocks and bonds, was attacked most strongly by librarians from poor counties where there are fewer stockholders. Under the current distribution (1975), 24 counties serving seven percent of Ohio's population allocated less than $3 per capita to libraries; 43 serving 31 percent of the population allocated $3-$5 per capita; 15 counties with 29 percent of the population allocated $5-$7 per capita; and six counties (serving 31 percent of Ohio's population) allocated $7 or more. A Citizens Task Force on Tax Reform and Ohio's governor had called for a repeal of the intangibles tax in 1971, but the legislature—despite many abortive attempts—has still failed to authorize a new form of library support.

The vote for libraries: victories in Ohio & W. Va.

Thanks to the big voter turnout prompted by the national election, coupled with the hard work of library supporters who campaigned for their libraries, voters okayed a big boost in tax support (the Library of Youngstown and Mahoning County, Ohio) and a big referendum for library construction (Cabell County, West Virginia). And Cuyahoga County, Ohio voters have okayed two more bond issues for library construction projects; the town of Parma, New York okayed a bond issue to build a new library.

• Landslide vote for Youngstown: Thanks to a high-powered campaign aimed at winning support for a proposal to boost library tax support, the Library of Youngstown and Mahoning County racked up its first increase in tax funding since 1961, reports PR chief Jeanne Dykins. The vote was 71,985 for, and only 39,176 against a 6/10's tax mill proposal that will provide Youngstown with $835,785 in operating revenue—some 25 percent of its total budget. The vote authorizes old tax support of about $543,260 plus $292,525 in new aid, notes Dykins. The library got its message across to voters by means of a tabloid mailing piece that went out to all families. Commenting on the wide voting margin, Dykins said, "We didn't believe we would ever get anything like this . . . and if we didn't make it, we would be in real trouble."

• More $$ victories for Ohio: Robert Smith of the Cuyahoga County Public Library (Cleveland) reports that voters have okayed two bond issues for the construction of a new branch and an addition to an existing branch; Cuyahoga, he notes, has in the past three years won approval of four tax levies. The latest victories: the vote was 3,510 to 2,767 for a $317,000 bond issue to pay for an addition to the Orange Community Library (Florence Kuhlman, librarian). And another community passed—by a vote of 2,966 to 2,376—a $890,000 bond issue for a new building to replace the North Royalton Public Library's old headquarters. (John Wright, librarian).

• Building West Virginia's libraries: James Nelson of the Cabell County Public Library (Huntington, West Virginia) reports that 65 percent of the voters okayed a three-year referendum of $3.7 million for the construction of a 50,000-square-foot main library, four new branches, and an addition to an existing brach. And the West Virginia State Library Commission has already pledged $1 million. Nelson noted that the national election helped get voters out, but he said that the Friends should get the credit for the big victory at the polls. In West Virginia, 60 percent of the vote is required to win passage of a referendum, and an earlier try at winning over enough voters had failed. This time around, the Friends had the help of the consulting firm, Matt Reese Associates (a top-notch Washington, D.C. outfit that has handled the Kennedy campaigns); Reese, a home town boy, had contributed his firm's expertise free of charge. But the Friends still wound up in the red, and are now hunting around for a way to pay off a debt of about $2500.

• The vote in Parma, N.Y.: The town of Parma, New York has voted in favor of a library bond issue of $425,000 for a new library building; construction will begin in January.

S.C.'s try for extra $$: voter registration helps

Verena Bryson, chairperson of the Public Libraries Section of the South Carolina Library Association, reports that there still are big obstacles to winning approval of a proposal to boost 1977-78 per capita state aid to county libraries. But South Carolina legislators seemed to grow more receptive to the idea when they learned that Greenville County Library staffers are deputized as voter registrars and do registration in the library.

SCLA's Public Libraries Section is trying for an increase in state aid to $1 per capita—requiring an appropriation of $2,590,516 for fiscal year 1977-78. Only 35¢ in per capita aid ($906,680) is now provided; aid to county libraries has not inched up since 1973.

The South Carolina State Library, noting that its own budget request has been pared down, expressed its own inability (because of a new budget procedure adopted by the state) to get into the budget for next year the request for more per capita aid.

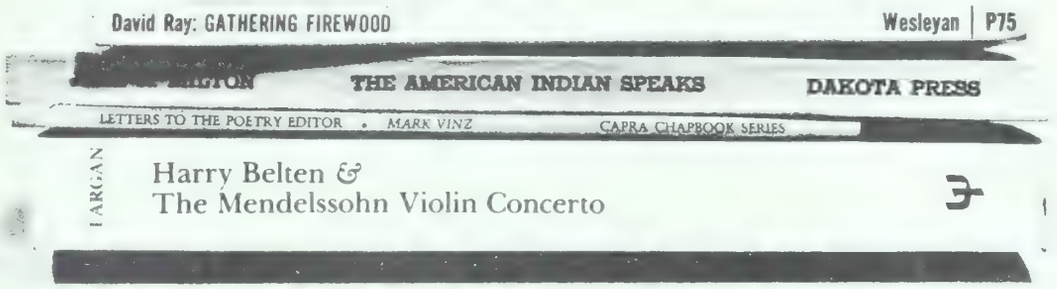
But SCLA's Legislative Committee won an appearance before the South Carolina State Budget and Control Board. One point that was made in presenting its case: "These are funds that come back to the counties and have a direct and measurable impact on the constituency back home." But Bryson reports that legislators really sat up and listened when the role of libraries in getting voters registered was mentioned. One legislator suggested a state law providing voter registration in all libraries.

Johnson City, Tenn. ups library $$

The Mayne Williams Public Library has won a budget increase of 33 percent from the City Commission, which appropriated $100,000 to the library, reports Director Robert Plotzke. The new budget will enable the library to hire a full-time children's librarian, initiate a retirement program for employees, and reinstate Sunday service. The library's budget, notes Plotzke, has gone up 83 percent since 1973.

RS builds a library

The newest branch of the Sacramento County Library was built entirely with federal Revenue Sharing funds; the Arcade Community Library is a 12,000 square foot facility that houses a 44,000-volume collection



A Source for Midwestern Small Presses and Literary Magazines.

The Plains Distribution Service offers at no cost:

A quarterly book list of fifteen carefully selected, fully stocked titles; each given two pages of visual and written promotion allowing thorough examination.

A magazine brochure which provides an extensive view of eight Upper-Midwestern literary magazines.

And, in the future, a directory of all Midwestern literary magazines containing Editor statements and technical publication information.

The Plains Distribution Service promotes and distributes exclusively to libraries and individuals so you can expect quick, efficient service.

The Plains Distribution Service, Inc.
A service for Midwestern small presses and little magazines
Box 3112, Fargo, N.D. 58102, Ph. (701) 235-5636

METRO meet on access: curse or cure?

Among the many contradictory viewpoints expressed at an October 29 workshop on library access in New York: academic libraries can no longer afford to provide free access to all and will get tougher with people who abuse their access rights; much can be done to improve public library access; most access schemes overload the big institutions; the public is effectively barred from medical and law libraries; and when it comes to access, librarians themselves are the biggest problem. The hard line taken by one academic librarian could signal the advent of tougher policies aimed at further restricting access; it drew a surprising amount of support from librarians of all types.

The workshop-seminar, Personal Access: Myth or Reality?, was sponsored by the New York Metropolitan Reference and Research Library Agency (METRO) in cooperation with the Long Island Library Resources Council and the Southeastern Library Resources Council. About 150 New York librarians came to the Carnegie International Center to debate the issues, and METRO reports that many had to be turned away. What follows is an account of the positions taken by METRO librarians as they tried to reconcile their conflicting loyalties to the institution and the library patron.

Access limitations scorned

Queens Borough Public Library Director Milton Byam called for a reversal of the trend towards creating new and better "barriers" to library access—roadblocks that just tend to intimidate potential users and frustrate regulars. His stance contrasted sharply with the views of other METRO speakers, who held that new access limitations are necessary if budget-cramped libraries (especially academic) are to meet the needs of their own constituencies. Byam observed that "library patrons want simpler access, while libraries and institutions are—out of need—moving toward more complex access schemes." Responding to the question of how far do you go in curbing access in view of growing public demand, shrinking staff, and reduced budgets, Byam retorted, "It's just as expensive keeping people out as letting them in."

Zeroing in on various "barriers" to access, Byam noted that rules and regulations imposed by libraries—such things as membership fees, fines, and other charges—"act as a deterrent to library use." The arrangement of library holdings according to Dewey subject classification constitutes another form of "denial of access." The Dewey system, asserted Byam, works for librarians, but not for patrons. He mentioned staff as a "key ingredient" in effective access, but noted that here also there are such built-in problems as whether there's enough staff on deck to help bewildered patrons and whether an individual staffer has the skill needed to do the job. Too often the patron "ends up discouraged, having been referred from department to department."

And "borrowers bring their own disabilities . . . how do the handicapped get around our library fortresses . . . and what about the patron who does not know the mechanics of the Dewey system or want to learn it?"

As for hours of service, Byam said that "ideally, you should have at least one public library open at all hours in a metropolitan area such as New York City." This can be done: Washington, D.C. tried out a Night Owl Service that demonstrated a real demand for late-hour service—an experiment that led to an equally successful Early Bird Service at the District of Columbia Public Library. But Byam noted that it's hard to get staff to work an off-hours shift.

The proximity of library facilities is also important: studies by QBPL, he reported, "proved that patrons do not use libraries more than five blocks away from home or work." But Queens just cannot provide enough library facilities to accommodate all, especially since the budget drought hit. The Central library is conceived of as a central facility, but here also, he maintained, "access is denied."

Byam's prescription for improved access: "more book delivery and transportation of materials within individual libraries themselves; maximum hours; more qualified staffers; and concentrating resources where there would be optimal access." Libraries, he added, "must seek the funding needed to get the job done."

Patricia Battin, director, Library Services Group, Columbia, argued that it's too expensive for today's academic libraries to provide free public access and still adequately serve their own special clientele. Her tough stance, which seems at odds with a traditional goal of librarianship—once espoused without question—was heartily received by a good many METRO librarians, who roundly applauded her.

Battin zeroed in on what she saw as "the conflict of the American myth of free and equal library access for all versus the harsh and too often unrecognized reality of 'who will pay.' " She chastised the library profession for "promising more services than we can deliver" and said this was due to a "lack of understanding of the requirements of financing a system of information distribution for all citizens." Carnegie's concept of free library service, she sardonically observed, has turned out to be a "snake in the garden." In the beginning, the "supply was equal to the demand" and access posed no problems. But the economy crunch has changed all that, and financially troubled libraries—especially academic libraries—are now faced with the choice of either trying to provide access to all, while service inevitably deteriorates, or setting realistic and legitimate limitations on access "rights."

Byam: ". . . patrons want simpler access, while libraries . . . are—out of need—moving toward more complex access schemes . . . It's just as expensive keeping people out as letting them in"

Battin asserted that over the years research libraries have had to contend with new service demands of overwhelming proportions. One such stems from the "proliferation of specialized graduate programs in developing institutions without corresponding support for library resources." One library component of the State University of New York (SUNY), she reported, started out with only 350,000 volumes when it was designated as a central facility in 1965; but the library must now support 18 doctoral programs. Battin noted that New York's funding formula encourages meager collection development and consequent reliance upon older institutions; you need a doctoral program before you can get any funding for a collection to support it. At the heart of the problem, she said, is "a lack of recognition of the time and money required to build adequate library collections to support doctoral research."

Ironically, established institutions, both private and public, are hurting most, observed Battin. There has been a "shifting of public moneys and foundation support from established institutions . . . to the newer emerging colleges and universities during the past two decades"; research libraries are getting hit with "overwhelming demands for services at the very time their [financial] resources have decreased dramatically." Said Battin, "Quite often, the newer institutions have the money and the students, and the older institutions have the library resources."

And Battin pointed to continuing education programs for adults as yet another "library service without appropriate funding" that is definitely on the upswing—a new development that is further taxing the limits of academic libraries. Today's university libraries, she said, are faced with a "struggle for survival" in an inflationary economy.

It must be recognized, said Battin, that research libraries which are "traditionally funded to provide a reasonably stable level of service" cannot handle the new access demands. Cornell was one institution that once offered free library privileges to all, but eventually had to withdraw these privileges. It was a question of a "private university funding public programs."

And interlibrary loan is another drain on the beleaguered research library. It was "originally conceived as a reciprocal service between equals," but it hasn't worked out that way. The "growth of developing institutions trying to support programs on inadequate resources has led to heavy dependence on interlibrary loan as a collection development adjunct." Minnesota's MINITEX network seemed like a progressive program at first, but there's a growing "hostility toward it at the University of Minnesota," which "feels that its resources are being drained" by smaller colleges, which are now relying too heavily on UM.

What has actually happened, said Battin, are that two classes of libraries came into being: the net lenders and the net borrowers. Columbia falls into the first category; it lends an average of 20,000 volumes annually, and borrows only 2000. And Columbia must put up some $75,000 to subsidize its loan operation. Such institutions as Harvard, Princeton, and Yale are in the same spot and have been "forced to charge fees to prevent serious erosion of their own collections, and thus destroy the distinctiveness which attracts loan requests in the first place."

Summing up, Battin said that it will become increasingly difficult to justify expanding library access "when in actuality access is getting worse." You must differentiate between the "right to access and the right to convenient access," and you must help "users understand the proper approach." What is needed is "an organized set of protocols . . . it is the responsibility of the library profession to educate citizens in the realities of information use and dissemination. We must stop promising more than we can give." At Columbia, noted Battin, "individuals with legitimate and demonstrated need can consult materials 'unique' to Columbia's collection"; unique means "unavailable elsewhere for good reason, and is not to be construed as simply unavailable in the local library."

And Battin warned librarians not to count on either networking or boosts in state and/or federal support as a solution to their access problems. Funding increases of the magnitude needed are highly unlikely, she said, since this kind of funding "implies socialism," which, she contended, neither government nor the public would go for. She did admit, however, that Congress did take one forward looking step this year when it proposed legislation which (if an authorization bill had been approved) would have given research libraries up to $14 million in compensation for their "national research centers."

The privilege of access

Remarking that the METRO speakers preceding him were a lot more negative about access than he had anticipated, C. Robin LeSueur of Rockefeller University noted that interloan seems to work better in Europe and Great Britain, where it is viewed as a "right" and not a "privilege" as is the case in the U.S. One factor accounting for this difference: Europe has a top-notch delivery system.

Battin: "... You must differentiate between the right to access and the right to convenient access ... it is the responsibility of the library profession to educate citizens in the realities of information use.... We must stop promising more than we can give"

Professional libraries (both medical and legal), observed LeSueur, seem to "be going in the direction of organizational and not personal access." They have developed effective "barriers to access" and have earned a dubious reputation that was summed up in a recent article, "Behind the Closed Doors." Their institutional policies make a screening of patrons unnecessary; at Rockefeller you need an I.D. to get in, and besides institutional patrons, only guests of the president or faculty guests are allowed entrance. The personal frustration encountered by users serves as another effective bar-

For libraries,
universities and Faculty
FRENCH and European BOOKS FROM ALL PUBLISHERS
Special fast handling
at lowest prices
OFFICE GENERAL DU LIVRE
14 bis, rue Jean Ferrandi
75006 Paris

rier to use. Medical libraries, he noted, must abide by the prohibitions and restraints recommended by their funding agencies, and they can't let everyone in because of possible "misuse of medical information." As budgets get tighter, professional libraries can be expected to further curb access, serving only those users who belong to the institution. One possible solution suggested by him: "more active participation in cooperative ventures."

LeSueur noted that there are a few examples of forward-looking access schemes at medical libraries. The Martin Luther King Medical Library, he reported, recruits its staff from the unemployed, and provides education to its own staff, hospital workers, and patients—training them to be "health sciences users."

Access to medical libraries

Kenneth Moody, director, Medical Research Library of Brooklyn, SUNY Downstate Medical Center, said there is a very real need for broadening medical library access for both students and the public. He noted that the New York Academy of Medicine is the only institution in the New York metropolitan area which allows the general public to use its collection. And he contended that "the influence of the National Library of Medicine" has encouraged access barriers.

Moody stressed that legislation (the Medical Library Assistance Act) "mandates that the public be served." Libraries get around this by "not publicizing it"—something characterized by him as "myopic." As for services, Moody noted that medical libraries "are heavily into computer searches . . . but there's a built-in control on access—patrons must pay for the service."

Special libraries & access

Shirley Echelman, chief librarian for Chemical Bank's Research Library, noted that "small special libraries have always had to live with the fact that they had to try to satisfy user demands . . . but there's a new emphasis on access and the individual client—a shift from the old focus on materials." Special libraries have to be "client oriented . . . because their funding comes from the people who use them."

As for public access, "There is no way such a corporation as Chemical Bank can be forced to open its doors to the public." But corporations recognize their "informal public responsibility," and they can be persuaded to provide public access as a PR device ". . . as an example of corporate responsibility." The attitude of corporate management on public access, said Echelman, is "positive . . . if their own people get the top priority." Quoting statistics from the directory of New York's Special Libraries Association, she noted that 360 institutions (one-third) have closed access policies, while 740 (two-thirds) are open to the public or students, sometimes on an appointment basis. As for fees, Echelman said "most special libraries would not be interested."

A word of advice

Echelman offered this advice to outside users: "Make an appointment . . . exhaust your own services first . . . do not expect a lot of reference service . . . ask the whole question . . . and never criticize the librarian in charge." And she advised librarians to "upgrade in-house indexes and bibliographies—the better your cite, the better your access . . . always call before you send someone out . . . brief the client . . . reciprocate . . . and if you are a net user, fight for dollars, and use it to take a librarian out to lunch . . . It helps."

And Echelman warned of diminishing access to the rapidly proliferating data bases, which are becoming more and more difficult to search: "We must pressure the information industry for standardization" before it's too late.

As for public library access, she urged METRO librarians to "go in as a user and see what kind of access you get." Echelman, dressed in blue jeans, had tried it, and reported that her "experience was appalling."

METRO's courtesy card

METRO President Morris Gelfand noted that METRO's own personal access program (called CARES) got off to a slow start in 1974 with only 15 participating libraries handling 45 referrals, but referrals are now up to an average of 23 a month. Libraries at Columbia and New York University handle most requests, followed by the Pratt Institute Library and Teachers College; New York Public Library's Research Libraries also serve as "a major if not the major referral center in the METRO scheme," but there's a lack of statistics on their referral load. As for type of user, students and faculty members account for most (70 percent) METRO referrals.

Turning to access schemes developed by other libraries, Gelfand mentioned the "Access Service" inaugurated in 1970 by the Rochester Regional Research Library Council, the "Research Loan Program" of the Long Island Library Resources Council, and the "infopass" program developed by the Illinois Regional Library Council. IRLC's "infopass" program, noted Gelfand, has encountered such problems as "misreferrals, and overuse of the University of Chicago's Regenstein Library." But he noted that the Library Council of Greater Metropolitan Milwaukee and the Tri-County Library Council in Wisconsin have decided to try out "infopass."

Gelfand contended that recent policy statements on access prepared by ALA and the National Commission on Libraries and Information Science indicate that interlibrary personal access is here to stay. METRO can improve its own program by upgrading finding tools, conducting "a good reference interview," making referrals to publicly supported libraries first, and giving referred patrons more specific instructions—"a reader should not have to flounder around a library."

The problem with librarians . . .

John Pattin of the Nassau County Research Library reported that librarians themselves were the biggest barrier to getting an access program (called Research for Loan) going in Nassau; their opposition stemmed from a fear of being "overwhelmed with reference requests." But the program, which has been in operation for 14 months, is a success: "42 institutions now voluntarily participate in the program . . . procedures are simple . . . with a borrowing card that's good for 90 days . . . and requests average about ten per month." The biggest trouble, said Pattin, is "librarians themselves . . . they don't know how to refer a patron."

LIBRARIAN'S SPECIALTIES

Preservatives, book & document stands, page weights, slip cases, boxes, restoratives, bookplate remover, etc.

Send for illustrated brochure listing items for book and document care and preservation.

THE CURRENT COMPANY
P.O. Box 46 / Bristol, R.I. 02809

New for '76 '77

Write for free copy
Almost 13,000 items:
library/AV equip./office

The Highsmith Co., Inc.
P.O. 25-0800
Fort Atkinson, WI 53538

Access case studies

The METRO audience broke up into small groups to discuss solutions to typical access problems; LJ sat in on the session chaired by Patricia Battin of Columbia. A problem addressed: what to do about the man from the street who demands access to a library designated as a U.S. depository? Battin said that you have to let such people in (Columbia gets checked regularly by unidentified government representatives to make sure it abides by its legal requirements as a depository), but you must learn to spot people—mostly students—who are just trying to get in and discourage them from "abusing" their privileges.

Too often, said Battin, "convenience and access are confused . . . it's basically a PR problem . . . alumni tend to think their library privileges are lifelong, but reading privileges are all that can be provided . . . your first priority is to your own students; if explained, people understand."

Battin's group agreed that ILL is preferable to sending a client to a neighboring library because of the "staff time likely to be lost in helping a person." But one librarian complained that despite NYSILL (New York's interlibrary loan network), ILL requests take much too long (about four weeks), and she's given up completely on getting a loan from a library such as Columbia's. The group also agreed that public libraries with their traditional emphasis on equal access aren't doing much to help academic libraries. It was suggested that university libraries should consider charging fees to institutions which depend on them for collection backup—"contracts could be educational to school officials and trustees, who fail to see the importance of developing curriculum support for courses offered."

Battin's group admitted that the public is denied access to both medical and law libraries and that something should be done. It recommended that METRO support a part-time person in these specialized libraries to do research for students. It also urged METRO to undertake a cost study concerning contractual services.

Among the recommendations made by other METRO discussion groups: organize a committee (including special librarians) to develop a fee structure for reference service; study compensation schemes to reimburse research and college libraries for on-site use of libraries and their services; and upgrade instruction in the use of the METRO access card. These recommendations, reported Program Chairperson Olive C. James, will be studied by METRO's Personal Access Task Force, and may well lead to action.

—Noël Savage

PEOPLE

M. HOLCOMB

J. MACPHERSON

MILLICENT D. ABELL, formerly Associate Director of University Libraries, State University of New York at Buffalo, is now University Librarian, University of California, San Diego.

CHARLES R. ANDREWS, formerly University Librarian, Southeastern Massachusetts University, North Dartmouth, is now Dean of Library Services, Hofstra University, Hempstead, N.Y.

LILA BRADY, formerly Assistant Director of the Indiana State Library, Indianapolis, is now Director of the Northern Illinois Library System, Rockford.

MARC EISEN, formerly Reference Supervisor at the East Orange Public Library, New Jersey, is now Assistant Director of the Library.

CHARLES F. GOSNELL, formerly Director of Libraries at New York University, has been elected Chairman of the Board of the Public Affairs Information Service in New York.

MORRIGENE HOLCOMB, formerly an analyst in American national government in the Library of Congress Congressional Research Service, has been named the first Women's Program Coordinator at the Library of Congress.

DOROTHY S. JONES, formerly the Coordinator of Adult Services, East Orange Public Library, New Jersey, has been appointed Director of the library.

JOSEPH T. MACPHERSON, formerly at the School of Librarianship, Western Michigan University, Benton Harbor, is now Professor and Chairman, Department of Library Science, Mississippi University for Women, Columbus.

ELIZABETH PAN, currently on the faculty of the Graduate Department of Library Science, Catholic University, Washington D.C., is now Chief of the Scientific Library of the U.S. Patent & Trademark Office, Washington, D.C.

BERRY G. RICHARDS, formerly Acting Director of Libraries, Lehigh University, Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, is now Director.

Management Consulting

A Guide to the Profession

At last a good basic text on management consulting . . . essential . . . good to show clients as justification for way you operate. . . (Consultants News)

. . . A valuable contribution to the literature which compared with some professions, is still thin on the ground. It is not perhaps too much to claim that this publication may soon become a standard work on the subject. It is comprehensive and informative but above all is written with an eye to the present-day conditions, to current events and to the future. . . . (The Training Officer, U.K.)

378 pages $17.95; Sw.frs.45
1976 ISBN 92-2-101165-8

International Labour Office

ILO Branch Office
1750 New York Ave., N.W.
Washington, DC 20006
(202) 634-6335

ILO Publications
CH-1211 GENEVA 22
Switzerland

JOSTEN'S 1977-78 LIBRARY SUPPLIES

SEND FOR THIS NEW USEFUL CATALOG TODAY

★ Our biggest catalog ever
★ 100's of "How To" hints and useful new items

BOOK PROCESSING SUPPLIES/ AUDIO-VISUAL EQUIPMENT/COMPUTERIZED CATALOGING MATERIALS/BOOKS FOR LIBRARIES/BOOK REPAIR & MAINTENANCE AIDS/LIBRARY FURNITURE/LIBRARY DISPLAY MATERIALS

Josten's
Library Supplies Div. 1301 Cliff Rd. Burnsville, MN 55337

YES! Please send me your new catalog right away!

NAME _____

LIBRARY _____

ADDRESS _____

CITY/STATE/ZIP _____

ANNOUNCING THE FIRST EDITION OF

BOOKS IN SERIES IN THE UNITED STATES 1966-1975

Original, Reprinted, In-Print, and Out-of-Print Books, Published or Distributed in the U.S. in Popular, Scholarly, and Professional Series

Finally there is a single volume to serve as a comprehensive aid in research, acquisitions, and cataloging. BOOKS IN SERIES is compiled from Library of Congress data, Bowker's Bibliography Databases, and publishers' information.

BOOKS IN SERIES lists 90,000 books issued in some 10,000 series by 1,000 publishers between 1966 and 1975 (books in series published in 1976 are also listed). It includes books in series published prior to 1966 whether in print or o.p. within the 1966-1975 time span.

The main index of BOOKS IN SERIES is an alphabetical listing of series titles based on the authoritative form established by the Library of Congress. If available, ISSNs are provided for series titles, and cross references lead you from the popular series titles to the authoritative form.

Under each series title books are arranged by number, or if unnumbered, alphabetically by title with all available bibliographic information, including author/editor, date of publication, price, publisher, ISBN, LC card catalog number, and where applicable, o.p. indication.

BOOKS IN SERIES IN THE UNITED STATES 1966-1975 also includes—

- title and author indexes
- subject index to series
- directory of publishers with ISBN prefixes as well as current addresses

BOOKS IN SERIES will solve your books in series problems. Order it now.

ISBN 0-8352-0902-4. LC 76-41665. November 1976. 8½" x 11". c. 2700 pages. $50.00 tent.

Order from:
R. R. Bowker Order Dept.,
P.O. Box 1807, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48106,
(Outside Western Hemisphere: Bowker, Erasmus House, Epping, Essex, England.)

BOWKER
NEW YORK & LONDON

All orders plus shipping and handling. Sales tax added where applicable.
Prices are subject to change and slightly higher outside the U.S. and its possessions.

SAMPLE OF SERIES TITLE LISTINGS (Main Section of BOOKS IN SERIES IN THE UNITED STATES 1966-1975)

57 Social Images & Process in Urban New Guinea: A Study of Port Moresby. Alan Rew. 1974. text ed. 13.95 (ISBN 0-8299-0024-1). West Pub.

AMERICAN ETHNOLOGICAL SOCIETY. PROCEEDINGS OF THE AMERICAN ETHNOLOGICAL SOCIETY

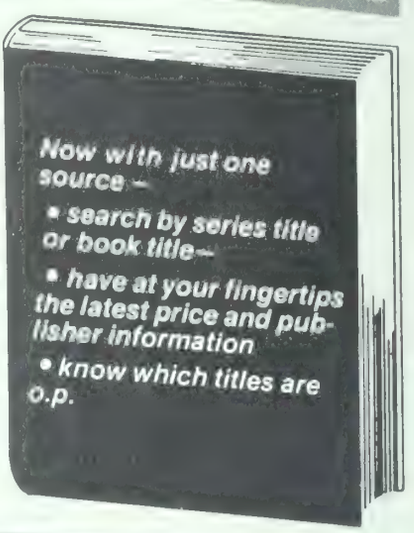
1957 Cultural Stability & Cultural Change. Ed. by Verne F. Ray. 1957. pap. 3.00x (ISBN 0-295-95049-8). U of Wash Pr.

1958 Systems of Political Control & Bureaucracy in Human Societies. Ed. by Verne F. Ray. 1958. pap. 3.00x (ISBN 0-295-95050-1). U of Wash Pr.

1959 Intermediate Societies, Social Mobility & Communication. Ed. by Verne F. Ray. 1959. pap. 3.00x (ISBN 0-295-95051-X). U of Wash Pr.

1960 Windigo Psychosis: A Study of a Relationship Between Belief & Behavior Among the Indians of Northeastern Canada. Morton I. Teicher. Ed. by Verne F. Ray. 1960. pap. 3.50x (ISBN 0-295-73997-5). U of Wash Pr.

1961 Symposium: Patterns of Land Utilization & Other Papers. Ed. by Viola E. Garfield. 1961. pap. 3.50x (ISBN 0-295-73955-X). U of Wash Pr.



Now with just one source –
• search by series title or book title–
• have at your fingertips the latest price and publisher information
• know which titles are o.p.

SAMPLES OF SUBJECT INDEX TO SERIES

Thought [illegible]
Mediaeval Philosophical Texts in Translation

PHILOSOPHY, MODERN—20TH CENTURY
Contemporary Perspectives in Philosophy Series
Contemporary Philosophic Thought
Contemporary Philosophy Series

PHILOSOPHY, ORIENTAL
Asian Philosophical Studies
Society for Asian and Comparative Philosophy. Monograph of the Society for Asian and Comparative Philosophy

PSYCHOLOGY
Academic Press Series in Cognition and Perception
Addison-Wesley Series in Behavioral Science
Addison-Wesley Series in Psychology
Advances in Mental Science
Advances in Psychology
Alfred Adler Institute. AAI Monograph Series
Archives of Psychology
Basic Concept in Psychology
Basic Topics in Psychology
Batsford Psychology Series
[illegible] Psychology

BEST TITLES OF 1976

LJ's Small Press Roundup

Bill Katz

A CURSORY READING of 19th- or early 20th-Century American magazines indicates that in the past everyone seemed to write poetry, and if The New York Times Magazine (August 29, 1976) is to be believed, "half a million Americans write poetry today." The odd thing is that somewhere along the way the public stopped buying poetry. What was once a large item among trade publishers now constitutes a small fraction of their annual lists. The argument is that no one is interested in verse.

Having read more than a few books of bad to excellent quality for this fourth annual small press roundup, I can say that it is evident that more and more Americans are busy with words. At the same time their work will be purchased by no more than 200 or 300 readers. Even the proud university press poetry series are lucky to command sales of no more than 2000 copies per title, and of these about half will be purchased by libraries.

What is amazing is that for every book of poetry purchased there seems to be a hundred or even a thousand books planned by would-be writers. For example, Field (a little poetry magazine) received 10,500 poems from 1,875 contributors last year. The writers outnumber the magazine's 520 subscribers by more than three to one. Apparently everyone wants to get into the act, but no one wants to take a seat in the audience. This might be explained as still another indication of narcissism in American life. As for librarians, they only know that dust too often collects in the poetry section.

Well, this is by way of getting around to the awkward problem of urging libraries to buy small press books while admitting that few of them are likely to circulate widely. The problem of factoring-in small press books with circulation causes most of the difficulty. How about, then, eliminating circulation as a major factor?

Look at the situation in another way. There can be no argument that Americans love to write poetry, fiction, and just about anything else. If you believe in democratic participation in the arts, the picture isn't quite so dismal. Okay, so not many people read other people's words, but at least they are busy composing their own approach, not sitting slack-mouthed in front of a boob tube or planning how to construct a bomb. In the process of searching for inspiration, these same Americans are actively engaged in a highly personalized, intellectual process—a process which librarians profess to encourage. Librarians supply the writers with dictionaries, books on how to write, and often a quiet place and a desk to compose their thoughts. Libraries even provide directories which tell the writer where to send his or her masterpieces. Unfortunately, thanks to the circulation bugaboo, the librarians don't often go the next step and buy the poetry, either in small press publications or via the scores of little magazines which encourage writers.

It seems to me the librarian might carry through the essential writer's reference service by purchasing the output of the local and regional small presses. Put these titles near the reference works used by the writers. Suggest the publishers of these books might be likely sources for your writer to send his or her work. Augment the display by issuing directories of publishers with sample listings of their work. Admit that small press items or, for that matter, the trickle of poetry from trade and university presses do not push up circulation figures like best sellers. Admit, however, that the same small press can do much to encourage the expression of the American creative impulse. It is an impulse which should be championed in the same way and with the same fervor that media freaks turn the library into a film or television studio. This is not to belittle the wildly imaginative efforts of the media dervishes. On the contrary, it is only to remind some that there is more than one path to making the library (excuse the expression) meaningful in the community.

Bill Katz is Professor at the School of Library Science, State University of New York, Albany

In shutting down this annual plea, let me pass on a rather melancholy solution—by Stanley Kunitz—to the library's lack of interest in small presses. How, he asks poets, do you get libraries to buy your books? The answer is to badger the librarian. And if the title doesn't circulate? "Ask your friends to check them out. When the library staff sees the poetry books are being read, they'll order more." Librarians may not appreciate the artistic skill of the Kunitz attack, but it seems a fair tactic if the librarian is counting instead of thinking. (P.S. Further hints are given poets by Kunitz in Coda for April-May 1976.)

Reviews and bibliographies

Just as there is an increasing number of aspiring writers, an increasing number of reviews and bibliographies and directories help writers find publishers. They also assist the librarian to evaluate and discover worthwhile books. At the risk of repeating last year's list, let's consider the major services.

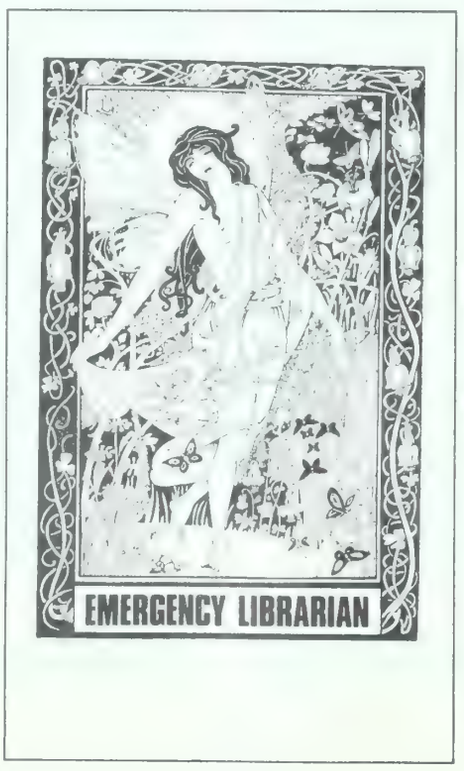
The single most useful news coverage of small presses is found in the official newsletter of the Committee of Small Magazine Editors and Publishers: COSMEP Newsletter (Monthly, $20). Ably edited by Richard Morris, the newsletter is a basic requirement for any library trying to keep up with small press publishing. The second required item: Coda (Poets & Writers, Monthly, $5). It runs to 35 or 40 pages and has become a valuable source of information for both writers and librarians.

Turning to directories, Len Fulton's Small Press Record, 5th ed. ($6.95) is considerably improved in that titles are now listed by author, with a title/publisher index. The combined CBI-American Book Publishing Record for the small presses has grown to over 200 pages. It is a must for libraries, as is Fulton's International Directory of Little Magazines and Small Presses ($6.95) and the ongoing monthly Small Press Review ($10). They are available from Fulton's Dustbooks.

How does the librarian keep up with the torrent of small press publications? The answer is via specialized reviews, as in Margins (Tom Montag, Monthly, $6), which often combines issues. Numbers 28 through 30, 1976, is a whopping 216 pages with a bonus section on Diane Wakoski. Also, Noel Peattie's Sipapu (Biannual, $2); Alternative Journalism Review, particularly for listings of radical papers; North East Rising Sun (Charles Plymell, Bimonthly, $8), excellent for notes on unusual small press items; Poetry Information (National Poetry Centre, Biannual, $8 for 4 issues), the source of English small press titles, as well as interviews, news items and about 100 pages of solid editorial matter; Alternative Press Index not only publishes the index, but occasional lists of publications.

Carll Tucker's "Alternate Currents" is a sometimes monthly review of small presses in The Village Voice, but apparently is more "sometimes" than regular. A pity because it is a much needed addition to the paper. On occasion Nancy Buckeye and Richard Centing in Serials Review (Quarterly, $25) consider small press publications. Books West (Monthly, $12), an alternative to the Eastern book establishment, frequently reviews small press titles. The Volume 2, No. 3, 1976 issue of Book Forum (Quarterly, $10) is devoted exclusively to contemporary creativity and the University press with a particular emphasis on poetry.

There is a special category of small press reviews which should interest the majority of librarians. These include sources of feminist publishing activities: Celeste West's Booklegger (Quarterly, $6) is the best all around magazine for small press feminist events, with its articles and the regular column "Reviews of the Independent Press." The Canadian rough equivalent with regular reviews is the Emergency Librarian (nine issues a year, $9). Outside the library sphere, one of the best new titles is Women Writing (Bimonthly, $3), which includes not only reviews, but news and notes on women writers and events.



Along with the development of reviews, there is a growing number of small press distributors who help to eliminate many of the headaches of ordering. These are listed at the end of this article.

To the books . . .

Turning now to the books, a few of the ground rules must be understood. All editions listed are in paperback, unless otherwise noted. Publishers and distributors are given at the end of the article. Most titles were published in 1976, although a few are from late 1975. Titles reviewed in the regular LJ columns are not included.

The selection represents books which seem of enough value and general interest to include in library collections. Despite an earnest effort to evaluate by artistic virtues and defects, the choice is essentially a personal one and represents titles I enjoyed reading—virtues, defects, and all. One more thing: the attempt to list as many worthwhile titles as possible sometimes results in a staccato description which may not do justice to the author. For that I apologize and only ask the reader to appreciate that space is limited.

Anthologies

Anthologies offer a cross section of poets and, to a degree, solve the problem of selection for libraries in which a tight budget forbids purchase of many individual titles. Ones not mentioned elsewhere in this roundup and which seem particularly valuable include None of the Above (Crossing, $4.95), a double bonus for libraries. The collection of work from "31 new poets of our times" features poets hovering around 30 years of age. The reference librarian's bonus: each entry includes a photograph and a short biographical sketch of the writer. Another good collection is issued by East River Anthology in Demilitarized Zones, Veterans after Vietnam ($2.95). Here is prose poetry, poems, art, and photography by 100 veterans who joined the peace movement, as well as "housewives who also came to feel that the struggle over this war made them veterans of it, too." War poetry is never easy to master, and there are numerous failures here, but enough successes make it an important title for libraries.

California Poets (Second Coming, $5.95) represents 72 poets and contains short biographical notes for all, including Josephine Miles, Philip Levine, Charles Bukowski, Ishmael Reed, A. D. Winans, and Gene Fowler. Two separates from the same press: Doug Flaherty's To Keep the Blood from Drowning ($2.95) and Jack Micheline's Last House in America ($2), both well worth considering to augment the anthology.

Unexpected (Otherworlds, $8) is a handsomely printed 250-page collection which includes the reproduction of a comic book, short stories, essays, and poetry from younger writers at all points in progress and the world. It is uneven, yet exciting for just that quality of the "unexpected."

Unexpected as it is unusual, The First Skin Around Me: Contemporary American Tribal Poetry (Territorial, $2) is the work of 25 Indian poets from and around the Dakotas. Much of the poetry concerns tribal people who are also "writing, interpreting, translating, and re-telling the mystery" of Indian life.

A self-descriptive anthology of midwestern verse, Indiana, Indiana (Sparrow Magazine, $2.95) is "about where we are, topic and topology, midwest, mid-heart." Maybe, but the ten contributors are usually involved with a wider landscape and a resulting universality, as the section titles "Cottonwood," "Osprey," and "Haiku" will indicate.

Finally, a Bicentennial salute to the Monroe County, Michigan library system for helping to produce Through Furrowed Fields, a collection of poetry from over 50 area writers. The poets reflect what many people in America now write and think about. What it sometimes lacks in style, the unpriced title makes up in honest content.

Feminist poets

A good approach to small press publications is for a library to build a separate feminist collection, particularly as a growing number of presses either concentrate in this area or devote a good part of their list to feminists. While not all of the poets in this section may properly be called feminists, many of the themes are of interest to feminists. The selection is admittedly erratic. Other women writers will be found in the regional sections. Still, to isolate here is to add one vote for libraries collecting small press feminist publications.

Beginning with the Western region, here are two anthologies—both of which include biographical notes. The first: One Step Closer (Pygmalion, $3.95) includes 16 "relatively unknown, beginning to write or beginning to be published" women concerned with "roles, images, symbols, and faces we have made for ourselves." Despite a few tumbles and falls, the majority of entries are, to quote editor Frances McConnel, keys "to the bricked room/I dare not enter." The second: New Poets Women (Les Femmes, $4.95). Editor Terry Wetherby again draws upon lesser known writers, although many of the close to 50 have published extensively in little magazines.

Individual works by women poets from Western publishers include Susan Fromberg Schaeffer's Alphabet for the Lost Years (Gallimaufry, $3.50), a series identified by letters of the alphabet. It's her best collection yet! Another entry from Gallimaufry is Olga Cabral's The Darkness in My Pockets ($2.50). Her poem "Occupation: Spinster" concerns Emily Dickinson and Victorian women and is reason enough to buy her collection.

The not too obvious connection between being a mother and a gardener is made convincingly in Connie Cox's Unhooked (Boondocks, $2.50), while Edith Snow in her Hold Your Hands to the Earth (Blue Oak, no price) offers 170 pages of poems and a personal note on what it means to farm. Born 1909, Snow is considerably more of this earth than other women represented here, and as Bill Hotchkiss notes in a short introduction she is "a remarkable writer, a master craftsman." Her work is particularly recommended for those who seek honest, graphic poetry. A somewhat similar down-to-basics approach with more self-conscious literary allusions is Georgian Tashjian's The Quiet Noise of Remembering (Altoan, hardbound, $4.95).

In In Dressing for the Part (Hearthstone, $3) Stella Worley opens "A Cluster of Stellas" with: "I knew one in first grade/ mush faced and stick./ She chewed up crayons/ and showed the class/ the rainbow in her mouth." That's introduction enough to a fresh viewpoint.

Ragnarok Press is best known for publishing Rochell Holt, but this year the essentially feminist press offers Isel Rivero's Night Rained Her ($7.50) with drawings by Carol Henderson. The Sappho theme develops into a sensuous, intellectual poem.

Blurbs are to be trusted no more than political promises, although in the case of Arlene Stone's poetry the praise given her by Anne Sexton, Helen Vendler, and Elizabeth Bartlett seems more than justified. She writes about everything from a pickle jar to an older man. Her latest is The Image Maker (Plowshare, $3.95).

Glass Bell, Detroit's poetry press for women headed by librarian-poet Margaret Kaminski, continues to issue fine feminist poetry, like Judith McCombs's Sisters and Other Selves ($2). The author just happens to be the co-founder of Moving Out, a major feminist literary arts magazine.

When we turn from Western to Eastern publishers, a plug for the Feminist Press is in order. Its attention to education and children has made it a major voice in the small press world. Let me recommend a much needed new study of one of America's first little magazine editors, Margaret Fuller. It's The Women and the Myth, by Bell G. Chevingny (hardbound, $6.50).

Another important feminist publisher, Alice James Books, is "a writer's cooperative with an emphasis on poetry by women." Here "cooperative" means just that, for according to Betty Sholl, "Women whose manuscripts we accept join the cooperative and share with us the work of book production, distribution, and all decisions concerning the press." Among their better 1976 titles, the librarian should consider 33, a poem by Margaret Fletcher; Three Some Poems, a collection from Jeannie Dobbs, Kindereth Gensler, and Elizabeth Knies; and Jean Pedrick's Pride & Splendor. The three books are half of six selections which may be subscribed to in the 1976 "third series" at $21, or at $3.50 each. All help to "establish a woman's voice, a woman's definitions," and in an exceptionally professional and honest way.

Moving on to other presses, consider the preface to Silhouettes of Woman (Philmer, no price given). Phyllis Shanken writes: "(Women) sometimes have thoughts that remain camouflaged in everyday disguises . . . Many of us believe we are the only ones alive who have felt alone or confused with such feelings." Her 30-some poems and prose pieces tear aside the camouflage in every area from pregnancy to waiting out the day's clock.

A surrealist, Bernadette Mayer goes from describing "Corn" to cataloging a "Family." After 128 poems she ends with "The Way To Keep Going to Antarctica." Her images and fantasies are in Poetry (Kulchur, $3.50). Laura Wallace in The Hour between Dog & Wolf (New Poets Series, $1.50) is quite as daring as she rushes to everyday experience ("Eating Oysters on the Shore"), only to find that the common events trigger physical and emotional explosions. On a more familiar ironic track, Joan Larkin writes about Housework (Out & Out, $1.50), with such cautions as: "The plainest everyday things/ are dangerous;/ the clear drip of the faucet/ the fire under the kettle/ the hum of the refrigerator/ . . . There have been many before you./ Few have come back." It is completed with home image paintings by Mimi Weisbond.

Lyn Lifshin in Shaker House Poems (Sagarin, $3) employs economical sketches in her investigation of the equally sparse life style of her subjects, many of whom are women on another path to survival. A more stringent, yet always controlled voice is that of Frannie Lindsay, whose Refusal To Break (Stone Soup, $1) gives witness to considerable feminine courage in the face of disaster.

Occasionally a reader comes across someone like Jim Hall, whose The Lady from the Green Hills (Three Rivers, $2.95) explores exploitation of women—as well as men—in an America "That sells Chevrolets/ surges the Dow."

Fiction

If trade publishers avoid poetry, they are also shying away from fiction, particularly experimental fiction. Fortunately, the small presses are at least taking up some of the slack, and what follows is only an indication of their efforts.

A good title from this year's group is And Now We'll Play a Man's Game, by Dean Phelps (Holmgangers, $3.95). The collection of short stories is set in Montana and is in the old-fashioned Western tradition. It employs superb dialogue and good plotting. Possibly more representative of small press fiction is Eric Felderman's Garden Street (Holmangers, $2.95), which concerns the wanderings of a boy/man in search of "perfect happiness." Two Stories by John A. Lukas (Manhole, $2) is equally subjective, although with more plot.

A reminder of a novel much reviewed from The New York Times to Library Journal (not to mention a plug by Mrs. Ernest Hemingway): John Fairfield's David Johnson Passed Through Here (Conservatory, $3.95). If not quite an Augie March, it is in the same genre, and almost as well written.

"Names help" department: Ishmael Reed is the editor of Yardbird Wing Editions and claims that John Hawkes praises James Girard's first short novel Changing All Those Changes ($3.95), while Wallace Stegner comes to the support of William Lawson's 275-page novel Zeppelin Coming Down ($5.50). Girard's vision of youth is up to the Hawkes-Reed kudos; in fact it's a real find. No fiction slough either, Lawson's trip with an American Indian sculptor is a wild, gripping yarn.

The twilight between science fiction and the subconscious nightmare is handled generally well and sometimes with breathtaking skill by Bruce Boston in Jackbird: Tales of Illusion & Identity (Berkeley Poets' Workshop, $2). From the same press, Charles Entrekin combines poetry and fiction in All Pieces of Legacy ($2.50).

December Press continues a fine record for experimental yet highly readable short stories in John Bennett's The Night of the Great Butcher, which sells for $4. (Bennett and his Vagabond Press are noticed elsewhere in this summary.) In these stories he's a poor man's Isherwood flying through Munich (and New Orleans) with an extravagant cast of drinking/writing characters.

The computer is the character in a feminist novel by Carole Spearin. Happening in Travel On (Daughters, $4) concerns a 30-year-old computer programmer and the women about her; it includes creditable portraits of lesbians. The plot is thin, but forget it. The language patterns are innovative and true, as is the basic thematic material.

M. D. Elevitch's Americans at Home (First Person, $3.50) is a short, impressionistic novel by an experimental writer whose vehicle is almost entirely dialogue. The scene is a vast housing estate in Arizona. The result is a retake of The Hucksters viewed through a poet's eyes, with just enough plot to guarantee holding your attention. Another novel by an equally experienced writer is Roberta Kalechofsky's Orestes in Progress (Micah, $4.44). The inner reflections of a latter day Orestes matched against a Leopold Bloom character carry the reader through the carefully plotted tale of the "post-holocaust generation." The novel is a find for the serious reader.

The East

Let us now consider the small presses on a regional basis. While not an entirely satisfactory approach, it at least offers the librarian an opportunity to select local or regional titles. A suitable beginning is Never Stop Dancing (Greenfield Review, $1). "What happened to the American dream," is the rhetorical question put by Toni Zimmerman. In 33 pages the query is answered by everyone from "The black girl/in the padded cell . . ." to the hollow man (or woman) made up of "nothing but cloth and cotton/button eyes/ sewed on with/loose/stitches." It's a gallery of chills. In another excursion, Guy Beining & Paul Grillo's Manhattan Spiritual (Happenstance, $2) offers pictures from an urban exhibit, with refreshing dreamlike, surrealistic qualities.

Not a few librarians write or issue small press items, for example, William L. Coakley, poet and managing editor, who is with The New York Public Library. His Helikon Press brought out a paperback edition of Helen Adam's Selected Poems & Ballads in late 1975, "and went right out of stock." A more "solid all cloth second printing was issued in February 1976," for $7. The Scots balladmaker claims awards and praise from such as W. H. Auden, Robert Duncan, and Denise Levertov—reason enough to support my humble recommendation.

Graphics play an important role in many small press books. For example, there is an oversize book of pen drawings and poems by Ilse Bing, Numbers in Images (Ilkon, hardbound $9.95), which is summed up by the blurb: "An avant-garde combination of design and idea enabling readers to think, dream, and meditate in search of their own world of numbers." Another art entry, sans poetry, is Woodcuts, by Nicholas Sperakis (Smyrna, $3.95). The collection of reproductions, sometimes much reduced, is introduced by Raphael Soyer. A less conventional approach than either of these two is Paul Zelevansky's The Book of Takes (Zartscorp, hardbound, $12), 35 pages of poetry which is an effort to conform the verbal and the visual in a single pattern.

Back in 1971 Artists and Alchemists issued Not Poems by Adele Aldridge, and in 1976 the third edition of the colorful single page pattern/word painting is out again—this time with almost twice the number of entries—at $4.95. While lacking much subtlety, it is a visual treat.

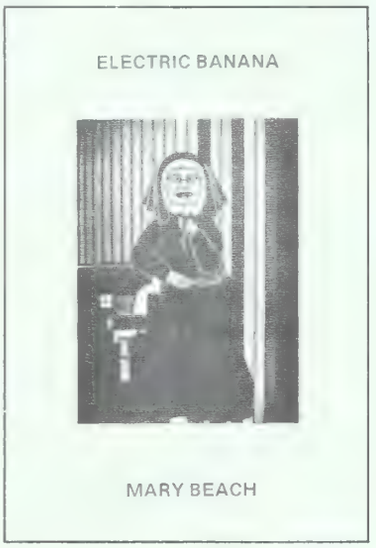
A treat of another sort is offered by Gil Williams of the Bellevue Press and Patricia Wilcox of the Iris Press, who combine forces to issue a joint catalog. They share the same affection for fine press work and innovative poetry. The point is made in the Bellevue Press publication of John Yau's Crossing Canal Street ($4). Robert Kelly observes that Yau is in the tradition of Sidney in that the young poet moves "with his ears and hears with his eyes." My favorite from Iris: John Vernon's Ann ($3), who is subject, object, and witness of a conversation with a curtained world.

Elizabeth Press is characterized by both fine poets and handsome, limited editions produced by Martino Mardersteig and the Stamperia Valdonega of Verona. Cid Corman and Ted Enslin represent a few of the outstanding voices. Enslin's Papers ($8) includes some 50 poems with such titles as "A Paper for K. W. who said: 'Let me alone, I have funerals to attend.' " The people are identified only by initials, usually by quotes. Guessing game of the year: who are "these friends"? Corman has edited poems of the remarkable Lorine Niedecker in Blue Chicory ($8). Her last recorded words beautifully sum up her work: "I think lines of poetry that I might use—all day long and even in the night."

The myth that only beginners are to be found in small press publications is just that, as witnessed by many of the poets cataloged here and by such presses as Dolphin Editions, which this year issued Pulitzer Prize winner Alan Dugan's Sequences ($2.50). Other Dolphin writers include Jay Boggis, John Batki, and Paul Hannigan. Their sometimes illustrated, always nicely produced chapbooks are a delight.

Moving from commercial to small presses and back again is becoming more and more usual for authors as the trade publishers tighten up on their budgets. A good example is Kenneth Pitchford, whose The Contraband Poems comes from Templar ($2.95), but who has published previously with Scribner, Atlantic, and Lippincott.

Offset 20- to 40-page chapbooks, usually produced from typescript, may not have the esthetic appearance of many of the titles discussed here, but they do have the wham of innovation. Examples are two chapbooks at $1 each from Cross Country: Jim Mele's An Oracle of Love and Ken Norris's Under the Skin. The writers are both autobiographical oracles with unique visions.



Charles and Pamela Plymell's Cherry Valley chapbooks continue to take the point position in the 1970s avant garde. Of particular note is a late 1975 entry, The Electric Banana ($1.50) from Mary Beach. The 40-page prose poem is, as Burroughs claims, "a unique auditory experience approaching the actual found sounds of language," especially the noises rising from cesspools.

Moving from Europe to Mexico, consider Keeping Time (Mulch, $3.95). Here Paul Pines translates the Chronicles of Chec-Xulab-Chen, "the only extant Mayan account of the Spanish conquest of Yucatan." The 20-page translation makes this a "must" for many libraries, as do Pine's imaginative entries.

Looking for restful bucolic images? The answer, if you fancy New England's birch and pine, is Michael McMahon's A Day's Work (Puckerbrush, $1.70). Equally engaging verse about everyday activities comes from Elden and Steve Miller, publishers and authors of their own titles. A typical example is Frost Dragons (Seahouses, $2) notable for the quiet tone as well as for the traditional mimeo production.

Birth dates often define the small press contributors. The take-off point is the late 1930s, the early 1940s, at least for the many contributors to the carefully printed Sun books. Ron Padgett, author of Toujours l'amour, was born in 1942; Michael O'Brien, Blue Springs/poems, was born in 1939; Philip Lopate, The Daily Round, was born in 1943. All are veterans of earlier small magazine or book publication, and all, in their various approaches, are representative of the best in poetry.

Still, as soon as one has a single definition of the small press isolated, along comes someone like C. W. Truesdale, who in Doctor Vertigo (Wyrd, $2.50) proves there's nothing like a bit of age and experience to widen poetic horizons. For the past ten years his collections have established him as a leading American poet. And while hardly tottering on the grave's edge, he does seem to have a few white hairs.

Last year there was deserved praise for poet Albert Goldbarth. This year the same applause is delivered for an earlier title, Opticks, issued in 1974 at $3.75 by Seven Woods Press. George Koppelman, of the press, points out that LJ (June 1, 1976, p. 1291) ran a highly favorable review of another Seven Woods publication, William Doreski's The Testament of Israel Potter ($4.50).

Constructing a hero in a way which recalls Ed Dorn's Gunslinger saga, Charles Boer picks up on the life of William Quantrill of Civil War Kansas terror. His Varmit Q (Swallow, $3.50) is a violent yet dispassionate piece in the oral tradition.

Clayton Eshleman's Caterpillar magazine is now a much sought after collector's item, and so should be his poetry. An example of some of his latest and best is Realignment (Treacle, $3.50), a winning group of love poems. A conversation of another sort covers the Spring of 1971 to the Winter of 1973. Here John Humphrey in The Relearning (Hellcoal, $2.50) talks about his family, his work, and what it means to be constantly relearning the lessons of life.

Hard-edged songs of protest make up the fiber of two works from Home Planet, Richard Davidson's Glass Roads ($1.75) and Irving Stettner's On the Second Avenue Patrol ($2.95). The poets are veterans of New York City. Stettner looks at the "Big Apple" as a 50-year-old self-taught poet with laughter in his song. Davidson's "The Death of a Poet," a tribute to Hart Crane, is one of the finest single poems of this year.

Stanley Berne and Arlene Zekowski are familiar to these roundups as prolific writers of everything from poetry to short stories, but more particularly essays and books on linguistics and language. It's difficult to sum up the theme of Zekowski's Image Breaking Images or Berne's Future Language, although both are polemical tracts dedicated to proving that McLuhan is wrong in declaring books are at an end. "Books are not at an end. It is language that has to be changed, and we have been doing this through 25 years of our neo-narrative," writes Zekowski. These are major works which, fortunately, are gaining attention through wide distribution by Horizon Press (a far from small press publisher) at $4.95 each.

Horizon also distributes the poetry of the Inwood Press. The arresting titles (at $2.50 each) from the publishing cooperative for 1976 include: Lies and Stories, by Glenda Adams, a frequent contributor to MS, Village Voice, etc.; Mel Konner's Nonrequiem (poems whose range extends from the Smoky Mountains to Africa); and Steven Schrader's Crime of Passion (bizarre short stories from a contributor to Harper's and Screw as well as Best Science Fiction Stories).

Equally important are the $3.50 titles from Ithaca House, by now a member of the inner circle of reliable long-lived small presses. Averaging ten or 12 books a year, Ithaca strikes a balance between beginners and better established poets. Almost all writers show an impressive amount of publishing in equally impressive little magazines. Three good choices for 1976 are Patricia Goedicke's For the Four Corners, championed by Erica Jong; Richard McCann's Dream of the Traveler, a first collection deserving kudos; and Lisa Steinman's Lost Poems, pastoral protests and pictures of a woman in a landscape.

New Rivers is another of the small presses which has developed a long list over the years. In one season it publishes a dozen or more neatly printed titles, often with photographs or drawings. For example, Neil Greenberg's line drawings support D. Clinton's The Conquistador Dog Texts ($3), an improvisation of the histories and songs from a Mayan manuscript which successfully develops into a "jazz prose-poem meso-American history piece." Then there is Tristan Tzara's First Poems ($2.50), ably translated by Michael Impey and Brian Swann, and of considerable interest to anyone who saw Tzara described by Joyce as "an over excited little man" in Tom Stoppard's Travesties. Another New Rivers title Tristan surely would have appreciated is White Screen ($2.50), by John Bennett. The book ends by dissolving into a blank TV screen.

Jonathan Williams' Jargon Society Press is by now a 25-year institution, taking its place with the giants in the history of the small press movement. Over the years Williams has published some of the finest American innovative poetry, much of which has become part of the 20th-Century tradition. This year's best: Ronald Johnson's Eyes & Objects ($4), a "dance of one or two words" which both typographically and intuitively celebrates art from still-life to moving pictures. Then there is Simon Cutts's Quelques Pianos ($3), which takes a similar tack in "a piano of print/shapes/the white air/the gesture/of letters. We cannot hear." Paul Metcalf's The Middle Passage ($5) is built around three themes (dutifully supported by bibliography): the Luddites, slavery, and whaling.

Midwest and South

A suitable title for this next section is In Each to His Own Ground, by John Wade (Juniper, $3.95). The poet calls up everyday confrontations with an imagery which makes almost all of them, even a description of a penguin, "typical" to the reader's experience. There was no penguin visible in this fall's Morgan Library exhibit of small press progenitor William Morris. But just about everything else of imaginative quality was there, and there is no question Morris influenced us all. At least he exercised a direct influence on Richard B. Mathews of the Konglomerati Press, who offers an attractive post-Morris book, Destroy All Monsters, by F. A. Nettlebeck ($3).

With an address "where the Arctic Ocean begins," Northwoods Press has developed a good list of titles which reflect the area—for example, an illustrated history of the Bigfork trail by Patricia E. Navratil, Trails through the Northwoods, the first in a series.

Two unpriced chapbooks from Kent Mahan's Newedi Press are Genealogy by Judith Dunaway, and Mark Chadwick's Into the Icehouse. One of Dunaway's poems should delight librarians. Called "Occupational Hazard," it begins: "It happened so fast—/my head caught between/the hard covers of the/unabridged American Heritage."

The winner of the 1975 P.E.N. writer's award for prisoner's poetry, Michael Hogan has a fascinating short collection in If You Ever Get There, Think of Me (Emerald City, $1.50). As Richard Shelton points out, Hogan's poems are essentially optimistic in a time when those on the other side of the walls are filled "with frustration and despair."

Continuing fine work of previous years, John Judson and the Center for Contemporary Poetry in Wisconsin this year chose Harley Elliott's and Ted Kooser's poems and essays for Voyages to the Inland Sea No. 6, an ongoing series extremely valuable for bibliographies.

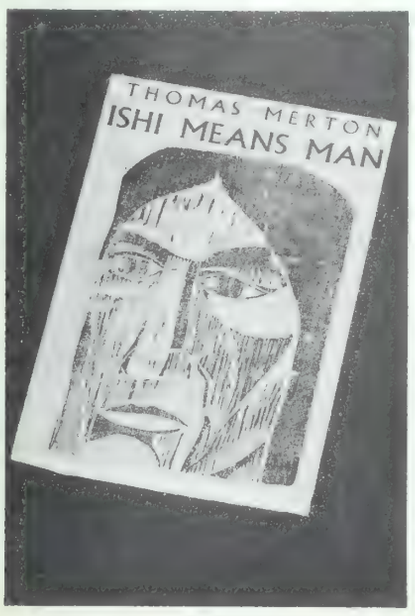
Photography buffs attention: Cissy Lacks' Downtown Lady (Beanie, no price) is a combination 16-page poem and candid shots of an older downtown lady. An equally winning combination is in "How To Write a Poem about the Desert," which opens Jefferson Carter's Taking Chances (Desert First, $2.50). He sets the tone for a rough ride "where the barrel cactus glow dark blue," to quote another poem. Susan North's All That Is Left from the same publisher ($2.50) transcends the Arizona scene, yet seems most successful when she relates to local landmarks, from a prison to a tavern to home.

Jonis Agee's Houses (Truck, $4.95) is punctuated with mid-1920s photographs of familial places. The six sections are equally infiltrated by notes, letters, and obituaries. The idea: "To make a fact personal/ make it more than a mirror/ so both of you come out alive." This triumph deserves wider readership.

Haiku and titles such as "Christmas in Santa Fe" and "Longing for Spring" indicate the link to nature and the Southwest found in Clare Bloom's Dreams and Memories (Sunstone, $1.95). It's a totally satisfying collection, as is that of Vincent B. Price from the same press. His Semblances 1962-1971 ($4.95), however, range over the whole landscape of American life with ironical, telling humor.

In Small Change (Wings, $3) veteran poet Vassar Miller gives 16 of her best to a press operated by Joe Lomax, nephew of the original folk song collector and bard, Alan Lomax. The best of a fine collection is "Memento Mori," a tribute to Anne Sexton.

Over the years Allan Brilliant and Teo Savory's Unicorn Press has flamed bright in the small press world, both for quality of format and selection (see their tenth anniversary catalog). Among the impressive 1976 entries is Thomas Merton's Ishi Means Man ($4). This is a reprint of essays from The Catholic Worker and concerns the literature, plight, and spirit of the New Mexican Indians. Not only is this a moving and sensitive piece of writing, it is a profound commentary on American life. For sheer beauty of content and form try Zen Poems ($5), the combined genius of Vo-Dinh (artist) and Nhat Hahn (poet), as well as Teo Savory (translation).



Directed by Allan and Cinda Kornblum, the Toothpaste Press of Iowa issues a carefully selected, carefully printed series of chapbooks each year. The best of 1976 is John Sjoberg's Hazel ($4). The poet is a legend in his own time in that he is the leader of the Iowa City Actualists, which grew out of the legendary University of Iowa Writer's Workshop. Another from Toothpaste is Steve Levine's A Blue Tongue, which concerns Babe Ruth, Chicago, and friends.

Finally, a high recommendation is warranted by Gus Blaisdell's Dented Fenders (Tribal, $3). This book comes ten years after Howard McCord's press issued Blaisdell's first, and is a decade's collection of only about 30 poems.

The West

In a brief introduction to the Selected Poems (Grey Fox, $2.75) of Lew Welch we have this from Gary Snyder: "(Lew) drank far too much, had a way with guns, and took one with him into the woods, never to be seen again, in May of 1971." This one-line obituary serves to preface humorous, bizarre, yet always lyrical poems from a man who died too soon.

It takes no Ibsen to find "ghosts" in small presses; anyone who has been delighted, insulted, and puzzled by the late Kenneth Patchen will take to Tim Hildebrand. His Rotwang or The Delirious Precision of Dreams (Blue Wind, $3.95) opens by introducing the protagonist. "Rotwang? Sure I know him. Was his room-mate in school . . . I remember he used to sit in the bathtub pretending he was from Outer Space." By the time you're done the only outer space is America. The Blue Wind Press continues to challenge the universe in a quite special, zany way.

John Bennett's Vagabond Press out of Ellensburg, Washington continues to issue the true offset small press chapbooks. What they lack in typography they make up in modest price ($1 each) and innovative poetry. Of note are T. L. Kryss's Music in the Winepress Parrots in the Flames, A. M. Ingram's Blue Horses, and Kent Taylor's Driving Like the Sun.

Sometimes it is not easy to separate the true small press from the larger commercial venture, and the Unity Press straddles the line with two titles: a practical, highly informative and intelligent manual on meditation by Joseph Goldstein, The Experience of Insight ($3.95), and an oversized Shoes for Free People, by David and Inger Runk ($3.95), which is complete with drawings on how to make your own shoes. The titles are closely related and equally suitable for libraries. Another California press offers insight into telepathy and "other paranormal experiences." This is James Donahoe's Dream Reality (Bench, $3.50), a type of manual on how to develop "inner abilities." A friend of mine who is less skeptical than I claims Donahoe knows of what he writes, and as the writing is clear, who am I to scoff?

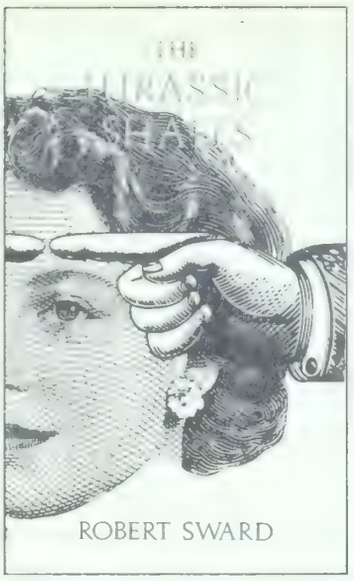
Typographically reminiscent of the well-known Black Sparrow Press, the hand-printed publications of Scott Walker's Graywolf Press are handsome titles, available in both hardbound and paper. Tess Gallagher's Instruction to the Double ($4 and $15) deserves this treatment, for her poems are, as Stanley Kunitz points out: "vivid and dramatic" and cover a wide range of interests, always with amazing accuracy of imagery. Another plus, too, for Inner Weather, by Denis Johnson ($3.50 and $15), who moves effectively from Los Angeles supermarkets to backstretches of the imagination.

Another award winner for both format and content is Within the Rose, a poem by Hunce Voelcker with drawings and calligraphy (Panjandrum, $3.50). The mystic muse sometimes slips on phrasing, but he is saved by the quiet drawings.

The hand-sized, winning chapbooks from Isthmus continue to delight. Astralphonic Voices by Davide ($2.50) sets just the right surrealistic tone, as does James Penzi's Salt Fever ($2). Capra Press is more modes with illustrations, although Raymond Carver's At Night the Salmon Move ($3.75) is nicely produced. Carver's environment is along the Columbia River. At the other side of the country, Sand Dollar is to be thanked for Theodore Enslin's The July Book ($3.50), a short, sometime journal of life in Maine by a poet with a clear sense of himself and the land.

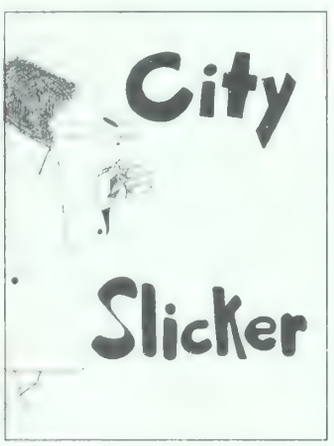
Patch Work (Rogue, no price), a 62-page salute to early settlers of Josephine County, Oregon, fits right in here, particularly as it was put together after research and interviews by students of the Rogue Community College. Along the order of Foxfire, it's nicely illustrated, too.

Stained Glass from Mind to Light (Mattole Press, $13.95) is a unique small press art book by an expert on the subject, Narcissus Quagliata. Both a "how-to-do-it" and a catalog, the 250 pages include photographs (some in color) on almost every page. The short text presupposes some knowledge and outside guidance.



Constant revision is the pen tic of many poets, including Philip Whalen, who explains that an important section in his latest collection from Four Seasons, The Kindness of Strangers, Poems 1969-1974 ($3) has been cut and revised since its first appearance in 1972. Whalen is too well known to need a plug here.

Out of Oregon: Now, a Narrative Document, by Norman Solomon (Out of the Ashes, $1), concerns Gosper of "twenty-four years in the United States," and what he makes of it all in American cities. The 60-page prose vision of contemporary society generally rings true, too true.



Gene Fowler updates his 1971 collected poems with Fires, 1963-1976 (Thorp Springs, $4), giving readers the best of one of America's remarkable poets. In a perceptive introduction, Paul Foreman discusses Fowler's responses to five years in prison and how he has developed a unique oral quality and sense of onomatopoeia in his verse. Two more Thorp Springs titles of quality are David Oliphant's Lines & Mounds ($3) and Leonar Nathan's The Likeness, Poems Out of India ($3.50).

No annual roundup of Western presses would be complete without mention of George Hitchcock's Kayak Press, still a leader in combining graphics with startling poems. His titles ($2 each) are cunning traps for those who misunderstand the employment of tragedy and laughter. The best this year are William Harmon's The Intussusception of Miss Mary America, Robin Magowan's Looking for Binoculars, and Linda Lappins' Wintering with the Abominable Snowman (the only one lacking illustrations). Also, Hitchcock offers his own The Counterfeit Rose, a three-act baroque comedy which ends with Casanova explaining the moral and the title.

Canada

Among the best known small presses in Canada, Coach House earned its reputation as much for the quality of format as content. A good example is Robert Sward's The Jurassic Shales ($4), which is a striking first novel. For a satisfactory flight among six young Canadian poets, let me recommend the apt title Now We Are Six ($5.50) from the same press.

On the other side of Canada, another superior publisher is the Victoria Soft Press. Its Cheers for Muktananda ($4.95), edited by the aforementioned Sward, includes 230 small photographs and a variety of poetry, with a central theme built around an interview with an Indian Siddha. Still another British Columbia entry comes from the Sono Niss Press. It has published a number of Canadian poets, from Frederick Candelaria to Leona Gom. This year the best entries are John Baglow's Emergency Measures (no price) and Eugene McNamara's Salt ($5.95), a collection of short stories or brief sketches which move confidently through all states of society.

Containing half dozen Pinter-like short stories by Graham Jackson, Gardens (Catalyst, $3.95) digs up dialogue which explains what is going on with gay liberation and transcends the explanations. The press, by the way, "is especially committed to work by young Canadian writers and to gay writing."

Elsewhere in Canada, Stanley Cooperman's Canadian Gothic (Intermedia, no price) is an exuberant gathering of poetry which has appeared in scores of little magazines. And in Howlgate Fugues (Applegarth, $4.95), poet John Tyndall and artist Mike Hannay join forces to present a surrealistic pattern of poetry and art. If sometimes the collages overshadow the poems, each page is nevertheless an adventure.

Valley Press offers a wide variety of books such as John B. Lee's Poems Only a Dog Could Love ($3.95). The title has fine illustrations by Judith K. Stenn. In her new offering, In Praise of Old Women ($2.95), controversial poet Marya Fiamengo considers another aspect of the feminist scene. The handsome book is dedicated, by the way, "to all those who struggle against the Americanization of Canada."

Here and there

Among self-publishers is William Oandasan of A Press, who publishes his own quite fine haiku verse in Earth & Sky ($1), five pages of small gems. Also, Spider Bite and Other Poems, by Charles Krouse (Windmill, no price), is valuable as much for the individualized view of the world, as for the Michigan world it indicates. T. J. Johnson's Life's Meaning (Author, $1) makes up in intensity what it may lack in style. Leonard Palmer's City Slicker—Four Tales of the Low Life (City Slicker, $1) is the machismo Bukowski-Miller mix with sometimes some of the flare.

Never too young department: now in her 77th year, Frances Melamed has written, with "the aid of a Russian-English dictionary and thesaurus," Janova (from the press of the same title; hardbound, $10). Tracing six years of exile in Russia, the Jewish Lithuanian writer's short, declarative sentences and dialogue put to shame many professionals. An offbeat, highly recommended true story.

Winning self-blurb of the year comes from Roger Pfingston's Stoutes Creek Road (Raintree, $2): "His real life/ was eating spiders/ in the livingroom at dusk. . . ." Macabre is too weak a descriptor for this 20-page view from an Indiana creek road.

Full size (5" x 6") reproductions of original ball-point drawings on some 20 separate cards, complete with poems, win the prize for best art work of this year. Sputterance (Curveship, no price) is by Mark Smith, and is reminiscent of Henry Moore's work.

Publishers who wish to enter titles for the next annual roundup should send them directly to Bill Katz, Library School, State University of New York, 1400 Washington Ave., Albany, N.Y. 12222. This roundup is independent of regular reviews in Library Journal, and those wishing to be considered by LJ should continue to send titles to the LJ book review editor.

Publishers

A Press Ltd., Box 311, Laguna, N.M. 87026
Alice James Books, 138 Mt. Auburn St., Cambridge, Mass. 02138
Alternative Journalism Review, Box 26, Village Sta., New York, N.Y. 10014
Alternative Press Index, P.O. Box 7209, Baltimore, Md., 21218
Altoan Pr., 654 Gilman St., Palo Alto, Calif. 94302
Applegarth Follies, Box 40, Sta. B., London, Canada N6A 4V3
Artists & Alchemists Pubs., 31 Chapel La., Riverside, Conn. 06878
Beanie Bks., c/o Lacks, 8571 Wyndhurst, St. Louis, Mo. 63134
Bellevue Pr., 60 Schubert St., Binghamton, N.Y. 13905
Bench Pr., P.O. Box 24635, Oakland, Calif. 94623
Berkeley Poets' Workshop & Press, P.O. Box 459, Berkeley, Calif. 94701
Blue Oak Pr., Rt. 1, Box 970-9, Newcastle, Calif. 95658
Blue Wind Pr., 820 Miramar, Berkeley, Calif. 94707
Book Forum, Hudson River Pr., Rhinecliff, N.Y.
Booklegger, 555 29th St., San Francisco, Calif. 94131
Books West, 2073 Outpost Dr., Los Angeles, Calif. 90068
Boondocks Pr., 4045-33rd St., #7, San Diego, Calif. 92104
Capra Pr., 631 State St., Santa Barbara, Calif. 93101
Catalyst, 315 Blantyre Ave., Scarborough, Ontario, Canada
Center for Contemporary Poetry, Murphy Library, University of Wisconsin-La Crosse, Wis. 54601
Cherry Valley Editions, Box 303, Cherry Valley, N.Y. 13320
City Slicker Pr., 2325 52nd St., Kenosha, Wis. 53140
Coach House Pr., 401 (rear) Huron St., Toronto, Canada
Committee of Small Magazine Editors and Publishers (COSMEP), P.O. Box 703, San Francisco, Calif. 94101
Conservatory Pr., Box 732, Mendocino, Calif. 95460
Cross Country Pr., P.O. Box 21081, Woodhaven, N.Y. 11421
Crossing Pr., Trumansburg, N.Y. 14886
Curveship Pr., St. Andrews Presbyterian College, Laurinburg, N.C.
Daughters Inc., Plainfield, Vt.
December Pr., 4 E. Huron, Chicago, Ill. 60611
Desert First Works, 3251 E. Broadway, Tucson, Ariz. 85716
Dolphin Editions, P.O. Box 313, Cambridge, Mass. 02138
Dustbooks, P.O. Box 1056, Paradise, Calif. 95969
East River Anthology, 114 N. 6th St., Perkasie, Pa. 18944
Elizabeth Pr., 102 Van Etten Blvd., New Rochelle, N.Y. 10804
Emerald City Pr., 107 W. 7th St., Tempe, Ariz. 85281
Emergency Librarian, 697 Wellington Crescent, Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada
Feminist Pr., Box 334, Old Westbury, N.Y. 11568
First Person, Box 604, Palisades, N.Y. 10964
Four Seasons Foundation, P.O. Box 159, Bolinas, Calif. 94924
Gallimaufry, 359 Frederick, San Francisco, Calif. 94117
Glass Bell Pr., 242 Ashland, Detroit, Mich. 48215
Graywolf Pr., P.O. Box 142, Port Townsend, Wash. 98368
Greenfield Review Pr., Greenfield Center, N.Y. 12833
Grey Fox Pr., P.O. Box 159, Bolinas, Calif. 94924
Happenstance Books, c/o Guy R. Benning, 11 Prospect Pl., Brooklyn, N.Y. 11217
Hearthstone Pr., 708 Inglewood Dr., Broderick, Calif. 95695
Helikon Pr., 2R, 120 W. 71st St., New York, N.Y. 10023
Hellcoal Pr., Brown University, Student Activities Office, Box 4, Providence, R.I. 02912
Holmgangers Pr., 22 Ardith La., Alamo, Calif. 94507
Home Planet Pubs., P.O. Box 415, Peter Stuyvesant Sta., New York, N.Y. 10009
Horizon Pr., 156 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y. 10010
Ilkon Pr., 210 Riverside Dr., New York, N.Y. 10025
Intermedia, Box 3294, Vancouver, B.C., Canada
Inwood Pr., 128 Post Ave., New York, N.Y. 10034
Iris Pr., 27 Chestnut St., Binghamton, N.Y. 13905
Isthmus Pr., P.O. Box 6877, San Francisco, Calif. 94101
Ithaca House, 108 N. Plain St., Ithaca, N.Y. 14850
Janova Pr., 3833 Barker Rd., Cincinnati, Ohio 45229
Jargon Society, dist. by The Book Organization, Elm St., Millerton, N.Y. 12546
T. J. Johnson, Box 113, Estherville, Iowa 51334
Juniper Pr., 1310 Shorewood Dr., La Crosse, Wis. 54601
Kayak, 325 Ocean View Ave., Santa Cruz, Calif. 95062
Konglomerati Pr., 5719 29th Ave., Gulfport, Fla. 33707
Kulchur Foundation, 888 Park Ave., New York, N.Y. 10021
Les Femmes Publishing, 231 Adrian Rd., Millbrae, Calif. 94030
Manhole Pubs., P.O. Box 91, Davis, Calif. 95616
Mattole Pr., P.O. Box 22324, San Francisco, Calif. 94122
Micah Pubs., 255 Humphrey St., Marblehead, Mass. 01945
Tom Montag, 2912 N. Hackett, Milwaukee, Wis. 53211
Mulch Pr., P.O. Box 598, Northampton, Mass. 01060
National Poetry Centre, 21 Earls Court Sq., London, SW5, England
Newedi Pr., Dept. of English, Bowling Green State Univ., Bowling Green, Ohio 43403
New Poets Series, 541 Piccadilly Rd., Baltimore, Md. 21204
New Rivers Pr., P.O. Box 578, Cathedral Sta., New York, N.Y. 10025
Northwoods Pr., Box 24, Bigfork, Minn. 56628
Otherworlds Media, 1394 Frank St., Honolulu, Hawaii 96816
Out & Out Bks., 44 Seventh Ave., Brooklyn, N.Y. 11217
Out of the Ashes Pr., P.O. Box 42384, Portland, Ore. 97242
Panjandrum Pr., 99 Sanchez St., San Francisco, Calif. 94114
Noel Peattie, Rt. 1, Box 216, Winters, Calif. 95695
Philmer Enterprises, 617 Wayfield Rd., Wynnewood, Pa. 19096
Plowshare Pr., Cambridge, Mass.
Charles Plymell, 1416 W. Mt. Royal Ave., Baltimore, Md. 21217
Poets & Writers, 201 W. 54th St., New York, N.Y. 10019.
Puckerbrush Pr., Orono, Me.
Pygmalion Pr., P.O. Box 38363, Hollywood, Calif. 90038
Ragnarok Pr., 3008 17th St. West, Birmingham, Ala.
Raintree Pr., c/o Fred Brewer, 4043 Morningside Dr., Bloomington, Ind. 47401
Rogue Community College, 3345 Redwood Hwy., Grants Pass, Ore. 97526
Sagarin Pr., 26 High St., Chatham, N.Y. 12037
Sand Dollar, 650 Colusa, Berkeley, Calif. 94707
Seahouses Pr., P.O. Box 532, Coventry, Conn. 06238
Second Coming Pr., P.O. Box 31249, San Francisco, Calif. 94131
Serials Review, 500 Washtenaw Ave., Ann Arbor, Mich. 48104
Seven Woods Pr., P.O. Box 32, Village Sta., New York, N.Y. 10014
Smyrna Pr., Box 841, Stuyvesant Sta., New York, N.Y. 10009
Sono Nis Pr., 4565 Church St., Delta, B.C., Canada
Sparrow Magazine, 103 Waldron St., West Lafayette, Ind. 47906
Stone Soup Poetry, 313 Cambridge St., Boston, Mass. 02114
Sun, 456 Riverside Dr., New York, N.Y. 10027
Sunstone Pr., P.O. Box 2321, Santa Fe, N.M. 87501
Swallow Pr., 1139 South Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill. 60605
Templar Pr., P.O. Box 98, F.D.R. Sta., New York, N.Y. 10022
Territorial Pr., P.O. Box 775, Moorhead, Minn., 56560
Thorp Springs Pr., 2311-C Woolsey St., Berkeley, Calif. 94705
Three Rivers Pr., P.O. Box 21, Carnegie-Mellon Univ., Pittsburgh, Pa. 15213
Toothpaste Pr., 626 East Main St., West Branch, Iowa, 52358
Treacle Pr., 102 Benefit St., Providence, R.I. 02903
Tribal Pr., P.O. Box 121, Bowling Green, Ohio 43402
Truck Pr., P.O. Box 86, Carrboro, N.C. 27510
Unicorn Pr., P.O. Box 3307, Greensboro, N.C. 27402
Unity Pr., 113 New St., Santa Cruz, Calif. 95060
Vagabond Pr., P.O. Box 879, Ellensburg, Wash. 98926
Valley Pr., Box 286, Station A, Ottawa, Canada
Victoria Soft Pr., 1050 Saint David St., Victoria, B.C., Canada
Windmill Pr., 1369 Linwood, Holland, Mich. 49423
Wings Pr., P.O. Box 25296, Houston, Tex. 77005
Women Writing, Polly Joan, R. D. 3, Newfield, N.Y. 14867
Wyrd Pr., c/o Truesdale, Warwick, N.Y.
Yardbird Wing Editions, Box 2370, Station A, Berkeley, Calif. 94702
Zartscorp Bks., 267 W. 89th St., New York, N.Y. 10024

Distributors

A growing number of distributor-jobbers for small presses makes life easier for librarians. Many issue catalogs of publications they distribute.

East

Book Organization, Elm St., Millerton, N.Y. 12546
Committee of Rhode Island Small Presses (CRISP), 102 Benefit St., Providence, R.I. 02903
New England Small Press Distribution, 41 Hillcrest Pl., Amherst, Mass. 01002
RPM Distributors, 701 East Gude Dr., P.O. Box 1785, Rockville, Md. 20850
Select Press Book Service, Bridge St., Milford, N.H. 03055
Spring Church Book Co., P.O. Box 127, Spring Church, Pa. 15686
Women in Distribution, P.O. Box 8858, Washington, D.C. 20030

Midwest & Southwest

Cold Mountain Pr., 4705 Sinclair, Austin, Tex. 78756
Plains Distribution Service, P.O. Box 3112, 620 Main, Fargo, N.D. 58102
Quarto Book Service, P.O. Box 4737, Columbus, Ohio 43202

West

Bookpeople, 2940 Seventh Ave., Berkeley, Calif. 94710
Serendipity Books, 1790 Shattuck Ave., Berkeley, Calif. 94709
Small Press Book Club, Box 1906, San Pedro, Calif. 90733
Small Press Center, 756 Union St., San Francisco, Calif. 94133
West State Books, P.O. Box 3860, San Rafael, Calif. 94902

South

COSMEP/South, P.O. Box 209, Carrbor, N.C. 27514

A number of bookstores specialize or at least feature small press publications. Three who issue catalogs: Phoenix Book Shop, 22 Jones St., New York, N.Y. 10014; Gotham Book Mart, 41 West 47th St., New York, N.Y. 10036, and Feminist Book Mart, 41-17 150th St., Flushing, N.Y. 11355

Information, Politics, & Money

The 39th Annual Conference of ASIS

"INFORMATION*POLITICS," the controversial theme, was coupled with an equally controversial debate over the financial viability of the American Society for Information Science (ASIS), as some 1600 information professionals gathered in balmy San Francisco for the Society's 39th meeting, October 4-9. Members used the nearly 100 program meetings to focus on a host of issues that program planners had included under their broad interpretation of the meeting theme: information for, with, or about politics, the politics of information, the role of government toward information, and the other permutations and combinations thereof. Even topics such as the management of information services and the economics of information slid neatly into the conference framework. While some complained that "there were too many good programs," Conference Chairperson Brett Butler commented that the meeting, "the largest ASIS meeting outside the New England area, emphasizes the vitality of the information profession and the strength of the ASIS technical program."

Specifically, conferees debated issues ranging from the effects of the newly revised copyright law to the structure of a national bibliographic system. They argued the validity of management information systems, scrutinized the whole question of fees for information services, and tackled the vast topic of personal computing and individualized information use.

Tracking the whole affair was A Conference Information System (ACIS), the minicomputer-based setup designed and implemented by Walt Crawford (University of California, Berkeley) that facilitated event and room scheduling, produced hourly events lists and lists of registrants, and, finally, provided the basis for the author, title, and subject indexes of the conference proceedings. The hardware used was a Datapoint 1100, programmed in the Databus language.

LC and Congressional info

The week opened with a day-long preconference session sponsored by the Library of Congress entitled "Library of Congress: Service to Congress and the Nation." Speakers included Henriette Avram (Special Assistant to the Librarian of Congress for Network Development), L. Clark Hamilton (Deputy Registrar of Copyrights), Frank Kurt Cylke (Division for the Blind and Physically Handicapped), Marvin W. McFarland (Science and Technology Division), Robert L. Chartrand (Congressional Research Service), and Joseph H. Howard (Processing Department). The size of LC was described as a major handicap in focussing the needs and requirements of the U.S. information community, and it was made clear by all speakers that LC's expanding automated systems are perceived as significant in assisting the divisions of LC to perform their internal and external functions, aiming at better information services for the country. Howard indicated that cooperation would be essential in the work of the Processing Department, stating that LC now uses cataloging generated by other institutions, both domestic and foreign, when the same cataloging rules are followed.

Within the ASIS conference itself, each day began with a plenary session featuring one or more speakers invited to speak on a particular aspect of the information/politics relationship. Prior to the first plenary session, Rep. Charlie Rose (D-N.C.) gave the keynote speech. Rose, overseer of House computer information systems and the first Congressman to install a computer terminal in his office, presented a rationale for developing a Congressional information system: the legislator needs reliable and current information about issues before Congress, and an equally effective system is needed to provide information to those being represented. Rose declared that the price of information failure is that the legislator is made captive of special interest groups.

Following Rose, Dr. Aaron Wildavsky (University of California, Berkeley) addressed the topic of information systems and policy analysis. Effectively, he knocked away the underpinnings of the formalized information systems which have been in vogue for the past few decades. Wildavsky's examination of information systems included critical looks at PERT (Program Evaluation Review Technique), MBO (Management By Objectives), PPBS (Program Planning and Budgeting System), and social indicators. Wildavsky claimed that we place too much emphasis on "data" and have not learned how to successfully convert these data to information, and hence to knowledge which can be used in management and decision-making.

National info policy

In the second plenary session, Quincy Rodgers (Domestic Council Committee on the Right for Privacy) spoke about the creation of a national information policy. President Ford had asked him to provide a proposal for a U.S. national information policy; it had originally been anticipated that his recommendations would be available for public discussion by the time of the ASIS conference. Delays in the Committee's schedule prevented Rodgers from revealing any substantive portion of his recommendations to the President.

John Gray (The British Library) and Alphonse Trezza (National Commission on Libraries and Information Science, NCLIS) addressed "National Information Systems" during the final plenary session. Gray gave a thorough description of EURONET, a telecommunications network under development for the Western European countries and Great Britain. The difficulties of coordinating multinational information systems were brought out, with emphasis on the roles of the participating governments in this effort. Trezza described the development and activities of NCLIS, and speculated on the potential role of ASIS and its members in NCLIS functions. He informed the audience that President Ford has requested a $3.5 million appropriation for a White House conference on libraries and information science, but that we cannot expect the conference to take place before 1979. Information professionals were encouraged to provide input and make their requirements known, specifically at the state level where statewide conferences will be coordinated.

Fees or freebies

The ASIS Special Interest Group on Non-Print Media (SIG/NPM) sponsored two major meetings: the first, cosponsored with NCLIS, presented a discussion paper for the development of a nationwide machine-readable data base for bibliographic control of non-book materials. Gerald Brong (Washington State University) spoke about the proposal and was followed by a panel consisting of the project advisory group. More valid input would have been received from the audience had NCLIS distributed the text of the proposal prior to the meeting. Unprepared, the attendees focused on narrow local concerns rather than on the "nationwide network" proposal. The second SIG/NPM meeting brought three CONTU (Commission on New Technological Uses of Copyrighted Materials) commissioners to the podium to discuss the status of their work. Argument broke out within the reactor panel, composed of Ben Weil (Exxon Corp.), Walter Fraser (Rutgers University), and Eugene Garfield (ISI, Inc.). Garfield promoted the view that all information is worth something and should be paid for; Fraser challenged Garfield by insisting that information should be made freely available. It was an interesting cast of characters in the usual debate, and, as usual, nothing was resolved. The other large session on copyright, sponsored by the Special Libraries Association, went smoothly and without argument, since apparently the audience was almost exclusively from the library sector of the information community.

The Special Interest Group on Costs, Budgeting, and Economics (SIG/CBE) held a major session on the key issues in the economics of information. William Baumol (New York University and Princeton University), the primary speaker, suggested that policy issues regarding funding of information should be examined carefully. He first distinguished between information production and information dissemination, and then advocated a variety of techniques for charging for information, including government support to assist in bringing the information transfer process into economic balance.

Library networks

At one of two sessions devoted to library applications, the Council of Computerized Library Networks (CCLN) identified some of the issues involved in the creation and maintenance of a national library network. Hank Epstein (BALLOTS Center, Stanford

---

Susan K. Martin

Susan K. Martin is Head of the Library Systems Office, University of California, Berkeley, and she chaired the 1976 ASIS Technical Program

Congressman Charlie Rose (D-N.C.) delivers keynote speech

University) described a possible national network configuration and its relationship to the "bibliographic utilities" such as OCLC, LC, BALLOTS, the University of Chicago system, and the Washington Library Network. Charles Stevens (SOLINET) felt that significant roles remained for the regional centers, especially in the areas of coordination, brokerage, and training. Richard Dougherty (University of California, Berkeley) described his view of the implications of library networks for library administrators and staffs; resource reallocation will be forced upon local libraries by economic stringencies, retraining of personnel for a network environment will become increasingly important and may be accompanied by problems relating to work performed by librarians vs. nonprofessional staff. Dougherty foresaw that the inadequacies of our current document delivery systems will be made more prominent by the existence of library networks. The Special Interest Group on Library Automation and Networks (SIG/LAN) held a session on minicomputers for libraries. The speakers (Stephen Silberstein, University of California, Berkeley; Mary Madden, Blackwell/North America; Brian Aveney, Sacramento City/County Library; and Bill Mathews, NELINET) concurred that minicomputers should be regarded as a valuable tool for libraries, but that they have not yet gained solid acceptance in U.S. libraries. Considerable discussion revolved around the use of minicomputers as interfaces with larger network-based computers. The suitability of large-scale networks as hosts for the circulation and serials check-in functions was strongly questioned.

Management info

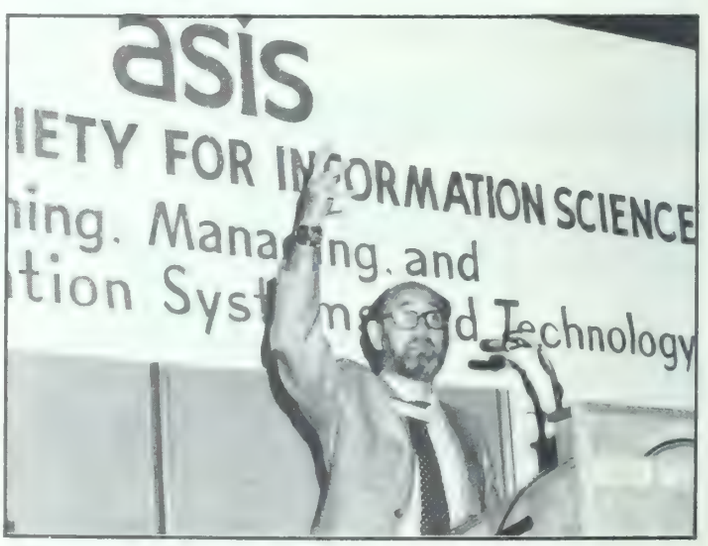
Examining management information, the Special Interest Group on Management heard about a number of quantitative and statistical approaches to decision-making from Michael Buckland (University of California, Berkeley), Florence Sisco (Los Angeles County Public Library), and Donald King (King Research, Inc.). Their presentations were countered by Richard De Gennaro (University of Pennsylvania) as reactor, who claimed that measurement and statistical techniques could assist a manager only to a certain point, and that the most significant portion of the decision-making process was concerned with political and people-oriented issues.

An unusual aspect of information processing was explored by "Information in the Humanities," where four speakers described their work in applying computer technology to humanistic problems. The use of a computer plotter to derive characters for the "Berkeley Late Egyptian Dictionary" was described by Leonard Lesko. Tracy Lind Petersen (University of Utah) demonstrated his transformation of poetry into musical compositions by use of computer programs.

CON job

An unofficial group, the Special Interest Group on the Confluence of Overload Norms (SIG/CON), held a spellbound audience for experts such as David Batty, Eleanor Montague, and Glyn Evans to explore, respectively, "A Comparative Analysis of the 14th and 16th Editions of DDC Class 130 as an Index to Changes in Social Attitude and Perception"; "Netopoly—a High Stakes Game where Network Fortunes Rise and Fall"; and "A Developing Network for a Developing Country." The research unveiled by these specialists was most edifying; in fact, it kept them rolling in the aisles for the entire session. Batty was elected chairman of next year's SIG/CON, and the tradition promises to continue and flourish.

For the second year, ASIS has had poster sessions as part of its technical program. In these presentations, the author does not deliver a set speech; rather, discussion is open, free-wheeling, and the audience can move from one poster paper to another, participating in discussions with each author. This year, the poster sessions were extremely popular. On one day, for example, almost 400 people attended the nine poster papers being given in three hours.



Dr. Aaron Wildavsky presenting a plenary session talk

ASIS finances

During the summer, ASIS President Melvin Day notified the membership that the financial situation of the society was less than ideal, that fiscal reporting had been virtually nonexistent, and that radical steps would have to be taken to bring the organization back into a positive cash flow situation. The problem was attributed to an excessively enthusiastic support of a publication program, causing the inventory to rise and the cash flow to falter. A special meeting was held in San Francisco to brief the members on the financial status of the society and to allow opportunity for questions and discussion. Day described in detail the nature of the organization's indebtedness, followed by a presentation by Managing Director Sam Beatty regarding the prognosis for the next two budget years. The message of the two gentlemen was essentially this: we'd prefer not to be in this position; however, it's a good thing we found out about these problems now rather than two years from now, and we have budgeted for the next three years in such a way that we anticipate being in the black by 1978. Among specific measures to be taken are higher dues, higher conference registration fees, a smaller headquarters staff, and a deferred monographs publication program. The ASIS Journal and Bulletin will continue to be published, although they will contain fewer pages and the Bulletin's frequency will drop to bimonthly. Also to be continued is the Annual Review of Information Science and Technology.

Membership response to these presentations was diffuse and sparse. A few individuals asked detailed questions about money-saving techniques and about the figures being presented to the group; others made recommendations for ceasing publication of one or more of the serial publications. Although 300 people attended, no one succeeded in generating widespread response to a suggestion or question, and the meeting, originally scheduled for three hours, lasted barely two hours.

Another conference-wide official event was the Awards Banquet. Receiving the Annual Award of Merit it was Laurence Heilprin, professor emeritus at the University of Maryland. In his acceptance speech, Heilprin traced the history of ASIS and compared it to other professional societies, stating that the society had seen crises in the past and would be able to manage its current crisis. Also receiving the new Watson Davis Award for continuous dedicated service to ASIS over a period of time were James Cretsos (Merrell-National Laboratories), Laurence Heilprin (University of Maryland), Lois Lunin (Editor, ASIS Bulletin), Gerald Sophar (National Agricultural Library), and Herbert White (Indiana University).

Mel Day explains the financial status of ASIS

Again, what were the issues? For ASIS as an organization, its fiscal problems. Even so, at week's end, the Council voted to take the institutional responsibility for U.S. membership in FID, offered by the National Academy of Sciences. Within the profession, the questions included public versus private information, the pricing of information, the development of a national information system. Both formal and informal discussion had been taking place on these issues especially on the last. It was apparent, however, that with the compromises and passage of the copyright bill, a major hurdle is out of the way. We know that work needs to be done in the area of public/private interface, but for the moment our attention is unfocused. Pricing? The same observation applies. Although there was some conversation about BRS (the not-for-profit company which plans to compete with Lockheed and SDC), it is too soon to be able to evaluate the performance (its operation will start up in January). No one was talking about interlibrary loan charges—not surprisingly, since only half the attendees were librarians. And a national network, on everyone's mind these days, is being studied and designed by many official groups, but none have yet produced a substantive report or proposal for the information community to sink its teeth into.

Another ASIS meeting has gone by. It was a well-received and successful meeting. (San Francisco recovered by immediately hosting the American Society of Anaesthesiologists.) Syracuse University will be the site of the ASIS Midyear Meeting, and Chicago will be the location of the 1977 Annual Conference. See you there!

Conference attendees gathered around a poster presentation

The Future of Young Adult Services in Public Libraries

From left to right: Writer Richard Peck, author of Are You in the House Alone? (Viking, 1976); Publisher Eric Moon, President of Scarecrow Press; YA Specialist Helen Kreigh, Consultant, Children's & Young Adult Services, Division for Library Services, Wisconsin; YA Librarian Barbara Newmark, Cuyahoga County Library, Ohio

In recent months, there have been undeniable signs of increased interest in young adults by librarians. The Maryland Library Association was convinced to pass a resolution in favor of renewed attention to this area of library programming; in Wisconsin and Ohio there were other instances of strong and renewed interest seen at conferences and in publications. But for some years YA services and separate facilities in libraries have been eroding; in some cases they have vanished. Many librarians have explained this by saying that when young readers outgrow the children's collection they want to go straight to the adult stacks. Others note that there is little interest in the traditional, antiseptic teen book.

LJ Skirmish Line asked a number of librarians, as well as a publisher and a writer of books for teenagers, what they thought about the need and/or prospects for YA service in libraries are today. Some excerpts from the more formal responses follow, but from them and from the many briefer interchanges there emerged one strong skein: the new emphasis may well be traced to the much-mentioned new interest in the "user." It really is true that today the average librarian on just about every level and in every type of library is consummately interested in the particular persons he is charged with serving.

Richard Peck: It's strange that YA collections presided over by librarian-specialists are not proliferating everywhere these days. We've always lost most of our young potential readers as they pass through puberty and the dismal subject matter and subculture of junior high school. Today only a minority of all adolescents can read well enough to savor a book. The schools of the 70s do little to stretch attention spans, deepen language awareness, set standards, and inspire reading as pleasure- or knowledge-seeking. The parents of the permissive home are too traumatized by their teenagers to give them direction. There's an unexampled vacuum that only a special YA library collection and a direct library welcome can fill. The rest of the youth scene is still lying in the ruins of the 1960s.

YA books—those written for and about adolescents and their tastes—provide the most direct approach. Even the enemy, television, begins unwittingly to serve us, as YA subject matter appears on film and thus creates a demand for the book version. Authors of adolescent novels learn that a healthy percentage of our readers also read other fare. There's a glimmer of promise for the continuing reading habit that will mature with the reader.

Perhaps our greatest confusion is that the term YA is specious. We're not providing for or writing for "YA's"; we're aiming for "PL's"—the pubescent literate. The young people who will meet us halfway. No law decrees that they attend us. As authors and librarians we are thus more responsive to their needs than teachers in the beleaguered schools and the remote programmers of text books.

Moreover, the subjects and approaches in adolescent fiction are growing nearer the reader. After a decade of reaching for the adolescents' taste in story-telling, we learn that the issues promoted in the later 1960s by critics and publishers missed the mark in reader appeal. Our young readers prefer wish-fulfillment to harsh reality. They're caught up in the ultrapersonal rather than in distant causes. They are not creating utopias in their own youth culture; they are instead looking for books that provide role models and escapism to counteract the hard facts of gang-run schools and collapsed communities.

Surely this group of aspiring, private, conservative, silent young people deserve a place of their own in the library; a clean, well-lighted place stocked with books they respond to. Without this place, the library becomes just one more institution that has let them down.

Eric Moon: I've just taken a look at an editorial I wrote for the October 15, 1960 LJ. Titled "Teenage Theories," it was about the then just published standards, Young Adult Services in the Public Library, a sententious document if ever I saw one. One thing it admitted, sadly, is that young adults are "persons in their teens for whom there is no adequate terminology." So what's wrong with teenagers? I always thought "young adult" reeked of older adult condescension.

I said in that editorial: "Librarians in this century seem to have developed a dangerous tendency to categorize not only books but people." I now see some sense in having librarians who are tuned in to different segments of that amorphous body we call the public.

On the books question I'm just as firmly as ever against the segregation of teenagers into separate reading corrals. If they are young adults, they're per se adults (or language doesn't mean anything, which I sometimes suspect), so let 'em read adult if they want to, or juvenile if they want to, or whatever the hell they want to read.

I still have a sneaking suspicion that some (many?) YA collections emerged as protective devices; i.e., to protect the "morals" of teenagers AND to protect librarians from parental wrath. I once suggested that librarians might get less censorship pressure if they restricted some of those parents to what we called YA collections and let the teenagers run wild through the collection. It was a flip remark, but it has a serious underbelly.

Helen Kreigh: It certainly feels like a young adult services renaissance on the Wisconsin library front. There were overflow crowds at the first separate program sessions specifically designated for young adult librarians at 1975 annual and 1976 spring meetings of the Wisconsin Library Association Children's and Young People's Services Section—despite the fact that there are only 17 designated young adult librarians in the entire state, most of whom have one or more additional assignments. A well-attended "YA Services Sampler" held in early last summer was the first statewide meeting since 1971 addressing only this type of service. Another YA conference is already in planning for 1977.

Five weekly two-hour educational telephone network programs, devoted entirely to young adult services, were offered in 1976 for the first time to public and school librarians throughout the state by the University of Wisconsin-Extension; program participants from all over the country participated by telephone. And the first compilation of new young adult book evaluations was published by the Wisconsin Young Adult Book Reviewers' Network. Organized in later 1975, the network's 39 members represent public and school libraries of all sizes from every area of the state. A Southeast Wisconsin Young Adult Librarians Group formed in late 1975 has consistently attracted from 30 to 50 people from one corner of the state to its meetings. There have been an increasing number of requests addressed to the state library agency's Consultant for Children's and Young Adult Services for workshops, field visits, materials, and program patterns to develop young adult library services in individual libraries and through system headquarters.

Why offer library services to young adults? Because they're there—sometimes a little menacingly so when they're shut out arbitrarily.

Titles may seem trivial, but having the name as well as the game seems important, particularly at the state library agency level. How can a local or regional librarian—especially one new to the profession or to the state—seek advice and support if names hide rather than open wide the doors? Whether responsibility is shared by specialists in the area of children's, adult, school, or outreach services, "and young adult" ought to be tacked on to titles, budgets, annual reports, etc. By the same token, libraries great and small need an area, an alcove, a niche, a bay window brightly and boldly marked "For Young Adults," even if there's space for only one paperback twirler, one shocking pink beanbag lounger, and a life-size poster of the Bionic Woman mounted on the ceiling. If necessary, all hardback books could be sacrificed to make room for a stereophonic record player or tape deck with earphones. That will say, "You, too, belong here," and young adult programming should take care of the rest if it's experimental, uninhibited, flexible, and willing to settle for small, choice groups as well as stomping hordes.

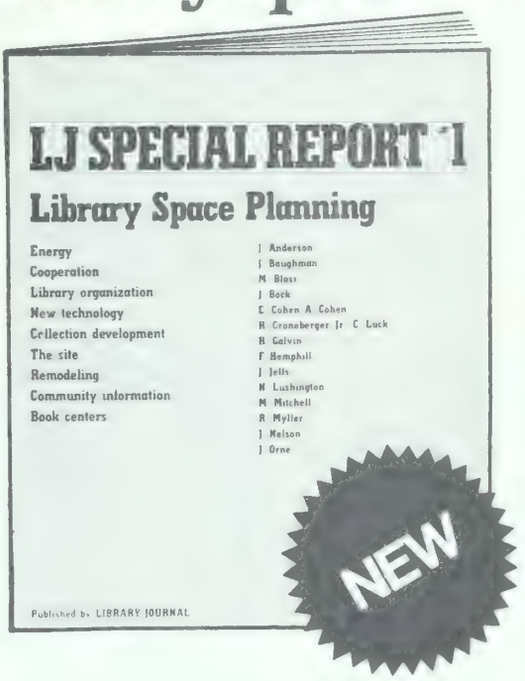
Barbara Newmark: The approximately 40.5 million adolescents in the United States are unique. They have numerous problems and characteristics special only to this age group. Young adults are defining their individual personalities, carving out their values and morals, learning to make decisions, getting through school, coping with society, drugs, violence, and subcultures, deciding about the future: "Should I go to college?" or "What kind of job will be suitable for me?"

I fail to see how either juvenile or adult books relate to these real problems of sex, pregnancy, abortions, drugs and alcohol, parent(s), school, and individual identity. Why should we keep young adults trapped in children's books or push them into adult books that most adolescents are not ready for?

I must disagree with the argument that young people feel there is no need for a transitional stage between the children's room and the adult library. In my five years as a young adult librarian I have found the necessity for a specialist in this specific area to provide books, programming, a sympathetic ear, a comfortable environment, to meet the needs of the adolescent.

Cuyahoga County Public Library is concerned about the next generation. We now have a young adult coordinator, four regional coordinators, and hope to have young adult librarians in each of our 26 branches. The Ohio Library Association is also concerned with this age group. I have been instumental in creating within the association a young adult task force which has been successful in making library staff and administrators aware of the necessity of young adult services. We all hope to work together as a team to develope unique and specific services geared to the adolescents individual needs, wants, and desires to help them grow and feel comfortable in the library.

LIBRARY SPACE PLANNING helps you make better use of your library space tomorrow.



Perhaps you are involved with plans for a new library. Or with remodeling the library you're in now. Or simply making more efficient use of existing space—on a non-existing or minimum budget.

Whatever the case, you will want a copy of the new LJ Special Report #1—LIBRARY SPACE PLANNING.

Here, in one practical, 80-page, paperbound handbook—8½ x 11 size—are the thinking and ideas of 32 leading librarians, library consultants, and architects.

Among the subjects covered: Energy . . . Cooperation . . . Library Organization . . . New Technology . . . Collection Development . . . The Site . . . Remodeling . . . Community Information . . . Book Centers. The information you'll find in LIBRARY SPACE PLANNING will be equally valuable to librarians in public, academic, and special libraries . . . in urban, suburban and rural communities.

LIBRARY SPACE PLANNING is the first of the LJ Special Reports—designed to keep librarians well informed on topics of immediate interest and importance.

In the library field, where so many changes occur so often, yesterday's plans and assumptions must also change.

The problems of library funding, the energy crisis, the evolution of the local library into a community information center, the response of the academic library to the new demands of higher education—all these and other factors require innovative thinking and planning now for libraries of the future.

LJ Special Report #1—LIBRARY SPACE PLANNING—is currently off press and copies are available to LIBRARY JOURNAL readers on a first come, first-served basis.

The cost is only $3.95 per copy on prepaid orders; $5.00 per copy on billed orders.

Use the convenient coupon to send in your order now.

Better use the coupon below to send for your copy today!

To: Edward W. Martin, Circulation Director—R. R. Bowker Co.
1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10036

Please send LJ Special Report #1—LIBRARY SPACE PLANNING—as indicated:

_____ (No.) at $3.95 each, for which payment is enclosed.

_____ (No.) at $5.00 each. Send bill as shown.

Name _____

Address _____

City _____

State _____ Zip _____

☐ Send information on quantity discount orders—10 or more copies.

LJ

PROFESSIONAL READING

Monuments to Milam

SULLIVAN, Peggy. Carl H. Milam and the American Library Association.
H. W. Wilson. 1976. 390p. illus. index. ISBN 0-8242-0592-8. LC 76-3686. In U.S. & Canada, $17.50; elsewhere, $20.

DALE, Doris Cruger, ed. Carl H. Milam and the United Nations Library.
Scarecrow. 1976. 132p. index. appendixes. ISBN 0-8108-0941-9. LC 76-14866. $6.

Younger librarians are unfortunate that they had no opportunity to see "CHM" in action, but now we have two very fair and appreciative biographies of the work and influence of the single most important American librarian since Melvil Dewey. By using the fine source materials available to her, Sullivan has compacted her Chicago GLS dissertation into a readable—even exciting—and interestingly balanced book, one which puts the proper emphasis on the executive secretary who ran ALA for 28 years. Milam initiated many ALA programs, motivated others, and dominated all. It was because of his domination that the Fourth Activities Committee, under Ralph Shaw's leadership, influenced the insurgency that later served to defeat Milam's stand for ALA Presidency, grew to revolutionary proportions in recent decades, and began to change ALA to try to meet today's needs. This book, and Dale's more limited one, are historical reviews of ALA and, especially, record CHM's strong and still permeating international library interests. Dale's reveals some of the inner workings of Milam's mind, being a transcript (and more) of his diaries before and during his service as first director of the United Nations Library, his final employment. It is a fascinating picture of bureaucratic intrigue, and contains several useful appendixes.

Both volumes are enduring monuments to Milam's constructive efforts for (indeed his construction of) American librarianship in the most vital years of its growth in this century. Moreover, both books reveal the personal qualities of a paternalistic dictator, his unabashed aggressiveness, his executive ability, and those elements of his overbearing policies that had brought about a justifiable diminution of the authority of the office of executive secretary at ALA. Without Carl Milam, American librarianship might never have gained its strengths; without the inevitable reaction of his critics and opponents, it would never have retained them. Throughout ALA, and among his staff, Milam was adored, feared, honored, maligned, and then almost forgotten in his own time. Those of us who had an opportunity to know him have great memories of the excitement and inspiration he stimulated, as well as the warmth of his friendship. Newer librarians are fortunate to have these two fine books in order to learn about Carl Milam and those things related to him that make American librarianship what it is—even today.—LEE ASH, LIBRARY CONSULTANT, BETHANY, CONN.

"Acts" of library apostles

BREWSTER, Beverly J. American Overseas Library Technical Assistance, 1940–1970.
Scarecrow. 1976. 434p. index. bibliog. appendixes. ISBN 0-8108-0827-7. LC 75-23006. $17.50.

The missionary effort of Christendom is said to have begun with St. Paul's vision of a figure beckoning him and saying "Come over into Macedonia, and help us." Nineteen centuries later the Western World still responds to the Macedonian appeal with as much zeal as ever, although today it is largely the social gospel that is carried to the heathen—the temporal concerns of the flesh that are addressed, rather than the concerns of the soul. None have been more solicitous in their missionizing than the Americans with their Calvinist roots, as they trek the world over relieving pain, attacking poverty, and combatting illiteracy. This book comprises the Acts of the library apostles.

Thousands of librarians have shared in this vocation, seeking everywhere to overcome bibliothecal malnutrition. This excellent book chronicles our efforts during the three decades of our most frenetic activity. Brewster presents a balanced tripartite review, summarizing the roles in international librarianship of the federal government, the foundations, and the American Library Association. The three are not wholly parallel, because ALA, lacking money resources, has seldom been able to serve as initiator and sponsor of projects as have the other two.

Dr. Brewster's story deserved to be written, as it has remained until now almost wholly untold. She exhausts the limited open literature on the subject, but by far the major part of her material comes rather from archives, manuscripts, personal accounts, and relatively inaccessible technical reports. The result is a thorough, workmanlike account which fills a gap in our literature.

Four hundred pages on such a large subject obviously cannot tell the whole story, and the reader often is left wanting to know more about a project. Also, some will regret that the book makes no attempt to evaluate the quality or impact of any project. Since we have never learned how to evaluate library projects at home, however, it is unrealistic to expect a book like this to evaluate them abroad.—DAVID KASER, GRADUATE LIBRARY SCHOOL, INDIANA UNIVERSITY, BLOOMINGTON

Management essays

HOLROYD, Gileon, ed. Studies in Library Management, Volume Three.
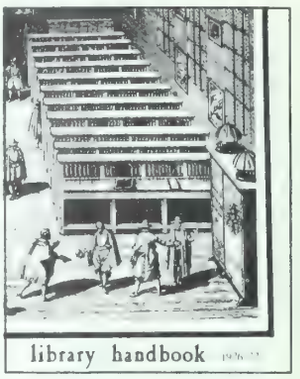
Clive Bingley & Linnet. 1976. 192p. ISBN 0-208-01526-4. $8.50.

An eclectic collection of seven brief essays in three groups, touching on information needs and management; staffing; and finance. Many of the essays provoke thought, but the first, "Design for Diversity: Alternatives to Standards for Public Libraries" by Ralph Blasingame and Mary Jo Lynch, does so especially. The chapter on Industrial Training Boards' information services pertains totally to a British institution, but it will be of value to American readers. The other essays, with one exception, also draw on either British or Australian library data, but discuss matters presumably of interest to all librarians: Career patterns of librarians in the United Kingdom, 1935-1990; finances of public and university libraries; evaluation of the effectiveness of library service; an analysis of the University of Maryland's 1967-70 library manpower studies; management of information in urban and industrial settings.

This volume's contents hang together rather better than those in the earlier ones in this series, perhaps because the editor and four of the contributors are lecturers in the Polytechnic of North London School of Librarianship. In any event, it can be "recommended especially to the younger librarian interested in library management" as Holroyd says in his introduction.—JOHN E. KEPHART, SCHOOL OF LIBRARY AND INFORMATION SCIENCE, STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK COLLEGE AT GENESEO

CHECKLIST



Japanese policy study

Japan in Southeast Asia: Collision Course (151p.) explores Japanese policy and practice in Southeast Asia from the point of view of a Southeast Asian. Raul S. Manglapus, prominent Philippine statesman and writer, pays particular attention to the subject of commercial corruption; by means of extensive interviews in the region, he documents that this issue remains the most explosive in the relations between developed Japan and the developing nations. He seeks a new strategy of development which will prove more effective against corruption. The study was sponsored by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace and is available for $3.75 from them at 345 E. 46th St., New York, N.Y. 10017 or 11 Dupont Circle N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036.

Bike bibliography

Almost 1600 citations of tour guides, repair manuals, biographies of racers, bike histories, magazine and newspaper stories, and catalogs are included in The 1975 Bicycle Bibliography: Professional Supplement. Federal, state, and local documents pertaining to bicycle transportation planning are also noted. Appendixes list names and addresses of journals and organizations, both in the U.S. and abroad, concerned with the sport. There are corporate and author indexes. The 148-page booklet costs $3.50 ($4 overseas) and supplements earlier bibliographies. Volume One, which covers the years 1957-1971, is out of print, but The 1974 Bicycle Bibliography (80p., $3, $3.50 overseas) is still available. It contains 700 entries. The author of all three is David J. Luebbers. Send checks with your requests to him, Route 3, Box 312, Columbia, Mo. 65201.

Sample magazine

A complimentary copy of Programmed Learning and Educational Technology, the journal of the London Association of the same name, will be sent on request. The journal is distributed by Nichols Publishing Co., P.O. Box 96, New York, N.Y. 10024.

Literary reproductions

Arrivals in the Berg Collection 1973-75 is a portfolio of reproductions chosen from current exhibition at the New York Public Library. Twenty-three selections include letters written by Siegfried Sassoon and Joseph Conrad, a page from May Sarton's diary, a sketch by Sean O'Casey, a risqué poem by Kathleen Millay and Ann Ackert, and a Dora Carrington woodcut which originally accompanied a Leonard Woolf story. The portfolio costs $3 from the library's Sales Shop in the Fifth Avenue at 42nd Street building, and $4 by mail from Readex Bks., 101 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y. 10003. Orders should be prepaid with a check payable to Readex Books.

Multi-ethnic bibliography

Amebook, a multi-ethnic booklist published through a cooperative effort of the Library Services for Harford County Public Schools and the Harford County Library, is available to others. The briefly annotated list represents a selection of titles suitable for readers from kindergarten through high school and beyond. A free copy of the 35-page list will be mailed library rate to those sending a self-addressed, 6″x9″ envelope with 9¢ postage affixed to: Amebook, Harford County Library, 100 Pennsylvania Ave., Bel Air, Md. 21014. For countries outside the U.S., postage is 28¢ for surface mail.

Newsletter tips

Libraries starting up a newsletter or those with publishing patrons might wish to acquire A Practical Guide to Newsletter Editing and Design. Author LaRae H. Wales provides basic information to inexperienced editors working with either offset or mimeograph reproduction processes. Content selection, story placement, format design, mockup preparation, and mailing regulations are some of the topics discussed. A glossary and reference section on stylebooks is included in the 52-page illustrated paperback. A copy costs $2.50 from the publisher, Iowa State University Pr., South State Ave., Ames, Iowa 50010. Payment must accompany order.

Library handbook

An attractive and inexpensively printed library guide produced by the Occidental College Mary Norton Clapp Library might serve as a model. The 40-page handbook gives information about the library, its rules, services, and functions and provides guidance to students in library use. It is printed on newsprint and has over 50 photographs and drawings. A free copy is available by sending a self-addressed, 8½″ x 11″ envelope with 35¢ postage to John Campbell, Librarian at Large, Occidental College Library, 1600 Campus Rd., Los Angeles, Calif. 90041.

Village history

To celebrate the designation of the Village of Orient, Long Island, New York as a Historic District, listed in the National Register of Historic Places, the Oysterponds Historical Society has published a book about the place. Photographs of more than 100 residences and other buildings dating from the early 18th Century to 1900 are accompanied by historical and architectural notes. Four old and new maps, together with a brief history of Orient, complete the text. Send $3.95 plus 55¢ postage for a copy of Pictorial Guide to Orient's Old Buildings to the Society, Orient, N.Y. 11957.

Adam's fall foliage tour

Gardeners in less than edenic circumstances might find useful an American Horticultural Society publication entitled Environmentally Tolerant Trees, Shrubs, and Ground Covers. The 30-page compilation is designed primarily for use by public planting agencies who must maintain areas subject to high pollution levels as well as heavy human and animal traffic. All plants listed are recommended on the basis of their observed performance in stressful environments. A temperature zone map is included and material tolerant to alkaline soils is marked. The list is alphabetical by common name, with Latin name following. A copy costs $2.95, postpaid, from the Society, Mount Vernon, Va. 22121.

MAGAZINES

Bill Katz, PROFESSOR, SCHOOL OF LIBRARY SCIENCE, STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK, ALBANY

The Science Fiction Review Monthly

1975. Monthly. $11. Ed: Martin Last. 56 Eighth Ave., New York, N.Y. 10014. Aud: Ga, Ac, Hs.

A pocket sized 24- to 30-page magazine, this features short reviews of all major science fiction—including paperbacks and reprints, which are clearly identified. The "all" should be stressed, as it is one of the few science fiction reviews to eschew selectivity. And the monthly publishing schedule results in up-to-date reviews. Each of the 100- to 200-word reviews are signed, and an average issue covers 40 to 50 titles. The outstanding feature of the reviews: honest criticism which often is a "not buy" signal for the librarian. The refreshing hard-nosed criticism makes this an important consideration for libraries with large collections.—BK

Self Reliance

1976. Bimonthly. $12; individuals, $6. Ed: Richard Kazis. The Institute for Self Reliance, 1717 18th St. N.W., Washington, D.C. 20009. Aud: Ga, Ac. (Subject: Urban Studies)

Published by a nonprofit, nonpolitical organization, this 12-page newsletter is an argument against centralization and large scale technology. The notes and short articles explain community actions which have revitalized industry, farming, energy policies, etc. Useful for libraries: "Off the Shelf," a two-to three-page annotated list of books, magazines, and pamphlets which "presents the general case for a decentralized society."—BK

The Literary Monthly

(Formerly: Pacific Sun Literary Quarterly) 1975. Monthly. $6. Literary Monthly, 21 Corte Madera Ave., Mill Valley, Calif. 94941. Illus. adv. Aud: Ac, Ga. (Subject: Books and Book Reviews. Issue examined: March 1976)

Here is your standard 24-page, tabloid sized book review with essays, short notes, and group reviews of 50 to 60 titles per issue. What makes it different: a) perceptive and critical short pieces on "small press west" by Richard Morris, a column on women's presses, and "small press east"; b) at least one-quarter of the reviews concentrate on either lesser known presses or titles probably overlooked by the major reviewing services; and c) and most important, reviews which are as likely to find the weak points as the strong points of this or that title. Coverage is strongest in literature, but other fields, from history to science, are considered. There is also poetry, fiction, and an occasional article on some aspect of the California book publishing scene. This is recommended as still one more important method of keeping up with small presses and new writers.—BK

Moment

1975. Ten issues a year. $18. Ed: Leonard Fine. Continuity, Inc., 150 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y. 10011. Illus. Aud: Ac, Ga. (Subject: General magazines. Issue examined: Vol. 1, No. 1, May-June 1975)

This "new magazine for American Jews" promises in its premier issue and prospectus to provide an exploration of Jewish themes, problems, and life through practical articles, reviews of public affairs, book and movie criticism, a section devoted to the heritage of Jewish classics, some original fiction and poetry, and articles of "rapportage." The 8½" x 11" three-column format with thinly scattered illustrations, mostly b&w photos, is a bit drab and formidable. Some of the style is light and readable; some is not. Produced by scholars, and generally well-executed, it is for large public and academic libraries.—Neal L. Edgar, Kent State University, Ohio

Mother Jones

1976. Monthly. $12. 607 Market St., San Francisco, Calif. 94105. Illus. adv. Aud: Ga, Ac. (Subject: General News and Opinions. Issue examined: Vol. 1, No. 1, February-March 1976)

Subtitled "a magazine for the rest of us," this is a glossy, well illustrated, 90-page effort to combine the best of a progressive literary review with a news and opinion magazine. The result is a cross between, say, Harper's Monthly, The New Yorker, and a better than average alternative culture magazine. Among the editors are Denise Levertof, a former head of Ramparts and another editor out of the Harvard Crimson. About equally divided between liberal political and social articles and "back of the book" reports on film, reading, recordings, and consumer advice, the magazine is put together by professionals. The illustrations, including sections on photography, are excellent, and the articles which move from politics to modern cultural events—including the circus—are equally good. Essentially a commercial venture for the better than average educated middle-class liberal, the magazine is much above average for a "general" title and should have wide appeal among "the rest of us" who share the same liberal persuasions as the editors. Success will depend not only upon subscribers, but upon advertisers, who in this pilot issue were few. Meanwhile, all academic libraries and larger public libraries, as well as progressive high schools, should subscribe. Highly recommended.—BK

Bits

1975. Semiannual. $1. Department of English, Case Western Reserve University, Cleveland, Ohio 44106. Aud: Ac.

A 32-page poetry sampler, Bits usually prints one short poem per page, limiting entries to no more than one or two works by an individual. Result: a good sampling of modern poetry, from John Updike and Ted Kooser to Lyn Lifshin and Carolyn Maisel. Added feature: the whole is hand set and printed by the editors.—BK

The Workbook

1974. Ten issues a year. $20; individuals, $10. Eds: Katherine & Peter Montague. Southwest Research and Information Center, P.O. Box 4524, Albuquerque, N.M. 87106. Illus. Aud: Ac, Ga, Sa. (Subject: Consumer Education. Environment and Conservation. Issues examined: Vol. 1, Nos. 1 & 5, 1974 & 1975)

Here is a type of socially oriented Vertical File Index. According to the editors, "it is aimed at helping people in small towns and cities across America gain access to vital information that can help them assert control over their lives." Organized under 25 to 30 subject headings (which remain pretty much the same from issue to issue), the contents consists of short descriptive notes about current pamphlets, reports, newsletters, books, etc. which deal with "environmental, social, and consumer problems." There are usually two or three items under each subject—including from time to time notes on new or older organizations which may be of help to the reader. In addition, each 42-page number opens with two or three informative articles on some aspect of consumer or resource interest. There is no advertising. Useful for libraries as much of the material reviewed is free or inexpensive; and, equally important, because it is rarely noted elsewhere.—BK

BOOK REVIEW

The Contemporary Scene

Durk, David & Ira Silverman with Arlene Durk. The Pleasant Avenue Connection.

Harper. Jan. 1977. 288p. illus. index. ISBN 0-06-011142-9. $8.95. LAW ENFORCEMENT/CRIME

Although, in terms of sheer style and human interest, not as compelling as Paul Hoffman and Ira Pecznick's To Drop a Dime (LJ 11/1/76), this story of the destruction of a major heroin distribution ring in East Harlem is probably more significant. Durk, the Amherst-educated cop who helped expose vast police corruption and instigate the creation of the Knapp Commission, painstakingly describes how "Operation Uncover," abetted by a reform police commissioner, navigated the treacherous shoals of New York City's criminal justice system. Although the police department has changed (probably more than any other corruption-prone agency), "much of the industry that is now left in New York City is [still] criminal industry," and it flourishes in a continuing atmosphere of official and political inattention. Although traditional mob dominance over the trade has diminished, there is, we are warned, a "New Heroin Establishment." Not a very elegant nor a particularly analytical story, but a true and important one nevertheless.—Isidore Silver, Dept. of History, John Jay Coll. of Criminal Justice, CUNY

Hildebrand, George & Gareth Porter. Cambodia: starvation and revolution.

Monthly Review. 1976. 124p. LC 76-1646. ISBN 0-85345-382-9. $6.95. INT AFFAIRS

This is a work of refutation and apologia. The authors are very successful in exposing the barbarities of a U.S. policy that allowed widespread hunger and even starvation to coexist with the opulence of the Washington-supported elite of the Lon Nol regime. They also do a thorough job of demonstrating the hypocrisy and distortion that marked reports in the U.S. concerning the postwar actions of the National United Front, especially the luridly depicted "death march" evacuation of Phnom Penh. Yet, the very zeal with which the authors counter U.S. propaganda forces them into an apologetic stance in their discussion of the new regime, causing them to lose sight of the urgent questions concerning the transformation of Cambodian society. Hildebrand and Porter never fully come to grips with the meaning of the policy of self-reliance being promoted by the Front, and therefore do not see the serious obstacles to such a path resulting from both the nature of the international economic system and the likelihood that the Cambodian people will grow weary of the toil and austerity that must accompany this form of autarky. Despite the polemical nature of the work, the book provides valuable information concerning postwar developments.—Philip Mattera, "Library Journal"

CONTENTS

The Contemporary Scene	2556
Reference	2557
Art	2560
Biography	2564
Business & Economics	2566
Education	2568
History	2568
Home Economics	2576
Humor	2577
Literature	2577
Music	2581
Philosophy	2581
Poetry	2581
Political Science & International Affairs	2583
Psychology & Psychiatry	2585
Religion	2586
Science & Technology	2588
Social Science	2589
Sports & Recreation	2592
Theater	2594
Fiction	2595
Book Review & Professional Reading Author Index, Cumulative July—December 15	2600

Library Journal reviews are indexed in Book Review Index and in Book Review Digest.

Lupo, Alan. Liberty's Chosen Home: the politics of violence in Boston.

Little. Feb. 1977. 325p. ISBN 0-316-53672-5. $12.50. POL SCI/SOC SCI

Lupo, a Boston journalist and a native of the city, has written a highly personal account of the school desegregation crisis that places the events in the context of Boston's history. A third of the book is devoted to a retelling of this history, with emphasis on the conflicts between Yankees and Irish and between Irish and blacks and on the city's role as a hotbed of fervent support for diverse causes ranging from Know-Nothing nativism to abolitionism. Lupo's thesis is that "the violence of busing was the inevitable result of the city's history, in which one group dumped on another and in which each group left the next with less to fight over. . . ." He views Mayor Kevin White's political career as symbolic of the city's social history; and after providing a biography of White, Lupo proceeds to offer a behind-the-scenes account of how the mayor's staff dealt with the desegregation situation. Although too wordy at times, this is an interesting journalistic account that offers the reader some surprising inside information on the crisis.—Judith E. Endelman, Atlantic Research, New York

RIO: reshaping the international order; a report to the Club of Rome.

Dutton. 1976. 325p. coordinated by Jan Tinbergen. ed. by Antony J. Dolman. LC 76-41058. ISBN 0-525-19250-6. $10; pap. ISBN 0-525-04340-3. $4.95. INT AFFAIRS/ECON

A full range of Third World proposals for achieving a "new international order" are brought together in this report by a group of experts to the Club of Rome. Their priorities include the removal of inequities in the distribution of world income and economic opportunities, more harmonious growth of the international economic system, and a system of world economic planning. The report describes the major problems faced by Third World countries and the means by which the system may be made to change, and offers proposals for action, supplemented by a number of technical reports. Among the areas for which prompt action is advocated are the international monetary system, income distribution, trade, food, energy, the environment, and arms reduction. Although the style is unexciting, this collection provides much information about Third World problems and offers some solutions. The lack of an index is a defect; nevertheless, the problems with the volume are minor ones, and it is recommended for larger collections.—Carol Holbrook, Univ. of Michigan Lib., Ann Arbor

Sennett, Richard. The Fall of Public Man.

Knopf. Jan. 1977. 416p. illus. index. LC 76-13732. ISBN 0-394-48715-X. $15.

PSYCH/SOC SCI

This is a valuable attempt to describe the problems of our time from a social psychological perspective in a manner accessible to the general reader. It is consistently lively, informed, and challenging. The argument of the book is a variation on the theme of salvation through faith or works, with Sennett coming down squarely on the side of works. This is recast in the language of private feeling versus public action. That public and private life have changed since the 18th Century is true, but to assert that the public has been swallowed up by the private is implausible as well as unprovable. To point, as does Sennett, at the Lever House as an example of architecture abolishing public space without also noticing Ghirardelli Square, or all those Hyatt Regencies is to be made insensitive to concrete experience by the seductive power of one's abstract arguments.—Joseph B. Juhasz, Coll. of Environmental Design, Univ. of Colorado, Boulder

Steiner, Shari. The Female Factor: a study of women in five western European societies.

Putnam. Dec. 1976. 324p. ISBN 0-399-11582-X. $8.95. SOC SCI

This ambitious study attempts to identify and explain the origins of the very diverse roles of women in English, French, Italian, German, and Scandinavian societies. Drawing from history and literature as well as from personal experiences and observation, Steiner looks at women's goals, education, legal rights, social freedom, status, responsibilities, and attitudes toward self, family, marriage, and careers. She identifies a trend, best exemplified in Sweden, toward "unisex," where male and female roles greatly overlap. Steiner sees individual and social problems on the rise everywhere, and interprets the steadily increasing rates of suicide, homicide, drug and alcohol addiction, venereal disease, and abortion among women in Western cultures as an indication that they have not yet achieved the means of developing a satisfying way of life. Her hope is that needed solutions, as well as true freedom for the female half of the human race, will come through an awareness of women of the influence of the "female factor" on society, and of their knowledge of the options open to them in a rapidly changing world. This provocative book should stimulate women (and perhaps men) to rethink their position in contemporary society.—Suzanne W. Wood, SUNY at Alfred Lib.

REFERENCE

Ash, Brian. Who's Who in Science Fiction.

Taplinger. Dec. 1976. 219p. bibliog. ISBN 0-8008-8274-1. $8.95. LIT/REF

From Verne to Vonnegut, this guide lists nearly 400 bio-bibliographical articles on well known and lesser known contributors to science fiction, including writers, editors, illustrators, et al. Emphasis is placed on established American writers, with coverage of British authors as well. Less inclusive than Donald H. Tuck's yet to be completed Encyclopedia of Science Fiction and Fantasy (Vol. 1, Advent, 1974) and updating but not supplanting R. Reginald's Contemporary Science Fiction Authors (Arno, 1975. reprint), this work provides a ready reference for the sf reader. Arranged alphabetically, entries range from a few lines to three pages. Ash is critical and comments on major works. A useful, inexpensive source for public and academic libraries.—Peter P. Olevnik, SUNY at Brockport Lib.

Bibliographic Guide to Business and Economics: 1975. 2 vols.

G. K. Hall. (Bibliographic Guides). 1976. 1439p. ISBN 0-8161-6811-3. $175. ECON/REF

This title was prepared from the accessions list of the research division of the New York Public Library, with many additional entries from the LC MARC tapes for 1975. Most of the titles listed in the guide are from the 1970's. The usual business and economics subjects are covered, along with population and demography, labor, public finance, and taxation. The material is listed by main entry, added entries, titles, series titles, and subject headings. Information on each entry includes all the information found on the LC card plus the N.Y.P.L. classmark. One deletion from the average LC card is the Dewey number. These volumes might be of some value for large research libraries that perform exhaustive bibliographic searches. Most libraries, however, would find them of little use.—Wayne D. Kryszak, District of Columbia P.L.

Bricklin, Mark. The Practical Encyclopedia of Natural Healing.

Rodale. 1976. 582p. illus. index. LC 76-26864. ISBN 0-87857-136-1. $12.95. HEALTH/REF

This book by the editor of Prevention magazine contains some sound information on a variety of health problems. Included are discussions of changing and improving diets, special exercises, vitamins and food supplements—all intended to avoid the "overkill" treatments often employed in modern medicine. Other "natural" techniques—acupuncture, hypnosis, biofeedback, etc.—are also covered. The book seems destined to be acclaimed by the devotee and viewed as an object of curiosity by the skeptic.—David Hulkonen, Veteran's Administration Center Lib., Fargo, N.D.

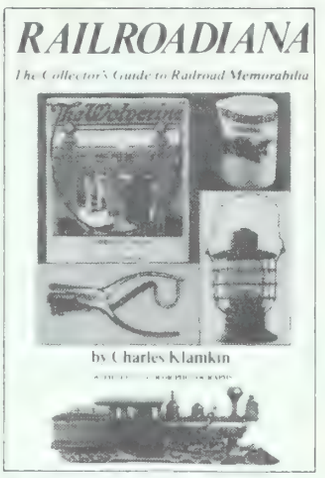
THE CROWELL COLLECTOR CORNER • FUNK & WAGNALLS



RAILROADIANA:
The Collector's Guide to Railroad Memorabilia
Charles Klamkin

"The first book on the subject, and... of particular interest. ...Covers a wide range of collectible artifacts, ranging from timetables and tickets to buttons, badges, dining-car china, and even toys." —Library Journal

200 Photographs
ISBN: 0-308-10221-5
LC: 75-26977 $10.95

FUNK & WAGNALLS
Distributed by T. Y. Crowell
666 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10019

Serials Updating Service

If you're lost in the confusion of the periodicals world—changes in titles and frequency, additional volumes, delays in publication, etc.—Faxon's Serials Updating Service can help you find your way.

The Serials Updating Service, containing current information on changes and bibliographic irregularities for all types of periodicals, is available in three ways:

Serials Updating Service—a monthly newsletter sent no charge to selected Faxon customers.

SUS Quarterly—a quarterly cumulation of the newsletters—$7 one year, $13.50 two years, $20 three years.

SUS Annual—an annual cumulation of the newsletters—$10.

The Serials Updating Service is an invaluable resource in the acquisition, serials records, reference and binding departments, wherever serials are processed.

Library business is our only business—since 1881.

FWF

F.W. FAXON COMPANY, INC.
Publishing Division
15 Southwest Park, Westwood, MA 02090

Brown, Peter Lancaster. Planet Earth in Color.

Macmillan. (Color Series). 1976. 264p. illus., some color. maps. bibliog. index. LC 76-7960. ISBN 0-02-567710-1. $6.95. EARTH SCI/REF

This elementary book explains such topics as the evolution of land forms, volcanism, and the development of life. A good, basic, and readable information book for ready reference, its only problem is an organizational one. The division into only four chapters does not facilitate scanning for informational points although the chapters themselves are well subdivided by topics. Were these topics also listed in the table of contents, the small-format work could be extremely useful for school and small public libraries.—Kenneth G. Walter, Georgia Southern Coll. Lib., Statesboro

Buteau, June D. Nonprint Materials on Communication: an annotated directory of select films, videotapes, videocassettes, simulations and games.

Scarecrow. 1976. 444p. bibliog. index. LC 76-21857. ISBN 0-8108-0973-7. $16. COMM/REF

This directory is a compilation of media listings from more than 1400 sources. Selection criteria included timeliness, significance, popular appeal, authoritativeness, credibility, reputation of producer, format, and price. Descriptive paragraphs provide useful information for prospective users. Unlike many other directories, this volume lists the publication date for each item. An excellent source book, recommended for college and university libraries as well as for campus film libraries and media centers.—Andd Ward, Dept. of Instructional Technology, Rhode Island Coll., Providence

Dolensek, Emil P., D.V.M. & Barbara Burn. A Practical Guide to Impractical Pets.

Viking. 1976. 384p. photogs. by Bruce Buchenholz. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-670-57069-9. $15. PETS/REF

The authors emphasize animals' drawbacks, to such an extent that most pet owners could draw some offense. They make sweeping indictments of various categories: "Geese have a reputation . . . for viciousness," and "Ferrets are relatively intelligent (meaning more than a cat and less than a dog)." They classify cats, snakes, tropical fish, and budgies as "easy pets" while dogs are grouped with bees, kinkajous, and skunks as "difficult." Yet the book does have some outstanding features, especially a reference chart on pets from alligators to woodchucks that outlines diets, living quarters, and lifespans, and lists further references for each animal. Because of this feature, the book can be recommended as a useful addition to reference collections, although the opinions rendered elsewhere in the book suggest some reservations.—Colleen Power, Arizona State Univ. Lib., Tempe

CBA BIBLIOGRAPHIC YEARBOOK '77 - all the books available from Hispanic-American publishers in only one book us$ 20

WORLD WIDE ENCYCLOPEDIA OF FILM AWARDS 6.500 awards granted to all kind of films all over the world. us$ 6.50

WORLD LIBRARIES EXCHANGES DIRECTORY (set) Vol. I: Americas. Vol. II: Overseas us$ 20.

INT PERIODICALS DIRECTORY (REVISTERO) us$ 5 periodicals from HispanicAmerica, commented. 1977

Send self addressed stamped envelope for complete catalogue and free sample

Mail orders with check to:
E. DARINO — PO Box 5173 - GCS New York, NY. 10017. USA

Emerson, William K. & Morris K. Jacobson with assist. of Harold S. Feinberg & William E. Old Jr. The American Museum of Natural History Guide to Shells: land, freshwater, and marine, from Nova Scotia to Florida.

Knopf. 1976. 500p. illus., some color. bibliog. index. LC 74-21304. $17.50; pap. $8.95. ZOOLOGY/REF

This book immediately invites comparison with the most widely used East Coast shell book: Percy Morris' Field Guide to Shells of the Atlantic and Gulf Coast and the West Indies (Houghton, 1973. 3rd. ed.), a volume in the Peterson Field Guide Series. While the Peterson Guide includes more shells (1035, versus 800 in this book) and covers a wider geographical territory, the American Museum Guide has some unique features. It is the only popular guide to include land and freshwater shells, and the marine shells described include the types a general collector could find in shallow water or along the shore. There is also a detailed identification key to aid the collector in the determination of shell species. The level of detail throughout should make this book valuable to both shell collectors and libraries.—Rosalie H. Lipsett, New York

Flesch, Rudolf. Look It Up: a deskbook of American spelling and style.

Harper. Jan. 1977. 480p. ISBN 0-06-011292-1. $8.95. LANG/REF

Using information gathered from 31 major dictionaries and stylebooks, Flesch, author of many works on communication, has given us an extremely helpful addition to any reference collection. He presents solutions to most problems of style and spelling in a clear and concise format. Most libraries should find a place for this book.—David M. Hoffman, "Newsday" Lib., Garden City, N.Y.

Fox, Stuart, comp. & intro. Jewish Films in the United States: a comprehensive survey and descriptive filmography.

G. K. Hall. 1976. 359p. index. LC 76-18910. ISBN 0-8161-7893-3. $40. CINEMA/REF

This work attempts to list all films made or released in the U.S. from pre-1913 through 1970 having "anything to do" with Jews and Judaism. The approximately 4000 titles are grouped by genre; and running time, distributor, credits, and brief descriptions are given when possible for both extant and fugitive films. Of particular value are such sections as "General Documentaries," focusing on the situation of Jews in Europe and Palestine during the 1930's and 1940's; "Films Related to Israel," with both Zionist and Arab material; and captured German and U.S. Army Corps films of concentration camps. Much space is, of course, given to features, listed by decades. Here the Jewish aspect is often peripheral, and this subject approach is already being covered by the comprehensive American Film Institute volumes (see LJ 12/15/71). Television shows also have a lengthy section. This reference book will be of use to scholars primarily. It is an essential purchase for ethnic and cinema research collections.—Mark Piel, Upsala Coll. Lib., East Orange, N.J.

Goldstein, Stewart & Alan Jacobson. Oldies But Goodies: the Rock 'n' Roll Years.

Mason/Charter. 1976. 301p. illus. index. intro. by Paul Anka. ISBN 0-88405-365-2. $8.95; pap. ISBN 0-88405-431-4. $4.95. MUSIC/REF

Another compilation derived from Billboard's charts of pop music. Listed in chronological order without any meaningful comment are some 3000 singles which appeared in the Top 40 from 1953 to 1965. Since best-sellerdom was the only criterion for inclusion, non-rock 'n' rollers are numerous; in fact, Jimmy Dorsey's "So Rare" is selected as the "statistical" number one hit of the era. Filling out the pages are chapters which list different thematic categories of the selfsame songs (instrumentals, novelties, longest and shortest titles, etc.), plus a closing trivia quiz which pretty well sums up the overall import. Although far less comprehensive than Charlie Gillette & Stephen Nugent's Rock Almanac (LJ 9/1/76), Oldies will have some complementary reference value since it is indexed by song title rather than by artist.—Paul G. Feehan, Univ. of Miami Lib., Coral Gables, Fla.

Hayashi, Tetsumaro, ed. John Steinbeck: a dictionary of his fictional characters.

Scarecrow. 1976. 222p. bibliog. LC 76-14803. ISBN 0-8108-0948-6. $9. LIT/REF

From the memorable Joad family in The Grapes of Wrath to Mack and his group of vagabonds in Cannery Row, this work lists more than 700 characters appearing in 17 novels. Entries are arranged alphabetically by surname, with cross references from first names; and each entry includes a citation to the novel in which the character appears. Listings are brief (a few lines) for minor characters and longer (up to three pages) for major ones, and they include both descriptive and critical commentary. A biographical portrait of Steinbeck, a brief checklist of works by and about him, and a list of contributors to this dictionary are also included. For public and academic libraries.—Peter P. Olevnik, SUNY at Brockport Lib.

Jones, John Harding. The Correspondence Educational Directory: a directory on higher adult education at lower cost.

Racz Pub. Co., Box 287, Oxnard, Calif. 93032. 1976. 133p. LC 76-1681. ISBN 0-916546-02-0. pap. $5.95. ED/REF

A listing by types (e.g., "University

Without Walls") of some 450 accredited and unaccredited American, Canadian, and British schools, colleges, and universities each of which offers some level of educational opportunity by correspondence or other special arrangement. For each institution there is only the address and a statement of degrees or programs offered. Although one "chapter" lists "Recognized Accrediting Agencies and Associations (United States)," this information is not related to the individual schools. The compiler does warn the user to check carefully the school in which he is interested. There are no indexes but schools are listed alphabetically within types or specialties. High school and other counselors would probably find this a useful tool even though, as the compiler states, there may be omissions. One program known to the reviewer within one of the included categories is omitted from this directory.—John E. Kephart, Sch. of Library & Information Science, SUNY at Geneseo

Migdalski, Edward C. & George S. Fichter. The Fresh & Salt Water Fishes of the World.

Knopf. 1976. 316p. color illus. by Norman Weaver. bibliog. index. LC 76-13704. ISBN 0-394-49239-0. $25. ZOOLOGY/REF

Ichthyologist Migdalski and zoologist Fichter have collaborated to produce an attractive guide to fishes. The introductory text describes classification systems and gives a very general account of fish anatomy and behavior. The body of the book lists fishes by class, order, and family. For each family there are descriptions and illustrations for a number of species. The book contains about 500 very fine paintings and 186 drawings. The index lists both scientific and common names. Though this popularly written account won't identify species, it should interest browsers and lay readers.—John S. Robotham, N.Y.P.L.

Niehaus, Theodore F. (text) & Charles L. Ripper (illus.). A Field Guide to Pacific States Wildflowers.

Houghton. (Peterson Field Guide). 1976. 432p. index. LC 76-5873. ISBN 0-395-21624-9. $10.95. BOTANY/REF

This offering identifies 1492 common wildflowers in Washington, Oregon, California, and Nevada, along with ecologically related parts of Utah, Idaho, Arizona, British Columbia, and northern Baja California. Niehaus defines wildflowers as "plants with a main above-ground growth and death occurring in one growing season, and without a woody stem," yet he includes cacti (most other shrubs and trees are excluded). An unusual and highly useful feature is a key to plant families that leads the user to a general description of the family, with page references to the genus. The bulk of the book is a typical field guide, arranged by flower color. Common and scientific name, habitat, and recognition features are given for each plant. Ripper's drawings are excellent, and include marks for rapid field identification. The index lists both scientific and common names.—Katharine Garstka, San Diego Zoo Lib., Calif.

Palmer, Alan & Veronica Palmer. Quotations in History: a dictionary of historical quotations c. 800 A.D. to the present.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. Dec. 1976. 354p. index. LC 76-1801. ISBN 0-06-495368-8. $16.50. HIST/REF

All historians, from mere amateur buffs to holders of endowed university chairs, will welcome the appearance of this work. Half-remembered phrases can now be readily identified, lectures can be spruced up and made more stimulating with appropriate quotations, and the memorable thoughts of great men will be ready at one's fingertips. Such a reference source has long been needed, and works such as Bartlett's Familiar Quotations have not been particularly useful to historians because they are primarily literary in emphasis. This work is not perfect—it might well have been fuller and it is decidedly Western in orientation—but it serves a vital need.—James A. Casada, Dept. of History, Winthrop Coll., Rock Hill, S.C.

Sandberg, Larry & Dick Weissman. The Folk Music Sourcebook.

Knopf. 1976. 260p. illus. index. LC 75-34472. $15; ISBN 0-394-49684-1. pap. ISBN 0-394-73098. $7.95. MUSIC/REF

This is the best-organized, most informative music sourcebook I have seen. It's divided into four major sections—"Listening," "Learning," "Playing," and "Hanging Out"—with the most space given to an analysis and listing of significant "folk-based" records and performers. Folk-based includes entries on everything from the blues to North American Indian music but excludes material on already well-documented folk-related musical genres like country and western and jazz. Libraries interested in building record collections of specialized music like Chicano will find the book invaluable. The other sections are of vital interest to the folk performer. Scores of recommended songbooks are listed; instructional books and records, and brand-name musical instruments are critically evaluated. The final section lists organizations, films, periodicals, and even videotapes of interest to the folk buff. Essential.—Thomas N. Jewell, Waltham P.L., Mass.

Shaw, Bradley A. Latin American Literature in English Translation: an annotated bibliography.

Center for Inter-American Relations pub. by New York Univ. Pr. 1976. 144p. index. LC 75-7522. ISBN 0-8147-7762-7. $25. LIT/BIBLIOG

Listing translations through 1974, this volume covers all genres from the major cultural zones—Spanish America, Brazil, and the non-Hispanic areas of the Caribbean and Guyanas. Appendixes further indicate translations of Indian literature and Spanish chronicles of the New World. Shaw's annotations concisely describe the individual translations (listing, e.g., the contents of anthologies) and frequently sketch the importance of both work and author. The organization is clear albeit excessively compressed, making searches for some information (like national genres) cumbersome. Valuable to reference collections in public and academic libraries.—Dru Dougherty, Dept. of Spanish & Portuguese, Univ. of California, Berkeley

A Supplement to the Oxford English Dictionary. Vol. 2: H-N.

Oxford Univ. Pr. Dec. 1976. 1282p. ed. by R. W. Burchfield. ISBN 0-19-861123-4. $60. LANG/REF

Considerable revision of plans is evident in the appearance of Volume 2: the intended three volumes (A-G, H-P, Q-Z, the latter two to have been completed "over intervals of not more than three years," LJ 12/15/72) are now to be four volumes, with O-S due in about four years and T-Z, with bibliography, in 1985. Clearly, adequate inclusion of what the publishers call "the American component" proved to be a task more formidable than anticipated (Volume 2 itself, now a fourth of the set rather than a third, took four years instead of the planned three). It is conceded by the publishers that "the proportion of American vocabulary treated in Volume II is higher than in Volume I." One instance of this discrepancy is seen in the treatment of the once pejorative noun Black: in Volume 1 of the Supplement the shift of this term to respectability is unnoted—an omission which is picked up in Volume 2 (see Negro and Negress). Such zealous attention to current detail, evident throughout the work, makes it a supplement in the truest sense.—B. Hunter Smeaton, Dept. of Linguistics, Univ. of Calgary, Alberta, Canada

Wakelyn, John L. Biographical Dictionary of the Confederacy.

Greenwood. Mar. 1977. 672p. bibliog. index. LC 72-13870. ISBN 0-8371-6124-X. $29.95. HIST/REF

Wakelyn's use of statistical methods has produced a valuable reference tool for the student of the ante-bellum South and the Confederacy. Four detailed chapters precede the individual biographies and help to elucidate the analysis and comparison of the lives and careers of the most important Confederate leaders, both civil and military. Wakelyn begins with the Dictionary

Know & claim your AFRICAN NAME
OVER 1400 AFRICAN NAMES
Their Meaning and Pronunciation.

$3.50
RUCKER PRESS, INC.
118 So. Broadway St., Sta. B
P.O. Box 7025, Dayton, Ohio 45407

of American Biography, the Cyclopedia of American Biography, and Appleton's Encyclopedia of American Biography and carries his quest for information to county and state sources, as well as diaries and other primary materials. Some of the included facts may be considered peripheral, but they help to provide background for the researcher interested in psycho-economic or social aspects of the Confederate establishment. Highly recommended for high school, college, and graduate collections.—Scott R. Johnson, Univ. of South Carolina, Coastal Carolina Campus, Conway

Watson, Robert I., Sr., ed. Eminent Contributors to Psychology. Vol. 1: A Bibliography of Primary References. Vol. 2: A Bibliography of Secondary References.

Springer. 1976. Vol. 1, 470p. Vol. 2, 1158p. index. LC 73-88108. Vol. 1, ISBN 0-8261-1450-4. $27; Vol. 2, ISBN 0-8261-1780-5. $80; set. $95. PSYCH/REF

This monumental work casts a wide, but fine-meshed net over the literature of psychology defined in its broadest sense. Volume 1 consists of about 12,000 primary references to the major works of 538 individuals living between 1600 and 1967 who have made a prominent contribution to psychology. Volume 2 consists of about 55,000 secondary references to the same individuals. Arrangement is alphabetical. That this comprehensive work is a cooperative one is shown by the list of 300 specialists named in the acknowledgements. References are full, consistent in form, typographically clear, and cited according to the standards of the American Psychological Association. From the year 1600 this work effectively supersedes psychological (and updates some philosophical) references in the heretofore standard work: Benjamin Rand's "Bibliography of Philosophy, Psychology and Cognate Subjects" (in J. M. Baldwin's Dictionary of Philosophy and Psychology, Vol. 3, Pt.1, Macmillan, 1905). The introductory apparatus is a model of bibliographic clarity and scholarly rationale. Its major use, which alone should justify its cost, will be to authoritatively verify and standardize references for students and scholars—a previously tedious task now greatly simplified. No less important is its usefulness for searches by topic, technique, or school of thought identified by prominent theorist, key practitioner, or founder. Essential for research collections.—William Abrams, Portland State Univ. Lib., Ore.

Weber, Olga S., comp. North American Film and Video Directory: a guide to media collections and services.

Bowker. 1976. 284p. index. LC 76-26748. ISBN 0-8352-0883-4. $25. CINEMA/REF

That the success of most directories depends on the return rate of the questionnaire is once again illustrated by this directory. More than 1200 libraries and media centers responded. In addition to the expected listing of addresses, staff, holdings, and circulation figures, this directory aims to be useful to anyone engaged in booking films. Eligibility to borrow and restrictions on use for the rental services are stated. And if the library does not lend, this is noted. Film collections are described by giving both number of titles and number of prints. Lending and rental information is also given for video collections. But for audio collections there are only statistics; nor is anything said about loan or rental for this medium. A subject index to film collections is another plus in what promises to become one of the more essential tools for nonbook oriented librarians.—Richard Heinzkill, Univ. of Oregon Lib., Eugene

Recently Revised Reference Works

Barzun, Jacques & Henry F. Graff. The Modern Researcher. 3d ed.

HBJ. Feb. 1977. 468p. bibliog. index. LC 76-27411. ISBN 0-15-161480-6. $12.95. REF

Contains new sections of historiography and lecturing and new information on cataloging and sources. Updated bibliography.

Black's Medical Dictionary. 31st ed.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. Feb. 1977. 950p. ed. by William A. R. Thomson, M.D. illus. LC 59-167. rev. ISBN 0-06-490443-1. $15. MED/REF

In addition to the revised text and illustrations, this edition has new entries on the incidence of disease by social class, marriage guidance councils, migraine, infantile autism, donors, etc.

Orne, Jerrold. The Language of the Foreign Book Trade: abbreviations, terms, phrases. 3d ed.

American Lib. Assn. 1976. 333p. LC 76-11748. ISBN 0-8389-0219-7. $15. LANG/REF

This edition covers three new languages (Finnish, Hungarian, and Romanian), bringing the total number of languages treated to 15, and contains more than 26,000 entries, compared to the second edition's 16,000.

Sheehy, Eugene P., comp. with assistance of Rita Keckeissen & Eileen McIlvaine. Guide to Reference Books. 9th ed.

American Lib. Assn. 1976. 1015p. index. LC 76-11751. ISBN 0-8389-0205-7. $30. REF

In this revised, expanded, and updated version of the eighth edition by C. M. Winchell "most sections . . . are now about a third longer."

Wynar, Bohdan S., ed. Reference Books in Paperback: an annotated guide. 2d ed.

Libraries Unlimited. 1976. 317p. index. LC 76-44238. ISBN 0-87287-166-5. $14; pap. ISBN 0-87287-167-3. $10. REF

The first edition was selected by the ALA as one of the "Best Reference Books of 1972." This edition contains 715 main entries, and an additional 1500 titles are referred to within the annotations. Many new entries have been included, and out-of-print or superseded works have been dropped. Also, unlike the first edition, this one reviews materials without regard to price.

—This highly selective listing was compiled by Robert R. Harris

ART

Critchlow, Keith. Islamic Patterns: an analytical and cosmological approach.

Schocken. 1976. 192p. fwd. by Seyyed Hossein Nasr. illus. LC 76-8694. $24.95. PHIL/ART

Much of Islamic art, especially architecture and design, is essentially geometric, both physically and mathematically. Using nearly 200 illustrations, Critchlow attempts to demonstrate that the geometric shapes found in Islamic art reflect metaphysical and cosmological principles—geometric forms are used as symbols to relate the finite many with the infinite One. His book is a highly technical examination of the geometric patterns and their esoteric philosophical values. It is an exploration and interpretation of designs only, not a study of written sources or individual works of art. Mainly for specialists in Islamics, art, and architecture, and possibly for mathematically/numerically oriented occultists.—David W. Littlefield, Library of Congress

Deuchler, Florens & others. Swiss Painting: from the Middle Ages to the dawn of the twentieth Century.

Rizzoli. 1976. 198p. illus., some color. index. LC 76-15491. ISBN 0-8478-0056-3. $45. ART

A fascinating, handsomely illustrated study, attempting to resolve the question, "is there a Swiss art, or is there merely art in Switzerland?" The authors bring together from the Middle Ages to the 20th Century, artists as diverse as Konrad Witz, Hans Holbein, Henry Fuseli, Ferdinand Hodler, and Felix Vallotton. Switzerland, with its three separate cultures (French, German, and Italian) and its loose confederation of cantons, would scarcely seem to have encouraged a consistent development of a national school of painting, yet the authors make a strong case for Swiss nationalism as they discuss the influence of native traditions, folk art, and natural surroundings on the arts. This is an original new look at artists usually considered within the larger European movements of gothic, Renaissance, baroque, Neoclassicism and Romanticism.—Elizabeth Lindquist-Cock, Dept. of Art History, Massachusetts Coll. of Art, Boston

Fidell-Beaufort, Madeline & Janine Bailly-Herzberg. Daubigny.

Kent State Univ. Pr. 1976. 285p. illus., some color. index. $80. ART

Among the more significant and yet neglected of the French artists of the 19th Century is the landscapist C. F. Daubigny. With the publication of this handsomely produced bilinguai volume an important initial step has been taken in closing this scholarly gap. An informative biographical essay on the peripatetic painter and an excellent representative selection of his paintings, prints, and drawings make up the core of the work. In addition, there are biographical profiles of some of the less well-known figures in the artist's circle, a gathering of his correspondence, and the inventory drawn up at his death. The absence of any formal analysis, consideration of his stylistic development or discussion of his artistic connections detracts from the book's value. Readers unfamiliar with French will be disappointed by the untranslated documentary sections. Nevertheless—even in spite of the exorbitant price—the important corpus of plates and the new documentation will recommend this volume to larger art history collections.—Robert Cahn, Dept. of Social Sciences, Fashion Inst. of Technology, New York

Freeman, Margaret B. The Unicorn Tapestries.

Metropolitan Museum of Art, dist. by Dutton. 1976. 244p. illus., some color. index. LC 76-2466. ISBN 0-87099-147-7. $45. ART

The curator emeritus of the Cloisters discusses the original ownership, manufacture, and provenance of the Cloisters tapestries and gives background information on the history of the unicorn in written and pictorial accounts as well as the symbolism of the birds, beasts, flowers, etc. represented. The text shows extensive scholarship and careful documentation; medieval records and prints are cited as well as more recent research. This is the first full-length book on these tapestries and its readability, accurately colored illustrations, and overall quality recommend it to all libraries with medieval collections. It should also attract the general reader, especially in the New York area.—Raissa Fomerand, Librarian, Sleepy Hollow Restorations, Tarrytown, N.Y.

Kitzinger, Ernst. The Art of Byzantium and the Medieval West: selected studies.

Indiana Univ. Pr. 1976. 419p. ed. by W. Eugene Kleinbauer. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-34728. ISBN 0-253-31055-5. $22.50. ART

This judicious compilation of 13 previously published journal articles, arranged chronologically, offers not only a solid introduction to the development of medieval art in the Mediterranean basin but also a wide-ranging overview of methodological approaches to art historical problems. In the postscript, the author updates each of his papers with a review of more recent literature; a full bibliography of his publications through 1975 is also appended. Even institutions holding a number of the periodicals in which this material originally appeared will find it worthwhile to acquire this convenient collection of papers by one of the most eminent scholars of the period. Highly recommended for strong art history collections.—Floyd M. Zula, Arkansas State Univ. Lib., State University

Lipman, Jean & Helen M. Franc. Bright Stars: American painting and sculpture since 1776.

Dutton. 1976. 208p. intro. by John I. H. Baur. illus., mainly color. index. LC 76-25791. ISBN 0-525-07147-4. $35. ART

Lipman and Franc have put their long years of involvement with American and with modern art into a venture that is clearly meant to be popular—a selection of 150 works of American art which they find worthy of "star" rating, something akin to Michelin's "worth a special visit." They do present some very striking images, particularly among the folk art they seem to find especially rewarding, but in spite of the caveat that theirs is not an art historical survey, it is hard not to wonder, for example, at their choice of three Calders and their not having any American narrative painting, nor any American Impressionists (except Cassatt), and very little work of the early 20th century. (Small black-and-white illustrations in Baur's introduction do cover some of these subjects.) The text for each picture gives biographical data and often cites contemporary opinion. The plates vary in quality; on the whole, the colors tend to be very bright.—Margot Karp, Pratt Inst. Lib., Brooklyn

Restany, Pierre. César.

Abrams. 1976. 231p. illus., some color. bibliog. tr. by John Shepley. LC 74-30064. ISBN 0-8109-0358-X. $37.50. ART

A study of the work of César Baldacinni, a leading New Realist sculptor, by Restany, French art critic and promoter of the New Realist movement. Unfortunately, Restany's text excessively glorifies César as a unique genius whose technological innovations and motivations have never completely been understood by his public. Though partly correct, Restany does not give nearly enough credit to sculptors such as John Chamberlain whose techniques closely parallel those used by César. The 201 illustrations (40 in color), however, make this a worthwhile contribution by demonstrating César's constant search for an organic unity of form and material. Shown are the poetic, welded junk metal works; the fascinating compressions of automobiles, motorbikes, etc.; the monumental plastic "human imprints," and the dramatic polyurethane expansions. Collections on contemporary art will want this.—John Harvath, Jr., Houston P.L.

Turner, Joseph Mallord William. Joseph Mallord William Turner.

Abrams. (Lib. of Great Painters). 1976. 169p. text by John Walker. illus., some color. bibliog. index. LC 76-4090. ISBN 0-8109-0513-2. $22.50. ART

Considering the many titles on Turner published within the past ten years, this new addition is a satisfactory general introduction to the artist's life and works. It includes a selective bibliography (which omits some new titles), a biographical outline (which is less thorough than the one in the Tate Gallery 1974 exhibition catalogue) and 130 illustrations, 56 of which are tipped-in color reproductions apposed by descriptive commentary. Similar to Luke Herrmann's Turner (LJ 12/1/75), Walker's book offers a readable, competent text that summarizes previous works, good illustrative material, and a reliable survey of Turner's career. However, it may duplicate information, visual or factual, in other sources.—Robin Kaplan, Los Angeles County Museum of Art Lib.

Architecture

National Trust for Historic Preservation. America's Forgotten Architecture.

Pantheon. 1976. 311p. photogs. bibliog. index. LC 76-9467. ISBN 0-394-49692-2. $20; pap. ISBN 0-394-73228-6. $8.95. ARCHITECTURE

American architecture is the personification of the diversity of people who created this country, with each foreign culture bringing new architectural styles, functions, and customs to the New World, resulting not in one homogenous American style, but rather in a multicolored variegation. The function of this book is to make the American public aware of its grand architectural heritage, in particular of those obscure gems of American architecture generally ignored by both the public as well as the architectural historian and thus in danger of being torn down. A series of superb photographs presents a panorama of surviving landmark monuments, subdivided into the areas of living space, agriculture, community, public welfare, transportation, commerce and industry, and sites and memorials. The final chapters offer a lucid list of suggestions that can be implemented by both communities and individuals for the preservation, utilization, and financing of those architectural monuments that can still be salvaged.—Paul Grootkerk, Dept. of Fine Arts, Univ. of New Orleans

Sky, Alison & Michelle Stone. Unbuilt America: forgotten architecture in the United States from Thomas Jefferson to the space age.

McGraw. 1976. 320p. illus. bibliog. $14.95. ARCHITECTURE

The authors of Unbuilt America are founding members of Site, Inc., an organization concerned with the urban visual environment and the visual perception of public space. Their book illustrates approximately 300 conceptually significant but unrealized (or significantly altered) projects in architecture and environmental arts. It is one of the most stimulating books on public art that I've seen and ranges from projects by Thomas Jefferson to ones conceived by well-known contemporaries like Buckminster Fuller, Soleri, Noguchi, and Claes Oldenburg. My only complaint is that each project is only treated briefly; there is a selected bibliography for those who would like to pursue the subject further. For each project the authors have included a drawing or floor plan of the model, brief biographical information about the artist or architect and a short discussion of the project. Most of the discussions are by the project artists themselves. A book for anyone concerned about the past and present use of America's urban environment.—Katharine Ratzenberger, Smithsonian Inst. Libs.

Smith, G. E. Kidder. A Pictorial History of Architecture in America. 2 vols.

American Heritage, dist. by Norton. 1976. 832p. photogs. index. intros. by Marshall B. Davidson. LC 76-18193. ISBN 0-393-04453-X. slipcased. $45; until Dec. 31, $39.95. ARCHITECTURE

This lavish and handsomely produced two-volume set succeeds in providing a comprehensive pictorial view of American architecture, from cliff dwellings in Mesa Verde to the Hancock Tower in Chicago. The author, a distinguished architect and critic, traveled some 130,000 miles over a nine-year period to take photographs of some of the country's most significant buildings. Unfortunately, the 800 photographs selected for this publication have been divided into seven arbitrary regions, making it difficult to compare the architectural developments in Virginia, for example, with those in neighboring Maryland. There is a heavy concentration of buildings constructed since World War II, with some periods, such as Art Deco, and some building types, such as railroad stations, receiving little attention. Too often the viewer is given details of buildings rather than entire facades. Despite these limitations, however, Smith's book is a stunning visualization of America's architectural heritage—and an important commentary on our manmade environment.—H. Ward Jandl, National Register of Historic Places, Washington, D.C.

Decorative Arts & Crafts

Bodkin, Cora & others. Crafts for Your Leisure Years.

Houghton. 1976. illus. ISBN 0-395-24767-5. $14.95; pap. ISBN 0-395-24837-X. $7.95. CRAFTS

This is a useful book for senior citizens and people who work with them. The authors base the information on their experience as craft teachers in senior citizens centers. The crafts presented cover woodworking, needlecraft, pottery, and paperwork. The directions, written in easy-to-read type, presume no previous knowledge of the craft. A valuable chapter describes compensatory techniques for people with poor eyesight, arthritis, and other disabilities. There is a resource appendix for professionals. For large public libraries, especially because of the chapter on compensatory techniques.—Margaret Zeps, Chetco Community Lib., Brookings, Ore.

Christensen, Jo Ippolito. The Needlepoint Book.

Prentice-Hall. (Creative Handcrafts). 1976. 384p. drawings by Lynn Lucas Jones. photogs., some color by James T. Long. bibliog. index. LC 76-182. ISBN 0-13-610980-2. $17.95; pap. Spectrum ISBN 0-13-610972-1. $9.95. CRAFTS

There is little about this book that I cannot recommend except that dictionaries of needlepoint stitches have been issued before, e.g., Katharine Irey's The Encyclopedia of Canvas Embroidery Stitch Patterns (LJ 10/15/72) and Sherlee Lantz's A Pageant of Pattern for Needlepoint Canvas (Grosset, 1975, 2d ed). This one ranks among the better ones. It is comprehensive; the notation system designating the instructions is easy to understand, and it also includes a photo of each stitch pattern. It starts with some preliminary information on materials and procedures and some color plates of projects. If you have nothing else, this would be a good buy.—Lois Horowitz, Univ. of California Lib. at San Diego

Gross, Henry. Simplified Bookbinding.

Scribners. 1976. 176p. illus. index. LC 76-4862. ISBN 0-684-14616-9. $9.95; pap. ISBN 0-684-14632-0. $3.95. CRAFTS

A clear, concise handbook on hobby bookbinding, well illustrated with photos and drawings and giving only occasional bad advice (using PVA to mend leather is not recommended by real conservators). The narrative on "how books are bound" found here is far superior to the usual word list for introducing bookbinding terminology. The list of suppliers includes only East Coast companies, a common fault of craft books published in New York. Public libraries should get the paperback edition; special collections on bookbinding will want a hardbound reference copy.—Bonnie Jo Dopp, San Francisco P.L.

Saunders, Richard. Collecting and Restoring Wicker Furniture.

Crown. 1976. 118p. illus. index. LC 76-14995. ISBN 0-517-52622-0. $6.95. DEC ARTS

Wicker, or woven, furniture has become a popular collectible in recent years. This is the first book for collectors which has become available on this subject. The author briefly traces the history of wicker furniture from 4000 B.C. until the 1840's and follows with a more detailed history of the wicker furniture industry in the United States from 1844 to the 1930's; after that time the popularity and quality of the furniture declined. The illustrations in this section show a wonderful range of styles, from the purely functional to the truly bizarre. The final chapter describes in detail the techniques of replacing broken canes, spokes, and set-in cane seats. A list of manufacturers and supply houses is appended. Recommended for general collections on antiques.—Constance Ashmore Fairchild, Univ. of Illinois Lib., Urbana

Schnessel, S. Michael. Icart.

Potter, dist. by Crown. 1976. 192p. intro. by Katherine Morrison McClinton. illus., some color. bibliog. index. $19.95; until Dec. 31, $17.95. DEC ARTS

Here is quite a complete approach to the life, works, times, and importance of Louis Icart (1888–1950). By implication, Art Deco is given another showing, definition, and documentation. Certain ideas—regarding some aims of Art Deco (for instance, "a fashion directed almost exclusively toward women," introduction) and what constitutes "camp" taste—may not be shared by all readers, but such disagreements add interest. Enhancements, along with the generous supply of graphics, are the four appendixes on: Icart works copyrighted in the U.S.; complete descriptions of Icart's illustrated books; sources of cartoons from Icart's most active period of magazine illustration (1915–1919); and a select list of exhibitions.—Julia Morrison, New York

Siegler, Susan. Needlework Patterns from the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

New York Graphic Society: Little. 1976. 184p. illus., some color. LC 76-10097. ISBN 0-8212-0639-7. $17.50. CRAFTS

Siegler continues the Metropolitan's tradition of elegance in this very fine book. The author states that patterns were included to convey a sense of the great range of designs produced throughout the centuries. They do not necessarily represent the rarest or most famous pieces in the Museum but, rather, were chosen to delight, teach, and challenge today's needleworker. Included for each of the 24 patterns (for needlepoint and crewel work) is a photograph and descriptive detail about the original, a closeup color photograph of the design, an enlarged pattern and information regarding materials needed, working instructions, etc. The last section of the book shows how to do the stitches and provides needleworkers with ideas for creative applications by illustrating each stitch with a sample from the Museum's collection. This book is highly recommended and it surely must be a number one choice on every needleworker's Christmas list. The problem with a book like this one is that it makes you want more.—Olivia Opello, Inst. for Pharmaceuticals, Univ. of Mississippi, University

Stevens, Bob C. The Collector's Book of Snuff Bottles.

Weatherhill, dist. by Lippincott. 1976. 312p. color illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-884. ISBN 0-8348-0119-1. boxed $75. DEC ARTS

These small bottles for holding snuff were as artfully and expensively made by the Chinese and Japanese as were the snuff boxes in Europe at approximately the same time. Although the snuff bottles were made and used after the boxes were no longer fashionable, even these later ones appeal to the collectors who can afford them. Stearns, who has lived in Tokyo for some years, is an avid collector; he has also sought to be an informed one and has here consolidated information gathered over the years. Along with the historical background, there is an explanation of the symbolism in the minute carving and all he has been able to discover of known makers and of some of the frauds. The core of the book consists of the excellent reproductions in color which occupy more than a third of the total number of pages and illustrate nearly 900 bottles, most from Stearn's collection but many from other collections and from museums. One may occasionally question the author's generosity in assigning 18th-century date to a bottle, but not his basic facts. A particularly special book for the special collection.—Paul von Khrum, formerly with New York Univ. Libs.

Graphic Arts

Levy, Lester S. Picture the Songs: lithographs from the sheet music of Nineteenth-Century America.

Johns Hopkins. 1976. 213p. photogs., some color. bibliog. LC 76-13518. ISBN 0-8018-1814-1. $25; until Dec. 31, $19.95. MUSIC/GRAPHIC ARTS

Lester Levy's earlier books, Give Me Yesterday, Flashes of Merriment and Grace Notes in American History, established his place as one of the grand men of American sheet music collectors while presenting interesting examples from his magnificent collection as nostalgic documents of American heritage. Picture the Songs shows about 100 early American sheet music covers, many beautifully reproduced in color, as specimens of art, the work of many remarkable 19th-Century American lithographers. Portraits of great and common men, scenes of contemporary events, cartoons, buildings, animals, machines, and monuments by such artists as James McNeill Whistler and Winslow Homer appear with fascinating accounts of the events or circumstances which inspired the music and covers. Full credits are given to the composers, artists, lithographers and lyricists, all of whom are cited in the index, and a six-page bibliography lists Levy's sources.—Stephen M. Fry, UCLA Music Lib.

Tahir, Abe M., Jr. Hnizdovsky: woodcuts, 1944-1975.

Pelican. 1976. 166p. essay by Jacques Hnizdovsky. fwd. by Peter A. Wick. illus. index. LC 76-12461. ISBN 0-88289-072-7. $25; special ed. ISBN 0-88289-150-3. $95; deluxe ed. ISBN 0-88289-149-9. $350. GRAPHIC ARTS Distinctive indeed among woodcut prints sold in the better galleries are those of expatriate Yugoslavian artist Hnizdovsky. These prints, mainly of plants and animals, have also graced a few attractive books. This excellently produced volume will acquaint an increased number of viewers with Hnizdovsky's compositions. Design and spare detail are skillfully blended to warrant this artist's popularity in his limited-edition woodcuts. This work looks like a candidate for the 50 best books of the year.—Malcolm M. Ferguson, formerly with Itek Corp. Lib., Lexington, Mass.

Photography

Brandau, Robert, ed. De Meyer.

Knopf. 1976. essay by Philippe Jullian. 150p. photogs. LC 75-36796. ISBN 0-394-49744-9. $25. PHOTOG

Baron Adolf de Meyer, who with his wife Olga moved in Europe's fashionable circles, first turned to photography as an amateur. He was associated with the international movement for photography's recognition among the fine arts led by Stieglitz in the early 1900's. Later, in his work as a professional photographer for high fashion magazines, he developed a highly refined style which influenced the genre for decades. Jullian's essay places de Meyer's career in the context of elegance and chic which characterized his style, and the plates include fine examples of his society portraits and the seminal fashion work, done after his arrival in New York in 1914. The book is an addition to a neglected area of photography's history, and as an intimate picture of the tastes and habits of society between 1900 and the 1930's, it should interest the general reader as well.—Patricia G. Fuller, Seattle Arts Comm., Wash.

Hattersley, Ralph. Beginner's Guide to Darkroom Techniques.

Dolphin: Doubleday. 1976. 160p. illus. LC 76-1063. ISBN 0-385-11073-1. pap. $3.95. PHOTOG

Here is a really useful and comprehensive beginner's guide to black-and-white darkroom methods that covers its subject matter clearly and extensively without confusing jargon or insulting baby talk. It is written to be understood, with plenty of detailed instructions accompanied by precise step-by-step illustrations and examples. The reader is eased through a thorough and logically organized learning process by a text that maintains a good balance between technical information and practical procedures. The book goes beyond the basics in some areas such as print manipulation and solarization, giving the beginner a taste of the pleasant variety and challenges to unveil as he gains proficiency. Hattersley, an editor at Popular Photography magazine, knows his stuff and is able to communicate it well.—Hermann J. Beck, Jamaica Arts Center, New York

Lesy, Michael. Real Life: Louisville in the Twenties.

Pantheon. 1976. 256p. illus. LC 76-9977. ISBN 0-394-49813-5. $15.95; pap. ISBN 0-394-73235-9. $7.95. HIST/PHOTOG

Ostensibly a photo history of the people of Louisville in the 1920's, this book is, in fact, less a history than an exercise in creative expression. The photographs "have been arranged so as to resemble sequences edited from a film"; the items of the text, mostly extensive quotations, "have been so placed . . . as to resemble a crossword puzzle freed of its frame." Lesy uses this technique effectively to create a series of imaginative tableaus suggesting that for many of Louisville's residents life was filled with anguish and despair. Lesy has a unique psycho-historical vision of the American past. However, his evocative volume is based on only a small sampling of available evidence. Historians will rankle at Lesy's methodology, while others will admire his sense of the aesthetic.—William E. Tydeman, Mars Hill Coll. Lib., Mars Hill, N.C.

Slavin, Neal. When Two or More Are Gathered Together.

Farrar. 1976. unpaged. color photogs. LC 76-40338. $25. PHOTOG

This collection of 65 group portraits grew out of Slavin's desire to document the "conflict between individuality and belonging." Each color photograph centers on the membership of a social or commercial peer group—ranging from lady wrestlers to a New York chess club—and includes a brief explanation of the group's history and purpose. In a break with traditional portrait photography, Slavin allows the groups to pose themselves; and the resultant displays of camaraderie or tension among group members provide the collection with its main point of interest. Slavin is unquestionably an accomplished photographer, but the collection is a disappointment nonetheless—perhaps as a consequence of a good idea being carried a bit too far. The volume's high price and rather limited appeal make it a necessary purchase only for specialized collections.—Philip M. Fragasso, Woburn P.L., Mass.

Stock, Dennis. This Land of Europe: a photographic exploration.

Kodansha, dist. by Harper. 1976. 132p. intro. by H. R. Trevor-Roper. color photogs. LC 76-9360. ISBN 0-87011-276-7. $25. CONSERVATION/PHOTOG

This attractive, large-format book contains four photographic folios and five essays by prominent European academicians that explore pictorially and verbally the beauties of the European countryside. Photographer Stock has a sensitive eye, and his use of 35mm in a field primarily reserved for view cameras is generally successful: his images are rich in color and detail. However, the notably inferior quality of some pictures betrays the use of a zoom lens, an optic both unnecessary and unwelcome in landscape photography. Of the essays, the most thought-provoking are the introduction by historian H. R. Trevor-Roper and the observations by naturalist Konrad Lorenz, both of whom point out that not merely ecological conservationism, but also esthetic awareness of natural Europe is a very late development in the Western mind. Three centuries ago scarcely anyone could see more than foreboding bleakness and unproductive wasteland in the soaring peaks of the Alps. The other essayists include philosopher Julián Marías, geographer Emil Egli, sociologist Roger Caillois, and conservationist Kai Curry-Lindahl. A good but not outstanding work.—Walter P. Coombs, Jr., Pratt Museum, Amherst Coll., Mass.

A VISION SHARED

A Classic Portrait of America and Its People (1935-1943)

Compiled and Introduced by Hank O'Neal

"Walker Evans, Ben Shahn... Russell Lee, Carl Mydans, Dorothea Lange and Arthur Rothstein. ...Here, with introduction and brief minibiogs of each of 11 photographers (including the above mentioned) by Hank O'Neal, is an overpowering portrait of human poverty and courage...."
—Publishers Weekly (10/25/76)

320 pp. Photos. $35.00 till 12/31/76; $39.95 thereafter.

St. Martin's Press
175 Fifth Avenue
New York 10010

Yulsman, Jerry. The Complete Book of 35MM Photography.

Coward. 1976. 220p. illus. LC 75-45425. ISBN 0-698-10734-9. $8.95. PHOTOG

This Jerry Yulsman (not the more widely known Uelsmann) has produced a book useful to both the new and the fairly experienced photographer. However, because it presents only those aspects of 35mm photography involving the camera, it is somewhat mistitled: the coverage is not complete because it does not include film processing or darkroom techniques. But the book does what it does quite well. It is clearly written, accurate, and practical without being boring. Technical data and information on cameras, hardware and films are precise and up-to-date. A well-prepared glossary, an equipment buying guide with dependable advice, and five pertinent appendixes complete a valuable broad introduction to the use of the 35mm camera.—Hermann J. Beck, Jamaica Arts Center, New York

BIOGRAPHY

Alberti, Rafael. The Lost Grove.

Univ. of California Pr. Dec. 1976. 321p. tr., ed. & intro. by Gabriel Berns. illus. $11.95. LIT/AUTOBIOG

This fine translation of the Spanish poet's autobiography (1942 and 1959) contains an informative introduction by Berns covering Alberti's life and his recording of it. Book 1 (1902-1917) portrays Alberti's sometimes humorous and often serious view of religious fanaticism, a view which caused him many inner conflicts. Alberti also describes his unfortunate experience in a Jesuit school and his frustrations with various jobs. Book 2 (1917-1931) is substantially longer and protrays Alberti's struggles to become first a painter, and later a poet. Anecdotes offer insight into such authors as Juan Ramón Jiménez, Miguel de Unamuno, and Azorin, as well as Alberti himself. The text bubbles with vitality, and the reader is willingly lured into Alberti's fascinating life and Weltanschauung. Recommended for strong Hispanic collections.—James J. Troiano, Dept. of Foreign Languages & Classics, Univ. of Maine, Orono

Ciano, Edda Mussolini as told to Albert Zarca. My Truth.

Morrow. Jan. 1977. 288p. tr. from French by Eileen Finletter. photogs. ISBN 0-688-03099-8. $8.95. HIST/MEMOIR

Edda Mussolini was Il Duce's oldest and most favored child. In 1930 she married Count Galeazzo Ciano, who soon became foreign minister in Duce's Fascist government. By July 1943, the situation in Italy had deteriorated greatly and Ciano joined others in the Grand Council vote to make Duce resign. When Mussolini was returned to power by the Germans, Ciano and five others were tried for treason and executed in January 1944. Edda never believed that her husband was a traitor; now, motivated by the unfairness she perceives in recent books on the subject, she sets out to defend him. Edda describes Ciano glowingly as a good husband, a considerate father, and a wise diplomat. Benito, too, comes in for some fond anecdotes. At some length she explains Ciano's attitude toward the Nazis and other aspects of the Italo–German alliance. On the whole, Signora Ciano's "truth" is a subjective version of events, factually correct perhaps but gossipy and undocumented. She reveals a high opinion of herself and her circle; and her casual indictment of Jews betrays an intemperate intolerance. Written in a fast-paced, journalistic style, this book has value as an eyewitness recounting of turbulent times.—Barbara Conaty, formerly with Madison P.L., Wis.

Egan, Ferol. Frémont: explorer for a restless nation.

Doubleday. Jan. 1977. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-2770. ISBN 0-385-01775-8. $14.95. HIST BIOG

John C. Frémont's star burned brightly but briefly. Explorer, imperialist, revolutionary, and politician, he probably did more to promote the idea of America's Manifest Destiny than any other figure of the age. Egan's biography, concentrating on the heroic years of exploration, is absorbing, vivid, and more complete than previous accounts. Intended for general readers, it is more concerned with the drama of events than with the larger meaning of Frémont's career. Egan shows him as a courageous leader, a visionary, a man of high principle, and as an individualist. Yet, Frémont's life after the Civil War was marked by political, military, and financial failure. This darker side of Frémont's life has raised questions about his ability, character, and ultimately his importance in American history. Such questions lie beyond Egan's focus, and they remind us that Frémont still awaits his definitive biographer.—Peter J. Coleman, Dept. of History, Univ. of Illinois, Chicago Circle

Gray, Tony. Champions of Peace: the story of Alfred Nobel, the Peace Prize and the Laureates.

Paddington Pr: Two Continents. Dec. 1976. 320p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-3812. ISBN 0-8467-0143-X. $10.95. INT AFFAIRS/BIOG

This rather fact-filled but still lively and interpretive work begins with a biography of Nobel and a history of events connected with the establishment of the Prize. The second part deals with the 56 men, three women and eight institutions who have accepted the prize—starting with Henri Dumont and Frederic Passy in 1901 and ending with Andrei Sakharov in 1975. Gray devotes a chapter to each decade, opening each with a sketchy review of the history, culture, politics, etc. of the period. The individual biographies are brief and usually not unkind, though certainly not devoid of candor. Gray captures the oddity of this collection of strange bedfellows: for example, German Gustave Stresemann, who urged submarine warfare in World War I and Austrian Berta von Sutter, one of the few true pacifists included (Gandhi never made the list); and fellow Americans Norman Borlug of Green Revolution fame and Henry Kissinger, who was Presidential adviser during the "peace" bombing of Viet Nam. All in all, the book is fascinating reading and provides a needed overview of these "peace champions" and their "king of dynamite" benefactor.—Clifton E. Wilson, Dept. of Government, Univ. of Arizona, Tucson

Himes, Chester. My Life of Absurdity: the autobiography of Chester Himes. Vol. 2.

Doubleday. 1976. photogs. ISBN 0-385-08909-0. $9.95. LIT/AUTOBIOG

It is the view that the life of the black man in America is essentially absurd that, according to Himes, distinguished his fictions. His own alienation from American society and his inability to relate to European culture constitute his private sense of absurdity; however, he periodically asserts these themes in the second volume of his autobiography (Volume 1 is The Quality of Hurt, LJ 3/15/72) without developing them coherently. Much of the book is a listing of trivial details: clothes Himes has worn, contracts he has signed, places he has lived, cars he has owned, even meals he has eaten—including one actual menu. Careless writing is found on virtually every page. Though critics are divided on the merits of Himes's novels, it is clear that it is in them that he is at his best.—Henry J. Lindborg, Dept. of English, Marion Coll., Fond du Lac, Wis.

Peerce, Jan & Alan Levy. The Bluebird of Happiness—the Memoirs of Jan Peerce.

Harper. 1976. 320p. index. photogs. ISBN 0-06-013311-2. $12.50. MUSIC/BIOG

"Equally at home with the Bach Aria Group, on the recital stage, at the Metropolitan Opera singing Verdi, singing the Beethoven Ninth with Toscanini, doing Fiddler on the Roof on Broadway, singing in shul, or singing the Star-Spangled Banner in Shea Stadium on opening day" is how conductor James Levine characterizes Jan Peerce, one of America's most popular tenors for most of the more than 40 years of his singing career. These memoirs (capably set down by Alan Levy) reveal a strong personality colored with intense religious feeling and a no-nonsense self-assurance that may antagonize readers but that also accounts for Peerce's frankness and aggressiveness—qualities which make such a collection of anecdotes and namedropping interesting to others. The cast of characters includes Toscanini, Rachmaninoff, Erich Leinsdorf, Roberta Peters, President Nixon, Pope Pius XII, Rudolf Bing, and many others. Recommended for public libraries serving Peerce's fans and other aficionados of opera/show business memorabilia.—Donald McCormick, N.Y. P.L.

Salisbury, Harrison E. Travels Around America.

Walker. 1976. 182p. photogs. index. LC 76-16306. ISBN 0-8027-0549-9. $9.95. SOC SCI/PER NAR

Rich in observation and speculation,

Salisbury's journal incorporates personal history and interview in an effort to understand contemporary America. Salisbury's "travels" begin with a visit with Hiram Salisbury, an 18th-Century trader from Chepachet, R.I., and continue through the author's own boyhood in Wisconsin and his later treks to California, the South, and the Midwest. Included are observations Salisbury made as a foreign correspondent in Russia, and the results of interviews he conducted with Americans, both social critics (Hunter Thompson, Tom Hayden, Charles Reich) and everyday people. Salisbury recalls the days of the civil-rights and antiwar movements, visiting participants, trying to analyze the effects and effectiveness of these contemporary rebellions. He emerges optimistic that this nation will overcome its problems by exercising its inherent resourcefulness and resilience.—Ruth E. Almeida, North County Lib., Glen Burnie, Md.

Shine, Ian & Sylvia Wrobel. Thomas Hunt Morgan: pioneer of genetics.

Univ. Pr. of Kentucky. 1976. 175p. illus. index. LC 76-9519. ISBN 0-8131-0219-7. $7.50. BIOLOGY/BIOG

This lucid examination of the life and work of the first Nobel laureate in genetics is also a history of early development of the science of genetics. The work describes the salient points in Morgan's personal life but concentrates on his research achievements. His career is traced from its beginnings at Johns Hopkins, through his work in the "Fly Room" at Columbia, at the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute, and at Caltech. Working with fruit flies, Morgan and his team established the chromosome theory of inheritance and proved that genes are linearly arrayed along the chromosome. An absorbing, scholarly biography.—Jean MacArthur-Conelley, Univ. of Massachusetts Medical Sch. Lib., Worcester

Smith, Gary M. Windsinger.

Sierra Club, dist. by Scribners. 1976. 175p. illus., some color. LC 76-21291. ISBN 0-87156-192-1. $7.95. MUSIC/PER NAR

Smith, national park ranger, traveler, naturalist, musician, and composer, chronicles his wilderness experiences in a most unusual way: he writes songs about them. In this beautifully illustrated volume, various Indian legends, tales of mountain lore, stories of isolated places, and personal glimpses are transformed from a narrative plot into song lyrics and music. The lyrics of some 15 songs and the complete music of half a dozen others are included. In the Sierra Club tradition, this will probably have wide appeal to hikers, travelers, outdoor persons, and wandering minstrels alike.—Timothy Daum, Ohio Univ. Lib., Athens

Stevens, Holly. Souvenirs and Prophecies: the young Wallace Stevens.

Knopf. Jan. 1977. 320p. LC 76-13733. ISBN 0-394-49138-6. $12.50. LIT/BIOG

With scholarly diligence and daughterly devotion, Holly Stevens has created a fascinating portrait of the artist as a young man. She interweaves entries from Stevens' journals (which he began in 1898 as a Harvard sophomore aflame with poetic fervency and concluded before 1914 when he first published professionally), journalistic passages from his correspondence of that time, and her own adroit analyses, insightful commentary, and occasional anecdotes. The child is father to the man: the youthful musings and poetic attempts bear the seeds of Stevens' mature work. Thus, we are presented with an aesthetic revelation as well as an intimate portrayal. Highly recommended.—Marcia G. Fuchs, Free Lib. of Philadelphia Strangwayes-Booth, Joanna. A Cricket in the Thorn Tree: Helen Suzman and the Progressive Party of South Africa.

Indiana Univ. Pr. 1976. 320p. illus. index. LC 76-486. ISBN 0-253-31483-6. $12.50. POL SCI/BIOG

Studies of South Africa too often tend to focus attention on radicals of both races. At last—but likely too late—a good study of the white conscience in South Africa has been written. For 13 years (1961–1974) Suzman virtually single-handedly opposed many of the worst proposals in South Africa's Parliament to extend Apartheid. Unfortunately, her calls for peaceful change will now be considered unviable by most interested parties. This book, a biography of Suzman and of the Progressive Party, will help clarify the current situation in South Africa for some readers. It will inspire anyone who has struggled for an unpopular cause.—John J. Grotpeter, Dept. of Political Science, St. Louis Coll. of Pharmacy

Straus, Dorothea. Palaces and Prisons.

Houghton. 1976. 209p. LC 76-26102. ISBN 0-395-24671-1. $7.95. MEMOIR

Straus takes us to the important places of her past: her brother's home in Westchester, the upper West Side of New York, Ireland, and old houses in Venice and Paris. Each place is linked to a particular person: her erratic brother, Philip, who created the Miss Rheingold contest and died broke; Philip Rahv of Partisan Review; Isaac Singer; Edmund Wilson; and others. Alternating with the "place" chapters is a fictional narrative of a disastrous luxury cruise for young millionaires that ends in grotesque horror. Her factual reminiscences are not the usual nostalgia trip either: no wistful yearning for "the good old days" is apparent here. Except for the chapter on her brother, where she is icily hostile, we get almost no sense of Straus herself and her feelings and reactions to these people. She is the most shadowy figure in her book.—Barbara Zelenko, U.S. Attorney's Lib., Southern District of New York

Thomson, David. Woodbrook.

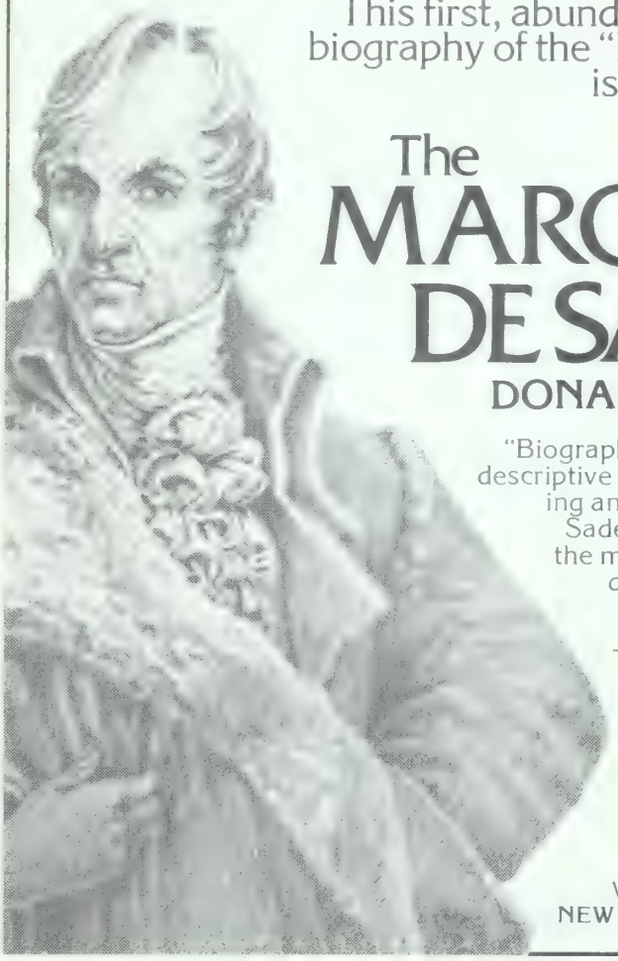
Universe Bks. 1976. 314p. LC 75-34588. ISBN 0-87663-225-8. $10. PER NAR

Woodbrook was a West Ireland estate where the author spent ten summers as a youthful tutor to the Kirkwoods, an old Anglo-Irish family. The book oper-



This first, abundantly illustrated biography of the "Divine Marquis" is "a solid book."*

The MARQUIS DE SADE

DONALD THOMAS

"Biographical and entertaining, descriptive and analytical, engaging and concise... separates Sade, the man, from Sade, the myth. Thomas skillfully discusses 18th-century institutions, attitudes, and customs... Thomas also succeeds in analyzing the psychology of perversion ...Recommended to public and academic libraries."
—*Library Journal

With 71 illustrations, $12.95
NEW YORK GRAPHIC SOCIETY
34 Beacon St., Boston, Mass. 02106

Virginia Woolf's perception of reality and art

Woolf, Virginia. Moments of Being: unpublished autobiographical writings.

HBJ. Jan. 1977. 208p. ed., intro. & notes by Jeanne Schulkind. index. LC 76-27410. ISBN 0-15-162034-2. $8.95. LIT/MEMOIR

The Woolf harvest time continues; all sorts of unpublished materials are finding their way into print. The writings collected here are so splendid that it's a wonder they've not been published before, unfinished or not. The two most substantial pieces deal with Woolf's childhood and young adulthood. "Reminiscences," written when she was 25, is a rather self-conscious effort at putting together her past. "A Sketch of the Past," written more than 30 years later, covers much the same ground but from a different angle and with consummate ease and grace. Part of the fascination of the two fragmentary memoirs is their interaction across the years. Furthermore, "A Sketch of the Past" is not only a marvelous memoir but also a marvelous exploration of the nature of memoir-writing, and some of Woolf's most eloquent statements about her perception of reality and the nature of her art are found here. The collection is rounded out with three essays that provide a sense of the true savor of Bloomsbury. Moments of Being is obviously quite a stunner.—Keith Cushman, Dept. of English, Univ. of North Carolina, Greensboro ates at various levels: one a picture of country life, full of local character, custom, and color; one the bittersweet love story of the young tutor and his eldest pupil; one the starkly brutal history of Ireland since the building of Woodbrook in the early 17th Century. The Kirkwoods, however gently bred, are essentially and forever interlopers, landlords in the midst of a horribly exploited people; thus the reader's sympathy is always in abeyance. The book illuminates, on a very human level, and from a unique vantage point, the scope and the depth of Ireland's troubles.—Patricia Goodfellow, Leaside P.L., Toronto

Truman, Margaret. Women of Courage.

Morrow. 1976. 254p. illus. index. LC 75-45456. ISBN 0-688-03038-6. $7.95. BIOG

In this simply written book, Truman has given us 12 vignettes suitable for an adolescent audience. The stories are a Profiles in Courage for women, motivated by the unarguable proposition that women have demonstrated bravery, heroism, and fortitude since their arrival on the North American continent. Truman apparently selected these particular women because they aroused admiration and enthusiasm in her, but she also uses their stories to espouse a theory of the evolution of "feminine courage"—from physical courage to what she calls gallantry and courage in the pursuit of high ideals. Fortunately, this is not an integral part of the book. An adequately written popular history that can provide inspiration for young teenagers.—Cynthia Harrison, formerly with Brooklyn P.L.

Walker, Mary Hubner. Charles W. Hubner: poet laureate of the South.

Cherokee Pub. 1976. 202p. illus. index. LC 76-14277. ISBN 0-87797-037-8. $10. LIT/BIOG

A granddaughter's genealogical history of prolific poet, songwriter, and editor Hubner (1835-1929), largely gleaned from his unpublished Leaves From the Book of My Life. The biography traces Hubner's life from his birth in Baltimore through his peripatetic youth and Civil War experiences, his family life and relationships with friends (including Joel Chandler Harris), his position as assistant librarian at the Atlanta Public Library, and his literary achievements, including the penning of thousands of poems and the editing of Representative Southern Poets. Walker's narrative is lifeless and at times overly informative, giving, for example, Hubner's breakfast menu and number of teeth in old age; and the text is fraught with footnote inaccuracies and omissions. For Hubner's descendants and inclusive regional collections.—James A. Gollata, Mount Senario Coll. Lib., Ladysmith, Wis.

Wilson, E. Raymond. Thus Far on My Journey.

Friends United. 1976. 324p. photogs. LC 76-42308. ISBN 0-913408-26-3. $5.95. AUTOBIOG

Wilson has been a prominent figure in Quaker activities, especially in the American Friends Service Committee, for over 30 years. In straightforward language, he tells of his interest in the Quaker religion and of his work in pacifist and social reform projects the committee has sponsored throughout the world. The book ends with a lengthy epilogue memorializing his wife Miriam, who died in 1965. Of interest only to very large public libraries and university libraries with comprehensive collections.—Jack Forman, Eastern Massachusetts Regional Lib. System, Boston

Younker, Lucas, D.V.M. & John J. Fried. Animal Doctor: the making of a veterinarian.

Dutton. 1976. LC 76-15390. ISBN 0-8415-0466-0. $8.95. MED/PER NAR

Younker relates incidents from his somewhat bizarre academic career. One learns of the difficulties he encountered in entering veterinary school because of prejudices against his religion (Jewish), and of his involvement in 1960's campus politics. All this, interspersed with stories about his veterinary practice in California, makes for extremely dull reading. Even though it is filled with very personal experiences, this book fails to involve the reader in its subject. Younker's stories of treating dogs that had dipped into their master's supply of marijuana seem as juvenile and humorless as his college pranks. Many young people today are interested in a career in veterinary medicine. This book would neither enlighten nor inspire them.—Mary Blackwell, Detroit P.L.

Ziegler, Philip. Melbourne: a biography of William Lamb, 2nd Viscount Melbourne.

Knopf. 1976. 410p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-13683. ISBN 0-394-49159-9. $15. BIOG

Lord Melbourne, probably the most patronized prime minister in British history, is generally viewed as an amiable if irrelevant throwback to a supposed 18th-Century political world. According to this interpretation, he was called to office by chance and maintained there by inertia, dawdling ineffectually with the exhausted remnant of the Grey ministry while serious political alignments matured elsewhere. The inaccuracy of this interpretation has long been apparent, increasingly so as detailed studies of Melbourne's colleagues have appeared, and Ziegler has here undertaken a persuasive revision. Melbourne, living in an era of political fragmentation, emerges at last as a believable political figure, spurred by ambition and a skillful and, on occasion, ruthless tactician. With this new appreciation, he remains one of the most engaging figures of the 19th century.—Neal R. Shipley, Dept. of History, Univ. of Massachusetts, Amherst

BUSINESS & ECONOMICS

Chill, Dan S. The Arab Boycott of Israel: economic aggression and world reaction.

Praeger. (Special Studies in Internat. Economics & Development). 1976. 121p. bibliog. index. LC 76-14431. ISBN 0-275-56810-5. $14.

An Introduction to Business Law in the Middle East.

Drake. 1976. 105p. ed. by Brian Russell. index. LC 76-16362. ISBN 0-8473-1254-2. $9.95.

INT AFFAIRS/ECON

The book edited by Russell, which contains selected papers from a conference held in London in 1975, does a good job of introducing the reader to the complicated business regulations of the Moslem world. Each paper was written by an expert in his field, but the book only begins to touch the surface of a difficult topic. A law or business library might be interested in owning it.

In his work, Chill does an excellent job of tracing the history and present status of the Arab boycott. The book is well documented: it includes a section containing correspondence and official government documents showing the boycott in action, as well as extensive footnotes and bibliography. Any library desiring an excellent, well-written study of a very controversial subject would do well to purchase Chill's book.—Gary Golden, Southern Illinois Univ. Lib., Carbondale

PLEASE NOTE: The publisher of Robert J. Pinto's How To Save Taxes through Estate Planning (LJ 12/1) states that the book has had a last-minute revision to incorporate changes resulting from the Tax Reform Act of 1976.

Dewdney, John C. The USSR.
262p. LC 76-16744. ISBN 0-89158-616-4.
Pinder, David. The Netherlands.
194p. LC 76-18924. ISBN 0-89158-626-1.
Riley, Raymond. Belgium.
205p. LC 76-18938. ISBN 0-89158-625-3.
ea. vol.: Westview. (Studies in Industrial Geography). 1976. bibliog. index. $19.50.
GEOG/ECON

These volumes represent the initial titles in a projected series intended to present a detailed portrait of the industrial geography of selected nations. Each provides a wealth of statistical data, historical comparisons, and thoughtful analysis that would be extremely difficult for the nonspecialist to locate readily.

Of the three, The Netherlands and Belgium will probably prove to be the most welcome, if for no other reason than the paucity of available alternatives. The one defect present in both books, if one can label it as such, is a tendency to overwhelm the reader with details, so much so that all but the advanced student could easily get lost in the minutiae. The USSR is a well-balanced, if not exceptionally fresh, treatment of Soviet industrialization. The sections treating the regional diversity of industrial and resource locations, however, are of particular merit. It should be noted that all three books, although attempting to be as current as possible, describe their respective nations only as far as 1973, so that the oil crisis and the ensuing world-wide recession are barely mentioned. Because of the rather steep price of the individual volumes, libraries without specialized collections will want to order selectively among the titles of this recommended series.—Steven Wecker, Lehman Coll. Lib., CUNY

Kory, Robert B. The Transcendental Meditation Program for Business People.
AMACOM: American Management Assn. (AMA Management Briefing). 1976. 91p. LC 76-3696. ISBN 0-8144-2189-X. $8.95. PSYCH/BUS

This short book, better suited as a magazine article, provides no actual practical suggestions on how to apply TM to business. It merely rehashes explanations of TM with quotes and testimonials from business people already involved with it. TM appears to be the method for the "expanding of consciousness"—turning all workers into perfect people. Criticisms of TM are briefly discussed, but most of the book's emphasis is placed on the program's benefits.—Dianne Witkowski, Schiff Hardin & Waite Lib., Chicago

Lawrence, James C. Your Fortune in Futures.
St. Martin's. 1976. 165p. index. LC 76-13482. $8.95. BUS

Not for the uninitiated in the language of the markets, this is an up-to-date how-to book for the speculator in commodities. The first two-thirds cover the basics on margin, making a market position, spreads, hedges, arbitrage, and the technician's and fundamentalist's methods of analyzing data. Included is an explanation of the interpretation of the point and figure charts commonly found in commodities advisory services. The last third contains a useful, detailed explanation of the more important commodities and how they are traded, including an annotated description of sources of further information. There are other more detailed books available on the subject, but this is a timely discussion for the speculator and therefore is recommended for the large public library and business collection.—Susan A. Singer, Tucson P.L., Ariz.

LeBaron, Dean. The Ins and Outs of Institutional Investing.
Nelson-Hall. 1976. ISBN 0-88229-343-5. $9.95.
BUS

LeBaron has written an insider's view of the world of the institutional investor. His thesis is that since institutional holdings are so large, their movements disproportionately affect the action of the market, producing greater volatility than is the case for other stocks. He also contends that many institutions buy for the wrong purpose—such as the tax-free institution buying for appreciation when they should buy for yield. Though the work is somewhat rambling and even autobiographical, the individual investor might gain some insight into the operations of the "big boys" who have a decided effect on his investments. For the large public library or business collection only.—Susan A. Singer, Tucson P.L., Ariz.

Leiss, William. The Limits to Satisfaction: an essay on the problem of needs and commodities.
Univ. of Toronto Pr. 1976. 159p. index. LC 76-10086. ISBN 0-8020-2231-6. $12.50.
ENVIRONMENT/ECON

In a ponderous and sometimes convoluted writing style, Leiss laments society's materialistic orientation. His major theme is that continued economic growth, motivated by the prevailing values of developed civilization, can lead only to increasingly bitter competition between nations for available resources, resulting in irreparable damage to the environment. Leiss argues that mankind must learn to find satisfaction in nonmaterialistic objects and abandon the notion that nature is to be cultivated exclusively to serve man. Most of the ideas contained in this essay have been articulated more creatively and clearly by writers such as J. K. Galbraith, Vance Packard, Kenneth Boulding, and Barry Commoner. The abstract rendition earmarks the work mainly for academic collections.—Gene R. Laczniak, Dept. of Business Administration, Marquette Univ., Milwaukee

Monti, Mario, ed. The "New Inflation" and Monetary Policy.
Holmes & Meier. 1976. 307p. index. LC 75-44286. ISBN 0-8419-0253-4. $25. ECON

These proceedings of a 1974 conference in Italy are organized around the problem of inflation in stagnant economies. Half of the authors are Italian, and most will be unfamiliar to American readers. The volume begins with four analytical papers by distinguished monetary theorists (Sir John Hicks, Franco Modigliani, Karl Brunner, and Robert Mundell), and the second section contains addresses by Italian monetary officials. The remainder of the book is devoted to historical surveys of inflation in several countries. Although the issues dealt with are important, the technical difficulty of much of the reasoning makes this not a work for the casual reader; it belongs in academic libraries only.—Robert J. Caswell, Dept. of Economics, Ohio State Univ., Columbus

Owen, Henry & Charles L. Schultze, ed. & intro. Setting National Priorities: the next ten years.
Brookings. 1976. 618p. LC 76-27205. ISBN 0-8157-6764-1. $14.95; pap. ISBN 0-8157-6763-3. $6.95. POL SCI/ECON

This volume goes beyond the previous annual editions in this series, which have scrutinized the budget since 1970 to evaluate and set priorities for the next decade. The beginning chapters on foreign and international trade, defense, and nuclear proliferation together call for the creation of a community of economic interests among free nations. This direction in policy would require some resource reallocations, as well as innovative institutional arrangements. The remaining chapters deal with domestic issues concerning economics, politics, and the environment. This volume relies less on economic theory and statistics than the previous ones and can be easily read by the public. As it deals with significant political and economic issues, it will also be of interest to academic libraries.—Raymond L. Raab, Dept. of Economics, Univ. of Minnesota, Duluth

Vanek, Jaroslav. The Labor-Managed Economy.
Cornell Univ. Pr. Jan. 1977. 296p. index. ISBN 0-8014-0955-1. $17.50. SOC SCI/ECON

Some of the essays in this collection supplement and others perfect the arguments in the author's previous books on the subject. Vanek explains the behavior of a cooperative firm competing in a market dominated by such firms and also analyzes the macroeconomic effects of this sort of arrangement. He is careful not only to point out the advantages of such a scheme over capitalism and more centralized Soviet-style

THE MODERN ACCOUNTANT'S HANDBOOK
Ed. James Don Edwards and Homer A. Black
65 Contributing Accounting Experts
•
47 In-Depth Chapters
•
1231 Pages
$30.00
An accurate, up-to-date reference thoroughly covering current accounting practices—written by professionals for professionals. Belongs in the business reference section of every public library—in special libraries catering to all levels of business management—in the library of every school of business.
Dow Jones-Irwin
1818 Ridge Road, Homewood, Ill. 60430

systems, but also to explain the conditions necessary for the optimal functioning of the labor-managed economy. His empirical studies and criticisms of Yugoslavia's market socialism provide a solid foundation for the theoretical arguments regarding what is to be done. Foremost among his points is the need for reliance on external mechanisms to finance enterprises in order to assure both that resource allocation is optimal and that the firms themselves do not degenerate into the capitalist mode. At a time when traditional economics is living up to its name as the dismal science, this book is welcome indeed. Yet, it is too technical for all but large and special collections. More popular collections are advised to rely on the author's popular presentation in The Participatory Economy (LJ 6/15/71).—Ken Nash, Queens Borough P.L., New York

Wiarda, Howard J. Corporatism and Development: the Portuguese experience.

Univ. of Massachusetts Pr. Feb. 1977. 375p. bibliog. LC 76-8761. ISBN 0-87023-221-5. $20.
POL SCI/ECON

This is the second book of importance concerning modern Portugal to appear recently. The first, Antonio Figueiredo's Portugal (LJ 4/15/76) represents the view of a well-informed, but not unbiased, opponent of Salazar's regime. Wiarda, on the other hand, presents a carefully balanced case study of corporatism in the Iberic-Latin tradition, along with a fair analysis of Salazar's social philosophy and statesmanship. He shows the deeper reasons why Salazar's system declined in the 1960's and why his much more modern successor, Caetano, came too late to save the ossified regime. Wiarda also offers some reflections on developments since General Spinola's coup of 1974. This searching study throws light on Portugal in a new era; it is strongly recommended for academic libraries with some emphasis on world affairs.—Felix E. Hirsch, Professor Emeritus, Trenton State Coll., N.J.

EDUCATION

Adams, Hazard. The Academic Tribes.

Liveright: Norton. 1976. 160p. ISBN 0-87140-623-3. $8.95; pap. ISBN 0-87140-111-8. $3.95.
ED

Adams' "good-natured musing" purports to be a treatise about academic life and politics. In fact, Tribes is a satirical, often humorous look at academe through the eyes of an experienced and observant cynic, a former university administrator who is now an English professor. Adams categorizes academic styles (or the lack thereof), rites of passage, calendars, bureaucrats, etc. Like The Peter Principle and Parkinson's Law, Tribes includes a large dose of truth in its message. However, it fails to provide adequate explanation for the observed realities. Recommended as enjoyable reading but not as serious analysis.—Jerry L. Parsons, Univ. of Illinois Lib. at Urbana-Champaign

Bennett, Neville with Joyce Jordan & others. Teaching Styles and Pupil Progress.

Harvard Univ. Pr. 1976. fwd. by Jerome Bruner. 201p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-40500. ISBN 0-674-87095-6. $7.95.
ED

This is a well-organized report of an excellent study conducted in selected British elementary schools to examine the relationship between teaching styles (methodology) and pupil progress and performance. It was found that formal teaching "fulfills its aims in the academic area without detriment to the social and emotional development of pupils," whereas informal teaching meets its aims only partially and produces poorer results in academic development. In particular, with the exception of low-achieving boys, formal instruction was found to be significantly superior in both pupil progress and performance to both informal and mixed styles in reading, math, and English, and better for neurotic, contentious, and fidgeting personalities. Despite a rather rigid, formal style, this report is a clear, concise, well-written coverage of the background, procedures, and findings of a vital study that promises to provoke healthy controversy among those seriously concerned with education. Highly recommended for all academic and large public libraries.—Adeline Konsh, New York City Public Sch. System

Carrillo, Lawrence W. Teaching Reading: a handbook.

St. Martin's. 1976. 148p. bibliog. index. LC 75-38021. $12.95; pap. $4.95.
ED

The idea of a reading handbook to summarize the basic concerns and approaches in the teaching of reading is basically good. However, one would like a book that is more inclusive, more up-to-date, and better organized than this one, especially at the hardcover price. Many modern topics, such as the Cloze technique, the Reading Miscue Inventory, and the ungraded (Joplin) reading plan, are completely overlooked, while the Buswell nonoral reading method of the late 1930's has half a page of coverage. The reference books cited are often the older editions, and many important new reading sources are omitted. The book does have possibilities, and could be reworked into a concise handbook, arranged alphabetically, and up-dated. The writing is clear and readable.—Marian Wozencraft, Dept. of Education, SUNY at Geneseo

Madaras, Lynda. Childs' Play: a manual for parents and teachers; games, toys, playgroups.

Peace Pr. 1976. illus. ISBN 0-915238-09-8. $4.95.
ED

Intended to aid adults who wish to establish imaginative, practical, do-it-yourself neighborhood child-care centers, this work "covers every aspect of organizing and running playgroups and daycare centers in urban or suburban settings." Organized by activity (e.g., filmmaking, growing things, insect zoos), the book offers suggestions on "child-proofing" the center, selecting and grouping the children, and making inexpensive toys and games such as musical instruments and geodesic jungle gyms. Sources for further information (e.g., books and equipment) are given within the text. Although this work will not replace other sources, such as Paul S. Shakesby's Child's Work: a Learning Guide to Joyful Play (LJ 1/15/75) and Doreen J. Croft & Robert D. Hess's An Activities Handbook for Teachers of Young Children (Houghton, 1975. 2d ed.), it has an imaginative, fresh approach, and will prove to be popular in both public and academic library collections.—Ilene F. Rockman, California Polytechnic State Univ. Lib., San Luis Obispo

HISTORY

Axon, Gordon V. The California Gold Rush.

Mason/Charter. 1976. illus. index. ISBN 0-88405-362-9. $6.95.
HIST

Axon sees the California gold rush as an emotional revolution with worldwide repercussions that are still being felt today. "Had there been only gold," he states, "the impact of the discovery would have been short-lived." But California offered much more than gold—it offered hope, opportunity, freedom, the right to be equal, and a genuine social revolution, while at the same time encouraging greed and prejudice. This fine little book concentrates on issues rather than events. The reader finishes with several major, understandable concepts (more than can be culled from most books). Especially valuable in this regard are the discussions of the Polk Administration and the validity of Manifest Destiny as a moral concept. Highly recommended for both school and public libraries.—Roger Woelfel, Los Angeles County P.L. System

Bacon, Edward, ed. The Great Archaeologists: and their discoveries as originally reported in the pages of The Illustrated London News.

Bobbs. 1976. 428p. illus., some color. index. LC 76-10081. ISBN 0-672-52052-4. $35; until Dec. 31, $29.95.
HIST/ARCHAEOLOGY

As archaeological history, this compilation of Illustrated London News pieces (from 1842 until the present) on the discoveries of ancient civilizations is most useful. In addition, true archaeology buffs—armchair and otherwise—will find the book of interest. As an informational source, however, the volume varies in value: in some instances detail is quite complete, in others scanty. Too, one should note, as the book does, that interpretations of sites have changed over time. The original illustrations are interesting in both style and content. Brief biographical notes about significant archaeologists are included. Not a high-priority item, but certainly of interest to libraries with needs in this area.—Ruth E. Olson, Plymouth P.L., Mass.

CORRECTION: The price of Theda Shapiro's Painters and Politics (LJ 12/1) is $15.

Beachey, R. W. The Slave Trade of Eastern Africa.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. 1976. 324p. maps. bibliog. index. LC 76-15785. ISBN 0-06-490326-5. $18.

Beachey, R. W. A Collection of Documents on the Slave Trade of Eastern Africa.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. 1976. 140p. maps. index. LC 76-15785. ISBN 0-06-490328-1. $11. HIST

Unlike the Atlantic slave trade, there has been little written about the East African slave trade; Beachey's two volumes help fill this gap. And that one of the volumes consists of excerpts taken from contemporary records only enhances the usefulness of this endeavor by inculcating in the reader a gut-level feeling for the monstrosity of the trade. Beachey describes the trade from antiquity through its demise at the end of the 19th Century, and he ranges as far afield as Egypt, Oman, India, and Europe in order to accord as comprehensive a treatment as possible to all the peoples and places involved in this story. Beachey also attempts to determine the number of slaves exported from East Africa during the 19th Century, and arrives at a minimum figure of two million. The bibliography seems good, but the omission of The East African Slave Trade (Nairobi, 1967) and Ivory and Slaves in East Central Africa (Univ. of California Pr., 1975), both by Edward Alpers, is rather disturbing, especially since the latter is at least as important as Beachey's work in the current literature on the topic.—Paul H. Thomas, California Inst. of Technology Lib., Pasadena

Brokaw, Kurt. A Night in Transylvania.

Grosset. Dec. 1976. 160p. photogs. ISBN 0-448-12438-6. $12.95. pap. $5.95. LIT/HIST

This small volume is a collection of miscellany relating to the Dracula theme, including a biographical sketch of Vlad Dracul, Prince of Wallachia; reviews of 50-odd Dracula books and films; and a travelogue of modern Transylvania for those embarking on a sentimental journey through Dracula country. The author owes much to the two definitive studies by Raymond McNally and Radu Florescu (In Search of Dracula, LJ 2/1/73, and Dracula, LJ 2/1/74), and to such contemporary treatments as Leonard Wolf's A Dream of Dracula (LJ 11/15/72). In fact, no new ground is covered here that is not more extensively presented elsewhere. Except for the dubious advantage of Brokaw's literary and cinematic opinions and the book's portability (it is smaller and more popular in treatment than the other works), this is largely a superfluous effort. Not recommended.—Jo-Ann D. Suleiman, Wright Patterson Air Force Base Lib., Dayton, Ohio

Camejo, Peter. Racism, Revolution, Reaction, 1861-1877: the rise and fall of radical Reconstruction.

Monad, dist. by Pathfinder. 1976. 269p. bibliog. index. LC 76-24184. ISBN 0-913460-49-4. $12; pap. ISBN 0-913460-50-8. $3.45. HIST

In this argumentative, poorly written, yet sometimes provocative book, Camejo concludes that racism survived the destruction of slavery because it fit the aim of the rising industrial capitalist class to block radical Reconstruction. To win the war, the capitalists cast off conservatism and accepted radical Republican policy—for a time—thereby giving them control of the party machinery. Fearing social change and needing a docile South that would be safe for investment, the capitalists, according to Camejo, then exploited race issues to destroy radical Republicanism. Camejo's class and motivational categories are too rigid, and he attributes a monolithic power and ideology to capitalists and a powerlessness and innocence to the "masses." His historiographical assaults on everyone from James S. Allen to C. Vann Woodward are heavy-handed and detract from the book's primary appeal as a suggestive Marxist essay on historical causation.—Randall M. Miller, Dept. of History, St. Joseph's Coll., Philadelphia

Caughey, John & Laree Caughey, eds. Los Angeles: biography of a city.

Univ. of California Pr. 1976. 509p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-17300. ISBN 0-520-03079-6. $14.95. HIST

This delightful anthology of history, journalism, poetry, travelers' accounts, and personal memoirs traces Los Angeles from Indian times through the Spanish, Mexican, and cowboy days to the present. The editors' introductory and closing remarks, incisive headnotes to the 11 divisions, and wide range of selections make for an informal but exceptionally informative story. Every major episode and development in Angeleno history is covered by such authors as Richard Henry Dana, Upton Sinclair, Budd Schulberg, Carey McWilliams, Dalton Trumbo, Aldous Huxley, and Raymond Chandler. Obvious omissions, like Scott Fitzgerald and Nathanael West, are cited in the bibliography. This collection is an excellent survey, for both layman and social historian, of a unique American city.—Robert C. Twombly, Dept. of History, C.C.N.Y.

Country Beautiful, eds. The Truman Years: the words and times of Harry S. Truman.

Country Beautiful. 1976. 111p. illus., some color. LC 75-45336. ISBN 0-87294-083-7. $15.95. HIST

A curious work, mixing Truman quotes with numerous photographs from Truman's Presidency. After a brief prologue, the editors present an interesting 27-page chapter entitled "Kaleidoscope, 1945-1952," which looks at the events and personalities—both political and nonpolitical—dominating the news during these years. This is followed by photographs from each of the Truman years, along with a brief summary of his main activities during that year and appropriate quotations. Although a detailed chronology is included, there is no index. The tone of the book is strongly eulogistic, and the chief value for readers will be the nostalgic photos.—Wayne A. Wiegand, Coll. of Library Science, Univ. of Kentucky, Lexington

"A loving, important book."*

On Teaching
HERBERT KOHL

"This is a book that every beginning teacher should read. It furnishes inspiration as well as direction and practical ideas."
—G. W. Willingham, Professor of Elementary Education, Stephen F. Austin State University

*"This book tells what it is really like to stand in front of a class and teach. . . . A loving, important book."—Steven Schrader, Executive Director, Teachers & Writers Collaborative

"Kohl brings together pedagogical and political strategies which have worked. The book will quickly become a classic handbook for change."—Joe Nathan, Trainer of Teachers, The Open School (St. Paul, Minn.)

"[Kohl] offers a plethora of practical down-to-earth suggestions to help the teacher. . . . He has written not a work of despair but one of affirmation."
—Lillian Weber, Director, Workshop Center for Open Education

$7.95 hardcover at your bookstore

Mail orders add $1.00 for postage & handling; New York residents add sales tax. Order from:

SCHOCKEN
200 Madison Avenue, New York 10016

Curtis, Will & others. Times Gone By: Woodstock; views of an early Vermont village.

Curtis-Lieberman Pubs., Box 186, Woodstock, Vt. 05091. 1976. 88p. photogs. $8.95; pap. $5.95. PHOTOG/HIST

This is a pleasant and interesting history of Woodstock, Vermont from 1854 to 1934 by means of old photographs and a brief narration. Most of the pictures were taken in the 19th Century and show the dwellings, businesses, and families that have made this town a Mecca for the well-to-do. There are also photos depicting the transportation, recreation, farming, and industry of that era. Recommended primarily for Vermont history collections, but also for readers who like to reminisce.—David Bower, Morse Inst. P.L., Natick, Mass.

De Vries, Jan. Economy of Europe in an Age of Crisis: 1600-1750.

Cambridge Univ. Pr. 1976. 284p. index. LC 75-30438. ISBN 0-521-21123-9. $14.95; pap. ISBN 0-521-29050-3. $4.95.

Kellenbenz, Hermann. The Rise of the European Economy: an economic history of Continental Europe from the Fifteenth to the Eighteenth Century.

Holmes & Meier. 1976. 354p. rev. & ed. by Gerhard Benecke. bibliog. index. LC 76-7487. ISBN 0-8419-0273-9. $20. ECON/HIST

We study the economy of early modern Europe to learn the origins of the ensuing great transformation called the Industrial Revolution and to understand the traditional economy on its own terms. The books here examined share these concerns, but are otherwise disparate in substance and approach. Kellenbenz, a German scholar, surveys the entire period from 1500 to 1750 but confines his study to "continental Europe" from the Baltic to the Alps and from interior France to the Urals, an area he contrasts with Atlantic- and Mediterranean-oriented regions. Two large sections divide the book at about 1630 into times of expansion and of contraction; each then contains chapters on population, organization and techniques of production, service sectors, monetary phenomena, and economic thinking. A recurring theme is the impact of the state on economic life. Though organized as an introductory text, this book lacks a clear interpretive thesis and leaves undefined too many specialized terms.

The De Vries book covers only the 17th and 18th centuries but all of Europe. The period is described as one of crisis and quantitative stagnation with, however, significant concomitant restructuring of the quality of economic activities. Successive chapters then discuss agriculture, manufacturing, trade, urbanism, demand, capital accumulation, and the role of government. Explicit and carefully explained economic reasoning further integrates the entire work. De Vries' is thus the more intellectually meaty book and the one better suited for an undergraduate or educated lay audience and most libraries. The massive detail in Kellenbenz' look at a more restricted and less well-known area argues for its use by more advanced scholars.—Richard C. Hoffmann, Dept. of History, York Univ., Downsview, Ont., Canada

Dodge, Ernest S. Island and Empires: Western impact on the Pacific and East Asia.

Univ. of Minnesota Pr. (Europe & the World in the Age of Expansion). 1976. 364p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-46179. ISBN 0-8166-0788-5. $16. HIST

This narrative account of the long sweep of relations between the European and Pacific worlds is divided into two parts: one devoted to the Pacific Islands, and the other to China and Japan. In each part, Dodge describes the native cultures and environments before the European advent and then provides a chronology of European contact and relations with the region. Despite the violent and often tragic history of relations with the West, Dodge shows that in the Pacific islands Polynesians and other native peoples remain the dominant element, saved by Western medical and health services, while in East Asia, the West provided a stimulus for political and structural change. This book will be useful for a general readership and is suitable for public and undergraduate collections.—Evelyn S. Rawski, Dept. of History, Univ. of Pittsburgh

Emerson, Gloria. Winners and Losers: battles, retreats, gains, losses and ruins from a long war.

Random. Jan. 1977. ISBN 0-394-48413-4. $10.95. SOC SCI/HIST

Emerson refuses to accept anti-Communist America's self-administered amnesty (its amnesia) regarding Vietnam: she refuses to let us forget. Piecing together accounts of the episodes she experienced in Vietnam and America over the past 20 years, Emerson presents an overpowering collage of the war's human dimension: how some faced its end; how families broke; how small towns wondered; how some won and most lost. Understated and direct, her presentation leaves little wonder as to why most of America is trying to forget Vietnam. The great wonder is how it thinks it can.—Charles DeBenedetti, Dept. of History, Univ. of Toledo, Ohio

Engel, Frederic Andre. An Ancient World Preserved: relics and records of prehistory in the Andes. rev. & updated.

Crown. Jan. 1977. 256p. tr. from French by Rachel Kendall Gordon. LC 76-19793. ISBN 0-517-51874-0. $12.95. ARCHAEOLOGY/HIST

This scholarly introduction to Andean prehistory, appearing for the first time in English, compares favorably with other texts on the subject. Engel begins with a long summary of what is known of precontact environment and history. In his survey of Andean prehistory Peru and Bolivia, the heartland of Incan and earlier pre-Columbian civilizations, receive greatest attention, while areas in the northern and southern Andes are given briefer attention. The book ends with a discussion of architecture and ecosystems. Accounts of personally conducted excavations and an engaging style give this text an advantage over many other works. Another notable feature is that Andean prehistory is placed in global perspective: the achievements of the Incas and their predecessors are appraised in relation to Near Eastern, European, and Asian cultures. Although highly readable, informative and archaeologically current, the book suffers from lack of a bibliography.—William S. Dancey, Dept. of Anthropology, Ohio State Univ., Columbus

Fanning, Louis A. Betrayal in Vietnam.

Arlington House. 1976. 256p. bibliog. index. LC 76-24841. ISBN 0-87000-341-0. $8.95. POL SCI/HIST

This is the first strike in the long-expected rightist attack on how American liberals sold out South Vietnam's independent democracy to creeping Communism. Using selected government documents, Fanning surveys the course of U.S. policy in Indochina with an eye on the antiwar Left. But history is secondary to Fanning's need to search out and destroy the liberal (read crypto-Communist) enemy. What follows is the usual result of historical theologizing. There is some data that might interest historians, but mainly there is a Manichean explanatory pattern that will satisfy right-thinking true believers who always knew that the protection of the Constitution against the Nixon gang was less vital to America than the preservation of the Saigon regime.—Charles DeBenedetti, Dept. of History, Univ. of Toledo, Ohio

Foner, Philip S., ed. & intro. The Democratic-Republican Societies, 1790-1800: a documentary sourcebook of constitutions, declarations, addresses, resolutions, and toasts.

Greenwood. Mar. 1977. 544p. bibliog. index. LC 76-5260. ISBN 0-8371-8907-1. $29.95. REF/HIST

Periods of political conflict spawn acrimonious public debate, and the first decade of the American national experience was no exception. As Americans argued over a number of foreign and domestic issues, the Democratic-Republican societies rallied strong opposition to the policies of Hamilton and the Federalist party. The documents reproduced by Foner speak to the main issues of the period; yet because they are essentially position papers, they do not provide much insight into the origin, nature, influence, or decline of the societies. Although Foner's introduction remedies this to some extent, it does not justify this expensive volume. For large historical collections only.—Jerry V. Caswell, Univ. of Wisconsin at Madison Libs.

Gambino, Richard. Vendetta: a true story of the worst lynching in America, the mass murder of Italian-Americans in New Orleans in 1891, the vicious motivations behind it, and the tragic repercussions that linger to this day.

Doubleday. Jan. 1977. photogs. ISBN 0-385-12273-X. $7.95. HIST

On March 14, 1891, Italian immigrants incarcerated in the New Orleans jail were shot and hanged by a mob led by many of the city's prominent citizens, including a future mayor. Only two days before, the men had been acquitted of murdering the town's popular police chief. Gambino describes the events leading up to and following this mass lynching, which generated fervent talk of war with Italy, build-up of the American fleet, the fueling of the nativist movement, and the unification of much of the country against the alien Italian. Gambino dissects the New Orleans affair as a classic example of the perverted use that government and individuals make of social violence and ethnic and racial hatred. This is an exciting, forceful story written with thorough documentation. Of interest and importance to both public and academic libraries.—Jerry Maioli, Walla Walla County Rural Lib. Dist., Wash.

Gimpel, Jean. The Medieval Machine: the industrial revolution of the Middle Ages.

Holt. 1976. 274p. index. LC 75-21468. ISBN 0-03-014636-4. $12.95. TECH/HIST

This work, which originally appeared in French, is a popularized description of technological achievements and thinking in medieval Europe, by a scholar previously noted for his studies of architectural engineering during the same period. It ranges widely, covering energy sources, mining, labor conditions, engineering, mechanical clocks, and experimental science (but not ships or ship-building). Gimpel then uses this material to assert a parallel between medieval and modern technological development which, he argues, presages the demise of present-day American technological culture. In terms of historical content, little here is new and much on the more narrowly economic topics (agriculture, textiles, mining) is oversimplified and even antiquated. The sections on building trades and engineering are certainly the best. As a survey of medieval techniques, it is no necessary purchase for libraries which already possess Lynn White, Medieval Technology and Social Change, Carlo Cipolla, Clocks and Culture, 1300-1700, Gimpel's own The Cathedral Builders, and the like.—Richard C. Hoffmann, Dept. of History, York Univ., Downsview, Ont., Canada

Hamburger, Joseph. Macaulay and the Whig Tradition.

Univ. of Chicago Pr. 1976. index. LC 75-27892. ISBN 0-226-31472-3. $17.50. BIOG/HIST

This work is not a biography but a careful reexamination and reinterpretation of Macaulay as the epitome of the Whig outlook. The author prefers to view the great historian and literary figure as a trimmer, and his arguments, based on impressive research in printed and manuscript sources (including previously unused materials), are generally convincing. We learn a great deal about Macaulay's political outlook and how it influenced his writing of history, and Hamburger's interpretation on this score offers an interesting counterpoise to that advanced in John Clive's Macaulay: The Shaping of a Historian (LJ 1/15/73). While specialized, this work will be of interest to readers in several disciplines (e.g., history, philosophy, political science, economics) and belongs in all college libraries.—James A. Casada, Dept. of History, Winthrop Coll., Rock Hill, S.C.

Harvey, John. The Black Prince and His Age.

Rowman & Littlefield. 1976. 184p. illus. map. bibliog. index. LC 76-34. ISBN 0-87471-818-X. $14.50. BIOG/HIST

This well-written popular biography of Edward the Black Prince and his son King Richard II takes a Malorian view of the 14th Century and its noble English leaders. Though Edward started a Round Table of 300 knights, some will think Harvey protests too much that the prince was the acme of chivalry. Despite a bid for modernity in setting "his life and character against the cultural background of his time," his book remains an essentially conservative, elitist interpretation. The common people supposedly were so well treated that one wonders how the Peasants' Revolt could have occurred. The military exploits of the Black Prince are neatly recited but their aura is lost. However, the reign of Richard II comes more alive. Under Harvey's treatment, the lives of the father and the son as the equivalent of one reign, the rising and the falling of a chivalric ideal, make interesting if biased reading.—Hugh T. Keenan, Dept. of English, Georgia State Univ.

New Insight into an Old Fight !

If Madero was the father of

THE MEXICAN REVOLUTION OF 1910

Then MAYTORENA was its god-father!

FROM GLORY TO OBLIVION

The Real Truth About the Mexican Revolution

By Guy Weddington McCreary

This study opens and expands new avenues for historical insight into the Mexican Revolution of 1910. For the first time the private archives of General José María Maytorena, Revolutionary Governor of Sonora, are revealed to give his interpretation of the first major Mexican political upheaval in the twentieth century. Maytorena was a man of action, great courage, democratic idealism, and political tolerance. . . . His only mistake was not to move with the shifting political complex of lust for power and ambition for personal gain.

"The Mexican Revolution re-affirmed once more the truth in the old addage, 'The revolution devours its children'." — JOURNAL of the WEST.

"An entirely different approach to a different Mexico." — Westways

"The view is new. . . ." — Journal of Arizona History.

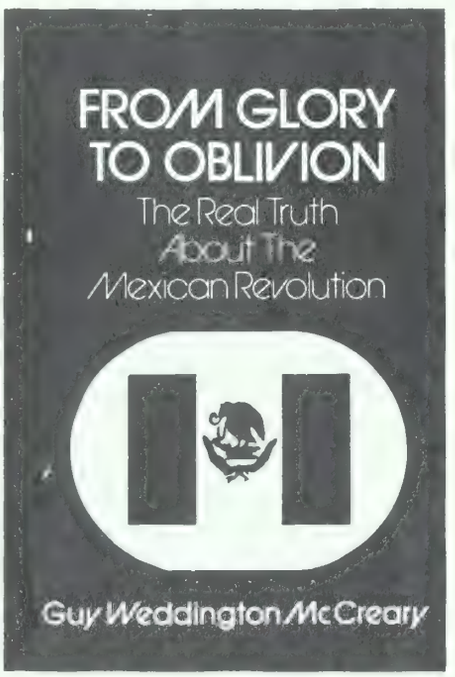
"This is another interpretation of the Mexican Revolution. Recommended for advanced students who have the knowledge to evaluate accurately the information presented by McCreary."—Choice.

Please order from your bookstore or direct from the publisher.



ISBN: 0-533-01266 X LC: 75-314335

Illustrated. 262 pp. Cloth; $6.95

VANTAGE PRESS, Inc.

516 W. 34th St., New York 10001

5253 Hollywood Blvd,, L.A. Ca.90023

Hoehling, A. A. Thunder at Hampton Roads.

Prentice-Hall. 1976. 232p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-18261. ISBN 0-13-920652-3. $9.95. HIST

Quoting liberally from a variety of contemporary sources, Hoehling pieces together a history of the short-lived but historically significant U.S.S. Monitor from its beginnings in the imagination of John Ericsson (the inventor) to its tragic sinking in heavy seas in December 1862. He also describes the raising and refitting of the Merrimack by the Confederates, its sweeping victories, and its hazardous voyage to Hampton Roads for the great battle with the Merrimack. Hoehling tries to fit the battle into the framework of the whole war in the East, and then follows briefly the postwar careers of the crews and discusses recent attempts to locate the hulk of the Monitor. For Civil War collections and libraries not having other recent books on the Monitor and Merrimack.—John Buechler, Univ. of Vermont Lib., Burlington

Hopper, R. J. The Early Greeks.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. Dec. 1976. 257p. illus. maps. bibliog. index. LC 76-20894. ISBN 0-06-492978-7. $25. HIST

This is a much needed, comprehensive treatment of the Greeks from the Bronze Age down to their colonization of the Mediterranean. Hopper makes good use of archaeological evidence, and integrates materials from economic and political history, literature, and art to provide a detailed and yet readable account that should appeal to general reader and specialist alike. Illustrations and maps are well chosen, and the notes and select bibliography are very useful for further study. In sum, this is an attractive book that can be recommended for its careful scholarship and concern for the nonspecialist.—Jackson P. Hershbell, Dept. of Classics, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis

Hoyt, Edwin P. The Lonely Ships: the life and death of the U.S. Asiatic fleet.

McKay. 1976. 416p. maps. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-679-50578-4. $12.50. HIST

Jaded as the reader may have become with war literature, this well-written, accurate, and fascinating story of naval heroism will surely be enjoyable. This is mainly the tale of U.S. naval presence in China and East Asia on the eve of World War II, but it reads like a catalog of history and action ranging from the establishment of the Asiatic Squadron in the 1850's to its demise 90 years later. The book is filled with the nostalgia of navy men and of lost causes consigned to history's footnotes. Worth reading.—R. F. Delaney, U.S. Naval War Coll., Newport, R.I.

Hull, Richard W. African Cities and Towns Before the European Conquest.

Norton. 1976. 138p. illus. maps. bibliog. index. LC 76-16038. ISBN 0-393-05581-7. $10.95. HIST

Although a modest volume, this book is the first serious attempt to survey urbanism in precolonial black Africa. Hull attempts to demonstrate that African urbanism has roots far deeper than 20th-Century colonialism and therefore, that many 20th-Century towns are not merely European creations. He draws on volumes of fascinating evidence, and his central argument seems irrefutable. What is bothersome, however, is the strained attempt which he makes to apply essentially Western concepts such as "town" and "city" to African population centers. In reality these were generally nothing more than concentrations—often quite large—of agriculturalists; and the function specialization which characterized Western cities rarely existed in Africa. Despite these reservations, this book can be recommended as a sound and useful survey of African "towns," architecture, and lifestyles in general. Especially welcome are the many fine illustrations.—R. Kent Rasmussen, formerly with Dept. of History, UCLA

Irving, David. Hitler's War.

Viking. Jan. 1977. 1024p. maps. index. $17.50. BIOG/HIST

This book is a blockbuster, and not only because of its bulk. Irving is a tireless and adroit researcher, whose forte is coaxing unpublished material out of private hands. His aim is to present the war as Hitler saw it and in so doing to unlock the personality of the man himself. Although the result is extremely interesting and readable and must generally be counted a success, the book has some severe shortcomings. First, its relentlessly chronological organization may bring topics before the reader as they came before Hitler, but it means that many topics are considered episodically over several hundred pages; and lacking adequate context or sustained analysis, none but the expert will have a very easy time assessing the new evidence provided on such topics. Second, Irving's effort at "de-demonizing" Hitler may seem to some to verge on apologia. For example, he asserts that Hitler expressly forbade the extermination of the Jews and merely acquiesced in the fait accompli when he discovered it late in the war. In this and in a number of other instances, Irving seems excessively literal in the interpretation of his own evidence and rather too inclined to see things Hitler's way. Still, by documenting Hitler's activities in the detail that he has, Irving has refined considerably our picture of this extremely complex man.—John G. Williamson, Yale Univ. Lib.

Katz, Jonathan. Gay American History: lesbians and gay men in the U.S.A.

Crowell. 1976. 720p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-2039. ISBN 0-690-01164-4. $19.95; pap. ISBN 0-690-01165-2. $9.95. SOC SCI/HIST

Without sensationalism or sentimentalizing, Katz has come up with a unique, unsettling look at homophobia in America during the last 350 years, leavened with some fascinating insights into the lives of both known and unknown homosexuals during that period. Much of the content of the book is drawn from primary sources, but Katz's own informative and usually objective introductions and commentary flesh out the readings and bring the book alive. It contains hundreds of letters, journal segments, newspaper and magazine excerpts, and other materials, all of which make a devastating case for those homosexuals who claim that "straight" American society has always both persecuted and punished those who are "different," and has frequently done it in grisly ways—castration, lobotomies, and electric shock treatment, to name a few. It is a sad and angry book, with only an occasional bit of good humor (Ralph Waldo Emerson's traumatic experience with a "phallic" mushroom, for example), but the subject matter does not lend itself to levity. The more than 100 pages of notes and bibliographies will give the scholar or student a great deal of information for further research. Recommended highly for all except the most benighted libraries (which probably need it most).—Audrey B. Eaglen, Cuyahoga County P.L., Cleveland

Law, Joy. Fleur de Lys: the kings and queens of France.

McGraw. 1976. 256p. illus., some color. bibliog. LC 75-28501. ISBN 0-07-036695-0. $19.95. HIST

Anecdotal histories have always remained popular, especially those dealing with royalty. This is one such book covering the French kings, queens, and occasionally, mistresses from the reign of Hugh Capet (987) to Charles X (1830). The author, who collaborated with John Barton on a similar production on the English monarchs (The Hollow Crown; Dial, 1972) presents contemporary assessments written by court historians, ladies-in-waiting, sychophants, ambassadors, clerics, soldiers, and poets. Through these pages the reader encounters accounts of trivia, court intrigues, scandals, love affairs, death scenes, and, always, a vivid description of the physical normalities and abnormalities of the royalty. Illustrations, with a few in color, make this a good browsing item. Recommended for libraries whose patrons want this sort of material.—Robert O. Lindsay, Dept. of History, Univ. of Montana, Missoula

López, Adalberto. The Revolt of the Comuneros, 1721-1735: a study in the colonial history of Paraguay.

Schenkman. 1976. 214p. maps. bibliog. index. LC 76-9680. ISBN 0-87073-124-6. $12.50. HIST

This is a useful, easy-to-read study of a little known incident in the colonial history of Latin America. López, rightly, does not view José Antequera, the rebellious governor, as a "precursor," but places events in context within the semi-autonomous state Paraguayans enjoyed. One wishes for more background on the Cedula of 1537, which granted Paraguay the unique privilege of popular election, thus permitting the selection of a colonial government antagonistic to the Crown. The familiar economic grievances which exacerbated tensions between the colonists and the Mission Jesuits, and the Crown, are well-described. The author's narrative is based on an impressive array of primary sources, together with the standard secondary works. This title should be in any academic collection of Latin American history.—Carol B. Fitzgerald, CUNY Grad. Sch. Lib.

McPherson, James Alan & Miller Williams, eds. Railroad: trains and train people in American culture.

Random. 1976. 185p. illus. LC 76-15994. ISBN 0-394-49857-7. $15; pap. $7.95. HIST

This chronologically arranged collection of brief accounts, stories, poems, and songs begins in 1763 and concludes with CONRAIL in 1975. Numerous and generally well-selected illustrations complement the text and add to its browsability (though the illustrations are poorly arranged in relation to the text). The scope is overly ambitious for 185 pages of clear, large type, leaving the reader with the feeling that much more could have been done. The work would have been more successful if the authors had narrowed their focus and included more editorial commentary. Yet, the selections are generally appropriate, authentic, and readable. The compilers are, in sum, more successful in raising important questions about political matters, working conditions, and the like than in capturing the romance of steam locomotives, faraway places, and lonely whistles in the night.—William C. Robinson, Grad. Sch. of Library Science, Univ. of Tennessee, Knoxville

Maximilian of Wied (text) & Karl Bodmer (illus.). People of the First Man: life among the Plains Indians in their final days of glory; the firsthand account of Prince Maximilian's expedition up the Missouri River, 1833–34.

Dutton. 1976. 256p. ed. & designed by Davis Thomas & Karin Ronnefeldt. illus., half color. index. LC 76-16577. ISBN 0-525-17732-9. $29.95; until Jan. 1, 1977, $25.

Viola, Herman J. The Indian Legacy of Charles Bird King.

Smithsonian (G.P.O.) and Doubleday. 1976. 152p. illus., some color. bibliog. index. LC 76-15022. Smithsonian. ISBN 0-87474-943-3; Doubleday. ISBN 0-385-12485-6. $19.95. ART/HIST

Here are two important additions to the published visual documentation of American Indian life in the early 19th Century. People of the First Man combines selections from Prince Maximilian's published and private accounts of his 1833–1834 journey through the land of the Plains Indians with a series of splendid watercolors by the Swiss-born artist who accompanied him on that expedition. Traveling among many of the same tribes that George Catlin visited, Maximilian and Bodmer offer a perspective that complements Catlin's more famous observations. Only in recent years have Bodmer's original watercolors come to light, and their publication here should further Bodmer's reputation as perhaps the most accomplished artist of the American Indian in the last century. The importance of Maximilian's narrative, the beauty and detail of Bodmer's watercolors, and the sumptuous design of the book itself all combine to make this a highly recommended publication for anyone interested in the history of the American Indian.

Whereas Bodmer came to paint Indians because a wealthy German prince wanted a record of his travels, King came to paint Indians at the urging of Thomas L. McKenney, founder of the Bureau of Indian Affairs. King's portraits of more than 100 Indians leaders who visited Washington between 1821 and 1842 comprised the War Department Gallery of Indian Portraits until they were destroyed by fire in 1865. The Indian Legacy of Charles Bird King presents more than 60 copies which King made of his originals at various times in his career. His portraits are a fascinating piece of Americana, and, along with the text by anthropologist Viola, provide an illuminating commentary on the experiences of the Indian leaders who were ushered off to Washington.—F. Whitney Jones, Dept. of English, St. Andrews Coll. Laurinburg, N.C.

Mazzolani, Lidia Storoni. Empire Without End.

Helen & Kurt Wolff: HBJ. Nov. 1976. 150p. tr. by Joan McConnell & Mario Pei. fwd. by Mario Pei. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-15-128780-5. $10.95. HIST

In this small book, Mazzolani deals mainly with three Roman historians—Sallust, Livy, and Tacitus—and their awareness of the coming decline of the Roman Empire. She also uses other sources, especially Polybius. The philosophical attitudes of these historians are linked with historical events and situations, some of which (according to Pei in the foreword), parallel those of our own time. The book may appeal to educated laymen, but will probably not interest students of antiquity seeking novel theses.—Jackson P. Hershbell, Dept. of Classics, Univ. of Minnesota, Minneapolis

Meier, August & Elliott Rudwick. Along the Color Line: explorations in the black experience.

Univ. of Illinois Pr. (Blacks in the New World). Dec. 1976. 400p. ISBN 0-252-00636-4. $14.95. SOC SCI/HIST

Two leading scholars have compiled some of their articles for this volume. Although all except one were previously published, the high quality of the essays makes this an important work for scholarly libraries. It is divided into three sections: black leadership from Douglas to King; black nationalism; and the history of nonviolent direct action. Especially fine are the essays on black and white lawyers within the NAACP and on nearly forgotten boycotts of earlier generations. The footnotes alone are valuable.—James Levin, Dept. of Special Programs, C.C.N.Y.

Morrill, J. S. The Revolt of the Provinces: conservatives and radicals in the English Civil War, 1630-1650.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. (Historical Problems: Studies & Documents) 1976. 234p. index. LC 75-40544. $15. HIST

This work in the series edited by G. R. Elton combines analysis and 25 reproduced documents in an effort to shed light on local reactions to the complex issues which resulted in civil war in England in the 1640's. It is a meritorious work which enjoys the rare virtue of combining original research and thought with contemporary publications in a manner which illustrates the variegated forces at work in the prov-

Pervasive myths, persuasive facts.

"This ambitious survey of guerrilla warfare [shows that] most of the truisms about guerrillas are either 'myths and post-facto rationalizations,' as in the case of Cuba, or simply false. . . . Laqueur warns against taking their political rhetoric at face value; he even contests the decisiveness of the political motivation of the Vietnamese. . . . [Compared with similar books] this volume offers more material on post-World War II conflicts and a greater commitment to interpretation."
—Kirkus Reviews

GUERRILLA
A Historical and Critical Study
Walter Laqueur
$17.50 at all bookstores
LITTLE, BROWN

Come Celebrate America
175,000 Copies Sold
OPERATION SAIL 1976
The Only Official Commemorative Book

A magnificent documentary volume of the most memorable event of the Bicentennial. Sixty-four unforgettable pages featuring four color photographs of the tall sailing ships, complete with statistics and descriptions, a history of the nautical pageant, and a record of the Op Sail fleet. OPERATION SAIL 1976 effectively recaptures all the spirit, all the color, all the magnitude of this once-in-a-lifetime spectacle. An indispensable reference work for your school or library.

Deluxe Library Edition: $9.95
Cloth Edition: $7.50 Paperback: $4.00

For information on Operation Sail Slides and Tapes, write for our complete catalogue.

OPERATION SAIL BOOKS
P.O. Box 1669
New York, 10001

inces during this crucial period and their impact on national politics. As such, it is a beginning step towards a synthesis which links regionalism to national issues during the Puritan Revolution. Recommended for undergraduates, graduates, and advanced scholars alike.—James A. Casada, Dept. of History, Winthrop Coll., Rock Hill, S.C.

Norman, Barbara. Napoleon and Talleyrand: the last two weeks.

Stein & Day. 1976. 299p. bibliog. index. LC 75-11823. ISBN 0-8128-1830-X. $12.50. HIST

A detailed and well-documented chronicle of the two weeks in March 1814 which preceded Napoleon's fall from power. Norman draws on eyewitness accounts and focuses on the turbulent relationship between the emperor and Talleyrand as the former was trying to turn the tide of history and the latter intriguing with foreign leaders back in Paris. The book does not bring to light any new information or material about these momentous events. But it is written in a clear and lively, reporter-like language which makes it accessible to a broad audience.—Jacques Fomerand, Dept. of Political Science, Queens Coll., CUNY

Ollard, Richard. This War Without an Enemy: a history of the English Civil Wars.

Atheneum. 1976. 224p. illus., some color. maps. index. LC 76-15249. ISBN 0-689-10759-5. $15.95. HIST

Ollard intends this account primarily for the general reader. Prominent personalities such as Charles I and Cromwell are described, their motives examined, and the results of their actions detailed. Events and battles are related and the effects of the conflict upon English society, families, and individuals are carefully explained. The judicious use of excerpts from diaries enlivens the narrative with specific details. The contemporary portraits and prints selected to illustrate it are plentiful, beautifully reproduced, and germane to the text; and elegant design and printing make the book a pleasure to peruse. However, there are some minor flaws. First, a short bibliography should have been provided for those wishing to study the wars in greater detail. Second, Ollard's statistics, such as the number of participants in the battles of Edgehill and Marston Moor, do not agree with those in more specialized texts. With these reservations, the work is recommended for public and undergraduate collections.—Henry M. Yaple, Michigan State Univ. Libs., East Lansing

Parke, H. W. Festivals of the Athenians.

Cornell Univ. Pr. (Aspects of Greek & Roman Life). Feb. 1977. illus. bibliog. index. $16.50. HIST

The public religious observances of Athens are important not only to the study of religious history and Greek mythology, but also to the understanding of Greek literature and art. Parke's exhaustive study, the first in English, updates Deubner's classic Attische Feste (1932) with new archaeological and inscriptional evidence; its arrangement follows the Athenian calendar, a departure from the earlier format which illuminates the role of festivals in Athenian life during the 5th and 4th centuries B.C. The book is clear, comprehensive, and well written, essential to scholars for its careful references and new perspective on the subject, and valuable to general readers as well (since no knowledge of ancient or modern foreign languages is presumed).—Elizabeth A. Fisher, Dept. of Classics, Georgetown Univ., Washington, D.C.

Rice, Howard C., Jr. Thomas Jefferson's Paris.

Princeton Univ. Pr. 1976. 160p. illus. LC 75-30203. ISBN 0-691-05232-8. $18.50; pap. ISBN 0-691-00776-4. $8.75. HIST

This lavishly illustrated volume attempts to re-create the Paris of Jefferson by identifying and introducing the reader to the major places and settings known to the American statesman between 1784 and 1789. The viewpoint is largely that of the architectural and cultural historian. Though brief and specialized, the book does reveal the amazing breadth of Jefferson's interests and contacts in the cultural, scientific, and intellectual circles of the French capital, and even touches on the influences which the Paris experience had on Jefferson's imagination and later projects. Though not for the general reader, this book is of interest to specialists of Jefferson, of architecture and urban development, and of Paris.—James T. Schleifer, Dept. of History, Coll. of New Rochelle, N.Y.

Smith, Gene. High Crimes and Misdemeanors: the impeachment and trial of Andrew Johnson.

Morrow. Jan. 1977. photogs. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-688-03072-6. $10. HIST

Smith presents us with a fast-paced, readable account of a major event in American history. However, it is neither a history nor an interpretative analysis of the events, but rather the story of the events from the points of view of several of the principal characters, particularly Charles Sumner and Andrew Johnson. Smith begins his narrative with the physical assault on Sumner by Preston Brooks in the Senate chamber in 1856 and continues through the death of Johnson in 1875. Smith provides the reader with the chronology of the events and the words of the people involved, liberally quoted from many sources. However, those who are interested in more scholarly analysis and interpretation of the first impeachment trial in U.S. history should look to other sources, such as Hans L. Trefousse's Impeachment of a President (LJ 5/1/75) and Michael Les Benedict's The Impeachment and Trial of Andrew Johnson (LJ 7/73).—Mary Ann Miya, Loyola Univ. of Chicago Lib.

We are seeking qualified persons to review works of European and American Economic History, as well as books concerning the economic and political history of Latin America, India, and Japan. Contact Philip Mattera, The Book Review.

Ulam, Adam B. In the Name of the People: prophets and conspirators in prerevolutionary Russia.

Viking. Feb. 1977. 448p. photogs. index. ISBN 0-670-39691-5. $12.50. HIST

In this densely detailed book, Ulam traces the developments leading to the formation of the so-called People's Will, the group responsible for the assassination of Tsar Alexander II in 1881. Increasingly infatuated with violence, the young radicals renounced moderation, which the government itself increasingly saw as offering encouragement only to those who sought to overthrow the state. Ulam is scathing in his treatment of the "sighing moderates," those among the educated classes who could not bring themselves to decry terrorism, since, after all, it was being carried out for the loftiest of purposes—the people's salvation. In this supportive milieu, the radicals pursued a course which led to the destruction of both their ideals and themselves. This is a first-rate and provocative study of a tragic period of Russian history.—Fred E. Friedel, Dept. of History, Bellevue Community Coll., Wash.

Watkins, T. H. & R. R. Olmsted. Mirror of the Dream: an illustrated history of San Francisco.

Scrimshaw. 1976. 300p. illus. index. LC 76-18168. ISBN 0-912020-44-X. $27.50. HIST

More than 450 illustrations appear in this complete history of "everybody's favorite city," but the book is more than just a photo album with captions. The well-written text by two respected California historians tells the whole story of the city—from the earliest settlement in 1776, through the colorful gold rush period, the earthquake and fire, the tribulations of the early labor movement, into the present and the future (with suggestions for improving the quality of life in the city). In content and style the book is directed at lovers of San Francisco. It is an important addition to the literature on the city's history and should be a part of all large public library collections and all collections on Western U.S. history. (The index is also excellent.)—Bonnie Jo Dopp, San Francisco P.L.

Weslager, C. A. The Stamp Act Congress: with an exact copy of the complete journal.

Univ. of Delaware Pr. (Bicentennial Bk.). 1976. 279p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-21514. ISBN 0-87413-111-1. $14.50. HIST Weslager explains the Stamp Act and describes the congress and the political climate of the period in a well-organized account that is factual rather than interpretative. The journal of the congress is of historical interest, and the petitions to king and parliament illustrate how early the colonists articulated the problems which eventually led to the war for independence. For a more detailed analysis, one would want to see Edmund S. and Helen M. Morgan's The Stamp Act Crisis (Univ. of North Carolina Pr., 1953). However, Weslager has provided the layman with interesting, readable, and historically accurate work. A fine book, highly recommended.—Dorothy D. Siles, Ithaca Coll. Lib., N.Y.

Winslow, Susan with assist. of Wendy Holmes. Brother, Can You Spare a Dime? America from the Wall Street crash to Pearl Harbor; an illustrated documentary.

Paddington Pr: Two Continents. 1976. 160p. illus. index. LC 76-3807. ISBN 0-8467-0139-1. pap. $6.95. COMM/HIST

An anthology of period material from the popular press reflecting the way we were and saw ourselves. Arrangement is roughly chronological, with articles and pictures ranging from the initial reactions to the crash to the contradictory responses of protest and escape into the illusions obligingly provided by Hollywood, to our entrance into World War II. Differing and often conflicting materials are juxtaposed to form a collage which, when it works well, conveys an empathy for the period. This arrangement also helps to bring out the central contradiction of the period—of poverty where there could be "pastures of plenty." The surface nature of the material is a help rather than a hindrance for it prompts comparisons with the current barrage. Useful to browse through and as a convenience for school assignments. A good way to approach the period.—Ken Nash, Queens Borough P.L., New York

Wistrich, Robert S. Revolutionary Jews: from Marx to Trotsky.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. 1976. 254p. fwd. by James Joll. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-12060. ISBN 0-06-497806-0. $16. REL/HIST

Wistrich analyzes ten Jewish revolutionaries—Marx, Lassalle, Bernstein, Luxemburg, Lazare, Blum, Viktor Adler, Otto Bauer, Julius Martov, and Trotsky—all of whom sought some way to end the discriminatory distinction between Jew and Gentile. The author's central thesis is that these revolutionary Jews were insufficiently aware of their own identification with the anti-Semitic stereotype of the Jew, to the degree that their energies were directed more at general human suffering than at the specific treatment of their fellow Jews. They were largely unable to appreciate the ramifications of anti-Semitism, and accepted an oversimplification of the potentials of Marxism in solving these problems. Wistrich concludes that although Marxist communism has no framework within it to account for the full reality of the Jewish question, the influence Jews and Socialists had on each other had a profound effect on Jewish politics and ultimately on the creation of Israel. A singular addition to collections on Zionism, communism, political psychology, and anti-Semitism.—Moshe H. Spero, Sch. of Applied Social Sciences, Case Western Reserve Univ., Cleveland

Wortman, Richard S. The Development of a Russian Legal Consciousness.

Univ. of Chicago Pr. Dec. 1976. bibliog. index. $20. LAW/HIST

Wortman traces the growth of the Russian judiciary from its rudimentary beginnings in the 18th Century through the Reform of 1864 and the establishment of a competent, independent court system. He pays particularly close attention to attitudinal and compositional changes within the judicial bureaucracy and examines the careers of selected individuals in order to illustrate those changes. Wortman successfully shows how "the processes of legal modernization fit into the traditional patterns of Russian statecraft." His is a solid though somewhat colorless trek into the dual complexities of legal and intellectual history—one which goes beyond the confines that its title suggests.—Mark R. Yerburgh, SUNY at Albany Lib.

Travel, Exploration & Adventure

Berchen, William. Bermuda Impressions.

Hastings. 1976. 128p. text by Ursula Berchen. photogs., some color. LC 76-18709. ISBN 0-8038-0774-0. $17.50; pap. $10.95. PHOTOG/TRAV

More than 100 full-page photographs ramble through various architectural, natural, and human aspects of Bermuda without a specific thematic focus but also without the usual postcard attention to tourist attractions. Berchen's obvious talent for finding the unusual in the commonplace and his attention to artistic composition make this book visually delightful even for those not interested in Bermuda. The 30-page text, written by Berchen's wife, does little to enhance the photographs. Interesting historical and current information is undermined by an excessively conversational style.—Ruth Dougherty, formerly with Sarasota P.L., Fla.

Dumas, Frédéric. 30 Centuries Under the Sea.

Crown. 1976. 217p. tr. by Philip A. Facey. photogs. bibliog. index. LC 76-13031. ISBN 0-517-51875-9. $9.95. ARCHAEOLOGY/ADVENTURE

Dumas, an associate of Jacques Cousteau, relates his experiences discovering sunken ships from as long ago as the Bronze Age (the oldest ship yet found). He engagingly discusses the dangers and frustrations faced by undersea archaeologists, and describes the diving techniques used by himself and his colleagues to get to the ships and retrieve their cargoes. Dumas tells relatively little about the archaeological meaning of the finds. His book is anecdotal and not especially well organized, but it will appeal to general readers interested in archaeology and in deep-sea diving.—Jonathan F. Husband, Boston State Coll. Lib.

Gardey, Jon. Alaska: the sophisticated wilderness.

Stein & Day. 1976. photogs., mainly color by the author. bibliog. index. LC 76-16641. ISBN 0-8128-2110-3. $14.95. PER NAR/TRAV

Gardey first went to Alaska in 1954 to climb Mount McKinley. Four years later, after college and a tour in the Air Force, he returned to Alaska with his wife, having determined on his first visit that this was where he wanted to live. However, he found Alaska much changed from the frontier and wilderness country he remembered. A part-time flying job offered him the opportunity to see much of the state, but in 1968 he and his wife left for London. Gardey returned to Alaska in 1974 to do an article on the pipeline. The second half of his book concerns Alaska as he saw it on that trip and his opinions of the effects of the pipeline on "the green and white jewel that is Alaska." Gardey writes with feeling and warmth. His book should be popular in public libraries.—Nora T. Corley, Ottawa, Canada

Hunte, George. Jamaica.

232p. ISBN 0-7134-3147-4.

Turnbull, Patrick. Corsica.

208p. ISBN 0-7134-3134-2.

ea. vol: Hippocrene, dist. by Optimum Bk. Marketing. 1976. photogs. maps. index. $12.95. TRAV

Here are two more titles in the Batsford travel series (see LJ 9/15/76), intended for tourists seeking more background information and appreciation than typical guidebooks provide. The first half of Jamaica is a historical sketch and the remainder is tourist description. It skirts the racial problems the island has suffered in the last few years. There is a short bibliographical essay at the end—a feature more travel books should incorporate. Corsica presents a history too violent even for prime-time TV, but stylistically it's a good piece of travel writing. Both books have well-chosen black-and-white photographs that portray typical landscapes as well as the tourist scenes. The series would benefit from more thorough maps: too many places are mentioned in the texts which can't be found on the accompanying maps.—Harold M. Otness, Southern Oregon State Coll. Lib., Ashland

Kane, Robert S. Italy A to Z: a grand tour of the classic cities.

Doubleday. Jan. 1977. 240p. maps. ISBN 0-385-11623-3. $7.95. TRAV

Kane's book has chapters on Rome, Florence, Milan, Naples (and environs), and Venice, and concludes with a chapter of general information. For each city Kane offers a brief historical introduction; an account (in some detail) of the monumenti; a rundown of hotels (from deluxe to inexpensive), restaurants (ditto), shops (ditto), and entertainment; and a few assorted "notes." Kane writes with wit and sophistication, and I find his knowledge of Italy (cultural and otherwise) second to none. Not all will agree with Kane's opinions on the artistic worth of particular monumenti, but this is to be expected. There will be few, whether seasoned travelers or beginners, who will not learn something from him—and usually with a smile at the grace and humor with which it is expressed.—Thomas M. Robinson, Dept. of Philosophy, Univ. of Toronto, Canada

Miller, Luree. On Top of the World: five women explorers in Tibet.

Paddington Pr: Two Continents. Dec. 1976. 222p. photogs. bibliog. index. LC 76-3805. ISBN 0-8467-0138-3. $10.95. HIST/EXPLORATION

Tibet, with its almost unscalable Himalayas, mysterious Buddhist sects, and fabulously rich monasteries, has long captured the Western imagination. Miller tells of five Western women—three British, one American, and one French—who, in the days of the suffragettes and Queen Victoria, ventured to travel in Tibet. These stories of five relatively unknown women who broke with traditions binding them to hearth and husband are fascinating and well written. A worthwhile addition to women's studies collections.—Deirdre R. Murray, formerly with Free Lib. of Philadelphia

Radcliffe, Virginia. The Caribbean Heritage.

Walker. 1976. 271p. illus., some color. bibliog. index. LC 75-12189. ISBN 0-8027-0518-9. $17.50. TRAV

Although it is not a Baedecker in the traditional sense, Radcliffe's book is an excellent introduction for the islands-bound tourist. The Caribbean region is peppered with fascinating historical ruins (among them forts, colonial mansions and pre-Columbian petroglyphs), and the author describes each with familiarity, affection, and a genuine concern for their preservation. The text includes a thumbnail historical sketch of the region, a sufficient bibliography, and several suggestions for walking tours, all of which are accompanied by inviting illustrations. Radcliffe's jaunty style makes her guide a fine addition to a general library with a Caribbean shelf.—Roberta Marx Delson, Dept. of History, Rutgers Univ., Newark

Home Economics

Franklin, Linda Campbell. From Hearth to Cookstove: an American domestic history of gadgets and utensils made or used in America from 1700 to 1930; a guide for collectors.

House of Collectibles. 1976. 271p. photogs. by Paul Persoff. illus. bibliog. index. $12.50. DEC ARTS/HOME ECON

Franklin has used information gleaned from old catalogs and cookbooks and years of collecting experience to compile this work. Brief descriptions of kitchen gadgets from adapter rings to madeline molds to yellow ware often contain quotes from antiquarian sources and old-time recipes. The work's most valuable asset is the abundance of photographs and engravings that will help collectors in the identification of household utensils. Another plus is the state-by-state listing of U.S. historic restorations that incorporate kitchen settings. Flaws include inconsistent cross-referencing, the confusing letter-by-letter alphabetizing scheme, omission of many popular stoneware objects such as batter pails, butter pots and blind pigs, etc., and the occasional inclusion of crude and unnecessary line drawings (artist and/or source unnamed). Though not as stylistically cohesive as Norwak's Kitchen Antiques (LJ 3/1/76), it contains a great deal more information for the collector of "kitcheniana."—Callie B. McGinnis, Columbus Coll. Lib., Ga.

Grow, Lawrence, comp. The Old House Catalogue: 2,500 products, services, and suppliers for restoring, decorating, and furnishing the period house—from early American to 1930s modern.

Main St/Universe Bks. 1976. 240p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-5097. ISBN 0-87663-246-0. $14.95; pap. ISBN 0-87663-927-9. $7.95. TECH/HOME ECON

This book appears at precisely the right time to be of great value to those restoring or preserving an old home or other type of period building. As the title indicates, the reader will find about 2,500 sources for items which can drive you crazy when you need them but can't find them. Slate shingles? Cut stone for the cellar floor or foundation? Wrought iron fences? Mantelpieces? Climb the walls no more! Look it up in Old House Catalogue's comprehensive index and list of suppliers. In those towns where the Preservation Movement is taking the neon and chromium off those lovely old brick and stained glass commercial building fronts, this is an essential book. How else could you locate a source for the old stamped steel ceiling panels which were in all the stores when you were young? Suppliers are also included for the hard-to-find period furniture and accessory pieces. Recommended.—William M. Potts, Bryan P.L., Ohio

Homeowner's How-To Treasury.

Popular Science, dist. by Harper. 1976. 308p. illus., some color. index. LC 76-14669. ISBN 0-06-013386-8. $13.95.

Waugh, Andrew. Handyman's Encyclopedia. ed. by Bruce Scully.

Drake. 1976. 431p. illus. index. LC 76-16423. ISBN 0-8473-1079-5. $14.95. TECH/HOME ECON

Unfortunately, home repair involves a vast amount of material and no one title can cover it all adequately. For example, the two books reviewed here do not contain much duplication, actually supplement each other, and yet touch only slightly on some subjects, such as portable power tools, suspended ceilings, carpeting. Both duplicate material found in other such books.

Waugh's alphabetically arranged book covers tools (axes, drill bits, clamps); materials (aluminum, electrical boxes, gypsumboard); and building and repair work (bricklaying, using ladders, wallpaper removal, painting) with from a fourth page to three pages devoted to each topic. The additional 40-page glossary of building terms would be more useful combined with the main alphabet of topics. How-to instructions are precise and brief. Illustrated with line drawings.

Homeowner's is a collection of articles on home repair, energy saving, and materials (acrylics, plastic bath modules, spindles) which have previously appeared in Popular Science publications and does not attempt to cover the total repair bit. Well illustrated with good photos (part color) and line drawings. Names and addresses of suppliers of materials are included. Homeowner's will be especially useful to the homeowner wanting to remodel, upgrade, or expand and having to decide on plans, materials, and capability. Waugh's is most useful to the novice who needs to check on a tool, material, or repair quickly. Neither is a basic how-to manual for the beginner.—W. T. Johnston, Coastal Plain Regional Lib., Tifton, Ga.

Cookery

Hagen, Uta. Love for Cooking.

Macmillan. 1976. 380p. illus. ISBN 0-02-547380-8. $10.95. COOKERY

Joining the ranks of books written by celebrities, this one is a good starter for beginners but rather a bore for the experienced cook. Hagen's simple introductory instructions and basic recipes covering all courses will do for the home-bound chef what one year in France will do for the wanderer's cuisine. Recipes are simplified well in many cases; however, I cannot forgive the use of canned broth in soups or the instructions to "follow the recipe in the Certo booklet" when making grape jelly. The hollandaise sauce for eggs Benedict is a snap, and the Hungarian goulash that began Hagen's cooking career is truly mouth watering. Since I have been preparing the Bourbon glazed ham and bananas flambé for years, I can attest to their excellence. Though made with canned broth, the broccoli soup is still outstanding. Some unusual hors d'oeuvre, poultry, and German dishes help offset the mundane qualities of other recipes. Suggestions for saving time, money, and household products are sound and especially helpful for the novice.—Susan M. Allen, Associate Editor, "College Student Personnel Abstracts," Claremont, Calif.

Hess, John L. & Karen Hess. The Taste of America.

Grossman, dist. by Viking. Jan. 1977. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-670-69376-5. $8.95. COOKERY

A carefully documented book in which the Hesses build a substantial case for the quality, richness and variety of early American cookery, especially at its peak in the second quarter of the 19th Century. They deplore the changes since, which have resulted in tasteless foods—refined, standardized, mass-produced, and laced with chemicals—or a diet of embalmed "glop" developed by food conglomerates and endorsed by governmental agencies, accepted by a gullible public, and lauded by cavalier historians and food "experts" of limited training and sensibility. Well-known writers (Boorstin, Beard, Child, Claiborne) are denounced without mercy. Some readers will be outraged at criticism of favorite personalities, "gourmet foods," and some commercial products, but will find interesting anecdotes, old recipes, and an excellent, eclectic bibliography used in support of the authors' views. Real home cooking, home-grown produce, and marketing networks independent of agribusiness are hopeful signs that some still care about quality food. This provocative book is warmly recommended for a broad readership.—Eleanor H. Broadus, formerly with Northern Illinois Univ. Lib., DeKalb

Jones, Evan. The World of Cheese.
Knopf. 1976. index. 336p. LC 76-13697. ISBN 0-394-49755-4. $12.50.

Ogilvy, Susan. Making Cheeses at Home.
Crown. 1976. 88p. illus. index. LC 76-10155. ISBN 0-517-52635-2. $5.95. COOKERY

Cheese, Jones says, is "an engrossing subject . . . to be read about with pleasure." His book is indeed pleasurable reading as he discusses some of the best cheeses of America and Europe, how they originated, how they are made, how to recognize good quality. He doesn't try to tell everything about every cheese; rather, he groups cheeses by types and concentrates on what he calls "real cheese," cheese of uncompromised quality made of nothing but milk and natural seasonings, without preservatives or stabilizers. He includes a chapter on making cheese, tips on buying and serving, a long section of excellent cheese recipes, and a list of mail order sources. About a third of the book is devoted to an impressive alphabetical list, in which he identifies and briefly describes hundreds of the world's cheeses. Anyone who cares about cheese, beginner to expert, should learn from and enjoy this book.

Beginning cheese makers will need something a bit more detailed than Jones's single brief chapter. Ogilvy's book describes in straightforward, careful detail the equipment, ingredients, and techniques required for making five soft cheeses, four semihard cheeses, yoghurt, and butter. It includes many fewer kinds of cheese than Don Radke's Cheese Making at Home: the Complete Illustrated Guide (LJ 11/1/74) and, since all terminology is British, it is not quite as suitable for Americans. But for someone who has never made cheese, the crystal-clear drawings and step-by-step instructions in this attractively designed book should prove an excellent primer.—Ruth Diebold, Finkelstein Memorial Lib., Spring Valley, N.Y.

Lo, Kenneth H. C. Chinese Cooking on Next to Nothing.
Pantheon. 1976. LC 76-9474. ISBN 0-394-40771-7. $8.95; pap. ISBN 0-394-73231-6. $3.45. COOKERY

Once again Lo offers a collection of delicious recipes, this time focusing on the theme of "cheap chow." A mere three-fourths' pound of meat "exploded" with vegetables and bulk food, such as rice, will amply provide five to six diners with a nutritious and flavorful meal. The food dollar extends as the variety meats, head, neck, feet, etc. of animals become edible with proper seasoning and cooking. On the other hand, vegetables can be expensive, and perhaps Lo underestimates their cost, which will, nevertheless, pay off in health benefits. Lo is not rigid with respect to authenticity but is more concerned that users learn economical Chinese cooking methods. Presentation of recipes in his Peking Cooking (LJ 4/1/73) and Chinese Vegetarian Cooking (LJ 7/74) seemed to convey a better sense of organization. Recommended.—Naomi O. Moy, California State Coll. Lib., Dominguez Hills

Solomon, Charmaine. The Complete Asian Cookbook.
McGraw. 1976. 511p. ed. by Peter & Wendy Hutton. color photogs. by Reg Morrison. index. LC 76-22706. ISBN 0-07-059636-0. $15.95. COOKERY

Numerous mouth-watering color photographs illustrating the culinary achievements of 16 Asian countries spark one's fascination with this book, whose value is not merely limited to good browsing. Asian cooking extends beyond the widely accepted Chinese cooking, and Solomon acquaints the user with the lesser-known cuisines as well. The collection demonstrates the intermingling of the culinary heritage as well as the distinguishing or dissimilar features of the various nations. Each chapter introduction sets the culinary mood for a particular country or region and specifies any characteristic or necessary utensils and ingredients. Veteran and newcomer to Asian cooking alike will be pleased with the good selection of easy-to-make, clearly explained, delicious recipes. Thoughtfully, Solomon, who writes from Australia, gives American equivalents of Australian terminology, and assures us that standard American measuring utensils can be used as is, thus obviating bothersome conversions. Should become a popular item. Warmly recommended.—Naomi O. Moy, California State Coll. Lib., Dominguez Hills

Von Welanetz, Diana & Paul Von Welanetz. With Love from Your Kitchen.
Tarcher, dist. by Hawthorn. 1976. 240p. illus. by Kurt Welanetz. index. LC 75-32855. ISBN 0-87477-053-X. $10.

Woman's Day Gifts from Your Kitchen.
S. & S. 1976. ISBN 0-671-22320-8. $7.95. COOKERY

Both of these cookbooks are oriented toward the cook who wants to give food as gifts for holiday seasons and other special events. With Love from Your Kitchen is personable; chatty anecdotes introduce many of the more than 125 recipes. Each recipe includes specific information on how to prepare in advance and store if desired; how to package for gift-giving and how to label. The recipes range from appetizers, sauces, preserves, breads, and desserts, to soups, casseroles, and even a few nonedibles such as sachets. Many recipes are unusual and even some of the more familiar have some interesting, unique touches. Three appendixes give details on making and/or decorating various types of containers and labels; preserving; and equipment. The index is detailed.

The Woman's Day book lacks the personal tone and also lacks an index. There is a brief introduction on selecting and decorating food gifts; each chapter on the various types of foods covered (appetizers, breads, seasonings, cookies, jellies, etc.) has general ideas on packaging that type and also some helpful general cooking tips. Less specific for each recipe on the packaging, labeling, and storing aspect than With love . . ., Gifts has almost twice as many recipes ranging from the traditional mincemeat pie and dill pickles to the more exotic pear honey and lime marmalade. Both of these titles could be good additions to public library collections as the need exists.—Gilda Turitz, San Francisco P.L.

HUMOR

Simpson, N. F. Man Overboard: a testimonial to the high art of incompetence.
Morrow. Dec. 1976. 110p. LC 76-40349. ISBN 0-688-03129-3. $5.95. HUMOR

A book that is almost uninterruptedly funny. Simpson's preposterous toy of a plot—about a man who is drowning in the Mediterranean Sea and the efforts of his wife to get him rescued—is kept spinning by an easy spontaneity and expert control. The author is mordantly good at spoofing the bogus concern and gobbledygook of public officials, at parodying the blabber that frequently passes for academic research, and at conveying the helplessness and inarticulateness of ordinary people. The book introduces some really funny situations and characters, and every now and then it flashes with the kind of bright lunacy that is a conspicuous virtue of British humor. British humor may not be to everyone's taste, but then neither is Châteauneuf-du-Pape.—A. J. Anderson, Sch. of Library Science, Simmons Coll., Boston

Literature

Armstrong, Judith. The Novel of Adultery.
Barnes & Noble: Harper. Dec. 1976. 182p. bibliog. index. LC 76-15793. $21.50. LIT

The theme of adultery is traced in the 19th-Century fiction of Russia, France, England, and the U.S. The focus is on the social and moral codes of each country. Marriage was thought to cement the social order, so that adultery was seen as the breaking of that code, leading to chaos. For that order to be vindicated for the conventional reader, the adulterous lovers had to be punished. These novelists operated on a double standard, with the female transgressor receiving the worst of it. Such novels as Madame Bovary, Anna Karenina, and The Golden Bowl are analyzed in detail, but lesser known works are also discussed. They are explicated from a social and feminist point of view, and it's hard to determine to whom the book is addressed. Also confusing is the author's habit of jumping from one novel to another without identifying the author or the title to which she is referring. Armstrong should have limited herself to an essay on the subject, thus avoiding repetition and the recounting of needless details. Nor are her conclusions all that original or revelatory. Considering its high price, this will not be an essential purchase for most libraries.—Morris A. Hounion, New York City Community Coll. Lib./Learning Resource Center, CUNY

Barnett, Ursula A. Ezekiel Mphahlele.
Twayne. (World Authors). Dec. 1976. 192p. bibliog. index. LC 76-18881. ISBN 0-8057-6257-4. $8.95. LIT
Although the works of exiled South African writer Ezekiel Mphahlele may not be quoted or disseminated in his homeland, their author has managed to play a significant role in the postwar development of black South African literature. This timely and comprehensive introduction to his works provides the necessary historical perspective—Mphahlele's early years in Pretoria's black ghettos, his banishment from a teaching post in a South African school, his work on the magazine Drum, and his exile to Nigeria, France, Kenya, Zambia and, eventually, the U.S.—and the kind of literary interpretation that explains why he is one of the major figures in African literature today.—Thomas A. Hale, Dept. of French & Comparative Literature Program, Pennsylvania State Univ., University Park

Berger, Harold L. Science Fiction and the New Dark Age.
Popular Pr.: Bowling Green Univ. 1976. 231p. bibliog. index. LC 76-1054. ISBN 0-87972-121-9. $11.95; pap. ISBN 0-87972-122-7. $4.95. LIT
"The anti-utopias of modern science fiction are the subject of this study." Berger's thesis is that sf no longer looks to a bright future but points with alarm at "the tendency of scientific and social progress in this century to cause more problems than it solves and even turn solutions into problems." He analyzes the works of major and minor authors in 12 thematic groups to show popular hostility to progress, machines controlling or replacing man, nuclear holocausts, overpopulation, consumer exploitation, racial war, mind control, totalitarian governments, youth revolt, industrial rape of all resources, and other horrors. The analyses are in depth and generally well reasoned. A good scholarly work.—Frederick Patten, Los Angeles Science Fantasy Society

Bornstein, George, ed. Romantic and Modern: revaluations of literary tradition.
Univ. of Pittsburgh Pr. Dec. 1976. index. $11.95. LIT
This book of 13 original essays develops a premise lately gaining ground in Anglo-American criticism—the importance of Romanticism to modernism. Modernism is not anti-Romantic but post-Romantic. To this end, each essay examines a different connection between the two. The first four essays introduce major themes and forms, often referring to the ideas of the Romantic critic Meyer Abrams. The two essays on the acknowledged Romantic poets, Yeats and Stevens, can be juxtaposed with the three essays on the avowed anti-Romantics, Pound and Eliot. The fact that many early 20th-Century writers wrongly attacked Romanticism in defining modern literature is made clear. The last four essays consider writers of other genres: the ones on Faulkner and Joseph Wood Krutch are particularly illuminating in extracting the Romantic elements important to modernism today. All of the essays insist on the centrality of Romanticism to 20th-Century literature without denying the creativity of modernism. Scholarly and provocative, this book is highly recommended for academic libraries.—Marilyn E. Mercer, Chatham Coll. Lib., Pittsburgh

CORRECTION: In the review of Dora B. Weiner & William R. Keylor's From Parnassus (LJ 10/15/76), the sentence beginning "Highlights" should read: "Highlights include Peter Gay on the critic Eduard Hanslick, John Simon astutely demonstrating the intricate differences between translation and adaptation of foreign drama, [Dora] Weiner intimately portraying 'the ferment of reform and humanitarian activity'. . . ."

Clemens, Samuel Langhorne. The Higher Animals: a Mark Twain bestiary.
Crowell. 1976. 160p. ed. & intro. by Maxwell Geismar. drawings by Jean-Claude Suarès. illus. bibliog. LC 76-6563. ISBN 0-690-01149-0. $8.95. LIT
For a decade the University of Oklahoma Press has been marketing The Birds and Beasts of Mark Twain (1966), a collection of snippets put together by Robert M. Rodney and Minnie M. Brashear and splendidly illustrated by Robert Roché. Geismar has now gathered together virtually the same snippets, and he offers them with more illustrations, and funnier ones, by Suarès, whose style is familiar to readers of the New York Times "Op-Ed" page. Both collections seem to have been designed for guest rooms or bathrooms. For libraries the intelligent choice is neither.—Robert Regan, Dept. of English, Univ. of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia

Crosland, Margaret. Women of Iron and Velvet: French women writers after George Sand.
Taplinger. 1976. 255p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 75-8202. ISBN 0-8008-8436-1. $12.50. BIOG/LIT
This comprehensive study offers a synthetic panorama of French women writers and their preoccupations throughout the ages. Well-researched biographical summaries and judicious evaluations of many of the works introduced result in a thorough and authoritative work. Each writer is assessed for her own merit and viewed in the larger context of literary and social history. Crosland's richly personal and refreshing appraisals of the authors and of their critics are enlightened and provocative. This work can clearly serve as an excellent guide to readers wanting to undertake a study of French women writers, particularly those after Sand.—Anthony S. Caprio, Dept. of Foreign Languages & Literatures, Cedar Crest Coll., Allentown, Pa.

Curley, Thomas M. Samuel Johnson and the Age of Travel.
Univ. of Georgia Pr. 1976. 285p. index. LC 74-30677. ISBN 0-8203-0380-1. $12.50. LIT
Though his style is sometimes graceless and overly repetitive, Curley has covered with great thoroughness a subject that should interest scholars and general readers alike. The 18th-Century fascination with travel is manifested in no one more variously than in Dr. Johnson, and Curley demonstrates the extensiveness of Johnson's knowledge of travel literature, the pervasiveness of his interest, and the informing role travel plays in Johnson's moral vision, his Rambler papers, Rasselas, and other writings. Although there have been many studies of English and European travel and travelers in the age of the "Grand Tour," no one has shown so fully how that interest has affected the life and writings of a single individual. And when the individual is the perennially fascinating Dr. Johnson, the result has to be a book of some significance. No bibliography, but useful notes and index.—Arthur E. Jones Jr., Dept. of English, Drew Univ., Madison, N.J.

Ende, Stuart A. Keats and the Sublime.
Yale Univ. Pr. 1976. 200p. index. LC 76-8420. ISBN 0-300-02010-4. $12.50. LIT
As Ende sees it, Keats remains "at a border of existence at which contrary spheres of existence . . . are neither opposed nor juxtaposed, but joined in a tenuous relationship that is often expressed oxymoronically." To articulate his thesis Ende uses Freud's overall theory of the relation of subject to object and the internal dialectic in which this relation is molded—a theory which Ende rightly calls cumbersome. He correlates Freudian notions with Yeats's critical statements. His preoccupation with Yeats results in a final chapter which analyzes Yeats's own encounter with the sublime and which is not really a comparison/contrast to Keats. Lurking behind the whole effort, moreover, are the critical perspectives of Geoffrey Hartman, Paul de Man, and Harold Bloom. In general, Ende's study seems to simply offer a new angle of vision on what we already know about Keats. In many ways, the book is old wine in new bottles; but after all, the wine is still good, and the bottles are exceedingly curious.—F. P. Riga, Dept. of English, Canisius Coll., Buffalo, N.Y.

Flannery, James W. W. B. Yeats and the Idea of a Theatre: the early Abbey Theatre in theory and practice.
Yale Univ. Pr. 1976. 404p. photogs. bibliog. index. LC 74-29721. ISBN 0-300-01773-1. $22.50. THEATER/LIT
Accurate, concise, complete, this will henceforth be the first source consulted on Yeats's drama. Flannery integrates smoothly the massive historical and critical corpus on Yeats and the Abbey with his own reading of Yeats's work and life and with his own research on Yeats as a man of the theater and his own experience in directing Yeats's plays. Flannery is the first Yeats scholar to be both a man of the theater and a literary historian and critic. Thus, he not only records the past stage history of the plays, but assesses their basic stageability as well. Contrary to consensus, Flannery concludes that Yeats's plays are significant not only as recurring symptoms of the anti-realistic vanguard, but also as effective plays (at least potentially). Yeats's plays, in his opinion, dramatize basic moments of the larger human experience in ritualistic forms and Irish metaphors.—Marilyn Gaddis Rose, Dept. of Comparative Literature, SUNY at Binghamton

Four Makers of the American Mind: Emerson, Thoreau, Whitman, and Melville; new essays by Robert E. Spiller & others.

Duke Univ. Pr. 1976. 82p. ed. & pref. by Thomas Edward Crawley. LC 76-24188. ISBN 0-8223-0372-8. $6.75. LIT

Four outstanding scholar-teachers (Spiller, J. Lyndon Shanley, Floyd Stovall, and Leon Howard) delivered these lectures as part of the celebration of the establishment of Hampden-Sydney College. As lectures before audiences of nonspecialists, they are necessarily rather general in focus: Emerson's "four faces"—youthful idealist, cosmic sage, disturbed seeker, and wise exponent of a dualism of ideal and real; Thoreau's "lover's quarrel with the world"; Whitman as portrait of the American character; and Melville's obsession with American tragic hero in Ahab. Linked by the common theme of the finding and making of the American character, however, these essays display an intellectual vigor and authority lamentably disappearing in recent literary investigation. As distillations of four distinguished careers and specializations, they belong in academic and large public libraries.—John R. Willingham, Dept. of English, Univ. of Kansas, Lawrence Garvin, John. James Joyce's Disunited Kingdom and the Irish Dimension.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. Dec. 1976. 254p. bibliog. index. LC 76-19930. ISBN 0-06-492331-2. $21.50. LIT

Garvin offers a series of new commentaries on and interpretations of various episodes and details in Ulysses and Finnegans Wake. His speciality is the Irish background, and it seems to me that often he scores and sometimes he doesn't. (The most questionable readings treat Ulysses as if it were autobiographical.) No true Joycean will refuse the opportunity to sniff out new symbolism, but Garvin's book is scrappy and uneven. Basically it's nothing more than a long string of footnotes. Though the author has spent a lifetime tracking Joyce to his lair, he apparently doesn't regard Joyce very highly as an artist. After spending years seeking out minutiae, Garvin seems to believe that there's nothing there besides minutiae. Of interest to the devout, but one wishes the source hunting were accompanied by greater literary sense.—Keith Cushman, Dept. of English, Univ. of North Carolina, Greensboro

Gooneratne, Yasmine. Alexander Pope.

Cambridge Univ. Pr. (British Authors). 1976. 150p. LC 76-4758. ISBN 0-521-21127-1. $13.95; pap. ISBN 0-521-29051-1. $4.95.

Gordon, I. R. F. A Preface to Pope.

Longman. (Preface Bks.). 1976. 195p. illus. maps. bibliog. index. LC 75-25572. ISBN 0-582-31505-0. $9.50; pap. ISBN 0-582-31506-9. $6. LIT

Reading Pope is not child's play. The beginner's difficulties seem increasingly appreciated these days, for there have been at least three books published this year to make the poet accessible. Quite unlike each other, these two new volumes each have merits but do not equal Pat Rogers' An Introduction to Pope (LJ 8/76).

Although Gooneratne generalizes about Pope and his environment while surveying the poems, the emphasis falls on the pauses, the vocabulary, the couplets. The book's strength lies in nice perceptions of lexical meaning. But close-reader can become closed-reader, like someone cramming for an entrance examination. There is mention here of F. R. Leavis and Edith Sitwell; not, however, of better commentators on Pope who could have, for example, made readers less positive about the disputed notion that the Essay on Man retails Bolingbroke's philosophy, or who could have suggested an alternative, less negative reading of Windsor-Forest.

Gordon's reader, by contrast, is supplied with what amounts to a "backgrounds" kit, materials toward creating an understanding of the historical Pope. The book has chapters on the biography, the poet's locales, parallels of the poetry with other arts, the philosophy of the time, and more, including, rather unobtrusively, close-readings of selected passages. More: attractive illustrations—portraits, maps, etc. Still more: a "reference section" with glossaries of technical terms, place names, biographical summaries, a basic bibliography. Some of this a reader will find in any good edition, but much he will not. Some details could be clearer, or more accurate, or more tidy. A net thrown so wide will catch herrings for the captious. The imaginative beginner, though, will enjoy this book.—Frederick M. Keener, Dept. of English, Hofstra Univ., Hempstead, N.Y.

Howard, John. Blake's "Milton": a study in the selfhood.

Fairleigh Dickinson. Univ. Pr. 1976. 300p. bibliog. index. LC 75-10140. ISBN 0-8386-1756-5. $15. LIT

This work is primarily concerned with an explication of the mythology found in Blake's shortest prophetic poem, Milton. The key to understanding Blake's symbolic universe is, according to Howard, the poet's concept of the selfhood. Man's instinctive fears imprison creativity and create the delusion of a separate, restricted self existing in a material world of time and space. For Blake, the psychological, interior errors of the selfhood develop into an exterior selfhood that is characterized by empiricism, rationalism, nationalism, state religion, prescriptive morality, and war. Milton's journey in the prophetic poem presents a symbolic treatment of how man can discover the delusions of selfhood, overcome them through transcendent mercy and imagination, and enter a world of unity and expanded vision. Howard succeeds in clarifying many of the subtle meanings found in the complex mythology of Milton and Blake's other works.—Joseph J. Branin, Kent State Univ. Lib., Salem, Ohio

James, Louis, ed., intro. & commentary. English Popular Literature, 1819-1851.

Columbia Univ. Pr. 1976. 368p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-14867. ISBN 0-231-04140-3. $19.95. LIT

This book is three excellent things. First, it is an authoritative introduction to its subject (about one-quarter of the volume). Second, it is an anthology of the literature which in some cases is inaccessible to both scholar and average reader. Topics covered include entertainment, religion, fables, crime, heroines, and many more, and there are excerpts from and sources for such items as Cobbett's "Rural Rides," Rymer's "Varney, the Vampyre," and Pierce's (low) Life in London. It has poster and pamphlet "literature," sermons, songs, and rhymes. And throughout the entire text are beautifully reproduced the handbills, engravings, and newspaper and book illustrations that make this a third kind of book—a collection of the printed word and page, showing the variety of graphics at the time. Each picture has been well chosen to illustrate the text. The bibliography is superb. The book's usefulness is enhanced by a sensible arrangement and thorough documentation of sources. Highly recommended.—Douglas W. Cooper, Randolph-Macon Coll. Lib., Ashland, Va.

Josipovici, Gabriel, ed. The Modern English Novel: the reader, the writer and the work.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. Dec. 1976. 281p. index. LC 76-15791. ISBN 0-06-493421-7. $18.75. LIT

This collection of essays originated rather informally at the University of Sussex. Friends and colleagues got together to talk and write about novels, and this little book is the result. The novelists who show up in the dozen essays are miscellaneous yet unmistakably representative of the vitality of the English fictional tradition: Austen, Dickens, George Eliot, James, Joyce, Lawrence, Woolf, Beckett, Muriel Spark, and (surprise) P. G. Wodehouse. A number of the essays center on the role of language in fiction; many of the contributors seem to share the awkward belief that "it is very difficult to put into words what happens when we read a novel." I didn't find it altogether desirable that one essayist "hardly moves beyond the attempt to explain the way Joyce asks us to read a one-word sentence at the very start of Ulysses," and I confess to having wearied of an analysis of "the function of the brackets" in To the Lighthouse. But de gustibus non est disputandum. Here isn't God's plenty, yet I also found much that is challenging, stimulating, and, for the advanced student of the novel, useful.—Keith Cushman, Dept. of English, Univ. of North Carolina, Greensboro

Kuhn, Reinhard. The Demon of Noontide: ennui in Western literature.

Princeton Univ. Pr. Dec. 1976. 416p. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-3269. ISBN 0-691-06311-7. $25. LIT

Kuhn surveys Western European—but especially French and German—literature to describe the salient features of ennui, "an idea that is crucial in the formation of Western man." From ancient Greek literature down to that of the present day, the author chooses, summarizes, and comments on numerous texts which reveal the development and multiple facets of this idea. Such historical inventories are useful, and Kuhn's is quite scholarly. Yet his prose is leaden and Latinate; his explications too often paraphrase texts rather than illuminate them and his theme. If the extensive material that Kuhn has assembled is to yield "a new key for the interpretation of literature" and "insights into the creative act and hence make possible new and significant readings of many texts," it will have to be subjected to more probing analyses and complemented by a more wide-ranging, more fully articulated, and more daring theoretical framework.—Richard Kuczkowski, Dept. of English, Bronx Community Coll., CUNY

La Belle, Jenijoy. The Echoing Wood of Theodore Roethke.

Princeton Univ. Pr. (Essays in Literature). Dec. 1976. 200p. index. LC 76-3265. ISBN 0-691-06312-5. $11.50. LIT

Important new insights into the full body of Roethke's art are unearthed in La Belle's perceptive, highly readable text. Shunning the exclusivity of Roethke's personal vision in deference to his obvious reliance upon literary tradition (specifically, poets such as Donne, Wordsworth, Blake, Whitman, Eliot, and Yeats), La Belle offers a greater perspective upon the depth and scope of the poet's work. A former student of Roethke, La Belle says as much about the mimetic instincts of the poetic method (as a conscious and subconcious servant of tradition) as she does about Roethke's particular style, which developed from direct imitation to an assimilation of poetic tradition in concord with his own creative imagination. She provides, in clear, concise detail, much needed close interpretations of particular poems, placing them, line by line, in direct comparison with their inspirational progenitors. Each point that she makes is fortified by quotations and charged with an intellectual perspicacity which further enlightens the reader. No serious student of Roethke, or of the poetic method in general, can afford to overlook this valuable study.—Dennis Petticoffer, California Inst. of Technology Lib., Pasadena Proffer, Carl R., ed. & intro. Modern Russian Poets on Poetry.

Ardis. 1976. 203p. sel. & pref. by Joseph Brodsky. photogs. bibliog. tr. by Alexander Golubov & others. ISBN 0-88233-102-7. $10. LIT

First-rate poets do not always make first-rate critics, as this volume demonstrates. The reader is presented with translations of a series of essays, jottings, and musings of some of modern Russia's best poets, including, among others, Mandelstam, Pasternak, and Mayakovsky. The entries treat various aspects of the poet's role and his craft, and they range from the abstract (Mandelstam's "On the Nature of the Word") to the practical and specific (Mayakovsky's "How to Make Verse"). Although the translations, like the essays themselves, vary greatly in quality and clarity, many of them appear here for the first time, and are thus worth having. The editor has thoughtfully provided the nonspecialist with many footnotes, bibliographies, and capsule biographies. The volume should prove useful in the library of any college that includes the study of poetry in its curriculum.—Linda Hart Scatton, Dept. of Language, Literature, & Communications, Rensselaer Polytechnic Inst., Troy, N.Y.

Purdy, Strother B. The Hole in the Fabric: science, contemporary literature, and Henry James.

Univ. of Pittsburgh Pr. Dec. 1976. (Critical Essays in Modern Literature). index. $11.95. LIT

According to Purdy's convincing and exceptionally learned argument, James unknowingly wrote four types of novels that correspond to the four modern scientific developments that punched "the hole in the fabric" of our now outmoded view of cosmic order. The novels of supernatural horror, disoriented time, psychological-erotic themes, and "philosophically apparent nothingness" correspond, respectively, to the possibility of paranormal and extraterrestrial life, Einsteinian physics, the research of Freud and Kinsey, and the possibility of nuclear self-vaporization. In this way, Purdy connects James with Vonnegut, Barth, Grass, and a host of contemporary writers with whom James is not normally associated. James, you see, "is one of those writers who got there ahead of us." What's more, Purdy makes us believe it.—David Kirby, Dept. of English, Florida State Univ., Tallahassee

Quarterly Review of Literature: special issues retrospective.

Quarterly Review of Literature. 1976. 602p. ed. by T. & Renee Weiss. $13; pap. $6.50. LIT

Following two substantial anthologies—a poetry retrospective issue (LJ 9/15/74) and a prose retrospective (LJ 9/1/75)—this volume continues QRL's celebration of its 30th anniversary. It presents selections from seven special issues, each devoted to work by and about a major author—Kafka, Pound, Marianne Moore, Montale, Leopardi, Valéry, and Hölderlin. The list, especially when the dates of the original issues are considered, shows the editors' concern, independent of fashions, to increase our awareness. If Kafka is now felt as central to our modernity or if Montale's right to his Nobel Prize is readily granted, it is in part thanks to the pioneering work of these issues. No reader will fail to find enlightenment and pleasure here.—Seamus Cooney, Dept. of English, Western Michigan Univ., Kalamazoo

Scharine, Richard. The Plays of Edward Bond.

Bucknell Univ. Pr. 1976. 302p. photogs. bibliog. index. LC 74-195. ISBN 0-8387-1538-9. $12. LIT

Ever since John Osborne first looked back in anger two decades ago, a New Wave of British drama has washed away many of the theater's stale conventions. For all its importance, however, this area of literature has received little documentation and only spotty analysis. Bond, perhaps one of the most socio-political of the breed, has been censored and misunderstood in his native England; in America, save for productions by sympathetic companies such as the Yale Theatre Group, he has been largely ignored. As one of the few books to examine any one of these trailblazing playwrights in detail, this one is even more than welcome for its thoroughness, insight, and exhaustive history and analysis of all of Bond's drama up to The Sea. For students of literature and the theatre, it is invaluable—especially for its extensive bibliography.—Deborah Elliott, "Thousand Eyes Magazine"

Sheeran, Patrick F. The Novels of Liam O'Flaherty: a study in romantic realism.

Humanities. 1976. 319p. maps. bibliog. index. LC 76-18811. ISBN 0-391-00643-6. $17.50. LIT

The author studies O'Flaherty's novels "within the context of Anglo-Irish literature and life." In part 1 he examines O'Flaherty's early life on the Aran Islands, offering a vivid picture of the society and rural life that forms the backdrop of O'Flaherty's regional novels and that is a constant force in much of his imagery. Sheeran follows O'Flaherty from country to country in an effort to elucidate his political, philosophical, and literary development. By grouping O'Flaherty's novels under the collective titles of "Regional Romances," "Historical Romances," and "Dublin Trillers," in Part 2, Sheeran is able to give an introductory review of each genre before proceeding to critically examine each novel. Sheeran's criticisms are poignant, and he makes extremely good use of other works in his effort to define his viewpoint. A good companion to John Zneimer's The Literary Vision of Liam O'Flaherty (LJ 12/15/70) and highly recommended for academic and public libraries.—Anthony J. Kelly, Protestant Sch. Board of Greater Montreal Lib., Canada

Smith, Anne, ed. The Art of Emily Brontë.

Barnes & Noble: Harper. (Critical Studies). Dec. 1976. 246p. index. LC 76-19859. $17.50. LIT

All eight of these essays were written especially for this work. They are all interesting, but two are especially noteworthy. Robin Grove makes a good case for the view that Gondal does not lead to Wuthering Heights. He also tantalizes the reader with hints that Emily may not have been the recluse her sister Charlotte made of her. Colin Wilson teases the reader by making the unlikely claim that Emily's novel is but a "a sketch for the masterpiece that should have followed." All the essays reward study, and the book should make profitable reading for all students of the Brontës.—Gilbert B. Cross, Dept. of English, Eastern Michigan Univ., Ypsilanti

Wallach, Mark I. & Jon Bracker. Christopher Morley.
Twayne. (U.S. Authors). Dec. 1976. 180p. bibliog. index. LC 76-17922. ISBN 0-8057-7178-6. $6.95. LIT

Some of the most successful books in this series are those which deal with minor authors who have not attracted the full panoply of academic criticism. This is one of the very good ones. The only other book devoted wholly to Morley is Helen McK. Oakley's Three Hours for Lunch (LJ 7/76); and, on most counts, readers should prefer the present study. It supplies an intelligent and enjoyably readable interpretation of the life and literary career of one of America's most engaging men of letters. Recommended for public and academic libraries.—Arthur E. Jones Jr., Drew Univ. Lib., Madison, N.J.

Woolf, Virginia. The Waves: the two holograph drafts.
Univ. of Toronto Pr. 1976. 780p. drafts ed. & transcribed by J. W. Graham. LC 71-185714. ISBN 0-8020-1628-6. $29.50. LIT

This edition of the two handwritten drafts of The Waves will allow extremely serious students of Woolf to explore the difficult question of how the novel got to be the way it is. The editorial apparatus, cross-references and all, is relentlessly meticulous, and the manuscripts are complete—as they should be—down to the last solecism and second-thought. Woolf's experimentation was quite self-conscious; she aimed to write something "away from facts; free; yet concentrated; prose yet poetry; a novel and a play." It's rather amazing somehow that she managed to find a novel (or something like it) in the midst of the massive flow of imagination and thought reproduced here. I don't believe that these manuscripts will unlock many of the book's mysteries, but it's awfully nice to have them available anyway.—Keith Cushman, Dept. of English, Univ. of North Carolina, Greensboro

Zavarzadeh, Mas'ud. The Mythopoeic Reality: the Postwar American nonfiction novel.
Univ. of Illinois Pr. Dec. 1976. 260p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-252-00523-6. $8.95. LIT

The first part of this study is devoted to a general description of the nonfiction novel, its typology and narrative features. The second half contains critical readings of such prominent nonfiction books as Mailer's Armies of the Night and Capote's In Cold Blood, as well as works by Warhol, Hersey, Tom Wolfe, and Oscar Lewis. Since this is one of the first full-length studies of this new art form, it is unfortunate that this worthy project is almost sabotaged by Zavarzadeh's dense, plodding prose style. The first three chapters are practically unreadable, and his use of made-up words adds to the confusion. His dismissal of such novelists as Bellow and Malamud is rather cavalier, and his pessimistic view of present-day society is too bleak and unyielding. Because of these shortcomings, this book is recommended only for large university collections.—Morris A. Hounion, New York City Community Coll. Lib./Learning Resource Center, CUNY

MUSIC

Barnes, Ken. The Beach Boys.
Cohen, Mitchell S. Carole King.
Cromelin, Richard. Rod Stewart.
Nolan, Tom. The Allman Brothers Band.
Shaw, Greg. Elton John.
ea. vol: Sire Bks. & Chapell Music Co., dist. by Barnes & Noble: Harper. (Rock Superstars). 1976. 56p. photogs. discog. pap. $4.95. BIOG/MUSIC

Subtitled "A Biography in Words and Pictures," each of these 30 cm.-sized, fan-magazine format books is half photos and half text. A good share of the former are studio publicity stills, uncaptioned, of grainy quality, or unrelated to the adjoining text. The latter, excessively flawed with typos, is much less biography than partisan assessment of recordings and compositions. Appended discographies are a plus. Otherwise, overpriced and unsuitable for library purchase.—Paul G. Feehan, Univ. of Miami Lib., Coral Gables, Fla.

Hibbert, Christopher. Gilbert & Sullivan and Their Victorian World.
American Heritage, dist. by Putnam. 1976. 286p. illus., some color. bibliog. index. LC 76-21063. ISBN 0-399-11830-6. $24.95. BIOG/MUSIC

Confirmed G & S fans will read anything written on their subject—once; however, the books that are read repeatedly, referred to regularly, or just randomly opened to while away a few moments pleasantly, are rare. Hibbert's new book will quickly enter the latter category. With affection and understanding, he portrays Gilbert and Sullivan and their teamwork against the background of the Victorian period. Richard and Helen Lenoir D'Oyly Carte are clearly revealed as individuals and in the important roles they played in producing the Gilbert and Sullivan operas. The illustrations, ranging from black-and-white sketches through colored trade cards and splendid reproductions of contemporary scenes and memorabilia from several countries are alone worth the price of the book. The reader will find just enough of the old chestnuts to keep him or her happy, but he will also discover a surprising amount of new material and insights.—William K. Beatty, Northwestern Univ. Med. Sch., Chicago

Philosophy

Anderson, Perry. Considerations on Western Marxism.
Humanities. 1976. 125p. index. $9. POL SCI/PHIL

This essay explores some salient features of the nature and evolution of Marxism in Western Europe since 1920. In discussing the works of Lukács, Korsch, Gramsci, Adorno, Marcuse, Sartre, and Althusser, Anderson takes pains to show how their theoretical work related or failed to relate to the political struggles of the working class. Features of Western Marxism discussed include the latent pessimism of these men and the contraction of theory from economics and politics into philosophy—a direct reversal of Marx's own development. This volume is brief but nevertheless suggestive.—Wesley Teo, Dept. of Philosophy, Chicago State Univ.

Stendahl, Brita K. Søren Kierkegaard.
Twayne. (World Authors: Denmark). 1976. 235p. bibliog. index. LC 76-6860. ISBN 0-8057-6234-5. $7.50. PHIL

Although books catering to the widespread interest in existentialism are plentiful, readable commentaries which offer elucidation of its obscurities are not. Stendahl offers just that; an interesting and authoritative account of Kierkegaard as "poet," as critic in hiding, and, finally, as the "individual" who witnessed openly to his religious purpose. The book is intended to lead the student (and general reader) through Kierkegaard's mystifications, with appropriate reference to the influences of his milieu. To this end, extensive and successful use is made of direct quotations. What the book lacks is a clear critical point of view in regard to the value of Kierkegaard's "phenomenal balancing act."—Carla R. Thomas, Dept. of Philosophy, Goddard Coll., Plainfield, Vt.

POETRY

Appleton, Sarah. Ladder of the World's Joy.
Doubleday. Dec. 1976. illus. LC 76-7693. ISBN 0-385-12361-2. $4.95. POETRY

Appleton will put off "plain-talk" people. Verbal paradox, Christian allusion, calculated ambiguity, and rich, metaphysical language may add up to frustration for the casual reader. Her poems evolve like spider webs, strong lines spinning from a central metaphor retelling the creation and fall, linking and mutating the natural images and symbols into ever-larger significance. This is sweeping, ecstatic poetry, romantic toward nature and reverent in the poet-as-bard tradition: "Out of the mouth the sound, blown between the mind and the thick cords/ of skin/ rising with words . . ." and re-creating the essential Adam: "the syllable cell," a "five-sided form" with the geometry of a star, the "dark stem of his thought/ . . . script into his spine." Once more heroic mankind is lifted from the city park into a fecund garden universe to enact sublime themes of conflict, creation, and death. For Appleton, poems are thought-songs; beauty is a possibility; and Eve, too, is a singer.—Val Morehouse, Sandwich P.L., Mass.

WHY DO LIBRARIES LIKE US?
BECAUSE LIBRARY JOURNAL LIKES US!
"Heartily recommended for general collections . . ."
LJ 6/15/76, p. 1428
MUSICA
THE FIRST GUIDE TO CLASSICAL MUSIC ON AMERICAN RADIO STATIONS
$3.25 postpaid MUSICA POB 1266a Edison NJ 08817

Eberhart, Richard. Collected Poems, 1930-1976.

Oxford Univ. Pr. 1976. 364p. LC 76-7288. ISBN 0-19-519849-2. $13.95. POETRY

Essentially, this new volume consists of the Collected Poems 1930-1960 to which have been added the poems contained in Eberhart's three subsequent volumes and 43 poems previously unpublished in book form. These new poems have been occasioned by reflections on time, nature, friends, and public and private events; they vary in range from conversational and anecdotal ironies reminiscent of Auden to more forceful meditations like "The Way Out" in which one finds flashes of the anger of the late Yeats. This last poem is typical of Eberhart at his best, and it and several others are valuable additions to his work. There is, however, a problem with the format of the book. The editors have not seen fit to date the poems in any way, which scarcely does justice to the poet or to the student who would want to trace the evolution of a poetic career now spanning more than half a century.—James Venit, New York

Edson, Russell. The Intuitive Journey and Other Works.

Harper. 1976. 208p. ISBN 0-06-011118-6. $8.95; pap. ISBN 0-06-011121-6. $3.95. POETRY

This is Edson's sixth book, half of it a reprint of his third collection of prose poems, The Childhood of an Equestrian. The book gathers 155 pieces usually less than a page in length, when the first half (that is, those making up The Intuitive Journey), would have been enough. After reading so many, even at various sittings, one grows weary of ideas which at first seem clever but turn out silly; ideas that suggest the genuinely grotesque but end up being juvenilely ghoulish; and too many pieces that never reach any aesthetic resolution but go dot dot dot. . . . Edson can be effective, and poetically evocative ("Counting Sheep" and "The Traveler"), but this intuitive journey seems over-conscious. What should be rich variation becomes repetitive manner.—Robert Bonazzi, Austin, Texas

Gilpin, Laura. The Hocus-Pocus of the Universe.

Doubleday. Dec. 1976. LC 76-2746. ISBN 0-385-11600-4. $7.95; pap. ISBN 0-385-12215-2. $4.95. POETRY

Simplicity doesn't automatically equal profundity. Everything did depend upon Williams' red wheelbarrow, because that poem (as example to 20th-Century poetry) depicted particular objects arranged in an environment with such precision of phrasing, vocabulary, tone, and rhythm that the scene had infinite resonance. Gilpin tries for that precision, but usually her poems indicate an unawareness of the complexity involved in such a gesture. What is the point of writing "I've heard that / when a person dies / he sees his whole life / pass before him," divided into four lines of print? Adding imagery, seemingly for the sake of an unusual analogy ("rocking chair thumping like a dog's tail") doesn't really help. It's not that Gilpin lacks talent, for several poems, like "The Field Where You Lost Your Mother" and "The Dying Tree," reveal sharp and pungent insight. Most of this book, however, catches her stretching towards significance with insufficient means.—Suzanne Juhasz, Dept. of English, Univ. of Colorado, Boulder

Heyen, William. The Swastika Poems.

Vanguard. Feb. 1977. 96p. ISBN 0-8149-0780-6. $6.95. POETRY

Heyen's previous concern with European relatives who perished in the holocaust and with the murder of six million Jews is now the theme of an entire collection. Heyen was born in 1940. He recalls what he learned from his German father, he envisions his murdered uncles, cousins, who "are never dead," he tries to define pages of history which he "feels in his marrow": "From Belsen a crate of gold teeth,/ from Dachau a mountain of shoes,/ from Auschwitz a skin lampshade./ Who killed the Jews?" Soberly arranged lines, stanzas filled with urgent word and phrase repetitions, eloquent prose passages make us aware of the "horizon of barbed wires", "Buchenwald . . . A name, a place of terror. Ravensbrück: bridge of the ravens, a word out of the medieval gloom. Dachau, Auschwitz . . . ." Belsen "very beautiful and very terrible . . . when each fall the Erika blossoms." "The film shakes and holds." We see it, we feel it in our marrow, we lose sleep over it. Heyen has become an important poet.—Inge Judd, Queens Borough P.L., New York

The Kabir Book: forty-four of the ecstatic poems of Kabir.

Beacon, dist. by Harper. Jan. 1977. tr. by Robert Bly. LC 76-7737. ISBN 0-8070-6378-9. $7.95; pap. ISBN 0-8070-6379-7. $3.95. POETRY

Bly's renderings attempt to make the 15th-Century Sufi poet Kabir accessible to a 20th-Century audience and to preserve his directness and irreverent wit: "Ah friend I love you, think this over/ carefully! If you are in love,/ then why are you asleep?" Occasionally, the reader has to put up with the banal for the sake of 20th-Century sensibility as in lines like "You don't grasp the fact that . . ." and "Kabir says: Fantastic! Don't let a chance like this go by." Kabir often evokes a guest-or-other presence in these short poems; he never makes a cliché of the constant unfolding of the God within, that same God also lying in wait for us, "because the Holy One is the ear, and the one listening too." Questions become answers—unpretentiously: "when deep inside you there is a loaded gun, how can you have God?" His credo is always clear, "just throw away all thoughts of imaginary things, and stand firm in that which you are."—Rosaly DeMaios Roffman, Dept. of English, Indiana Univ. of Pennsylvania

Laing, R. D. Do You Love Me?: an entertainment in conversation and verse.

Pantheon. 1976. 43p. LC 76-9983. ISBN 0-394-40017-8. $4.95. PSYCH/POETRY

Laing's volume of "conversation and verse" is not silly, but it is slight. His "conversations" show an ear for the banal way in which we do, in fact, talk about and around important things; his "verses" play with trite rhythms with which we are overly familiar. The problem with attempting to reproduce banality, and redundancy, and repetition, however, is that it is often difficult for the writer to keep from being banal, redundant, repetitious. Do You Love Me? is at times all three. It is also observant, clever, and insightful about the Modern Condition as it concerns sex and sex roles. The book is, as Laing himself has dubbed it, entertaining. Not less, not more.—Suzanne Juhasz, Dept. of English, Univ. of Colorado, Boulder

Metcalf, Paul. Apalache.

Turtle Island Fdn., 2845 Buena Vista Way, Berkeley, Calif. 94708. 1976. 178p. bibliog. LC 76-3352. ISBN 0-913666-10-6. $12. HIST/POETRY

This, a documentary poem, drawn solely from native sources, gives us a visionary account of American beginnings. One hears the dialogue and voice of Indian, settler, and explorer in a skillful pastiche that gives, first-hand, a glance at what new world exploration was like. Metcalf records both the wonder and terror of discovery, hardship and disease as well as glory, and although he doesn't speak in his own voice, selection and shaping of the material result in a work that bears his stamp. There is an impressive bibliography of over 200 sources. Excerpts have appeared in small press publications and one commends the publisher who gives us this elegant complete edition. Metcalf is the great-great grandson of Herman Melville; he lives up to his literary heritage.—Roberta Metz, Hempstead, N.Y.

Moss, Howard. A Swim Off the Rocks.

Atheneum. 1976. 74p. LC 76-15055. ISBN 0-689-10763-3. pap. $4.95. POETRY

Moss says in "Hansel and Gretel" that "What starts out as kitsch/ All too soon becomes a form of evil." As though in reversal of this formulation, the rest of this volume goes after types of social evil—such as the inebriate, the martyr, the bore—in jolly terms that gracefully balance between emotional and aesthetic extremes. Moss plays it in turns satiric ("Cats and Dogs"), surreal ("The Private Elevator"), and sentimental ("Charm"). To use a dangerous word, one of the poems ("The Refrigerator," a piece of malign hilarity) is flawless.—Rowe Portis, New York

Stryk, Lucien. Selected Poems.

Sage: Swallow. 1976. 150p. LC 76-18007. ISBN 0-8040-0740-3. $8.95. POETRY

This selection includes all the poems from Stryk's last three volumes together with a few earlier and more recent poems. Many of Stryk's poems grow out of everyday urban or small-town midwestern experience; many deal with his extensive travels in Europe and the Orient during and since World War II; and others, fine poems in their own right, are translations of the Japanese Zen poet Takahashi. Stryk can be quiet but intense, as in poems about family or Zen subjects, or powerful and disturbing, as in such war poems as "The Pit" or the unforgettable "Letter to Jean-Paul Baudot, at Christmas." He handles the poem sequence ("A Sheaf for Chicago," "Zen: the Rocks of Sesshu," "Awakening," and "The Duckpond") quite well. There are memorable portraits of Chekhov and Weldon Kees and other less famous people. Stryk does not sacrifice range or depth to achieve his purity of vision.—Norbert Krapf, Dept. of English, C. W. Post Coll., Greenvale, N.Y.

Terris, Virginia R. Tracking.

Univ. of Illinois Pr. 1976. 80p. LC 76-13194. ISBN 0-252-00602-X. $7.95; pap. ISBN 0-252-00603-8. $3.45. POETRY

Terris' first collection traces the path of a cautious life—frustrations, isolation, reluctant passage from girl to woman to mother—a geography of both cruelty and tenderness. Her tool is denial. She prefers to cover her eyes rather than engage destiny; thus, some poems vacillate between reality and recall: "I who have seen you perched/ in the most ignoble of all man's/ postures, who have watched/ you throw up, urinate/ . . . burping not always discreetly,/ . . . victimized by disgusting viruses,/ . . . love you." Though several of these poems were previously published in little magazines, Tracking still exhibits the preoccupations and uncertainties of a first book—some occasional verse, wastepaper last lines, and some well-crafted poems such as "The Closed Door", "The Shape of Life," and "The Compartment." But except for the last title, there are no real surprises.—Val Morehouse, Sandwich P.L., Mass.

Yevtushenko, Yevgeny. From Desire to Desire.

Doubleday. 1976. LC 74-3700. ISBN 0-385-08866-3. $6.95. POETRY

A pretentious, aggressively charming introduction by Yevtushenko opens this motley collection of the famous Soviet poet's love poetry. The poems have been turned into English versions by at least a dozen translators, some working directly from the Russian and others with the help of Russian readers. The quality of the translations is therefore extremely uneven and the diversity of styles (from staid stanzas in which English rhyme and metrical patterns are carefully adhered to to the most casually rendered free verse) makes it difficult to get a sense of what, aside from his ego and his interest in lyric poetry's most popular theme, characterizes Yevtushenko as a poet. The poems are arranged in no discernible order, and one work even appears twice (as "Colors," and "When Your Face Came Rising,") in renderings by two different translators. Actually, the chance to compare their versions, which seems to have arisen quite by accident, is one of the more interesting points of this volume.—Madeline G. Levine, Dept. of Slavic Languages, Univ. of North Carolina, Chapel Hill

Political Science & International Affairs

Cline, Ray S. Secrets, Spies and Scholars: blueprint of the essential CIA.

Acropolis. 1976. ISBN 0-87491-046-3. $10. PER NAR/GOVT

Personal accounts by ex-CIA bigwigs are usually either exposés of agency misdeeds or apologias. Cline's falls into the latter category. He offers a defensive history of American intelligence from 1939 to the current efforts to make the spy establishment accountable to Congress. Cline, who left CIA in 1969, emphasizes his own experiences while retelling the standard tales of CIA glory, such as the acquisition of Khrushchev's "secret" speech. There are no noteworthy revelations, although we do learn that the "CIA has never come close to being an American Gestapo." This sort of commentary adds nothing significant to the intelligence literature.—Kenneth F. Kister, Tampa, Fla.

Edmonds, I. G. Allah's Oil: Mideast petroleum.

Thomas Nelson. 1976. 192p. photogs. maps. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-8407-6504-5. $6.95. ECON/INT AFFAIRS

The U.S. oil crisis of 1973 and subsequent awareness of the economic and political power of Mideast petroleum suppliers form the background of this popular history of Mideast oil, written by a journalist. In sketchy, readable style, Edmonds touches all parts of the picture—Rockefeller and the Standard Oil monopoly; the eccentric European concessionaires; exploration in the deserts of Saudi Arabia; the OPEC; and Kissinger and U.S. foreign policy. His approach is descriptive rather than analytical, intended to provide basic information for the general reader. Suitable for public libraries.—Dunning S. Wilson, UCLA Lib.

FitzGibbon, Constantine. Secret Intelligence in the Twentieth Century.

Stein & Day. Feb. 1977. 340p. LC 76-9110. ISBN 0-8128-1937-3. $10. HIST/INT AFFAIRS

FitzGibbon offers a survey of secret intelligence that is not definitive, since he rightly suggests that this would be an impossibility, given the nature of the subject. Although Ladislas Farago's War of Wits (1962) might better serve as an introduction to intelligence terminology, FitzGibbon incorporates recent and important revelations like those contained in F. W. Winterbotham's The Ultra Secret (LJ 2/1/75). FitzGibbon examines the triumphs and failures of secret intelligence services of the "great powers", and he convincingly documents the contributions of British intelligence officers to the Allied victory in both world wars. Although he weakens the work with an excessively demonic interpretation of Soviet foreign policy and some simplistic judgments on American diplomacy, his book is recommended because it is one of the few recent historical syntheses of the subject.—Donald J. Murphy, Dept. of History, Chabot Coll., Livermore, Calif.

Griffith, Ernest S. The American Presidency: the dilemmas of shared power and divided government.

New York Univ. Pr. 1976. 241p. index. LC 76-4599. ISBN 0-8147-2961-4. $13.50; pap. ISBN 0-8147-2962-2. $4.95. POL SCI

Based extensively on the 1974 Conference on the Institutional Presidency, this book identifies the problems besetting the "operating center" of our government and suggests reforms. It is not so much a text on the presidency as a survey of the role of the media, political parties, the White House staff, and so forth, with each topic examined in individual chapters. They are not without interest, but are often too short for the broad topics they treat (the section on the President and the media, for example, is a scant eight pages). One wishes for either more development or simply a summary of the conference's recommendations. Primarily for graduate and extensive undergraduate holdings.—Joseph R. Rudolph, Jr., Dept. of Political Science, Univ. of Tulsa, Okla.

Honderich, Ted, ed. Social Ends and Political Means.

Routledge & Kegan Paul. 1976. 177p. ISBN 0-7100-8370-X. $15.95. PHIL/POL SCI

These essays "all have to do with better societies than we have and the means of getting them." The first four authors raise questions from the liberal point of view concerning understanding, participating in, and changing liberal democratic societies. Of these, R. M.

"Recommended"
LIBRARY JOURNAL

HOW DID I GET TO BE 40 AND OTHER ATROCITIES

by JUDITH VIORST

"You don't have to be 40-ish, married, and/or overweight to appreciate the warmth and wit that go into this collection of 24 brief poems. No one does it quite like Viorst; no one better expresses our daily discontents and unfulfilled fantasies."
—Library Journal

$4.95 ISBN: 0-671-11266-6
LC: 76-20546

SIMON AND SCHUSTER
630 Fifth Ave.
New York 10020

Hare's concise defense of political obligation and S. E. Norris's criticism of J. S. Mill's arguments concerning freedom of speech are the best. A model of scientific development given by R. A. Putnam and her use of C. B. Macpherson's theory of possessive individualism provide a bridge to the four Marxist essays. Of these, L. Colletti's analysis of the collapse of capitalism and M. Marković's piece on the presuppositions of economic and political self-management are outstanding. This volume would provide a stimulating set of readings for an advanced political theory course.—R. A. Fenn, Dept. of Political Economy, Univ. of Toronto, Canada

Hope, John, II. Minority Access to Federal Grants-in-Aid: the gap between policy and performance.

Praeger. (Special Studies in U.S. Economic, Social, & Political Issues). 1976. 267p. bibliog. index. LC 75-19794. ISBN 0-275-55920-3. $20. LAW/PUBLIC ADMIN

Himself a senior civil servant, Hope thoroughly explores the ways and means by which the federal bureaucracy has failed to ensure an equitable and impartial flow of funds toward the minority sector. His mixture of statistical data and personal observation seems to suggest that such factors as lack of sufficient executive commitment, interagency coordination, or appropriate levels of staffing are predominantly responsible for this demonstrable phenomenon. The machinery for enforcement does exist (Title VI of Civil Rights Act of 1964); the compulsion to engage it does not. Quietly, though effectively, the author addresses a problem the implications of which are incalculable. For all comprehensive academic collections.—Mark R. Yerburgh, SUNY at Albany Lib.

Kasfir, Nelson. The Shrinking Political Arena: participation and ethnicity in African politics, with a case study of Uganda.

Univ. of California Pr. 1976. 323p. bibliog. index. LC 73-85790. ISBN 0-520-02576-8. $23.50.

Mamdani, Mahmood. Politics and Class Formation in Uganda.

Monthly Review. 1976. 352p. bibliog. index. LC 75-15348. ISBN 0-85345-378-0. $16.50. POL SCI

The primary value of these two studies of Uganda is that they will tend to shift attention from the sensationalistic aspects of General Amin's personality to the more significant historical analysis of Uganda's development as a political and economic entity. Kasfir's monograph is a study of the way in which independent African governments have acted to reduce, to their advantage, participation in national and local politics and the role that ethnic perception has played in this contraction of the political arena. Kasfir uses Uganda as a case study against which his analytical framework can be applied. His work will primarily interest political scientists and professional Africanists.

Mamdani's is a provocative attempt to apply Neo-Marxist analysis to Ugandan politics between independence in 1962 and the expulsion of the Asians in 1972. Whether or not one agrees with Mamdani's analytical framework and his emphasis on class formation at the expense of the perceptions of individual Ugandans, one will be grateful for the wealth of data he has brought together to support his thesis and for the way in which he has used this material to bring a fresh perspective to one of Africa's problem situations. Most libraries, both public and academic, will wish to purchase this study.—Warren Collins, Honolulu

Luxemburg, Rosa. The National Question: selected writings.

Monthly Review. 1976. 320p. ed. by Horace B. Davis. LC 74-2148. ISBN 0-85345-355-1. $16.50. HIST/INT AFFAIRS

No person was better equipped to debate the basic issues of Marxism with Lenin than the brilliant Polish-German intellectual Rosa Luxemburg. And yet a comparison of her ideas with Lenin's has been difficult for English-speaking readers because of the lack of adequate translations. This book remedies this problem by including basic articles written by Luxemburg in 1908 and 1909, along with a selection of other writings in which one can contrast the differences between the two Marxists. The prime issue between them is self-determination. Davis is to be commended for an excellent job of editing; and the translations, compiled by a number of collaborators, are also quite satisfactory. The book deserves to be in all academic libraries.—Alvin R. Sunseri, Dept. of History, Univ. of Northern Iowa, Cedar Falls

Payne, Stanley G., ed. & intro. Politics and Society in Twentieth-Century Spain.

244p. LC 75-38923. ISBN 0-531-05382-2. pap. ISBN 0-531-05588-4.

Winkler, Henry R., ed. & intro. Twentieth-Century Britain: national power and social welfare.

272p. LC 75-40058. ISBN 0-531-05381-4. pap. ISBN 0-531-05587-6.

ea. vol: New Viewpoints: Watts. (Modern Scholarship on European History). 1976. index. $12.50. pap. $6.95. HIST/POL SCI

These volumes follow the pattern already established for books in this distinguished series: an editor's introduction which sets up the framework of the subject; a series of up-to-date scholarly articles illuminating facets of the questions raised at the outset; and a bibliographical essay and an index.

Twentieth-Century Britain has been edited with skill by Winkler, former editor of the American Historical Review. The essays cluster around three interlocking themes: the effects of two world wars; the consequent reduction of Britain's great-power status to that of a second-rank nation; and the country's own perception of and adjustment to this descent. The third theme deals with the rise of the Labour Party, the concept of the welfare state, and the changing pattern of economic and social policy.

The volume on Spain contains essays on the turn-of-the-century boss rule, the Azana regime of the early 1930's, the Popular Front elections of 1936, and the Civil War. Also included are the classic description of Juan Linz of the Franco regime and a scholarly article here published for the first time on political attitudes in Spain in 1970. The work is informatively introduced by Payne, who contributes a penetrating study of the eve of the Civil War. A nice balance is maintained between the three Spanish articles (adequately translated) and five American ones. The book presents invaluable background information necessary for the understanding of post-Franco developments. Both volumes are highly recommended for college and research collections.—Agnes F. Peterson, Hoover Institution, Stanford University

Sinai, Anne & Allen Pollack, eds. The Syrian Arab Republic: a handbook.

American Academic Assn. for Peace in the Middle East, 9 E. 40 St., N.Y.C. 10016. (Middle East Confrontation Series). 1976. 190p. maps. index. LC 76-17657. ISBN 0-917158-00-8. pap. $2.95. HIST/POL SCI

Starting with a brief historical survey, this handbook, the first in its series, summarizes many aspects of present-day Syria, particularly the political developments since independence. It contains an outline of government and ideology focusing on the Ba'th Party, and a discussion of the political roles of the country's ethnic groups. It describes Syria's external relations, first and most interestingly with other Arab states, but also with Israel, the Soviet Union, and the United States. It concludes with short quotes from government spokesmen on Syria's international role, and with appendixes containing maps and documents. The material is relatively objective, although taken as a whole it imparts a pro-Israeli perspective. There is useful information here, but the coverage is spotty rather than comprehensive, and the effect is certainly not very readable.—Elizabeth R. Hayford, Asst. Dean for International Education, Oberlin Coll., Ohio

Steinberg, Arnold. The Political Campaign Handbook: media, scheduling, and advance.

Heath Lexington: Heath. 1976. 273p. illus. index. LC 75-43130. ISBN 0-669-00481-2. $18. POL SCI

A combination of long-term factors—the decline of political parties, the role of media, new campaign financing laws, among others—have transformed the face of American politics. The party-run election campaign has been replaced by the do-it-yourself campaign, and the army of party loyalists and workers has given way to one of public relations experts and marketing strategists. The Political Campaign Handbook, despite its broad title, is basically concerned with marketing, media, scheduling, and advance work. Its approach will drive old-fashioned persons wild: the campaign is "a market organization whose product is the candidate" and the view that emerges is decidely that of a Machiavelli of Madison Avenue. The practitioner of new style politics, and especially the novice may, however, find this a most useful and practical guide.—Henry J. Steck, Dept. of Political Science, SUNY at Cortland

Psychology&Psychiatry

Baddeley, Alan D. The Psychology of Memory.

Basic Bks. 1976. 415p. ISBN 0-465-06736-0. $13.95. PSYCH

Research and theoretical formulations in human memory have increased and changed dramatically during the past 15 years and Baddeley highlights some of this exciting work. After summaries of traditional approaches, separate chapters deal with input limitations of the memory system, storage and consolidation of the memory trace, forgetting, and associative interference theory. In an information-processing framework, additional chapters prevent the arguments for and against a distinction between long- and short-term memory, the major phenomena and theories of short-term memory, and recent work on visual, auditory, kinesthetic, tactile, and olfactory memory. Retention of unrelated words and prose, semantic memory, mnemonists, and mnemonic systems are also considered. A brief overview and some speculations about future trends conclude the volume. Baddeley's coverage and interpretations are impressive; the writing is clear, concise—and sometimes witty.—Charles L. Brewer, Dept. of Psychology, Furman Univ., Greenville, S.C.

Binder, Virginia & others, eds. Modern Therapies.

Prentice-Hall. 1976. 230p. illus. index. LC 76-20652. ISBN 0-13-599001-7. $8.95; pap. Spectrum. ISBN 0-13-598995-7. $3.95. PSYCH

Twelve modern-day, short-term therapies, selected on the basis of popularity among clients and therapists, are explained by a founder or noted practitioner of each particular therapy. Each chapter, written especially for this book, is essentially a digest of one therapeutic system, and each ends with an average of ten bibliographic references. Therapies emphasizing biological processes and behavioral conditioning are well represented—ranging from TM to sex therapy, from behavior modification to megavitamin therapy. This survey will be of sufficient interest only to those libraries dealing with a significant volume and variety of requests for quick summaries of contemporary therapies. Disclaimers are in order due to the uncritical nature of each proponent's highly condensed synopsis of his or her particular approach.—William Abrams, Portland State Univ. Lib., Ore.

Bird, Joseph & Lois Bird. Sexual Loving: the experience of love.

Doubleday. 1976. 264p. bibliog. LC 74-1509. ISBN 0-385-07618-5. $7.95. PSYCH

Written by a marriage counselor and his wife and based on the marriages of almost 650 couples, Sexual Loving is directed at heterosexual, monogamous, married partners. The book opens with a discussion of the virtues of marriage, the necessity for commitment within marriage, and the value of love. The majority of the book, however, becomes just another marriage manual which explains the how-tos and whys of anatomy, foreplay, coitus, contraception, etc. As in most recent books of this type, there are chapters on sex and aging, fantasies, and sexual problems. The book is well-written and mostly factual, but with the exception of a three-page appendix on "seeking professional counseling," most libraries probably already have several titles with similar content. The appendix stresses the importance of consulting legitimate counselors and briefly explains the differences between psychiatrists, psychologists, psychiatric social workers, and counselors. Although useful information in this era of "quack" sex counselors, its brevity does not make it worth the purchase price.—JoAnn Brooks, Education Reading Room, Indiana Univ., Bloomington

Borneman, Ernest, ed. The Psychoanalysis of Money.

Urizen Bks., dist. by Dutton. 1976. ISBN 0-916354-02-4. $15; pap. ISBN 0-916354-03-2. $5.95. SOC SCI/PSYCH

This is a wide-ranging and interesting collection of psychoanalytical articles on human attitudes toward money, and on the nature and origin of money. The first part contains articles by Freud, Abraham, and Ferenczi on the anal theory of human interest in money. Part 2 consists of psychoanalytically based archaeological, ethnological, and cultural-historical studies. Part 3 looks at non-anal psychoanalytic studies of money. Borneman, a Marxist psychoanalyst, provides an excellent introduction and afterword. His critique of Norman O. Brown's Life and Death in Psychoanalysis is particularly fine. The selected articles cover the spectrum of psychological and political thought. They are, as is usual in a collection of this kind, of uneven quality—some brilliant, others embarrassingly simplistic.—Dianne Kraft Kadish, Training Inst., National Psychological Assn. for Psychoanalysis, New York

Leach, Penelope. Babyhood: infant development from birth to two years.

Knopf. 1976. bibliog. index. $10. PSYCH

In this child care book intended for both parents and professionals, Leach uses research studies as a framework for explaining child development and child behavior, and she avoids the anecdotal approach so common in other books on this topic. This approach will be welcomed by the more educated parent who truly wishes to know the rationale behind childrearing suggestions. Suggested readings are included.—Phyllis S. Mirsky, UCLA Biomedical Lib., Calif.

Redd, William H. & William Sleator. Take Charge: a personal guide to behavior modification.

Random. Feb. 1977. 184p. index. $8.95. PSYCH

This work explains the practical applications of behavior modification and is meant as a popular introduction to what the authors refer to as a significant social movement. While behavior mod serves here as a convenient label for rather disparate goals and methods, the book does show how effective it can be in training retardates and the chronically institutionalized, and for treating some forms of anxiety and interpersonal conflict. It often is the treatment of choice for common phobias, migraine headache, obesity, and the behavioral problems of severely disturbed children. It is an approach that produces observable effects without dwelling on causes; that modifies, not necessarily cures, inappropriate behavior. Merely negative or covert techniques such as aversive conditioning and manipulated "self-persuasion" in prison and school settings are seen here as alarming mis-applications of the potentials of behavior control. The book discusses only briefly how step-by-step skill training and contingency contracts can reinforce adaptive behavior in the neurotic. A limited but still useful popular summary of an effective but often misunderstood technique.—William Abrams, Portland State Univ. Lib., Ore.

Psychodynamics of the mother

Dinnerstein, Dorothy. The Mermaid and the Minotaur: sexual arrangements and human malaise.

Harper. 1976. 288p. illus. bibliog. LC 72-23879. ISBN 0-06-011047-3. $10.95. SOC SCI/PSYCH

Dinnerstein posits exclusively female early child care as the central source of human disarray and suffering for both sexes. A Rutgers University psychologist with admitted white-middle-class bias, she draws heavily upon both recognized feminist sources, notably de Beauvoir, and psychoanalysis (Freud, Norman O. Brown). Her uniqueness lies in a fresh fusion of these two approaches, relating female lack of joy, male possessiveness, the double standard, and masculine monopoly of creativity, competence, and ultimately, power to the psychodynamics of the mother as first sole caring figure. If sometimes verbose, repetitive, and marred by a complex system of notes, asterisks, and key statements in separate "boxes," this is a relentlessly perceptive analysis. Dinnerstein makes a powerful case for attributing gender symbiosis to an obsolete arrangement from which, except for parturition and lactation, we are now bio-technologically free. Acting upon this freedom—as she admits some have begun to do—we can have psychological freedom. Too complex and wordy for mass consumption, but important for academic and large public libraries. Unfortunately, there is no index and only a minimal, eclectic, and highly personal bibliography.—Phyllis R. Poses, Queens Borough P.L., New York

Williams, Adele. Gracious Living: how to enjoy being a woman.

Arbor House, dist. by Dutton. 1976. LC 76-029227. ISBN 0-87795-149-7. $8.50. PSYCH

This is a stern lecture on how to be a lady: simply by virtue of your charm, good taste, elegant manner, enthusiasm, and true kindness you can rise to the top like bubbles in a glass of champagne. This is women's lib from another point of view: don't compete with men, says this author, that's vulgar. Compete with women and become the best of all possible women. The book tells in detail how to accomplish this. Advice ranges from clothes to parties, from how to save money and what to spend the saving on; how to get ahead in your job or how to start a business; and best, of all, how to get along without a car and without all the stuff advertised on TV. The first part of the book is addressed to young women, while the last part speaks to the author's own age group, the women over 50. There is a lot of good sense in the book, but along with it, a lot of soapbox oratory.—Gerda Haas, Bates Coll. Lib., Lewiston, Me.

Williams, John E. & J. Kenneth Morland. Race, Color, and the Young Child.

Univ. of North Carolina Pr. 1976. 350p. index. LC 76-812. ISBN 0-8078-1261-7. $12.95. PSYCH

A social-developmental psychologist and a cultural anthropologist have collaborated to produce an informative book dealing with what we know and still need to find out about attitudes of young children concerning color and race. Their own programmatic and well-designed research over the past 15 years has been substantial, and they have integrated their findings with those of others. Major sections deal with the general cultural milieu in which American children's attitudes about color and race develop, a review and synthesis of the research literature, and the authors' own theoretical interpretations. Two valuable appendixes summarize some methodological issues and substantive questions for future research, and present a discussion of the measuring instruments devised for use in the authors' work. The book is logically organized; the writing is refreshingly clear and crisp. The authors are dedicated and enthusiastic behavioral scientists committed to an empirical approach, but are also commendably cautious about their data and interpretations—a rather unusual combination these days.—Charles L. Brewer, Dept. of Psychology, Furman Univ., Greenville, S.C.

Parapsychology & Occultism

Smith, Fran. How To Pick a Lover.

Regnery. Dec. 1976. 372p. ISBN 0-8092-8088-4. $10.95; pap. ISBN 0-8092-7918-5. $4.95. ASTROLOGY

This is a rather silly book for those addicted to astrology columns. The arrangement is by zodiacal sign, relating men and women in each of the possible permutations, as Aries man/Leo woman. It also has a listing from the woman's point of view, as Aries woman/Leo man. Only for libraries with a large pop astrology-following.—Jeanne S. Bagby, Tucson P.L., Ariz.

Religion

Gardiner, Anne Marie, ed. Women and Catholic Priesthood: an expanded vision; proceedings of the Detroit Ordination Conference.

Paulist/Newman. 1976. 259p. bibliog. LC 76-12653. ISBN 0-8091-1955-2. pap. $5.95. REL

In November 1975, over 1200 persons met in Detroit to join in discussion and prayer and to listen to addresses on the subject of ordination of women. This book of proceedings includes papers that were presented by a number of scholars (including Rosemary Ruether and Richard McBrien), a section on liturgical prayer, information on the background of the conference, and an analysis of questionnaires returned by participants. There is also a useful bibliography of pertinent books, articles, and reports published between 1965 and 1975. In calling for women's ordination to the Roman Catholic priesthood, the women and men at this conference discussed the various arguments that are advanced against women's ordination in the light of Scripture, theology, tradition, and sociology and considered a broad range of issues and insights, such as models for priesthood in the future. Emily Clark Hewitt, Episcopal priest, joined with Sr. Margaret Farley in recognizing the "moral imperative" for ordaining women. This book is an important statement, filled with faith and fervor; it appears at a time when many of its hopes have been given support by the passage of ordination of women in the Episcopal church.—Joan W. Gartland, Univ. of Detroit Lib.

Küng, Hans. On Being a Christian.

Doubleday. 1976. 720p. tr. from German by Edward Quinn. index. bibliog. LC 75-36597. ISBN 0-385-02712-5. $12.95. REL

The objectives of this latest volume by a controversial contemporary theologian are broader and bolder than any other of Küng's works: to demonstrate the relevance of being a Christian in today's world. In doing this he presents a panoramic review, popular yet scholarly, of contemporary theology: the God-question, Christology, ecclesiology, ecumenism, the new morality, liberation theology. He locates Christianity's distinctiveness in its adherence to the historical Jesus, especially the crucified, as the final revelation of God and of what it means to be human. In order to establish Christianity's relevance, Küng maintains, rather unconvincingly, its definite superiority over other world religions. Yet his endorsement of Christianity's uniqueness is as firm as his criticism of its institutional forms. In spite of a skillful English rendering the style remains frequently verbose; yet the book is extremely topical and merits a place in appropriate collections.—Paul Knitter, Dept. of Theology, Xavier Univ., Cincinnati

L'Engle, Madeleine & William B. Green, eds. Spirit and Light: essays in historical theology.

Crossroad: Seabury. Dec. 1976. 160p. ISBN 0-8164-0310-4. $8.95. REL

Seven essays comprise this festschrift for Canon Edward N. West, Sub-dean of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York, which celebrates West's 35th year at the Cathedral. Written chiefly by Episcopal theologians and authors, the essays range from the technical ("Christmas, Epiphany, and the Johannine Prologue" by R. M. Fuller) to the familiar ("The Mysterious Appearance of Canon Tallis" by L'Engle). The best one, by Allan W. Jones, discusses John Donne's quintessential Anglican theology as set forth in his sermons. The abundant quotations from the sermons remind us that Donne was a great preacher and prose stylist as well as a magnificent poet. An essay on Maximus Confessor, "the real father of Byzantine theology," is particularly fitting because of Canon West's long ecumenical association with Eastern Orthodox Christianity. As a whole, the book is unfortunately somewhat stiff; one regrets not finding here the fluidity and sparkle of Canon West's own sermons.—Sammy Staggs, Columbia Univ. Libs.

Marty, Martin E. A Nation of Behavers.

Univ. of Chicago Pr. 1976. 239p. index. LC 76-7997. ISBN 0-226-50891-9. $8.95. SOC SCI/REL

This intriguing "essay in contemporary history" provides us with a "map of religious America based on the visible loyalties of people as evidenced in their beliefs and social behavior." Through extensive research in church history and a careful reading of sociological literature the author demonstrates that behavioral patterns distinguish religious groups from each other as much or more than conflicting dogmas. The focus of his book is on six religious clusters or zones: mainline religion (Protestant/Catholic/Jewish), evangelical fundamentalism, pentecostal charismatic, new religions (Asian, African, occult), ethnic religion, and civil religion. Contemporary Americans, Marty concludes, are preoccupied with their individual identity and use religious affiliation as a method of establishing it. His work presents an admirably lucid interpretation to a scholarly audience.—Jack A. Clarke, Univ. of Wisconsin Library Sch., Madison

Modras, Ronald E. Paul Tillich's Theology of the Church: a Catholic appraisal.

Wayne State Univ. Pr. 1976. 314p. fwd. by Hans Küng. bibliog. index. LC 76-6082. ISBN 0-8143-1552-6. $17.50. REL

After a summary of Tillich's ecclesiology, Modras focuses on one central element of Tillich's ecclesiology—the idea that the church is characterized by a dialectical tension between priestly and prophetic, between Catholic substance and Protestant principle. Modras argues that, especially since Vatican II, the Protestant principle has been operative in the Roman Catholic church, i.e., that the church has been understood as a sacrament representing the kingdom of God, but not identical with it, and thus subject to reform, even in its doctrine. Thus he analyzes recent developments in Roman Catholic ecclesiology as a partial realization of Tillich's vision of the church. Modras obviously approves of this; to have explained why would have strengthened the book.—Terrance Callan, Dept. of Theology, Xavier Univ., Cincinnati, Ohio

Perowne, Stewart. Holy Places of Christendom.

Oxford Univ. Pr. 1976. 160p. color illus. index. ISBN 0-19-519878-6. $12.95. TRAV/REL

This pleasantly illustrated volume describes "holy places" ranging from the Church of the Nativity in Bethlehem to the site of Dietrich Bonhoeffer's 1945 execution by the Nazis in Flossenburg Concentration Camp, Bavaria; thus it combines the chief sites in the Holy Land with notable "holy places" throughout the world, including the Far East, Africa, and the Americas, but emphasizing the European monasteries and cathedrals that have become centers of pilgrimage. The Church of the Holy Sepulchre receives the most detailed attention, partly, no doubt, to amass the evidence for its authenticity as the site of Jesus' grave. Although one can agree that the evidence favors the church vis-à-vis its chief rival, Gordon's Calvary, and the adjacent Garden Tomb outside the Damascus Gate, it seems strange Perowne never mentions the latter even though many are convinced of its superior claims, and thousands of pilgrims visit it regularly. The emphasis throughout is popular, and in no case critical of the traditions that attach to these sites and their subsequent history. The text is clear and very well written. There are a few unfortunate inaccuracies in matters of fact, but none of importance.—R. Vernon Ritter, formerly with Dept. of Religious Studies, Westmont Coll., Santa Barbara, Calif.

Warshaw, Mal. Tradition: Orthodox Jewish life in America.

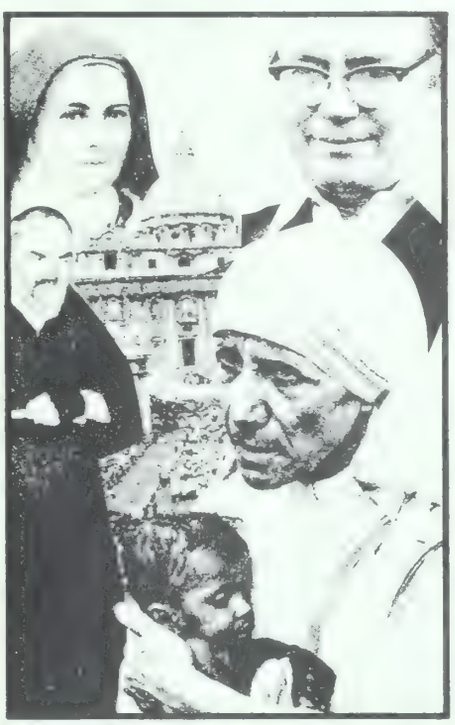
Schocken. 1976. 144p. photogs. LC 76-9130. $14.95. PHOTOG/REL

In an age where loss of identity, alienation, and aimlessness threaten the social fiber, the Orthodox Jewish community remains a rock of continuity and purposeful strength. The faces in this photographic essay shine with surprise, devotion, tragedy, delight, but never despair. Chronicling life from daily practices through the celebration of holiday ritual, Warshaw gives us a glimpse at a living tradition. The incongruity of portraying the Lubavitcher Hasidic community against a modern New York City backdrop adds to the sense of timelessness which surrounds Orthodox Jewish life. Published in association with Warshaw's Brooklyn Museum exhibition, this book displays a mature, sensitive, and knowing hand. A superb addition to Judaica collections.—Nina Kahn Fenenbock, Washington, D.C.

Out-of-this-world SAINTLY BIOGRAPHIES

PADRE PIO
by Rev. John A. Schug, Capuchin
First really complete biography of the spiritual life of this modern "worker of miracles." Based on 7 years of research, including original letters and notes never before available. Process for canonization is already underway in Rome. paperbound.
ISBN 0-97973-856-1, $4.95

ZEAL FOR YOUR HOUSE
by Bishop James E. Walsh
edited by Robert E. Sheridan, M.M.
What enables a man to endure 12 years of Chinese Communist imprisonment and then emerge without bitterness? The answer is in this remarkable collection of previously unpublished writings and addresses by Bishop Walsh, first Maryknoll to go to China, later Executive secretary of the CCB, coordinating all missionary, cultural, welfare and educational activities of the Church in China. Clothbound, ISBN 0-97973-892-8, $7.95



ORESTES A. BROWNSON
by Thomas R. Ryan, C.PP.S.
Definitive biography of an epic American, friend of Emerson and Thoreau, journalist, philosopher, economist, essayist, orator, literary critic, educator and minister. Based on 25 years' research by nation's leading Brownson scholar; rich in quotations, notes, and commentary. Helpful chapter headings, footnotes, and index. "Brownson belongs to all Americans. He is a part of the American national heritage." Arthur M. Schlesinger. 876 pages, clothbound.
ISBN 0-97973-884-7. $29.95

2 OSV CLASSIC CATHOLIC REFERENCE WORKS

1977 CATHOLIC ALMANAC
Virtually the most complete one-volume encyclopedia of Catholic facts and information. Revised and updated annually. New edition includes: 41st Eucharistic Congress; Catholic Events of Bicentennial Year 1976; dates and events; biographies; findings of surveys; lists of U.S. Bishops . . . and so much more. Paper, ISBN 0-97973-821-9, $6.95; Cloth, ISBN 0-97973-873-1, $10.95

THE TEACHING OF CHRIST:
A Catholic Catechism for Adults by Lawler, Wuerl, Lawler. Foreword by John Cardinal Wright. Book Catholics have been waiting for since Vatican II. Work of 17 noted scholars. Acclaimed as the best of the new catechisms by liberals and conservatives alike. Order now before 4th printing sells out! Paper, ISBN 0-97973-858-8, $5.95. Cloth, ISBN 0-97973-899-5, $9.95
"Best of the catechisms."
—Rev. Andrew Greeley

OUR SUNDAY VISITOR, Inc. Huntington, Indiana 46750

SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

Faulkner, Douglas (photogs. & comm.). & Barry Fell (text). Dwellers in the Sea.

Reader's Digest Pr., dist. by Crowell. 1976. 194p. color photogs. index. LC 76-17286. ISBN 0-88349-108-7. $40; until Jan. 1, 1977, $35. PHOTOG/NAT HIST

An excellent excursion through the shallow waters of the oceans, illuminated by 180 superb color photographs. Supplementing Faulkner's captions and photographs is Fell's 44-page text which highlights several interesting aspects of marine history and biology. Of special interest are the photos and comments on Mollusks, Cleaning Symbiosis, and Dangerous Creatures. A first-rate illustrative source for the teacher as well as a conversation piece for the coffee table.—Robert S. DeSanto, Comsis Corp., Hartford, Conn.

Reader's Digest Strange Stories, Amazing Facts: stories that are bizarre, unusual, odd, astonishing, and often incredible.

Reader's Digest Assn., dist. by Norton. 1976. 608p. illus., some color. index. LC 76-2966. $14.95. SCI

This thick, profusely illustrated collection of short (usually a page or less) factual and pseudoscientific tidbits lives up to its subtitle. The subjects covered range from "the enigma of space" to "man's amazing inventions" to "hoaxes, frauds and forgeries." Unfortunately, there are factual inaccuracies and outdated assertions, especially in the sections on space science; and since these appear in the beginning of the book, the reader is apt to be somewhat cautious about the rest. However, for the most part this book is fascinating. It is not meant to be read from cover to cover, but to be dipped into at random. Worthwhile for any browsing collection.—Joel Davis, formerly with Ventura County Lib. Services Agency, Calif.

Botany & Horticulture

Brown, Lauren. Weeds in Winter.

Norton. 1976. 252p. illus. by the author. bibliog. index. LC 76-23187. $8.95. REF/HORT

Many strikingly attractive dead winter weeds are inconspicuous and difficult to identify in summer. For the amateur naturalist, for the giver or receiver of an arrangement of dried flowers, for the person curious about that strange weed in his driveway, this book is a fascinating guide. A carefully done key to plant identification is the heart of the book, and each species description is accompanied by a beautiful and helpful line drawing. The book's limitations are self-imposed; coverage is not exhaustive and is geographically restricted to the northeastern part of the country. For those wishing more systematic and detailed information, the short bibliography is an excellent guide. Public libraries in the Northeast should seriously consider purchase.—Malcolm K. Hill, Haverhill P.L., Mass.

Douglas, James Sholto. Advanced Guide to Hydroponics (Soilless Cultivation).

Drake. 1976. 333p. illus. index. LC 75-13599. ISBN 0-8473-1020-5. $12.95. HORT

Hydroponics is the practice of growing plants in a nutrient-rich water bath. The exact mechanisms by which this is accomplished and the compositions of the nutrient solutions vary widely; this book describes these and other aspects of soilless culture in detail. In essence this is a how-to guide for the serious amateur or the professional, often with explicit instructions for each operation. Unfortunately, descriptions are occasionally unclear, and the bibliography and index are too short. The treatment is sufficiently thorough that those not already familiar with hydroponics might wish to consult the author's Beginner's Guide to Hydroponics (Drake, 1972). The present work is suited to advanced and research collections; public libraries might prefer the introductory title.—Bruce H. Tiffney, Paleobotanical Labs., Dept. of Biology, Harvard Univ.

Grounds, Roger. Bottle Gardens.

Regnery. 1976. 100p. illus., some color. index. LC 76-6267. ISBN 0-8092-8018-3. $12.95; pap. ISBN 0-8092-7989-4. $4.95. DEC ARTS/HORT

In Bottle Gardens Grounds not only sketches how to plant and care for bottle gardens and terrariums, he also traces their development in Victorian England. Dr. Ward's fern in a jar on display at the Great Exposition of 1851, Maconochie's miniature greenhouse; and the Victorian enthusiasm for ferns led to the development of elaborate gardening cases and glass-domed gardens that are the ancestors of modern bottle gardens. An interesting book, not so much for its information on planting and care—earlier books like Charles Evans and Roberta Pliner's The Terrarium Book (LJ 9/15/73) or Ken Kayatta and Steven Schmidt's Successful Terrariums (LJ 3/15/75) are better guides—as for the history of terrariums and the detailed photographs and prints that could be followed to make your own Victorian Wardian case. The book includes a brief plant list.—Margery Read, Castine, Me.

Reppert, Bertha P. A Heritage of Herbs.

Stackpole. 1976. 192p. illus. by Margaret S. Browne & Marjorie L. Reppert. bibliog. index. LC 76-8239. ISBN 0-8117-0796-2. $8.95. HIST/HORT

This book has some new material and some transplanted and repotted. The author's definition of "herb" as "any plant useful to man that grows in the temperate zone" is quite unusual; thus, for example, the section on herbs the colonists found in North America includes such unexpected items as hardy asters, mountain ash, clematis, and redwood. Features of the book are a descriptive list of 59 herbs; useful information on 75 public herb gardens, arranged by states; a valuable list of 36 herbs suited for teas; and 21 pages of recipes. There are interesting chapters on colonial and early American herb gardens. The book suffers from poor editing: in one place coreopsis is said to be "useful in gardens" but one is never told how it is useful. Further, the index is incomplete: e.g., bee balm has two index references but none for its most important entry—monarda; and there are no cross references. Your present collection may already fill your needs.—Mary Mac Franklin, formerly with N.Y.P.L.

Health & Medicine

Arica Institute. Psycho Calisthenics.

S. & S. 1976. illus. ISBN 0-671-22237-6. $9.95; pap. ISBN 0-671-22238-4. $3.95. PHIL/HEALTH

Arica Institute, based in New York City, gives an intensive training in mystical consciousness designed to harmonize body, mind, and spirit. Psycho Calisthenics sets forth their exercise system and then gives a series of variations in tempo and attention designed to increase the benefit of the movements. It is a well-designed, attractive book with clear instructions and line illustrations for each exercise. The introduction is somewhat overburdened with unsupported assertions about the mystical benefits of the exercises, and some of the variations require exceptional dedication and concentration, but the exercise set itself is an excellent one and should be easy and pleasant to learn with this book as a guide.—Rosemary Feitis, Member, Rolf Inst., New York

Brothers, Milton J., M.D. Diabetes: the new approach.

Grosset. 1976. 229p. illus. index. $8.95. MED

Brothers, the husband of the well-known psychologist Joyce Brothers, is a specialist in the treatment of diabetes. His book provides the reader with the latest research findings and with the modern medical approach to the control and management of this disease. The book is divided into four sections, considering the nature of the disorder, outling therapeutic approaches to diabetes, discussing possible complications of the disease, and offering advice on living with diabetes. The text presents in-depth technical information (with helpful illustrations) about the disease. Medical terms are printed in boldface type and defined in a glossary at the back of the book. The five million known diabetics in the U.S. will probably welcome his sound advice, although many may find the complex medical details too difficult to comprehend.—Beatrice Sichel, Western Michigan Univ. Libs., Kalamazoo

Jordan, Henry A., M.D. & others. Eating Is Okay! a radical approach to successful weight loss; the behavioral-control diet explained in full.

Rawson Assocs., dist. by Atheneum. 1976. 192p. ed. by Steve Gelman. LC 76-15067. ISBN 0-89256-000-2. $7.95.

Stern, Frances & Ruth Hoch with Jean Carper. Mind Trips to Help You Lose Weight: the power of mental image.

Playboy, dist. by S. & S. Jan. 1977. 192p. bibliog. ISBN 0-87223-477-0. $8.95. PSYCH/HEALTH

Both of these books stress that eating habits are tied to lifestyles. Both show that the real problem with obesity is not just to lose weight, but to make a significant change in habit patterns and in the psychological attitudes toward food so that the weight is not regained.

SCIENCE

Eating is Okay! recommends an approach that makes one totally aware of eating habits. Elaborate charting of food intake forces one to recognize and thus to attempt to gain control of eating behavior. Increased physical activity is also stressed.

Mind Trips . . . relies on positive and negative mental images to change poor eating habits. For example, if you would imagine a large, white rabbit vomiting on your plate, you probably won't eat too much. These two books should have popular appeal even though the actual effectiveness of these techniques outside of the clinics where they were developed has not been proven.—Alyce Bowers, Rockaway Township Free P.L., N.J.

McCauley, Carole Spearin. Pregnancy After 35.

Sunrise: Dutton. 1976. 213p. fwd. by Dr. Howard Berk. bibliog. index. LC 76-4958. ISBN 0-87690-219-0. $7.95. HEALTH

The pros and cons of pregnancy in the later childbearing years are presented factually with appropriate references to current obstetric practice, genetics, and psychosocial studies. Generalizations are avoided, permitting the reader to use the information for her personal situation. The chapters on genetics, fertility, and physiological changes in the woman's body after 35 specifically refer to that age group; discussions of other topics—prenatal advice, diet, psychological tasks of pregnancy (an especially helpful section), postpartum, changing lifestyles, intelligent consumerism, birth methods, insurance, and finances—could well be read by pregnant couples of any age. An appended list of useful books is not well balanced: neither Elisabeth Bing's nor Alan Guttmacher's works appear.—Elizabeth M. Johnson, R.N., Lamaze Childbirth Assn., Columbus, Ohio

Millman, Marcia. The Unkindest Cut: life in the backrooms of medicine.

Morrow. Jan. 1977. 245p. $8.95. SOC SCI/MED

The names and places are fictitious, but the events are real. Medical sociologist Millman spent two years as an observer in the wards, operating rooms, corridors, staff meetings, and emergency rooms of three metropolitan hospitals, and her study of the composite "Lakeside Hospital" brings to light some of the factors which lead to poor patient care and unnecessary death: conflict among interns, private doctors, nurses, and surgeons; friction between medical personnel and hospital administrators; the lack of regulation of new surgical procedures; and the advent of high-profit, technologized medical corporations that promote such complex procedures as coronary bypass surgery (considered by many, Millman says, to be of unproven value). The author also provides insight into the ways doctors rationalize their mistakes and why they often keep their patients uninformed. Primarily a study of medical mistakes, The Unkindest Cut understandably does not consider the good care many hospitals give. It is thus a frightening book, but it still should be read by the general public and by health professionals.—Peggy Champlin, California State Univ. Lib., Los Angeles

Social Science

Badcock, C. R. Lévi-Strauss: structuralism and sociological theory.

Holmes & Meier. 1976. 125p. bibliog. index. LC 75-45308. ISBN 0-8419-0258-5. $7.50. SOC SCI

Badcock presents a concise historical perspective on French sociological thought as this tradition emerges in the work of Claude Lévi-Strauss. The author is critical of this tradition and of structuralism seen as its contemporary manifestation. He argues that Lévi-Strauss' major works exhibit reductionism: the structuralist analysis of myths (or kinship, or totemism) reveals the functioning of the mind; the mind exists in nature; "hence nature, as a final cause, underlies both." For Badcock, Lévi-Strauss' structuralism is but "a delibidinized Freudianism, a Cartesian psychoanalysis." A book this short that deals with Comte, Durkheim, Mauss, Marx, Sartre, linguistic theory, and Freud simply cannot adequately cover the materials to the satisfaction of specialists. The work would also have benefited had account been taken of the ongoing dialogues which Lévi-Strauss' structuralism has engendered in the French intellectual world (e.g., the works of Paul Ricoeur).—Winifred Lambrecht, Dept. of Anthropology, Brown Univ., Providence, R.I.

Carney, Ann. No More Here & There: adopting the older child.

Univ. of North Carolina Pr. 1976. LC 76-4535. ISBN 0-8078-1278-1. pap. $2.50. SOC SCI

Because "adoption" has been synonymous with "infant," very little has been done or written about older and hard-to-place children. This book will help couples to shed their fears and choose an older child (defined here as a child past two). Out of her experience with her adoptive son Jake, Carney provides a list of expectations for everyone involved in the process of adopting the older child. She assures parents "that their difficulties and feelings are shared by others," that they can avoid the "impossible expectations of experiencing immediate love for the child," and that successful adoptive parents must be terribly realistic.

Finally, this is an important book because it considers adoption from the child's perspective as well. Quibbles? I have a few. The book needs more of the humor of Carney's anecdotes about Jake. Also, many available children are much older than two and may have problems that are harder to resolve in areas she only hints at. Then, too, she only touches on transracial adoptions while the majority of "children who wait" are from minorities.—Kenneth Tompkins, Literature & Language Program, Stockton State Coll., Pomona, N.J.

HORSES and their World
BY DAPHNE GOODALL

"A very personal book. For horse lovers and public libraries."
—LIBRARY JOURNAL

This beautiful book will please anyone who has ever ridden, admired or worked with horses. With 150 photographs, many in full color, HORSES AND THEIR WORLD pays tribute to the beauty, grace and endurance that make horses and people partners in work, sports and war. Complete discussions of equine behavior and care include: life in the wild and the herd instinct, breeding, early training, sickness and veterinary developments, as well as details of breeds from nearly 20 countries.

0-88405-374-1/170 pp./150 illus./$10.00

MASON / CHARTER
641 LEXINGTON AVE. NEW YORK, N.Y. 10022

"brilliant"
—Choice

NOTES FOR THE FUTURE
Robin Clarke, editor

"A compendium of much of the best committed writing of the past decade that is intended to alert us to the world resource crisis, the need for population control, proposals to subordinate science and technology to human desires and emotions, and the triumphs and heartaches of the new alternative culture. This is a brilliant collection by Clarke . . . Highly recommended." —Choice. ". . . brilliant collection." —Publishers Weekly.

230 pages $10.00 LC75-37295
ISBN 0-87663-255-X

UNIVERSE BOOKS
381 Park Ave. So., N.Y. 10016

Dickinson, Peter A. The Complete Retirement Planning Book: your guide to happiness, health and financial security.

Dutton. 1976. bibliog. index. LC 76-7608. ISBN 0-8415-0446-6. $10.95; pap. ISBN 0-8415-0440-7. $6.95. SOC SCI

Hitherto death and taxes have been the inevitables. Retirement should probably be added to the list. Yet there is little formal preparation for this important life period, which makes books such as this welcome. The author keeps the promise of his book's title very well, offering guidance on matters of health, housing, money, use of leisure time, and the law. A great deal of well-organized information is presented in an easy-to-grasp style. In addition, each section ends with a profile analysis, summary tables are sprinkled throughout, and numerous sources for further reference augment the text. Although the book seems addressed chiefly to the middle- or upper-income reader who is a pre- or new retiree, others, especially those in their 50's, will find the author's advice and information helpful in planning for a future retirement.—Mary J. Mayer, New York City Dept. for the Aging

Dolce, Philip C., ed. & pref. Suburbia: the American dream and dilemma.

Anchor: Doubleday. 1976. illus. LC 76-2838. ISBN 0-385-01336-1. pap. $2.95. SOC SCI

This collection of essays on the process of suburbanization does not provide any new ideas but brings together current thought. Included are essays on the history of the development of suburbs, on the suburban impact on party politics, and on the role of zoning and other means that increase homogeneity. The essays considering the function of art in the suburbs and comparing U.S. to European cities and suburbs are the most unique and interesting. Little attention is given to the effect on suburbs of the energy crisis and the increasing crime in suburbs.—Kathryn Scarich, Trumbull Lib., Conn.

Finestone, Harold. Victims of Change: juvenile delinquents in American society.

Greenwood. (Contribs. in Sociology). 1976. 235p. bibliog. index. LC 76-5327. ISBN 0-8371-8897-0. $14.95. LAW/SOC SCI

Children and adolescents pass through our juvenile justice system in increasing numbers every year, but the problem is not new. Finestone's critique of three major views of juvenile delinquency—those of Clifford R. Shaw and Henry D. McKay of the Chicago school, the subcultural theorists, and the labeling theorists—views the development of the sociology of delinquency during the 20th Century as a dialectical process in which the institutionalization of each idea revealed its shortcomings and the need for a better theory. Comprehensive collections in the field would do well to purchase this title.—Vincent P. Schmidt, Cumberland Trail Lib. System, Flora, Ill.

Harman, Willis W. An Incomplete Guide to the Future.

San Francisco Bk. Co., dist. by S. & S. (Portable Stanford). 1976. 149p. illus. bibliog. $8.95; pap. $3.95. SOC SCI

Harman begins with a fundamental assumption about the present: that technologically advanced societies are confronted by many interrelated dilemmas (regarding growth, work roles, world distribution, and control) which are growing more pressing and whose solutions seem to require both a new image of man and a radically altered social paradigm. This premise allows him to generate several plausible futures for such societies. The future which Harman presumes as the most plausible—and the most desirable—involves a rapid transformation from industrial to transindustrial societies, in which mankind will have the ability to manipulate and shape the environment, to emphasize human growth and development, and to focus on the inner frontiers of mind and spirit. More theoretical than Alvin Toffler's Future Shock and more optimistic and completely developed than Robert Heilbroner's An Inquiry into the Human Prospect (LJ 4/1/74), Harman's work should be added to most futurology collections.—Stephen M. Lowry, Dept. of Political Science, St. Joseph's Coll., Philadelphia

Radine, Lawrence B. The Taming of the Troops: social control in the United States Army.

Greenwood. (Contribs. in Sociology, #22). Mar. 1977. 288p. LC 76-5262. ISBN 0-8371-8911-X. $14.95. SOC SCI

This is an examination of the manner in which the Army controls the deviant behavior of its troops. Writing with a concern for what he sees as the progressive erosion of freedom in bureaucratic contexts, the author discusses the various behavioral controls and how they are used by the medical, judicial, and command areas. He goes on to make the case that the nature of bureaucracies and their ever-expanding use of manipulative controls "results in a declining spontaneity, a delimiting of the human variety, and a diminution of the power of lower participants within organizations." Although there are some minor areas that may stand challenge and one could wish for a clearer definition of the author's term "co-option," the work still commands attention. A scholarly and provocative study that is well worth including in most libraries.—George F. Scheck, SUNY at Oswego Lib.

Rossman, Parker. Sexual Experience Between Men and Boys: exploring the pederast underground.

Association Pr. 1976. 247p. bibliog. index. LC 76-9029. ISBN 0-8096-1911-3. $10.95. PSYCH/SOC SCI

The title suggests a narrower scope: Rossman treats a rich and full range of sexual experiences and acts, as well as illustrative case histories, to explain the many facets of sexual conduct. Homosexual involvements, the implications of sexual fantasies and acts for intimacy, and historical and crosscultural materials are presented. An interview study by the author of 1,000 pederasts and 300 teenage boys, as well as supplemental perceptions from literature, offer insights into the pederast underground. Pederasts are shown to be not all alike. One conclusion by Rossman is that "Most man-boy sex is episodic, an occasional experience as a part of a meaningful relationship which essentially is not sexual at all." Religious and moral issues and recommendations for dealing with pederasty as a social problem are included. A theologian by profession, Rossman has accomplished a scholarly study of one type of sexual deviance. The writing is clear, and summarizing comments at the end of chapters make this book an appropriate and comprehensive volume for the layperson and the professional.—Roger W. Libby, Inst. for Family Research & Education, Syracuse Univ., N.Y.

Tarrant, John J. The End of Exurbia: who are all those people and why do they want to ruin our town?

Stein & Day. Dec. 1976. 256p. bibliog. index. LC 76-10343. ISBN 0-8128-1899-7. $10. SOC SCI

Westport, Connecticut is being assaulted by "outsiders" who want to build apartments, go to the public schools, and swim at the beaches. "Exurbia" is the name properly given Westport and other affluent enclaves across the country by Tarrant, a writer and a Westport resident. He describes the people, their problems, and the movement to "pierce the barrier of . . . our snobbish exclusivity." He discusses education, housing, economics, and the family in exurbia, and presents a very good two-sided picture of the suburban zoning dilemma. Yet his book is overly subjective, covers too much territory, and doesn't offer any solutions. In fact, it reads like a conversation overheard at a suburban cocktail party.—John C. McGee, Urban Planning Consultant, Mystic, Conn.

Law & Criminology

Barthel, Joan. A Death in Canaan.

Congdon Bks: Dutton. 1976. intro. by William Styron. 233p. LC 76-40240. ISBN 0-525-23330-X. $9.95. CRIME

The story of Peter Reilly—a young man who returned to his home in Canaan, Connecticut one night in 1973 and discovered his alcoholic mother brutally murdered—is a strong argument against the claim that police power to interrogate suspects should be broadened. After being held incommunicado

REPRINT TITLES

BAJEMA. Natural Selection in Human Populations. 415 pp. In Prep.
BURTON. Psychotherapy of the Psychoses. 396 pp. $14.50
COON. A Reader in Cultural Anthropology. 634 pp. In Prep.
COON: Caravan: Story of the Middle East, Rev. ed. 395 pp. $14.00
EDINGER: Political Leadership in Industrialized Societies: Studies in Comparative Analysis. 383 pp. $11.50
GALENSON. Labor and Trade Unionism An Interdisciplinary Reader. 398 pp. In Prep.

Robert E. Krieger Publishing Co., Inc.
645 New York Avenue
Huntington, N.Y. 11743

and grilled for hours, Reilly made a "confession" that was the basis of his manslaughter conviction. Fortunately, the efforts of a remarkable group of concerned citizens—the Reilly Defense Committee—rallied to support the boy. The author, a member of the committee, has written a perceptive book, based on official transcripts and interviews, that concludes with Reilly's winning of a new trial. It is a moving account of an unsolved crime, people who cared, and a victory over injustice.—Gregor Preston, Pennsylvania State Univ. Libs., University Park

Bass, Howard L. & M. L. Rein. Divorce or Marriage: a legal guide.

Spectrum: Prentice-Hall. 1976. 225p. index. ISBN 0-13-216390-0. $9.95. PSYCH/LAW

Here is yet another primer, but a good one, on divorce law. It succeeds at making clear the framework and the basic legal arrangements, concepts, and definitions concerning separation and divorce. Its chapters on taxation, choosing a counsel, and attorney's fees are particularly valuable since they are not common in a book of this kind. What is also unique is the stress on the psychological damage frequently associated with the dissolution of a marriage. In addition to arranging for professional psychological help, the authors believe it is an attorney's responsibility to seek an abatement of the adversary nature of divorce and separation cases. They also feel that every effort should be made to save a marriage. A general but a very clear book recommended for all libraries serving the general public.—Janice Dunham, N.Y.P.L.

Martin, Del. Battered Wives.

Glide. 1976. 269p. LC 75-24031. ISBN 0-912078-45-6. pap. $6.95. SOC SCI/CRIME

The extent and seriousness of the problem of wife-battery is deftly handled in this study. Basing her findings on historical, social, and legal statistics, the author points out the complexity of the issue and the failure of the legal system and social service agencies to combat injustices which presently exist. The discussion of alternatives, remedial legislation, and refuges for battered wives further enhances the usefulness of this book. Since little information on this rapidly rising crime is available, this book is a necessary purchase.—Suzanne Plessinger, Los Angeles County P.L., Lakewood, Calif.

Orloski, Richard J. Criminal Law: an indictment.

Nelson-Hall. Jan. 1977. ISBN 0-88229-211-0. $8.95; pap. ISBN 0-88229-466-0. $4.95. LAW

Orloski's thesis is an intriguing yet perplexing one: America's criminal justice system is outmoded and barely functioning not because of too little money, too few policemen, or too much crime, but rather because the criminal law it enforces has been poorly drafted and interpreted, is inequitably and irrationally applied, and is saddled with contradictory purposes. The major shortcoming here is that Orloski, somewhat naively in this reviewer's opinion, assumes that America's criminal justice system will function efficiently, equitably, and responsibly if only the state legislatures will redraft their respective criminal codes so that they are solely concerned with protecting life and property. Such a simplistic idea ignores the economic, social, and cultural factors which exert a prodigious influence on any society's systems of criminal law and justice. Aryeh Neier's Crime and Punishment (LJ 6/15/76) and James Q. Wilson's Thinking About Crime (LJ 4/1/75) are works in the same area that provide a more sophisticated and complete analysis.—Stephen Lowry, Dept. of Political Science, St. Joseph's Coll., Philadelphia

Spiering, Frank. The Man Who Got Capone.

Bobbs. Jan. 1977. bibliog. index. LC 76-11626. ISBN 0-672-52231-4. $10. CRIME

If a library has a copy of Frank J. Wilson and Beth Day's Special Agent (LJ 7/65) there is little need to acquire a copy of The Man Who Got Capone. With no credit given to Wilson or Day, Spiering paraphrases crudely (often without even changing the syntax) large sections of Special Agent. This could have been a welcome book, pleasing the Capone public, as well as providing material for the growing interest in investigative procedures. However, it is too seriously flawed to be considered as an addition to any li-

NEW FROM Smithsonian

ANTHROPOLOGY

The Edge of the Forest: Land, Childhood and Change in a New Guinea Protoagricultural Society

E. Richard Sorenson Foreword by Margaret Mead
1976 278 pp. illus. LC:76-608117 CIP ISBN 0-87474-875-5 $18.50

ART AND ART HISTORY

America As Art Joshua C. Taylor
1976 320 pp. 10 color, 336 b&w illus. LC:76-4482 CIP
ISBN 0-87474-900-X $25.00

The Golden Door: Artist-Immigrants of America, 1876-1976 Cynthia Jaffee McCabe Introduction by Daniel J. Boorstin
1976 432 pp. 39 color, 218 b&w illus. LC:76-8827 CIP
ISBN 0-87474-169-6 $22.50

HISTORY

The Federal City: Plans and Realities

Frederick Gutheim and Wilcomb E. Washburn
170 pp. illus. LC:75-619412 CIP ISBN 0-87474-494-6 $3.00

NATURAL HISTORY

Zoobook Text by The Office of Education, National Zoological Park
Photographs by Jan Skrentny
80 pp. 104 color, 42 b&w illus. LC:76-9653 CIP
ISBN 0-87474-845-3 $3.50 pa.
ISBN 0-87474-846-1 $6.95 cl.

Fish of Rare Breeding: Salmon and Trout of the Donaldson Strains Neal O. Hines
167 pp. 53 illus. LC:76-608113 CIP ISBN 0-87474-163-7 $15.00

Flora of Okinawa and the Southern Ryukyu Islands

Egbert H. Walker
1159 pp. 209 illus. LC:75-34812 CIP ISBN 0-87474-145-9 $36.75

GENERAL

Blue Mystery: The Story of the Hope Diamond

Susanne Steinem Patch
64 pp. 26 illus. LC:75-619404 CIP ISBN 0-87474-165-3 $3.95 pa.
ISBN 0-87474-740-6 $6.95 cl.

Smithsonian Institution Press
Washington, D.C. 20560

brary's collection.—Beth Larsen, Los Angeles County P.L. System, Lakewood Tanaka, Hideo with assist. of Malcolm D. H. Smith, eds. The Japanese Legal System: introductory cases and materials.

Internat. Scholarly Bk. Servs. 1976. 954p. bibliog. index. ISBN 0-86008-161-3. $32.50. LAW

This is a detailed, comprehensive—indeed encyclopedic—description of Japan's legal system that will be of interest to lawyers and businessmen involved with Japan and to historians. Beginning from first principles, Tanaka and Smith cover topics ranging from historical trends in law and legal process to administrative guidance, constitutional principles, the role of law and the legal profession in Japanese society, and recent litigation. The authors draw liberally on earlier studies and on case materials. For the serious student, there is a richly detailed chapter on research in Japanese legal materials.—Thomas G. Rawski, Dept. of Political Economy, Univ. of Toronto, Canada

Regional Studies & Anthropology

Brain, Robert. Friends and Lovers.

Basic Bks. 1976. 287p. bibliog. index. LC 76-7680. $10.95. PSYCH/ANTHROPOLOGY

Brain believes that friendship and cooperation are far more basic components of social behavior than aggression. Through this finely written cross-cultural analysis of the "rites, obligations and sentiments of friendship," he argues convincingly for the primacy of loving relationships. Drawing upon the ethnographic literature, Western writings, and his own field work among the Cameroonian Bangwa, Brain examines with skill and sensitivity a number of nonkin, nonsexual relationships. Among the pairs studied are blood-friends, trading partners, same-sex marital partners. Brain observes that "real" friendship need not be the fortuitous "free" arrangement that Westerners, so often lonely, champion. Rather, friendships may be formally arranged and ritualistic, even plainly functional, without a compromise in affection and openness. Compared with the variety and intensity of friendship in other cultures, Western amity appears "impoverished"—diffused into emotionless "group" relationships, circumscribed by "Siamese-twin" marriages. But formalizing so fragile a thing as friendship is a delicate problem; and the author, while proposing no radical suggestions, perhaps too facilely rejects such awkward modern attempts as "singles' clubs." So at least for the moment, we Westerners can only envy those who enjoy the companionship of a lifelong, assigned "best friend." A remarkable work (to be shared with friends), for most academic and public libraries.—Christine M. Roysdon, Lehigh Univ. Lib., Bethlehem, Pa.

PLEASE NOTE: 1975 U.S. Computer Chess Championship is the correct title of the book by David Levy reviewed in the December 1 issue of LJ.

Graburn, Nelson H. H., ed. & intro. Ethnic and Tourist Arts of the Fourth World.

Univ. of California Pr. Dec. 1976. illus., some color. maps. bibliog. index. LC 74-30521. ISBN 0-520-02949-6. $19.95. ART/ANTHROPOLOGY

The Fourth World, already introduced in two books (The Fourth World, edited by Ben Whitaker, LJ 4/1/73, and Manuel & Michael Poslums' The Fourth World, Free Pr., 1974) consists of those aboriginal cultures whose lands are ruled by governments of the first three "worlds." The arts of these minorities, often having become their chief source of income, have been modified by the tastes of their rulers and of the tourists who buy them. No longer purely "primitive" or "folk" art, they are usually dealt with by art historians only in passing. This volume of articles by anthropologists, ethnologists, and art historians, is the first comprehensive work to treat them seriously. Divided into geographical groupings, these studies form an impressive body of evidence to support the view that ethnic and tourist art has intrinsic worth beyond its ability to support its creators economically. Extensive bibliography and index add to the value and accessibility of this pioneering work for future researchers. Reader level varies with the author and style of each article, but in the 20 essays and the regional introductions by the editor, there is ample fascination for a vast majority of the adult reading public to warrant purchase of this volume by medium- to large-sized public, and all academic, libraries.—Elizabeth B. Bailey, Univ. of Alabama in Huntsville Lib.

SPORTS & RECREATION

Bear, Fred. Fred Bear's Field Notes.

Doubleday. Dec. 1976. illus. LC 76-2752. ISBN 0-385-11690-X. $8.95. PER NAR/SPORTS

Almost everyone with a serious interest in bow and arrow has heard of Bear. Not only has he appeared frequently in print and on film and TV, but his company accounts for a large percentage of all archery equipment sold world-wide. Field Notes chronicles, in diary form, 15 hunts on four continents over a 12-year period for game ranging from bear to hippopotamus to wart hog. The book is not designed to be instructional. Its terse style inhibits the development of sustained adventure, but the author's prestige should generate interest. In sum, this unusual, wide-ranging material by an expert will appeal primarily to readers interested in big game and/or archery.—David J. Panciera, Adams Lib., Chelmsford, Mass.

Cummins, Gloria & Jim Cummins. Basketball by the Pros.

Mason/Charter. Dec. 1976. 162p. photogs. ISBN 0-88405-368-7. $10. PER NAR/SPORTS

The Cumminses interviewed top names in professional basketball to collect reflections on the game from players, coaches, owners, and officials. These persons' thoughts on the play of the game, the interaction with teammates and opponents, money angles, and the emergence of today's NBA, plus the many photos, will attract browsing interest. However, its price makes this book a luxury for all but extensive basketball collections.—Morey Berger, Monmouth County Lib., Freehold, N.J.

Dayney, Randy. Winning Roller Skating.

Regnery. Dec. 1976. 118p. ISBN 0-8092-8154-6. $8.95; pap. ISBN 0-8092-8153-8. $4.95. SPORTS

Its world-wide popularity on the rise, roller skating may shortly join ice skating as one of the premier events of the Olympics. In this instructional guide a former world champion notes that the sport is not unlike others in that it is essentially a labor of coordination and determination plus a lot of preparation if one is to master the jumps and spins required of world-class competitors. Intended as an introductory text, this work seems more suited to those seeking a world-class performance level.—William H. Hoffman, Wichita P.L., Kan.

Dickey, Glenn. Champs and Chumps: an insider's look at America's sports heroes.

Chronicle. 1976. 189p. LC 76-14383. ISBN 0-87701-083-8. $7.95. BIOG/SPORTS

The old newspaper adage is that names make news. Dickey, a sports columnist for the San Francisco Chronicle, has taken that adage one step further: the big names in sports have the ability to influence sports history. Going beyond a mere series of personality sketches, Dickey, who writes smoothly, presents the big movers and shakers of the sports world. Many of them, of course, such as Muhammad Ali and Billie Jean King, have had a profound effect on society in general. Included in his list of influentials are Jimmy Conners and King for tennis; Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus, and Johnny Miller for golf; basketball players Bill Walton and Rick Barry; football's Pete Rozelle, Joe Kapp, Woody Hayes, and Al Davis; and baseball owners Bill Veeck, Horace Stoneham, and Charlie Finley. So-called playboys Bo Belinsky and Joe Namath get special treatment, and so do surly Mike Marshall and Willie Mays. Howard Cosell is called the most influential broadcaster in sports and a major force in making sports an entertainment medium. The final chapter is on screwballs and troublemakers: Alex Johnson, Duane Thomas, Dick Allen, et al.—Larry Friedman, New York

Eskenazi, Gerald. There Were Giants in Those Days.

Grosset. Dec. 1976. 256p. photogs. LC 76-564. ISBN 0-448-12541-3. $10. SPORTS

A nostalgic look at the 1954-1963 New York Giants football teams, which won six conference titles and one championship. After a brief history of pro football and an account of how Tim Mara got the franchise, Eskenazi devotes one chapter to each year. He uses accounts of games and interviews to describe the glory and defeats of the decade. Fans (especially those who watch Monday Night Football and want to know about Frank Gifford's record-setting career) will enjoy reading about former stars Gifford, Sam Huff, Y.A. Tittle, et al. Recommended for public libraries.—Walter H. Roeder, California State Polytechnic Univ. Lib., Pomona Golombek, Harry. Chess: a history.

Putnam. 1976. 256p. illus., some color. index. LC 76-6033. ISBN 0-399-11575-7. $16.95. GAMES

Although this work is by no means so comprehensive as Harold J. Murray's A Short History of Chess (Oxford Univ. Pr., 1963)—a second edition of which Golombek is preparing—at least with regard to the early history of the game, it is nonetheless a concise and readable account, bringing the story as far as 1975. If the book is somewhat short on amusing anecdotes of eccentricity, such as we are accustomed to hearing of chess players, it is long on factual data, not to mention photos of famous players and famous chess sets. Numerous well-known games are included, though mostly without analysis and with only one diagram (of the critical position) each. There is an index to the games, but the general index is not as complete as it might be. Attractive in appearance, this is a book of general interest as background to the game and is suitable for libraries. It is not a handbook for players.—David R. Williams, Douglas Coll. Lib., New Westminster, British Columbia, Canada

Kelly, Red with Martin Lader. Hockey: the sports playbook.

Doubleday. 1976. 130p. illus. LC 75-40731. ISBN 0-385-06045-9. pap. $2.95. SPORTS

Here is a down-to-the-ice manual for developing players or serious fans who want to understand offensive and defensive play. Once an NHL all-star and now a coach, Kelly uses detailed charts to demonstrate a full range of hockey maneuvers and techniques. The photos at the beginning of each chapter would have been more useful had their subjects been identified, but the book is a welcome bargain for any busy sports collection.—Morey Berger, Monmouth County Lib., Freehold, N.J.

Knap, Jerome, ed. All About Wildfowling in America.

Winchester, Dist. by Scribners. 1976. 305p. photogs. index. LC 76-22681. ISBN 0-87691-177-7. $10. SPORTS

This title will admirably introduce the sport of wildfowling to the prospective hunter and upgrade the skills of most others. Although one-third of the book is devoted to regional (including Canada and Mexico) treatments, the remainder provides universally applicable information on identification, techniques, and equipment. Smoothly written by experts, this work might well be the cornerstone of any wildfowling collection, or, for smaller libraries, one of the four or five titles needed for adequate hunting coverage.—David J. Panciera, Adams Lib., Chelmsford, Mass.

Korn, Henry James. Muhammad Ali Retrospective.

Assembling Pr. 1976. 117p. LC 76-8030. ISBN 0-915066-18-4. pap. $3.95. BIOG/SPORTS

Korn has accepted Ali's pronouncement that he is "the greatest." This book is a collection of essays, dialogues, and observations designed to portray the champion as a hero in politics, race relations, and religion, as well as in his chosen sport. Korn has, in effect, bought the Ali mystique lock, stock, and barrel and makes no effort to place the fighter's admittedly great talents in perspective. This is dangerous. We know far too much already about Ali. His own autobiography (The Greatest, LJ 1/15/76) and countless other books and articles have shed too much light on Ali for worship to remain intact. Korn's concluding essay, "A Scenario for Muhammad Ali's Ascent to the American Presidency in 1992," is silly and frightening. For Ali buffs only.—Matthew Hartman, Univ. of British Columbia Lib., Vancouver, Canada

McCullagh, James, ed. American Bicycle Racing.

Rodale Pr. 1976. 171p. contrib. by Dick Swann & others. illus. bibliog. index. LC 76-26088. ISBN 0-87857-144-2. pap. $3.95. SPORTS

This is essentially a history of bicycle racing in the U.S. by several persons well known on the American racing scene, and it covers the sport's rise and fall in popularity and prestige from its origins in the 19th Century to the most recent Olympic championships. During its heyday bicycle racing attracted more fans than did any of the other spectator sports, and the editor seems to believe that based on the evidence of the current scene, a "promising future" lies ahead. There are few, if any, books solely about the history of bicycle racing in America; and with the current interest in bicycling at an all time high, this one belongs in any popular collection.—Jerry Holtz, Kansas State Univ. Lib., Manhattan

Nagamine, Shoshin. The Essence of Okinawan Karate-Do (Shorin-ryu).

Tuttle. 1976. 278p. photogs. index. LC 75-28717. ISBN 0-8048-1163-6. $15. SPORTS

Nagamine stresses the traditional study of basic techniques, katas (forms), and personal discipline in this clear, concise, authoritative text. There are no glamour photos showing smashing bricks or tournament highlights. But serious students will appreciate the hundreds of photos showing Nagamine demonstrating the numerous techniques and katas. The book itself is well bound and durable. Those libraries serving an audience that has access to Shorin-ryu instruction could use it.—Harold L. Bogart, Lake Havasu City Lib., Ariz.

Northrop, Christie Mueller. Skiing with Kids.

Chatham, dist. by Dutton. 1976. 127p. photogs. LC 76-18486. ISBN 0-85699-136-8. pap. $5.95. SPORTS

Skiing with Kids is a unique book, written for parents interested in getting their children involved in skiing. It is a guide to equipment, clothing, instruction, and ski areas for children. It also discusses competitive skiing and ski touring. It is thorough, covering facilities available at Eastern, Western, and Midwestern ski areas. My only reservation is that much of the specific information may quickly become outdated. Still, at $5.95, it is a strongly recommended purchase.—Janice Marie Zinkl, Downers Grove P.L., Ill.

Reed, Mort. The Complete Coin Collector.

Regnery. Dec. 1976. 368p. fwd. by Mary Brooks. ISBN 0-8092-8045-0. $14.95. HOBBIES

This work poses as a complete guide to coin collecting but, in fact, most of it is simply a collection of photos and descriptions of American coins. This information is widely available elsewhere. Unrelated chapters on coin photography, selecting a magnifier, counterfeiting, testing for gold and silver, and storing coins vary in worth from useful to useless. There is even a section on how to make a clock out of coins. Why? The book is without cohesion. Worst of all, it brags a foreword by Mary Brooks, Director of the U.S. Mint. Her effort consists of eight sentences of praise for the author. Not recommended.—Sanford Sternlicht, Dept. of Theater, SUNY at Oswego

Reese, Terence & Robert Brinig. Backgammon, the Modern Game.

Sterling. Dec. 1976. 141p. illus. index. LC 76-19770. ISBN 0-8069-4930-9. $7.95; lib. ed. ISBN 0-8069-4931-7. $6.89. GAMES

Reese, known for his polished bridge books, and Brinig have produced an introductory masterpiece on backgammon. In a relatively small book they bring the reader from his "first half hour" to expert advice on the back game and the use of the doubling cube. Diagrams are made from photographs of actual board positions. Suggestive vocabulary is introduced. The best feature is the discussion of odds, their calculation and relevance. Much erudition in a little package.—Robert H. True, Columbia Univ. Libs.

Robinson, Bill. America's Sailing Book.

Scribners. Dec. 1976. 288p. illus. index. LC 76-24854. ISBN 0-684-14736-X. $12.95. HIST/SPORTS

This work provides a fascinating, if overly ambitious, introduction to the American sailing scene. It traces the history of yachting from the 17th Century to the present, describes various rigs, provides an introduction to sailing terminology and boat handling, and discusses racing, cruising, and day sailing. The book is readable and always interesting, but it does try to cover too much. Nitty-gritty details of boat handling or stove selection seem out of place in so general a work, and these detailed digressions make it difficult to determine the book's intended audience.—Jay Schwartz, Suffolk County Community Coll. Lib., Selden, N.Y.

Rodgers, Pepper & Al Thomy. Pepper!: the autobiography of an unconventional coach.

Doubleday. Dec. 1976. 225p. ISBN 0-385-11667-5. $7.95. AUTOBIOG/SPORTS

A reader's first reaction to this autobiography of the Georgia Tech football coach might be "why?" Rodgers has had some success as a head coach at Kansas and UCLA (the jury is still out on his fortunes at Tech), but he is far from attaining the dominance on the national scene of such coaches as Bear

Bryant, Woody Hayes, or Joe Paterno. The answer lies in the book's subtitle: for Rodgers is "unconventional," especially for a big-time college coach (he carries a shoulder bag, runs around on a motorcycle, and likes rock music). His story is a very entertaining recounting of the controversial career of a coach who still believes that football should be fun.—Don Marion, Univ. of Minnesota Libs., Minneapolis

Shapiro, Neal & Steven Lehrman. The World of Horseback Riding.

Atheneum. 1976. 99p. illus. LC 76-13244. ISBN 0-689-10752-8. $6.95.

Von Walter, Ella Winblad. Learn to Ride.

Barron's. 1976. 93p. color photogs. LC 76-11777. ISBN 0-8120-5112-2. $7.95; pap. ISBN 0-8120-0682-8. $5.95. SPORTS

Shapiro and Lehrman's book is an introduction to riding for those who have never been on a horse. They take the sport from first meeting a horse through showing, and provide a glossary of basic terms. Unfortunately the text alternates between oversimplification and condescension. The photos are not helpful either—they are too dark and of poor quality—and there is no index. Not recommended.

Von Walter's book is basically a collection of photographs, strung together by a brief text. Like the Shapiro and Lehrman book, it also is a manual of riding for absolute beginners, and includes simple information from start to showing. The photos are of excellent quality and successfully demonstrate the techniques introduced in the short text. This elementary manual is recommended especially for YA collections.—William Chamberlain, Virginia State Lib., Richmond

Slaymaker, S. R. Tie a Fly, Catch a Trout.

Harper. Dec. 1976. 160p. illus. by George Harvey. index. ISBN 0-06-013983-8. $8.95. PER NAR/SPORTS

Slaymaker, a regular contributor to various sporting journals, writes about both the creation and practical use of trout flies. There is practical information to be gained here, but many will be satisfied to read about the author's experiences on famous streams with famous anglers. The instructions for tying the basic kinds of flies are adequate, but the illustrations were not seen by this reviewer. An enjoyable book, perhaps more amiable than able, but recommended for all subject collections.—John A. Moldenhauer, Univ. of Guelph Lib., Ontario, Canada

Steinkraus, William, ed. The U.S. Equestrian Team Book of Riding: the first quarter-century of the USET.

S. & S. 1976. 287p. fwd. by Whitney Stone. photogs. LC 76-13495. ISBN 0-671-22371-2. $12.50. SPORTS

Divided into three sections—show jumping, combined training, and dressage—the text consists of short chapters written by USET riders past and present. There are photographs on nearly every page. As well as fascinating history, many good riding tips and some words of advice and encouragement are included in each of the chapters. There are also two shorter chapters on the care and feeding of the Team's horses, which could be applied to almost any riding horse. An appendix shows how far the USET has progressed in 25 years. Neither strictly instructional nor dully historical, this volume is for horse-lovers of any age.—Suzan H. Stephenson, Prince George's County Memorial Lib., Md.

"With breadth and exceptional insight into modern Japan ... Joan Mellen has written not only the first comprehensive book on Japanese film; she has written an excellent . . . study which sets a high standard for its genre — a work which, while focused on a popular art form, remarkably cuts to the marrow of a whole nation's history, character, culture and politics."
—Publishers Weekly

Over 100 photographs LC: 76-9592
Cloth $15 ISBN: 0-394-49799-6
Paper $7.95 ISBN: 0-394-73278-2

THE WAVES AT GENJI'S DOOR
Japan Through Its Cinema
by Joan Mellen

Recommended

201 E. 50th St.
New York 10022

Pantheon

THEATER

Clarke, Mary & Clement Crisp. Understanding Ballet.

Harmony: Crown. 1976. 112p. fwd. by Natalia Makarova. photogs. index. LC 75-10952. ISBN 0-517-52650-6. $7.95; pap. ISBN 0-517-52649-2. $3.95. DANCE

An introduction to the world of ballet for adult as well as youthful beginners. The experienced authors cover ballet history briefly and discuss the training of dancers and the making of ballets. They also offer brief profiles of some of the world's great companies and related information about ballet financing and ballet on film and television. The information is accurate and the presentation adequate, but I wonder just how helpful this brief exposure to such large topics really is to the beginner. The photos are well chosen; the glossary is very brief and very basic.—George Louis Mayer, N.Y.P.L.

Hoggett, Chris. Stage Crafts.

St. Martin's. Dec. 1976. 282p. bibliog. index. $12.50. THEATER

Elementary methods of stage design, construction, and decoration are the focus of this handbook. The specific techniques of painting, printing, and modeling for the stage are clearly illustrated with drawings and photos. The text, though minimal, is well written and easy to follow. Hoggett's arrangement will lead students from the empty acting area, through platforms and flats, to lights, costumes, properties, and make-up. This reviewer saw the British edition, but the publisher promises a thoroughly Americanized version with new glossary, lists of materials and suppliers, and bibliography. The American edition should be a useful addition to stage craft collections in all types of libraries.—Chuck Broadbent, Ursinus Coll. Lib., Collegeville, Pa.

Spatharis, Sotiris. Behind the White Screen.

Red Dust. 1976. 150p. illus. LC 73-89906. ISBN 0-87376-022-0. $10.95. MEMOIR/THEATER

Earthy memoirs by Greek shadow puppet master Spathiris, born 1898. He tells about growing up in extreme poverty, begging, learning to read and write from tombstones, becoming a puppeteer despite family objections, marrying, joining the army in 1914, touring Greece until his retirement in 1947. Spatharis also describes puppets, plays, and scenery; and he gives capsule anecdotes about his contemporaries. The book has occasional silhouette illustrations. It's supplementa as puppet art and history, but it's interesting autobiography, even for the general reader.—Helen Gregory, Albion P.L., Mich.

Cinema

Crowther, Bosley. Vintage Films: 50 en during motion pictures.

Putnam. Dec. 1976. 274p. photogs. $15. CINEMA

There's no arguing about taste, bu what's vintage wine for Crowther is vin egar for this reviewer. Having already written The Great Films (LJ 1/15/68) Crowther is scraping the bottom of the masterpiece barrel for his new book, he's left with the so-called classics o the TV late shows, those beloved and all-too-familiar films whose inflated rep utations and cult popularity have littl to do with enduring artistic merit. Mos of these movies are beyond criticism and whatever there is to say abou them has already been said with fa more wit and incisiveness than Crow ther can command. His prose is jolly and avuncular, but there's no juice be hind it; and there's not a fresh insigh or a new fact in the entire book. In Vin tage Films, old wine has been poure into recycled bottles, and somewher along the line, it's lost its fizz.—Gar Carey, Dept. of Film & Theatre Histo ry, Sch. of Visual Arts, New York Eells, George. Ginger, Loretta and Ir ene Who?

Putnam. Dec. 1976 340p. illus. index. ISBN 399-11822-5. $8.95. BIOG/CINEM

In yet another volume devoted to trac ing the careers of Hollywood actresses, Eells chooses six performers whose names were on Times Square marquees at the beginning of 1934. Of the six—Ginger Rogers, Miriam Hopkins, Ruth Etting, Kay Francis, Loretta Young, and Irene Bentley—some achieved various degrees of lasting stardom while others faded from view within a short time. The diversity of these careers adds interest to the reading, but as one might expect, the portion devoted to each actress remains a largely numbing recital of dates and film titles. In fairness, Eells deserves credit for fashioning one of the more readable volumes of the genre though I wish he would have tied the women more closely to their important roles. Even without this kind of connection, however, general readers taken with the glitter and heartbreak that was Hollywood (or so they say) should find pleasant reading here.—Marshall Deutelbaum, Film Dept., George Eastman House, Rochester, N.Y.

THEATER

Jorgens, Jack J. Shakespeare on Film.
Indiana Univ. Pr. Dec. 1976. 352p. illus. index. LC 76-12365. ISBN 0-253-35196-0. $15.
LIT/CINEMA

The long-needed thorough work on Shakespearean film has finally arrived. This is a serious study of consistent quality that speaks to students of Shakespeare's written works and Shakespearean theater by studying Shakespearean film in perspective to the other modes. It picks up where Robert Ball's Shakespeare on the Silent Screen (LJ 2/15/69) ends and offers a singular view that Charles W. Eckert's anthology Focus on Shakespearean Films (Spectrum: Prentice-Hall, 1972. pap.) does not attempt. Its critiques of Shakespearean films are more in-depth than those in Roger Manvell's Shakespeare and the Film (LJ 5/15/72). Jorgens fuses his appreciation of Shakespeare with film aesthetics. He has a wonderful understanding of Shakespeare as a popular artist in his time and of film as a popular art form in the 20th Century. He pays just due to Shakespeare's work while critiquing the film adaptations of the plays. For public, academic, and research libraries.—David A. Green, Rhode Island Lib. Film Cooperative, Warwick

Ketcham, Charles B. Federico Fellini: the search for a new mythology.
Paulist Pr. 1976. 94p. bibliog. LC 76-18045. ISBN 0-8091-1957-9. pap. $3.95. REL/CINEMA

Ketcham has written a brief examination of how Fellini treats religion in his films. He divides the book into two parts. The first is on the film maker himself, stating basically that Fellini expresses a kind of humanism dealing with the mystery of living, an "ontological mystery" of which religion is a part. This religious theme is dealt with in a critical examination (the second part) of La Dolce Vita, La Strada, and 8½. The examination illustrates some of Fellini's existentialism, his views of the meaning of religion, and the fact that like Paul Tillich Fellini feels a new era coming in religion, similar to that when paganism ended and Christianity began. What it is going to be he does not know, but he uses myths and philosophy to forecast its coming. Recommended for large public and academic library collections.—Steven J. Mayover, Free Lib. of Philadelphia

Rosenthal, Stuart. The Cinema of Federico Fellini.
A. S. Barnes. 1976. 190p. photogs. bibliog. index. LC 73-13193. ISBN 0-498-01450-9. $9.95.
CINEMA

Arguing the essential continuity of Fellini's work, despite the apparent stylistic differences in the films since 8½, Rosenthal provides an overview tracing the director's abiding concerns. The result is a humanistic reading of the central characters of these films as they struggle to recognize the dissonance between themselves and their environment. Though Rosenthal's thematic and character analyses become too abstract at times, he generally works closely with the films; and readers will find his arguments enriching. A full filmography, including rental sources, rounds out the study.—Marshall Deutelbaum, Film Dept., George Eastman House, Rochester N.Y.

Swain, Dwight V. Film Scriptwriting: a practical manual.
Hastings. Dec. 1976. 365p. bibliog. index. LC 76-17315. ISBN 0-8038-2318-5. $13.50; pap. ISBN 0-8038-2319-3. $6.95. CINEMA

Swain's manual is in three parts: "The Fact Film" (documentary and promotional), "The Feature Film" (mass entertainment), and "Tricks of the Trade" (professional survival). The first two teach conventional script writing by formula, of which "Jean Luc Godard won't approve," admits Swain. Part 3 treats the script writer as businessman, his economic and psychic concerns, with some paternalistic comments on budgeting and drinking. The book is tightly organized, moving from general introductions to point-by-point elucidations, and highly detailed with regard to such things as script format and pay scales. It includes sample professional scripts with Swain's commentary, an appendix on judging screen time, and a bibliography and list of terms. It is written for the self-made script writer who wants to break into a field he knows little about. For him or her, it will have great practical but little artistic value.—John Lippincott, Humanities Div., Genesee Community Coll., Batavia, N.Y.

fiction

Alverson, Donna. Drum Runnin' Fool.
Reader's Digest, dist. by Crowell. 1976. 320p. ISBN 0-88349-095-1. $8.95. F

In this first novel, Anna Norman is happily married, with a two-year-old son and an itch for something more, preferably a horse called Jeep Honeycut, owned by her uncle, and some rodeo barrel racing. By book's end, she has narrowly missed becoming World Champion Barrel Racer two years in a row and has come to terms with herself

"Fascinating reading"*

Rodgers & Hart
BEWITCHED, BOTHERED AND BEDEVILED

By SAMUEL MARX & JAN CLAYTON

"The 24-year collaboration of Richard Rodgers and Lorenz Hart was a study in success and contrast....Rodgers, a disciplined, happily married composer, was part of the American dream....Hart, a homosexual suffering from what he thought was a grotesque physical appearance, was the American nightmare....A sensitive account, much of it never before published."—Publishers Weekly. "Fascinating reading...[for] anyone interested in the evolving careers of two of the greatest musical comedy collaborators."—Library Journal.* Illustrated with photos. Index. SBN-399-11786-5. $10.00

G.P. PUTNAM'S SONS
200 Madison Ave., N.Y. 10016

WHITEOUT!
by Duncan Kyle author of The Suvarov Adventure, Terror's Cradle and A Cage of Ice

"Kyle's informed adventure story (he's been up there) is as relentless as an icicle dripping down your neck—hot-cold excitement of the first order." —Kirkus Reviews (10/15/76)
221 pp. ISBN: 312-86870-7
$7.95

St. Martin's Press
175 Fifth Avenue
New York 10010

as adult, as woman, as winner, and as loser, as well as put the things in her world in proper perspective. Two marvelous scenes: Anna's first disastrous contest barrel racing ride; the horror of a bull rider's death. Worthwhile for most collections.—Dawn Kisley, Shiawassee County Lib., Corunna, Mich.

Barthelme, Donald. Amateurs.
Farrar. Dec. 1976. 184p. ISBN 0-374-10379-8. $8.95. F

As the title suggests, Amateurs is about lovers who are not very good at what they are doing. "I told her I wasn't very good with women," one of the narrators reports, "and she said it didn't matter, few men were, and that nothing mattered, now that Jake was gone, but I would do as an interim project." In these stories' worlds nothing is jake anymore, and interim projects take the place of ultimate truths and goals. Situational morality governs the temporary relationships of people whose only certainty is that of the slow decay into old age and death in a society programmed to ignore anything other than the moment's successes. Barthelme is as resourceful as ever in evoking and exploring this nightmare; this slim collection of stories is one of his very best.—J. D. O'Hara, Dept. of English, Univ. of Connecticut, Storrs

Bax, Martin. The Hospital Ship.
New Directions, dist. by Lippincott. 1976. 223p. bibliog. LC 76-16033. ISBN 0-8112-0584-3. $7.95; pap. ISBN 0-8112-0585-1. $3.95. F

This oddly affecting first novel by a practicing pediatrician serves up an ironic vision of humanity's final destruction. The last unperiled survivors are the doctors of a hospital ship that cruises the waters of the world picking up dazed and diseased victims of an unexplained and clearly unstoppable series of mass crucifixions. Unable to help their patients through a variety of bizarre therapies, the doctors finally disembark to face the "crucifixion disease" along with everybody else. Salvaging a sense of community, even in death, seems ultimately preferable to living in a state of "sustained hopelessness." Bax repeatedly interrupts the narrative with excerpts from financial, military, and medical literature. These cool, impersonal presentations are jarring next to the story of awesome human tragedy. Bax sardonically suggests that scientific and professional alienation from emotion will usher in the apocalypse with mass psychosis rather than mass bloodshed.—Daniel Levinson, "Newton Times," Mass.

Beekman, E. M. The Killing Jar.
Houghton. 1976. 209p. LC 76-20542. ISBN 0-395-24763-2. $7.95. F

The U.S. Information Agency sponsors Toivo Syystalvi, a best-selling author of Finnish origin, for a lecture tour of Europe that turns into a nightmare of attempts on his life and several inexplicable murders. Flashbacks to his boyhood in World War II and the activities and disappearance of his father, a master spy, do nothing to explain it all, until we learn that Toivo has been decoyed to lure rival crack assassins to take a crack at one another. The implausible ending has the quality of a Nordic folk tale. There are some telling character studies and scenes of comic burlesque, but there is also diffusion and lack of direction. For large fiction collections only.—Mary Soete, Phoenix P.L.

Bengis, Ingrid. I Have Come Here To Be Alone.
S. & S. Jan. 1977. LC 76-22610. ISBN 0-671-22330-5. $7.95. F

Nice but confused and insecure Jewish girl meets attractive but married Austrian artist on a Greek island. After a period of initial mutual mistrust, they transform the island into an idyllic love nest until reality asserts itself. The other woman in Stefan's life, his wife Marianna, attempts to reclaim what is still legally, though no longer emotionally hers; the divorce proceedings are not yet final. During the course of their ensuing half-hearted reconciliation, Lola returns to New York and spends several fitful months awaiting Stefan's promised arrival. He does come to her, but it isn't long before the suffocating grasp of Lola's obsessive love drives him away and into the arms of a less stifling, more promising mistress: the city. In reading this novel of the eternal triangle, a testimony to the artist's need for a creative inspiration not found within the confines of traditional human relationships, one never quite manages to shake the sense of having been privy to random pages of a diary, one better off known only to its lovesick owner who will doubtless not be bothered by frequent sketchy characterizations and flashbacks irrelevant to its chief concerns.—Lisa R. Bankoff, Guadalajara, Mexico

Day, Douglas. Journey of the Wolf.
Atheneum. Mar. 1977. ISBN 0-689-10771-4. $8.95. F

Sebastian Rosales fought for the losing side in Spain's civil war. After 34 years of exile in France, he decides to go back to the Spanish village of his youth to find the life that should have been his. He succeeds in completing the arduous journey on foot, but dies tragically after a brief glance at his native land. This is unadorned adventure narrative, suspenseful because it's impeccably plotted and structured. The picture of the old Spain which Rosales remembers and the changed situation to which he returns are deftly juxtaposed. However, while the character of Rosales is clearly conceived, his plight comes across more than his personality; in general, the novel suffers from being underwritten.—Dayle Manges, Univ. of Louisville Lib., Ky.

Eberhart, Mignon. Family Fortune.
Random. Dec. 1976. 247p. LC 76-12436. ISBN 0-394-40723-7. $7.95 F

When her father dies Lucinda Chance becomes part heir with her brothers to Bel Chance, the family plantation in Civil War West Virginia. However, since her father's will also makes her brother Jeff her legal guardian, all does not go well for Lucinda. Jeff and his scheming wife, Dolly, are determined to gain control over and to sell Bel Chance before Lucinda comes of age. Lucinda enters into a secret marriage of convenience with a kissing cousin to save Bel Chance, but Jeff and his wife refuse to recognize the marriage. When Lucinda realizes someone is willing to go as far as murder to get her out of the way, the novel reaches a swift and surprising conclusion. Various cousins, brothers, and servants make their own quest for the "family fortune" and Eberhart handles their comings and goings with her usual competency, though one wonders why Lucinda never bothers to consult a lawyer. A swift-paced novel sure to delight Eberhart fans.—David A. Dillon, Univ. of New Orleans Lib.

Girard, James. P. Changing all Those Changes.
52p. LC 76-11428. $3.95.

Lawson, William. Zeppelin Coming Down.
275p. LC 76-9412. $5.50.
ea. vol: Yardbird Wing Eds., Box 2370, Station A., Berkeley, Calif. 94702. 1976. pap.

Lawson's Zeppelin presents us with a very hip American Indian sculptor named Codac, a successful faith healer and her daughter, and a black "social technician" investigating the killing of a black man by a white policeman. However, it is Codac's own ultra-sensitive ego hidden by his cool behavior that dominates the action. The writing is very good, but it often risks being as cool and clever as the characters, and thus tends to put the reader off. This book raises the question of whether good writing alone is enough to make a novel worth reading.

Girard's Changing All Those Changes is a brief and rather thinly sketched novella about a young man's battle over whether or not to be vulnerable to his own experience and to other people. He rides around in a car a lot and listens to rock-and-roll records. There is some question here as to whether quoting a song lyric is enough to create a mood or embody a feeling in prose. For inclusive collections of contemporary fiction.—Norman Stock, Montclair State Coll. Lib., Upper Montclair, N.J.

Greenberg, Alvin. The Invention of the West.
Avon. 1976. 144p. pap. $2.95.

This is one of those literary experiments which know no middle ground: either we consent with delight to the author's terms, finding his book full of contemporary meaning, or, teeth on edge, we close it in disgust, muttering "What can anyone see in this recondite stuff?" It didn't wash for me. I had a difficult time intuiting what Greenberg is trying to accomplish. The book is as real as the dream you wake from in the middle of the night. We are out on the prairie most of the time with the first person narrator, following the exploits of a persiflate cowboy named Mac Lean, a figment of *some*body's imagination. (I'm doing my best.) Every cliché and cobwebby legend about the Old West is flung in our faces, but I get the uneasy feeling that I may be missing the point, that something is taking place before my eyes that I fail to perceive. It's that kind of book.—A. J. Anderson, Sch. of Library Science, Simmons Coll., Boston

FICTION

Herrick, William. Golcz.
Columbia Pub. Co. 1976. 162p. LC 76-1818. ISBN 0-914366-05-X. $7.95. F
A bizarre fellow, rollicking and lupine, Golcz moves through modern, violent, sex-obsessed America, taking on all comers in the name of love. Fleshless, though filled with energy, boyish Golcz, hola, falls in desperate love with a circus queen, Clotile Gray, the Silver Comet—the only woman who can save him from his bifurcated (gentle/vicious) persona. After a swarm of comic, multi-national, pop, buffooning episodes—a virtuoso display of sheer narrative energy—with help from Golcz's cousin Laura, as well as from a distinctively a-causal and rambling plot, our comic-book boy finds he has moved away from lost innocence toward innocence with love (but for how long?). A quick, funny, and quite randy book from the author of ¡Hermanos! (LJ 9/1/69).—Page Edwards, Jr., Haverhill P.L., Mass.

Herrin, Lamar. The Rio Loja Ringmaster.
Viking. Jan. 1977. 320p. $10. F
This interesting and sometimes confusing experimental first novel is a mélange of baseball-as-allergory, expatriate soul searching in the Mexican sun, and childhood reminiscences of a late forties St. Louis Cardinal fanship. Protagonist Dick Dixon goes to college, meets friends and marries, and almost a decade passes until he's a star relief pitcher with the Cincinnati Brewmasters, the National League champions. He returns from a winter spent in Mexico to help win the World Series against the Yankees, led by Marvis, Mantrell and Ox Skorum. Returning to Mexico to find himself, Dixon suffers through affairs more agonizingly than if he were facing the Yankees' batting order. In the end, he imagines a baseball game played with the people he's known best, or worst, in his life—the final allegory. Like a good third-base coach, the book holds your attention.—Craig H. Little, Orleans, Mass.

Kelly, John. The Wooden Wolf.
Dutton. 1976. 239p. LC 76-13476. ISBN 0-8415-0452-0. $9.95. F
In the last year of World War II, two night fighters, RAF Mosquitoes, fly deep into Germany to assassinate Hitler by destroying a train carrying him. This is the story of the crews' training and final mission. The first half of the novel is routine and barely interesting as we get to know the men and the machines who participate in this bizarre plot. Then for the final 100 pages the story becomes magically transformed into epic, a poetic description of the thousand-bomber night raid used to cover the assassins. This is an uneven book, containing some of the best-sustained scenes of aerial combat. Strongly recommended, and essential for aviation buffs.—R. T. Dillon, Dept. of English, Univ. of Colorado, Denver

Menaker, Daniel. Friends and Relations: a collection of stories.
Doubleday. 1976. LC 76-12053. ISBN 0-385-03896-8. $6.95. F
With the wit and precision of a New Yorker cartoon, each of these stories touches lightly upon the familiar tragedies of human existence. The protagonists, for the most part educated liberals, react with varying degrees of awkward embarrassment and finesse to bereavement, loneliness, senility, and other "inconveniences." Nicely written, with carefully abrupt endings, these stories should find a ready audience in many libraries.—Diane Haas, Howe Lib., Hanover, N.H.

Moorsom, Sasha. Lavender Burning.
Coward. 1976. 203p. LC 76-24901. ISBN 0-698-10761-6. $7.95. F
The poignant story of 30ish Hannah Straight, a repressed London housewife who, while vacationing with her two children in the South of France, meets Marc, an amoral young sculptor. Their short-lived affair that summer results in Hannah's new awareness of self and others. It's difficult to write what is most impressive about this novel. Moorsom's characters—ranging from Hannah's repressive, hypocritical husband; to an aged French lesbian; to Molly, a wanton teenager—are extraordinary. The moving plot is laced with tragedy and surprise. The vivid and varied settings include Switzerland, as well as Southern France and London. Readers will long remember Hannah's summer.—Carol K. Carey, formerly with Dept. of Film, Museum of Modern Art, New York

Paul, Barbara. Devil's Fire, Love's Revenge.
St. Martin's. 1976. 232p. LC 76-13048. $7.95. F
Will Delia Gilmore, "capable of enormous passion," choose her childhood sweetheart, Matthew Shaw, or sensuous Aaron Hart, the disinherited grandson of Sir Harry, Halewood Hall's late owner? And what causes the baneful influence of Halewood Hall? The story, told in breathless prose, takes many twists designed to keep Delia and Aaron apart until the curse is laid to rest and the lovers are united at last. There are some surprisingly sexy touches for a standard Gothic set in 1848; Sir Harry's widow is a former prostitute with an illegitimate son, and Delia's cousin Melissa is pregnant out of wedlock.—Madeline G. Schulman, formerly with Monmouth County Lib., Freehold, N.J.

Pilcher, Rosamunde. Under Gemini.
St. Martin's. 1976. 282p. LC 72-26192. $8.95. F
Identical twin sisters meet for the first time in a London restaurant. Flora, raised by her scholarly father, is good; Rose, brought up by a jet-set mother, is not so good. The next day, Rose abandons her sister and flys off to a lover in Greece. Rose's ex-fiancé convinces Flora to travel to Scotland to deceive his dying grandmother. Between sickroom visits (Granny rallies), Flora fights off Rose's married ex-lover, discovers unpleasant facts about her amoral twin, and falls in love with an eligible

RAIDER'S MOON
by Alexander Knox

"Knox's third novel is excellent entertainment and authentic history, a fine followup to his earlier thrillers, Night of the White Bear and The Enemy I Kill."—Publishers Weekly (10/11/76) 304 pp.
ISBN: 312-66255-6 $8.95

St. Martin's Press
175 Fifth Avenue
New York 10010

"Recommended"
—LIBRARY JOURNAL

THE CRASH OF '79
a novel by PAUL ERDMAN

"Bill Hitchcock, a retired banker, is employed by the Saudi Arabians as a financial advisor, [because] the Saudis feel they have not been treated correctly by world bankers . . . In the process, he observes first hand the events of 1979 that lead to war in the Middle East and the crash of Western economies . . . underlying all of the excitement and those Byzantine complications he uses so well, Erdman has written a deadly serious book and his best."
—Library Journal

ISBN: 0-671-22365-8
LC: 76-22150
$8.95

SIMON AND SCHUSTER
630 Fifth Ave.
New York 10020

doctor. A diverting, complicated romance, filled with a wealth of characters ranging from goody-two-shoes to ne'er-do-wells. A perfect book to snuggle up with on a winter night.—Carol K. Carey, formerly with Dept. of Film, Museum of Modern Art, New York

Plaidy, Jean. The Captive of Kensington Palace.
Putnam. 1976. 288p. bibliog. LC 76-27122. ISBN 0-399-11851-9. $8.95. F
Those who await Plaidy's historical novels will find this portrayal of Queen Victoria's childhood readable but less than captivating. Victoria's mother and her mother's adviser impose a strictly disciplined, reclusive upbringing upon Victoria, with hopes of controlling the future queen should she reach the throne before adulthood. The child Victoria fails to function as the vibrant, strong figure that is usually a trademark of Plaidy's fictional biographies. This is the first of a series.—Norma Allenbach, Buffalo & Erie County P.L., N.Y.

Rosen, Charles. A Mile Above the Rim.
Arbor House, dist. by Dutton. 1976. LC 76-8640. ISBN 0-87795-137-3. $8.95. F
The world of professional basketball in the 1980–1981 season is explored by focusing on a jaded sports writer, a coach, a few players, and a few games. The sports writer wants a scoop; Coach Wayne Smalley wants recognition; player Silky Sims wants money and women; player Dave Brooks wants a cozy family life away from the rat race; and the other players want anything they can get. Street language is liberally threaded through jerky descriptions of various games, and a couple of sex scenes are tossed in among the players' off-the-court activities.—Robert H. Donahugh, Youngstown P.L., Ohio

Savory, Teo. A Clutch of Fables.
Unicorn, Greensboro. 1976. 87p. $10. F
These 20 modern fables by poet, novelist, and translator Teo Savory were written over the past 18 years and have appeared previously in many literary magazines. A number of familiar fables are retold here with an academic setting. Aside from ringing with clever brightness, the tales convey a firm, if sometimes tedious, moral and radiate a sort of kindly wisdom that is not unappealing.—Page Edwards, Jr., Haverhill P.L., Mass.

Schwartz, Howard, ed. Imperial Messages: one hundred modern parables.
Bard: Avon. 1976. 320p. pap. $2.25. F
More akin to dream, fantasy, or fairy tale than to the teaching stories of the New Testament, modern parables deal with the surreal and the supernatural in plot, setting, and characterization, man's relationship to his own psyche always being a predominant theme. This valuable collection presents the great range and diversity of the parable form (Kafka, Borges, W. S. Mervin, Dostoevsky, Lagerkvist are among those included). It should enjoy a wide audience.—Peter Basofin, Maharishi International Univ. Lib., Fairfield, Iowa

Slavitt, David R. King of Hearts.
Arbor House, dist. by Dutton. 1976. 239p. LC 76-029228. ISBN 0-87795-153-5. $8.95. F
By the end of 1968 more than 100 heart transplantations had been performed, though none in Catholic Boston. The committee on experimentation of Commonwealth Hospital was well aware of rejection dangers as well as the legal and religious questions accompanying donations of beating hearts. This, then, is why Dr. Pastor, chief of surgery, covertly assembles a band of unlikely conspirators, among them, a neurologist, internist, urologist. Their scheme—to attempt a heart transplant under circumstances seemingly exigent. In Slavitt's tale of intrigue, doctors, donors, recipients, lawyers, and insurance men all play believable roles. Character motivations are provocative but secondary to the plotting and unfolding of the conspiracy itself. Fine medical fiction.—Marion Hanscom, SUNY at Binghamton Lib.

Stallworth, Anne Nall. Where the Bright Lights Shine.
Vanguard. 1976. 336p. $8.95. F
Where the Bright Lights Shine begins in 1939 and spans a period of about eight years in the life and disintegration of a Southern family. The overall plot is predictable; particulars are often melodramatic. There are no surprises, but there are shocks. It is not a happy novel; the central figures, Snow and Callie Berryhill and their middle daughter, Lee Rose, are destructive of themselves and of others. There are no villains in the story; however, the author portrays them all as victims. All of the family are what they are; they had no choices. The reader is led to sympathize with even such a disagreeable character as Snow who, toward the (somewhat Gothic) end of the novel thinks of himself: "When he was a small boy pulling at his mother's tit, God was watching him chuckling over what awaited him . . . . He had only been marking time, all the days of his life were leading him to this." Stallworth's ability to portray every character, however ugly, with understanding, recommends her novel.—Joan K. Marshall, Brooklyn Coll. Lib.

Stewart, Stanley. The King James Version.
Random. Jan. 1977. 414p. $8.95. F
Titled with an ironic allusion to the profane rather than sacred life of King James I and his court in a time of political and religious turmoil, this tale is a complex web of crossed purposes, endless intrigue, and personal ambition. No one is innocent and few of the central characters evoke much sympathy. The story's dominant quality is its convincingly realistic sense of human failures in a bawdy and hectic age. But, despite an array of passions leading as far as murder, the net effect is depressingly inconsequential.—Karen Horny, Northwestern Univ. Lib., Evanston, Ill.

Thum, Marcella. Abbey Court.
Doubleday. 1976. 282p. LC 76-3136. ISBN 0-385-12040-0. $7.95. F
Thum uses Ireland's tense 1880's as the backdrop for an absorbing Gothic novel. Nouveau riche American Meg O'Brien travels to Ireland to visit her brother who has married into the aristocratic, yet impoverished Fletcher family. She arrives at Abbey Court only to be confronted with a brutal murder. As Meg begins to solve the murder, she uncovers a tale of hatred, greed, and illegitimacy that goes back to the days when her mother was a servant at the court. Exciting fare for the more demanding Gothic reader.—Barbara J. Mitchell, Medford P.L., Mass.

Vernon, Kay R. The Phantom of Fonthill Park.
Doubleday. Dec. 1976. ISBN 0-385-13284-1. $5.95. F
When Isobel Carstairs and her mother ask Aunt Toddy if her niece Susan can come and stay at Fonthill Park to do some special sewing, Aunt Toddy agrees. The relationship between Susan and the Carstairs becomes more than just business, however. And what's more, artist Paul Lestrange professes love for Susan, who loves Sir Charles Tempest, Isobel's guardian and owner of Fonthill Park. There's more, of course. Any Gothic aficionado will discover the answers to many questions in advance, but they're wrapped up neatly at the end. Not first-rate, but definitely acceptable.—Phyllis Gallo, Way P.L., Perrysburg, Ohio

Wibberley, Anna. Were This Wild Thing Wedded.
St. Martin's. 1976. 239p. $7.95. F
Caroline has grown up thinking herself a penniless orphan entirely dependent on her uncle's generosity. He supports her, presents her to 1860 London society, and provides the dowry which allows her to make the match of the season. When she discovers that the uncle has done all this out of her own fortune she breaks the engagement, runs away from home, and becomes involved in a series of scrapes and adventures in London. Throughout, Caroline displays a sense of self and social consciousness unusual for a young woman of the period. And, in the end, she is rewarded with the love of a man able to match her qualities. The numerous devotees of romantic novels will enjoy this one.—Nina Kahn Fenenbock, formerly with City-County Lib., Glasgow, Mont.

Science Fiction

Anderson, Poul. Mirkheim.
Berkley, dist. by Putnam. Dec. 1976. 235p. ISBN 0-399-11868-3. $7.95.
Pirates of interstellar commerce plunder and pillage whole planets, the old imperial order may or may not crumble, the rich fight the poor, and epic battles and cosmic skulduggery may or may not plunge the galaxy into darkness. Space opera, yes, but space opera at its best. This is the conclusion of Anderson's future history series. Essential for libraries that have the rest.—Thomas R. Bell, Univ. of Wisconsin-Milwaukee

Busby, F. M. The Long View.
Putnam. Dec. 1976. 248p. $8.95. F
This sequel to Rissa Kerguelen (LJ 10/15/76) continues the saga of Rissa, Tregare the Pirate, and their odd gang of cohorts as they build a fighting space fleet and return from the far side of the Galaxy to free Earth from a terrible, all-encompassing dictatorship. It opens in mid-battle, exactly where the earlier volume ended. Busby continues the awkward, stilted dialogues which are apparently intended to simulate futuristic, interplanetary speech; however, on the whole, The Long View is livelier, more entertaining and more exciting than the almost unreadable Rissa Kerguelen. Unfortunately, it is so closely tied up to the events in the first book that it will make absolutely no sense to anyone who has not read the first. Even the earlier reader will be hard-pressed to recall the myriad of names and trivialities that crop up again here. For hard-core Busby fanatics only.—Marcia R. Hoffman, Woodbridge P.L., Colonia, N.J.

Gotlieb, Phyllis. O Master Caliban!
Harper. 1976. 244p. LC 76-5540. ISBN 0-06-011621-8. $8.95. F
The theme is an old one: machines in revolt against man. On Barrazan V, genetic engineer Edvald Dahlgren's machines (called ergs) have rebelled, murdered most of the inhabitants and, after years of experimentation, decided to conquer the universe. Controlled by a malevolent Erg-mother, they have constructed a Dahlgren android through which they hope to deceive off-world peoples. Dahlgren, his android, his four-armed son, a few mutated animals, and five juvenile delinquents whose spacecraft crashed on the planet, oppose the ergs. Except for a 10-year-old possessing psi-power with machines, the characters, including the ergs, are pathetically human. Not recommended, although the novel sustains a good level of suspense despite a disjointed story line and stilted dialogue.—Jerry L. Parsons, Univ. of Illinois Lib. at Urbana-Champaign

Robinson, Spider. Telempath.
Putnam. Dec. 1976. 223p. LC 76-20495. ISBN 0-399-11796-2. $7.95. F
Imagine what would befall the human race if its sense of smell were suddenly increased by a factor of 100 thousand: The trauma of sensory overload, especially for those living in pollution-drenched cities, would drive most of us into irreversible catatonia. The survivors would flee to the countryside and would group into opposing camps of those wishing to rebuild a rational technological society and those wanting to eliminate all vestiges of the agents responsible for mankind's near-extermination. Robinson has molded quite an imaginative, well-plotted story around this framework, as he follows the ever-expanding quest of one Isham Stone for the man responsible for civilization's demise; for a means of communication with the Muskies, an ectoplasmic race that formerly shared the biosphere with humans and now is at war with them; and for the true center of his own being. Unfortunately, the novel is marred by unveiled moralizing and soul-searching, and Robinson has a tendency to use 12 words when five will do; but he weaves a good enough tale to counterbalance his excesses and make this a worthwhile purchase.—Carey A. Horwitz, formerly with "Library Journal"

Wallace, Ian. The World Asunder.
DAW, dist. by NAL. 1976. 256p. pap. $1.50. F
Detective-Inspector Diodoro Horse and psychologist Lilith Vogel see their respective lovers vanish while sharing a highly imaginative hallucination. As they trace the origins of this mysterious event, they are teletransported from 1952 to 2002 and are introduced to a "world asunder," when the ultimate destruction of the Earth by the REM (Remote Earth Mobility) is imminent. A supranational agency, the RP fleet, keeps peace on the planet but a mysterious holy man, Guru Kali, seems bent on escalating the dangerous political situation. The author prefers to label his work science fantasy. It combines the elements of detective mystery, romance, and diplomatic intrigue, but is mostly morality play with its concern for the struggle between the forces of good and evil. Wallace's writing is wordy and self-conscious and while the plot is not original, the characters are intriguing and the author's sincerity in dealing with contemporary themes is apparent.—Paula J. Weiner, Leland R. Weaver Lib., Los Angeles County P.L. System

If you don't have time to read 6,000 books a year...

try reading LIBRARY JOURNAL instead.

If you're like most librarians, you haven't a spare moment in the day.

How, then, can you possibly keep up with the flood of new titles? How can you tell which to order and which to pass up? A good percentage of America's librarians have solved this problem by reading and using LIBRARY JOURNAL regularly.

For the last century, LJ has been helping librarians solve day-to-day problems . . . adding to their free time — and their self-confidence.

During the course of the year, LIBRARY JOURNAL reviews approximately 6,000 books — covering the complete range of fiction and non-fiction. Each review is written and signed by a specialist. These reviews help librarians invest every book dollar wisely — no matter what the size of their budget.

In addition to reviews, LJ offers articles on important, timely topics . . . previews of important new titles . . . recommended professional reading . . . news of people, events, new products and services in the field . . . and much more.

EXTRA BONUSES: three Seasonal Announcement Numbers . . . three "First Novelists" sections . . . and special issues on forthcoming reprints; paperbacks; scientific, technical, medical, and business books . . . Convention issues . . . the Annual Purchasing Guide . . . and other special issues.

To start your subscription to LIBRARY JOURNAL — the best friend a librarian ever had — use the handy coupon below.

LIBRARY JOURNAL 12/15
1180 Ave. of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10036

YES, please enter a one year subscription to LIBRARY JOURNAL at $19.00 as indicated:

(LJ is issued twice a month, September through June, monthly in July and August. For subscriptions in Canada, Pan American Postal Union, and Spain, add $2.00 postage. Elsewhere, add $3.00.)

☐ Payment enclosed ☐ Bill me ☐ Bill school, library, or org.

Name_____
Address_____
City_____ State_____ Zip_____
Title or position_____
Kind of library
(public, college, special, etc.)_____

Published by
R. R. BOWKER COMPANY

INDEX: BOOK REVIEWS & PROFESSIONAL READING

Aaron, E., 1518
Abel, I. W., 2479
Abernethy, P. L., 2048
Abraham Lincoln, the Gettysburg Address and American constitutionalism, 1629
Abrams, P., 1870
Academic who's who, 1975-1976, 2268
Acerrano, A. J., 2048
Ackerman, D., 2493
Adam, M., 1639
Adamolekun, L., 2069
Adams, H., 2568
Adams, J., 2081
Adams, J. P., 1544
Adelman, B., 1873
Adler, R., 1877
Adler, W., 1878
Adventures of Jonathan Corncob, 2176
Agnew, S. T., 1553
Ahern, D. D., 2274
Aiken, G. D., 1641
Aitken, H. G., 1627
Akin, W. E., 2482
Albanese, C. L., 2381
Alberti, R., 2564
Aldiss, B. W., 1557
Alexander, G., 1518
Alexander, H. E., 2378
Alexander, S., 2275
Alfonsi, F., 1511
Alldritt, K., 1878
Allen, C. G., 2461
Allen, E., 1629
Allen, P., 1795
Alley, R., 2509
Alston, W., 1651
Alvarez, F. C., 2169
Alverson, D., 2595
Amacher, R. C., 2504
Ambuter, C., 1518
American Film Institute catalog of motion pictures, 1511
American Library Association, 2237
American personality, 2270
America's working women, 2276
Anderman, N., 2264
Andersen, Ian, 2190
Andersen, Isabelle, 2510
Anderson, C. G., 2363
Anderson, E. R., 1758
Anderson, Jane, 2063
Anderson, Jean, 1634
Anderson, Jessica, 2193
Anderson, Paul, 2598
Anderson, Perry, 2581
Anderson, R. D., 1524
Andersson, T. M., 1635
Anderton, D. A., 1540
Andrade, V., 1769
Andrews, B., 2481
Andrews, J., 2191
Angelou, M., 1763
Angelucci, E., 2073
Anthology of contemporary Chinese literature: Taiwan, 1949-1974, 1856
Anthony, G., 2064
Antin, D., 2377
Aplon, R., 1780
Appignanesi, L., 1654
Apple, M., 2193
Appleman, P., 2180
Appleton, S., 2581
Aranda, F., 1552
Arble, M., 2047
Arghezi, T., 1640
Arica Institute, 2588
Arieti, S., 1642
Arlen, M. J., 2263
Armes, J. J., 2165
Armes, R., 1655
Armstrong, C. J., 1621
Armstrong, J., 2577
Arneil, S., 2505
Arnett, C., 2494
Arpin, G. Q., 1614
Arroyo, S., 1538
Artaud, A., 2064
Ash, B., 2557
Ashe, R., 2514
Ashley, J. A., 1542
Ashley, S., 2088
Asimov, A., 2089
Asplund, U., 1794
Assessing linguistic arguments, 2373
Association for Educational Communications and Technology, 2152
Athanassakis, A. N., 2489
Atkins, T. R., 1794
Atlas of early American history, 2357
Atwood, M., 1796
Auerbach, S., 1626
Aulicino, A., 2372
Axelrod, R., 1535
Axon, G. V., 2568
Axton, D., 2305

Babb, L. L., 1530
Babcock, D. E., 1782
Bachrack, S. D., 1851
Bacon, E., 2568
Badcock, C. R., 2589
Baddeley, A. D., 2585
Bader, B., 2052
Baeckler, V., 2151
Baer, J., 2287
Bagdikian, B. H., 1649
Bahr, R., 2185
Bailey, K. P., 1519
Bailey, P., 1763
Bailey, T. A., 2171
Baird, E., 1791
Baker, C., 1530
Baker, C. J., 2069
Baker, I., 1560
Baker, Liva, 1628
Baker, Lucinda, 1655
Balio, T., 1552
Ball, G., 1536
Ball, J., 1560
Ballard, J., 1553
Baly, D., 2498
Bane, M. J., 2386
Baraheni, R., 1534
Barber, N., 1769
Barghoorn, F. C., 1613
Barker, E., 1525
Barmash, I., 1850
Barnes, C. J., 1531
Barnes, K., 2581
Barnett, U., 2578
Barnhouse, R. T., 1643
Baron, H., 2264
Barracato, J., 1790
Barrett, M., 1553
Barrett, S., 2501
Barron, N., 2264
Barsam, R. M., 2508
Barthel, J., 2590
Barthelme, D., 2596
Barzun, J., 2560
Baseball century., 1547
Baskett, E. E., 1650
Bass, H. L., 2591
Bass, J., 1613
Bassan, F., 1758
Basset, B., S. J., 1643
Bates, F., 2078
Batterberry, A., 1856
Batty, D., 2152
Bauer, W., 2482
Baumbach, J., 1878
Baumgardner, P., 2497
Baumgartel, W., 2165
Bavousett, G. H., 2368
Bax, M., 2596
Baxter, J., 1794
Bayard, T., 1760
Bayer, W., 1795
Bayley, J., 1776
Beachey, R. W., 2568
Beale, H. P., 1512
Bear, F., 2592
Bear, R., 2389
Beard, E., 2069
Beattie, A., 2300
Beaubois, H., 1645
Beaudouin, J. T., 2468
Beck, J. H., 1517
Beckett, J. C., 2276
Beekman, E. M., 2596
Beetz, K. H., 2264
Beggar's opera, 2176
Behrman, D., 2186
Bell, G., 2495
Bell, J. B., 2482
Bell, T. H., 2368
Bellamy, D., 2296
Bellow, S., 2356
Belotti, E. G., 2497
Bendiner, E., 2276
Benedictus, D., 2193
Bengis, I., 2596
Bengtsson, H., 2389
Benjamin, P. S., 1629
Bennett, H., 2082
Bennett, Jean, 2494
Bennett, Jonathan, 1635
Bennett, N., 2568
Benning, L. E., 1867
Ben-Sasson, H. H., 2482
Benstock, B., 2374
Benston, K. W., 2064
Bentinck-Smith, W., 2353
Berchen, W., 2575
Berger, H. L., 2578
Berger, J. J., 2356
Berglund, B., 2294
Bergmann, M. S., 1642
Berkovits, E., 1539
Berloquin, P., 2390
Berman, S., 1879
Bermant, C., 1879
Berns, W., 2378
Bernstein, A., 2297
Bernstein, M., 1644
Berry, B. M., 2064
Bersani, L., 1776
Bester, A., 1800
Bethge, E., 1783
Better Homes & Gardens Eds, 2372
Bialer, Y. L., 2381
Bialostocki, J., 2051
Bibb, P., 1627
Bibliographic guide to business and economics, 2557
Bibliographic guide to government publications, 2161
Bickham, J. M., 2393
Biegeleisen, J. I., 2472
Bier, J., 1879
Biggle, L., 2196
Billias, G. A., 1621
Binder, V., 2585
Bingham, C., 1629
Bin Gorion, M. J., 2294
Binion, R., 2171
Biology and the future of man, 2383
Bird, J., 2585
Birkos, A. S., 1614
Bisher, F., 1873
Bishop, A., 1619
Bishop, J., 1770
Black, D. V., 2238
Black's medical dictionary, 2560
Blackstone, H., 2390
Bladel, R., 1531
Blair, J. M., 2467
Balir, L., 1643
Balir, P. H., 2483
Blaisdell, T. C., 2180
Blank, J. P., 2165
Bledstein, B. J., 2368
Blinderman, A., 1524
Bliss, E. C., 1626
Bliven, B., 2181
Block, E. B., 1546
Blodgett, R. E., 1845
Bloom, B. S., 1769
Bloomfield, H. H., 1861
Blue, L., 2499
Blumberg, S. A., 1519
Bode, J., 2182
Bodeen, D., 1794
Bodelsen, A., 2193
Bodkin, C., 2562
Bogin, M., 1635
Boland, B., 1880
Böll, H., 2300
Bolster, J., 2502
Bombeck, E., 2373
Bonallack, B., 2084
Bonnefoy, Y., 2180
Book review digest: author/title index, 1905-1974, 1758
Borland, H., 2165, 2503
Borneman, E., 2585
Bornstein, G., 2282, 2578
Bosmajian, H., 2504
Bouissac, P., 2191
Boulding, E., 2488
Bourjaily, V., 1880
Bowen, L., 2290
Bower, S. A., 1864
Bowers, D. G., 1626
Bowle, J., 2054
Bowles, J., 2170
Boyce, J., 2472
Boyd, E. F., 1621
Brace, G. W., 2054
Bracken, P., 2372
Brackin, I., 2079
Brackman, A. C., 2174
Bradbury, R., 1885
Bradbury, W., 1663
Bradshaw-Smith, G., 1619
Brain, R., 2592
Brandau, R., 2563
Brander, M., 1629
Brann, D. R., 1762
Brassaï, 2476
Braun, M., 1795
Brautigan, R., 1780, 2084
Brayman, H., 2181
Brazelton, T. B., 1646
Breach, I., 2296
Brecher, J., 2496
Breslin, C., 1870
Brett, S., 2088
Brewster, B. J., 2553
Bricklin, M., 2557
Brickner, R. P., 1764
Bridge, R., 1547
Briggs, K., 2468
Briggs, W., 1774
British music yearbook, 2164
Brock, L., 1874
Broderick, R. C., 2264
Brogger, S., 1544
Brokaw, K., 2569
Brokefield, T., 2506
Brolin, B. C., 1846
Brondfield, J., 2390
Bronk, W., 2285
Brook, D., 2075
Brooks, Paul, 1770
Brooks, Peter, 1857
Brothers, M. J., 2588
Brower, K., 1543
Brown, A. G., 1717
Brown, C., 1796
Brown, C. S., 2264
Brown, E. G., 1536
Brown, H., 2159
Brown, J. M., 1843
Brown, L., 2588
Brown, P. L., 2174, 2558
Brown, R. D., 2060
Brown, R. L., 2392
Brown, R. M., 2510
Brown, S. H., 1764
Brown, V., 1787, 2076
Browne, H., 2169
Bruce, A. P. C., 1512
Brucker, R. W., 2372
Brunhouse, R. L., 2054
Brunner, M. A., 1518
Bruyere, C., 1544
Bryan, L., 1774
Buchanan, B., 1606
Buchwald, A., 2064
Buchwald, V. F., 2048
Buckley, W. F., 2165
Burger, S. G., 2503
Burgess, A., 1656, 2494
Burgess, C. F., 1776
Burke, J., 1761
Burl, A., 1851
Burns, G., 2166
Burns, R., 1522
Burrell, L. F., 2298
Burri, A., 1516
Burrows, L. M., 1775
Burton, D. H., 1630
Burton, R., 2266
Busby, F. M., 2196, 2599
Bush, R., 2177
Business people in the news, 2266
Butcher, J. N., 1537
Butcher, R. D., 1869
Buteau, J. D., 2558
Butler, H., 1646
Butler, P., 1864
Bylinsky, G., 1522

Caddy, E., 1539
Cady, J. F., 1770
Caffrey, K., 1630
Cahill, S., 1621
Cain, J. M., 1664
Calabrese, A., 2287
Calde, M. A., 1661
Calder, A., 1776
Calder, J., 1636
Caldwell, E., 2166
Caldwell, L. K., 1546
Camejo, P., 2569
Campbell, A. S., 2385
Campbell, C. S., 1525
Campbell, K. G., 1651
Campbell, Ramsey, 2304
Campbell, Robert, 2481
Camus, A., 2374
Cannons' bibliography of library economy, 1876-1920: an author index, 2152
Cant, G., 2384
Canzoneri, R., 2363
Capps, D., 2266
Caras, R. A., 2500
Cardenal, E., 1784
Cardozo, A. R., 1788
Carney, A., 2589
Carr, P., 1880
Carrillo, L. W., 2568
Carrington, L., 1656
Carroll, J., 1561
Carroll, W., 2374
Carson, R. B., 2293
Carson, R. F., 1652
Carter, E. C., 2059
Carter, F., 2363
Carver, M., 2054
Cary, J., 1776
Casada, J. A., 1512
Casey, B., 1654
Casey, T. J., 2374
Casey, W. J., 1852
Cass, Z., 2193
Cassady, C., 1848
Castleman, H., 2284
Caudill, H. M., 2386
Caughey, J., 2569
Cave, R., 1501
Caves, R. E., 2365
CB Magazine Staff, 1523
Chadwick, B., 2358
Chalfont, A., 2271
Chalmers, I., 2175
Chamberlin, W., 2472
Chan, F. G., 2483
Chancellor, J., 2477
Chang, F. M., 2179
Chapman, A. H., 1622
Chapman, M., 1874
Charyn, J., 1801
Chase, A., 2467
Chase, E. T., 2298
Chase, I., 2393
Cheney, M., 1790
Cheney, W. G., 1530
Chernev, I., 1652
Chesler, P., 1768
Chesneaux, J., 2483
Chew, P., 2288
Chill, D. S., 2566
Chilton's CB handbook, 1627
Christensen, J. I., 2562
Christian, J. I., 2291
Christie, A., 1661
Christopher, M., 2363
Chukovskaya, L., 1880
Churchill, P., 2390
Ciano, E. M., 2564
Cipolla, C. M., 1770
Clancy, J., 2489
Clareson, T. D., 2489
Clark, Dick, 2066
Clark, Douglas, 1664
Clark, E., 1770
Clark, T., 1547
Clarke, C. G., 1630
Clarke, M., 2594
Claude, R. P., 1790
Claudia, S., 1663
Clausewitz, C., 1852
Clem, R., 1800
Clemens, S. L., 2578
Cliff, T., 2477
Cline, L., 2084
Cline, R. S., 2583
Cline, W. R., 2274
Clissmann, A., 2282
Clogg, R., 1630
Cloudsley-Thompson, J., 2296
Clow, B., 1518
Clum, J. M., 2177
Cluysenaar, A., 1531
Coakley, R. W., 1615
Cochrane, W. W., 1786
Cockerill, A. W., 2054
Coffman, V., 2393
Cogley, J., 2477
Cogniat, R., 1516
Cohen, M., 1880
Cole, B., 1516
Cole, J., 2263
Coleman, E., 2191
Coleman, V., 2186
Colen, B. D., 2292
Colledge, M. A., 2164
Collins, C. H., 1847
Collins, M., 2089
Comfort, A., 2358
Committee for a New England Bibliography, 2161
Comprehensive index to English-language little magazines, 2358

ISSUE	PAGINATION
JULY	1501–1561
AUGUST	1606–1664
SEPTEMBER 1	1717–1803
SEPTEMBER 15	1838–1885
OCTOBER 1	2020–2089
OCTOBER 15	2151–2197
NOVEMBER 1	2237–2306
NOVEMBER 15	2352–2396
DECEMBER 1	2461–2516
DECEMBER 15	2553–2604

Concise Oxford dictionary of current English, 2161
Condon, K., 2386
Conneau, T., 2054
Conner, J. M., 1845
Consumer Guide Eds., 1523
Continuing education for library staffs in the Southwest, 1501
Cook, E. M., 1630
Cook, S. J., 1636
Cooke, M. G., 2282
Cookson, C., 1553
Cooper, H. S., 2499
Coppa, F. J., 2276
Copper, A., 2184
Cordella, B. S., 1620
Cormier, R., 2374
Corwin, E. S., 2181
Coser, L. A., 1648
Coskey, E., 2474
Cotham, P. C., 2072
Cottam, R. W., 2496
Cottle, T. J., 1769, 2159
Country Beautiful eds., 2569
Cox, A. M., 2181
Coxe, L., 2490
Cowan, C. D., 1525
Cowles, J., 1868
Cox, A., 1872
Cox, B., 2084
Cox, M., 2079
Cox, O. C., 1788
Crabb, C. V., 1781
Crabbe, B., 2186
Craft of science fiction, 1636
Craib, I., 1779
Crandall, C., 2499
Crankshaw, E., 2060
Crawford, L., 1880
Crawford, P., 1775
Creasey, J., 1803
Creel, H. L., 1775
Creeley, R., 1531, 2286
Creeth, E., 2490
Crisp, N. J., 1801
Critical evaluation of African literature, 2064
Critchlow, K., 2560
Croghan, A., 2353
Cromie, A., 2174
Crookenden, N., 1630
Crosby, J., 1881
Crosland, M., 2578
Cross, A., 1662
Cross, F. M., 1774
Crossan, J. D., 1865
Crowley, J., 2196
Crowther, B., 2594
Crozier, B., 1848
Crume, V., 2516
Crump, R. W., 1615
Cuban, L., 2059
Culligan, M. J., 1646
Cullum, E., 1786
Cummings, E. E., 2494
Cummings, P., 2268
Cummins, C. L., 2293
Cummins, G., 2592
Curley, D., 1553
Curley, D. N., 2164
Curley, T. M., 2578
Currie, H. W., 1627
Curry, R. A., 1857
Curtis, W., 2570
Cussler, C., 1881
Cuthbertson, T., 1874

Dabney, V., 2368
Dale, D., 2553
Dale, P., 1640
Dam, K. W., 1757
Dangerfield, G., 1525
Daniels, V., 1782
Danielson, M. N., 1757
Darcy, C., 1554, 1796
Darden, A., 2506
Dart, J., 1784
Darvis, C., 1843
Dash, S., 2379
David, A., 2282
Davidson, B., 2079
Davidson, L., 1796
Davidson, M., 1862
Davin, D., 1509
Davis, C., 1644
Davis, D. S., 1561
Davis, J. G., 2510
Davis, K. C., 1650
Davis, R. P., 1554
Davis, W. H., 1872
Dawkins, R., 2500
Dawson, F., 1554
Day, D., 2596
Day, H., 1512
Day, J., 1543
Dayan, M., 2363
Dayney, R., 2592
Dayton, D. W., 1540
Dean, A. V., 1762
Dean, W. D., 1784
Debo, A., 2477
De Breffny, B., 1619
Debussy, C., 2376
DeConde, A., 2171
Deford, F., 1881
De Ford, M. A., 2164
De Groot, R. A., 2063
Deighton, L., 1801
Delupis, I., 1512
De Marco, T., 1542
De Mare, G., 1768
Demers, R. M., 2084
Deming, R., 2388
Denes, M., 2356
Denham, H. M., 1634
DeNicolas, A. T., 1533
Dennys, R., 2470
Dent, E. J., 2376
Denton, C., 2300
Denton, J. A., 2271
Depel, J., 1652
de Romilly, J., 1533
DeRosis, H., 2288
Descargues, P., 2268
Despert, J. L., 1537
Des Pres, T., 1861
Dettelbach, C. G., 1636
Detwiler, D. S., 2368
Deuchler, F., 2560
DeVilliers, G., 1764
DeVries, J., 2570
DeVries, L., 1516
DeVylder, S., 1852
Dewdney, J. C., 2567
Dexter, C., 1559
Diagram Group, 1788, 2390
DiCerto, J. J., 2189
Dick, N. C., 1647
Dickerson, N., 2166
Dickey, G., 2592
Dickey, J., 1862
Dickinson, P. A., 2590
Dickson, G. R., 1557
Dictionary of scientific biography: vol. 14, 1845
Dillard, J. L., 1776
Dillard, R. H., 1794
Dingman, R., 2276
Dinnerstein, D., 2585
Directory of American fiction writers, 1976 edition, 1615
Directory of European associations, Pt. 1, 2268
Directory of newspaper libraries in the U.S. and Canada, 2238
Directory of Saskatchewan Libraries, 1717
Disch, T. M., 2395
Dixon, B., 1644
Dixon, P., 1622
Dobler, B., 2301
Dobson, R. B., 1531
Dodge, E. S., 2570
Dodson, D. B., 1554
Dogo, G., 2175
Doig, D., 1865
Dolby, W., 2490
Dolce, P. C., 1641, 2590
Dolensek, E. P., 2558
Dolowich, M., 1627
Dominic, R. B., 2514
Donaho, M. W., 2367
Donahoe, J. J., 1539
Donaldson, K., 1546
Dornberg, J., 1509
Dossick, J. J., 2162
Doubleday, N. F., 2490
Douglas, J. S., 2588
Downing, W., 1662
Dowling, C., 1848
Downs, R. C., 1796
Doyle, M., 2479
Doyle, P. A., 2470
Draznin, Y., 2503
Driskell, D., 2472
Droscher, V. B., 2076
Drucker, P. F., 1768
Drummond, M., 2298
Drury, A., 1554
Drutman, I., 2081
Duff, D., 1630
Duffy, J., 2171
Duggan, W. R., 2181
Dumas, F., 2575
Dumas, H., 1656
Dunbar, M., 1620
Duncan, D. D., 2271
Duncan, W., 2063
Dunham, V., 1857
Dunlop, J. B., 2369
Dunne, C., 1530, 1544
Dupré, C., 1622
DuPre, P., 1652
Durden-Smith, J., 2076
Durey, P., 2461
Durk, D., 2556
Durrell, J., 2166
Durst, S. J., 1512
Dworkin, A., 1757
Dwyer-Joyce, A., 1554
Dyer, C., 1856, 2175
Dygert, J. H., 2275

Eagleton, T., 2490
Easton, M., 2051
Eberhart, M., 2596
Eberhart, R., 2582
Eddy, P., 2500
Edie, J. M., 1534
Edmonds, I. G., 2583
Eds. of Esquire, 1510
Edson, R., 2582
Edwards, R. D., 1525
Edwards, R. M., 2237
Eells, G., 2594
Effinger, G. A., 2304
Egan, F., 2564
Egami, S., 2505
Ehrenburg, I., 2393
Ehrlichman, J., 1555
Eichelberger, C. L., 1615
Eichenberg, F., 2362
Eklund, G., 1885
El-Ad, A., 2055
Elderfield, J., 1618
Elkin, S., 1555
Ellerbeck, R., 1554
Elliott, D. B., 1867
Elliott, L., 2266
Ellsworth, D. J., 2352
Elman, R., 2506
Elsom, J., 2299
Ely, J. W., 1781
Elzinga, K. G., 2190
Emergy, N., 1622
Emerson, G., 2570
Emerson, W. K., 2558
Emmerson, D. K., 2182
Encylcopedia of comic book heroes, 1615, 2470
Ende, S. A., 2578
Engel, F., 2570
Engel, L., 1794
Engel, M., 1555
Engle, P., 2483
English art today, 1960-76, 2472
Enzensberger, H. M., 2377
Epstein, L., 2084
Epstein, W., 2182
Erdman, P., 2393
Erikson, J. M., 2070
Erikson, K. T., 2503
Ertz, S., 2394
Eskenazi, G., 2592
Esler, A., 1656
Estes, W. M., 2193
Evans, C. T., 1866
Evans, D. P., 2506
Evans, R. A., 2382
Everlasting flowers, 2361
Experiment in a juvenile court, 1650
Ewing, W. B., 1540
Eysenck, H., 1642

Faaland, J., 2058
Faber, H., 2071
Fairbridge, K. C., 2175
Falk, R. A., 1790
Fancher, B., 1855
Fang, J. R., 1606
Fanning, L. A., 2570
Fanning, M., 1777
Fanning, R., 2362
Fantini, M. D., 1628
Farber, S., 2484
Farnese hours, 2472
Farrell, J. T., 1777, 2194
Farrell, M., 2495
Farris, J., 1656
Farrow, M., 1526
Faulk, O. B., 1526
Faulkner, D., 2588
Faulkner, P., 2374
Feather, L., 1778
Featherstone, D., 1874
Featherstone, J., 2481
Feerick, J. D., 1781
Feiffer, J., 1794
Feild, R., 1764
Fein, S., 2071
Feldman, I., 2180
Fellini, F., 1552
Felton, B., 2266
Fenwick, S., 2071
Ferlinghetti, L., 2494
Ferrars, E. X., 1561
Ferre, F., 2066
Ferrell, T., 1874
Ferretti, F., 1509
Fetler, A., 1553
Fidell-Beaufort, M., 2560
Field, P., 1656
Fielding, K. J., 2282
Figueroa, J., 2494
Filler, L., 1513
Film literature index, 2266
Finder, M., 2059
Finestone, H., 2590
Finley, M. I., 1631
Finn, D., 1517
Finnerty, E. W., 2298
Fireman, J., 2500
Firestone, R., 2055
Firnstahl, T., 2176
Fischler, S., 2060
Fisher, D. E., 2088
Fisher, J., 1852, 1875
Fisher, S., 2288
Fitzgerald, F. S., 1550
FitzGibbon, C., 2583
Flanagan, G. L., 1787
Flannery, J. W., 2578
Flaste, R., 2358
Fleetwood, H., 2513
Fleming, Jo, 2055
Fleming, Joan, 2304
Flesch, R., 2558
Flew, A., 2376
Flood, C. B., 2060
Fly, R., 2064
Flying Magazine Eds., 1652
Flynn, J. M., 1560
Fobel, J., 1619
Fodor, E., 2280
Foley, P., 2060
Foley, R., 1560, 1803
Foley, V., 2285
Follett, B. L., 1856
Folsom Prison Inmates, 1790
Foner, P. S., 2570
Fontane, T., 2301
Forbis, J., 1867
Ford, A. B., 1544
Ford, B. J., 1785
Ford, R., 2510
Forest, E., 2363
Form, W. H., 2386
Forster, R., 1631
Forsyth, F., 2393
Foss, M. B., 2362
Foster, M., 1796
Four makers of the American mind, 2579
Fourquin, G., 2060
Fowler, A., 1636
Fowles, J., 1628
Fox, M. W., 2288
Fox, P., 2084
Fox, S., 2558
Fox-Geen, A., 2191
Fox-Genovese, E., 1631
Foxley, C. H., 2274
Foxx, J., 1801
Fraginals, M. M., 2484
Francis, E. K., 2187
Frank, J., 1764
Frankena, W. K., 2376
Franklin, J. H., 2276
Franklin, L., 1791
Frantz, J. B., 2369
Frederick, P. J., 2369
Frederics, M., 1558
Fredman, S., 2384
Freedland, M., 2392
Freeman, L., 1546
Franklin, L. C., 2576
Freeman, M. B., 2561
Freeman, T., 2071
Frievalds, J., 2356
Fremlin, C., 2514
Fried, A., 2085
Friedan, B., 1509
Friedman-Weiss, J., 1518
Fromm, E., 2071
Frye, N., 2177
Fryer, J., 1636
Fuentes, C., 2194
Fuller, J. G., 2184
Fuller, R. B., 1779
Furneaux, R., 1788
Furst, A., 1559
Fyson, M., 1645

Gadamer, H., 1862
Gadney, R., 1618
Gagala, K. L., 2162
Gaines, D., 2085
Galella, R., 2053
Gallagher, D., 2294
Gallagher, E. J., 1616
Gallwey, W. T., 2506
Galton, L., 1542
Gambaccini, P., 1638
Gambino, R., 2570
Gambino, T., 2364
Gandhi, R., 2376
García Márquez, G., 2394
Gardey, J., 2575
Gardiner, A. M., 2586
Gardiner, M., 1538
Gardner, J., 1661
Gardner, P., 2079
Garlan, Y., 1526
Garland, H., 1513
Garve, A., 1802
Garvin, J., 2579
Gass, W., 2282
Gates, J. K., 2020
Gay, P., 1845
Gaylin, W., 2183
Gaylord, S. B., 2058
Gehm, H. W., 1843
Geijerstam, C., 1778
Geiser, R. L., 2071
Geist, H., 1652
Geld, E. B., 1657
Geniesse, J., 1657
George, W. R. P., 2271
Gerlach, L. R., 1631
Gerli, E. M., 2064
Gerson, L. D., 2484
Gerson, N. B., 1622, 2305
Gerson, S. W., 2484
Gerster, G., 2362
Getty, J. P., 2271
Gibbon, P., 1770
Gibbons, B., 2280
Gibson, J., 1548
Gibson, W. B., 1652
Gies, J., 2386
Gifford, D., 1796
Gifford, F., 1874
Gilbert, H., 1662
Gilbert, M., 1663
Gildea, W., 2079
Giles, J., 2506
Giles, J. R., 2177
Gill, J. H., 2066
Gillespie, J., 2364
Gillett, C., 1759
Gilliam, D. B., 2166
Gillies, J., 1865
Gilliland, M. S., 1634
Gilpin, L., 2582
Gilsvik, B., 2298
Gimbel, J., 1536
Gimpel, J., 2571
Ginandes, S., 1642
Ginzberg, E., 2467
Girard, J. P., 2596
Glabman, S., 2292
Glaser, E. M., 1627
Glass, L., 2085
Glasser, R. J., 2467
Glazebrook, P., 1797
Glazer, N., 1510
Glemser, B., 1558
Glover, M., 1852
Gluyas, C., 2085
Glyn, C., 2382
Godden, R., 1555
Godey, J., 1559
Goethe, J. W., 2177
Gohn, J. B., 2162
Goldaper, S., 1548
Goldberg, M. H., 2504
Goldberg, P., 1862
Goldblatt, H., 1857
Golde, R. A., 1768
Goldenberg, I., 2301
Goldin, C. D., 2058
Goldin, M., 2171
Goldman, W., 1882
Goldstein, R. T., 2085
Goldstein, S., 2558
Golombed, H., 2593
Gonzalez-Ruiz, J., 2073
Gooch, B. N., 2162
Good Housekeeping dictionary of symptoms, 2358
Goodall, D. M., 2386
Goode, R., 1648
Goodrich, G., 1792
Goodwin, D., 2186
Goodwyn, L., 2061
Gooneratne, Y., 2579
Gopal, S., 2364
Gordenker, L., 1864
Gordon, D. J., 1636
Gordon, I. R., 2579
Gordon, L., 2484
Gordon, M., 2089
Gordon, R., 1875
Gordon, T., 2497
Gorman, M., 2281
Gorman, R., 2176
Gotlieb, P., 2599
Gottesman, R., 1552
Gould, C. C., 1534
Gould, L., 1657
Gould, M., 2082
Gould, T., 2275
Graburn, N., 2592
Graglia, L. A., 1546
Graham, D., 1539
Graham, E., 1541
Graham, F., 1869
Graham, V. L., 2298
Graves, R., 2494
Graves, R. L., 2088
Gray, B., 1620
Gray, D., 1771
Gray, F., 2085
Gray, S., 1876
Gray, T., 2564
Gray, V., 2052
Greeley, A. M., 1784, 2184
Green, C., 2473
Green, D., 1536
Green, D. B., 1860
Green, H., 1526
Greenan, R. H., 2305
Greenberg, A., 2596
Greenberg, D., 1650
Greenberg, J., 2086
Greene, G., 2510
Greene, H., 1803
Greene, J. P., 1771
Greene, R. F., 2506
Greenfield, J., 2390
Greenfield, N. S., 2166
Greenhill, B., 1526
Greenlaw, J., 2164
Greenough, W. C., 2169
Gregory, D., 2500
Gremillion, J., 1540
Greysmith, B., 1762
Griffin, D. R., 2501
Griffin, P., 1771
Griffin, S., 2494
Griffith, E. S., 2583
Griffith, S. B., 2370
Grinspoon, L., 2386
Grogan, E., 2304
Grollenberg, L., 1866
Gross, E., 2487
Gross, H., 2562
Grossman, Lawrence, 1526
Grossman, Lloyd, 1861
Grotta-Kurska, D., 1520
Grounds, R., 1541, 2588
Grow, L., 2576
Gruson, E. S., 1844
Guerard, A. J., 1857
Guest, C. Z., 1541
Guide to reviews of books from and about Hispanic America, 2049
Guild, V. P., 2475
Guiliano, E., 1857
Guillain, F., 1530
Guillermaz, J., 2172
Guinther, J., 2370
Gumpel, L., 1857
Gunn, C. R., 1787
Gunn, H. E., 1548
Gunn, J., 2511
Guthrie, R. D., 2072
Guthrie, W., 1779, 2272
Gutman, H., 2484
Guy, R., 1882
Gwynne, P. N., 2514

Haber, J., 1874
Hackett, C. J., 1657
Haddad, C. A., 1662
Hafkin, N., 2076
Hagen, U., 2576
Hagan, W. T., 2172
Hagerty, C. J., 1866
Haight, A., 2374
Haldeman, J., 1885
Haley, A., 2167
Hall, A., 2088
Hall, D., 2298

Hall, D. K., 2301
Halpern, H., 2183
Halsell, G., 1651
Hamburger, J., 2571
Hamburger, M., 2377
Hamilton, E., 1623
Hamilton-Merritt, J., 1624
Han Suyin, 1757
Handfield, C., 1502
Handke, P., 2299
Hanff, P. E., 1759
Hanfmann, G. M., 1634
Hannah, B., 1849
Hannavy, J., 1620
Hansen, B. J., 2281
Haq, M., 2366
Harbison, C., 1761
Harbison, P., 1774
Hargrove, R., 2071
Harman, W. W., 2590
Harmon, R. B., 1837
Harms, V., 1765
Harper, P., 1544
Harper, S., 2513
Harris, B., 2510
Harris, D., 1613
Harris, L., 2302
Harris, MacDonald, 1657
Harris, Marguerite, 2068
Harris, R., 2388
Harris, S., 1866
Harris, S. L., 1785
Harrison, C., 2049
Harrison, G. H., 2372
Harrison, I. E., 2162
Harrison, J., 1862
Hart, R. A., 2069
Hartt, F., 1618
Harvester, S., 1803
Harvey, J., 2571
Haseltine, F., 2292
Hassall, A. G., 1618
Hatt, F., 1502
Hattaway, H., 1849
Hattersley, R., 2563
Haughton, R., 2289
Haury, E. W., 1529
Havighurst, A. F., 2162
Hawkins, D., 1637
Hawkins, H., 1637
Hay, D., 1631
Hayashi, T., 1516, 2558
Hayden, S., 2511
Hazo, S., 2089
Healy, D., 1771
Heaps, L., 2060
Hearon, S., 1658
Hearsey, J. E., 1765
Heath, G. L., 1616, 1772
Hecht, M. B., 2070
Hecht, R., 1534
Heidegger, M., 2285
Heilman, S. C., 2073
Heirs, B., 2479
Heiser, C. B., 1867
Helch, P., 1652
Heller, C., 2277
Heller, E., 2064
Heller, W. W., 2169
Helmbold, F. W., 2172
Helmreich, W. B., 2382
Hemery, D., 1653
Hemingway, G. H., 1623
Hemingway, M. M., 2372
Hemingway, M. W., 2364
Henderson, B., 2190
Henderson, L., 1663
Hendin, D., 2075
Hendrickson, R., 2504
Henkin, H., 1559, 2298
Henley, T. A., 1653
Hentoff, N., 1861
Herberg, W., 2382
Herbert, E., 2481
Herrick, W., 2597
Herrin, L., 2597
Hersey, G. L., 2361
Hersey, J., 2162
Herwig, R., 1645
Hess, J. L., 2576
Hettich, A., 2373
Hewison, R., 1845
Hewitt, J., 2176
Heyen, W., 2582
Heyerdahl, T., 1517
Hibbert, C., 2581
Hick, J., 2377
Higgins, G. V., 1797
Higgins, J., 1556
Hildebrand, G., 2556
Hill, A. A., 2065
Hill, D. C., 2088
Hill, I., 2182
Hill, L., 1647
Hill, Pati, 2302
Hill, Peter, 2087
Hillel, M., 2484
Hillgarth, J. N., 1632
Hillier, B., 1620
Hilton, J. B., 1662
Himes, C., 2564
Hinch, D., 1653
Hindley, G., 1765
Hipkiss, R. A, 2177
Hirsch, B. B., 1872
Hirsch, E. D., 1532
Hisamatsu, S., 2470
Historic buildings of Massachusetts, 2474
History of mankind, 2172
Hite, S., 1538
Hoch, E. D., 1561
Hodge, J. A., 1882
Hodges, D. C., 2485
Hodgson, G., 2467
Hodgson, J., 2162
Hoehling, A. A., 2572
Hoff, S., 2052
Hoffman, A., 1765
Hoffman, B., 2183
Hoffman, M., 1635
Hoffman, M. J., 1777
Hoffman, P., 2297
Hogg, G., 2087
Hoggett, C., 2594
Hoig, S., 1853
Holden, J., 1857
Holl, A., 2382
Holland, I., 1554, 2394
Hollander, J. M., 1511
Holmes, N., 2167
Holroyd, G., 2553
Holroyd, S., 2072
Holt, K., 2086
Holt, V., 1658
Holzer, H., 2381
Holzman, F. D., 1850
Holzman, R. S., 1849
Homeowner's how-to-treasury, 2576
Honderich, T., 2583
Hooper, M., 2186
Hoover, D. W., 1513
Hope, J., 2584
Hopper, R. J., 2572
Horn, M., 1844
Horn, P., 1629
Hornstein, H. A., 1782
Horton, J., 2066
Horwitz, J., 1876
Hosier, H. H., 2478
Hotton, P., 1544
Hough, H. B., 1765
House, R. T., 2475
Howard, C., 2515
Howard, J., 2579
Howard-Williams, J., 2502
Howatch, J., 2394
Howell, G., 2052
Howlett, J., 1552
Hoyt, E. P., 1623, 2572
Hubatsch, W., 1632
Hubbard, B. M., 1765
Huckshorn, R. J., 2070
Hudak, J., 2074
Hull, R. W., 2572
Hulse, J., 2364
Hulten, K. G., 1618
Human (and anti-human) values in children's books, 2267
Humes, J. C., 1851
Huntington, S. P., 2058
Hurte, G., 2575
Hyde, H. M., 2060

Iacone, S. J., 2298
Iglitzin, L. B., 1789
Imfeld, A., 2480
Impact ERA, 2187
Imperato, P. J., 2385
Impey, O., 2270
Infield, G. B., 2192
Information for everyday survival, 2359
Inge, M. T., 1532
Instructor's index and solutions to research problems, 1502
International economic relations of the western world, 1959-1971, 1768
International who's who: 1976-77, 2164
Introduction to business law in the Middle East, 2566
Irregular serials & annuals, 1617
Irving, D., 2572
Iseman, J., 2390
Isenberg, A., 1519
Isherwood, C., 2478
Ismael, C., 2497
Israel, P., 2088
Izenberg, G. N., 1639

Jacks, O., 1663
Jackson, B., 1803
Jackson, E., 1556
Jackson, R., 2485
Jackson, T., 1768
Jacobsen, T., 2073
Jaenen, C. J., 1853
Jaffe, I. B., 2269
Jaffe, R., 1658
James, L., 2579
James, R., 1797
Janeway, E., 2366
Jargocki, C. P., 2390
Jaworski, L., 2379
Jay, K., 1545
Jeal, T., 2194
Jefferson, A., 2376
Jemie, O., 2282
Jenkins, A., 2061
Jenkins, B. L., 1513
Jenkins, Dan, 1658
Jenkins, Dave, 2191
Jenkins, J., 1861
Jensen, H. J., 2065
Jensen, M., 1514
Jensen, M. C., 1768
Jervis, R., 2286
Jhabvala, R. P., 2511
Jiryis, S., 1758
Johannah, B., 2270
John, L., 2291
Johnson, C., 2277
Johnson, Paul, 1526
Johnson, Peter, 1616
Johnson, Samuel, 1532
Johnson, Stephen, 2061
Johnson, V. W., 2298
Johnson, W., 2283
Johnson, W. T., 2049
Johnston, B., 2187
Johnston, Mireille, 2372
Johnston, Moria, 2500
Johnston, R. J., 1545
Johnston, R. W., 1520
Johnston, V., 1882
Jones, C. M., 2506
Jones, E., 2577
Jones, F. P., 2292
Jones, J. H., 2558
Jones, K. W., 1632
Jones, Philip, 2275
Jones, Preston, 2508
Jongeward, D., 1864
Jordan, H. A., 2588
Jordan, J. E., 1637
Jordan, R., 1623
Jorden, P. J., 2280
Jorgens, J. J., 2595
Jorgensen, P., 1548
Josipovici, G., 2579
Journal of the century, 2481
Juhasz, S., 2065
Jules-Verne, J., 2283
Juliver, P. H., 2496
Jullian, P., 2055
Jumbo book of magic, 2390
Junior League of Pasadena, 1775
Justema, W., 2473
Justice, B., 2288

Kabir book, 2582
Kahn, H., 1648
Kalidasa, 1637
Kalter, R. J., 2190
Kamerman, S. B., 2076
Kamman, M. M., 2372
Kamoroff, B., 2480
Kane, H., 2305
Kane, P. E., 1847
Kane, R. S., 2575
Kapferer, B., 1651
Karapanou, M., 1882
Karp, A. J., 1632
Karp, L. E., 2500
Kasfir, N., 2584
Katz, B., 1501, 2237
Katz, J., 2572
Kaufman, S., 1797
Kay, M. W., 1515
Kay, T., 2086
Keane, C., 2190
Keane, M. J., 2390
Keating, H., 1556
Keech, W. R., 1613
Keegan, J., 2061
Keeley, E., 2177
Keene, M. L., 1539
Kehler, D., 1502
Kekes, J., 2179
Kelder, J., 1626
Kellenbenz, H., 2570
Keller, A., 1772
Kelly, J., 2597
Kelly, L., 1623
Kelly, R., 2593
Kelly, T., 2172
Kendall, E., 1628
Kennedy, M., 2066
Kennedy, P. M., 1632
Kenrick, T., 1560, 2304
Kent, M., 1632
Kenward, M., 2503
Keppel, C., 1658
Kerman, J., 2495
Kerr, G., 1530
Kershenblatt-Gimblett, B., 1514
Kessler, G., 2388
Kessler, L. D., 1632
Kessner, T., 2485
Ketcham, C. B., 2595
Key, W. B., 1628
Keyes, E., 1872
Keynes, G., 1844
Kidner, J., 2078
Kiernan, R. F., 1759
Kiernan, T., 1613
Kilick, T., 2359
Kim, U. C., 2020
Kimbrough, E., 2478
Kimmich, C. M., 2173
King, C. L., 2267
King, F., 2194
Kingsland, K., 2377
Kingston, M. H., 1849
Kinmond, J., 2164
Kinsman, C. D., 1516
Kipnis, D., 2294
Kircher, S., 2394
Kirkham, G., 1650
Kirst, H. H., 2304
Kissinger study of Southern Africa, 2159
Kister, K. F., 2353
Kitching, J., 1759
Kitzinger, E., 2561
Klamkin, C., 1548
Klein, D., 2080
Klein, M., 2173
Klindt-Jensen, O., 1530
Klobuchar, J., 2390
Knap, J., 2593
Knapp, M., 2296
Knight, G., 1645
Knoke, D., 1781
Knox, B., 2089
Kobler, F., 1853
Kocan, P., 1780
Koestler, A., 1632
Kohl, H. R., 2170
Kolko, G., 1527
Kolodin, I., 1861
Komarovsky, M., 2288
Konecky, E., 2302
Koning, H., 2280
Kopper, E. A., 2177
Kopperman, P. E., 2277
Korb, L. J. 2379
Korn, H. J., 2593
Körner, S., 2285
Kory, R. B., 2567
Kosoy, T., 1634
Koster, R., 2191
Kostof, S., 1517
Kostrubala, T., 1874
Koszarski, R., 2082
Kotker, Z., 2194
Kotzwinkle, W., 1556
Kovel, J., 1538
Kozuki, R., 1548
Kraay, C. M., 2163
Kraft, B., 2478
Kraft, V., 1548
Kraines, O., 2499
Krakel, D. H., 1869
Kramer, J., 1541, 1868, 2074, 2384
Kranzler, D., 2173
Krapf, N., 1534
Kren, G. M., 2288
Krenov, J., 1762
Krippner, S., 1643, 1783
Krishnamurti, J., 2068
Krleza, M., 1797
Krocker, M. E., 1849
Kroetz, F. X., 2300
Kronick, D. A., 2151
Krutetskii, V. A., 2289
Kucharsky, D., 2263
Kuhn, R., 2579
Kujoth, J. S., 1616
Kulski, W. W., 1536
Kuna, F., 2374
Kundera, M., 1798
Küng, H., 2586
Kuper, A., 1630
Kupferberg, H., 2284
Kurtz, R., 1538
Kurzman, D., 2061
Kuske, M., 2290
Kuttner, P., 2515
Kyed, J. M., 2360
Kytle, R., 1557

La Belle, J., 2580
Ladd, J. D., 1772
Lady Ottoline's album, 2476
Lafaye, J., 1853
La Fountaine, G., 1560
Lago, M. M., 2375
LaHood, C. G., 1717
Lai, T. C., 1846
Laing, R. D., 2582
Lake, A., 1510, 1641
Lake, P., 2305
Lamb, C., 1624
Lamb, E., 1616
Lambert, E., 1514
Lamson, P., 2167
La Mure, P., 1658
Lancaster, F., 2353
Land Tenure Center Library Staff, 2470
Landesman, B., 1786
Landrum, L. N., 2490
Landvater, D., 2364
Lane, G., 2267
Lane, M., 2362
Lange, R., 2192
Langworth, R. M., 2386
Lantz, S., 1847
Lapiner, A., 1761
Lapointe, P., 2180
Laqueur, T. W., 2061
Laqueur, W., 2070, 2159
Larcombe, S., 1640
Large type books in print, 1976, 2360
Larner, C., 1798
Larson, C. R., 1798
Larson, M. A., 1522
Lash, J. P., 2173
Lasky, W. R., 2478
Lass, A., 2470
Lasswell, M., 2497
Last whole film catalog, 1844
Latt, D. J., 1514
Lauf, D. I., 2473
Laumer, K., 2197
Launay, A., 1855
Laury, J. R., 2475
Lavender, D., 1772
Law, J., 2572
Lawrence, D. H., 1766
Lawrence, J. C., 2567
Lawson, D., 1653
Lawson, J., 2194
Lawson, S. F., 2277
Lawson, W., 2596
Layman, E. M., 2382
Leach, P., 2585
Leavis, F. R., 2375
LeBaron, D., 2567
Lebow, R. N., 1772
Leboyer, F., 2385
Lebra, J., 2296
Lee, A., 2499
Lee, C. J., 1536
Lee, L., 2360
Lee, P. G., 1791
Leek, S., 1624
Leeman, F., 2360
Leeming, D., 1789
Leeming, G., 1616
Leff, A. A., 1650
Le Guin, U. K., 2086
Lehrman, S., 1549
Leighton, A., 2074
Leiss, W., 2567
Leister, M., 1787
Lem, S., 1558
L'Engle, M., 2586
Lentricchia, F., 1616
Lenz, S., 1658
Leonard, J. E., 2299
Leonard, L., 2302
Lerman, R., 1882
LeShan, L., 1782
Lesley, C., 2081
Lester, J., 1849
Lesy, M., 2563
Lethbridge, T. C., 1865
Leutscher, A., 2185
Leventhal, H., 1527
Levering, R. B., 2278
Levine, F., 1842
Levine, G., 2177
Levine, H. M., 2470
Levine, J. A., 1870
Levine, L. S., 1542
Levine, M., 1534
Levine, P., 2180
Levy, D., 2506
Levy, L. S., 2562
Lewis, A. A., 1763
Lewis and Clark's America, 2485
Lewis, B., 1866
Lewis, D. L., 1769
Lewis, F. F., 1546
Lewis, L. R., 2187
Lewis, P. G., 1637
Lewis, R. S., 2291
Ley, S., 2395
Leys, N., 2056
Lidman, D., 2299
Lieberman, H., 1556
Lieberman, J. K., 1872
Liebman, S. B., 1789
Lifshin, L., 2495
Lin, W., 2080
Line, L., 2186
Linedecker, C. L., 1783
Linehan, D., 2391
Lion, E., 2508
Lipman, J., 2473, 2561
Lippmann, W., 2367
Lipsky, L., 1766
Lipton, E., 1761
Liroff, R. A., 1546
Literary monographs 2490
Literature and liberalism, 1777
Littell, F. H., 1527
Littler, G., 1653
Litto, G., 2052
Ljungquist, B., 2506
Lloyd, C., 2471
Lo Kuan-chug, 2192
Lo, K. H., 2577
Locke, R. F., 1772
Lockridge, R., 1803
Lockwood, C., 2485
Lodge, H. C., 2272
Loebl, E., 2272
Logan, D., 1539
Lombard, C. M., 1777
London, K. R., 2499
Longford, E., 2167
Look, D., 2507
López, A., 2572
Lord, S., 2080
Lorwin, M., 2373
Lotman, L. M., 1637
Lovejoy, C. E., 2360
Lovell, M., 1558
Lovesey, P., 2088
Lowell, R., 1535
Lowenthal, R., 2496
Luard, N., 2304
Lubans, J., 1501
Lucas, J., 2296
Lucas, S. E., 2061
Luce, W., 2392
Lucioli, C. E., 2461
Luckert, K. W., 2076
Ludwig, J., 2187
Luhr, W., 2082
Luke, M., 1798
Lupo, A., 2556
Lutz, J., 2305
Luxemburg, R., 2584
Lyon, J. K., 1785
Lyons, Nan, 1560
Lyons, Nick, 2169

McBain, E., 1801
McCaffrey, D. W., 2509
MacCaffrey, I. G., 1778
McCallum, J. D., 2299
McCann, T. P., 1850
McCauley, C. S., 2589
McCauley, K., 1798
McClelland, I. L., 2065
MacClintock, D., 1647
McCloy, H., 1803
McClure, J., 2304
McClure, M., 1876
Maccoby, M., 2366
McConathy, D., 2300
MacCormac, E. R., 2285
McCracken, J. A., 2478
MacCracken, M., 1782
McCreary, A., 2499
McCullagh, J., 2593
McCutchan, P., 2298
McDonald, E., 1868
McDonald, F., 1853
McDonald, G., 2516
Macdonald, M., 2302
MacDonald, W. L., 1615
Mace, B. W., 2510
McElroy, C. J., 2286
McFarlane, L., 1520

McGarry, K. L., 1717
McGee, J. S., 2061
MacGillavry, C. H., 1846
Macgregor-Morris, P., 1792
McGuffey, W. H., 1637
McGuffie, H. L., 1514
Mach, E., 1534
McInerny, R., 1883
Mackarness, R., 2186
Mackay, A., 2516
McKay, J. R., 1633
McKenzie, J. L., 2184
Mackenzie, J. P., 2163
Mackie, J. L., 2068
Macksey, J., 1514
McKuen, R., 1850
MacLean, A., 1664
MacLean, N., 2191
MacLeish, A., 1862
McLeish, J. A., 1783
McLellan, D. S., 1527
McLellan, V., 1545
McMillan, G., 1791
Macmillan, H., 1624
McMullen, M., 2089
MacMullen, R., 1854
McNally, T., 1550
McNeill, J. J., 2184
McNeill, W., 1869
McNeish, J., 1798
McPherson, J. A., 2573
MacQuitty, W., 1854
McVay, G., 1520
Madaras, L., 2568
Madison, C. A., 2058
Maeroff, G. I., 1616
Maier, P. L., 1540
Mairowitz, D. Z., 1781
Major, C., 1535
Malcolm, N., 2493
Malino, E., 1620
Malkiel, Y., 2281
Maloney, C., 2505
Malraux, A., 1556
Mamdani, M., 2584
Mancke, R., 1536
Manheim, J. B., 2287
Mann, G., 2272
Manners, D., 2505
Manners, W., 1766
Marcus, J., 1874
Mardis, J., 1766
Marihuana, 2471
Marinaro, V. C., 2080
Marlow, H. C., 1648
Marric, J. J., 2516
Marsh, R. M., 1626
Martells, J., 1549
Martin, A., 1633
Martin, C. C., 1523
Martin, C. H., 1650
Martin, D., 2591
Martin, H., 1802
Martin, J. K., 1527
Martin, J. S., 2491
Martin, S. K., 1502
Martin, T., 2082
Martine, 1539
Marty, M. E., 2586
Marx, G., 2300
Marx, S., 2082
Maryland heritage, 1772
Marzio, P. C., 1528
Mason, A., 2359
Mason, H. M., 1632
Mason, J., 1855
Massenari, J., 1624
Massey, R., 1876
Mather, B., 1559
Matson, F. W., 2185
Matsunaga, S., 2379
Matthew, B., 2392
Matthews, J. H., 1532
Matthews, K., 2480
Max, P., 1517
Maximilian of Wied, 2573
May, G. G., 2498
May, H. F., 2370
Mayer, H., 2284
Mayhew, M., 1659
Mazlish, B., 1842
Mazzolani, L. S., 2573
Meacham, E. K., 1883
Medieval health handbook, 2486
Medved, M., 1870
Medvedev, R. A., 2167
Mehrabian, A., 2183
Mehta, V., 2364
Meier, A., 2573
Meiss, M., 2361
Melady, T. P., 1864
Meldrum, J., 2513
Melham, T., 1774
Mella, J., 1798
Mellen, J., 2192
Melton, D., 2481
Meltzer, M., 1772
Melville, J., 2194
Menaker, D., 2597
Mencken, H. L., 2263, 2365
Menendez, A. J., 1514
Méras, P., 2475
Mercatante, A. S., 2504
Merchant, L., 2080
Meredith, R., 2396
Merrill, Bill, 1653
Merrill, Boynton, 2370
Merrill, J., 2056
Merrill, R., 2365
Merton, R. K., 1789
Meskil, P. S., 2504
Messenger, C., 2173
Messerli, D., 1515
Messum, D., 2473
Metcalf, J., 2151
Metcalf, P., 2582
Metz, K. S., 1759
Mewshaw, M., 2511
Meyer, M. R., 2289
Meyers, M., 2478
Michaels, B., 2194
Migdalski, E. C., 2559
Mihajlov, M., 2375
Milani, L., 2488
Milberg, A., 1653
Miles, B., 2074
Millar, F., 2174
Millar, M., 2304
Miller, Henry, 2178
Miller, Hugh, 2086
Miller, J., 2391
Miller, J. B., 1783
Miller, K. S., 1791
Miller, L., 2575
Miller, M. A., 1528
Miller, M. S., 2059
Miller, S. S., 2358
Millman, M., 2589
Milner, D., 1643
Milunsky, A., 1541
Mindel, C. H., 1789
Minney, R. J., 2509
Mintz, M., 2160
Mitchell, Breon, 2375
Mitchell, Broadus, 1521
Mitchell, D. J. B., 1626
Mitchell, M., 2365
Mitchell, R., 2286
Mixon, S. R., 2073
Modras, R. E., 2586
Moggridge, D. E., 2480
Moglen, H., 1778
Mollenhoff, C., 1510
Momaday, N. S., 2378
Monaco, J., 1552
Monaco, P., 1552
Montagu, A., 1782
Montagu, J., 2284
Montague, K., 1614
Montale, E., 1640, 2491
Montas, M., 2488
Monteilhet, H., 2089
Montessori, M. M., 1851
Montgomery, C. F., 1516
Montgomery, R., 1865
Monti, M., 2567
Montias, J. M., 2366
Moore, B., 2394
Moore, C. G., 2368
Moore, M., 1539
Moore, N. D., 1616
Moorsom, S., 2597
More, D., 2502
Morgan, E. S., 2174
Morgan, R., 2180
Morison, E. F., 1854
Morley, D. C., 1549
Morley, S., 1766
Morrill, J. S., 2573
Morris, M. B., 2387
Morrison, D. E., 1760
Morrison, M., 1648
Morrison, R. J., 2186
Morse, J. M., 2489
Morton, D., 1638
Moskowitz, S., 2065
Mosley, N., 1850
Moss, H., 2582
Mossiker, F., 2168
Mould, D. D., 1855
Mount, E., 2238
Moynihan, M., 1543
Mozley, A. V., 1621
Mrabet, M., 1556
Muggeridge, M., 1540
Muir, F., 1635
Mullan, F., 2160
Mundis, H., 2291
Munrow, D., 2284
Murdoch, D., 2168
Murdoch, I., 2394
Murray, E., 1655
Murray, K., 1655
Murray, W., 1874
Myrdal, A., 2468
Myrdal, J., 2174

Naar, J., 2476
Nader, R., 1791, 1842
Nagamine, S., 2593
Naquin, S., 2062
Nash, J., 2504
Nash, J. R., 2471
Nasri, W. Z., 2352
Nation, T., 2086
National party conventions, 1831-1972, 2049
National Trust for Historic Preservation, 2561
Natural Resources Defense Council, 2505
Needham, J., 2493
Needleman, J., 1644
Nelli, H. S., 2078
Nelson, D. M., 1844
Nelson, J. W., 2504
Nelson, M. C., 2289
Nelson, R. E., 1866
Neruda, P., 2378
Neubecker, O., 2470
Neuborne, R., 2163
Neugroschel, J., 1778
Nevares, B. R., 1794
New Games Foundation, 2299
New Kobbe's complete opera book, 2268
Newdick, R. S., 1624
Newell, P., 2391
Newlin, M., 2378
Newman, E., 2374
Newman, Jo, 2075, 2501
Newman, John, 1784
Newman, T. R., 2165
Ney, R., 2302
Nichols, F. D., 1518
Nichols, H., 2020
Nickels, N., 2507
Nideffer, R. M., 2391
Niehaus, T. F., 2559
Nielsen, T., 2306
Nin, A., 1532
Nisbet, R., 2078
Niven, L., 1800
No single thread, 2072
Norman, B., 2574
Norman, D., 1549
Norris, G., 2066
North, G., 1783
Northouse, C., 2163
Northrop, C. M., 2593
Novak, M., 1549
Novick, S., 2356
Noyle, K., 2194
Nuez, M., 1860
Nunn, F. M., 1852
Nunn, R. V., 1530
Nykoruk, B., 1512

Oakley, H. M., 1521
Oates, J., 2296
Oates, J. C., 1659, 2394
Oates, R., 1862
Oates, S. B., 2478
O'Brien, E., 2168
Obudho, C. E., 1513
O'Connor, H., 2176
O'Connor, M., 1780
O'Donnell, L., 1559
O'Donoghue, M., 2359
Oglesby, C., 2379
O'Keeffe, G., 2474
Ollard, R., 2574
Olney, R. R., 2488
Olson, D., 1560
Olson, M. C., 2356
Olson, S. F., 1766
Olson, T., 2195
O'Neal, H., 2476
O'Neill, J. E., 2062
O'Neill, P., 2164
Orloski, R. J., 2591
Orne, J., 2560
Ornstein, R. E., 2382
Orrey, L., 1760
Ørum, P., 2306
Ostaijen, P. V., 1535
Osten, G., 2289
Otash, F., 2082
Otten, J., 2387
Ottum, B., 2395
Ousmane, S., 2195
Overstreet, R. M., 1615
Owen, H., 2567
Owen, I. M., 1643
Owings, L. C., 1844
Özbudun, E., 2182
Pace, J. B., 2292
Pachman, L., 2391
Packer, N. H., 1553
Page, P., 2080
Palic, V. M., 1618
Palmer, A., 1624, 2559
Palmer, B., 2075
Palmer, C. A., 2278
Palmer, T., 2493
Pandey, B. N., 2364
Papich, S., 2365
Parish, J. R., 1876, 2192
Park, C. C., 1538
Parke, H. W., 2574
Parker, D. B., 1646
Parker, P., 1847
Parker, R. B., 1663
Parker, T., 1766
Parlato, S. J. 1844
Paros, L., 1545
Parsons, W. T., 1854
Pate, J., 2491
Patrick, H., 1523
Patten, M., 2359
Patterson, P., 2479
Patterson, S., 1556
Pauck, W., 1625
Paul, B., 2597
Payne, H. C., 1528
Payne, R., 2488
Payne, S. G., 2584
Peale, N. V., 1540
Pearce, F., 2496
Pearce, M. E., 1659
Pears cyclopedia, 1976-77, 2360
Pearson, E. L., 1837
Peeples, S., 1663
Peerce, J., 2564
Pekić, B., 2195
Pekkanen, J., 1546
Pendo, S., 1877
Pensée Eds., 1644
Perelman, L. J., 1649
Perez, L. A., 2268
Perkins, D. D., 2283
Perlman, J., 1640, 2494
Perowne, S., 2587
Perry, F., 2050
Perry, R., 1519
Perry, T. D., 1639
Perry, W., 2088
Persico, J. E., 2486
Pescatello, A. M., 2370
Peterson, F., 1856
Peterson, W. S., 2491
Petrakis, H. M., 2511
Petrovich, M. B., 2278
Pettman, R., 1864
Pevsner, N., 1618
Peyser, J., 2376
Philbin, T., 2488
Philipson, M., 2195
Phillips, D. A., 2496
Piaget, J., 2379
Picture reference file, 2359
Pieper, T. I., 1528
Pike, D. K., 2056
Pilcher, R., 2597
Pilling, J., 1532
Pilpel, R. H., 2272
Pinchin, J. L., 2375
Pinder, D., 2567
Pinto, R. J., 2480
Pipes, R., 1781
Pitts, D., 2514
Plaidy, J., 2598
Planet we live on, 2268
Platt, C., 1633
Plekker, R. J., 2383
Plimpton, G., 1637
Plummer, W. J., 1787
Podhajsky, A., 2081
Pohl, F., 1661
Pomeranz, V. E., 2472
Popper, F., 2164
Port, M. H., 2269
Porter, B., 1633
Posner, R. A., 2263
Postman, N., 1856
Potter, E. B., 2273
Potter, J., 2479
Potts, J., 1524
Pound, E., 2068
Powell, J., 2505
Powell, J. T., 1792
Pratchett, T., 1661
Price, A., 2305
Princeton encyclopedia of classical sites, 2050
Pritchard, D., 2191
Proffer, C. R., 2580
Pronzini, B., 2515
Purdy, S. B., 2580
Puryear, P. A., 1528
Putigny, B., 2488
Quante, W., 1510
Quarles, J. R., 2263
Quarterly review of literature, 2580
Quebedeaux, R., 1644
Quiroga, H., 1659

Raab, L., 1863
Rabinowitch, A., 2062
Rabinowitz, D., 2189
Rabkin, E. S., 1778
Radcliffe, V., 2576
Radine, L. B., 2590
Rae, H. C., 2086
Ralbovsky, M., 2081
Raleigh, I., 1541
Raley, P. E., 2380
Ramie, G., 1846
Raming, I., 2383
Randles, S., 2063
Randolph, V., 2296
Rannit, A., 2180
Rass, R., 1536
Rathbone, J., 1883
Ratkevich, R. P., 1788
Ray, G. N., 2362
Read, P. P., 2302
Reader's Digest strange stories, 2588
Reagen, M. V., 1651
Reckoning with slavery, 2278
Redd, W. H., 2585
Redgrove, P., 2378
Redman, J., 1847
Redmond, E. B., 2065
Reed, I., 1659
Reed, M., 2593
Rees, J., 2056
Reese, T., 2593
Reeves, J., 1637
Reff, T., 2164
Regueiro, H., 2178
Reich, C., 2479
Reichler, J., 1547
Reid, J. P., 1547
Reid, W., 2486
Reiger, B., 2489
Reinhold book of art and craft techniques for parents, teachers, and children, 1620
Reisler, M., 2370
Relyea, S., 1860
Rennert, M., 1558
Reppert, B. P., 2588
Reschke, R. C., 1870
Restany, P., 2561
Reuben, D., 2281
Rexford, E. N., 1865
Rexroth, K., 1780
Reynolds, D. K., 2380
Reynolds, M. S., 1638
Reznikoff, C., 1780
Rhinehart, L., 2071
Rhodes, A., 2370
Rhodes, D., 2362
Rhodes, J. J., 1641
Rhymer, P., 2300
Rhys, J., 2395
Ricciuti, E. R., 2502
Rice, H. C., 2574
Rich, A., 2189
Richardson, E., 1614
Richardson, H. V., 2290
Richardson, J. T., 1862
Richmond, M. L., 1617
Riefenstahl, L., 2477
Right to counsel in criminal cases, 1872
Rigsbee, D., 1863
Riker, T., 2384
Riley, D., 2088
Riley, R., 2567
RIO, 2556
Rippier, J. S., 2492
Rippley, L. J., 1854
Ritter, M., 1557
Rittmann, A., 2384
Rivers, P., 1789
Roazen, P., 2498
Robbins, A., 2498
Robert, M., 2380
Roberts, E., 2365
Roberts, J. I., 1870
Roberts, J. M., 2172
Roberts, M., 2391
Roberts, R., 1861
Robinson, A. H., 1855
Robinson, B., 2593
Robinson, F., 1549
Robinson, K. M., 1872
Robinson, L. W., 2302
Robinson, S., 2599
Robyns, G., 1625
Rodgers, P., 2593
Rodrigue, G., 2269
Roesch, R., 2367
Rofheart, M., 2195
Rogers, M., 2474
Rogo, D. S., 1539
Roiphe, A., 2512
Rollband, J., 1856
Rollin, B., 1868
Romagnoli, M., 1775
Roosevelt, J., 2479
Roots, C., 2293
Rosa, K. R., 1865
Rose, G., 1661, 1801
Rose, P., 1654
Rose, R., 1641, 1864
Rosecrance, R., 1781
Rosen, C., 2598
Rosenbaum, M., 1642
Rosenberg, N., 1870
Rosenfeld, A., 2074
Rosenheim, M., 2505
Rosenthal, R., 1871
Rosenthal, S., 2595
Roskill, M., 1618
Rosnow, R., 2380
Ross, N., 2078
Ross, P., 2190
Ross-Macdonald, M., 2296
Rossman, P., 2590
Rossmoore, H. W., 2291
Rosten, L., 1531
Roth, C. D., 1848
Roth, J., 1542
Rothacher, M., 1530
Rothweiler, P. R., 1798
Routh, F., 2066
Rovere, R. H., 2058
Rowe, D. W., 2065
Royce, K., 2514
Rózewicz, T., 2495
Rubin, R. L., 2047
Ruby, R. H., 2370
Rudorff, R., 1802
Ruege, K., 1792
Ruhm, H., 2516
Rukeyser, M., 2068
Ruland, R., 1532
Ruse, G. A., 2515
Russell, G., 1763
Russell, L. M., 2290
Russell, P., 1862
Russell, W. S., 1875
Ryan, R. M., 2178
Ryck, F., 1663
Rykwert, J., 2297

Sachar, A. L., 2170
Sachar, H. M., 2278
Sagan, F., 2392
Sagov, S. E., 1542
St. John, D., 2068
St. Martin, H., 1535
Saint-Simon, C-H. D., 1537
Sake, D. J., 2513
Salaman, R. A., 2471
Salem, J. M., 2472
Salem, Ohio 1850 Women's Rights Convention proceedings, 2278
Salibi, K. S., 2047
Salinas, P., 2180
Salisbury, H., 2564
Salmon, J. H. M., 1528
Samora, J., 2486
Sampayo, C., 1548
Samuels, P., 2360
Sandberg, L., 2559
Sandeen, A., 1628
Sanders, J. W., 2368
Sanders, Lawrence, 1557
Sanders, Leonard, 1662
Sandved, K. B., 2502
Sanford, H., 2170
Sansom, R. L., 2160
Sarris, A., 1794
Sarton, M., 1767
Saunders, R., 2562
Savage, W. S., 1773
Savory, T., 2598
Sacduto, A., 2388
Scagnetti, J., 1877
Scalzo, J. R., 1798
Scarf, M., 1538
Svavullo, F., 2292
Schafer, M., 1549
Schapiro, B., 2507
Schapsmeier, E. L., 1844
Scharf, B., 1763
Scharine, R., 2580
Schauer, W. H., 1785
Scheffer, V. B., 1543
Scheffler, J., 1535
Schell, O., 1871
Schemmer, B. F., 1782

Schery, R., 1646
Schickele, P., 1638
Schiff, G., 2269
Schlipf, F. A., 1606
Schmidt, B., 1875
Schneider, R. W., 1767
Schnessel, S. M., 2562
Schoen, L. A., 2075
Schoenbrun, D., 2273
Schoenstein, R., 1776
Scholem, G., 1784
Schopler, E., 2072
Schrecker, E., 2281
Schuler, S., 1774, 2175
Schulke, F., 1520
Schulman, G., 2286
Schur, S., 2176
Schwartz, H., 2598
Schwed, P., 2080
Schwinn, M., 2168
Schwob, P. R., 1792
Sclar, D., 1647
Scott, B., 2507
Scott, J. C., 2480
Scott, J. D., 1559
Scott, N. A., 2178
Scott, O. J., 1521
Scott, V., 2086
Scott, W. D., 1550
Scribner, G., 2176
Sealey, R., 2062
Seaton, A., 1767
Sedlacek, W. E., 2368
Seeing with a native eye, 2296
Segal, L., 2302
Segovia, A., 2273
Segundo, J. L., 1867
Seifer, N., 2189
Selby, J., 1773
Selective guide to materials for mental health and family education, 1516
Sellassie, H., 2056
Selman, L. H., 1763
Selzer, R., 2501
Sennett, R., 2557
Sergeant, J., 2474
Serling, R. J., 2170
Servadio, G., 1873
Seton, E. T., 2293
Setright, L. J., 2502
Sevela, E., 1660
Severin, T., 1634
Sewell, W., 1845
Seymour, G., 2304
Shaban, M. A., 2174
Shapcott, T. W., 1780
Shapiro, C., 2270
Shapiro, N., 2594
Shapiro, T., 2486
Shaw, B. A., 2559
Shaw, W. D., 2178
Shebl, J., 2283
Shedd, C. W., 1648
Sheehan, E. R., 2357
Sheehan, S., 1545
Sheehy, E. P., 2560
Sheeran, P. F., 2580
Shepard, M., 2303
Shepard, S., 1876
Sherer, R. G., 2371
Sherman, E., 1795
Sherr, L., 2280
Sherwin, S., 2489
Shiffert, E. M., 2495
Shikibu, M., 1860
Shine, I., 2565
Shirer, W. L., 1625
Shores, L., 2151
Short, J. F., 1873
Shover, J. L., 2371
Siddons, A. R., 2087
Siefkin, D., 1530
Siegler, S., 2562
Silber, M., 2081
Silk, L., 1758, 2480
Silke, J. R., 1795
Silver, G. A., 1868
Silverberg, R., 2197
Silverstone, B., 2189
Simenon, G., 1803
Simic, C., 2068
Simmonds, N. W., 1542
Simmons, R. C., 2279
Simpson, C., 2060
Simpson, D. B., 1837
Simpson, L., 2069
Simpson, N. F., 2577
Sinai, A., 2584
Sindler, A. P., 1537
Singer, A. E., 1777
Singer, J., 2498
Singh, A., 2492
Sinha, R., 2481
Sippl, C. J., 1646
Sitchin, Z., 2486
Sitney, P. A., 1655
Sjöwall, M., 2306
Skellings, E., 2286
Skelton, C. L., 2195
Skinner, C. O., 2082
Sklarew, M., 1640
Skulsky, H., 2492
Sky, A., 2561
Slater, M. K., 1545
Slaughter, F. G., 1798
Slavin, N., 2563
Slavitt, D. R., 2598
Slaymaker, S. R., 2594
Slide, A., 2392
Small press record of books. 5th ed.-1975, 1618
Smith, A., 2580
Smith, C. H., 1788
Smith, Dave, 2495
Smith, Desmond, 1634
Smith, Fran, 2586
Smith, Frederick, 1625
Smith, F. B., 1519
Smith, Gary, 2574
Smith, Gene, 2512
Smith, G. E., 2561
Smith, Gene, 2512
Smith, Hedrich, 1871
Smith, Huston, 2179
Smith, J., 2178
Smith, J. B., 2047
Smith, J. F., 1542
Smith, M. J., 2050, 2360
Smith, N., 1544
Smith, N. J., 1654
Smith, R. F., 2075
Smith, S. G., 2069
Smyth, J., 1854
Snook, P. K., 1654
Snyder, L. L., 2287
Snyder, P. V., 2476
Sobel, R., 1842
Sobieszek, R. A., 2053
Solomon, C., 2577
Solomon, N., 1786
Solomon, R. C., 1639
Solomon, R. H., 2182
Solzhenitsyn, A., 2160
Soyinka, W., 1638
Spahn, T. J., 2472
Sparano, V. T., 1550
Spark, M., 1660
Sparkes, I., 1528
Sparks, J., 2296
Sparks, J. C., 1544
Spatharis, S., 2594
Spence, P., 1543
Spencer, S., 1660
Spencer, W., 2062
Spiegel, A., 2393
Spiering, F., 2591
Spingarn, N. D., 2501
Spitz, M., 2191
Spitzweg, C., 2474
Springer, H., 1760
Springer, L. E., 2174
Springer, M., 1759
Stabler, K., 1793
Stacey, E. G., 2365
Stafford, K. R., 2495
Staley, T. F., 2375
Stallworth, A. N., 2598
Standring, G., 2296
Stanford, R., 2186
Stanley, D. T., 2388
Stapleton, J., 2296
Starkey, L., 2062
Stearn, J., 2184
Stearns, A. C., 1625
Stebbins, T. E., 2474
Stecken, F., 1875
Stefano, F., 1620
Steiger, B., 2184
Stein, A. M., 2516
Stein, H., 1779
Stein, R., 2186
Steinbeck, J., 2178
Steinberg, A., 2584
Steinberg, S., 2280
Steiner, J. M., 2070
Steiner, Sheri, 2557
Steiner, Stan, 1843
Steinkraus, W., 2594
Stendahl, B., 2581
Stephens, J., 2387
Stephens, M., 2512
Stephenson, J., 2371
Stern, F., 2588
Stern, H. P., 1619
Stern, R. M., 1799
Steuding, B., 2284
Stevens, B. C., 2562
Stevens, H., 2565
Stevens, R. T., 2087
Stevenson, W., 1843
Steward, J. H., 2297
Stewart, D. J., 1778
Stewart, F. M., 1799
Stewart, J. B., 1855
Stewart, J. I., 2395
Stewart, Sam, 2196
Stewart, Stanley, 2598
Stigen, G., 1767
Stillman, D., 2373
Stirling, J., 1799
Stock, D., 2563
Stoessinger, J. G., 1842
Stoianovich, T., 1633
Stokesbury, L., 1863
Stone, C., 1557
Stone, C. N., 1523
Stone, E., 1559
Stone, J., 1523
Stone, M., 2184
Stone, R. M., 2179
Story, R., 2072
Stowe, R. S., 1638
Strangwayes-Booth, J., 2565
Straus, D., 2565
Strickland, R., 1851
Stricklin, A., 1639
Stringfellow, W., 1626
Strober, G. S., 1614
Strugatski, A., 2513
Strunk, F. C., 2480
Stryk, L., 2582
Stubbs, J., 2514
Suh, D., 2496
Sullivan, J. P., 2065
Sullivan, P., 2553
Sullivan, W., 1533
Summers, A., 2371
Sumner, Richard, 2303
Sumner, Robert, 2392
Supplement to the Oxford English dictionary, 2559
Susann, J., 1660
Sutherland, S., 2381
Swain, D. V., 2595
Swallow, J., 2292
Swanberg, W. A., 2168
Sweet, L. I., 1528
Sweets, J. F., 2371
Swingewood, A., 2492
Syers, W. E., 2087
Sypher, W., 2284
Szasz, T., 1865

Taetzsch, L., 2480
Tahir, A. M., 2563
Talwick, M., 1660
Tanaka, H., 2592
Tancock, J. L., 2051
Tang, P. P., 2392
Tangye, D., 2292
Tanner, L., 1799
Tanner, R. G., 2371
Tarbert, G. C., 2360
Tarr, B., 2507
Tarr, Y. Y., 2372
Tarrant, J., 2590
Tart, C. T., 2289
Tate, J., 1640
Tatum, G. B., 1846
Taupin, B., 1638
Taylor, A., 1780
Taylor, B. J., 2486
Taylor, E., 2395
Taylor, Joe, 2372
Taylor, Joshua, 1846
Taylor, R., 1778
Teichmann, H., 1522
Telander, R., 2392, 2507
Tennenhouse, L., 2066
Terris, V. R., 2583
Terry, W., 1550
Theobald, R., 1790
Theroux, P., 1799
Thielcke, G. A., 1869
Thiroloix, J., 1646
Thomas, B., 1877
Thomas, D., 2057
Thomas, J. O., 2279
Thomas, L., 2479
Thomas, P. A., 2020
Thomas, R. S., 1781
Thomas, S., 1649
Thompson, A. H., 1606
Thompson, C., 1639
Thompson, D. F., 1782
Thompson, E. P., 1631
Thompson, Thomas, 2190
Thompson, Toby, 2175
Thompson, V. H., 1759
Thomson, D., 2565
Thornburg, N., 1883
Thum, M., 2598
Tice, G. A., 2053
Tillich, H., 1522
Tillinghast, B. S., 1799
Timpanaro, S., 2072
Tinnin, D. B., 2048
Tobias, A., 2479
Todd, D. K., 1617
Todd, J. M., 1515
Todd, W. M., 2179
Toland, J., 1626
Toll, R. C., 1876
Tomlinson, T. B., 1860
Tooker, D., 1860
Torrey, V., 2486
Totterdell, B., 2461
Toulouse-Lautrec, H., 1620
Townley, R., 2395
Towns, E. L., 1785
Townsend, C. R., 1639
Townsend, D. M., 2489
Townsend, P., 2057
Towsen, J. H., 2508
Toynbee, A. J. 2068, 2172
Tracy, D., 2516
Traversi, D., 2492
Treasures of Britain, 2472
Treat, R., 2268
Trewin, F. C., 2284
Troy, S., 1786
Trudgill, E., 1529
Truesdale, C. W., 2286
Truman, M., 2566
Tu, W., 2273
Tubb, E. C., 2396
Tucker, J., 2492
Tucker, N., 2492
Tudor, D., 2360
Tudor, N., 2471
Tugwell, R. G., 1873, 2487
Turkin, H., 1618
Turnbull, P., 2575
Turner, J. M., 2561
Tute, W., 2487
T-W-Fiennes, R. N., 1646
Tyler, J. E. A., 1845
Tyler, M., 1519
Tynan, K., 1550
Tyson, R., 2293

Ulam, A. B., 1642, 2574
Ulam, S. M., 1522
Ullyot, J., 2299
Unkelbach, K., 1541
Updike, J., 2196
Upton, R., 2514
Uvezian, S., 2176

Vali, F. A., 2182
Van Buren, P. M., 2383
Van Cortlandt, P., 1767
Van de Wetering, J., 1662
Vanek, J., 2567
Vannatta, D. P., 1617
Van Rjndt, P., 1663
Van Sertima, I., 2487
Van Slyke, H., 1884
Van Vogt, A. E., 1558
Varenne, J., 1534
Vaughan, M., 1561
Veatch, R. M., 2357
Verne, J., 2283
Vernon, K. R., 2598
Victor, T., 2508
Victoria, Queen of Great Britain, 1522
Victorian and Edwardian railways from old photographs, 1529
Video art, 1628
Vidler, V., 2476
Viel, B., 1871
Vince, J., 1528
Vince Lombardi scrapbook, 1875
Vincent, C., 1773
Viola, H. J., 2573
Viorst, J., 2378
Viscott, D., 1538
Vogel, J., 2375
Von Furstenberg, D., 2501
Von Hagen, V., 2189, 2487
Vonnegut, K., 2087
Von Walter, E. W., 2594
Von Wefanetz, D., 2577
Vose, R. H., 1848

Waddy, C., 2290
Wagenvoord, J., 2387
Waggoner, L. T., 1855
Wagner, L. W., 2179
Wagner, S., 2303
Wagner, W., 1655
Wagoner, D., 1800
Wainwright, J., 1561
Wakelyn, J. L., 2559
Walcott, D., 1641
Waldo, T., 2376
Walker, A., 1795
Walker, D., 2378
Walker, F., 2196
Walker, J., 2361
Walker, M. H., 2566
Walker, M. J., 1547
Wallace, G., 2057
Wallace, I., 2599
Wallace, R. K., 1861
Wallace, S., 1661
Wallach, C., 1868
Wallach, M. I., 2581
Waller, L., 2389
Waltham, A. C., 1788
Walton, R. J., 1864
Warmbrand, M., 1542
Warner, O., 1773
Warren, P. N., 1800
Warren, R. P., 2069
Warshaw, M., 2587
Wason, B., 2063
Wasserman, P., 2268
Watkins, T. H., 2574
Watson, D., 2066
Watson, I., 1558
Watson, J. W., 2062
Watson, R. I., 2560
Watters, P., 2288
Watts, P., 2471
Waugh, A., 2576
We, the other people, 1855
Wearing, J. P., 2050
Webb, C., 2196
Webb, R. E., 1645
Webb, S., 1621
Weber, E., 1633
Weber, J., 2480
Weber, N. M., 2052
Weber, O. S., 2560
Weber, S., 2299
Webster's Sports Dictionary, 1515
Weckstein, J., 1550
Weglyn, M., 1529
Weiner, D. B., 2179
Weiner, J. B., 1649
Weinstein, F. B., 2287
Weintraub, S., 2168
Weiss, T., 1863
Weiss-Stauffacher, H., 2493
Weitzmann, K., 1762
Weixlmann, J., 1617
Weldon, F., 1884
Welk, L., 2057
Wells, H. M., 1783
Welter, G., 1654
Wendland, M., 1627
Wepman, D., 2387
Wertheim, A. F., 1533
Weslager, C. A., 2574
West, L. C., 2190
West, M., 2512
West, T. R., 1533
Westlake, D., 2088
Westland, P., 2361
Weston, C., 1560
Weymouth, L., 1633
Whannel, P., 1793
Wheeler, S. P., 1850
Where's what: sources of information for federal investigators, 1845
Whitaker, R. W., 1537
White, C. M., 1837
White, E. B., 2057
White, J. D., 2183
White, J. V., 2053
White, P., 2512
White, R. A., 2498
Whitehill, W. M., 2487
Whiteley, O., 2168
Whiting, C., 2062
Whiting, R., 2081
Whitman, J., 1787
Whitnah, D. L., 2063
Whitney, B., 1860
Whitney, P. A., 1554
Whittemore, R., 1533
Wiarda, H. J., 2568
Wibberley, A., 2598
Wickham, K. J., 2191
Widick, B. J., 2170
Wigginton, E., 2388
Wilbourn, C., 1645
Wilbur, C. M., 2057
Wilbur, R., 2066
Wilcox, D., 2488
Wilde, M. C., 2168
Wilden, T., 1802
Wiley, J., 2508
Wilk, M., 2170
Wilkes, K., 2508
Will Rogers scrapbook 1856
Willett, J. W., 2073
Williams, A. C., 1767
Williams, Adele, 2586
Williams, Alan, 2088
Williams, E., 2492
Williams, G. A., 1846
Williams, G. R., 2508
Williams, J. E., 2586
Williams, L. E., 2279
Williams, M., 2492
Williams, W. A., 1633
Williamson, W. L., 2352
Willis, D., 1793
Wilmerding, J., 1517
Wilson, C., 2063
Wilson, D., 2279
Wilson, E. R., 2566
Wilson, H. V., 2384
Wilson, L., 1876
Wilson, P. C., 1786
Wilson, Steve, 1774
Wilson, Sue, 2276
Winkler, H. R., 2584
Winslow, S., 2575
Winsor, R., 2516
Winter, D., 2367
Winter, R., 2074
Winters, N., 2196
Wise, D., 2468
Wistrich, R. S., 2575
Witkiewicz, S. I., 2196
Wodehouse, P. G., 2373
Wolcott, R. M., 1545
Wolfe, P., 2493
Wolfers, M., 2497
Wolff, G., 1626
Wollenberg, C., 2048
Wollheim, D. A., 2513
Woman's almanac, 2050
Woman's Day gifts from your kitchen, 2577
Women see woman, 227
Wong, P., 2070
Wood, N., 2303
Woodall, R., 1518
Woodfield, A., 1779
Woods, J., 1535
Woods, R. D., 2051
Woods, W., 2279
Woodward, H. N., 2366
Woolf, V., 2274, 2566
Woolmer, J. H., 1515
Worden, J. W., 2289
World guide to universities, 2360
World series, 1516
Worswick, C., 2053
Worthy, W., 2048
Wortman, R. S., 2575
Woy, J. B., 2472
Wright, R. B., 1884
Writers directory, 1976–78, 2472
Wucherer, R., 2481
Wuliger, B. S., 2170
Wynar, B. S., 2560

Yale, V., 1793
Yallop, D. A., 1877
Yannarella, P. A., 2151
Yarbro, C. Q., 2087
Yates, R., 1884
Yearbook of special education, 1976–77, 2268
Yeazell, R. B., 2179
Yevtushenko, Y., 2583
Yglesias, J., 1884
Ygelesias, R., 2303
Yoder, D., 1649
Yonker, K. Y., 1550
Yoo, Y., 1760
Yorks, L., 1627
Young, A. F., 1529
Young, A. M., 2377
Young, N., 2383
Young, T., 1845
Younker, L., 2566
Yourcenar, M., 1884
Yulsman, J., 2564

Zakythinos, D. A. 1630
Zallen, H., 2366
Zavarzadeh, M., 2581
Zeiger, A., 1662
Zeleny, L., 1647
Zeman, Z., 2058
Zeri, F., 1846
Zetterling, M., 2512
Ziegler, P., 2566
Zimpfer, D. G., 1617
Ziskind, S., 1524
Zweig, P., 2499

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

All advertisements for the Positions Open and the Positions Wanted classifications will be edited to exclude direct or indirect references to race, creed, color, age, and sex as conditions of employment. Positions open and positions wanted, $1.70 per line, minimum charge, $5.10, all other types of ads, $2.60 per line, minimum charge $7.80. If voucher forms are required for billing, please send them at the time advertisements are submitted for insertion. Copy for ads and requests for cancellations must be received at the LJ office 45 days preceding date of issue. Write: Classified Advertising Department, Library Journal, 1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York, New York 10036.

OUT-OF-PRINT

EXCLUSIVE WANT LISTS get prompt attention, wide search, reasonable prices, from International Bookfinders, Inc., Box 1-LJ, Pacific Palisades, Calif. 90272.

COLONIAL "out-of-print" Book Service, Inc. Want Lists invited, 23 E. 4th St., New York City 10003.

EXCLUSIVE WANT LISTS advertised & searched plus 150,000 vol. indexed stock. PAB 2917 Atlantic, Atlantic City, NJ 08401.

WE FIND BOOKS. Free International Search. Exclusive want lists invited. Realistic prices. Eva Davis Books. 108 Prince Charles, Williamsburg, VA 23185.

OUT OF PRINT books located. Send in title, author to: Free Search Service, Dept. LJ, 41 Union Square West, New York, NY 10003.

OP BOOKS in literature; social sciences, humanities. EGLI; Lamont; BCL, etc. Book Lande, 8926 National Blvd., Los Angeles, CA 90034.

INTERNATIONAL CONGRESSES are one of our specialties. Foreign books and periodicals, current and out-of-print. Albert J. Phiebig Inc., Box 352, White Plains, N.Y. 10602.

MAGAZINES—BACK NUMBER

NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC Magazine: (1888-1976) Any issue from 1910. (Fine cond.) Reasonable. Price list furn. Don Smith, 3930 Rankin St., Louisville, KY 40214.

LACKING ISSUES. Subscribers to journals listed in Science Citation Index have a good chance of immediately locating lacking issues for years 1970-1975 with the Replacement Serials Section of M.S.I., the worldwide back-issue house. Please address your queries to Maxwell Scientific International (now a Pergamon Press, Inc. division), Fairview Park, Elmsford, New York 10523.

BACK ISSUE MAGAZINES, general, scholarly, technical. Designed to serve high school and jr. college libraries. Please send want lists to Back Issues West: P.O. Box 6688, Tucson, Arizona 85716.

OVER 2,000,000 backdate magazines. Send want lists. Magazine Center, Room 406, 145 West 29th, New York, NY 10001.

INTERNATIONAL UNIVERSITY Booksellers, Inc., 101 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10003. We buy: Would like to hear of periodical backfiles of scholarly significance, individual titles or entire collections, surplus to your present needs. We sell: We carry one of the most comprehensive inventories of periodicals in all fields and langauges and are a major supplier to academic libraries in all parts of the world. Call or write Mr. Becker.

BUY, TRADE, SELL National Geographic Magzines & related material. Box 30045, Denver, CO 80230.

MICROFORMS

MICROFORMS. Good second-hand microfilm of periodicals of established micropublishers bought and sold. Write or call Microforms International Marketing Company, Fairview Park, Elmsford, New York 10523. (914) 592-9141.

SERVICES—PERSONNEL

THERESA M. BURKE Employment Agency, 8 West 40th St., N.Y., N.Y. 10018. Specializing in the recruitment of library and information personnel for special, academic, and public libraries.

SERVICES

U.S. GOVT. PUBS: TRY us as your first source. Sentry Service right on Capitol Hill. Fastest to get in hand, fastest delivery. Standing orders, service for your full requirements. Write Air-There, Box 2605, Wash., DC 20013, Tel: (202) 544-5566.

FOR SALE

FOR SALE: Polaroid cataloger's camera CU 5-AC Power Pack #88-8. Best offer. Midwest Library Service, 11400 Dorsett Road, Maryland Heights, MO 63043.

POSITIONS WANTED

EXPERIENCED ADMINISTRATOR seeks career advancement position at GS-12 federal level or equivalent level in academic system. Proven background as imaginative but practical innovator. Present salary $18,000 G 92.

ENERGETIC, SCHOLARLY and adaptable chartered librarian (associate of the British Library Association), desirous of settling in the United States, seeks a position anywhere in the country. M.Sc. (econ.) University of London, author of four professional publications, 13 years experience in British public, academic, government, and special libraries, also two years in an Australian parliamentary library. Résumé: S. Weeraperauma, 2/11 A. Herbert Road, Ashford, South Australia, 5035, Australia.

M.L.S., May, 1976, Alabama. Background in social sciences, folklore. Four years paraprofessional experience in reader services, collection development, administration in a small university library. Seeking similar situation. Will relocate. For résumé and references contact: Stephen Henson, P.O. Box 164, Cook Springs, AL 35052.

POSITIONS OPEN—WEST

REFERENCE LIBRARIAN for academic technical Library. Performs reference services, including information retrieval via computer; also responsible for gifts. Masters in Library Science from ALA accredited school required; facility in use of one foreign language and an equivalent of one year of appropriate professional experience is desirable. Salary open. Faculty status and liberal fringe benefits. Twelve month contract; generous retirement plan. Position open December, 1976. Send résumé and references by January 15, 1977 to: Mrs. Virginia W. Herold, Head Librarian, Arthur Lakes Library, Colorado School of Mines, Golden, Colorado 80401. Phone (303) 279-0300 ext. 690. The school is an equal opportunity employer.

POSITIONS OPEN—WEST

CITY LIBRARIAN, city of Beverly Hills. Salary $28,327. Position requires an M.L.S. degree and 5 years of responsible public library experience, 3 of which shall have been in an administrative capacity. Please apply by December 20, 1976. Submit a 2 page résumé to: City of Beverly Hills, Personnel Services Offices, 450 North Crescent Drive, Beverly Hills, California 90210.

ASSISTANT LIBRARY DIRECTOR: Available March 1, 1977. ($1,191-$1,448) City of Upland Public Library is a member of Inland Library System and SIRCULS network. M.L.S. from an accredited library school plus considerable experience in library work with at least 2 years at a supervisory level. Résumés accepted until January 14. Personnel, P.O. Box 460, Upland, CA 91786. An equal opportunity employer.

HEAD LIBRARIAN: Mills College, a liberal arts college, primarily for undergraduate women, student body 1,000, invites applications and nominations for the position of head librarian. Creative leadership and administration of a library of 180,000 volumes, with a professional staff of six. Applicant should have a graduate degree in library science from an accredited library school and have administrative experience, preferably in an academic library. Send applications or nominations to: Dr. Auriol Bonney, Librarian Search Committee, Mills College, Oakland, CA 94613, by January 15, 1977.

DIRECTOR of Libraries. The University of Colorado at Boulder is seeking a director of libraries. Appointment to the position will be no later than September 1, 1977. The university has a faculty of 1,231, an enrollment of 16,000 undergraduates and 4,000 graduate students, and is in a research oriented community (NCAR, ESSA, IBM, etc.). Library holdings comprise approximately 2 million volumes and 1,450,000 microforms. The current budget for library materials is $985,669. The university is a member of the Center for Research Libraries and is a regional depository for federal documents. The director of libraries is a faculty appointment and is responsible to the vice chancellor for academic affairs. The director has primary administrative authority for all library services and operations on the Boulder campus, including long-range planning, policy formulation and implementation, budget preparation and personnel matters. As the public representative of the university libraries, the director must be an effective interface with academic, government and public groups. Candidates must have an M.L.S. from an American Library Association accredited program; a minimum of 5 years experience in middle and upper management positions in large academic or research libraries; demonstrated knowledge of automated library and information retrieval systems, networks, and resource sharing; a commitment to the academic mission of a large university; and proven ability to coordinate library services with academic programs. Qualifications of particular concern will include the demonstrated ability to manage resources effectively; a commitment to sound management practice and to continuing education for library faculty and staff; and evidence of significant professional and scholarly activities. Applications should be submitted in duplicate no later than February 1 to: Dean William Baughn, Search Committee, College of Business and Administration, University of Colorado, Boulder, Colorado 80309. The University of Colorado is an equal opportunity affirmative action employer.

UNIVERSITY LIBRARIAN, University of California, Santa Barbara. Reports to: Vice-Chancellor, Academic Affairs. Administers campus library system including, but not limited to implementation of policy, preparation and administration of annual budget, supervision of library personnel, promotion of personnel development, coordination of planning for most effective use of material and human resources, cooperation with local and statewide academic communities. Qualifications: Graduate degree in library science or equivalent, demonstrated competence in administering a research oriented complex library system, academic training and background necessary to command the respect and cooperation of the library staff and academic community. Experience with automation, collection development, information services and bibliographical control. The University of California at Santa Barbara is one of the nine campuses of the University of California, has an enrollment of 14,000 students, a faculty of more than 800, and offers degrees in a wide range of academic disciplines, including doctoral programs in 28 fields. The library has a strong, balanced collection of over 1,100,000 volumes and employs a staff of approximately 250 of which 56 are professional librarians. A four-story addition to the library is scheduled for completion in the fall of 1977. The deadline for receipt of applications and nominations is January 31, 1977. Salary range competitive, dependent upon experience and qualifications. Applications and nominations should be sent to: Chairperson, Search Committee, c/o Personnel Office, UCSB, Santa Barbara, CA 93106. Equal Oppty affirmative action employer.

POSITIONS OPEN—NORTHEAST

DIRECTOR, Division of Library and Information Science, St. John's University. ALA accredited M.L.S. program with 6 full-time faculty (plus 2 vacancies) and 150 students. Twelve-month position at rank of full professor. Advanced certificate and drug information specialist (double Master's) programs approved; faculty has strong commitment to continuing education and information science. Qualifications: library/information science degree required, Doctorate preferred. Appropriate experience in administration, library education, and research. Salary open. Usual academic fringe benefits include hospitalization and TIAA-CREF. Position available immediately. Send letter of application with vita and references to: Dr. Blaise J. Opulente, Academic Vice President, Chairperson, LIS Search Committee, St. John's University, Queens, NY 11439. Application deadline: Jan. 31, 1977. Equal oppty/affirmative action employer.

ADMINISTRATOR for district library center in east central Pennsylvania. Library serving 206,000 population, with staff of 18. Minimum five years' experience, including two years' supervisory experience. Must be certified under Pennsylvania Professional Library Code. Mail replies including salary requirements to G 91.

DIRECTOR of the Library. Responsible for general supervision of library staff, facilities, materials, budget, and services. A collection of 75,000 volumes. Minimum requirements: M.L.S. degree and eight years of professional experience in a library, including at least three in an administrative position. A second Master's degree is desirable. Beginning July 1, 1977. Salary: $17,000-$20,000. Write: Harriet D. Hudson, Provost, St. Mary's College of Maryland, St. Mary's City, MD 20686. Equal oppty/affirmative action employer.

SPECIAL COLLECTIONS Librarian: Amherst College Library. Responsible for significant collections of manuscripts, rare books, and archives. Staff of 2 FTE. Qualifications: M.L.S. or equivalent experience and 3-5 years experience in special collections and/or archival situations required. Working knowledge of classical and European languages and a background in the field of preservation and restoration of books and manuscripts desirable. Ability to work well with donors, faculty, and especially undergraduate students is important. Salary $13,000-$15,000 dependent on qualifications. Closing date for applications: December 31, 1976. Appointment on or after February 1, 1977. Résumés and names of 3 references to: Willis Bridegam, Librarian, Amherst College Library, Amherst, MA 01002. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

REFERENCE LIBRARIAN for general reference duties under head reference librarian. M.L.S. from accredited library school. Position available January 10, 1977. Beginning salary $10,192. Send résumé to: James R. Thrash, Director of Library, Salisbury State College, Salisbury, MD, 21801, by January 1, 1977.

GENERAL REF./Science Ref. Librarian. Private liberal arts college. Essential: M.L.S., undergraduate science degree, demonstrable teaching ability for user instruction program. Desirable: science subject Master's. To begin no later than September 1, 1977; twelve-month contract with one month vacation. Salary commensurate with education and experience. Send letter and résumé, including three references, by January 15 (pre-interview available at ALA Midwinter) to: Mahlon Peterson, University Librarian, St. Lawrence University, Canton, NY 13617. An equal opportunity employer.

CHILDREN'S-Y.A. Consultant: develop children's & Y.A. library services; books, programs, media in co-op system serving 50 libraries. Provide and plan programs for in service training; coordinate book selection. Extensive experience necessary, salary open. Excellent fringe benefits. Contact: Alfred Hasemeier, Mid-York Library System, 1600 Lincoln Ave., Utica, NY 13501. Tel. (315) 735-8328.

DEAN OF LIBRARY SERVICES, University of Lowell. The University of Lowell is continuing its search for a dean of library services. The University has seven colleges and a graduate school, with a current enrollment of 11,000 students and 400 faculty. Responsibilities: leadership and administrative management of two library units. Reports directly to chief academic officer. Qualifications: Successful administrative experience in an academic library at the college or university level. Demonstrated ability and knowledge of library and media planning, personnel administration and business management. Master's degree from an ALA-accredited school and Doctorate in subject field, or Master's degree in subject field and Doctorate in library science from an ALA-accredited institution. Salary range $25,000-$30,000 depending on experience. Twelve month appointment. Anticipated starting date is July 1, 1977. Liberal fringe benefits. Applications or nominations must be submitted by March 1, 1977 to: Dr. Roger Schinness, Chairperson, Dean of Library Services Search Committee, University of Lowell, Lowell, Massachusetts 01854. An equal opportunity, affirmative action, Title IX University.

ASSOCIATE EDITOR: New, innovative publishing house in social/behavioral sciences and library science seeks creative, aggressive individual to fill newly-created position of associate editor. Will work closely with senior editor in beginning, and then take independent charge of several publishing projects combining aspects of librarianship and social/behavioral sciences. Areas of responsibility include complete editorial responsibility for administrative newsletter in librarianship, and managing editor for several specialty abstracting/indexing/current-awareness periodicals in the social/behavioral sciences. Candidate must like working on his/her own and have an eye for details and new approaches to information-dissemination in social/behavioral areas. Extremely high potential for the right person. Preferably, the right candidate will have a Master's degree in librarianship plus a Master's degree in social/behavioral area; high verbal and writing abilities; and a quick mind. Send résumé to: G 93, c/o Library Journal Classified Dept., 1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10036.

POSITIONS OPEN—MIDWEST

CATALOG LIBRARIAN: Responsible for supervising the OCLC on-line monographic cataloging unit, consisting of at least six paraprofessionals and some student assistants. Expected to assist in writing policies and procedures and to participate in administering the catalog department. Required: Fifth year library science degree from an accredited library school. A minimum of two years' experience as a catalog librarian and knowledge of at least one foreign language is required, with supervisory and OCLC experience highly desirable, but not essential. Important are the ability to teach, write clearly, and direct a group, and the ability and willingness to learn OCLC on-line cataloging. Salary: $12,500-$15,500 depending upon qualifications and experience. Fringe benefits: TIAA-CREF retirement plan; Social Security; health, hospital and life insurance partially subsidized; liberal sick leave. Wayne State University is an equal opportunity and an affirmative action employer. Write: Robert T. Grazier, Associate Director of Libraries, Wayne State University, Detroit, Michigan 84202.

HEAD, SCIENCE LIBRARY: Administrative responsibility for university's science library of over 260,000 volumes in the sciences, engineering, pharmacy and nursing. Staff consists of five professionals, eleven full-time supportive staff plus student assistants. Annual acquisitions approximately 11,000 volumes, over 2400 journal subscriptions. The science library is significant research resource to science and industry in Metropolitan Detroit. Required: Fifth year library science degree from an accredited library school; at least three years of experience with administrative responsibilities in a large science or technical library; evidence of professional interest and leadership in developing cooperative library programs and services to the scientific community. Salary: $20,000+ depending upon qualifications and experience. Fringe benefits: TIAA-CREF retirement plan; Social Security; health, hospital and life insurance partially subsidized; liberal sick leave. Wayne State University is an equal opportunity and an affirmative action employer. Write to: Robert T. Grazier, Associate Director of Libraries, Wayne State University, Detroit, Michigan 48202.

ASSISTANT ACQUISITIONS Librarian: Assists head of acquisitions department in supervision and training of staff of 28, including five professionals, in departmental operations such as payment processes, standing orders, and particularly pre-cataloging bibliographic searching, including use of OCLC terminal, and the application of other uses of the OCLC system to acquisitions operations. Responsible for operation of department in absence of department head. Other responsibilities include library committee work and outside conferences and workshops. Occasional evening and week-end hours may be required. Required: Fifth year library degree from accredited library school; minimum of four years of relevant acquisitions experience including OCLC operations; business training or experience desirable. Salary: $13,000-$17,000, depending upon qualifications and experience. Fringe benefits: TIAA-CREF retirement plan; Social Security; health, hospital and life insurance partially subsidized; liberal sick leave. Wayne State University is an equal opportunity and an affirmative action employer. Write to: Robert T. Grazier, Associate Director of Libraries, Wayne State University, Detroit, Michigan 48202.

DIRECTOR for a northern Wisconsin public library, which is the resource center for the Northwest Wisconsin Library System. Requirements: M.L.S. from ALA accredited university; 5 years' experience with 3 in administrative position. Starting salary: $14,000. Fringe benefits. Send résumé and names of 3 references by January 1, 1977 to: Mrs. June West, 1122 N. 21st St., Superior, WI 54880. An equal opportunity employer.

CHILDREN'S LIBRARIAN. Administer and provide print and audiovisual services to pre-school through sixth grade children. Must enjoy children. M.A. in library science or B.A. in elementary education with minor in library science. 40 hour week. Salary $9,000+. Open January 1977, but will hold for winter term graduate. Please mail letter of application and résumé to: Dennis Davis, Director, Ottumwa Public Library, 129 North Court Street, Ottumwa, Iowa 52501.

TWO POSITIONS. (1) Catalog librarian for LC collection adding 8000+ annually, OCLC library, experience in LC cataloging and work with OCLC preferred. M.L.S. from ALA approved library school, open June 1, 1977, 12 month contract, salary range $11,500-$12,500 plus fringe benefits. Applications accepted until January 31, 1977. (2) Curriculum center librarian to head department concerned primarily with K-12 materials, teach one course per semester in library science department & assist in coordinating non-print media development. Some experience as elementary or secondary librarian preferred. M.L.S. from ALA approved library school, position open August 15, 1977, 9-month contract, salary range $10,000-$11,000 plus fringe benefits. Applications accepted until February 28, 1977. Send applications and supporting documents to: Dr. Verlyn D. Anderson, Director, Carl B. Ylvisaker Library, CONCORDIA COLLEGE, Moorhead, MN 56560. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

POSITIONS OPEN—SOUTHEAST

SLAVIC CATALOGER in a Slavic biblio center doing original and adaptive cataloging of all Slavic language materials. Also coordinates cataloging processes with other departments and supervises input of non-Cyrillic Slavic materials into OCLC system. Requires M.L.S. degree and thorough knowledge of Russian language and culture. Knowledge of additional Slavic languages and cataloging experience preferred. Salary dependent upon qualifications with a minimum of $10,500. Twelve month academic appointment, 22 days vacation, standard insurance, and state retirement. Send résumé by January 15, 1977 to Joseph Jerz, Assistant University Librarian for Staff Development, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, NC 27514. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

HEAD, REFERENCE and Circulation Section, General Library Branch. Plans and administers the activities of reference and circulation section including supervision of federal documents, interlibrary loans, reference collection development, stack areas. Library has 530,000 volumes plus extensive holdings in microforms and documents. Supervises staff of 13. Knowledge of Virginia highly desirable. M.L.S. from ALA accredited school plus 5 or more years' successful reference and administrative experience preferably in a research or large public library. Salary $13,728-$17,900. Position open May 1, 1977. Contact: Personnel Manager, VIRGINIA STATE LIBRARY, Richmond, VA 23219. An equal-opportunity, affirmative action employer.

HEAD LIBRARIAN. To assume responsibility for service to population of 52,586. Must have M.A. in library science with at least 5 years' experience. Salary: $14,000. Send applications including vita and letters of reference to: Mrs. Edgar Stark, Chairperson, Monroe County Library Board, 700 Fleming Street, Key West, FL 33040.

LATIN AMERICAN Studies Librarian. Responsible for the administration of the Latin American Library, including collection development and reference services. Works closely with other library units, including technical services. Requirements: Professional level library experience with background or degree in Latin American Studies; fluency in Spanish and reading knowledge of Portuguese. M.L.S. highly desirable, as is knowledge of additional languages, involvement in professional organizations, and scholarly research and publications. Academic status, 22 days vacation, salary up to approximately $15,000 depending on qualifications. Application deadline: February 1, 1977. Send inquiries and résumé to: Acting Director, Tulane University Library, New Orleans, LA 70118. An equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

KENTUCKY: Director of public library in city of 327,000 (plus county 405,700), with main library of 1,000,000 volumes, 9 full-time and 14 part-time branches, 4 bookmobiles. Operates two FM radio stations, a program for the aging, and subregional branch for blind and physically handicapped. Master's degree from school accredited by ALA and extensive experience in professional library work. Salary range $27,500-$32,500. Fringe benefits. Write and send résumé by March 1, 1977 to: Miss Caroline Mercer, Chairperson, Search Committee, Louisville Free Public Library, 4th and York Streets, Louisville, KY 40203. Equal opportunity employer.

POSITIONS OPEN—SOUTHEAST

DIRECTOR for county library with budget of $100,000 and staff of 9, serving population of 33,000+. Located in beautiful S.C. Low Country, close to beaches. M.L.S. degree from ALA accredited school and 1 or 2 years of library experience. Salary range $10,000-$10,900. 20 days vacation; health insurance. Contact: Mr. Allen D. Read, Chairperson of the board, Georgetown County Library, Drawer D, Georgetown, SC 29440.

POSITIONS OPEN—NORTHWEST

UNIVERSITY LIBRARIAN: Boise State University. Candidate should possess M.L.S. from an ALA accredited library school with a Doctorate or advanced degree in subject field preferred. Must have abilities in library administration, budget planning, public relations, and personnel administration. Additional experience desired in learning center services, instructional technology, and computer applications, as well as experience in academic library upper level administrative positions. Responsible for administration of the university library & educational media services with a staff of 11 librarians, 25 support personnel and a media staff of 7. Closing date for application is January 15, 1977. Send letter of application, placement credentials, references and résumé to: Dr. Gerald Wallace, Chairperson, Library Search Committee, Boise State University, 1910 University Drive, Boise, Idaho 83725. An equal opportunity employer/educator.

DIRECTOR of public library and coordinator of library system servicing 104,000 population. Administrative library experience necessary. M.L.S. from accredited library school. Salary range $15,000-$16,500. Résumé to: Mrs. R. D. Warden, chairperson, Library Board, Public Library, Great Falls, MT 59401. Equal opportunity employer.

POSITIONS OPEN—SOUTHWEST

CHILDREN'S COORDINATOR Librarian V wanted by April 1977. A mover/shaker who can give leadership to children's librarians at the Tucson Public Library. Responsibility for staff and program development, continuing education, collection development. Qualifications: minimum 3-5 years direct public library experience with children after M.L.S. degree, administrative skills, outstanding storyteller, working knowledge of grants, experience with minority groups, fluency in Spanish a plus. Reports to the assistant director for public services. Beautiful southwest. Salary range $15,540-$18,888, unusual benefits; educational reimbursement, health plan 3/4 paid by city, bonus after five years, etc. Send résumé to: Civil Service Commission, Personnel Dept., City of Tucson, P.O. Box 27210, Tucson, AZ 85726. The city of Tucson is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

LIBRARIAN to head the Fayetteville Public Library, a branch of the Ozarks Regional System. A Bachelor's degree with library science and proven ability in public library service are required. An accredited M.L.S. degree is desirable. The book stock in Fayetteville is 63,000, staff 12, circulation 250,000. The minimum starting salary is $9,500. Send résumé to: Search Committee, Ozarks Regional Library, 217 East Dickson Street, Fayetteville, AR 72701.

INDEX TO ADVERTISERS

Baker & Taylor Co.	2521
R. R. Bowker Co.	2536, 2552
Brodart	3rd Cover
Thomas Y. Crowell Co.	2557
Current Co.	2534
E. Darino	2558
Dow Jones-Irwin	2567
F. W. Faxon Co.	2557
Highsmith Co.	2534
International Labor Office	2535
Josten's Library Services Division	2535
Robert E. Krieger Publishing Co.	2590
Little, Brown & Co.	2573
Guy McCreary	2571
Mason/Charter Publishers	2589
Musica	2581
New York Graphic Society	2565
Office General du Livre	2533
Operation Sail Books	2573
Our Sunday Visitor	2587
Pantheon Books	2594
Paulist Press	2524
Plains Distribution Service	2531
G. P. Putnam's Sons	2595
Rucker Press	2559
St. Martin's Press	2563, 2595, 2597
Schocken Books	2569
Simon & Schuster	2526, 2527, 2583, 2597
Smithsonian Institution Press	2591
Universe Books	2589
John Wiley & Sons	4th Cover

Sales-Business Offices

NEW YORK:
R.R. Bowker Company
1180 Avenue of the Americas
New York, New York 10036
Dominick Ciarletti 764-5246
Carlton H. Thiele 764-5135
Advertising Traffic Manager,
Maureen J. Rose 764-3363
Classified Advertising Manager,
Frieda Johnson 764-3362

MIDWEST:
James K. Levitt and Associates, Inc.
1720 Algonquin Road
Mount Prospect, Illinois 60056
Walter Freed 312 593-5255

WEST:
James K. Levitt and Associates, Inc.
13208 Saticoy Street
North Hollywood, California 91605
Bette Cochran 213 875-1517

SOUTH:
Metropolitan Publishers
Representatives, Inc.
2045 Peachtree Road, N.E.
Atlanta, Georgia 30309
Marvin Arnsdorff 404 352-2173

PREVIEWS
Non-print software and hardware news and reviews—for librarians, teachers, media specialists

USE
ORDER FORM TO SUBSCRIBE

PREVIEWS
1180 Avenue of the Americas • N.Y., N.Y. 10036

Yes, please enter my subscription to PREVIEWS for one year at only $15.

(PREVIEWS is published monthly, September through May. For subscriptions in Canada and Pan American Postal Union, add $2.00. Elsewhere, add $3.00.)

☐ Payment enclosed ☐ Bill me
☐ Bill school or org.

Name_____
Address_____
City_____
State_____ Zip_____
Occupation (H.S. librarian, elementary school teacher, etc.)_____
Title or position_____

Published by R. R. BOWKER COMPANY 12/15